War Veterans Admit Value Y.M.C.A.'s work

Basis of Misunderstanding Is Pointed Out, However In Report to Convention

TORONTO, Aug. 1.—A report was presented to the G. W. V. A. Convention from the committee appointed to confer with the Y.M.C.A. on certain grievances advanced by members against the policy, administration, and work of the Y.M.C.A. among Canadian solders, more especially in England and France.

"These grievances, of which for a long time there had been rumor," says the report, "came to a head in a resolution passed at the recent annual convention of the G. W. V. A. (Ontario Provincial)held in Hamilton. There were two lengthy sessions of this joint conference, and after much discussion the following points seem to stand out clear:

"1. It would appear that the returned soldiers who claimed to have a grievance against the work of the Y. M. C. A. were justified in their attitude of denying that tea, coffee, cigarets, etc., were given away. This 'free gifts' argument was made the basis of appeal for funds to the Canadian public, and very little, if anything, was given away in the years 1915 and 1916. The testimony to this is overwhelming.

The Point at Issue

"The average soldier is quite willing to pay for what he gets. There would be no complaint if he were charged for everything—drinks, tobacco, cinemas, etc. This is not the point at issue. Very few criticisms are heard in France. It is when the man reaches home and hears the appeals of Y.M.C.A. officials, etc., based on the free distribution of comforts, that he begins to prick up his ears and say in effect, "It is not true. I never received anything free.' It is this apparent discrepancy which to a very large extent has occasioned the criticism from the Great War Veterans' Association, the members doing so being soldiers who served in the early years of the war. The Y.M.C.A. at this conference conceded that 'free distribution' was nonexistent in 1914, 1915 and 1916.

"This would appear to be the basis for a great deal of the criticism and misunderstanding. The individual returned soldier is thinking in terms of what was done in the years 1915 and 1916, while the answer of the Y. M. C. A. is in terms of their policy of 1917.

"We feel that the Y.M.C.A. have left themselves open to criticism, in that the financial statement recently published is the first consolidiated financial statement issued by them in connection with their military work. We accept this statement for the year 1917 which appears to be a splendid report of good work accomplished.

"Any society or association collecting moneys for the public, given for a specific purpose, must realize that their financial statement is open to criticism from that quarter, therefore your committee take this opportunity of pointing out:

"(a) Under the heavy overhead charges of salaries—Canada, England and France—value to the soldier is diverted to an undue extent.

(b) The financial statement shows a balance of assets on hand January, 1918, of $656,373.75, and not that of $415,434.87, as set forth.

"(c) Gross profits on sales of goods were $613,310.98; free distribution to soldiers was $378,591.58. The whole point narrows down, 'Does the soldier get the full value of the large amount of money raised on his account?

Sales	$2,961,797.53
Subscribed by the public	1,273,148.63
Total	$4,254,945.56

Hopes For the Future

"This financial statement, audited and certified to by a reputable firm of chartered accountants, and where vouchers seem to have been properly inspected, has given us hope that the

Huns Prepare to Retreat Farther Fires Rage Behind Their Lines

Allied Aviators Report Destruction of Much Material-- Paris E xperts Foresee Further Retirement to Line of Defence Being Prepared

PARIS, Aug. 1.—French aerial observers ,says the Matin, report that there are signs behind the present German battle front of preparations for a continuation of the retirement northward. The enemy is destroying much material and big fires have been seen.

The newspapers generally point out that the fighting Tuesday was marked by brisk but vain enemy reactions. They believe that the German line of resistance has been reached although the allies were able to make additional gains.

Several military experts do not believe that the Germans have yet reached the end of their retiring movement. The Echo de Paris says the Germans have thrown five reserve divisions into the fighting, proving the importance the German command places on maintaining its present position, which is equally good for offence or defence.

The German Crown Prince has a number of good reasons for holding up his retirement to the Vesle. First he may desire to prevent the French from using the Soissons-La Ferte-Millon railway; second, he may want to keep the main Paris-Nancy railroad which parallels the Marne within range of his heavies, and third, he may want to remove his material without too much damage.

be unable to use the Rheims-Soissons road if they retired to the Vesle. Also they would have their backs agaist the Aisne which would not simplify the means of communication on the rear.

Disease Sweeps Over Germany

Many Special Hospitals Being Erected to Care For Patients

PARIS, Aug. 1—The state of health in Germany appears to have become a source of worry to the Imperial Government. German newspapers for several days have exhibited a marked soberness over the news regarding sanitary conditions prevailing throughout the empire some reports apparently having escaped the censor with certain very clear statements relative to the numerous epidemics now raging in nearly every city.

The Neue Zurche Zeitung announced recently that the German censor had forbidden the publication of any news of the progress of the epidemic which at first was mistaken for Spanish influenza, but which the Swiss press, because of the ravaging effects upon the Berlin population declares to be much more serious. The public hospitals in Berlin already are overtaxed in caring for the legions of wounded soldiers arriving from the western front, but they have had to make room for thousands who fell in the streets from disease. Scores of deaths are reported each day in the army and the army doctors also declare the condition of the troops, particularly those in the interior, to be alarming. The number of deaths among them is far from being insignificant.

The Lokal Anzeger learns that typhus case in many sections of Berlin and the surrounding country have been attributed by the local authorities to the consumption of infected milk. As a result the Minister of the Interior has addressed a note to the Berlin municipal government and the police ordering that dealers stop selling unpasteurized milk, under threat of a heavy penalty, and ordering that where it is impossible to obtain sterilized milk none shall be drunk.

The Strassburger Post also learns that the epidemic of malaria raging in certain parts of the country, especially in Baden was caused by germs brought to Germany by soldiers returning from the Balkans. In the Black Forest and Baden the local government has created special sanitariums to care for the thousands who have been stricken.

OPERATION ON SON TOO MUCH FOR MOTHER

KINGSTON, Aug. 1.—A very pathetic death is that of Mrs. Benthan of Gananoque, who came to Kingston to be near her young son who underwent an operation for appendicitis. On Friday night the mother, who had practically been an invalid for the past five years, died from the shock of the son's operation.

This is a very sad case, owing to the fact that there are two sons overseas at the present time.

Captured the Flag At Far Orillia

Belleville Party First to Make Trip In Private Yacht from Trenton to Orrillia

When the Hon. J. D. Reid, Minister of Railways and Canals, made his memorable trip up the Trent and formally opened for traffic the new Trent Canal, he offered a handsome flag to the first boat which made the trip from Trenton to Orillia. The flag has been captured and the first boat to make the complete trip was the good ship Kathle n, Captain Fraser, of Deseronto, with a jolly party of Belleville citizens on board, as passengers when the going was good, as crew in heavy weather, and believe me, there were occasional spells of heavy weather when the muscle of Sandy Burrows came in handy-andy, and then some; also Lucien Allen's vocabulary of concrete cuss words as applied to matters marine, while the soothing influence of Alf. Gillen's "Letter-go-lang" helped some, my boy, helped some; with Jack Kerr and B. S. Hyman to help put a few extra knots in the log when necessary and untangle the gasolene, while the High Admiral of the Fleet craft was the genial member for West Hastings, E. Guss Porter, M.P.

At Peterborough Postmaster Gillen learned of the strike of the mail carriers at Belleville and returned at once to the city.

The party arrived at Orillia Friday and were met by "Billy" Cochrane, an old Belleville boy, who entertained the bunch right royally, assisted materially by other prominent citizens of Orillia. The Belleville men were congratulated upon being the first to turn the trick of making a complete trip through the canal as far as finished.

A wonderful achievement, was the impression borne in on the members of the party after seeing the result of the years of labor in locks and waterway, and the beautiful scenery was also enjoyed to the limit. An interesting feature of the trip are the beautiful summer homes and resorts upon which so much money and care have been lavished. The tents of many campers lined the waterway at intervals for miles showing that many had fled from the severe heat.

The trip was enjoyed by all as a wonderful revelation along the "See Canada First" line, and there is no doubt but that the Trent will become a very popular scenic route as well as commercial highway.

One thing the members of the party can boast of is that they are now more or less expert locksmiths, and they are satisfied that they could pick any ordinary Trent lock if it wasn't open.

PRESS IS BEST FRIEND

"The press is the best friend the association ever had," was the retort that Comrade Peart of Hamilton made to the resolution moved by Comrade Mills, Ottawa, to exclude the press from the business of the G. W. V. A. convention. This motion was seconded by Comrade Carey also of Ottawa. "We must have public sympathy if we are to get anywhere,' said the Hamilton delegate. Geo. Murrell central branch, Toronto, was against the motion, and it was lost by a huge majority.

Minister of Militia Expresses Sympathy

Mrs. S. M. Townsend, Belleville, received the following sad information from the Minister of Militia and Defence for Canada:

Ministers Office, Ottawa, July 29.

Dear Mrs. Townsend:—I desire to express to you my very sincere sympathy in the recent decease of your husband, No. 536034, Private Edward James Townsend C.E.F., who in sacrificing his life at the front in action with the enemy, has rendered the highest services of a worthy citizen.

The heavy loss which you and the nation have sustained would indeed be depressing were it not redeemed by the knowledge that the brave comrade for whom we mourn performed his duties fearlessly and well as became a good soldier, and gave his life for the great cause of human liberty and the defence of the Empire.

Again extending to you in your bereavement by condolence and heartfelt sympathy, I am

Yours faithfully
S. C. MEWBURN,
Minister of Militia and Defence for Canada.

Pte. Townsend went overseas with the Queen's Ambulance Corps two years ago and has a brother in the Army Medical Corps. He is survived by his wife and four children.

Growing Like an Avalanche Is Czecho-Slovak Success

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 1.—Yekaterinburg, in the Province of Perm, near the Siberian border, has been taken by Czecho-Slovaks, according to the newspaper Izvestia, at Moscow. With this new development of the Czecho-Slovak movement the Bolshevik press is raising cries of alarm. The Prav da Delars says that the Czecho-Slovak danger is growing like an avalanche and the counter revolutionary movement is extending.

Canucks Back on The Firing Line

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Canadian forces again in the front line, celebrated their return thither by continually harassing the Boche opposite, raiding him almost at will and continually annoying his communications and rear lines. The Canadian Associated Press understands that an extra German Division which the enemy can ill spare for the purpose has been placed in front of the Canadians, from which prisoners have already been captured. Germans hold advanced posts now so thinly that their front line is practically 'no-man's land.'

A young Toronto officer who some nights back penetrated with a sergeant a mie of the enemy's trench system without encountering a single Boche, discovered on returning a dugout from whence issued many guttural voices. The officer kept guard while the sergeant returned for bombs. After half an hour the necessary tackle arrived. The dug-out was blown up. The explosion of the dugout roused the whole German line for a short distance. With bombs and one of his men with his bayonet they kept a score of Boches down and then, making a lucky dash, reached their own posts in safety.

The Canadians made several gas projectings recently, the wind being favorable, subsequent investigation showing this enterprise accounted for not a few members of Hun working parties.

SAVE THE WILD BERRIES

Every effort should be made this season in the interests of food production to save the wild raspberries and other small fruits which grow in abundance in this neighborhood. Wild fruits of all kinds are most valuable and the crop should not be allowed to go to waste.

It has been suggested that motor car owners should volunteer to carry people to and from the berry patches as many persons are unable to reach these spots through lack of some conveyance. Parties of young girls and boys, who are too young to enlist for work on fruit and other farms, could do this work, and might go berry-picking with some older person in charge. Let some patriotic organization take the matter in hand, as no doubt many automobile owners will willingly volunteer to carry berry-pickers if it becomes known with whom arrangements can be made.

Save our foodstuffs for our soldiers by doing your utmost to preserve all the fruits and vegetables possible for winter use.

Ba[illegible]e Becomes Fiercer Hourly [illegible]nemy Retreat Goes on [illegible]teadliy

Sti[illegible]e of G[illegible]ans to Prevent Allies Breaking Their Line[illegible]aps are Left For Allies

With the American Army in France, Aug. 1.—The stiff resistance the Germans are now putting up indicates that a strong line has been established, and bitter efforts are being made to keep the allies from breaking through it, but prisoners insist the enemy will make his most determined stand between Rheims and Soissons.

The orderly German retreat toward Fiesmes is still in progress, screened by heavy reareguard action along the line from Ville Montoire, through Parcy-et-Tigny, Grand Rozy and Fere-en-Tardenois, eastward beyong Seringes and Ser[illegible] and on to Roncheres. Americans hold [illegible] and Hill 212 nearby. They also hav[illegible]rmed and hold Meurcy farm.

The battle is cons[illegible] becom[illegible] more fierce. Remna[illegible] of [illegible] 4th Prussian Guard cont[illegible] to [illegible]se the American advance in the region of Sergy.

Leave Traps For Allies

In their retreat the Boches left many traps for the allies. On one sector of our line bridges over the Ourcq and roads leading to the river were mined in the expectation that our troops would be blown up when they tried to cross the streams. One of the roads was heavily mined, but the explosion failed to materialize.

The Boche also established under cover of darkness machine gun pits—two men to each nest—in fields and along ridges north of the Ourcq. Our artillery did excellent work in destroying these barricades and shelters.

There is a constant struggle for mastery in the air. German and al[illegible]ed planes are constantly diving in and out of the clouds.

With the American A[illegible] [illegible] the Aisne-Marne Front, [illegible] made by the Germ[illegible] to adv[illegible] th[illegible] lines against th[illegible] Americans o[illegible] this front weree fruitless. The Am[illegible] for their part, were content to ho[illegible] advanced line fo[illegible]. The German line, however, [illegible]s reported gradually giving way both to the right and left. There was hard fighting throughout the night, but no concentrated attack in force by either side.

During the night the Americans made a pretence of retiring from a part of teh town of Seringes. The Germans advanced into the town on observing the speed of evacuation. Two companies of Americans then closed in and enveloped the German force, killing or capturing every man of it.

Both high explosives and gas shells were sprayed by the Germans over a wide area. The air forces on both sides were busy this morning.

British Brilliantly Rush Line of Heights

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Monday's attack on the front east of Oulchy-La-Chateau in which Grand Rozoy and the Butte [illegible] Chalmont were captured was carried o[illegible] by British and French divisions, th[illegible] British, according to a French staff offic[illegible], bearing the hardest part of the [illegible]ork and fighting brilliantly, says the [illegible]respondent of the Daily Mail with th[illegible] French army.

"[illegible] British," the correspondent wri[illegible]s, "were on the left of the French acting as a flank guard on Sunday, when the attack was begun. The divisions met with strong resistance, but the French reached their objectives.

"On the second day the British made the chief attack, the French this time acting as a flank guard. The British objective was the line of heights beyond Grand Rozoy in which the Germans were waiting as if sitting on a balcony.

"In the early morning the attack went forward most satisfactorily, the British carrying the first lines and woods east of the road and taking Grand Rozoy. Beugneux, however, was very stoutly held, the enemy being determined to make a stand there.

"At 2.30 o'clock another attack was made, the British advancing over ground sloping gradually up to the enemy's balcony position. The French describe this attack as particularly brilliant.

"The advancing line was black with the smoke of bursting shells, but the troops gained the woods and some of the important heights to the north, where they are now holding the line."

Huns Plan Retirement to River Vesle

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Pres: Limited

With the American Army Aug. 1—The Germans used less artillery late yesterday against the attacking forces on this front depending more upon machine guns for defending their lines This fact coupled with stories of prisoners and deserters tend to strengthen belief that they are planning withdrawal to new positions along the river Vesle. A deserter who came into the lines last night declared that orders had been issued for a series of retrograde movements until Fismes, on the Vesle, had been reached. Except for minor engagements there was only artillery fire along the line up to noon to-day and that was comparatively light.

TWO BIG STARS AT GRIFFIN'S

Pauline Frederick of whom there is no better theatrical profession both on the legitimate stage and on the screen will appear once more at Griffin's this time in a new style of photoplay called "Resurrection." There is a wonderful story behind Resurrection and Miss Frederick wears an assortment of gowns secured especially for the part that she plays in this gerat picture.

Another good picture but of a different type than "Resurrection" is "Western Blood" with the only Tom Mix playing in the leading part and as there is no superior in the way of riding ability to the only Mix no doubt a good photoplay can be expected. In this story Tom plays the part of a tenderfoot who is on his first trip to the great West but who is really a product of the great West but has been living so long in the East that he is not recognized as a Westerner until he is put to the test by a gang of Broncho Busters. That the author has written a very good story full of plenty of good humor there can be no doubt after one has seen Western Blood. He will be liable to ask himself if after all is Mix a Westerner and a rough rider originally. All one has to do is to watch the picture closely and he will soon be able to judge whether he picked up his wonderful riding ability through a correspondence school or whether he picked it up by hard work on the Western plains.

There will also be other good photoplays that will make up a fine program of photoplays that will surely please.

MAE MARSH COMING IN "ALL WOMAN"

At the Palace, Mae Marsh is appearing in a new picture called "All Woman." In this picture she has the part of a reformer not the reformer of the narrow minded ways but the reformer with a broad vision of life as we live it, and from this broad-mindedness she reforms a once bad town and still keeps on friends with everybody in the place. How she does this remarkable reformation, is best told in this her newest photoplay "All Woman."

Charlie Chaplain will again be here in a new screamer and as Charlie has been reported as riding around in the big white car that is seen quite often in Belleville a close watch should be kept to see if he will be at the Palace to see himself in film, the latter part of this week.

Wedding Bells

PITCHER—McCOY

A quiet wedding took place yesterday July 31st, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McCoy, Hillside Street, when their second daughter, Vera Blanche, was united in marriage to Hurbert Randolph Pitcher, of Rossmore. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. M. Hubly of Emmanuel church. The immediate relatives of the young couple were present and enjoyed a well arranged and sumptuous wedding feast. Mr. and Mrs. Pitcher left on the afternoon train for their future home, Duff, Saskatchewan. Many friends were at the station to bid farewell to these two very worthy young people. Vera is one of beautiful Belleville's much beloved daughters, and an esteemed member of Emmanuel church.

Open Wide The Gates of Heaven An Aviator Comes!

Flight Lieut. Laurence Dunham, of Brockville, Killed in an Aeroplane Accident at Buffalo, N.Y., July 26, 1918.

A gallant young Canadian patriot, who had taken an active and useful part in the great war, joined the great silent army of young Canadians who have passed to the reserve of heroes and are watching their brothers take up the torch which from failing hands they threw, in the death by aeroplane accident of Flight-Lieut. Laurence Dunham, of Brockville.

The accident occurred at Buffalo on Friday last while Lieut. Dunham was making a flight as observer in pursuance of his duties as instructor at the United States aviation training camp camp near the city.

The life of Flight Lieut. Dunham should be an inspiration to every young Canadian with red blood in his veins, and the grief caused by the early death of this gallant young soldier of the sky is tempered and transfigured by the nobleness of his character and the greatness of his patriotism.

Tall, handsome and energetic, always courteous and kindly, Lieut. Dunham was a true type of resourceful young Canadianism, rejoicing in the Great Adventure of War, concerned less with the chances of life or death than with the upholding of the glory and honor of Canada and the Empire.

Still a young man, clothed in the majesty of death, with the glory of a blameless life in which he took a hero's part, his passing gives added force to the saying that "Death loves a shining mark." While little more than a boy he evinced an interest in matters military and joined the 41st Battalion at Brockville and soon became a good soldier. When war broke out in 1914 he eagerly responded to his country's call and went overseas, where he was speedily placed on active service in France attached to a cyclist unit.

Through the strenuous days of the early war period he rendered valuable and useful service on the shell-torn roads of Flanders, particularly in the Ypres battle area, traversing them day and night, dodging the screaming shells of the enemy and flying along the dangerous roads constantly ploughed up, rent and torn by high explosive shells, carrying despatches and performing all the varied tasks assigned him cheerfully and efficiently.

Victim of Hun Gas.

Then came a day when the devilish poison gas of the savage Hun ended his usefulness for the time being and nearly ended his life, eventually resulting in his being invalided home. As the effects of the gas wore off he became anxious to again be of service to his country and soon was busy securing recruits for the 156th Leeds and Grenville Battalion, then forming. Then came a trip to Bermuda with his mother and the brief sojourn under southern skies was of great benefit to the health of both. Returning to Brockville he determined to enter the air service, but at that time it was not as easy to become an aviator as it is now, and the necessary instruction was only obtainable at considerable expense. The difficulty was soon solved, however, through the kindly assistance of a Brockville lady, Mrs. C. E. Fulford, who since the war began has devoted a large part of her means to patriotic purposes, a great deal more than even her most intimate friends have knowledge of.

Met Romance in Toronto.

Larry Dunham then went to Toronto to take up the study of military aeronautics and incidentally met Romance in the person of a charming young Toronto lady, very musical and very patriotic, one of the musically famous Hambourg family, who took a keen interest in the war and was active in promoting the interests of the soldiers at home and abroad. Acquaintance speedily ripened into love which culminated at the altar and the happy couple after a brief honeymoon in Canada went overseas, where the young aviator entered the Royal Air Service and served with distinction, being gazetted for the Order of St. George in recognition of deeds of valour. Finally his health gave way and he was transferred to instructional service and assigned to duty at training quarters in Buffalo. Then after passing with comparative immunity through countless dangers on land, sea and in the air, Death called him while he was on duty in the air assisting in the great task of training the aerial navies to grapple with the monster menace of Hun militarism, and he "sailed into the crimson sunset" to meet the Great Master and hear the "Well done good and faithful servant," the reward of all such pure and patriotic souls who lay their lives upon the altar of sacrifice for God, Home and Native Land.

His Spirit "Carries On."

Laurence Dunham is dead, but his soul goes marching on as a beacon light in a world of selfish sordidness, beckoning the young men of Canada to lives of unselfish sacrifice and heroic service. Thus only shall Canada achieve true greatness when the fires of patriotism burn out the dross of money-madness and self-seeking from the national character, and Canada First becomes the watchword in the valleys and on the mountain tops, when the Brotherhood of Man and the Fatherhood of God becomes real and personal and not a mere tinkling phrase for hypocrites, when every petty meanness is overshadowed by a national spirit of unselfishness, the spirit of the trenches, of D'Artagnan, each for all, all for each.

ANGELIC RUFFIAN PROVES A PROBLEM

LONDON, Aug. 1.—The following advertisement from a London newspaper shows that a colonel had a greater problem than commanding his men: "Colonel, young wife and small ruffian of angelic exterior, aged 4 offer home, board and $150 a year to a young lady who will undertake to instill into said ruffian the elements of a Bayard, devlop a naturally strong affection and help said wife in house and domestic duties. Familyless colonel, pleasntly situated. Good parentage and up-bringing and a cheery disposition main essentials. No pessimists."

"A CROWN OF SHAME"

By FLORENCE MARRYAT

Author of "The Poison of Asps," A Star and a Heart," "Written in Fire," etc.

CHAPTER XX.—Continued

He had only time to wring her hand, when she darted from the house. He watched her figure running swiftly towards the negroes' quarters and then returned to the shaded apartment, with a deep sigh. What interest had he then in the packet of letters she had left him to peruse? Lizzie was gone. He should not see her again, perhaps for months, and the world semed to be a blank without her. In the hope of her speedy return, he sat down for a few minutes more, and mechanically drew the letters towards him. But as his eye fell upon the written words his countenance changed, and his expression became one of the deepest interest. He hastily scanned through the letters, making sundry notes as he did so, and then, with a long low whistle, he tied the envelopes together again, and, laying them upon Lizzie's desk, walked to the window to watch for some token of her return. None came. The indian sun was blazing in all its splendor on the tropical caves and flowers, the pathway to the coolies' huts was one long line of white dust glittering like golden sand; but not a sound could be heard but the far-off hum of the workers in the cotton fields not a living creature to be seen but Rosa in the shaded verandah, with Maraquita's child slumbering on her knees, and an aged negro, long past work, who was warming his stiffened limbs in the sunshine. Hugh Norris watched impatiently for a few minutes from the open door, and then, with a rapid glance at his watch, and a deep sigh, he unwillingly prepared to leave the bungalow.

"Be a good girl to your mistress, Rosa," he said, as he passed the yellow girl; "take care of her and the baby, and I'll bring you a beautiful string of beads when I come back from England."

"Tank you, sar" replied Rosa. "I'll be berry good all time you away; and I'd like a nice shawl too, sar."

"Well, you're not bashful, Rosa," replied Hugh Norris, laughing; "but you shall have the shawl, too, if you will keep your promise. And if there should be any trouble on the plantation—you know what I mean—take Missy Lizzie up to the White House at once, and don't mind what she says about staying here."

"I understand, sar; but nebber you fear. De niggers on dis plantation too good for dat. They lub Massa and Missus Courtney; and as for Missy Liz, they die for her—dat's jes so."

Captain Norris gave a sigh of relief.

"I hope so, Rosa, and it make me happier to hear you say it; but still [illegible] t easy. But take this and buy yourself a new gown, and remember, when you wear it, that you have promised me to be faithful.

He thrust a five-dollar note into her hand as he spoke, and with one yearning look in the direction of the negro quarters, walked rapidly away towards the town. Rosa rolled her eyes with ledight at the feel of the five-dollar note.

"He gone 'coon, too," she thought with a sapient air; "dar's another what Missy Liz have done for. And she's so quiet all de time. Dat's what beats me. Wall, if dey all gib me five dollar notes, I wish there was a thousand of them."

Meanwhile, Lizzie was kneeling down beside Mammy Chloe's straw mattress, putting the poor little black baby in hot baths, and watching by it as tenderly as if it had been a princess of the blood royal until the attack of convulsions had ceased, and it was sleeping peacefully on its mother's breast again.

"Dar niw, dat's jes' wonderful!" exclaimed the dusky mortals who had anxiously watched her proceedings, "dat babby jest' dying', 'pears as though death was in its face, and its body cold and stiff, a'ready and Missy Liz comes 'long and touches it and it's as well as ever in half an hour. Missy Liz you too clever! You like de Lord, who touches with little finger and ebberybody well again. You jes' white angel, Missy L'z—no mistake about dat."

"My dear friends, you make too much of my poor services for you. You could all do nearly as much for yourselves, if you would only let me teach you. Mammy Chloe made her baby sick. She says she gave it some sweet potato yesterday."

'Only tiny leetle bit, Missy Liz, out ob my mouth!" cried the mother.

"However little it was, Chloe, it was too much for a baby of three days old. How often must I tell you to give your little infants nothing but the breast? Your baby is safe again now, but if you feed her with potatoes and rice and bread, she will have another fit, and next time I may be able to do nothing for her."

Hereupon rose a chorus of dissentient voices.

"Oh, Missy Liz, how you saying dat? You can cure ebberyting, Missy Liz. You mended Dicky's arm and cured old Jake's rheumatiz and bringed de life back to Clarey, when she fell into de water and was dead."

"No, no!" disclaimed Lizzie, laughing, "she wasn't dead, Betsy. I can not go as far as to bring the dead to life again."

"Believe you could, Missy Liz, if you tried, fer you'se jes' wonderful all round; and de niggers nebber had a better friend—dat's so."

"Ay, Massy Courcelles say dat last night, Aunt Bell. He say Massa Courtney and de other planters dam bad trash, and better out ob de way; but nobody must hurt Missy Liz, because she's de niggers' friend, and lub 'em jes' like herself."

"Monsieur de Courcelles!" echoed Lizzie, thinking the negress had made some mistake. "How could he have said that last night? He is not in San Diego."

"Massa Courcelles not in San Diego?" repeated the shrill voice of Betsy. "Oh, Missy Liz, who tell you dat ar lie? Massa Courcelles nebber leave de plantations yet. He's living up at old Josh's shanty, t'other side of de avenue, and he comes along of evenings, and talks to us all of our troubles."

Lizzie's brow flushed darkly. What could be the meaning of Henri de Courcelles hiding himself on Beauregard? For what reason was he hanging about the plantation, and mixing familiarly with the people whom he professed to abhor?

'And what troubles have you that you can confide to a gentleman's ears, Betsy?' she demanded reprovingly. "Monsieur deCourcelles was not so kind to you whilst he was your overseer, that you should expect to find a friend in him now. There is some deeper meaning, I am afraid, in his pretended interest in you, than that of making your life more comfortable."

'You may well say that, Miss Lizzie!" cried Jerusha, who was standing in the crowd, with her baby in her arms. "Dat man nebber sorry for nobody but himself. What he care if our work is hard, or our backs ache wid de sun or our huts is dark, or de food common? Did he care when my back war bowed wid pain, and my head wid shame, and I couldn't hardly stand upon my legs? Didn't he strike me and my poor little boy, and say,—'D—n you! Go hell! I make you work like a dog'?"

"Hush, husr, Jerusha!" exclaimed Lizzie, as she rose and placed her hand kindly on the shoulder of the excited coolie 'I know you have had your troubles, my poor girl. I know Monsieur de Courcelles has wronged you terribly, but you must try to be patient, and forgive, as—as—we all have to do sometimes."

But Jerusha shook the compassionating touch off her.

'No, Missy Liz," she said loudly "I can't forgive. If he had given me one kind word, I'se have worked for him to my last day, and been glad only to see him well and happy; but he's bad all through, to de very core. He wrong more dan me. Ah, I know plenty tings people not thinkng! and now he come and 'cite dese niggers to revenge demselves, and send all de planters out of de island, and keep de fields for dere own use. Dat his way of 'paying out' somebody, Missy Liz. But I know him and his dark ways, and if dese people rise 'gainst de planters, Massa Courcelles shall be de first to go, if I kill him with my own hand."

"Rise!" cried Lizze indignantly. "Surely, after all the kindness they have experienced from Mr. and Mrs. Courtney, there is no one on this plantation so wicked as to dream of rising. What should they do for it? What more can they desire than they already possess? There are no hands on the island more looked after and cared for than those on Beauregard."

"I dunno dat," chimed in a discontented voice. "San Souci niggers gets a tot of rum ebery night, and a quarter of a pound more meat than we do."

"Who said that?" exclaimed Lizzie quickly turning round. "Ah, it was you, Aunt Sally! That's a nice grateful thing to say, when you were down with fever for three weeks this year, and received your wages all the same, though you couldn't do a stroke of work. That's the best return you can make, is it? And you know why the San Soulc hands get extra rations well enough,—because the plantation is so near the swamp, and so unhealthy in consequence, that they are half their time down with fever and ague. You ought to be ashamed of yourself, to set such a bad example to the others."

"I only repeating what Massa Courcelles say," replied Auunt Sally hulkily.

"Then Monsiur de Courcelles should be ashamed of himself. I have no hesitation in saying it," continued Lizzie warmly. "I have been brought up amongst you all since I was a little child, and I am a witness to the kind and indulgent treatment you have received from your employer. Mr. Courtney has never spared money or trouble to make his hands comfortable and happy, and if you have ever had any cause of complaint it has been against this very man who is inciting you now to feel rebellious and ungrateful!"

WOMAN CAUSED EXCITEMENT

KINGSTON, Aug 1.—On Sunday evening a young woman caused considerable excitement at Macdonald Park by going out into the water and while clad in only part of her walking costume and then falling off a log on which she had floated into deep water.

She then called loudly for help, but the fact that there were no men bathers and no one had a bathing suit prevented any one from going to her rescue at once, and it was not until some time had elapsed that one man realizing that it would not do to stand too much on cerenfony while a human life was in danger stripped himself to his underclothing and swam to her rescue.

He brought the lady to shallow water and in a few minutes she came out and left the park. Meanwhile the man who had so heroically rescued her remained in the water and it was some time before anyone realized his plight and secured a raincoat with which he clothed himself until he reached the shelter of a nearby taxi.

The moral of the experi the young woman who ventured into trouble been drowned had not the convention to go to her should be a warning for

THE GARDEN OF THE GODS.

One of the most enjoyable motor trips in Canada at this season is a jaunt through Prince Edward County. The splendid roads, the cozy farmhouses, and the fields and orchards, blessed with an abundant crop, gives an assurance of plentiful food supplies to meet the world scarcity caused by war conditions. Prince Edward County is truly the garden of the Gods, the abiding place of contentment, prosperity and increased food production, where every prospect pleases and only the Toll Bridge ...vile.

ONE VIEW OF PACIFISTS.

Some of our American contemporaries have a most concise way of expressing their views of pacifists in their midst. "Just the other day," says the Portland Sun, "we heard a man (?) ask 'why the United States got into this awful war.' Well, to be brief, it was that such skunks as ...may be permitted to live out their miserable days in a land of the free, that the virtue of their wives, daughters, mothers and sisters may not be subjected to the unspeakable indignities which the women of Belgium and Northern France have been subjected to, that future generations of American citizens may not be born into serfdom."

We may not say the same things about pacifists in Canada, but we feel much the same about them.

"STRIKE AND YOU MAY GO TO HELL"

> "Strike now and you will earn the blessings of the Kaiser and his army of murderers. But you will earn the lasting condemnation of all those who are fighting and working in the Allied nations to gain real freedom for civilization.
> "We warn you seriously if you persist in striking that this Government owe it to your brave brothers, who are fighting the Germans with their life's blood, while you are fighting with words and full bellies, that you be immediately put in the front of the firing line and that your leaders be shot.
> "Strike, and you may go to hell. Woolwich will remain at work and earn the right to shake the hand of the soldier when he returns."

...he above plain and stirring message was the condensed opinion of a meeting of Woolwich Arsenal workers, telegraphed to the Coventry munition workers on strike.

The message must have had a salutary effect, for the Coventry strikers speedily returned to work.

It is conceivable that conditions may arise where men earning less than a living wage may be goaded to a cessation of work in war time by injustice, real or apparent, but there is a great deal of truth and the right ...ism in the message from the working Woolwich workers ... Coventry workers.

... in the trenches are fighting to make good times possible ...r, to humble the swaggering indecent German military ...t him digging sewers, where he belongs. The dollar-ten ...riking, thanks be, or we might have to contemplate the ... industrial slavery as vassals of the hateful Hohenzollern ... would not forget to squeeze the "British swine" to the ...rance.

Buffalo Increasing.

Calgary Herald.

There are 2,620 buffalo in the Wainwright Park now, an increase of 537 over a year ago. That is good news. In view of the possible slaughtering of all our cattle because lack of feed, we may have to come to buffalo steaks and roasts yet.

The Poet's Corner

O, WHERE'S MY LITTLE LADDIE?

O, where's my little laddie,
Dear God? 'Twas yesterday
I heard his merry laughter
Arounw my knees at play.

He ran, his face a-shining
With gladness of the morn,
To find his flower-fairies—
The poppies in the corn.

And there, with sweet lips parted
As if about to speak,
I found my laddie sleeping,
His hand beneath his cheek.

Somewhere the lark is singing,
Somewhere in France today,
Somewhere among the flowers
The little children play.

Perhaps the poppies spreading
Have made a blossom-bed;
Perhaps they bend caressing
His tired curly head.

The winds blow from the eastward;
If they could only speak,
And tell me he is sleeping,
His hand beneath his cheek.

Sometime it will be morning,
As it was yesterday;
Around me in its gladness,
Will ring his laughter gay;

And then, to follow fancies
That childhood playtime lends,
He'll seek the hiding poppies—
His flower-fairy friends.

And there with sweet lips parted,
As if about to speak,
I'll find my laddie sleeping,
His hand beneath his cheek.

A Laugh or Two

Cautious.

"I advise you to have your trousers patched this year."

"I have just been looking up the cost of materials. Do you think I can afford the patch?"

Most Any Boy Can.

"I see that we are allowed only three pounds of sugar per month per person under the war schedule?"

"Three pounds a month only. Why Willie can leave that much in the bottom of his cup."

Phoning a Telegram.

The professor of English literature was endeavoring to send a telegram via the telephone route. He had secured the attention of the clerk, and when asked to whom he intended to send the message he began:

"Mr. A—"

"Yes."

"M—"

"Yes."

"P—"

"Did you say 'B'?"

"No, no—'P'—stands for philtre, you know."

"Oh, you mean F."

"Not at all. I mean P—P, for pneumatic."

"Huh?"

"Can't you understand? I distinctly said P; P, standing for pshaw."

"Wha-a-t?"

"Confound you, P! P, as in phthisis."

"You go to blazes!"

And the receiver was indignantly hung up.

May Be Something In This.

"It's terrible to be poor and struggling."

"Maybe there's too much struggling. Sometimes I think opportunities are like fish. You're liable to scare them away with too much struggling."

Here and There

He finished a long explanation about being late.

"I don't believe a word of it," declared his wife.

"There's where you're wrong. Several words of it are true."

What can't be cured must be endured, but the German mania is one disease that can be and is going to be cured.

There may be a reason for all things, but we never could find one for earrings.

Don't blame a woman for wanting to be well dressed. If you were a woman you wouldn't want to be a sloppy one, either.

Rulers Criminals Says This German

AMSTREDAM Aug. 1.—A memorandum demanding ruthless action against the men at the helm of the German Government in 1914 as guilty criminals has been issued by former Capt. von Beerfelde says a Berlin telegram quoting the Cologne Volks Zeitung. The memorandum is entitled "A Necessary Correction of the German White Book" and was sent to be members of the Reichstag last week by the captain who was prominent in connection with the Prince Lichnowsky affair.

Capt. Beerfelde's memorandum says that the German leaders at the beginning of the war were guilty of appalling deceits and acted in the service of traitors. He demands the immediate arrest of former Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollwek, and declares that if the Reichstag does not fulfil his demand the curse of this and all succeeding generations will fall upon it for cowardly neglect of duty.

In case of the Reichstag's refusal, Capt. von Beergelde declares, he will immediately request passes for himself and family to Switzerland, because he will no longer share Germany's shame and dishonor.

PUT FOOT THROUGH PORTRAIT OF KAISER

OYSTER BAY, Aug. 1.—A lifesized portrait of Empero William, presented by him to Col. Theodore Roosevelt several years ago, came to grief when a party of citizens visited the home of its possessor, Mrs. C. H. Pollitz.

The picture had been given to the public library by the Colonel, and hung there until after the sinking of the Lusitania, when it was relegated to the cellar. Mrs. Pollitz offered $5 for the painting to the trustees and became its owner. The incident was forgotten until the death of Lieut. Quentin Roosevelt and then the villagers recalled it. They organized a party Sunday and going to the home of Mrs. Pollitz demanded the picture.

Mr. Pollitz wanted to give it up but Mrs. Pollitz wanted to keep it, members of the party said. In the struggle on a balcony for its possession the portrait fell among the vigilants gathered in the street. A sailor promptly put his foot through it.

Mr. James A. Carson yesterday moved from a house on Church street to another part of the city. Two clocks were left in the vacant house and this morning when Mr. Carson went for them both were gone. He reported the case to the police, who are investgating same.

HORSE FELL IN WELL

Trouble is anticipated at Omemee as the result of an accident which occurred Monday night, when a valuable horse owned by Mr. Harry Stark fell headfirst into a well, broke its neck and was drowned. It appears that an open well on the parsonage property and on the street line, was covered with a temporary covering, but no heavy timbers. The horse, worth $200, stepped on the covering and went through, falling ten feet.

DIED UNDER OPERATION

Private Leo Burt, of Port Hope, who was invalided home some time ago, on Monday went to Queen's Military Hospital for an operation, but the shock was more than he colld bear, and he passed away. Deceased enlisted with the 93rd Battalion at Peterboro, and went through several heavy engagements, being wounded and gassed. Pte. Burt was a very popular young man.

ACQUITTED OF CHARGE

Henry Pasquetta, an employee of the British Chemical Work at Trenton, yesterday afternoon at that town had a preliminary hearing before Magistrate O'Rourke on a charge that he negligently omitted to do on act which was his duty to do. It was alleged that as a result of Pasquetta's failure to do a certain act the fatal accident occurred to William E. Rankin of this city. The result of the investigation was that the accused was acquitted of the charge preferred against him. Mr. Carnew for Crown and Mr. A. Abbott for the accused.

ACKNOWLEDGES RESOLUTION

Mr. P. C. McLaurin, Principal of Belleville High School has fittingly acknowledged the following express of sympathy tendered to him in the death of his wife:—"That the Board of Education do unite in the heartfelt expression of the deepest sympathy with Mr. P. C. McLaurin, Principal of our High School in the sad bereavement which he has suffered in the loss of his most estimable wife, whose good deeds and gentle words, philanthropic and devoted services in every meritorious cause during her resident in Belleville, will never be forgotten.

NO MORE KIDNEY TROUBLE

Since He Commenced to Take "Fruit-a-tives"

73 Lees Avenue, Ottawa, Ont.

"Three years ago, I began to feel run-down and tired, and suffered very much from Liver and Kidney Trouble. Having read of 'Fruit-a-tives', I thought I would try them. The result was surprising.

I have not had an hour's sickness since I commenced using 'Fruit-a-tives', and I know now what I have not known for a good many years—that is, the blessing of a healthy body and clear thinking brain".

DEAD CAT

On the corner of Cedar and Henry streets is a dead cat, which has been there since yesterday at noon. The authorities were notified but up to noon to-day the cat had not been removed.

PROUD OF CANADIANS

Rt. Hon. Sir Gilbert Parker in writing to Col. Ponton of this city, refers to a recent address delivered at the Mansion House, London, Eng., by Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, and states that all who heard the masterly address were delighted with it Sir Robert Borden stated that Canadians had covered themselves with glory in a double capacity, namely upon the battlefield and the field of public life.

PICNIC AT ZWICK'S ISLAND.

Zwick's Island hummed with happy humanity yesterday in the weekly outing of children under the auspices of the Women's Home League, Salvation Army, Adjutant Trickey in charge. Bathing was the big attraction for young and old and all were ready for the "eats" when the bell rang. These outings are being held each Wednesday afternoon and are growing in popularity and pleasure.

ENJOYABLE OUTING.

The members of St. Thomas' Church choir had a most enjoyable outing yesterday to Huyck's Point. Swimming and sports were indulged in, after which tea was partaken of in the woods. The beautiful drive through Prince Edward County was a delight to all, and the following, who so kindly loaned their cars, performed a service which was greatly appreciated by all the members: Miss Evelyn McCarthy, Mrs. Smith, Capt. Allan Harper, Ven. Archdeacon Beamish, Mr. Freeman Ketcheson, Mr. Harold Saunders and Mr. Frost. The party arrived back in the city about 10 o'clock, tired but happy.

ROSINEA TURNER

Death came suddenly yesterday afternoon to Mrs. Rosinea Turner, widow of the late Mr. Charles Turner. Deceased resided with her daughter Mrs. Gordon Harris, Park street, and at noon was apparently in her usuaul health. Shortly after partaking of dinner Mrs. Turner was stricken with heart failure and expired in a few minutes. Deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. George Carr of London, England, where she was born in 1850. When a young lady she came out to Canada and for half a century had been a resident of this city, where she was well known and much respected by a large circle of friends. She was a member of the Methodist church. A family of three sons and one daughter survive. The sons, Walter, Samuel and George are all residents of this city, also the daughter, Mrs. Gordon Harris. Mrs. Caroline Sinfield of Belleville, is a sister, and four are residents of England.

Called By Death

MRS. MERIBETH ELLIOTT

There died at Venice, California on Monday the 22nd day of July, 1918 Meribeth Elliott, widow of the late Robert Elliott, who formerly and for many years was a prominent Merchant of Belleville. Mrs. Elliott though 81 years of age had always enjoyed excellent health her death coming suddenly from heart trouble.

She leaves two sons and three daughters, Robert L. Elliott of Chicago, Solicitor for the Great Edison Commonwealth Electric Company! Dr. Arthur R. Elliott also of Chicago, one of Chicago's noted specialists and the head of St. Luke's Hospital, Annie and Kate H. Elliott and Margaret Cameron who were living with their mother in Southern California.

Mrs. Elliott was the eldest daughter of the late Richard and Annie Appleby Lazier who were among the earliest pioneers of the County and Nichoals W. Lazier of Transcona, Manitoba and Stephen A. Lazier and Col. S. S. Lazier of Belleville, are her surviving brothers.

The warmest sympathy of their many friends will be extended to the relatives in the loss of the loving centre of a most devoted family.

AMOS KEHOE

The death occurred yesterday in Toronto of a former well known Bellevillian in the person of Mr. Amos Kehoe The deceased was a brother of Mrs. R. Burke of this city. Mr. Kehoe had lived in Belleville all his life up to a few years ago when be moved to Toronto. Deceased was for many years engaged in the teaming business and was faithful in the discharge of his duties. He was a member of the Roman Catholic church. The body will be brought to Belleville for interment.

ALICE E. GARRISON

At an early hour this morning Mrs. Alice Emily Garrison whose husband is overseas passed away at her late home on Coleman street. Deceased who was in her 29th year was a daughter of Mr. Cornelius J. Donovon and had resided here for some time. She was a member of St. Michael's Church In addition to the husband three children survive.

MRS. W. H. BLAKELY.

Mrs. W. H. Blakely, residing at 22 Everett street, city, died last night after a brief illness. Deceased was a middle-aged lady and had resided in this city for a number of years.

IN OLD AGE

Health and comfort in old age depends largely on keeping the liver and kidneys in healthful action.

Pains and aches, stiffness of the joints, lumbago and rheumatism tell of poisons left in the blood by sluggishness of the liver and kidneys.

People in advanced years hold Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in high esteem because of the promptness and certainty with which they awaken the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

MILK TESTS

Belleville, July 30, 1918.

H. A. Yeomans, M.D.,
Medical Health Officer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir: The following samples of milk were tested today:

Miss Meagher—1.6 per cent. fat; adulterated.

G. A. B. Gay—3.3 per cent. fat, good, adulterated.

S. Hagerman—4.1 per cent. fat, fine quality.

Calnan—3.4 per cent. fat, good quality.

Culhane—4.3 per cent. fat, good quality.

R. F. Miller—3.4 per cent. fat, good quality.

Whitfield—3.1 per cent. fat, dirty.

Citizen's Dairy—3.4 per cent. fat, not clean.

Cummins—3.4 per cent. fat, good quality.

DeVault—4.6 per cent. fat, good quality.

Smith—5.4 per cent. fat, part cream.

Waldron—3.2 per cent. fat, good quality.

A number of the samples show carelessness and lack of cleanliness from some source. I would advise using scalding water or steam in cleaning the battles and utensils, especially in the hot weather, and cool the milk immediately after milking.

Yours truly,
J. A. KERR.

CASE ENLARGED

Edward Snider of this city was last evening apprehended on a warrant which charged him with obtaining by false misrepresentation a horse and outfit from Mr. F. Cooney of this city. The case was enlarged until tomorrow for hearing. Mr. Carnew for crown and Col. W. N. Ponton, K. C, for the accused

Corn Frowns Vanish in a Moment

©B&B 1918

HERE is a fact which millions know. It is so clear, so simple that it makes a corn ridiculous. You can stop any corn pain in a jiffy, and stop it for good.

You can end any corn quickly and end it completely. You can do this without any bother, without any soreness, without any muss.

So corns are utterly unnecessary. And folks who have them nowadays do themselves a wrong.

You can prove these facts on any corn by applying a Blue-jay plaster. The pain will stop instantly.

Then a bit of red wax, centered on the corn, will gently undermine it. In two days, usually, the whole corn disappears. An occasional corn needs a second application.

This is a scientific method, invented by a famous chemist.

It is simple and gentle, yet sure.

The whole effect is centered on the corn, so it doesn't lead to soreness.

To pare a corn — for brief relief—takes ten times longer than to apply a Blue-jay.

Try Blue-jay on one corn. See how promptly you forget it —see how soon it ends. Then remember that every corn—right at the start—can be ended in like way. You should never for a moment suffer corns.

Prove this tonight.

officials of the Y.M.C.A. will in the future fulfill the promise made to the Canadian public of free comforts to the soldiers in camp and trench. The National Council of the Y.M.C.A. admitted that far the period of time the individual charges cover, namely, 1914, 1915 and 1916, there was no organized effort to provide the men with free drinks, etc., which they claim are now being supplied.

The Canadian Y.M.C.A. claims that a great deal of misunderstanding also has arisen from the fact that the British Y.M.C.A. has been working among Canadian soldiers and does not provide anything free. The British Y. M. C. A. charges for admission to the cinemas, etc., whereas the Canadian Y.M.C.A. in general does not. This applies only to 1917.

"It is quite possible that a Canadian soldier has been ministered to by the British Y.M.C.A. and he has taken it for granted that it was the Canadian Y.M.C.A. The policy of the two associations is different. Hence the misunderstanding.

"4. Your committee is of the opinion that whilst certain individual criticisms have been justfied in view of the circumstances detailed above, the work done by the Y.M.C.A. is beneficial to the soldier. The extent of its work can only be really measured if it were possible to imagine the Y. M. C. A. or any institution doing similar work, as being non-existent for some weeks. The absence of them would, by force of contrast, bring to light the essential value of their work among the Canadian soldiers."

TURNING POINT OF SUMMER CAMPAIGN REACHED IN VICTORY YESTERDAY

ALLIES CAPTURE IMPORTANT RIDGE

FRANCO-BRITISH ATTACK ON WESTERN SIDE OF MARNE SALIENT YESTERDAY PENETRATED THREE MILES ON A FIVE-MILE FRONT — RIDGE DOMINATING GERMAN RETREAT OUTLET CAPTURED, ALSO OTHER IMPORTANT STRATEGIC POINTS — REGARDED AS MOST IMPORTANT ACHIEVEMENT OF ALLIES SINCE GERMANS RETIRED FROM MARNE — SITUATION GREATLY IMPROVED AND TURNING POINT OF SUMMER CAMPAIGN AND POSSIBLY OF WHOLE WAR REGARDED AS REACHED THROUGH YESTERDAY'S VICTORIES.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 2.—Yesterday the Franco-British attack on the western side of the Marne salient was on a front of five miles and penetrated to a maximum depth of three miles, according to news received today. It resulted in the capture of the entire ridge which forms the watershed between the Ourcq and the Aisne rivers. French troops also captured the entire Neijmiere Wood, north of Gousancourt, at about the centre of the salient. The advance by the Allies along the western side of the salient is described as extremely important, possibly the most important thing the Allies have accomplished since the Germans retired from the Marne.

The importance of the victory, it is explained, lies in the fact that the new allied positions command the whole area to the northward and takes in the flank and rear the entire western gate through which the Germans have been retiring. This area is a nest of German reserves and field artillery. Gousancourt itself has been taken by French forces and the capture of important ground on the heights to the westerly side of the line also means that the Germans will not be able to retire in an orderly or leisurely way and that they probably will have to go beyond the River Vesle in their retreat. The situation is considered as extremely good, being described in advices as the turning point of the summer campaign and possibly the whole war.

VICTORIOUS ADVANCE CONTINUES.

On the French Front, Aug. 2.—The French are continuing their advance and have taken additional towns and villages at various parts of the front between Soissons and Rheims. The enemy is resisting desperately and losing many prisoners.

Degates Break From Convention

Winnipeg and Ottawa Veterans Representatives Have Grievance

TORONTO, Aug. 2.—Winnipeg and Ottawa delegates to the Great War Veterans' convention in Toronto have broken away and refused to attend the sessions. They held a meeting in the Caris Rite Hotel and discussed their stand and later handed over a statement in regard thereto to Lieut. Col. Purney, president of the G. W. V. A.

Throughout all the meetings of the convention it has been apparent that Ottawa and Winnipeg delegates felt they had a grievance in regard to representation. It was pointed out yesterday by Col. Pidgeon of Ottawa that while Winnipeg with 3,270 members was allowed 10 delegates to the convention, Toronto with 2,267 members had 17 and he moved for proportional representation but his motion was defeated.

In an effort to overcome the difficulty which was apparent after the defeat of this motion, the Toronto delegates yesterday afternoon decided to drop eight of their delegates, thus bringing the number down to nine.

"I hope nothing will get into the papers about this until we have the matter cleared up, which I am sure will be done," said Col. Purney, president of the association, to The World last night. "I have just got the statement of the Ottawa and Winnipeg delegates. It was shipped under my door by a page boy, I cannot say anything about it yet. We do not meet tomorrow but we will take up the matter on Friday morning, and I feel confident a solution will be found then Of course, it must be borne in mind that even though the delegates from these two places break away from the convention that does not mean they withdraw from the association."

PLACE RETURNED MEN

The following resolution has been to the resolutions committee for consideration:

"Moved by J. M. Hill, seconded by R. C. Richardson: Be it resolved by this convention that a committee be appointed to approach the Imperial Munition Board with a view of having returned discharged soldiers placed in positions now held by aliens and others apparently eligible for Military Service in the different plants throughout Canada."

LIMITING THE MEMBERSHIPS

Practically 80,000 soldiers discharged from the C. E. F. are affected by the action of the Dominion Great War Veterans' Covention in deciding to restrict the membership in the association to those who have seen service in France or England or equivalent service in the navy..

Figures presented at the convention showed that at the present time these were 81,000 soldiers discharged from the C. E. F. who had never left Canada.

Formerly these men could be admitted to associate membership in the association, but henceforth they will be barred.

At hte present time it is believed that there are 3,000 associate members in the association. They are men who have never left Canada. Secretary Stewart states that 3,000 badges for this class of membership have been issued by the association. The total membership of the G. W. V. A. is over 25,000.

MAKE FRIENDS WITH PRESS

Comrade Peart, of Hamilton, urged all branches to make friends with the press.

"Those who make friends with the press," he said "have done the best, I have found. In order to keep public confidence you must have the press behind you. The G. W. V. A. should not be antagonistic to any papers. We want to win over to us the greatest medium between us and the public. I would advise the comrades from all branches to get wise to themselves and make friends with the papers."

BROKEN TRUCK CAUSES WRECK.

Brantford, Aug. 2.—A broken truck caused the dumping of 23 freight cars into the ditch on the Buffalo and Goderich division of the Grand Trunk near Onondaga at two o'clock yesterday morning.

The track was torn up for half a mile, and it is not expected that the line will be open today. The cars were laden with coal and general merchandise. There were no casualties.

Bombadier Olver Scores Chronic Kickers

Extracts from Interesting Letter Written By Belleville Soldier Overseas

Through the kindness of Mrs. Chas. Smals of Boissevain, Manitoba, The Intelligencer is privileged to publish the following extracts from a letter written by Bombadier Hugh Oliver, a Belleville soldier:

"I'll tell you there is nothing better in France than the Y. M. C. A. and the ones that complain of it, well, I think you will find that they did not see much of France or are "chronic kickers." The Y. M's have canteens all over the back area where they usually give concerts every night and the canteen sell things as cheap as they possibly can, cigarettes at tuppence ha'penny a package they are five pence ha'penny over here now. Then in the forward area they have little dug-outs where they sell what they can get up and only allow so much to each man, so that as many as possible will be benefitted, and give away free coffee or cocoa, and if you could see the thousands that get their hot drink every night you would see it was not a small item. I could keep telling you of what they do for pages but then it would not give them all the credit that is due them. The next fellow you hear complain of them just ask him for me what does he expect them do, ask him just how they could better. I think that is the opinion of the majority of men. I always took them as a matter of course until you asked me.

My head is the same not any better so I suppose the "noise" is going to stay with me, but it is not getting any worse. At first I was afraid it would. At night, when I lie down is the worst. It usually keeps me awake for about half an hour. They took one small piece of shell out of my head in France so I don't think there is any more pieces in. It is only a little scar over my left temple about an inch long.

The English are standing the high prices in fine style, they "grouse" among themselves but they carry on just the same. I have changed my opinion a lot since I came over here and saw them. The food conditions are getting better, there is a shortage but it is improving every day and it is only through the way the people are sticking together.

Allied Help Already Sent to Vladivostok

British, American and Japanese Troops are on Their Way

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—The great program of allied aid for Russia is definitely under way.

Quietly, without any official announcement to date, the United States Japan and England have despatched troops to Vladivostock and more will arrive soon from colonial possessions near by.

TWO ARE DROWNED.

Three Rivers, Que., Aug 2.—Rollan Marchildon, aged fourteen, son of Alfred Marchildon, District Magistrate, and Wilfred Lamy, aged twenty, son of Nap Lamy, jeweler of this city, were drowned while bathing in the St. Lawrence river.

Germans Forced to Postpone Blow

New Situation Runs Amuck With Their Plans

PARIS, Aug. 2.—The newspaper Echo De Paris said that a semi-official note emanating from Hindenburg and Ludendorff declared the German command has been compelled to postpone for some time the decisive blow against the French and British, owing to the new situation.

CHECKED UP THE EXAMS.

Toronto, Aug. 2.—Although the result of the entrance examinations of the faculty of education and Queen's University have only just been announced a number of appeals have been received by the Department of Education.

Hon. Dr. H. T. Cody has carefully gone over all the papers and examinations, and stated that he had found the examiners had been very reasonable and moderate. He said there was practically no possibility of the marks being counted wrong, as all additions were carefully checked by competent clerks. Mistakes made were counted, and if an examiner was found to make too many of them he was not chosen again as an examiner the next year.

Daimler Factories at Stuttgart Bombed By British Air Squadron

Coblenz and Other Cities Also Visited— Seven Raiders Shot Down in Desperate Battles

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The Air Ministry's communication on aerial activities says:

In addition to the attacks already reported on July 30th, the station at Lahr (Baden) was bombed.

On the night of July 30-31 our airplanes again proceeded to Stuttgart and dropped nearly two tons of bombs on the Bosch Magneto works, the Daimler works and the railway station. A fire broke out in the station.

Several bombs were dropped on the Hagnau station and barracks causing a heavy explosion. The Remilly junction and two airdromes were attacked with bombs and machine-gun fire.

On the morning of July 31 at 7.30 o'clock one of our squadrons attacked the Coblenz station. Owing to clouds observation was impossible. The station and factories at Saarbrucken were subjected to two attacks.

The first formation encountered large numbers of hostile scouts before reaching their objective. Bitter fighting ensued in the course of which four of our machines were shot down. The remainder bombed their objective and on their return journey were again heavily attacked, losing three more machines. One hostile machine was disabled.

The second attack delivered later was completely successful. Bursts were observed in the factory. In spite of attacks by hostile scouts all our machines returned safely.

Ex-Czar Collapsed Before Rifle Squad

Had to be Propped Against post Says German Newspaper

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 2.—Given two hours in which to prepare for the end, Nicholas Romanoff, former Russian Emperor, was taken out by his executioners in a state of such collapse that it was necessary to prop him up against a post, says the Lokal Anzeiger, of Berlin, which claims to have received from a high Russian personage an account of the ex-Czar's last hours.

Nicholas was awakened at five o'clock on the morning of the day of his execution by a patrol of a non-commissioned officer and six men. He was told to dress and was then taken to a room where the decision of the Soviet Council was communicated to him. He was informed that the execution would be carried out in two hours.

The former Emperor, it is added, received the announcement of the sentence of death with great calmness. He returned to his bedroom and collapsed in a chair. After a few minutes he asked for a priest, with whom he was allowed to remain unattended. Subsequently he wrote several letters.

When the escort arrived to take him to the place of execution, Nicholas attempted to rise from his chair but was not able. The priest and a soldier were obliged to help him get to his feet. The condemned man descended the stairs with difficulty and once he fell down.

As he was unable to stand without support when the place of execution was reached, he was propped against a post. He raised his hands and seemed to be trying to speak, but the rifles spoke and he fell dead.

To Go Into Mourning.

Madrid, Aug. 2.—The official journal announces that the Spanish Court will go into mourning for thirty days for Nicholas Romanoff, former Emperor of Russia.

Bulgars Mutiny Offensive Fails

LONDON, Aug. 2.—It is learned here that there are increasing evidences of mutiny in the Bulgarian army.

Recently, it is stated, an offensive against the Monastir front failed to materialize, due to the Bulgarians' refusal to participate.

[illegible] Turn Huns Forcing Retreat In Wide Sector

French and Americans Begin Movement That Promises Disaster for Germans

New York, Aug. 2.—French and American troops have begun a turning movement that, if successful, will compel a German retirement over a wide sector east of Fere-en-Tardenois at the centre of the Soissons-Rheims salient. They have attacked over a front of over three miles on each side of the village of Nesles, the apex of the allied wedge north of the Ourcq Their greatest advance was toward the east, where the Americans pushed on some distance from the town of Sergy and approached Chamery.

Although the announced purpose of the attack was the straightening out of the line between Ceirges, this is really secondary to the outflanking of the Germans to the southward. The enemy is holding very strong positions at Roncheres and St. Gemme, where his line is still less than five miles from the Marne, and a continued advance between Nesles and Clerges would force him to fall back to escape being cut off from the rear.

Germans Lose Million And A Half Men

PARIS, Aug. 2.—German losses since the start of the war have reached 4,760,000, according to estimates published here yesterday in L'Homme Libre, Premier Clemenceau's newspaper. The Germans now have 5,430,000 men, it is estimated, of which 4,000,000 are engaged on the west front.

The paper estimates that since March the Germans losses have been a million and a half, of which a million, it is said, have been put out of action

Confirmed from Another Source.

Geneva, Aug. 2.—German losses since March 21, when the big German drive was launched, total nearly a million men, according to a high neutral official, who has just arrived from Berlin. He said the German casualties in the last two sections of the offensive were estimated at 350,000.

Mangin's Army Launches Attack on Ten-Mile Front

With the French Armies in the Field, Aug. 2.—General Mangin's army attacked between Fere-en-Tardenois and Plassier-Huleu yesterday morning (a front of nearly ten miles) taking Hill 205, east of Grand Rozoy from where Fismes is visible, and capturing Cramoiselle (four miles northwest of Fere-en-Tardenois).

Other troops took Meuniere Wood in the salient south-east of Cierges.

Forcing Huns Back Toward Vesle River

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Aug. 2.—On the battlefield north of the Marne French troops continue to press the Germans back toward the Vesle River, says today's War Office statement.

England Has Raised 4,500,000 Soldiers

Over 7,000,000 Is the Total Force From All the Empire

LONDON, Aug. 2.—In recognition of their services during the war, Premiers Borden and Massey, of Canada and New Zealand, were presented with addresses by the Kew Workingmen's Club.

Premier Massey pointed out that seven and one-half million men had been contributed by the Empire, of which the British Islands had given seventy-five per cent., including four and one-half millions from England alone, while the Dominions and colonies had given twelve per cent. and India and other dependencies had given the remainder.

The tonnage of the British navy was now over six million as compared with four million at the outbreak of the war, and the personnel 420,000 as compared with 145,000. There were 567 steamers continually employed carrying troops and stores to the armies in France and the east.

Great Britain's war expenditure to the end of March was £7,014,000,000, of which £5,170,000,000 was in loans, and £1,844,000,000 revenue. It was noteworthy that 25 per cent. of the war expenditure was raised by taxation. Loans to the allies and dominions amounted to £526,000,000.

Following Premier Massey, Sir Robert said that our cause was the greatest ever fought for in history. Out of 380,000 sent overseas by Canada, 225,000 were workingmen. The workingmen were more vitally concerned in the issue of this war than any other class. The struggle involved the problem whether democracy would make good or not. If Germany triumphed, or if the war brought an inconclusive peace, then democracy would not have made good.

Allies Wipe Out Line Above Oulchy Foe Plight Worse

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The Allies yesterday delivered a new stroke over a ten-mile front between Buzancy, about four miles south of Soissons, and Seringes, north of Fere-en-Tardenois. The result was a considerable advance and the wiping out of the elbow in the line at Oulchy-Le-Chateau.

British Raiders Capture Machine Guns

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Aug. 2.—A few prisoners were captured by our patrols yesterday in the neighborhood of Festubert. During the night English troops carried out a successful raid north of Albert and captured 16 prisoners and machine guns. Hostile artillery has shown somewhat increased activity south of the Somme and south of Ypres and has been active also north of Bethune and on our front east of Hazebrouck.

No Real Sacrifice Yet Made By Canada

Dominion Must Be Ready for Dark Months Says Head of Orange Order

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., Aug. 2—The Grand Black Chapter of the Orange Lodge of British America opened its annual meeting here Three Toronto delegates, Past Grand Master H. C. Hocken, M.P., A. A. Gray, grand master, and the Black Chapter of Ontario, and County Master T. W. Self, were present.

The feature of the opening session was the address of Grand Master Dr. D. D. Ellis.

"Many questions call for our attention, but all must be put aside for the present—for there is only one, and that is to win the war," he said in his address. As grand master of British America I pledged the Prime Minister the united support of the Orange Association in the formation and return to power of a Union Government and this pledge has been fulfilled by the Orangemen of the Dominion.

Union Government Justified

"Union Government has been justified by many things outside the vigorous prosecution of the war.

"The Military Service Act is producing results in spite of all obstacles. I regret that a grave suspicion has been created in the public mind that the Act is not being applied in some cases as originally intended—that is, that it should apply equally to all British subjects in Canada of every class, race and creed. The charge has been made openly that men of military age were evading service by entering the Jesuit Novitiate at Guelph, Ontario. The truth or falsity of these charges should be established by a full, impartial and thorough investigation. Any member or mebers of a Government who refuse to stifle such an investigation must be held responsible for the creation of much dissatisfaction throughout the country. I say this not with the view of hampering the administration in enforcing the Act; but the people of Canada have the right to know the truth.

"Our duty as an organization and as individuals is to render all the assitance in our power to every means that will tend to greater efforts in war work. No doubt mistakes have been made, but I am convinced that no country in the world has ever carried out such a tremendous enterprise with as little wrong-doing and as little graft. There has been too much of petty fault-finding in evidence. The pastime of sniping public men who are giving their best to the natonal service is to be condemned. Outside the irreparable loss of life, as a people we have not yet made any material sacrifice in the war. Privations, common in the centre of the Empire, are unknown here. We must be prepared to make real sacrifices in the months to come.

Will Ask Government To Guarantee A Price

Board of Grain Supervisors Say Step Necessary to Move 1918 Wheat Crop

TORONTO, Aug. 2.—It was decided at the meeting of the Board of Grain grain trade, Winnipeg, Montreal and Toronto, in the Queen's Hotel, to recommend that the Dominion Government guarantee the price of Canadian wheat for the coming season. It was pointed out that it would be impossible to finance the moving of the crop in Canada without some sort of guarantee being made by the Government within the next three weeks. Last year this guarantee was arranged by the Wheat Export Co. through the British Government.

Matters considered at the meeting yesterday were not finally decided upon and another meeting will be held in Winnipeg in three weeks.

NEARER RHEIMS ROAD.

New advances by the Americans and French were reported over a large part of the Rheims-Soissons battlefront yesterday. The Allies went forward in the Saponay region, between Oulchy-Le-Chateau and Fere-en-Tardenois, in the Arcy Wood district, near Cierges, and made fairly considerable progress toward the Rheims road in the neighborhood of Bligny.

South of the Courmont-Fismes road, the Americans hurled back the Germans into the woods near Gousancourt. On the right flank of the salient, the Americans are making progress toward the Ardre Valley, in the region of Ville-en-Tardenois.

TOM MIX AND PAULINE FREDERICK AT GRIFFIN'S

Two very much different stars appeared at Griffin's last night and both were given a good reception. The first to appear was Tom Mix the well known western cowboy and expert horseman, and one might say expert dancer. In his newest picture "Western Blood" he does just about everything that any of the other clever riders do and then begins to do things where the other fellows stopped. In this picture he plays the part of detective to some extent although not working really for Uncle Sam. He detects the tricky dealings of a German spy to hold up the purchase of horses for the Allies and also nips in the bud an uprising among the Mexicans also steered by the before mentioned spy and last of all wins the heart and hand of a beautiful Western girl who just a short time before was ready to have him arrested for breaking into one of her parties.

A two real comedy called "Dog in the Manger" caused an unusual amount of laughter and Pauline Frederick pleased in Tolstoy's story of Russia. The story is very timely and concerns the marriage of a peasant girl to a Prince of royal blood. Glimpses of the dreadful land Siberia are given and also the march of the convicts to Siberia over the snowy wastes of the desolate land are vividly shown in the picture.

At the Palace, Ethel Clayton appeared in an excellent picture called Whims of Society dealing with the troubles of the employes of a large mill who have been cheated by an unscrupulus employer posing as a philanthropist and charity giver. The story has a happy ending some what out of the ordinary. Charlie Chaplin in a new screemer and also a good single reel comedy completed an excellent program of pictures that pleased a well filled house.

For the first part of next week our old friend Doug Fairbanks, will be here in a new one called "Say, Young Fellow."

BOY DROWNED IN CANAL.

St. Catharines, Aug. 2.—Henri Croleau, aged eight years, who came to this city with his parents only two months ago from Montreal, was drowned in lock 307, Welland Canal. He was playing along the edge with a young comrade, losing his balance when he leaned over the wall in reaching for a stick. The body was soon recovered by firemen, but efforts to resuscitate him failed.

Venereal Diseases Are Being Reported

TORONTO, Aug. 2.—The first report on venereal disease by medical officers of health appears in the monthly report of the provincial board of health for the month of July 1918, issued yesterday afternoon. The cases reported cover however, only the last two weeks in July. In all 177 have been reported no cases for the two last weeks in July.

The monthly report shows a general increase in the number of cases of communicable disease when compared with the previous month there is, however, a very substantial decrease.

The totals for the month of July in 1917 and 1918, respectively, are 910 cases with 22 deaths in July last year and 1519 with 167 deaths this year.

There have been a very large number of cases of measles, no less than 718 being reported, when last year during the same period they totalled only 223. They show however a very large decrease when compared with last month when 1500 were reported.

The case of smallpox number 38, against 21 last year but this is the lowest figure for any month but one this year. Windsor reported seven cases and St. Thomas 16, Byng Inlet 5, Rochester Township 4, Nepeanh Raleigh Township, Pembroke, Sudbury Sault Ste. Marie and Snider Township one case each.

With respect to scarlet fever which was very prevalent for the first six months of the year, there is a marked reduction from nearly 400 cases to 158 in July.

Diptheria cases also show a large reduction when compared with the first month of the year.

"A CROWN OF SHAME"

By FLORENCE MARRYAT

Author of "The Poison of Asps," A Star and a Heart," "Written in Fire," etc.

"De oberseer only act on de Massa's orders," grumbled Aunt Sally again.

"It is not true!" cried Lizzie indignantly. "Mr. Courtney never ordered Monsieur de Courcelles to do anything that was cruel or unjust. He left a great deal of power in his hands, because he believed him to be a good man, and worthy of his trust; but he found out his mistake, and that is why he has been sent away."

"Missy Liz speaks the God's truth," exclaimed Jerusha, "and you niggers know she do! What hasn't that man done to us? Didn't he starve old Jake for three days 'cause he not clean horse proper? and din't he strike Aunt Hannah 'cross de face with his whip, and make de 'sypelas come out? Didn't he take me up to his bungalow, and tell me I libe dere all my life, and den kick me out like a dog 'cause I got a poor leetle baby? Haven't you niggers said, times out of mind, you'd like to kill him for all he done, and that it was only 'cause Missy Liz like him dat he wasn't dead long ago? If you says 'No' now, den you'se all liars, and a lot of trash dat is afraid to stick to your own words."

"Jerusha is right," said Lizzie. "You were all afraid of Monsieur de Courcelles, and spoke against him, whilst he was your overseer; but now that he has no authority over you, you allow his specious tongue to lead your minds astray. My dear friends, be warned in time. Monsieur de Courcelles has no right to be on this plantation at all, and he only comes here for a bad purpose. You musn't listen to him. I am sorry to say it before you, but he is not a good man. I loved him once very dearly," continued Lizzie, with a great effort, and her cheeks dyed crimson, "and believed him to be all that was upright and honorable, but I found out I was wrong, as you will find out you are wrong, when it may be too late. Do you know that I have but to go to Mr. Courtney and inform him of the mutinous ideas you are openly expressing, to have you put into prison? And the new Governor is very strict, as you may have heard, and makes an example of all rebels. He is determined to crush the feeling of mutiny out of San Diego, whatever it may cost."

"Perhaps Gubnor get crushed himself," sugested Betsy sullenly.

"Don't talk nonsense!" cried Lizzie sharply. "What could a handful of colored people do against the military forces? You would all be shot down and killed, before you knew where you were."

She spoke boldly and decisively, but her heart was sinking all the while. If the negro population of the island rose en masse, the slaughter might be terrible before peace could be restored amongst them. She thought of her benefactors, the Courtneys, of poor heedless Maraquita and the kind-hearted Governor,—a little too of herself, and shuddered. And Henri de Courcelles also. Would he not be overwhelmed by the storm he was talking such pains to raise? At all risks, she said to herself, she would see him, and warn him of the danger he ran in turning against his late employers.

"Which of you has been listening to Monsieur de Courcelles inflammatory talk?" she asked presently, as she looked round upon the women.

"All of us," answered Auunt Sally. "He come down to our huts of evening and sit dere, and tell us how Massa Courtney treat him wuss den nigger, and how w'so free colored people, and should stan' no nonsense."

"He is worse than I thought him," said Lizzie. 'He must stop it at once, or I shall inform Mr. Courtney, and have him turned off the premises.

"Kill him, Missy Liz, kill him!" hissed Jerusha, between her clenched teeth; 'dat is de only way to crush de rattlesnake."

"Don't speak like that, Jerusha. It is wicked, and you do not mean it."

But the Indian girl did mean it all the same.

"Where did you say that Monsieur de Courcelles was staying, Betsy?" inquired Lizzie, a few moments later.

"At Uncle John's shanty, t'other side of avenue. He mayn't be dere now, Missy Liz, but he sleeps dere ob nights."

"If de door would fasten, I'd set fire to dat rotten shanty, before anoder moon," remarked Jerusha.

"Well, I must leave you now," said the Doctor's daughter, with a deep sigh; "but remember what I say. The next time I hear any talk like this of to-day, I shall go straight to Mr. Courtney, and ask him to dismiss the whole lot of you. Then you will starve without any work to do, and will be sorry you left your comfortable huts, and kind employers, at the instigation of a villain."

"Massa Courtney starve too when he got no coolies to pick cotton and rice for him,' 'muttered some one in the crowd.

Lizzie saw plainly that the disaffection had spread too effectually to be quenched by her single arguments, and so she left them, and, wrapped in thought, walked leisurely away from the coolie quarters. Her first step, she felt, must be to see Henri de Courcelles, and with that intention she directed her feet towards Uncle Josh's shanty, which stood somewhat apart from the rest. The sun was now high in the heavens, and no European was abroad who could rest at home. Lizzie's broad-brimmed hat and white umbrella sheltered her sufficiently in the shady plantation, but she would not have ventured out ,except at the call of duty, at so late an hour in the morning, and so she firmly calculated on finding Monsieur de Courcelles in the hut. She was not disappointed. Old Uncle Josh, who was an aged negro almost past work, and only kept to do light jobs about the garden and stables, came to the door with much caution to answer Lizzie's knock for admittance, and was about to declare that he knew nothing of Monsieur de Courcelles, when a voice from within called out to him to admit the lady, and not to make a d—d fool of himself. So Lizzie passed in, and found herself face to face with the man she had believed to be hundred of miles away.

"Monsieur," she commenced hurriedly. 'I should not be here, except that I have something of the utmost importance to say to you. You must send this man away, so that he may not hear us."

"Go up to the plantation, Uncle John, or anywhere you like, and don't come back for an hour," said De Courcelles, in a voice of authority; and the old negro nodded in acquenscence, and shambled off.

"Are you sure he is safe," demanded Lizzie, as the man disappeared.

'Safe as death! I have him under my thumb," was the confident reply. "And now, what can you have to say to me, Lizzie? After our last parting, I hardly expected you would seek me out of your own accord"

"Neither should I have done so, except that the welfare of those I love more than myself is at stake Monsieur, why are you still on the plantation of Beauregard?"

"I think that is my business sooner than yours."

"Indeed it is my business,—the business of everyone who regards the Courtneys as benefactors Your presence here can be for no good purpose. It spells ruin and devastation for them By your false arguments you are inciting these ignorant colored people to rebel; you are making them discontented—not to say bloodthirsty-; and the upshot of your evil counsel will be a mutiny, that will involve their own downfall with those of their employers, and, perhaps, lead to murder and rapine."

"And what do I care if it does? It will be no more than they deserve.'

"Oh, Henri, you cannot think what you are saying! Surely you would never be so wicked What have the Courtneys done to make you so revengeful? They were always the kindest of patrons to you until this unhappy business occurred with Maraquita And even to the last they were both just and generous How can you find it in your heart to injure them?"

"They are Maraquita's parents," he answered gloomily.

'And would you avenge her falsehood—her broken faith—upon them? Monsieur, that is not like yourself! it is unworthy of any one calling himself a man"

'What right had they to turn me off Beauregard, then? It was only done to shield her because they suspect the truth, and are afraid I might prove a dangerous rival She marries the Governor of San Diego, and is lapsed in luxury and comfort whilst I (who am morally her husband) am sent adrift like a rudderless boat, to toss anywhere on the sea of life But I'll be even with her yet and her bald-headed old ape of a partner too."

"Henri, you must not speak like that," said Lizzie firmly. "I feel for your disappointment—indeed I do; it must be a b'tterly hard one; but to try and revenge yourself in this manner is a cowardly and wicked thing. The feeling of disaffection is rife enough in the island, without your adding to it. I beg—I pray of you to leave the plantation, and not return. You have no right here, and if you remain I shall consider it my duty to inform Mr. Courtney; and you know how painful it would be for me to say anything to him against you. Henri, for the sake of old times, do as I ask you."

"You are a good woman, Lizzie—I have always maintained that—and, if you wish it, I will go. But, mind you, my departure will not stop the rising mutiny, any more than my remaining here hatched it into life. The native population is ripe for rebellion, and it is only now a question of weeks—perhaps days—before they burst into open revolt. I am glad I have seen you to warn you against it. The coolies will not harm you I am sure— they love and reverence you too much—but they may frighten you, and I should wish to prevent even that. But as for the rest—well! I shall not be satisfied till I see the White House and Government House in ashes, and their owners weltering in their blood!"

DOCTOR URGED AN OPERATION

Instead I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Was Cured.

Baltimore, Md.—"Nearly four years I suffered from organic troubles, nervousness and headaches and every month would have to stay in bed most of the time. Treatments would relieve me for a time but my doctor was always urging me to have an operation. My sister asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before consenting to an operation. I took five bottles of it and it has completely cured me and my work is a pleasure. I tell all my friends who have any trouble of this kind what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—NELLIE B. BRITTINGHAM, 609 Calverton Rd., Baltimore, Md.

It is only natural for any woman to dread the thought of an operation. So many women have been restored to health by this famous remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after an operation has been advised that it will pay any woman who suffers from such ailments to consider trying it before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

Canadian Air Force Has Become Reality

Reccomendations of Imperial Ministry Accepted by Premier Borden and Colleagues

LONDON, Aug. 1.—The Canadian Associated Press is authoritatively informed that the Canadian Air Force becomes a working reality.

This is the result of negotiations undertaken by Sir Edward Kemp with the Imperial Ministry ever since his arrivel in England, in December. In the progress of the discussion which has as its final object the authorization of the Canadian Air Force, various recognitions of the prominent part Canadian airmen were playing in the war were conceded by the Air Ministry.

The grouping or Canadian airmen in a special section the wearing of a Canadian distinguishing mark or badge and the recording monthly of exploits of Canadian airmen were some results of the early negotiations.

In May last Sir Edward was able to announce that the Imperial air authorities had agreed to the principle set forth in his policy. Sir Edward Kemp brought details before Sir Robert Borden and his colleagues on their arrival in June and the proposals were entirely acceptable and approved.

In the interval the oragnization of two Canadian squadrons to form the nucleus of a Canadian Air Force, had been in progress.

Thus another branch of Canada's activities in the war is accorded that recognition and credit which Canadian airmen so deservingly merit.

Editors Saw All at Front

Were Taken Everywhere in War Zone and saw Real War

LONDON, Aug. 2.—The party of Canadian newspaper proprietors and editors which has been visiting France has returned to London.

The press correspondent who has been with the Canadian editors in France since July 24 says the visit has been a splendid success, far beyond their own enthusiastic exceptations and will have results in Canada which even the Ministry of Information and the Imperial military authorities who so ably planned the trip, could not have anticipated.

The editors shook the hand of everyone from Field Marshal Haig down to Bill Smith or Bill Jones from their own particular home town. They lunched or dined pleasantly with Sir Arthur Currie, the Canadian Corps Commander, or with the heads of the Canadian Railway and Forestry Corps, and on the next day they would share the simpler fare of the men actually in the front line. They were allowed to see everything and go everywhere and the German shells and bullets or even gas did not stop them.

A TASTE OF WAR

As the guest of the Imperial Government the party was allowed to travel in a military ship. They landed at a Channel port and immediately had a taste of war, when they were taken to an instruction camp and given a lesson in the use of gas masks and made to march through chambers filled with German poison gases. There were no casualties, but later incidents up the line proved how necessary was the experience.

The editors next visited a great British ordinance depot, where they saw big and little guns coming in scarred from the battlefront being repaired and made fit for service again. They also inspected the immense sheds where thousands of pounds of sterling are saved every day by the salvage system which has become so thorough in the British army.

The editors arrived in the Canadian zone and headquarters were established at the Saskatoon rest station, where they slept and were fed, as are officers who come down from the Canadian firing line.

AT VIMY RIDGE

Next morning they were taken by special train over the Canadian light railways under slopes of Vimy Ridge. They met Gen. Currie, the Canadian Corps Commander, and after hearing the various heads of the branches of the Dominion forces explain the workings of their particular services, proceeded over the trenches which the Canadians had captured to the memorable rodge, where after lunch, Gen. Currie in simple words told them how the Canadians had gained the great position which the Germans thought impregnable. The editors sat around the shatterd trenches at the summit of a German redoubt.

One of the party said he would never forget the experience. "Gen. Currie is as modest as he is great. He gave credit only to his men none to himself."

The party then motored to a Canadian dressing station at which they watched the wounded arriving from the front and they themselves had a taste of Hun shrapnel.

GUESTS OF DIVISIONS

After visiting the shell-torn areas and seeing a Canadian Red Cross supply station in the field the party were entertained to tea by Gen. Currie in a pressy little chateau not yet damaged by German guns. Here they were introduced to the General commanding the army in which the Canadians have served some time. That night the editors saw a revue by a divisional concert party in a little hutted theatre behind the lines and marvelled how soldiers daily facing death can thoroughly enjoy themselves.

Each editor was alternately the guest of one of the Canadian divisions and all were allowed to see any battalion the wished most of them choosing that of their own town and meeting friends they had not seen perhaps for years. It was the breath of Canada for most of the soldiers and the editors were received with wild enthusiasm.

WITH FORESTRY CORPS

Subsequently the party visited the spot where thousands of Canadian construction men are making a new railway town larger perhaps than they constructed in the early days at Moose Jaw or Medicine Hat.

They also visited a central group of the Canadian Forestery Corps and witnessed a complete operation from the felling of the trees to the sawing and shipping of lumber through Canadian-built mills which hold the record.

On leaving this portion of Canada's part in the war to be the guests of France in Paris an editor declared it was a wonderful experience and one which could never be equalled.

VETERANS FIRST ON HOUSING PLANS

TORONTO, Aug. 2.—Premier Sir Wm. Hearst has sent the following letter to Sir John Willison, chairman of the Housing Committee:

"In further reference to my letter of the 17th instant, I desire to point out that returned soldiers, who are entitled to special consideration in all matters, are particularly entitled to consideration in connection with the housing problem. Many of them gave up their homes when they enlisted, and now on their return find it difficult, if not impossible, to secure houses on reasonable terms. I do not know if it is possible to attach any conditions to the Government's offer as contained in my previous letter in this connection, but municipalities taking advantage of that offer should be given to understand that returned soldiers must have first consideration in the formation or carrying out of any housing scheme. (Sgd.) W. H. Hearst."

SQUABBLES AMONG HUNS.

London, Aug. 2.—Strife among the central powers appears to be increasing. Rigidly censored German despatches and comment heard through neutral sources show that Austria and Germany find it impossible to agree on the Polish question.

This is extremely interesting, following as it does recent reports that the Turks and Germans had severed relations. The Turks and the Bulgarians are still deadlocked over the Dobrudja situation, and it is rumored without confirmation that Turkish and Bulgarian soldiers have already clashed on the borders.

Feeling is reported running high in Sofia and Constantinople. The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger, foreseeing a possible danger of strife developing, urges all to halt their dissensions. Otherwise, the newspaper says, "what we have so far managed to gain probably will be lost."

KAISER MAY PROTEST MUTT AND JEFF.

"Bud" Fisher, creator of Mutt and Jeff in cartoon, is now a captain in the British army and has been appointed to Lord Beaverbrook's staff of war historians and illustrators. "Bud" is going to take Mutt and Jeff right into the trenches and give the Kaiser the merry ha ha. The Mutt and Jeff war pictures will be freely circulated among the English-speaking troops on the western front where they will help to cheer many a weary moment. Cartoonist Fisher always had a hankering after soldiering and campaigned in Mexico with Gen. Villa in 1915, being made a captain in that army. When the United States entered the war "Bud" enlisted and was commissioned a Lieutenant of Field Artillery and assigned to Camp Mead. He was in a hurry to get overseas, however, and was permitted to resign from the United States army to join the British.

There is an axiom abroad that only a man in uniform can "kid" the war, as Capt. Bruce Bairnsfather, of the British army has done with his merry sketches of "Ole Bill" and his 'appy pals. Mutt and Jeff are expected to provide the same measure of smileage for the American soldiers as Bairnsfather does for the Tommies.

IN THE GLOAMING AT CAMP MEETIN'.

The glories of the old-fashioned camp meeting in the country are many and pleasing. For one thing it brings the thrill of human sympathy from close and friendly contact with neighbors. It also forms a great event in lives so quiet that they are almost stagnant—then there are meetings—beneath the trees in the moonlight, softly whispered words of wonderful moment, hands clasping hands forming the world old electrical circuit of true love, life compacts sealed with those wonderful kisses, and new history started with many changes in the neighborhood family relations. Such is the country camp meeting from the rim out; on the inside there is joy and gladness and shouting for the old folks whose light of romance has dimmed into the complacency of the autumn of life. Above all, the camp meeting is a change and a rest from the same old sameness of life and farm drudgery, day in and day out, an outing made orthodox by the seal of religion—a religion a few beats faster than the ordinary brand usually retailed by the busy circuit preacher.

For the tired farmer, his wife, daughter and hired help there is no more refreshing tonic than this self-same old fashioned country camp meeting with its Amen Corner and Hallelujah Chorus.

BEATING BACK TO POLITICS.

The Toronto Star is one of the newspapers which takes a savage joy in deriding the trip of Sir Robert Borden and some of his ministers overseas, characterizing the visit as a "joy jaunt." The Star is effectively answered in its own columns by a cable despatch from its overseas correspondent who says that the Canadians in England are amazed that Canadian newspapers should consider the Premier's trip as one of pleasure when in reality it consists principally of hard work.

F. A. McKenzie, the Star correspondent in London, who has been overseas since the beginning of the war and is exceptionally well-informed upon conditions and events over there, throws a monkey-wrench into the editorial gears of the Star in the following copyright cable published in the news columns of the Star:

> It is common knowledge that the Dominion Premiers helped to reconsider and resettle the entire foundation of the military principles of our campaigns. In close consultation with the leading representatives of our allies they have established, reshaped and REBUILT unitedly foundations upon which the allied conduct of the war will be waged during the coming year and principles vital in interest to every Canadian unit here. Their presence has been regarded by the British Cabinet with appreciation and gratitude. Lloyd George has repeatedly given expression to this feeling. They have STRENGTHENED HIS HANDS and brought fresh points of view.

Continuing, the message of Mr. McKenzie says:

> The Canadian community in England regard with amazement the talks about Ministers' joy jaunts to England. They have had six weeks of hard labor, in which they have made history and laid the foundation of a new Empire.

The Daily News' Ottawa correspondent said a few days ago that Premier Borden was "backing Lloyd George in the fight he is making for increased efficiency of the British Army." Mr. McKenzie, the Star correspondent, says that the Canadian Premier is "strengthening the hands" of Mr. Lloyd George, and the Toronto Star editorially condemns Sir Robert Borden's absence from Canada.

Red-blooded Canadians are preferable to those sanguine with habeas corpuscles, says the Toronto News.

Germans claim to have taken 24,000 prisoners since July 15. Oh, what a wonderful dream—why they were walking backwards so fast that they were afraid to take time to wind up their watches let alone stop to take prisoners. Any prisoners they took were confined to the usual colonies in their shirts which they took with them.

While the Board of Trade are looking into the High Cost of Fire Insurance they might incidentally make a report upon Belleville's antique fire alarm system, the chief feature of which is that when a fire breaks out some one may think of telephoning the police station—then the police will ring the alarm upon the bell in the town hall tower and telephone to the fire station particulars of the location of the fire. It's a great system, if it don't weaken and the only one of its kind this side of the Himalayas.

The Poet's Corner

Canada's Patchwork Highways.

Montreal Herald.

The fleet of army motor trucks which made the run from Detroit to the Atlantic seaboard reported having encountered many and serious difficulties. Although its route lay through a highly developed region and passed through several important cities, it was necessary to spend months in planning the route, in investigating reports of road conditions, in building gaps in the proposed road, and in repairing parts of the road. Road conditions are as bad or worse in Canada. The automobile had made us realize that we have sadly neglected every highway system. Where there are good roads they often lead to nowhere in particular, and leave off without order or arrangement. In one place we see a stretch of concrete, in another a dirt track. Some are built of gravel, some of sawdust. Often there are gaps which make motor travel impossible. There is badly needed some organization to plan a highway system in this country on a national scale; a system which will make the local point of view give way to the national and give good through highways in all the settled districts of the country. Here in the Province of Quebec we have made a good beginning, and our mileage of good roads is greater than in any other province.

A Reasonable Hypothesis.

Kingston Standard.

The Standard would suggest to those newspapers which are clamoring for the return of Premier Borden from England that Sir Robert knows his duty better than do those critics. "Let Borden finish his work."

Dad Pays the Bills.

Has His Sons and His Money.

The Labor Advocate.

The Kaiser had six sons and a large income when he started this war. The war is in its fourth year and he still has all his sons and his large income. How he can look in the face the thousands of Germans, crippled by his war, we don't know, but he does it. Everybody about him has given something or someone to the war. The Kaiser has given nothing. He still has everything he started with and more.

Only One National Game.

Boston Globe.

Secretary Baker has fairly stated the case for professional baseball and has fairly stated the case against. He is not at all blind to what it means to Americans, but he stands upon the ground that "non-productive employment of able-bodied persons useful in the national defence cannot be justified" and that therefore, if necessary we are "called upon in the public interest to sacrifice a favorite form of amusement." There is only one national game for Americans today, and it is played upon the battlefields of France.

He squinted in his old shotgun
  To see if it was loaded.
      (It was).

A man in Macon stopped to watch
  A patent cigar-clipper;
He wondered if his finger was
  Not quicker than the nipper.
      (It wasn't.)

A Maine man read that human eyes
  Of hypnotism were full;
He went to see if it would work
  Upon an angry bull.
      (It wouldn't).

Outside the Limit.

The Host—I suppose cigars'll be one of the things to come under the luxury tax.

Candid Guest—You'll have no need to worry, old chap, if you keep to this brand!

OTHER VIEWS

SEND HIM A PAPER.

Said Private Jimmie Barkis as he chatted to his mates,
"I wonder what they're doin' in the old United States;
Is Ty Cobb hittin' doubles in the way
  he used to do?
Is Speaker peggin' runners with that same old deadly throw?
I wish I had a paper from the home town, old or new,
An' could read about the people an'
  the places that I know.

"I can't get interested in the Daily
  Mail or Times,
I want the home town paper with its latest local crimes.
I'm wondering who has married since the day I marched away,
Who's been buried since I left there,
  Oh, it seems so long ago!
For a copy of the paper I would give up six months' pay,
There's so much I'd like to read of an'
  so much I want to know."

Said Private Jimmie Barkis, "It's a funny thing to me,
But they seem to think a paper we don't ever want to see.
They write us cheerful letters an' they send us things to wear,
They send us good tobacco, and we're mighty grateful, too,
But they plumb forget a paper from the old town over there
Is a thing we'd never part with till we'd read it through an' through."

In and About The City

NEW POSTAL CLERK

Mr. Floyd Maidens of this city, has been appointed a clerk in the Belleville Post Office in place of Bomb. Phillips, who resigned.

SEWER CLOGGED

The sewer on Hillcrest Ave., near Victoria Ave., is clogged and has overflowed on the road. Residents affected will appreciate prompt action by the Public Works Department.

FACE CUT OPEN

Mr. Ed. Shannon an electrician of Campbellford, met with a painful accident on Wednesday, when he was struck in the face by the blade of an electric fan. Fourteen stitches were required to close up the wound.

LOST A FOOT

Leo Walker, the youngest son of Joseph Walker, 482 Cambridge street, Peterboro', had his left foot crushed by the wheels of a freight train on the G. T. R. track near the corner of Park and McDonnel streets, Wednesday evening. When the lad was removed to St Joseph's Hospital the foot was amputated at the ankle. Young Walker met with the accident when he lost his hold in attempting to board a moving freight train coming into the city.

DROWNED AT PRESQU'ILE

Sometime during Tuesday night, Mr. Percy Hewitt, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hewitt, Presqu'ile Point, was drowned in the bay near his home, a mile or two up the bay, in his boat. Wednesday morning the boat was found, upturned, and after a brief search his body was recovered. The weather having been very squally that night, it is thought that maybe the unfortunate young man had been upset during one of the squalls.

CASE DISPOSED OF

Edward Snider was this morning by Magistrate Masosn discharged on a charge that he did obtain a horse and outfit from Mr. Frank Cooney by misrepresentation. The damage done to Mr. Cooney's buggy was compensated and all costs in the case were paid. By consent of the Crown the case was allowed to be settled in this manner. Mr. Carnew for Crown and Col. Ponton, K.C., for the accused.

NEW CUSTOMS OFFICIAL

Bombadier Ernie L. Phillips, a well known Bellevillian and returned soldier, has been appointed collector of customs in Belleville, in place of the late Mr. William Williamson. The appointment is not only a popular one but is deserving. Bomb. Phillips was a member of the 34th Battery of this city when the war broke out, and went overseas with the 2nd Battalion, 1st Brigade, C.F.A., and was on active service for some time. He was severely wounded and his wounds were of such a nature that his life was despaired of. He was invalided him, after being in a hospital for months. Previous to his present position Bomb. Phillips was for some time a clerk in the local Post Office. He entered upon his new duties yesterday.

SEES HIMSELF IN MOVIES

Corporal Harold Mathison of Havelock, who is in Toronto undergoing treatment for injuries received at the front, had a unique experience in the Queen City when he saw in a shop window a photograph of himself being carried on a stretcher down the Arras road from Vimy Ridge by four German prisoners. He easily recognized his features in those of the wounded man on the stretcher. Corporal Mathison lost no time in purchasing the photograph and has sent it to friends in Belleville where he is very well known. At Vimy Ridge Corp. Mathison suffered four bad fractures and fourteen shrapnel wounds. He was carried down the Arras road by four Hun prisoners, one of whom threw his coat over the wounded man. Corp. Mathison, while he knew there were motion picture machines in operation right at Vimy Ridge and many places along the road, did not know he was being photographed, so that it was a unique sensation he experienced when he saw the picture in a Toronto shop window.

BODY ARRIVED HERE

Last evening the body of Mrs. Robert Elliott, who died at Venice, California, arrived in this city, and this afternoon the funeral took place, services being conducted at St. Andrew's church by the pastor, Rev. A. S. Kerr.

STRIKE DECLARED OFF

A strike occurred in this city this morning, but only two persons were directly interested. The two men were drivers for the Canadian Express Company, who desired an advance of wages. The matter was amicably arranged and the strike was declared off.

CHARGE NOT PROVEN

A case of alleged insulting language was this morning investigated by the Police Magistrate, with the result that the charge was dismissed without costs. Mr. Carnew for Crown, and Col. Ponton, K.C., for the accused.

ALLEGED DESERTER

Edward Snider, a young man, was this morning in the police court discharged of an offence charged against him, but his liberty was exceedingly brief as he was immediately apprehended on a charge of being a deserted. Snider denied the allegation, stating that he was unfit for the army. The proper military authorities will be consulted in the matter.

The Bilious Habit

Some people have bilious spells about ever so often until they get to be a habit.

The liver is at fault. Get the liver right by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and the bile will not collect in the blood until it poisons you.

There is no one organ in the human body which has so great a control of health as the liver. Hence the far-reaching effect of this treatment.

ALBERT COLLEGE NOTES

The results of the Departmental examinations just received so far have been most satisfactory, 85% passed Lower School, and 75% Upper School.

One of the old A. C. students, Capt. Stanley Everson, has been sent by the Imperial Air Board to Washington, to report to the British War Office as to the adaptibility concerning new bombing planes at the front, which are being made in America. Well done, Stanley

The Board has been fortunate in securing for the Vocal Department, Mr S. Anglin, B.A., of Brandon. He comes with the highest recommendations. The outlook for a good attendance for the opening of the fall term is brightening day by day.

Obsequies

AMOS KEHOE

The body of Mr. Amos Kehoe who died in Toronto arrived here last night and was taken to Tickell & Sons Undertaking Establishment from whence the funeral took place this morning. Services at St. Michael's Church were conducted by Rev. Father Killeen and Rev. Father McNeill officiated at the interment at S. James Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. P. Wims, H. Walsh, T. Hogan, H. and J. Geary and Ald. Donohue.

In Memorim

MASON—In loving memory of George W. Mason, killed in G. T. R. yards, Belleville, Aug. 2nd, 1916. Gone before, but not forgotten by his wife and four children.

Speeding Up Hun Retreat

With the French Army in France, Aug. 2.—With the fall of darkness last night fighting continued between the Allies and the Germans on the western side of the Soissons-Rheims salient. Allied observers reported that bodies of Germans were fleeing precipitately northward along the road leading from Launoy, which lies about midway between Soissons and Fere-en-Tardenois.

POPULAR FILM STAR DIVORCED BY WIFE

Francis X. Bushman motion picture star, is ordered to pay $40,000 alimony under a divorce decree granted in Baltimore by Judge Allen McLane in the action instituted by Mrs. Bushman.

The decree gives Mrs. Bushman the custody of their five children, an allowance of $4,000 a year for them until they marry, become of age or leave her $3,000 attorneys' fees and court costs and Bushman is required to pay for the education and medical care of the children.

Judge McLane ordered $10,000 of the alimony paid immediately, $10,000 within eight months, $10,000 within fourteen months, and the remainder within twenty months. Interest at the rate of 5 per cent. on the 40,000 is to be paid monthly.

The handing down of the decree followed the filing of two actions by Mrs. Bushman one asking for a partial separtion and the last for an absolute divorce. She charged cruelty and neglect told of being separated many months from her husband, and declared that on a certain day her husband registered at a New York road house with a woman other than herself as Mr. and Mrs. Bushman.

Bushman is allowed to select the schools to which the children shall be sent provided they are not remote from the home of their mother. As each child marries comes of age, or leaves its mother, its share of the $4,000 a year shall be reduced to $700 When this applies to all children the sum for their maintenance ceases.

LAW GIVES 498 SOLDIERS.

Toronto, Aug. 2.—To the war from the Law Society of Upper Canada, the governing body of the Ontario legal profession have gone 233 students and 265 barristers and solicitors, an impressive total of 498. On the students 31 have been killed, and three others have died in military service. Nine have won the Military Cross, one has been mentioned in despatches, and one is in the class of the "Italian militaire."

Of the qualified lawyers, 21 have been killed in action, and six have died in military service. The awards comprise: M.C., 5; D.S.O., 8; Croix de Guerre, 2; Chevalier of the Order of Leopold, 1; Companion of the Bath, 1; mentioned in despatches, 5; Order of St. Stanislaus, 1.

Stone Now Visible Predicts Hun Future

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 2—The famous "Hunger stone" in the River Elbe near Tetschen which, according to popular belief in Germany predicts a famine when seen, is now visible for the first time since the beginning of the war.

The stone lies in the bed of the river and has never been visizble save at exceptionally low tide. On the stone is chiselled in old German: "When ye see me, ye shall weep."

When the opposing attorney offers to compromise it may not always mean that you have a good cause.

Part of the art of doing things is to attempt but little at a time.

GLADIATORS IN WARTIME.

A Contrast That Must Interest People of Canada.

Wellington's dictum that the Battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton is an epigramatic way of expressing the general knowledge that a training in athletic sports is calculated to fit a man for the dangers and hardships of war. British casualty lists are gemmed and studded with the names of fallen officers who in time of peace distinguished themselves in the football field, the cricket crease, on the river and at polo, and in a dozen other outdoor sports. It may be that the deep-chested athlete has shown no greater bravery than the puny clerk, but he has at any rate lived up to the best traditions of British sportsmanship and manhood and has played the great game as gallantly and as modestly as he played his boyish games before the war. What is true of British sportsmen and athletes has been equally true of Canadian and Australian athletes. Here in Canada the great national game, lacrosse, has almost ceased to exist on account of the war. The casualty lists have contained the names of many well known lacrosse players, both amateurs and professionals, and the figures presented at lacrosse conventions indicate that the majority of the active players have long since been in khaki. A great many American athletes from all branches of amateur sport have already gone to France, and it is because of the striking contrast to what English-speaking athletes in general have done that attention is directed to the part played by professional baseball players in the United States.

Those of them who have been conscripted have no option but to go, but those who fear they may yet have to enlist are taking precautions that do more credit to their ingenuity than to their patriotism. Many of them have found a haven in shipbuilding. If engaged as shipbuilders they will be exempt from the next draft, or so, at any rate, they believe, and they are as busy as so many Noahs in seeking employment as shipbuilders. The job does not pay as well as baseball, but better than soldiering, and is much safer. When the war is over these heroes of the diamond expect to return to the ball parks with whole hides and once more prance and pose before the American public. In this they probably miscalculate. They will find that there is no longer a desire on the part of the American people to contribute to the support of athletes who in time of peace were considered the very gladiators of the country, but who, when war broke out, showed nothing but a determination not to expose themselves to danger.

Got His Number.

A Kingston masher forced a flirtation on the street recently, but was assured by the fair one that she "really had to go now — you can phone me at 464." That was as far as he got, except to learn that her name was Susie. He telephoned according to suggestion and found he had police headquarters.

Efficiency.

First suburbanite—Did you plant a garden this year?

Second suburbanite — No. After last year's thrift garden experience I concluded to feed my neighbor's chickens in the regular way instead of planting the seed.

Seventh Son Goes to Front.

Mrs. John Jowsey, of Aylmer, has just sent her seventh son to the front. Six of her boys enlisted early in the war. One has been killed in action and two others are wounded.

Survives Shock of 2,400 Volts.

William J. Hilman, a Peterborough electrician, recently survived a shock of 2,400 volts and is to-day none the worse for an adventure which would commonly be regarded as necessarily fatal.

Sporting Notes

VIMY'S SENT OVER RIDGE

At the Agricultural Park last evening a twilight game of baseball was played between the Park Nine and Vimy city league teams. The result was a decided win for the Park Nine team, the score being so much onesided that all interest in the game was lost. The Vimy term was materially weakened owing to the fact that four of the best players, namely Smith, pitcher, Hooey, catcher, Weir, short stop and Burgess, 3rd baseman, did not put in an appearance. Their places were filled by outsiders, some of whom had not played ball in years. The Park Nine in the first inning secured three runs, and in the second inning won the game, when no less than seven of the players crossed the plate. Seven innings were played and the score was 22 to 3 in favor of the Park Nine. Good ball was played by every member of the winning team. Mr. Ellis of the Y.M.C.A. was umpire, and Mr E Lang, base umpire A goodly number of spectators were present The line up was as follows:

Park Nine—Coon 2nd b., Green p., Casey s.s., Gerow 1st b., Ross c., Oliphant c.f., Cummins, l.f., Cornell 3rd b., Canning r.f.

Vimy—Moore s.s., Morden c., Duesberry 2nd b., Smith p., Arnott 1st b., Oarr 3rd b., Goyer, c.f., Taylor r.f., Brouse l.f.

Score by innings:

Park Nine 3 7 0 3 2 4 3—22.

Vimy—1 0 0 0 0 0 2—3.

Wynne Feels Fine In Mornings Now

Eats More At One Meal Now Than He Formerly Ate In Three Days

"Although I was always prejudiced against medicines of all kinds, I will make affidavit at any time that Tanlac has entirely relieve my stomach trouble and made a new man of me," said George W. Wynne, of 102 Marguerетta street, Toronto, the other day. Mr. Wynne is an old army man, having served with the British forces in India, Egypt, Africa and other foreign countries, and has lived in Toronto for the past ten years.

"Up to two years ago," he continued, "I had always enjoyed good health, then my stomach went back on me and I had trouble ever since till I began taking Tanlac. I lost my appetite and got so that I was actually afraid to eat, for I knew it meant hours of misery afterwards. Although I confined myself to the lightest diet and would take only a bite or two at the table, the little I did manage to force down would ferment and fill me up with gas till I felt as tight as a drum and could hardly get my breath. My food would feel like a lump of lead in me, and I would suffer agonies all through my stomach and side. Gas would press up around my heart and rise up in my chest till I felt like I would choke. I was so weak and rundown that it was all I could do to drag myself off to my work, and many a time after starting off I felt like turning round and going back home. I was in this awful condition for two long years suffering untold misery all the time. I wouldn't take anything, for I had no faith in medicine, thinking that time would do away with my troubles, but I got steadily worse instead.

"I had been reading so much about Tanlac that I decided at last to lay aside my prejudices and try a bottle or two. Well, sir, before I had finished my first bottle I felt so much better that I kept on with it and have been feeling fine ever since. My appetite is so great that I actually eat more at one meal now than I used to eat in three whole days. I can eat anything I want, too, and nothing hurts me at all. I haven't been troubled with gas or bloating since I started on Tanlac and never feel a bit of pain in my stomach or side like I did before. I get up in the mornings feeling fine and well and go to work with the life and energy of a man half my age. I will gladly tell anybody how much Tanlac has benefited me and my wife will substantiate every word I have said."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

Scheme For Threshers.

With the completion of seeding the Ontario Department of Agriculture is now considering ways and means of supplying labor for the threshing of the crops. In former years threshing gangs have been few, but Dr. Riddell, superintendent of the Trades and Labor Branch of the Government, hopes to have 5,000 men available for this work. A pamphlet will be sent out to all farmers' clubs and threshers in the province, containing organization suggestions, which are in effect that eight-men gangs be formed. In the past farmers had to assist one another at threshing, but under the new scheme the department asks that 25 farmers sign an agreement to have one thresher do their work this season. With this guarantee the thresher can forward his application to the Trades and Labor Branch for the number of men he requires.

Honored Their Pastor.

Rev. A. W. McComb, for the past three years rector of St. Luke's Church on the Six Nations' reserve, near Brantford, was presented with a purse of gold, and Mrs. McComb with a traveling bag in appreciation by the Indians of their efforts on the reserve. They were also adopted into the Mohawk tribe with the usual Indian ceremony. Rev. Mr. McComb will proceed overseas to join the Imperial forces as chaplain.

Will Try Spanking.

Magistrate Watt, of Guelph, has revived in practice the old-fashioned spanking as a corrective of juvenile delinquency. In several cases recently he has ignored fine or imprisonment and ordered that the youthful offenders be spanked. Bert Andrews, of Drayton, who had informally borrowed an automobile, was the last subject for the official spanker.

Alsatians Thorn In German Side

Have Been Ordered to Rear Following Desertions and Mutinies

PARIS, Aug. 3.—Evidence has been found on prisoners shedding light on some recent mutinies in German regiments composed for the most part of men drafted from Alsace and Lorraine. An order from the Crown Prince's headquarters says: "In view of numerous desertions and uprisings among the Alsace and Lorraine soldiers, men from these provinces are forbidden under any circumstances to be employed in front lines. They are to be sent to the rear to work in the fields." The order also adds that Alsatians must be weeded out of as many regiments as possible. Rigorous surveillance of each individual is demanded.

Papers signed by Gen. von Rath have now been found requesting all battalion commanders of the army to furnish a report on the general attitude and behavior of Alsatian troops and to recommend measures of special treatment for these soldiers.

A memorandum sent out by Gen. Word speaks of a mutiny of Alsatians at the Haverloo depot, wherein 10,000 soldiers participated. It reveals that many refused to fight when transferred from the east to the west front many escaping to Holland. Scores were punished for singing French songs and conversing in French.

The French press uses the occasion of the revelations to point out the absurdity of Germany's pretensions to Alsace on the basis of nationality for if the Alsatians really are German what need is there for this "special treatment"?

Canada Now Holds Wood Ship Record

Quebec Plant Builds One in Forty-Eight Days

OTTAWA, Aug. 3.—Canada now hold the record for speed in wooden shipbuilding on the American continent. The feat was accomplished by the Quinland and Robertson Shipbuilding Co. of Quebec, in the construction of the "War Seneca," a wooden steamer.

This cessel was launched on June 13th and a dock stem trial was made yesterday—just forty-eight days later—by turning over the main engine and auxiliaries under steam. This is six days better than the previous best made in the United States, which is said to have been fifty-four days. This boat was built for the Imperial Munitions Board.

Medical Inspection Will Be Compulsory

Also Dental Examination, Says Hon. Dr. Cody, Speaking Of Public Schools

GUELPH, Aug. 3.—In an address to a meeting of Public school inspectors and teachers for rural districts, held at the O. A. C., Hon. Dr. Cody, Minister of Education, said:

"There is a real need, throughout our rural schools particularly, for medical and dental examination.

"I don't think it will ever do to let this rest as merely an optional matter.

"We are not conserving our children if we do not also try to conserve them in body.

"I feel that this matter must be taken up and dealt with right speedily.

"The Women's Institutes are doing excellent work in some parts of the Province in carrying out medical inspection, but at the best, it is only spasmodic.

"The system when introduced in this Province must be compulsory and universal.

"Speaking broadly, the problems of the city and country are much the same.

"Everyone feels that there must be no antagonism between the city and country people.

"Don't look upon your own rural problem in any degree of isolation from problems that confront the whole country.

"Forty-five per cent. of the school children of the Province are enrolled in rural schools.

"I am sure that the teachers who are being trained here will have a tremendous direct and indirect influence upon the home lives of the constituencies of our schools."

BOY KILLED INSTANTLY

OGDENSBURG, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Michael Jacobs, 5, an Indian boy from the St. Jacobs Reservation, who had been at the United Helpers Home here since infancy was instantly killed Wednesday afternoon on the lawn of the institution when he grasped a live wire that was dangling in the grass.

A recent storm had broken down an abandoned telephone wire which had come in contact with an electric light wire carrying 2,300 volts.

Two fingers were burned off the child's right hand

The little orphan was a particular favorite of the matron and of the many visitors to the home.

Franco-British in Hot Pursuit of Rapidly Retreating Huns

Americans Also Move Forward— Gains are Made Almost Without Resistance Huns May Retreat North of Nesles—Allies Everywhere Have Upperhand— Marne Salient is Untenable for Germans

With the French Armies in the Field, Aug. 2.—(2.25 p.m.)—The battle within the Marne pocket, which began increasing in violence again yesterday morning, is still raging as this is cabled.

Loss of the important heights north of Grand Rozoy is causing the enemy to fall back, with the French and British in hot pursuit.

Almost Without Resistance

With the American Army on the Aisne-Marne front, Aug. 2.—(Noon)—The whole American line moved forward today while the armies along the flank from Soissons to Rheims pressed hard against the sides of the German salient. Their gains were made almost without resistance.

Hammered as they have been for days, the Germans withdrew during the night, so that when the Americans who were supported on their right and left by the French, started early this morning they did not encounter the usual machine gun fire.

In open order the men plowed their way through the heavy, rain-soaked fields for almost a mile.

The indications are that the Germans will not make a stand until they reach the watershed north of Nesles Forest.

The battle on the front north of the Marne resolved itself during the night and this morning into almost a general retirement of the enemy north of the Ourcq, with the allies pursuing the Germans with the greatest zeal and success.

AFTER FOUR YEARS

On July 29th, 1914, Austria and Germany rejected the proposal of Sir Edward Grey that an international conference be called in order to avert a general European war on the same day Germany declared war on Serbia.

On August 1st Germany declared war on Russia, on August 2 Germany declared war on France without a formal declaration, on August 3rd the King of the Belgians appealed to Great Britain for support against the German violation of Belgium neutrality, and on August 4th Germany declared war on France, Britain and Belgium. The same day Britain declared war on Germany.

These are the historic events the anniversaries of which culminate tomorrow with the anniversary of the entrance of the British Empire into the war. The intervening four years have been crowded with events involving the destiny of nations. And the end is not yet. But the beginning of the end is here.

Allies Sweep Forward Victoriously Enemy In Precipitate Retreat

Pocket In Marne Salient Practically Closed

GERMANS ALMOST IN GENERAL RETIREMENT BEFORE THE ALLIES — FRENCH, BRITISH AND AMERICAN FORCES HAVE ADVANCED LINE CONSIDERABLY — IMPORTANT TOWNS AND WOODS TAKEN — VILLE-EN-TARDENOIS SURROUNDED — BIG RETREAT LIKELY — GERMANS BURNING VILLAGES AND WAR MATERIAL AS THEY HASTILY RETIRE — BATTLEFIELD DOTTED WITH CONFLAGRATIONS — ALLIES CAPTURE ALL COMMANDING POSITIONS.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

On the French Front in France, Aug. 3.—The battle on the front north of the Marne resolved itself during Thursday night and Friday morning into almost a general retirement of the enemy north of the Ourcq, with the Allies pursuing the Germans with the greatest zeal and success.

The town of Hartennes-et-Taux was occupied by the Allies, who also seized the wood lying to the south of this most important place. The French and British in this sector took Contremain and then crossed the Chateau-Thierry-Soissons road.

The Germans are burning villages as they retire and destroying everything they come across. The entire battlefield is dotted with conflagrations, some of them of large proportions.

Along the centre of the front as well as on the westerly side the German resistance seemed greatly diminished. The Allies pressed through a series of thickets to the north of the road leading from Goussancourt to Coulonges and reached the southern part of Vezilly wood.

Further east on the line the Allies are within 500 yards of Villers-Agron and along the line towards Rheims they captured a wood situated 1,500 yards east of Romigny.

Allied patrols yesterday attained a positon three-fifths of a mile north of Ville-en-Tardenois, and have occupied a height 1,500 yards north of Romigny.

RETREAT BECOMES A ROUT.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The German retreat is general on all three faces of the salient conquered by the Germans in May, and the Allies are pressing close on the heels of the retreating enemy, says Reuter's correspondent at front headquarters, telegraphing at eleven o'clock Friday night.

HUNS HAVE EVACUATED VESLE RIVER LINE.

PARIS, Aug. 3.—Throughout the night the Allies continued to advance toward the Vesle River, the French War Office announced today. East of Soissons the French have reached the Aisne River between Soissons and Venizel. The crossing of the Aisne, east of Soissons, virtually compels, if it has not been brought about before, the evacuation of the Vesle River line. It is a dangerous menace to the line of the Aisne, as the direction in which the French crossed is pointed directly toward important heights at the western end of Chemin-des-Dames, which are less than five miles north of Venizel.

MANY PRISONERS TAKEN.

PARIS, Aug. 3.—Many prisoners were taken by the French at Soissons, which was occupied at five o'clock Friday evening, one hour after the Germans had been driven from the suburbs. Those of the garrison not captured escaped by fleeing northward.

FRENCH VIGOROUSLY CHASING THE HUNS.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—On the main battle front in the Soissons region the French, after completing the occupation of Soissons, have occupied the south bank of the Aisne between Pommieres and Venizel, a distance of approximately five and one-half miles, advices received here today show.

RETIRING EVERYWHERE

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The Germans are executing a local retirement to the east bank of the Ancre in the region of Albert on a front of three or four miles, according to news received in London today.

24 Tons of Bombs Dropped on Huns

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Special

LONDON, Aug. 3.—British aviators on Thursday destroyed eleven German machines in aerial fighting and drove down three others says an official statement on aerial operations issued last night. Twenty-four tons of bombs were dropped on military targets. In a raid on an airdrome, six hangers and sixteen machines were set on fire.

O Canada Replaces God Save the King

TORONTO, Aug. 3—The Great War Veterans' Association of Canada has decided to replace the British National Anthem "God Save the King," with "O Canada" at the close of branch meetings.

It was moved by an English clergyman, the Rev. J. C. Davidson now an adopted son of Canada, and carried at the convention.

Except for some doubt expressed also branches without a piano being able to navigate through the subtle modulations of " Canada" no opposition was raised the mover emphasizing that it was for Canada the G. W. V. A. were anxious about.

"It seems to me a very serious omission not to sing " Canada" at our branch meetings" he said. "We are Britain's and British subjects but we are all Canadians, and are here to further the interest of our own country.

"In this period of reconstruction it is expedient that Canada be first and foremost, and our national anthem brings our country more before us."

Lovers Shot In Hotel Parlor

Double Tragedy at Mining Town Hotel— Murder and Suicide Likely

TIMMINS, Ont., Aug. 2.—Guests at the Hotel Goldfields last night about eight o'clock, investigating the cause of two revolver shots one right after the other, found the bodies of a man and a young woman on the settee in the hotel parlor. Both were shot through the head and were so covered with blood as to be amost unrecognizable.

Chief Wilson and Drs. McInnis and MasLaren were summoned, and it was found that the man was beyond hope of recovery. Though the doctors worked for two hours in earnest desire to save the girl, she too died about ten o'clock.

Papers on the dead man bore the name Orchie Delle Donne. He was an Italian employed in the T. and N. O. section at Connaught, while the girl was identified as Irene Leverton, clerk at the registered letter wicket of the post office. In the parlor on a small table were two letters addressed in the girl's handwriting. One of these was marked G. Delle Donne, Seskinika, the man's father.

The other letter had first been addressed to "Whom it may concern," but this was later struck out and the girl's father's name substituted. The revolver found in the room was a new one, and is thought to have been secured after the young man came to town to-day.

The girl's father was formerly the owner of a sawmill at Barba Bay, and when the family lived there it is said that the young couple kept company.

So far as man be surmised, the man first shot her and then turned the revolver on himself. When found they were both unconscious. The man came here and registered at the hotel about six o'clock. Shortly after the girl came to the hotel and went to the upstairs parlor. Nothing further is known regarding the cause of the double tragedy. The girl was held in the highest esteem by all who knew her.

While the tragedy is a mystery, the opening of the letters at the inquest tomorrow called by the coroner, Dr. McInnis, may throw some light upon it.

Masons Organize to Help Soldiers

Plan to Assist Disabled Men to Be Self Supporting

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 3.—Subject to the approval of the War Department and the sanction of the higher Masonic bodies of the country the entire resources of the Masonic bodies throughout the world will be used to assist soldiers and sailors disabled on the battlefields of Europe, under a movement launched her last night at a meeting of representatives of every branch of Masonry. The War League for Masonic Service was tentatively formed.

The efforts of the fraternity would be to assist disabled men in making them self-sustaining. Tentative plans call for the use of Masonic employment under research bureaus, hospitals and buildings.

Details will be communicated immediately to branches throughout the United States and Canada, and through their heads to affiliated bodies in Europe.

A chain of leagues would be formed to which any enlisted man with honorable discharge can apply for employment commensurate with his qualifications.

No fees will be charged, the funds to come from Masons, the Government or private subscription.

Ross Rifle Plant Leased at $300,000

OTTAWA, Aug. 3—The Government has leased the expropriated plant of the Ross Rifle Company at Quebec to the North American Arms Company, of which T. A. Russell of Toronto is President, at an annual rental of $300,000 per year. The company has secured from the United States Government a large order for the manufacture of army pistols and will employ about 2,000 hands.

Representations were made some months ago to the United States authorities that the Ross rifle plant at Quebec, one of the best equipped on the continent, was lying idle and should be put to war use. The Washington authorities agreed that it was bad business not to use it during war time, and the pistol order was offered to Canada and turned over to Mr. Russell's company.

Government Has Made Two Millions

The Ross rifle plant, which at the time of expropriation a year ago last March, had a capacity of at least one thousand rifles per day and employed some 4,000 skilled hands, has been left more or less idle ever since. The Government, however, has been getting considerable money out of its expropriation, and considerable of the machinery has been sold.

Some tens of thousands of rifles in process of manufacture at the time of expropriation have also been assembled and disposed of for military purposes. Altogether it is estimated that the Government has made some two million dollars out of the plant, and now there is the $300,000 per year rental coming in.

Police Combing For Defaulters

Heavily Armed They Descend on Districts of St. Henri and Cote St. Paul

MONTREAL, Aug. 3.—Three hundred military police, heavily armed, marched into Cote St. Paul and St. Henri districts of Montreal this morning and proceeded to round up the available deserters under the Military Service Act. The invasion followed the mauling yesterday of a small detachment of Military Police at the hands of upards of 100 frequenters of the district. A diminutive Corporal had asked a burly civilian for his papers. The latter deplied in French, demanding that he be accosted in his own language. The Corporal knew no French and was proceeding to take the civilian under arrest, when the latter knocked him to the ground. This was the signal for a general uprising against the military men, and only the timely arrival of the civil police averted a serious encounter. To-day the Military Police, heavily reinforced and armed for all eventualities, are systematically combing the district for defaulters under the act.

NOW READY FOR HAY "DRIVE"

Montreal, Aug. 3.—Hungry horses will suffer next winter, according to the Canadian Railway War Board, unless Americans and Canadians get their supply of hay in within the next few weeks. The Canadian Railway War Board is preparing a "hay drive" to clear the tracks for the grain movement and other winter traffic. As part of this policy forty-five thousand cars of pulpwood for the United States, valued at approximately $4,000,000, have just been cleared out of Canada so that the main part of that movement, thanks to that phase of the board's drive, has been shoved out of the way of the wheat, a record never before accomplished. Now it is the turn of the hay.

"We are watching the commodities as they become ready for shipment," said General Secretary Neil, "and we are now concentrating on the hundreds of thousands of tons of hay which are ready for shipment, but not moving. We have any number of empty Americans ready to take the hay to the United States. We have other cars for the purely Canadian movement. The American cars must soon return.

It is unofficially understood that means may be devised by the Government to penalize speculators who may be holding the hay now in the hope of getting higher prices, but at the expense of throwing their burden on the railways when they are most engaged on the more essential movements in the winter months.

Allies Are Superior to Enemy in Gas Warfare

BY W. A. WILLISON.

While developments are imminent on the Western front, there is little to break the lull in operations. In the process of straightening out their line and improving their tactical position the Allies have made further appreciable gains in the Soissons-Rheims sector. Despite stubborn resistance, Franco-American troops have advanced on the Marne front from Seringes to Cierges and Americans are within half a mile of Chamery. The advance was remarkable for the massed employment of heavy artillery in the destruction of the extensive barbed wire entanglements which the Germans, lacking the time for the construction of trench systems, has been compelled to employ to such a degree to protect their retirement.

The feature of the news is the announcement of the employment of a new German gas. Every fall, Wilhelmstrasse has filled neutral countries with reports of some deadly poison which would wipe out the Allied forces. The truth is that succeeding springs have shown the Entente to be more than a match for the enemy in the employment of such deadly weapons as those which Germany deliberately introduced into modern warfare at the second battle of Ypres.

This year, the spring activities of the Canadians on the Lens front were remarkable for the tremendous gas bombardments of the enemy In one night alone, the greatest gas attack in the world's history, the Canadians projected 80 tons of liquid gas against hostile lines in and northeast of Lens. The deadly effects of that bombardment were amply proved by the subsequent evidence of prisoners.

Lacking rubber and other commodities, Germany is unable to take such protective measures as the Allies. Enemy masks are deficient and their gases and gas appliances are less effective than our own. The announcement of a new gas is not viewed with great alarm. The Allies have resources of their own and will not be caught napping.

DOUG FAIRBANKS
THE REPORTOR

At Griffin's Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday Anna Q. Nilson will be seen in a new story dealing with a problem that has seldom if ever before been produced in picture form; the name of the picture is Her Surrender and the author's claim is that by transfusing blood from one person to the other. In this picture Miss Nilson plays the part of a girl suddenly taken ill and blood transfusion is the only method suggested as possible to save her life, a convict volunteers to the operation—how the changing of this convict's blood into the veins of this young girl also changes the girl's love for another man to the convict is told in this picture.

On the same program Doug Fairbanks is here once more this time in a new role that of a newspaper reporter who has been given an assignment to interview a crabbed old millionaire who has locked himself up so that no one can interview him. Doug finds the way out and does some real sensational stuff in order to make a scoop for his paper. He has to do some fence jumping and other athletic stunts of which he is so capable but he finally lands in the old fellow's presence which is only part of the battle won. How he lands the story and also the good will of his editor, only to get in wrong again by doing what all young reporters do and that is to follow a false clue in a murder case which gets him in very bad for a time. His ready smile and keen wit finally lands him right again and also lands him a girl too and fame and fortune in the giving a good many sidelights on the work of reporter of a newspaper and the many trials and troubles that he gets into before final victory.

A new chapter of the very interesting serial story "The Eagle's Eye" and other good photoplays will complete a fine program of pictures.

SNATCHES $500,000,000 FROM HUNS

New York, Aug. 3.—The money and property which, formerly German owned, has been taken over by A. Mitchell Palmer, Enemy Property Custodian, has passed the $500,000,000 mark, it was announced here yesterday. A statement authorized by Mr. Palmer, covering his work up to the close of July, asserts that he is the largest individual buyer of Liberty bonds, as all cash confiscated is turned into Liberty Bonds.

The passing of the new draft treaty between Canada and the United States was endorsed.

Grape Growing Not Worth Labor

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—Grape growers in the Niagara district, as well as Essex and Pelee Island are much perturbed over the prohibition, effective at the end of this year, of the manufacture of native wines. With indications pointing to a bountiful crop they are confronted with the disquieting knowledge that their market will be so restricted as to be practically not worth cultivating. Outside of the manufacture of wine there are comparatively few grapes used, so that the grower is confronted with an enormous loss and has no alternative but to allow the crop to rot on the vines after picking the small quantity necessary to supply the limited domestic demand. It is possible, however, that the Dominion department of agriculture will inaugurate a campaign of advertising, pointing out the merits of grapes, in the same manner as people were urged to use apples a couple of years ago.

For years wine manufacturers have taken the bulk of the Ontario grape crop and what was left was sold in the ordinary way on the market. Of late they have also been making grape juice, but the expensive process it has to go through and the very limited demand for it in Canada would preclude them from going into its manufacture exclusively, now that wine making will be prohibited.

In the Niagara district one grape grower has a farm of 130 acres, one hundred of which is devoted to grapes. He values his property at $100,000, but with his market for grapes gone, his highly cultivated vineyard becomes ordinary farm land worth about $10,000. No matter what he grows he cannot commence to earn anything like a fair return on the money he has invested. This is a typical case. There are plenty of others all through the fruit district. It is also pointed out if he wishes to continue in his present line of activity by growing other kinds of fruit, for which there is more demand, it would be several years before his trees would bear, and meanwhile he has to live.

Keeley Mine Soldfor Hundred Thousand

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—By the payment of $100,000, the company known as the Associated Gold Fields of West Australia, has secured possession of the Keeley mine, investment in which property was chiefly responsible for bringing about the collpase of the Farmers' Bank in December, 1910. When the bank assets were being disposed of by G. T. Clarkeson, the liquidator, only a nominal sum was bid for the Keeley mine, and it was held by the liquidator until three years ago when an option was given to the company which has now exercised its right of the purchase.

The $100,000 obtained will not benefit the unfortunate depositors as the bank's failure was so disastrous that the assets were not sufficient to meet even the outstanding circulation, and the sum newly secured will merely recoup the other banks which stood surety for the payment of the notes.

A recent Cobalt despatch said that unofficial estimates placed the value of ore in sight at the Keeley mine at upwards of $250,000, the ore being for the most part low-grade.

RIFLE SHOOTING.

A competition was held by the members of the Civilian Rifle Club on Wednesday afternoon at the butts when some very high scoring took place, especially by the junior members of the club. The conditions were: 10 shots at 500 yards, 2 sighting shots, best two scores out of three shoots to count prize—a gold medal, handicap conditions, full scores:

Govt. Supporters Victims of Arson

Residents of Scotland, Ontario. Appeal to the Provincial Police for Protection

BRANTFORD, Ont., Aug. 3—Following an appeal to the Provincial Police for police protection in the neighborhood of Scotland, a village near here, the County Crown Attorney, A. J. Wilkes, has been notified and may take steps to have that district policed at the expense of the county.

The appeal was sent out by Union Government supporters, who because of their vote in the last election have been made victims of annoyance, indignities and even arson. Property has been damaged, paint applied and arson resorted to and the region of terror is continuing.

The local police have no jurisdiction and the county constabulary is nonexistent save where the county constable can make his fees.

In one case the husband works in the city, and the family there is living in fear.

No Jeremiahs Around Cobourg

COBOURG, Aug. 3.—There are no "Jeremiahs" at present among the farmers of this locality. Early in the spring there was considerable lamentation as to how the crop was to be got in, but most of the farmers managed it, notwithstanding the scarcity of labor, and now it looks as if they will be rewarded by a bumper harvest, the very best that there has been in years. Spring-sown grains, wheat, barley and oats, are in head, and in some places partly ripened. The heads appear to be well filled out. Oats are the best crop known in years, and field peas are splendid. It was considered that corn was only about half a crop, but it has improved very much the past two weeks. Potatoes and field roots are looking well. The haying is about over, and grain cutting will be under way next week.

Buddie Captures His Own Father

With the American Armies in France, Aug. 3.—A doughboy bringing in a squad of prisoners, was startled to find his own father among them.

The young American doubted the German's identity until enough confidential information was disclosed to convince him the man was his father, who had returned to German Poland several yearse before and had been forced into the army.

MURDER, THEN SUICIDE.

Greenfield, Mass., Aug. 3.—At the wheel of an automobile standing on the Connecticut River bridge near here yesterday the police found the body of Clifford G. Wright and Miss Hazel Tanner. Both had been shot through the right temple, and country authorities expressed the belief that Wright shot himself after killing the girl.

CUTTING COMMENCES AROUND LETHBRIDGE

Lethbridge, Aug. 3.—Cutting has started in some fields in this district. Yields in some districts are going to be surprisingly large, in spite of the extremely adverse conditions. Many fields northeast and northwest of the city will yield fifteen bushels and some twenty bushels.

FALL OF BAKU TO THE TURKS APPEARS TO BE IMMINENT

London, Aug. 3.—In the Caucasus there is great friction between the Germans and Turks. The Germans are trying to prevent the Turks from occupying Baku, on which a Turkish attack appears to be imminent. Baku is lightly garrisoned by Armenians and Bolsheviki and probably will fall.

Winnipeg and Ottawa G.W.V.A. Delegates Reach Compromise With Other Section

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—The Winnipeg and Ottawa delegates returned to the convention at 4.30 p.m. yesterday and were received with cheers by the other delegates.

The split between the Ottawa and Winnipeg delegates and the rest of the delegates to the Great War Veterans' convention has been healed.

After the report of the committee sent from the convention to meet the Ottawa and Winnipeg delegates had been read before the convention this afternoon, it was decided that the suggestions submitted by the Winnipeg and Ottawa delegates as a result of a compromise arrived at at conferences with comrades Creelman, Hendrie and Dyson, were acceptable to the convention.

PERCY HEWITT DROWNED

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—Percy Hewitt of New York, a Canadian, who was born and brought up at "The Log Cabin" on Presque'ile Bay, near Brighton, Ont., was drowned there Thursday night. Hewitt was a well-known athlete. He run in the colors of the Irish-American A. C. of New York, played hockey at St. Nicholas' Rink, and was a skating instructor there for years Ever since his removal to New York he had been visiting the old homestead each summer for a month's holidays, and it was while holidaying at Presqu'ile that he met his death. He leaves a widowed mother and two sisters.

LANSDOWNE AGAIN.

Toronto News

Lord Lansdowne has been accused of an exceptional tenderness towards the old Europe, old customs and old dynasties. He has been charged with fearfulness before the democratic spirit. Whether or not that be the secret of his pacifist writings is immaterial. His motive is not a base one, but it must be a supremely foolish one. No man, unless his brains be dulled by age or fear, can contemplate without the sharpest anxiety, a peace which would be based on a "general as-you-were." We may march along a long road to victory, but a halt this side of it would be the end of freedom for a hundred years.

Letters From Overseas

FROM P. G. PALMER

Somewhere in France,
July 8, 1918.

Dear Mother:—

I think it is about time I dropped you a line or two, or you will be thinking I have forgotten you and dear old Belleville. I have received your letters quite regular but the parcels do not seem to turn up very well. However I got one from you last night containing butter scones and maple syrup and we had a regular feast in our dugout. In your last couple of letters were some very nice snaps which I appreciated very much. Everyone looked fine and I only hope you are as well as the photo portrays.

I guess I will have admit that I have not been writing very regular of late owing to moving around so much, just like a bum on a way freight We have a very nice little dugout at present with nothing to bother our reveries but the birds or an occasional shell being sent over by Fritz to remind us that there is a war on. There are four of us sleeping here two from Calgary, one from Marlbank and myself, and we have a very good time taking everything into consideration.

house and sprinkling it with what is known as creature turkiah, a prevailing disease and several other things.

We have just finished cleaning

I started this letter yesterday so guess I will finish it to-day. Some boys came in yesterday about five o'clock and we were playing 500 and they said it was a nice day for that, it being Sunday. I for one knew it for the first time. We forget days, dates and everything here. Some of the fellows forget how old they are and don't know when asked. We will be all Robinson Crusoes if we stay out here much longer, minus Friday.

News is scarce so I will close with love to all. I remain,

Your ever affectionate son,
P. G. PALMER

Free Tea And Biscuits Served By Y.M.C.A

Mr. and Mrs. B. Britton, have received a letter from their soldier son Arthur C Britton in France in which he contributes the following to the Y. M. C. A. controversy under date of July 7.

"Dear Mother and Father:—

A few lines to let you know I am in the best of health and having a fairly good time of it here. We have had a beautiful summer so far and everything in the back country looks fine but it is rather desolate around here.

"There is really nothing to write about as the life is all the same, but I like to drop a few lines every week to let you know I am well. I was reading a big piece in the Toronto paper the other day about the Y. M. C. A. and it certainly rubbed them pretty hard, and said we had to pay five cents for a cup of tea out here.

"I have never yet paid anything for a cup of tea at any of their canteens. It is also said they were never any nearer the lines than seven or eight miles, but this will show you different. Easter Monday 1917 the morning we took Vimy Ridge there was a Y. M. C. A. canteen less than a half a mile from the support trenches and we had to pass it going from our Battery to our O. P. and they had cases of biscuits. We tried to buy some but the fellows knew us and made us go farther back to the one near the Battery as they were giving them to the infantry only. All men whether wounded or not that came from the trenches were given a package of biscuits and a mug of tea and they kept that up for three days also at Ypres they were giving tea away during the whole two months we were there and they were up in front of our guns and open day and night."

The fact that the writer never was a member of the Y. M. C. A. makes his letter all the stronger.

Wedding Bells

ROWLAND—ROSS

A very quiet weddidng took place at Knox Church, Tweed, on Monday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, when Olive, second daughter of Mr. D. R. Ross, was married to John A. Rowland of the 72nd Queen's Battery C. E. F., youngest son of Mrs. James Rowland of Newcastle. The church was very perttily decorated with sweet peas, flags and bunting, and the bride, who entered on the arm of her father, was attired in her travelling suit of Khaki Kool with hat to match, and wore a cersage boquet of roses and sweet peas. Lohengrin's wedding march was played by Miss J. Kennedy. After the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. W. P. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. Rowland motored to Woodstock and left on a train for the east.

Among the guests were Mrs. Fallis, Newcastle; Miss Margaret Waud, Montreal; Miss Marjorie Clark, Woodstock; Miss Gertrude Richardson, St. Marys; Capt. James G. Ross, Montreal; Major R. B. Ross, London; while the church was well filled with other friends—Tweed News.

Congressmen Visit Channel Fleet

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The members of the naval committee of the American House of Representatives returned to London, after experiencing the thrills of war at Dover yesterday in the course of their inspection of the naval defences. The committee will be received by King George at Buckingham Palace to-morrow.

The members of the committee, who are guests of the British nation, were warmly received at Dover by Admiral Sir Roger Keyes, commander of the Channel Fleet. They dined on board his flagship last night. During the afternoon the committee witnessed an interesting programme of naval activities, which included the work of speed boats in making smoke screens. They took a short trip in one of the new anti-submarine boats and saw several monitors which had just arrived from service on the Belgian coast.

The Americans were so elated by their experience that it was arranged to take members of the party for flights in airplanes at Hendon this afternoon. The Congressmen will be entertained at dinner at th eHouesuv entertained at dinner at the House of Commons tomorrow night.

FOOD BOARD FLASHES FOR FEMININE FOLK

Now that we are in the midst of the hot season every wise housekeeper is surely trying to reduce her labors in the kitchen to the minimum. Nothing answers better for a hot weather meal than the salad, which lends itself to every occasion and can be made to reappear with pristine freshness and variety every day in the week.

There is certainly no dearth of vegetables, and the salad, as well as being easy to prepare, is the most inexpensive of dishes at all times, but more especially in a year of war gardens such as this.

Oats Pressage Victory Many Farmers Think

Mysterious Sign Appears On Flag Leaves of Oat plants In Fields

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—Among the list of munitions of war which are vitay to victory, there is none more important than the oat crop of Canada, the food for man and beast and one of the most valuable of the farmers' field crops, and in the oat plants themselves this year many people profess to find a portent of coming victory for the allied arms.

For some weeks, observant people in the agricultural districts, have pointed out a curious phenomenon in connection with the structure of the leaves of the oats, which many claim was observed the year the British arms triumphed in South Africa. The sign or portent is to be found on the flag leaf of the oats, and a reporter who pulled several dozen leaves from several fields around the city last night, found the sign easily on every leaf which he examined. The sign can be variously interpreted as the letter "B" or the figure "8" some of the leaves looked more like the one and some the other.

Does it mean that "victory is coming to the British arms in 1918? Such is the interpretation given to the phenomenon by the superstitious, who declare they looked in vain for the sign last year and the year before, remembering the portent of victory in 1902.

How to Find It.

The sign may be seen by anyone. It is to be found on the flag leaf, which is the leaf nearest the head of the grain. To find it, pull the leaf, in doing which it is unnecessary to injure the grain, and spread the lance-shaped frond on a table under a strong light. It makes no difference which side of the leaf is uppermost as the mysterious sign can be seen on either side. About one-third of the distance, from the place where the leaf joins the plant to the tip, there is usually, but not always, an appreciable narrowing of the leaf, and right at this point, impressed through the leaf, as it were, as though with large type, is the letter "B" or the figure "8", plain to the eye.

One of the persons interested, in speaking to the press representative, said: "They are all talking about it in the country, they say that at the time of the Boer war the letter "V" which presages "victory," was observed in similar circumstances on the oat leaves.

"Some say it is a "B" and some say an "8" and many believe that it means "victory" for "Britain." A farmer pointed it out to me yesterday, and it's there all right."

Another explanation of the sign which finds favor with some is that it is connected with the new star, for many people believe that astral visitors have a special influence on crops. The grapevine is supposed to be peculiarly susceptible to the influence of comets, and wine produced in the year when comets in the course of their erratic orbit pass the earth is supposed to be better than in other years and the supposition during last century has been proved on many occasions, commencing with the visit of Hailey's comet in 1811. "Comet Port" was especially sought by connoisseurs of wine.

Influence of Comets

And comets themselves, whether or not they can influence the growing crops, are believed in many lands to presage war. An old Scotchmen now in the city, who remembers the Crimean war, remembers also the visit of the comet that year.

The strange part of the appearance of the sign on the oat leaf this year is that it should be this year. With the portent of victory in South Africa in 1902 it may safely be assumed that eager eyes scanned the leaves last year and the year before and people there are who see in the sign the interpretation of the recent war despatches which tell of the defeat of the German arms and the discomfiture of the Crown Prince's forces.

Stories of the discovery of the sign are not confined to any one field or any one locality, but are widely scattered over the farms of old Ontario.

Tom Longboat Asks City to Send $500 Due Him Over To France

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—Tom Longboat, the famous Indian marathoner, now with a construction battalion in France, has written to the City of Toronto asking that the $500 voted to him in 1907, following his victory in the Boston Marathon, be paid him in order that he may take a correspondence course in civil engineering.

Finance Commissioner Bradshaw reported to the Board of Control that the money had not been provided in the estimates of this year and was not now available. The $255 raised by private subscription was paid during 1910 and 1912. The city grant made for his education was never paid.

Mayor Church suggested that the application be referred to Capt. Flanagan, his one time trainer, but on Controler McBride's suggestion that matter was laid over until the Indian's return.

Thousands of London Shops to Close

LONDON, Aug. 3—For the first time in its history London will follow the custom of many provincial cities by closing many business premises for the first week of August. The shortage of labor and difficulty of arranging a supply of employes resulted in a large number of proprietors deciding to close down entirely from August 3 to August 12. Nearly 1,000 London stores in outer London will be affected. The majority of the other business houses have notified their intention to close from August 2 to August 7. Large department stores as well as those supplying food were unaffected. Congestion of the railroads due to the general observation of the holiday period in the month of August has caused the military authorities to issue an order stopping leave to troops where travelling on railway entailed either Saturday, Sunday or Monday.

LIEGE MUST PAY HEAVY FINE FOR CELEBRATING MARNE VICTORY

London, Aug. 3.—The Maastricht newspaper Les Nouvelles says the inhabitants of Liege, Belgium, held an enthusiastic public demonstration over the success of the Entente offensive on the Marne salient, during which the Marseillaise was sung. Because of this, the newepaper adds, the German governor has ordered the curfew rung at 7 o'clock in the evening for several weeks and city also has been fined.

SWALLOWS GET TOGETHER.

The swallows are holding their annual convention on the wires which cross Front street near the Palace Theatre and these little feathered folk gather in large numbers each morning for twitter-chat and discussion upon the momentous topic of "Where do we go from here?" Swallows are not as numerous this year, and smaller, owing possibly to prohibition. This being a dry year the Three Scotch Swallows are absent, being busily engaged in a munition alcohol plant overseas

The swallows in convention assembled regret the gradual disappearance of Zwick's Island Park through the disintegrating efforts of civic road builders, also the prevalence of noxious weeds along the streets of Belleville, detracting from the beauty of the city and indicating an unprogressive spirit among the inhabitants. The invasion of the air by Mohawk birdmen is also a topic for more or less heated discussion, but it is felt that the birds and the birdmen will be able to share the aerial highways without any undue friction as long as the birdmen refrain from attempting to make nests in the chimneys now occupied exclusively by the swallows.

This annual gathering of the birds on Belleville's Front street has been noted for a number of years. Each year at this time the three strands of wire which cross Front street opposite the Palace Theatre, form the meeting place of many swallows, always early in the morning, the gathering dissolving before nine o'clock. Merchants in that locality consider the convention a nuisance, but it is most unique and interesting.

HOW MEN FIND THEIR SOULS.

Religion after the war seems likely, to a lay observer, to become "a thing of practice, not of faith or doctrine." It will have more humanity, and be "bent on serving by works." Along with this change will come a disappearance of the visible symbols of the old order. "We shall have fewer costly churches and expensive choirs, and more humbleness of spirit, for the war is helping man to find his soul." It is the Detroit Free Press that sets up a lay pulpit, and preaches from the text of "one of the anomalies of the present," that is, "the manner in which the religion of peace and love has given way before a Moloch of strife and hatred aroused by an ambitious nation intent on its own ends." We read:

> We ask ourselves how it happened that at a moment when the world was felicitating itself on its progress in civilization and Christian brotherhood a war unprecedented in blood and brutality should break out among the nations worshipping the same God and professing faith in the same Redeemer.
> The effect of the war upon participants and the resultant moral consequences have been variously estimated. There are many who believe a great spiritual revival will ensue, uplifting the souls of men; others, gleaning the lessons of history, foresee a lowering of moral standards. It is already predicted that the revival, if it comes, will not be concerned so much with individual salvation as with the regeneration of the race and the world. Religionists have heretofore been most concerned with the salvation of individual souls. The religion that is to come will be on a less personal basis; it will bring out the inarticulate religion at the bottom of every heart. War, we have every reason to believe, is doing this, and in this connection what a man who knows war and has made the supreme sacrifice as a soldier has to say on the subject is of interest.
> Donald Hankey, author of that widely read book, "A Student in Arms," admits the average man is not a Christian, but believes in his potentialities. The clue is to be found in the qualities he admires or detests in other people. He has an ideal, but judges others, not himself, by it. The possession of this ideal is his religion in so far as he has one. He admires courage, generosity, honesty, practical kindness, and persistence in doing the right thing. He despises physical and moral cowardice, lying and "toadying"; he hates "swank," cant, and cruelty. Out of these he makes his ideal. And Hankey points out that the things he admires are, after all, the ideals of the gospel; the things he despises are the things he fought against. He reminds us that it is poor business to have an ideal and not live up to it, and that all we are asked to do is to try, and keep on trying."

MAKE THE WAR WORTH WHILE.

On August the fourth, 1914, Germany declared war on France, Great Britain and Belgium. On the same day Britain declared war on Germany.

At the request of the Dominion Government the Lieutenant-Governor by proclamation calls upon the people to fittingly observe Sunday in commemoration of the fourth anniversary of the entrance of the British Empire into the war for liberty and civilization.

The most effective observance of this fourth milestone in the long and bloody road of sacrifice would be a service of intercession in every individual heart and at every family altar as well as in the churches, for the success of the allied nations and a speedy and permanent peace with the spectre of German Kultur and brutal militarism forever banished from the world, together with the hypocrisy and selfishness which has in lesser degree affected the rest of the world, but which was developed to the extreme degree of malignancy in Germany in a selfishness which festered upon the national life and broke out into a running sore, poisoning the people and threatening to destroy liberty and righteousness in the whole world.

German Kultur is essentially the doctrine of Selfishness Glorified—and the great aim of the allied nations in overcoming this unspeakable monster should be to strive to purge the whole world of its poisonous influences as well as that also of a lesser but no less dangerous selfishness which finds outlet in self-seeking in shady ways, lack of charity, financial trickery and manipulation to build up swollen fortunes, political trickery and bargaining with minorities and individuals to betray the majority, playing petty partizanship against the price of power.

If the war does not result in better men and women and a better world then all this sacrifice of blood and treasure will have been in vain. But there is no doubt that the fires of war have had a purifying influence. We have seen men, careless and self-seeking plunge into the hell of this world conflict and emerge glorified with the spirit of the trenches, "A man's a man for a' that," all are brothers, every one, with pride of birth and distinction of caste swept away, cook's son and duke's son sharing the same bunk, and water-bottle; everyone willing to go through hell and back for a pal and living in an atmosphere where the blackest crime would be to take advantage of a comrade in any selfish way.

It is this spirit of the trenches, a spirit rich in charity and unselfishness, which should purge parliaments, churches and society in general after the war of all cant, hypocrisy and ingrown selfishness and create a new and better world upon the blood-stained altar of war.

Then let us pray that come it may,
  As come it will for a' that,
That sense and worth, o'er a' the earth
  May bear the gree and a' that.
For a' that and a' that,
  It's coming yet, for a' that,
That man to man, the world o'er,
  Shall brothers be for a' that.
—ROBERT BURNS.

Profiteering, says The Saskatoon Star, is one of the chief difficulties which the country has to face. It is hard to reach, and there is only one effective method—the thorough control of selling prices, together with the limitation of manufacturers.

Hindenburg and Ludendorff have issued a semi-official note declaring that "owing to the new situation the German command has been compelled to postpone for some time the decisive blow against the French and British." Like the Kaiser's Christmas dinner in Paris, scheduled for 1914, the "great decisive blow" has been indefinitely postponed. Looks as if the Kaiser might have a Christmas dinner in Paris this year under forced pressure as an extinguished visitor.

Chemin des Dames—It is still possible to avoid getting burred up on the back streets by keeping a straight course in the middle of the walk—rather difficult for ladies, of course, and awkward in passing people coming from the opposite direction.

The War Veterans Association is having a little trouble with some western and eastern delegates withdrawing from the convention for real or fancied grievances against the Ontario end of the institution. The Great War Veterans have voted to exclude men who have seen service in Canada, but have not got to England or France. In the Military Service Act regulations, service abroad is regarded as beginning outside Canadian coastal waters. The solution should be the formation of an adjunct association for the other soldiers, many of whom wanted to get to the front as ardently as any who did get there.—Mail and Empire.

Some girls seem to be hypnotized by smart uniforms and endanger their life happiness by becoming intoxicated with a false spirit of romance. When will girls ever learn that uniforms do not always cover true hearts and that lying tongues are just as common among the boys in khaki as far as girls are concerned as among the boys in mufti. And the girls always get the worst of it. Two young girls and two young aviators walk the streets until early morning—the girls are arrested, the boys go free—the girls are disgraced probably for life, while with the boys it is just one more adventure. The double standard is peculiar, but there is no sound reason why in this case the girls should have been arrested while the lads were allowed their freedom. The case should have been reversed, for the lads should have known better—they should have been arrested and the girls sent home.

When you hear a baby crying you may make up your mind nine times out of ten that the child wants a drink of water. Strange that many mothers do not realize that their babies need a lot of water—they could enjoy much more comfort and prevent general public annoyance by trying the water cure frequently on crying babies.

Alderman Robinson, on behalf of the Fuel Committee of the City Council has been touring the back concession seeking to secure a supply of wood to cope with any possible fuel famine next winter. This is a commendable move on the part of the Fuel Committee, but the committee should not overlook the possibilities contained in the over-abundance of shade trees within the city limits. Some of the city streets would be greatly improved by a judicious cutting out of superfluous trees and the emergency fuel supply could be considerably augmented by action along this line.

With ten, twenty and thirty-year sentences being imposed in all parts of the United States on those who are trying to make the enforcement of conscription more difficult, it is rather a ghastly joke to be told that Canada is under the rule of Prussianism. The only way in which those who talk in that manner can be brought to their senses is to give them a little taste of what is being meted out to their counterparts across the line.

Breaking the Baedeker Monopoly

Philadelphia Public Ledger

Since one cannot imagine anybody but a German reading a new after-the-war edition of Baedeker's "Belgium and Holland," or his "Northern Italy" or "Northern France," or "Paris," since the grisly hypocrisy of anything that Baedeker printed about the effects of wars in these devastated regions would be obvious to anyone, it is not surprising that the week's news contained the interesting little item that a combination of two well-known French and English publishers intends to put an end to the Baedeker guide-book monopoly. While the item was lost in the crush of greater news, it is indeed significant of much and symptomatic of the attitude that the French and English, and surely ourselves, will take after the war toward many of those things "made in Germany" which might as well have been made in France or England or in the United States.

The emotional attitude toward a new Baedeker's "Hand Book to Belgium" which might easily be a sacrilege, will no doubt help the new publishers, but they have left nothing to chance, it appears, since they expect to produce their new guide books under the direction of the Muirheads, one of whom —James F. Muirhead—has been for a generation the English editor of the Baedeker hand-books of travel, and the editor, indeed, who wrote the American Baedeker which appeared under the title "The United States with an Excursion into Mexico," in 1893.

The Poet's Corner

AN IDEAL SUMMER RESORT.

From Judge

I've found a place for Summertide
Where no one puts on any side;
Where no head-waiter coldly jeers,
Or views you with his cynic sneers
Because your style of etiquette
He never has encountered yet.

I've found a place where no one sits
Upon a porch, and rocks, and knits,
And pulls your name and fame apart
With calm, consummate, cruel art,
And leaves you cold, and stark, and dead,
Your reputation but a shred.

I've found a place where you can lie
And gaze off at the summer sky,
And blink, and think, and scan the blue,
And read a pleasant novel through,
Without somebody full of talk
Insisting that you take a walk.

I've found a place where when you rise
And think a bath a thing to prize
'Tis possible to get a tub
Where you can slosh and splash and scrub,
Without a charge upon the bill
To give your bank account a chill.

I've found a place where all the chairs
And all the steps upon the stairs,
And all the nooks and bits of shade,
For which you fondly think you've paid,
Are not filled up with gabbling groups
Who split the welkin with their whoops.

I've found a place where no one grips
You in the clutch of gleaming tips;
Where Tango is not danced at all,
And no one sings, out in the hall—
And doesn't cost a cent at that,
My own beloved city flat!
—John Kendrick Bangs.

SONG OF AIRMEN.

Sunk in the vastness overhead,
  Risen to where dim whispers stir,
Of lonely paths that God might tread,
  And Christ their wanderer.

O, may we soar to such a height,
  Turn earthward thence our eyes and view
With new intensity of sight
  The silent souls of you;

And see you fight beneath war's gloom
  Toward a new nobility—
Fight till the world be one vast tomb
  Of risen life to be;

And see the battle flare anew,
  And know this thing a certainty;
No one may slay your dead but you—
  By lack of memory;

And know that always at the end,
  Though winged death we deem so fair—
Death face to face like a dear friend—
  We prophets of the air.

We shall come to you from above,
  O, brothers of a common trust—
We shall share with you in new love
  Your victory of dust.

O, might we then bring to the sod
  Dim whispers that are yet astir,
Of lonely paths that God has trod
  And Christ their wanderer.
—Charles R. Murphy.

HAWKESBURY STRIKERS NEARLY CAUSED RIOT

HAWKESBURY, Aug. 3.—Taking possession of the bridge leading to the Riordon Pulp Mills here last night 150 strikers refused to allow persons to pass in either direction, a riot being almost precipitated. Deputy Sheriff Wright of l'Original, was fired upon three times during the evening the bullets passing through the cover of his automobile.

About seven o'clock Magistrate Lawlor arrived from his summer camp and immediately got a committee of the strikers before him and warned them that action would be taken against them at once. They agreed to truce until Firday of this week.

The trouble seems to have arisen from the allegation that the company does not and will not recognize the union. Some outside organizers are leading the strikers, who number one hundred and fifty. Six hundred employes refused to join the union.

Harvest Prospects Very Promising

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:—

AVERAGE HAY CROP

Hay is practically all cut and housed The crop is barely an average one, but the quality is generally good, as the weather was favorable for curing. The second crop of clover has started well, but the fileds now need rain. Alsike is reported to be yielding plenty of seed. Many farmers have already cut their second crop of alfalfa.

FALL WHEAT BETTER

Fall wheat is turning out rather better than was expected, both as to yield and quality, although Essex reports that early threshing has found some rather soft grain.

SPRING GRAINS

The intense heat of the past week or two has hastened the ripening of spring grains—perhaps too quickly in some instances. Considerable barley has been cut in a number of counties and is yielding heavily, although there are some complaints of loose smut. Spring wheat is coloring rapidly, and also gives good promise despite the great heat and drouth which has recently prevailed. Oats are also turning—perhaps too soon—and there is a danger of the heads being light. Buckwheat is growing very fast, and looks uncommonly well.

PEAS, CORN ETC.

Peas are podding and filling. Early sown promise unusually well, but the later fields are being forced too rapidly for best results.

Corn has come to its own weather, and is leaping into growth ,although rain is needed for even this crop.

Tomatoes also have made remarkable growth during the hot spell and those raised for the canneries are expected to give satisfactory yields.

Late potatoes have so far been less affected by disease than was feared a few weeks ago, but the hot weather and drouth have resulted in much blight in early potatoes causing greatly decreased yields. On the whole, however, the prospects are still good for a fair yield of clean tubers.

Loots of all kinds are looking well Beets are especially promising. A number of farmers in the County of Durham are experimenting with the production of mangel seed this year, some of which is proving to be exceedingly good.

CHERRIES LIGHT

Cherries have been a comparatively light yield. Raspberries have yielded well, but the very hot weather is shortening the season The northern counties report a generous yield of huckleberries.

Between the hot weather, failing pastures and the scarcity of mill feeds live stock are hardly keeping up to condition. Cattle, generally speaking are going on the market slowly, although Lambton reports a free movement of beef animals during the week. Between the flies and drying astures the milk flow is decreasing. Milch cows continue in demand at from $17.50 to $18.40 a cwt.

IDEAL HARVEST CONDITIONS

Requests from farmers for help have been fewer than was expected. The harvest season has been almost ideal so far and very little time has been lost. Some after-harvest plowing has been done already in Essex, although the ground was found to be rather dry and stiff for the work. A large number of threshing machines are reported to be in operation.

FOOD BOARD FLASHES FOR FEMININE FOLK

In days of peace the working people of Belgium were a well-fed people, accustomed to a liberal diet of bread, butter, potatoes, eggs, meat, pork, fruit and vegetables.

Now they exist on the ration allowed by the Commission for Belgian Relief. The Germans still allow food that is sent to Belgium to be distributed there in order to save themselves the expense and trouble of feeding their captives.

The effect of the meagre feeding is noticeable among the industrial workers. In a workshop in Antwerp where 800 girls are employed in making over clothing sent from America, ten or twelve faint each day. The reason is not far to seek. Their usual breakfast is a cup of torrealine, which is roasted rye used as a substitute for coffee. Of all those workers 90 per cent. have not tasted any meat for a year except the small portion of bacon issued by the Belgian Relief and mere often given up to the sick and those engaged in manual labor. When they do get meat—well, it is dog meat at about 75 cents a pound.

This is but one of the reasons why we in Canada are asked to save meat and wheat for export.

Believe Woman Is German Spy

QUEBEC, Aug. 3.—Quebec has a German spy story all its own, with a woman occupying the centre of the stage and two members of the military body playing the role of "Beau Brummels" to the fair lady.

The chase to run down the agent of the Huns has now been transferred to New York, and with the evidence thus far in their possession, the military will forwith denounce the woman to the American authorities and ask that she be dealt with.

The tale of the woman's operations opens in a high-class boarding-house on Ann street, where she was met, amongst others, by Sergeant X, who has been doing transport work, in bringing back men returned from overseas. It was announced that the woman made a point of frequenting restaurants and other places where soldiers congregate.

Two military men were detailed to "cultivate" her acquaintance, while all her movements were closely followed. It was noted that she wrote many letters and that she also sent and received many telegrams. These latter, for the most part were addressed to a woman residing on Riverside Drive New York, and all in tenor were apparently of social nature, though the frequent recurrence of certain phrases was significant to the investigators.

One day one of the latter gained admission to the woman's room in her absence and carefully ransacked her trunks. Masses of correspondence were discovered, but nothing of an incriminating nature sufficient to warrant her arrest. The woman,, however found that her room had been visited in her absence and forthwith packed up her belongings and left town.

She was traced as having purchased a ticket to New York. On the next train she was followed by two of her former non-commissioned officers,, friends who are instructed to report their suspicions to the American authorities.

In certain circles here, it is believed that the woman is the one who advised the Germans of the departure of the Llandovery Castle, as examination of her correspondence immediately prior to the date of the sailing of this vessel, showed that she had written several letters to the New York address wherin reference was made to her "coming voyage in the interests of her health."

Ask Repeal of an Order

OTTAWA, Aug. 3.—The visit of the Canadian Ministers to Great Britain and their conferences with British investors regarding the Government's plans for railway nationalization and for a post-war influx of British capital to Canada, have disclosed a certain feeling of uneasiness there as to a possible Bolshevik tendency in Canada. Security for private contracts and investments in Canada against any Federal or Provincial Governmental public ownership or expropriation onslaught has been "put up" to the Canadian Ministers by the British capitalists, whose fears seem to have been aroused by the railway nationalization proposals in Canada, the C. P. R. special taxation and other "evidences" of expropriating for the people "the fruits of private enterprise."

Ministers Gave Reassurance

The uneasiness of capital as to further investment in Canada may, of course, be due only to an unjustified scare over newspaper reports of public ownership proposals in connection with railway and power companies, etc., but it is nevertheless a factor in the solution of Canada's present and future financial problems, and during their stay in London the Canadian Ministers were obliged to give public reassurance that Canada would keep faith with those who invested their money here.

Ministers Should Avoid Speculating

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The suit brought by the Rev. Dr Newell Dwight Hillis, pastor of Plymouth Church, of Brooklyn, against Frank L. Ferguson, former president of the Plymouth Trustees, was decided in the clergyman's favor. Mr. Ferguson acted as business administrator in Dr. Hillis numerous business enterprises including the purchase of Canadian timber lands.

The referee William D. Dickey, held that Mr. Ferguson owes Dr. Hillis $70,000, and that various claims which Mr. Ferguson put in for services and were not justified. The referee added;

"The temptation is strong to preach a sermon on the improoriety, to use no harsher words, of ministers, engaging in any speculative buisness where the speculation is to be carried out with money of others, who entrusted their earnings to a minister because he is a minister, relying on everything that belongs to the ministerial office."

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength.

This preparation for the removal of freckles is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by any druggist under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

Date of Premier's Return Not Known

OTTAWA, Aug. 3.—Nothing definite is known here in Government or official circles as to the probable date of Sir Robert Borden's return to Canada, but it is regarded as not unlikely that he will be home some time before the end of August. The date of his departure from England depends upon his business before the Imperial War Cabinet and the need for the presence of the Prime Minister in London. Sir Robert and his colleagues in Ottawa are in constant touch by cable, and it is understood that no important step has been taken by the Government without the Prime Minister being consulted. The question of the possibility of an autumn session has not been considered by the Ministers at the Capital since the Supreme Court judgment confirming the right of the Government to grant exemptions under the power taken by order in Council on April 20 made it unnecessary that Parliament should be convoked at once. The probability now is that unless some emergency unforeseen at the present should arise the matter will remain in abeyance until Sir Robert is back in the Capital.

The Gillette Razor's Four Years of War Service

THE Gillette Safety Razor has passed through four years of war service with a clean bill of health.

It went into the front line with the first troops, and it is still on active service, never having missed a day.

It is the proud record of the Gillette Razor that it has more users than have all other razors put together in every regiment under the Allied flags.

Under the severest conditions it is possible to impose, the Gillette Razor has supplied all the comfort and luxury a soldier derives from a clean shave. It has been his companion in many a shell-hole, dug-out and water-soaked trench.

It has gone with him to billet and reserve camp; it has shaved him in hospital and has accompanied him to "Blighty". Whether its owner has been on leave, invalided home, or finally pensioned off, the Gillette has never failed to offer the daily luxury of a perfect shave.

For more than four years it has been in action—day after day; month after month,—and it has never appeared on a casualty list, or been "invalided home".

An occasional oversight on the part of friends at home, or the uncertainty of the mails, has sometimes deprived a soldier of the new Gillette blades he prizes so highly. But the Gillette itself, so often mentioned in "despatches" home, has come through with flying colors,—a powerful factor in the maintenance of morale.

"A CROWN OF SHAME"

By FLORENCE MARRYAT

Author of "The Poison of Asps," A Star and a Heart," "Written in Fire," etc.

CHAPTER XX.—Continued

The expression of his face was so murderous as he spoke, that Lizzie fairly screamed,—

"Oh, Henri, Henri, surely you are not in earnest! You would never countenance nor encourage so horrible an idea! You would save those who have been good to you—whom you once believed you loved—at the risk of your own life! Tell me it is the truth, for I shall never leave you till you acknowledge it."

Henri de Courcelles seized her two hands in a grip of iron, and drew her towards him, until their faces nearly touched each other.

"Lizzie Fellows," he exclaimed roughly, to hide his emotion, "if I could have gone on loving you, if that heartless pade had not come between us with her mock innocence and her fatal beauty and blinded my eyes to your superior virtues, I should have been a happy and better man to-day. But now, I know it is too late. You have ceased to love me, and I shall never again be able to lay any claim to your hand."

'But I have not ceased to care if you are a good man or a bad one, Henri," she answered, through her tears; "and I entreat you now by your memory of the past, to do what I ask you, and leave Beauregard."

"I will, because you ask me; but, as I have already told you, it will not make the difference you imagine. I could no more stay the progress of this mutiny now, than I could single-handed quench the fire of a burning city. It has gone too far for that. Besides, I have no desire to do so. My heart thirsts for revenge, and I shall only quit Beauregard to join another set of rebels, and perhaps a more dangerous one."

"Henri, cannot I persuade you to give up that madness also?"

"No Lizzie, the time is past. Maraquita's falsehood has made me reckless, and I only live now to one end,—to see her punished as she deserves."

"Leave her to Heaven, Henri. Do you think her infidelity will not be its own punishment? How many nights she will lie awake poor child, wanting your love, wanting mine, which used, at one time, to make all her happiness? How often will her heart yearn—for Quita has a heart, Henri, though it is choked up with vanity and love of self—for the days she spent with us,—for the poor little innocent she has left behind her? Ah, neither you nor I can measure the pain which remorse will bring her!"

"Don't you believe it. You judge her by yourself, and your sex is the only likeness between you. She is all bad, Lizzie, false from head to foot, and the sooner the world is rid of her, the better."

'And are you the one who should be her judge?" replied Lizzie mournfully; "can you bring clean hands into court, Henri, with which to condemn her? No, I am not alluding to myself. It was not your fault, perhaps, if you found upon a closer acquaintance that you could not love me as you once imagined; but what of Jerusha—the poor little coolie girl with whom you were carrying on a pretension of affection at the same time you were deceiving Maraquita? How can you find it in your heart to contemplate revenge on her for an error of which you were guilty yourself?"

"You women don't understand these things, Lizzie. No one but a little fool like Jerusha would have believed for a moment that I was in earnest, or that such an irregular business could possibly last more than a few months."

'Yes Jerusha vows to have her revenge on you as warmly as you do to have your on Maraquita."

At this piece of intelligence, Henri de Courcelles changed color.

'If that is the case, your advice has not come too soon. These coolies are the very devil to stick to an idea, if they once get it in their head, and I shall wake up some night, perhaps, to find Miss Jerusha's fingers at my throat, if I don't clear out. Curse the little jade! She's been more trouble to me than she's worth."

And may be the occasion of more yet," replied Lizzie, who saw the way, by taking advantage of his fear, to make him hold to his purpose. "She is dead set against you, Henri—I am witness to that—and constantly speaking of her wrongs to the rest. She swears she will have your life some way or other; and for that reason only I think it would be much wiser of you to leave the plantation. She is quite cabale indeed of bettraying you to Mr. Courtney; and such a proceeding might lead to your arrest, on a suspicion of felonious purposes. Now, do you see the danger you are in?"

"Indeed I do, and I shall not sleep another night on Beauregard; you may take by word for that. Indeed, when I come to think of it, I cannot imagine how I can have been such a fool as to run the risk for so long. There are plenty of places in San Diego where I can be safer, and bide my time for my revenge."

"Do more whilst you are about it, Henri. Leave San Diego altogether, and your idea of revenge behind you. It will never make you any happier, and it may cast a haunting regret over all your future. And you are still young. There is perhaps a happy life looming for you in the distance, if you will try and forget the failure of your youth."

"No, Lizzie; you speak to deaf ears. I will fulfil your wish, and leave this place. Be satisfied with that, and when I am gone, forget all about me. I was never worthy to kiss even the hem of your garment, and my darkest shame will be ever that I permitted you to waste a single thought upon me. Good-bye, my dear. Don't stay here any longer, for your presence, and the memories it brings with it, unman and make a coward of me. By this time tomorrow I shall have left Beauregard for ever."

"Thank Heaven for that," replied Lizzie, as she obeyed his request, and left the hut.

Her mind was not wholly at ease concerning him, because she saw that he was doggedly bent upon having his own way; but she had, at all events, succeeded in scaring him off the property of her benefactors, and trusted that when his evil influence was removed from them, the hands of Beauregard would return to their former condition of obedience and contentment.

CHAPTER XXI

Lizzie had guessed correctly when she said that Maraquita's infidelity would prove its own punishment. The honeymoon of Santa Lucia was not a very satisfactory one, at least for the bride. So long as the day endured, and Quita's frivolous soul could be gorged on flattery, and the servile congratulations paid her by her husband's guests, she was contended with her lot, and disposed to believe it would turn turn out all she had prognosticated for herself. To feel she was the woman of most importance in the island, and that she had horses and carriages, and servants at her command, and that a military guard accompanied her wherever she went, and everybody turned to gaze after her, and said to one another, "There goes the Governor's bride," was quite sufficient to inflate her foolish little heart with pride, and make her forget, for the time being, the penalty attached to it all. But one cannot pass one's entire life in public, and when the hours of domestic happiness arrived, they were very trying. Then, if she had had a handsome young husband suited to herself in age and disposition waiting on her every look and smile while he whispered words of love in her ear, how delighted Maraquita would have been to fly to the sacred recesses of her own apartments, and shut the world and its hollow compliments outside. But now such moments became torture. Sir Russell had been sufficiently trying as a lover, but as a husband he became simply unendurable. His middle-aged ecstasies over his new possession, his fussy attentions, his twaddling conversation about things and people of which she had never heard, soon bored his young wife to extinction And he was not slow to find out that he did not interest her. He noted the vacant look, the wandering attention, the deep sighs that occasionally interrupted their intercourse, and commenced to feel the first twinges of jealousy, and to wonder if there had been any other admirer in the background whom Lady Johnstone had not entirely forgotten.

If he could only have read her thoughts as she sat by his side when they were alone togther, or lay for hours during the silent watches of the night gazing open-eyed at the dark blue heaven with its myriad clusters of stars, how unpleasantly satisfied he would have been. It was at those times that the newly-made Lady Johnstone's thoughts returned to the past which she had so pertinaciously thrust from her, and that she longed (with the contradiction of human nature) to be able to take back again to her heart the fate which she had held in her hand, without the moral courage to grasp it. It was then that the glorious dark eyes of Henri de Courcelles seemd to gaze into her own like twin stars, just as they used to look at those heavenly moments when they sat together on the bench in the Oleander Thicket and her lover's arms were folded closely round her, as though to shield her from all harm.

Kaiser Sees Trouble Ahead For Huns

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 3.—Emperor William has issued a proclamation, dated August 1 addressed to the German army and navy saying that they are facing the hardest struggle of the war and expressing his own and the country's confidence that they will be able to foil "the desperate efforts of the enemy," says a Berlin despatch received here.

Emperor William's proclamation reads:

"Serious years of war lie behind you. The German people, convinced of its just cause, resting on its hard sword, and trusting in God's gracious help, has, with its faithful allies, confronted a world of enemies. Your victorious fighting spirit carried the war in the first year into the enemy's country and preserved the homeland from the horrors and devastation of war.

"In the second and third years of war, you, by your destructive blows, broke the strength of the enemy in the East. Meanwhile, your comrades in the West offered a brave and victorious front to enormously superior forces.

"As the fruit of these victories the fourth year of the war has brought us peace in the East. In the West the enemy was heavily hit by the force of your assault. The battles won in recent months count among the highest deeds of fame in German history.

"You are in the midst of the hardest struggle. The desperate efforts of the enemy will, as hitherto, be foiled by your bravery. Of that I am certain and with me, the entire Fatherland.

NO BED CLOTHES IN GERMAN HOTELS

PARIS, Aug. 3.—Hotel propretors of Leivzig addressed the following invitation to visitors at the annual autumn fair: "Because of the requisitioning of hotel linen by the Government and because of the general dearth of these articles, the undersigned kindly request their honorable visitors if they would be kind enough to bring with them when visiting Leivzig fair the necessary bed sheets and other linen and towels which they will need."

Despatches from Berlin also indicate the beginning of the first meatless weeks in the capital on August 19. In lieu of the meat ration the Government is putting at the disposition of the population a quantity of potatoes not exceeding seven pounds a head.

FIVE MILLION BRITONS FIGHTING TO-DAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 2.—Lord Curzon, member of the British War Cabinet, gave figures Monday night in a speech, portions of which have been received here by wireless which show the extent of the British war effort in manpower. Lord Curzon said that Great Britain had given no fewer than 7,000,000 men, and that 5,000,000 Britions were to-day fighting in foreign theatres of war. Allowing for casualties and presuming these figures to include the navy, they are taken as demonstrating the fact that the only troops in England to-day are men on leave and men in depots, either in the supply services or undergoing the reorganization units.

MANUFACTURERS HAVE RAISED PROFIT UNDULY.

Montreal, Aug. 2.—The Canadian Railway War Board announces that a detailed study has been undertaken which will show not merely the increase in the cost of railway haul in the manufacture of necessaries of life, but will go into the actual cost of the labor and raw materials in these articles, with a view to proving that while railway rates have increased possibly 30 per cent. since the war began, while railway costs of operation have increased by a larger percentage, manufacturers have actually increased their rate of profit out of all proportion to the actual increase in their cost of production.

The War Board gives the following list: Boots and shoes have risen in price since the war began 100 per cent. beef, 35 per cent.; clothing, 50 per cent.; coal, 100 per cent.; cordwood, 100 per cent., flour, 90 per cent.; gasoline, 100 per cent.; hardware, 100 per cent.; pork, 75 per cent.; sugar, 80 per cent.; and tobacco, 50 per cent. The roads are now paying a 100 per cent. higher pay rool; 210 per cent. more for axles; 110 per cent. for brass castings; 200 per cent. for malleable castings; 00 per cent. for coke; 157 per cent. for iron and steel bars; 153 per cent. for r; 80 per cent. for oak; 130 per cent. for oil fuel at Montreal; 32 per cent. for kerosene; 125 per cent. for steel tires; 100 per cent. for cleaning waste; 00 per cent. for lubricating waste; and 0 per cent. for cast iron wheels.

A memorial service will be held in Victoria Avenue Baptist Church tomorrow morning for Pte. Edward Jas. Townsend, who has made the supreme sacrifice somewhere in France. His widow resides on Donald street, Belleville.

FINED $200 AND COSTS.

At Trenton on Thursday evening before Police Magistrate O'Rourke, two young men were convicted of having liquor at a place other than their residence. A fine of $200 and costs was imposed upon each, which was paid.

MEMORIAL SERVIVCE

The memorial service for the young man Dennis who was drowned near Campbellford recently, will be conducted by Adjt. Trickey at the above mentioned place tomorrow. Mr. Dennis took an active part in the Adjutant's service there last winter.

CHARGED AS VAGRANT

Sadie Mraacle, aged 22 years, and Mary Brown, aged 19 years, were at an early hour this morning arrested on a charge of vagrancy. They claim Deseronto as their home. The magistrate enlarged the case for a few days in order that the police may make inquiries in reference to them.

MILK NOT ADULTERATED

In the report of tests maed of milk offered for sale by local dealers, it was stated that the sample taken from G. A. B. Gay was adulterated. Mr. J. A. Kerr, who made the tests states that Mr Gay's milk was reported adulterated through a mistake in the test.

DR. ALLEN'S WILL

Rev. Dr. James Allen, secretary of the Home Mission Board of the Methodist Church, who did in Toronto June 29 last, in his holograph will, dated at Kemptville, June 25, 1881, left his widow sole beneficiary and executor of his estate valued at $24,564. According to the will which was presented for probate yesterday, the estate is made up principally of real estate $11,133, insurance $4,600, bonds $2,000 and stocks.

FOUR HORSES BURNED

A very unusual loss resulted from a fire on the farm of Mr. John Loffin near Queensboro, Elzevir Township on Saturday last. Messrs. John Flynn, Ed. Flynn, Harry Warren and Gary Barry each drove a horse and buggy over for the purpose of picking berries and put their horses in the stable. During their absence the barn caught fire and was burned to the ground. The four horses were burned to death, all the harness, three buggies, some coats, etc., also a considerable quantity of hay.

MORE FISH STORIES

Many of the local fishermen have contended that there "were" no fish in the lake this year, but possibly their opinion was formed because of their own poor luck. However it seems the fishing season has started again. On Thursday evening Mr. Henry Clark, our local Isaac Walton, landed a nice 15 lb. lunge. However, this season's record was set when Miss Talpey and Mr. Painter captured a "whale." The lunge weighed 37½ lbs. and 48 in. long and 27 in. in girth. Miss Talpey was the one who "lured" the monster to his death, but of course Mr. Painter will be given credit for helping to land the fish. They used only a light canoe and did not have any great difficulty in getting the lunge into the boat. Fishing seems to have picked up the last few days now and all the disappointed anglers are out after this fellow's mate.—Tweed News.

Bad News Spreads Along the Hun Front

With the British Armies in France, Aug. 3.—Desperate attempts are being made to hide the news of the Marne disaster from the men in Crown Prince Rupprecht's group of armies or to sugar-coat it as far as possible But despite these precautions the news is percolating through.

This is having an increasingly demoralizing effect. There is considerable dissatisfaction among the men, owing to the paucity of news.

Start Ringing the Bells, New Gains Very Valuable

PARIS, Aug. 3.—Allied troops celebrated the fourth anniversary of the war by a victorious resumption of the offensive, to the surprise of a great many who had believed the battle had entered into one of its periodical lulls.

on the total of prisoners—more than 33,000—brings out forcibly the extraordinary change in the situation a short month has effected. On the first of July the allies, to reverse Walpole's famous phrase, were almost wringing their hands; now they would be justified in ringing bells.

The ground won yesterday north of the Ourcq has considerable value. It is a long spur about 600 feet high forming the watershed between the Crise and the Ourcq, and is a valuable observation point. From it the Germans prevented the allies from seeing the Crise while they overlooked the ground won from them on the Ourcq the allies stormed not only the summit but the northern slopes of this terrain.

As a consequence they can now manoeuvre safely in the Ourcq region. In addition they have a view behind the great Hartennes plateau where the enemy still clings along the Soissons-Chateau Thierry road and that strong position difficult of attack frontally can now be turned from the north through Ville Montoire and from the south by way of Hill 205.

The allies also gained an important advantage on the left in cature of Meuniere Wood by the Americans giving them a position which according Henri Bidou is the keystone of the whole German line in the centre.

To this end they urged the appointment of a competent independent expert to make a thorough survey of conditions, with a view to the establishment of the highest possible extended privileges without interfering with the home life of the student.

Canadians Force the Foe to Reinforce Their Lines

Continuous Raids Keep Fair Share of Germans from Taking Par in Battle, Says Message from Gen. Currie

OTTAWA, Aug. 3—A despatch from General Sir Arthur Currie, commanding the Canadian corps at the front, to Sir Edward Kemp, overseas Minister of Militia, has been cabled to the Militia Headquarters here.

It is as follows: "Everything with us is going very well. We have taken up again our policy of continually worrying the Boche, and have put on quite a number of raids with success. We have taken a number of prisoners and machine guns, and have killed quite a lot of Germans.

'So active have we been that the Boche has considerably reinforced his line opposite to us, so that if we are not actively fighting, we are keeping a fair share of his men from taking part in the battle. Prisoners tell us that they suffered quite a lot from our fire, and are moving their line somewhat."

FROM PLANE IN PARACHUTE

With the American Army in France, Aug. 3.—Captain Sarret, a French aviator, has carried out the first experiment on record of falling from a moving airplane with a parachute. He dropped 800 yards and landed safely.

The employment of parachutes, when successful, will save the lives of many aviators, as they will be able to leave their flaming machines.

Sports In War Time.

A new event is being added to the list of athletic contests participated in at college track meets. It is grenade throwing. Dummy grenades have been placed on the market which are exact duplicates in weight and appearance of the deadly hand missiles employed by our men in the trenches. In recognition of the fact that correct throwing may be something more vital than a mere accomplishment for our young men, college coaches are giving it a place along with shot putting and hammer throwing, indicating that even our sports are being affected by the world war.

Indians In Khaki.

Eight thousand Canadian Indians out of a total population of 110,000 are at the front as voluntary soldiers. The number would be more than quadrupled, according to representative chiefs, but for the prevalence of tuberculosis in the west, a majority of the candidates for the army having been rejected by the medical boards, and the non-admission of the red men to franchise privileges.

Cut Out For the Job.

"I wanted to enlist and fight for me country," said Tired Trotters, to the sharp-eyed woman at the door. "But I'm chicken-breasted an' de recruiting officer turned me down. Have youse got any light work dat a pore, afflicted man——"

"Yes, indeed," replied the farmer's wife. "One of my sitting hens has just abandoned her nestful of eggs."

"Loafer."

While Canada has been led, owing to the war, to enact legislation against loafers, it is of interest to note that it is to the Germans that she is indebted even for the name "loafer"—simply an abbreviation of "strassenlaufer," "runner of the streets."

Getting Ready.

In some sections of the West, the toothbrush is said to be rather a scarce commodity, as witness the experience of a boarder out there once upon a time. The master and his wife had accepted the boarder at $4 a week. Just before his first meal the visitor overheard this scrap of conversation between the couple: "I'm afraid we ain't going to make much outa this fella at $4," the mistress sighed. "I allow that wuz purty good pay," replied the host. "Well, it would be ordinarily," the mistress admitted, "but Tommy jest went upsairs to tell him dinner wuz reddy, an' found him sharpenin' his teeth."

Canadians Worrying Huns Continually

Artillery Gives foe No Peace—Many Canadians Join the Tank Service

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 5—Roland Hill, a correspondent with the Canadian Forces in France writes:

"We are worrying the Huns all the time. No Man's Land is now tall crop grass, the result of weeks of toil by some Picardy farmer, now homeless, and the Canadians have a merry time stalking and sniping through the cover. One sergeant of a veteran battalion is credited with five Huns in one afternoon. With a chum he crept out until he fonnd good cover actually behind the German front line. And sniped away at Hun patrols in no mans land, while his compaion kept watch. On the way back at dusk the twain encountered a German scout party of four that had been searching for our snipers. They surprised them killed one and wounded another, and the rest fled.

Our atillery gives the enemy no peace, and prisoners say the guns make life in their support trenches very uncomfortable and the accuracy of our harrassing fire at night on the routes they use to bring up supplies is uncanny. The Hun guns seldom reply except on occasional counter battery work.

Canada was well represented in the latest tank exploit, and this branch of service has become nearly as popular with the men from the Dominion as the air force. I am told the command of the left section in the latest great raid was in the hands of a young Toronto officer, who transferred from the Canadian Machine Gun Section to get more excitement.

There are scores of adventurous spirits now attached to the tanks, whose training just completed are now in action, and who will be invaluable additions.

TIME TO START SOMETHING! GIVE US A CHANCE TO CHEER!

GENERAL FOCH HAS GIVEN US A GREAT VICTORY—the greatest of the war. The Kaiser has been dealt a staggering slap in the face by the humiliation of his son, the Crown Prince, who with his immense army was drawn into a trap by Gen. Foch and allowed to cherish the delusion that it was possible to launch a mighty blow at Paris from the Marne salient. In the fullness of time Foch closed the trap and the Crown Prince, when he finally realized his predicament, made desperate efforts to extricate his army.

Under the incessant hammering of the Allied forces the Crown Prince's army has been practically cut to pieces—many thousands have been killed and wounded, many thousands have been captured.

This victory will in all probability mark the turning point of the war—it has shaken the confidence of the Central Powers, impaired seriously the morale of the enemy soldiers; and adding this disastrous defeat of their "invincible" armies to starvation at home, the military strength of Germany has received what may well be its death blow, although there will likely be hard fighting yet. One thing we know, and that is—the Hun military machine is cracking, and the cracks will spread with each new blow inflicted by the Allies until the Beast of Berlin and his dupes are humbled in the dust and compelled to accept any terms submitted by the Allies.

WHY, then, in the face of the great events transpiring on the battle front and the certain prospects of future victories, should we not show our unshakable confidence in complete and decisive allied victory by a civic demonstration? Many people do not follow the progress of the war closely enough to know really how it is going.

WAKE 'EM UP ! Put the gin back into ginger and let us have a big procession with the band playing Rule Britannia, The Maple Leaf, O Canada, God Save the King, Tipperary, The Long, Long Trail, The Marseilles and all the songs of victory and glorious British confidence they know.

Strike up the band, and give us all a chance to cheer.

WHY repress our feelings because some faint hearts see a possibility of a set-back, somewhere along the line, sometime? We know that we are going to win gloriously and decisive'y in the end—we know that we are winning now. Let's honor the brave soldiers and sailors and airmen of the Allies who have effectually barred the progress of the Hun war machine.

RING THE BELLS and let the bands play and give everybody so inclined a chance to cheer for the genius of a Foch and for the British courage and unconquerable determination which has been the inspiration and backbone of the allied resistance, resulting in the muzzling of the Beast of Berlin, who hoped to enslave and debase the world.

THE DEFEAT OF PRUSSIANISM was never in doubt to the brave British hearts who refused to admit the possibility of freedom's overthrow, but Foch's great victory will bring a world of cheer to many weaker spirits who viewed the gradual advance of the Huns toward Paris and the Channel with fear and trembling which should now be turned to great joy in the confidence inspired by the decisive defeat and destruction of the Crown Prince's army.

WHAT ABOUT IT, MAYOR PLATT?

CATCH HUNS IN "NIGHTIES"

LONDON, Aug. 5—In a recent Italian advance in Albania, according to reports received here, a German general and several other German officers weer made prisoners dressed in pink pyjamas, so completely were they surprised.

The same source confirms reports of the excellent work of British monitors. They shelled most effectively the retreating Austrians near the coast.

The Crisis Has Now Passed Declares Sir Douglas Haig

ENEMY HAS FAILED IN INTENTION OF GAINING A DECISION BEFORE THE AMERICAN TROOPS ARRIVE.

LONDON, Aug. 5.—Field Marshal Haig, commander-in-chief of the Briitsh forces in France, in his fourth of August message on the occasion of the anniversary of the entry of Great Britain into the war, says to his troops:

"The conclusion of the fourth year marks the passing of the period of crisis. The Russian revolution set free large hostile forces which were transferred to the western front. The enemy intention was to use great numbers and to gain a decisive victory before the arrival of American troops could give superiority to the Allies. The enemy has failed. The steady stream of Americans arriving in France has restored the balance."

SUNDAY WAR BULLETINS

Special to the Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited

Canadian Press, Limited.

The advance of the whole army was along a front of almost 45 miles.

Paris, Aug. 4.—The Paris war office statement today says there was no change in the situation along the battle front during the night.

London, Aug. 4.—Three tons of bombs were dropped on Bruges docks on Friday. We brought down two hostile machines and one balloon. All of our machines returned safely.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—Today's statement says that the allied troops have crossed the Aisne at several points between Soissons and Venizel.

Washington, Aug. 4.—Official statements by the American and Japanese governments today say that the United States and Japan alone will extend military aid to Russia in Siberia.

PARIS, Aug. 4.—An official statement says that the number of prisoners captured by the Allies during the last two days will thrill the allied world when announced.

Copenhagen, Aug. 4.—Field Marshal Hindenburg and General Ludendorff have made a statement to German correspondents and openly admitted that their strategic plans have failed.

Paris, Aug. 4.—Fismes is completely surrounded by American troops. The Germans retain a foothold in the extreme northern part of the town only, where crack Prussian Guard units are offering a desperate resistance to the Americans.

With the American Army on the Aisne-Marne front, August 4.—Last night's official statement says that U. S. troops entered the southern part of Fismes, while other forces of the Allies hold the southern banks of the Aisne and Vesle rivers from Soissons to Fismes. Eastward of Fismes it is almost a straight line through Courville, Branscourt, Courcelles and Champigny.

London, August 4.—Last night's official statement from Field Marshal Haig says that the British in the Albert sector, sweeping aside all enemy resistance in a victorious advance, have recaptured most of the ground previously held by the Germans west of the River Ancre. Numerous German counter attacks have been repulsed.

Returned Soldiers Angry at Police

Claim That Toronto Police Are Too Lenient With Aliens

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

TORONTO, Aug. 5.—This is Toronto's Civic Holiday and the city is comparatively quiet after the riot demonstrations of the week-end. Returned soldiers to the number of several hundred gathered at the city hall at an invitation of Mayor Church to appoint their committee to formulate and present to the police commissioners tomorrow their grievances against the police and the administration of the alien enemy regulations. They will demand more strict enforcement of the latter and the dismissal of several policemen whom they allege to have been too violent and abusive on Saturday night. There were prospects of further demonstration today when one of the audience in the soldiers' meeting declined to remove his hat when the National Anthem was being sung. The police arrested the men and thus avoided further trouble.

Petain's Brains Are The Basis of Victory

Strikes at Hun Centre and then Smashes Suddenly at Soissons

LONDON, Aug. 5—The present allied progress in the Marne salient, says Reuter's correspondent with the American army telegraphing Friday, is due to the strategy of Gen. Petain, which can now be appreciated. By striking with the Americans in the centre the best German divisions were drawn there. The French commander then prepared for an attack upon the far more important region along the western flank south of Soissons.

"The Frankfort Zeitung," he adds, "has stated that the Germans were going to hold their lines opposite the Americans and the Germans had reached strong positions suitable to a crystalization of the defence. We shall see. Doubtless the enemy made himself secure in the two great woods north of Fere, but there were other ways of clearing them out than by driving our heads against his barbed wire. Yesterday (Thursday) he may have heard the guns creeping up on his right toward Cramaille with no little foreboding.

"The intense heat and cloudless sky yesterday have given place to rain and clouds which no aircraft can penterate so that his beaten troops may obtain a respite. But a crystaliaztion which can crumble to the extent of two miles in a day does not look stable. Meanwhile the Americans continue to advance in a way they have when they once get started.

"Cierges and all its gas is in their possession and they have a hold on the hills north and north-east of it. The Germans had had their strong places here which had made the advance so difficult. A little further the enemy find his occupation of Meuniere Wood becoming hopelessly insecure. He not only had the Americans on his right flank but must have been becoming seriously concerned regarding the progress of another force which was approaching from the south-east.

Grant Amnesty to Evaders of Draft

Penalty Will Not Be Exacted If They Report Before August 24

OTTAWA, Aug. 5—An extra of the Canada Gazette, issued Saturday, contains a proclamation removing deserters and absentees under the Military Service Act from liability to punishment if they erport for duty between now and August 24. It is recognized that many men who failed to report because of lack of proper understanding of the Act will be glad and willing to do so if a period of grace is allowed. It is believed that the establishment of such a period wil bring to the colors many men whom it would be difficult to otherwise reach.

Men who are still classed as deserters and absentees subsequent to August 24 will, the proclamation states, "be pursued and punished with all the rigor and severity of the law, subject to the judgments of our courtmartials, which will be convened to try such cases and other competent tribunals."

The proclamation provides that "those who employ, harbor, conceal, or assist such men, will be held strictly accountable as offenders and subject to the pains, penalties and forfeitures in that behalf by law provided for their offence.

JAPAN'S REPLY RECEIVED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5—The formal reply of the Japanese Government to the American proposal for joint action by Japan, the Entente Powers and the United States in Siberia was delivered to Acting Secretary of State Polk to-day by Viscount Ishii, the Japanese Ambassador.

The answer was understood technically meet all the requirements laid down by the U. S. Government. It will require careful consideration, however, and no formal announcement is expected for the present at least.

Toronto Police Fight Bloody Battle With Returned Soldiers

Reporters, Blind Men, Women, Children and Cripples Said to Have Been Mowed Down in Melee— Serious Riots Continue In Queen City

TORONTO, Aug. 5—The rioting, which was begun Friday night, when many restaurants and other places were raided by returned soldiers with a large following of civilians, including many women and children, was continued on Saturday night, the main attempt on this occasion being one to storm No. 2 Police Station where those arrested on Friday night were being held. The police were prepared for the rioters and made a stand near the station. There was a stiff fight which lasted for some time when batons were freely used. The returned men had armed themselves with wooden weapons, and these they used to some extent. The police, however, did not confine their efforts to the men with weapons, women, children, a blind man, and newspaper reporters, others whose business had taken them into that part of the town coming in for more of their attention than those who were armed. Ten arrests were made and 26 casualties were taken to the hospital.

Letters from Overseas

FRANK W. BATEMAN ON THE OVERSEAS Y. M. C. A.

The following letter was received by Mr. H. Bateman, 61 Station street of this city from her son Frank W. Bateman, who was wounded some time ago and is now with his battery again.

France, July 3rd, 1918.

Dear Mother and Father,—

Just a few lines in answer to your five welcome letters which I received yesterday, dated April 17th, May 13th, May 20th, May 28th and June 6th, so I had enough reading to keep me busy for some time.

I am glad to say I am quite well and hope all at home are the same. We are having very nice weather here.

You wanted to know whether I was wounded with a sniper or not. No I was not. I was wounded with some splinters from a large high explosive shell which dropped about 4 feet from me. Yo see when a shell hits the ground and bursts there are small pieces of steel fly all over for a distance of 2 or 3 hundred yards. Well those small pieces of steel are what we call splinters, of course some shells bursts in the air by what is called a time fuse, well that is called shrapnel. The shell which I was wounded with was about 11 inches in diameter and weighed between five and six hundred pounds, which when it hits the ground would make a hole big enough to put about 50 men into.

The hospital I was in was an English military hospital. The nurses were very nice and I had a jolly time when I was there.

You asked about how the Y.M.C.A. uses us out here. If it wasn't for them we would go hungry and thirsty many a time up the line. There is always hot tea, coffee or cocoa to drink or lemonade in the summer time. Sometimes they give biscuits and there is always writing paper and envelopes. They sell cigarettes and chocolate cheaper than you can get them at home and also all kinds of canned good, and as for selling socks that should be given away, well, the fellow who said that at home, he could never have been up the line or he wouldn't say such a thing. Those kind of fellows are only trouble-makers and another thing I have never seen socks in the Y. M. C. A. for sale.

Write in your next letter and see if you can guess where I am as you were right the last time and I am still near there.

Well I guess I have received all my mail by now. I received 19 letters yesterday, some from Ruth, Beatrice and Ida.

I was down to some sports yesterday and saw (Curley) Sharpe, Reg. Hinchey, Ernie Blaind and also (Bill) Wannacott and I was talking to a fellow out of Harry's battery, so I know where he is and will go and see him the first chance I get. Well I will close for now, hoping this finds everyone in the best of health.

Your loving son,
Frank.

William Wright Gains 20 Pounds

"I Have Never Seen Anything to Equal Tanlac", Says Toronto Machinist

"The best proof I can give that Tanlac was the right thing for me is the way it has relieved my trouble and built me up," said William Wright, a well known machinist for the Canadian Aeroplane Company, living at 46 Syfington avenue, Toronto, recently.

"I had suffered from stomach trouble for more than a year and had fallen off twenty-five pounds," he continued, "and five bottles of Tanlac has not only relieved me entirely, but I have actually gotten back twenty pounds of my lost weight, besides. Before I took it my appetite was very poor and my stomach was in such a bad fix that I couldn't eat anything without suffering terribly from indigestion. I had to give up eating the things I like best as they would hurt me so. I got so I would often skip my meals and what little I did eat I just had to force down. No matter what I ate it would sour and feel like a lump of lead in my stomach, and I would belch up sour gas and undigested food for hours after every meal. I was right sick at my stomach at times, always had a bad taste in my mouth and felt tired, sluggish and no account. I would get up in the mornings feeling so bad that I actually hated to go to work. Anyone may know how I was going down by the way I lost in weight.

"My wife and I had been reading what others had to say about Tanlac, so I decided to see what there was to it for me. Well, my appetite soon got better and before I finished my third bottle I could see a wonderful improvement in every way. I eat good, hearty meals and thoroughly enjoy them. My digestion is fine as is shown by the way I have increased in weight. My stomach trouble is a thing of the past with me and I am feeling just as well as if there had never been anything the matter with me. I notice now I always feel rested and ready for my work in the mornings. I don't have that drowsy half dead feeling like I did before I took Tanlac. I have never seen anything to equal Tanlac as a medicine and I would certainly advise anyone to give it a trial."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

NATIONAL LEAGUE POSITION

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 5—Unless there is a backdown by some one, there will be no worlds series between the penant winners in the American and National Baseball League this season.

This became known at a brief meeting of the National Commission previous to the American League meeting when Barney Dreyfuss, President of the Pittsburg Nationals, carrying proxy to represent that organization on the National Commission, stated that he had explicit instructions from his league not to consider ending the season prior to Sept. 1.

GEN. GARNET HUGHES FOR WAR INDUSTRY

LONDON, Aug. 5—Gen. Garent Hughes' new appointment is to direct a British cellulose company, which has large works in the Midlands, making substances used in airplane wings. This company has been largely financed by the Imperial treasury, and the committee on national expenditure has just issued a report criticising freely the government's financial contractual relations with the company. The committee strongly recommended that the company should be taken over by the government. General Hughes' appointment, therefore, apparently means that the recommendation has been adopted.

SEPTIC TANK FOR THE FARM

Potatoes Should Be Treated This Year to Control Scab, as the Success of This Crop Is of the Utmost Importance In the Greater Production Campaign.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE soils in many parts of the province are so depleted of their lime that they are becoming sour or acid. This is an important fact as few, if any, of our farm crops can make their best growth on a soil carrying an insufficient supply of lime. This is especially true of leguminous plants and it is probable that the frequent "killing out" of clover during the first winter is due to lack of sufficient lime.

Lime acts in several ways. It neutralizes the acids formed in the soil through the decay of organic matter; it overcomes the tenacity of clay soils, binds sands together and thus improves the physical condition of both types of soil. Lime is not only an essential constituent of the food of plants, but it also tends to liberate plant food, especially potash, from the insoluble forms in the soil, bringing them into an available state. The micro-organisms that live on the roots of the nitrogen-gathering plants cannot work in an acid soil, nor can some other forms of organisms whose function it is to gather nitrogen.

It requires about two tons of ground limestone rock to be equal to one ton of quick lime, and the prices charged for them are in about the same proportion. Furthermore two tons of the former to one ton of the latter are about the right quantities to apply.

The ground limestone rock is safe on any land in almost any quantity, and may be applied at any time of the year. On heavy clay soils quick lime, slaked before applying, may give quicker results; but it should not be applied to light sandy soils. Few materials or fertilizers can have so many good things said about them as lime and none of them cost so little money. Try out a little yourself this year.—Prof. R. Harcourt, Ontario Agricultural College.

To Prevent Potato Scab.

For seed select smooth, sound potatoes, as free as possible from scab, and disinfect by soaking them before they are cut for two hours in a solution made by adding half a pint of commercial formalin to 15 gallons of water. A couple of barrels with plugs in the sides near the bottom can be used to advantage in treating the seed. The potatoes can be placed directly in the solution or first put in crates or coarse sacks and then immersed.

After treatment spread the potatoes out on a clean floor or on the grass to dry. Wash all crates, bags, etc., which are used in handling the potatoes with the formalin solution. The same formalin solution can be used to treat successive lots of potatoes. Fifteen gallons is sufficient to treat from 20 to 25 bushels if ordinary precautions are taken not to waste too much of the fluid as each lot of tubers is dipped. If the potatoes are not all treated the same day it is advisable to make up fresh formalin for each day's work.

Corrosive sublimate (mercuric chloride) can also be used to treat potatoes to prevent scab. Soak the uncut tubers for three hours in a solution of 3 ounces of corrosive sublimate to 25 gallons of water. Corrosive sublimate is a deadly poison, and potatoes treated with it are rendered unfit for food for man or beast.

Formalin is a clear liquid disinfectant. It is a 40 p.c. solution of formaldehyde gas and water. It can be purchased from almost any druggist. It is sold under the names of formalin and formaldehyde. It is important that the purchaser, whatever name he buys it under, secured a guaranteed solution of 40 p.c. formaldehyde.

If possible plant the treated seed potatoes on clean soil, that is soil that has not produced a crop of scab by potatoes. Practice a rotation of crops. If scab is very bad it is not advisable to plant potatoes on the same land oftener than once in five years. Heavy applications of barnyard manure should not be made to the potato crop, but if necessary given at some other point in the rotation. Plant potatoes after clover sod if possible. Avoid alkali fertilizers such as lime and wood ashes.—Prof. J. E. Howitt, Ontario Agricultural College.

Septic Tank for Sewage Disposal.

This system consists ordinarily of a two-chamber concrete, water-proof tank equipped with an inlet, overflow and vent pipe, and an automatic siphon for emptying the tank of the liquid sewage from time to time, and a system of tile, called the "absorption bed," consisting of several parallel rows of 3 or 4 in. land tile laid with open joints, almost level, and shallow, and branching off from a main line of sewer pipe which connects it to the tank. For the ordinary-sized home each tank should be about 3 ft. square and 3 ft. deep, and 150 to 200 feet of land tile would be required for the absorption bed. The vitrified sewer tile is best for the main and the number of them will depend upon the distance of the absorption bed from the tank.

If this system be properly installed it will dispose of sewage in a very satisfactory manner and without endangering the water supply. Complete plans in blue-print form for installing it may be secured for the writing from the Department of Physics, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ont.—R. R. Graham, B.S.A., Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ontario.

DOWLING IS EMOTIONLESS

LONDON, Aug 5—Lance-Corp. Jos. Dowling, of the Connaught Rangers, who was landed on the coast of Ireland from a German submarine three months ago, heard without emotion Friday the sentence of the court-martial that he be executed. The sentence was read aloud to the prisoner on the parade ground at the London Tower, in the presence of the troops quartered at the Tower. The King acting on the recommendation of his advisers, has commuted the sentence to imprisonment for life. Dowling was found guilty on charges of aiding the enemy.

If precedent is followed, Dowling probably will be released after serving twenty years provided his conduct is good.

TRIED TO BLOW UP SHIPS

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 5—An anarchist plot to destroy an American troop transport is believed by the authorities to have been frustrated to-day with the arrest of a man who said he was Frederick O. Rouchat. The prisoner, caught climbing a rope ladder up the side of the ship, a former Germa liner, said he had been selected to blow up the vessel.

LAND MINUS ANIMALS

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 5—Germany is rapidly becoming an animalless land. Nearly all the cats and dogs have been killed, there is no more poultry, and the few cows left get so little food that they have to be slaughtered. Horses receive at most a couple of pounds of oats and five pounds of hay a day.

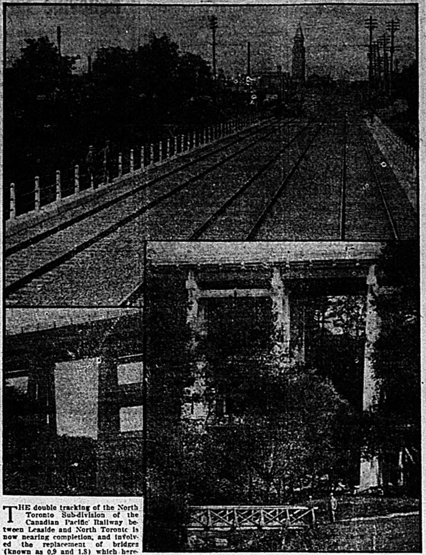
Record In Concrete Bridge-Building



THE double tracking of the North Toronto Sub-division of the Canadian Pacific Railway between Leaside and North Toronto is now nearing completion, and involved the replacement of bridges (known as 0.9 and 1.8) which heretofore had been trestles constructed of steel. Owing to the high price of steel and the difficulty of procuring it since the war began it was found that reinforced concrete competed successfully against steel.

The bridges were therefore constructed of this material and are a triumph of railway construction work, No. 0.9 being 356 feet long and 90 feet high carrying two tracks and No. 1.8 of similar dimensions but a three track structure. The length of the individual spans and the details of their construction are unprecedented in the engineering world. Previous to this no reinforced concrete beam with a length of more than about 25 feet had been attempted; the spans of these two C. P. R. structures are each from 35 to 37 feet long. These spans have been made possible by the employment of unit construction by which each span was designed as two T beams which, after being manufactured near the work, were laid side by side on the previously built reinforced concrete towers. The towers themselves are really reinforced concrete buildings constructed in the usual manner by means of wooden forms built around a steel reinforcement which was previously assembled and securely wired together. When all was in readiness the concrete was poured by means of long spouts which led in several directions from the main mixing tower. The pouring of the concrete was maintained as continuously as possible until a whole tower was completed. This work was done during the winter at a time when the temperature was below freezing point; it was performed inside of what was virtually a building erected to maintain a suitable temperature around the newly deposited concrete until it was out of danger of being damaged by frost.

These two structures are provided with narrow sidewalks and hand-rails, which enable trainmen to move conveniently along side-standing trains. The hand rails add considerably to the aesthetic appearance of the structures, which are extremely artistic in appearance and at the same time satisfactory from a general and utilitarian point of view, besides being absolutely permanent. Both are designed to carry the heaviest engines in existence with a considerable margin of safety, and are epoch-making in the art of bridge engineering inasmuch as they have demonstrated that reinforced concrete can take the place of steel for a very large number of permanent bridges.

These two structures are so solid that when passing over them on a train one gets the impression that he is on a solid fill instead of a bridge.

The method employed in the erection of the reinforced concrete spans is a specially interesting feature of the structures. Each slab, as a unit, weighed 55 tons, which was the limit load that could be handled by the C. P. R. 100 ton standard wrecking cranes. The crane engaged handled no less than 110 slabs, each 55 tons in weight, or in all something like 6,000 tons, and all this was done without a single mishap to either men or material. Another remarkable feature is that both structures were built without interruption from June, 1917, to July, 1918, which was a shorter period than would have been required to manufacture and erect similar structures in steel. Passenger and freight traffic on the C. P. R. main lines was continued without interruption during the progress of these interesting works.

SCHOOL GIRL TELLS OTHERS

How They Can Find Relief From Periodic Sufferings.

Nashua, N.H.—"I am nineteen years old and every month for two years I had such pains that I would often faint and have to leave school. I had such pain I did not know what to do with myself and tried so many remedies that were of no use. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the newspapers and decided to try it, and that is how I found relief from pain and feel so much better than I use to. When I hear of any girl suffering as I did I tell them how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me."—DELINA MARTIN, 29 Bowers St., Nashua, N.H.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, therefore is a perfectly safe remedy to give your daughter, who suffers from such painful periods as did Miss Martin.

The reason so many girls write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice, is because from their 40 years experience they have a store of knowledge which is invariably helpful.

ANNA Q. NILSON AND DOUG FAIRBANKS AT GRIFFIN'S TONIGHT

Do you think that the transfusion of blood from one person's veins into another will change the influence of one person's mind to another? This is precisely the author's contention in the big picture 'Her Surrender' which will be shown at Griffin's for the first half of the week. Ana Nilson plays the part of a Young Girl who becomes ill and the physicians say it will be impossible for her to get better unless the blood of another is transfused into her veins, an offer is made for good fresh blood and a convict in need of money answers the add and is accepted on the advice from the doctors, all goes well and the operation is successful, but upon recovery the girl's mind has changed completely, not for bad, but the love she had for a former young man, but for the convict, a rather novel story, very logical and relieved at times by much natural humorous comedy that makes the story most interesting and novel and also endeavors to answer a problem that even learned scientists have never been able to answer.

Along with this very entertaining picture our old Friend Doug Fairbanks is with us again in a new right smart one, called "Say Young Fellow." In this picture he has the role of a bright young newspaper reporter imbued with the idea that he can interview any one that his Chief assigns him to until one day he is assigned to a crabbid old Millionaire, who really hates himself and also every other living mortal, but Doug, with his perserving qualities does some very clever stunts that finally lands him into the presence of the old hideaway, much to the amazement of the old fellow. He gets the interview as per instructions, but is arrested in the getaway. A very interesting and laughable story has been constructed and from this on Doug gets into many irritating positions at times but his smiling countenance, like all newspaper reporters have, gets him out and in the end he not only lands in right with the Editor, but he also lands for himself a fair young lady's hand in marriage, and also a bank roll too. Taken all around "Say Young Fellow" should just about be the best that Doug has been seen in so far.

Another chapter of the 'Eagle's Eye' containing many new disclosures of the German Spies in America and their treacherous work is shown in this new chapter which so many are following now. Another good news film will complete a well-liked programme of photoplays. At the Palace the special picture will be a comedy drama called "Would You Forgive" It is a heart interest story containing many laughable situations and also has a lesson to all especially married folks that the old saying "To Err is human, To forgive is Divine," is still on the job and working out right with all the setbacks it has had during the great war.

The question is if your wife through no fault of her own was to suddenly leave you for another man and after a very short stay with the otehr man "Would You Forgive?" You would after you have seen this very novel photoplay at the Palace the first half of the week, along with the serial story "The Woman in the Web" and other good photoplays.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN'S STIRRING MESSAGE

Upon the anniversary of the entrance of the British Empire into the great world war, after four years of conflict and sacrifice, Canada's War Premier has written the following message to the Canadian troops and the public generally:

> "When the military despotism of Germany made its preparation for dominating the world by force, reliance was placed upon the discipline and endurance of the German people. German rulers still believe that the national spirit of their people is stronger and sterner than that of any democracy. In the end no army in such a war as this is stronger than the people behind it.
> Defence of Liberty.
> Four years ago, the nations of the British commonwealth took the fateful decision, and set themselves to the task of defending liberty and public right in the world.
> The task is not yet accomplished, but the pledge then made must not be broken. Traditions founded upon never-dying history, and the glorious achievements of a thousand years cannot be forgotten.
> We are bound alike to those who stand steadfast in our battleline, and to those not yet born, for whom we hold our heritage in trust that our resolution shall not even falter until the full accomplishment of the purpose for which this war was undertaken, and to which we concentrated our effort, our suffering and our endurance. United by the tie of a common purpose and the bond of a common sacrifice, the free nations of the British commonwealth will and must hold firm.

KEEP A-KNITTING!

The attack upon the patriotic knitters launched by Samuel S. Dale a prominent resident of the textile district of New England, has aroused a storm of protest, and his facts and figures have been attacked with force and fervor. Mr. Dale argued that the patriotic women of the land were wasting wool by hand knitting, wool urgently needed for clothing for soldiers and civilians. He also said that the soldiers on active service had no use for sweaters. Various authorities in the wool industry have replied to Mr. Dale's statements and shown that as yet there is no immediate prospect of a wool famine as the result of the labor of love of the women. Mr. Dale quotes Major Boehm, an officer connected with the American Legion, raised in Canada, as saying he never saw men wearing sweaters in active service. This statement aroused the ire of a Canadian Sergeant, Thomas M. Gourlay, who writes from the military hospital at Whitby, Ontario, as follows:

> In my opinion Mr. Dale has been misinformed. Where Major Boehm gets his information is beyond me. No Canadian soldier who has been on active service and who has been in touch with men in the trenches could possibly make such an error.
> If Major Boehm will look me up he will have the privilege of seeing an ex-soldier who has worn a sweater in France and Flanders, and who has seen many other soldiers wearing sweaters, as well as other hand-knitted articles.
> I served twenty-five months as a private and sergeant in the Canadian Army and have two brothers still serving. We are blessed with a good mother and many friends who kept us supplied with hand-knitted socks, etc. Factory and mixed goods are the cause of many sore feet, so my advice to the women of Brookline, Mass., and to any woman who has a relative or friend in active service, is to knit and keep on knitting until the war is ended.

Some American authorities seem to think that there will be a large surplus of wool after 1918 requirements are taken care of, but the Red Cross officials at Washington are not so sure about that, as indicated in a special despatch to the New York Globe from its Washington correspondent, which reads:

> The Red Cross is not yet ready to make a formal statement on knitting, but its officials are unwilling to see the women of the country discouraged in this line of war work. However, they are going slow in the matter of issuing a plea to women to knit just at this time, because they are not yet sure what the wool and yarn situation will be.
> Not long ago officials of the Red Cross got together with the War Industries Board and discussed the wool supply. It was decided that priority should be given first to the supply of wool for the various articles of clothing and outfit needed for the Army and Navy and obtained by them through purchase. It was decided that the Red Cross should have second chance to procure wool, chiefly in the form of yarn. Thirdly, the public was to get whatever was left, if any.
> Now, the wool situation is so uncertain that the Red Cross is not advised how much yarn will be apportioned to it. But for this fact it would send out a call to women to knit as much as possible. For the present officials say they will not make such an appeal. If assured of a plentiful supply they will do so. However, they are as fully convinced as ever of the value of the women's work in knitting for war purposes.
> Furthermore, they denied charges that hand-knit articles do not wear well, and declared that machine-made socks last only about a third as long as those made by hand.
> It would be a serious mistake to have our chapters stop knitting, said an official of the Red Cross. Barring lack of enough wool, knitting by the women of America will go on.

Mrs. Trotsky is reported to have arrived in a neutral country with a few million Russian rubles to protect her prune of a husband and herself against the rainy days to come. It looks as if Mrs. Trotsky was acting as the advance agent of Mr. Trotsky and seeking a haven for her lord and master where Bolsheviki would cease from troubling and the betrayed Russians could not reach him. He will have to Trotsky some Turkey trot before he will find any civilized country where he will not be ordered to move on and keep on moving. Nobody wants Trotsky, Lenine & Co., who betrayed their country for German bribes and almost bartered the freedom of the world for thirty or more pieces of silver. Judas betrayed the Saviour of the world, but these worthies tried to betray the world itself.

The enquiry is sometimes heard whether England is doing all it ought to in the war.

When we are suffering from 30,000 to 40,000 casualties a week and have kept it up for three years, when we have stood pat under the stress of air raids, and gone without meat and butter and sugar without complaining, and have sent so many men into the army that the biggest machine shops in the country are operated almost exclusively by women, and have paid taxes such as we haven't yet contemplated—then and not till then will we begin to have the right to enquire whether England is doing all it can.

Here is one of the profound utterances of Jeremiah O'Leary, on trial in New York for conspiracy:

"If Ireland were at Heligoland today, instead of where she is, there would be no England. Germany then would have an ally that, unlike Italy, would not forsake her."

And Jerry is right. In such circumstances Ireland would not forsake Germany, because Ireland would be a part of Germany, and every Irishman capable of bearing arms would be in field-grey, serving as cannon-fodder for the Kaiser. There would be no agitation against conscription then; the agitators would be accommodated in quick order with a final resting place under six feet of German soil.

The Poet's Corner

AUGUST 4, 1918.

By Robert Partridge

Another milestone marks the troubled way.
Footsore and weary, one brief pause we make
To bend our knee; then, as to Thee we pray,
We gird our armour, and the road re-take.

For far behind, the many blood-stained miles,—
All trampled by the feet of heroes slain—
Point out the path, beset with tears and trials
That we have trod, e'er steadfast 'midst the pain.

And still with purpose strong is ours to be Forever on the road, the goal in sight
That we set out to reach—GREAT VICTORY—
Then lay aside the sword, forsake the fight.

So as we pause, Thy blessing to invoke,
Grant us this day an emblem of Thy might
Give us the strength to ever bear our yoke,
To rest in peace forever in Thy sight.

POOR LITTLE DEVIL.

By Grantland Rice.

Poor little devil, ragged in the street,
On an endless journey out the way of weary feet;
Lonesome in the darkness, toiling in the light,
One among the workers in the struggle and the fight;
Little time to dream in—little less for play,
Never knows the meaning of a boyland holiday;
Poor little devil—only wish that I Knew a way to help him as he wanders by.

Poor little devil fighting it alone,
Funny that he's whistling such a cheery tone;
Little time to dream in—little time to play,
Funny he keeps singing so blithely on his way;
Queer he doesn't understand what a ragged trick
Life has turned upon him, that he doesn't ever kick;
Funny he is heppier than so many seem
With a lot to time to play and loaf about and dream;
Poor little fellow—only wish that I Knew a way to help him as he whistles by.

VIKINGS OF THE NORTH

NAME IS GIVEN TO FISHERMEN OF CANADA.

American Traveller Tells of the Brave Men and Women Who Are Making the Name of Canada's Fish Famous In All Parts of the World as a Delicious Article of Diet.

HALIFAX is the eastern emporium of Canadian fish. If you could follow the zigzag path of her water front in and out among the docks where the schooners come up from the outports, some only a few miles down the coast, others up Canso and Sydney way, some along the Perce-Gaspe and Madeleine shore in the gulf; others westerly from the haunts and tides of Fundy you would see there going on one of the greatest war works to be seen on this continent. You would see codfish in all stages flying through the air out of vessels' holds on to barrows and scales, and into packing houses, piling every room and spreading itself sky-high on the roofs with church towers and the citadel looking down on it and in the harbor the waiting carrier for "across" looking up to it in patience and faith.

You would see mackerel coming out of barrels and going into barrels, swimming in brine; with coppers tightening, with bits of rush, any leak, however small, and setting the hoops (the nimbus of the mackerel-barrel heads) in place, tightening them with the tap, tap, tap that multiplied along the pier sounds like a feu de joie "O we've got these Germans beaten—tap, tap, tap." Did you ever think what an army of men it takes to make fishing, as seen in Canada, what it is—a world power? Shipbuilders and lumberjacks, carpenters and riggers, sailmakers and caulkers, tackle-spinners and all the makers of dories, lines, hooks, tubs, corks, floats, sinkers, nets, and in fact, the thousand and one odds and ends which go to make up the paraphernalia of a fisherman's outfit? Not to speak of the actual crew—from skipper to cook, fearless, adventurous—afraid of nothing?

Well, these men, many of them, are among the Canadians manning the first-line trenches of the Allies, are the heroes of Ypres and Vimy Ridge and are holding the "air" against all comers. These fishermen are the present-day "Vikings of the north," and nature, not schools and colleges, gave them their training. Nothing beats fogs, gales, ice, snow, oil-bale calms, currents, loss of reckoning, inability to find your ship on the banks, through the fog that comes up while you are fishing in a dory alone and without food, for finding out all about a man. Out of the fish boats there Canadians stepped to the deck of the men-o'-war in the North Sea or into the ranks of the army, it mattered not to them which, but many stayed behind to fish and many young lads, not old enough for the army, came forward to fill the gaps in the fisherman ranks. So it is in Halifax one sees such a lot of old men and boys working with the fish, not to speak of the outports, which are behind the scenes so to speak, where the women work.

The fish wives of the outports are "the women's legion" of Canada!

If there are 50,000 men working in the fish on the Canadian Atlantic coast there must be at least 100,000 women, helping husbands and sons with cod and mackerel day in and day out, washing, salting, padding in brine, laying out to dry on spruce bough stages, turning it at noon, taking it in at night, handling it time and again each day in all sorts of weather for a week or a fortnight, beside tackling every day's catch as it drops to the beach from the laden dory. I had no idea what an endless lot of work fish means till I began to follow its course all around the Canadian coast, east and west. To see the women at work on the fish makes one realize what real work means, and how few of us understand it. Fish work is not only hard, much of it is unpleasant, if the women stopped to be finicky—which they never do. Their spirit is too big for that. Your Gaelic woman from the Helands of Cape Breton, with "the second sight," the modern Evangelines from St. Mary's Bay or St. Peter's, the habitant woman of Havre Aubert or Perce, the Channel Islander from La Baie de Chaleur, the Scotch Nova Scotian from Digby way, are too sure of themselves to turn up their noses at fish.

The tale of the salmon on the Pacific coast is equally human. Here it is a tale of the Japanese and their families. Exiles from home. It is not within the scope of this article to say whether "yellow" labor is the right thing or not, we only know that at this moment of stress in the world's history, the work is everything, and by the fortunes of war these Japs of the Pacific coast fish-trade are for the moment "allies" with the Canadian east in placing Canadian fish into the world's otherwise hungry mouth.

The Japs have established themselves on Lluiu Island at a place called Stevenson, commanding the entrance to the Fraser river. The island is lowland and it has had to be dyked. Beside the canals the Japs have established their little homes, bare boarded places devoid of paint, yet with every little old tin or paid or box filled with earth and blooming with nasturtiums and chrysanthemums about the doorways or by the little railed-off gang-plank crossing the canal. The Japanese women work in the fish as well as the men. The men in the boats with the salmon nets, the women in the canneries, their babies tied up in a shawl on their back. Canned fish is so easy to handle in transportation that the demand is already great and this year greater than ever, but for reasons unknown.

Fismes, the Great German storehouse on the Aisne-Marne battle front has been taken by French and American troops.

An Energetic Canadian.

Among various Canadian women who have received recognition for splendid war services Madame Chase Casgrain, of Ottawa, has been awarded a gold medal from Marquis de Vogue, vice-president of the Society of Agriculture in France. The medal, which is an unusually handsome one, bears the following inscription: "Services eminent rendus aux agriculteurs Francais victimes de a Guerre, 1918."

Madame Casgrain was the first woman in Canada appealed to to work for the relief of devastated regions in France. Through the Madeline de Vescheres Chapter of the I.O.D.E. in Ottawa, of which she is regent, Madame Casgrain has been enabled to send over $15,000 for this work.

She recently returned from a trip to the coast, covering some 9,000 miles, lecturing at various centres where she told them of the deplorable conditions in France. "If the east responds like the west we have prospects of a wonderful fund," said Madame Casgrain. "We are looking forward to at least one million francs." Madame Casgrain has gone to France, where she will conduct a canteen under the French Military Red Cross, where President Marquis de Noailles has established a hut to feed the people from the devastated regions.

Friction Between Services.

Friction in Canada between the chaplain service and the Y.M.C.A. is indicated in the relations between these two services in France. The chaplains are indignant at the claim of the Y.M.C.A. to have organized the Vimy Ridge University. This excellent educational course originated with Revs. Clarence McKinnon, of Halifax, and Dr. Oliver, Saskatchewan University. Both the chaplains and the Y.M.C.A. are doing good work in France, and both services are required. It is true the Y.M.C.A. gains considerable funds by sales at a large profit, but they also aid the men with free entertainments, etc. The work of the chaplains of the army is unequalled for sacrifice and for sympathetic aid for the men. The chaplains' work at Passchendaele called forth generous praise from the higher command as well as the rank and file. The quarrel between the two services is deeply regretted for if a settlement is not reached the work of both will be handicapped with serious loss to the men. All last winter, before Lens, the chaplains were continually in the front trenches, looking after the comforts of the men. Funds for the chaplains' work are inadequate, and there should be an equal division of contributions for the work of the chaplains and the Y.M.C.A. in France.

Colored Sprinter In Khaki.

Army Howard, the great colored sprinter from the west, who was a member of Canada's 1912 Olympic team and also held down third base in one of the big ball teams, is now at Hamilton in khaki as a member of the Railway Construction Corps.

"Circus Shoes" Barred.

The Shoemen's Convention has decided that no more freak shoes shall be made during the war. Red, green, yellow, brown and other "circus shoes" will not be made this season.

FOOD SUPPLIES AFTER THE WAR

ANY movement that has for its object the encouragement of the live stock and allied industries is worthy of commendation at the present time. For many years after the conclusion of the war the people of Europe will be largely dependent upon the farmers of the Dominion of Canada for their meat and dairy supplies. The replenishment of the depleted herds of Europe will also cause a demand for live stock on the American continent such as has never been experienced before. It follows then that the farmer who is maintaining or increasing the number of his live stock at the present time is the one most likely to benefit by after war conditions.

Western Canada, despite its enviable record for grain crops, is preeminently a live stock country. In addition to having sufficient land suitable for the growing of grain crops to supply much of the needs of the world, the three prairie provinces: Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, are capable of supporting millions of cattle, sheep and hogs. Many of the settlers, however, have found it difficult to get a start, or have not been convinced of the possibilities of live stock, but these obstacles are being gradually overcome by the assistance of the provincial government, and such companies as the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Although still in an experimental stage the schemes that have been adopted in Manitoba and Alberta are proving very successful. Through its Department of Agriculture the Manitoba Government buys cows and sells them on credit to farmers. During the first year or so some 3,500 cows were supplied in this manner to farmers. Almost the whole of them went to one part of the province and the success of the scheme is seen in the fact that in these districts four new creameries and two cheese factories have been established. Besides, the creameries of Winnipeg also report larger shipments of milk and cream from this territory. At the present time the government is not able to deliver cows as fast as applications for them are received and has now orders on hand for about 3,000 animals—a fact which shows the popularity of the scheme.

The plan adopted by the Government of Alberta is somewhat different from that of Manitoba in its method of operation. It is embodied in an act of parliament, which, briefly stated, provides that any five or more farmers may make a joint promissory note for an amount not to exceed five hundred dollars for each signer for a term of five years. The Provincial Treasurer guarantees the payment of these notes. The money thus borrowed must be invested in female cattle, except that the borrowers may if they choose invest not more than ten per cent. of their total amount in a pure bred bull. The cattle must be branded with the government brand, and, with their female progeny, remain the property of the government until the note is paid. The male progeny becomes the property of the purchaser immediately. This scheme has been in operation a little more than a year, and already more than seven thousand head of cows have been placed in the hands of farmers. Not only has the scheme enabled them to increase their incomes considerably and enhance the prosperity of the province, but it has also shown the possibilities of live stock in the country, with the result that they are being acquired in increasing numbers by farmers outside of the plan as well.

By reason of the enormous crop of fodder that can be raised in the irrigation districts that are being developed by the Canadian Pacific Railway in Southern Alberta, the raising of live stock is one of the most profitable branches of farming there. This is recognized by the company and in order to encourage the practice of mixed farming among settlers on irrigated land, it assists buyers of its lands, if they are able to comply with certain conditions, by advancing live stock to the value of $1,000, on a cash payment of twenty per cent, credit being given for the balance.

All these schemes are proving of great benefit to the settler in Western Canada. Their full value to the country will not be apparent for a number of years, but meanwhile their influence is demonstrating to the settler that the possibilities of live stock raising in Western Canada are equally as good, if not better even, than the growing of grain.

Henri de Courcelles had innumerable faults, but he had loved this girl with all his heart, and, now that it was too late, Maraquita semed to realize it for the first time. There was another regret, too, that intruded itself into her married life, a regret that semed to grow with the days, and assume such an inconceivable proportions that she was tempted to cry out that she could bear it no longer, but must at all risks rush back to San Diego and see her child. Sometimes the unhappy young mother would dream that the infant was dying, and wake up with tears upon her cheek; sometimes that it really belonged to Lizzie, and she had lost the right to call it hers; and sometimes that she had it to her heart, and was proud and fond of it like other mothers, until she discovered it was a poisonous asp, stinging the bosom on which it lay. Such thoughts and reams were not good for the young bride to indulge in and she grew paler and thinner every day. Sir Russell called in a doctor, who declared Lady Johnstone's condition to be due to weakness, consequent of her late attack of fever and advised her immediate return to San Diego, as possessing a higher and more bracing air than Santa Lucia. Sir Russel sought his wife's rooms, all fuss and anxiety on account of her low spirits, and communicated the medical man's opinion to her. They had been married now for three weeks and the Governor had already come to the conclusion that a domestic life was not all roses. He found his beautiful Maraquita rather petulant at times, and disposed to have her own way. She was not very affectionate either, and flouted his attempts at love-making in a manner sufficent to cure the most ardent lover. He was disappointed certainly; he had imagined women were more open to their husbands' advances; but, after all, he knew very little about sex, and was quite ready, as yet, to lay the failure at his own door. He was not fit, he told himself, to me the companion of such an innocent, guileless creature; she felt the difference between his society and that she had left behind her. The position was new and strange to her. She would be her own sweet self again when they returned to San Diego and she was restored to her parents' arms. The alacrity with which Maraquita assented to his proposal to go home confirmed his sentiments uopn the subject. It would have been somewhat of a shock to him could he have read her thoughts on the occasion! but how few of us could afford to read the mind of our dearest friend, without fear. Maraquita's face glowed, and her heart beat faster, as she pictured herself settled at Government House. She would have a chance then of seeing Lizzie again—perhaps of seeing Henri de Courcelles. Whilst it la yin his power to deprive her of her promised dignity, she had dreaded his presence, and hoped he was far away from San Diego; but now that her position as Lady Johnstone was secure, and no one could dethrone her, she began to crave for the excitement of seeing her lover again. Weak and vacillating as she had been as Maraquita Courtney, she was even worse as Lady Johnstone, for now her weakness threatened to become a crime. Her depression of spirits and her feverish anxiety were so patent, that the first time Mrs. Courtney was alone with her daughter, she taxed her with the change.

"Whatever is the matter with you, my dear child?" she exclaimed; "you don't seem half so happy as I expected to see you. Here you are the Governor's wife, and the lady of the highets rank in San Diego and yet you seem quite melancholy. You don't mean to tell me that you are disappointed, or your marriage has not proved all you expected it to be?"

"Oh, no mamma! I suppose it's all right. I've got the position and the money, and no one can have been such a fool as to think I married a bald-headed old man like Sir Russell for anything else."

Mrs. Courtney lifted her hands and eyebrows in surprise.

"My dear, my dear! remember he's the Governor!"

"How can I forget it? Isn't it dinned into my ears from sunrise to sunset! Of course he's the Governor! I am sure he need be, for he's very little else! But I'm afraid that fact is not sufficient for one's happiness."

"My darling, what more can you possibly want? A splendid house, and any number of servants, equipages, and horses, jewels, dresses, ornaments and the whole island at your feet! Why, I think you are the luckiest girl I ever heard of."

But her eloquence was interrupted by Maraquita flinging herself headlong on a couch, and sobbing out,—

""I'm not! I'm not! I'm as unhappy as I can be! I wish I had never contented to give up my poor Henri! I dream of him every night!"

But at that confession, her mother's attempt at consolation changed to righteous scorn.

"Then you must be the wickedest girl alive, Maraqita! Dreaming of any man but your husband, and not married a month yet. You ought to be ashamed to mention such a thing, even to your mother! And that wretched low-born overseer too—a half-caste Spaniard, with neither birth nor money. I am utterly surprised at you!"

"Mamma, you sha'n't abuse him! He may be everything you say, but he is gloriously handsome; and he loved me, and I ought to have married him! Why didn't you manage it some way? You knew all about us, and you could have perzuaded papa to settle something on him, and let us live with you at Beauregard, and then it would have been all right, and I should have been much happier with him and my poor little baby—"

"Maraquita! are you mad?" cried her mother, clapping her hand before her daughter's mouth; "or do you want every official in Government House to hear your shameful secret? Good heavens, it is enough to make me regret I ever interfered to save you from your own folly! If you confess the truth now, you will make matters seem a thousand times worse than if you had made the low marriage you seem to hanker after. It would be a nice scandal for the island, to hear that the Governor had repudiated you on account of your former light conduct! Then you would lose everything—reputation, position, and wealth, and gain nothing in exchange."

"I could go to Henri," said Maraquita doggedly, for she possessed one of those persitent natures that can work themselves up into a belief and she was working herself up to believe that she was still passionately in love with De Courcelles, and ready to sacrifice everything for him.

"That you certainly could not," returned Mrs. Courtney, determined to cut her folly in the bud, "for he is not in San Diego."

"Where is he then?" exclaimed Quita, raising herself from the sofa cushion.

"He has gone to America," replied her mother, ignoring her regard for truth so long as she drove this nonsense out of Maraquita's mind.

"To America!" repeated the girl. "Oh, why did he go there? What is he going todo?"

"That is his business, not ours; but I believe his family live in the States. However, he will never return to San Diego, and so you see how little you will gain, and how much you may lose, by indulging in this sentimental folly. Indeed, I cannot understand you, Quita! Your one desire last month was to hear that this most objectionable young man had left the island, and now you are moaning after him as if he had been your dearest friend instead of your worst enemy."

"He loved me!" sobbed Maraquita.

"I don't think he did love you," rejoined Mrs. Courtney. "No man who loved you would have treated you in so dishonorable a manner. However, he has been ready enough to run away from you, and now the best thing you can do is to forget all about him. Indeed, you must compel yourself to do so, my dear. You owe it not only to your husband, but to your father and mother. And just think what a wicked thing you are doing too—crying after another man when you are Sir Russell's wife. You horrify and grieve me beyond measure!"

Yes, Mrs. Courtney was perfectly right!

It was both weak and wicked of Lady Johnstone to let old memories obtrude themselves upon her wedded life, but she had been far weaker and wickeder when she gave them up against her inclination. An eligible marriage is no cure for an ill-placed love and the laws neither of God nor man have any power to quench passion in the human heart. They may help the victim to keep it under, but it is the one feeling that refuses to be silent until it has died a natural death. Whilst poor faulty Maraquita believed that Henri de Courcelles was lying in ambush somewhere ready to appear before her at any moment, holding the pledge of their love in his arms, as he did upon her wedding-day, she had a great fear mingled with her insane desire to see him again; but now that her mother assured her he had left San Diego for ever, and she would never be able to ask his forgiveness, her dread of him vanished, to give place to a morbid regret. She wept so much and ate so little during the first days of her installation at Government House, that Mrs. Courtney (who had been invited by Sir Russell to stay with her daughter) became quite seriously alarmed for the consequences of her grief, and tried all she could to rouse her by a description of the splendid preparations which were being made for the ball to be given in honor of their return.

Starvation For German People

Dr. Beland Tells of Conditions Existing in Enemy Country

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 5—Dr. Henri S. Beland, former postmaster-general of Canada, who was a prisoner in Germany for more than three years, arrived here to-day on a British liner. He is on his way home, having been liberated several months ago.

Dr. Beland notified the Canadian authorities last May that he had been released. His message, which came from Holland, said he was on the way to Canada.

Dr. Beland declared that food conditions were so serious when he left Germany that starvation may be the fate of some sections unless there is an early termination of the war. He attributed the large number of deaths in the German prison camps to disease by poor food and harsh treatment.

Dr. Beland fell into German hands when the Teuton invaders captured Antwerp in 1914. He was serving at the time as surgeon at a Belgian seaport.

Several attempts were made by the British and Canadian authorities to obtain his release through the exchange of prisoners, but none was successful until early this year.

In 1915 the German Government offered to liberate Dr. Beland upon agreement for like action by Great Britain in the case of Franz von Rintelen, then a prisoner in England and now serving sentence in this country for plotting destruction of allied ships leaving American ports. The proposed exchange did not materialize.

GIVE SOLDIERS A LIFT

TORONTO, Aug. 4—The American Motor League has instituted a new and novel method of aiding soldiers and sailors in the United States. Mayor Church to-day received from the organization one of the large circular stickers which are placed on front of each automobile, with a large heading "Patriotic War Service," under which the words, "I will give any soldier or sailor a lift, who is going my direction.' In this way thousands of soldiers are assisted in their transportation to various points in all the the large cities of the States.

ayor Church is highly pleased with the idea, and will see if some similar method canot be adopted in Toronto.

CANADA.

PROCLAMATION

GEORGE the FIFTH, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, KING, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

To all to whom these presents shall come or whom the same may in any wise concern,—GREETING:

A Proclamation of conditional amnesty respecting men belonging to Class 1 under the Military Service Act, 1917, who have disobeyed our Proclamation of 13th October, 1917, or their orders to report for duty, or are deserters or absent without leave from the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

E. L. NEWCOMBE, Deputy Minister of Justice, Canada. WHEREAS considerable numbers of men belonging to Class I under our Military Service Act, 1917, called out on active service in our Canadian Expeditionary Force for the defence of Canada under Our Proclamation of 13th October, 1917, although they have thus become by law soldiers enlisted in the Military Service of Canada,

Have failed to report for duty as lawfully required of them under the said Military Service Act and the regulations thereunder, including the Order in Council duly passed on April 20 last,

Or have deserted,

Or absented themselves without leave from our Canadian Expeditionary Force,

And it is represented that the very serious and unfortunate situation in which these men find themselves is due in many cases to the fact that, notwithstanding the information and warning contained in Our Proclamation aforesaid, they have misunderstood their duty or obligation, or have been misled by the advice of ill-disposed, disloyal or seditious persons.

AND WHEREAS we desire, if possible, to avoid the infliction of the heavy penalties which the law imposes for the offences of which these soldiers have thus been guilty, and to afford them an opportunity within a limited time to report and make their services available in Our Canadian Expeditionary Force as is by law their bounden duty, and as is necessary for the defence of Our Dominion of Canada.

NOW KNOW YE that we in the exercise of Our powers, and of Our good will and pleasure in that behalf, do hereby proclaim and declare and cause to be published and made known THAT THE PENALTIES OF THE LAW WILL NOT BE IMPOSED OR EXACTED as against the men who belong to Class 1 under Our Military Service Act, 1917, and who have disobeyed Our Proclamation aforesaid; or who have received notice from any of Our registrars or deputy registrars to report for duty on a day now past and have failed so to report; or who, having reported and obtained leave of absence, have failed to report at the expiry of their leave, or have become deserters from Our Expeditionary Force, PROVIDED THEY REPORT FOR DUTY ON OR BEFORE THE TWENTY FOURTH DAY OF AUGUST 1918.

AND WE DO HEREBY STRICTLY WARN AND SOLEMNLY IMPRESS UPON ALL SUCH MEN, and as well those who employ, harbour, conceal or assist them in their disobedience, that, if they persist in their failure to report, absence or desertion until the expiry of the last mentioned day, they will be pursued and punished with all the rigour and severity of the law, SUBJECT TO THE JUDGMENT OF OUR COURTS MARTIAL WHICH WILL BE CONVENED TO TRY SUCH CASES or other competent tribunals: and also that those who employ, harbour, conceal or assist such men will be held strictly accountable as offenders and subject to the pains, penalties and forfeitures in that behalf by law provided for their said offence.

Provided however that nothing contained in this Our Proclamation is intended to release the men aforesaid from their obligation to report for duty as soon as possible or to grant them immunity from arrest or detention in the meantime for the purpose of compelling them to perform their military duty; Our intention being merely to forego or remit the penalties heretofore incurred for failure to report, absence without leave or desertion incurred by those men of the description aforesaid who shall be in the proper discharge of their military duties on or before the said twenty-fourth day of August, 1918.

Of all of which Our loving subjects and all others whom these presents may concern are hereby required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Canada to be hereunto affixed. Witness: Our Right Trusty and Right Entirely Beloved Cousin and Counsellor, Victor Christian William, Duke of Devonshire, Marquess of Hartington, Earl of Devonshire, Earl of Burlington, Baron Cavendish of Hardwicke, Baron Cavendish of Keighley, Knight of Our Most Noble Order of the Garter; One of Our Most Honourable Privy Council; Knight Grand Cross of Our Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George; Knight Grand Cross of Our Royal Victorian Order; Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of Our Dominion of Canada.

At Our Government House, in Our City of OTTAWA, this FIRST day of AUGUST, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighteen, and in the ninth year of Our Reign.

By Command,

Thomas Mulvey

Under-Secretary of State.

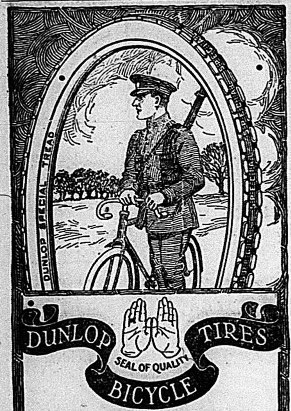
MADE IN CANADA



Dunlop Means "Original"

When you hear a bicycle owner say his tires are the original, not the imitation, he means that all other wired-on bicycle tires took Dunlop Tires for their model, because Dunlop was first in the field.

The Pneumatic Tire Industry rests on the name "Dunlop."

And next in importance to your realizing that fact is the necessity for realizing this one: Dunlop Tires from the first—1894—were made by a patented process.

We found the way to make them right—a way that would impart to them such road mastery, such superiority of toughness and resiliency that they would sell eight times faster than any other make of bicycle tires. Eighty per cent. of all bicycle tires sold in Canada are Dunlop.

AN EXPENSIVE TRIP

Benjamin Cole, who claims Trenton as his home, yesterday drove to this city, where he got into trouble which cost him upwards of $250. He drove a horse and rig about the city whilst in an intoxicated condition, and when he was apprehended and searched a partially filled bottle of liquor was found upon him. At police court this morning he was fined $200 and costs for having liquor at a place other than his residence, and $10 and costs for being intoxicated. The fines and costs were paid.

AVIATORS HURT

Saturday morning Lieut. Ackey and Cadet Roberts of the Royal Air Forces Camp Mohawk, were taken to Queen's Military Hospital, Kingston, suffering from injuries received at the camp on Wednesday. The accident occurred when the plane in which the two aviators were flying, crashed into a building. Lieut. Ackey had his head badly cut and received other injuries about the body, while Cadet Roberts was also cut up about the head and sustained a broken leg. The men are resting well, and will eventually recover.

MAJOR SHARPE DROWNED

It is believed Major W. J. Sharpe, casualty officer for M. D. 3, was drowned early on Saturday morning about half a mile beyond Kingston Junction in the weeds of the Cataraqui River. His clothes, cane, cap and watch were found neatly folded, and a towel nearby led to the conclusion that he had been bathing and had gone beyond his depth. Major Sharpe was a captain in the 21st Battalion, later returning to be bombing instructor at Barriefied Camp in the summer of 1916. He has been in control of the casualty office since the first of the year, and was a popular staff officer with all ranks. His wife and two small children survive.

The Back Aches

Possibly you do not realize that this indicates derangement of the kidneys. Neglect usually means the development of Bright's disease. You know how dreadfully painful and fatal that is.

There is quick relief for the kidneys in the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This medicine is known in the great majority of homes as the greatest of regulators.

An auto pump and a bunch of keys found upon the street are at the police station awaiting owners.

DELIBERATELY DROVE INTO CAR

Mr. George A. Bennett of this city, was yesterday afternoon driving his car along Victoria Avenue, when a man named Cole driving a horse and rig, deliberately ran into the car, causing some damage to the guards. Cole was subsequently arrested and fined for driving about the street in an intoicated condition. When the vehicle collided with the car the latter was almost at a standstill or a serious result may have occurred.

ALLEGED THEFT OF CAR

George G. Brown, a young man, was this morning before Magistrate Masson charged with the theft of a Grey Dort automobile, the property of Mr. Herbert Carter of this city. Brown at an early hour on Saturday morning took the car from a garage where he was working, and drove it to Napanee and thence to Harrowsmith, where he was apprehended. The accused contended that Carter gave him permission to use the car, but the latter denied the statement. The magistrate enlarged the case until the 14th inst. Mr. Carnew for Crown and Mr. F. E. O'Flynn for the accused.

SOCIAL AT MYREHALL.

The Myrehall Red Cross held a very successful social at the home of Mr. Wm. Goodfellow, 8th Con. of Tyendinaga, on the evening of July 24th and on account of the fine weather a large crowd assembled. The Rev. Mr. White of Plainfield acted as chairman, in his usual pleasing style. Mr. McIntosh and Mr. Johnstone of Belleville, gave some bag pipe selections that were much appreciated, while Mr. Elliott's eloquent speech received the profound attention of all present. Mr. J. Gow and Miss Ida Pitman of Latta, gave some excellent music, and one of the features of the programme was a flag drill by eight girls in costume. The ladies of the Red Cross furnished an excellent lunch. The luck ticket for the autograph quilt was won by Mr. D. Wellman of Latta. Proceeds of socal exceeded $200.

WILL ADMINISTER ANGLO-AMERICAN DRAFTING

A former Brockville man, Captain Charles A. Botsford, is to have charge of the work at Ottawa in connection with the administration of the Military Service draft convention which has been agreed upon between Great Britain, Canada and the United States. Captain Botsford, who is well known locally, enlisted for overseas service as a private in the 80th Battalion, stationed at Belleville. He rose to the rank of lieutenant in that unit and was then transferred to the 156th Leeds and Grenville battalion in which he was promoted to the rank of captain. Later still he served as assitant adjutant of the 264th Battalion quartered at Halifax, N. S. Last year Captain Botsford was appointed military instructor at Alleghany College, Pa., and returned from this point some time ago. Latterly he has been a resident of Prescott and has been engaged in writing upon military matters for periodicals. Capt. Botsford is a son of Mrs. C. W. Botsford, Devonshire Apartments.

DIED AT NINETY EIGHT

Tweed's oldest resident in the person of Paul Cournovea, Sr., who in April last celebrated the 98th anniversary of his birth, is dead. The deceased was born in Sorel, Quebec, was a typical Frenchman and one of the hardy type, having throughout his long life enjoyed the blessings of good health, never being afflicted with illness of any consequence. An example of his evident immunity from sickness was illustrated in the early spring of 1915, when he was thrown from a canoe while trapping muskrat and was compelled to swim for nearly half a mile amongst floating cakes of ice, and strange to say did not suffer any after effects, not even a cold. He moved to Hungerford 61 years ago and settled on the farm now occupied by Mr. Clarence Elliott, west of the village. After some years of residence there he removed with his family to Bogart, where he resided up to a few years ago, when he moved to Tweed and made his home with his son, Mr. Peter Cournoyea, Sr. He was the last surviving member of a family of seven children, most of whom lived to a ripe old age. He was a farmer by occupation and was known far and wide for his hospitality and good citizenship. He was predeceased by his wife 27 years. Of a family of ten children, five sons and two daughters survive, namely: Peter, of Tweed, Paul and Felix of Bogart, Albert of Stoco, Joseph of Sulphide, Mrs. James Goulah, of Bogart, and Mrs. John Cournoyea, of French Settlement. Besides his children, his descendents number thirty-eight grandchildren, all of whom reside within this district.

A DOUBLE OFFENCE.

On Saturday night the police placed under arrest a foreigner who was in an intoxicated condition and was driving about the streets. A bottle containing liquor was also found in the vehicle.

THE FRIENDLY ROAD.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Coates, of Brockville, were in the city this morning, en route to Stratford on a mortor car trip. They are taking their time and enjoying many side trips, besides camping out each night, as they carry a tent and complete camping outfit.

DEATH OF A LAD.

William J. Rigby, aged 3 years and 4 months, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Rigby, residing at 316 Bleecker Avenue, died on Saturday evening. The lad had been ill for some days. He was a bright boy and a pupil of Queen Victoria School. Deceased was born in Toronto and came here with his parents some five years ago.

STUDENTS BAPTIZED.

At Oak Hill pond yesterday six international Bible Students were baptized. One was from Trenton and the remainder from Stirling and vicinity. A number were present to witness the ceremony. Mr. Whelpton of Hamilton was present and delivered an address relative to the ceremony.

A MESSAGE FROM THE AIR

An aviator flying low over the centre of the city Saturday evening scattered broadcast paper invitations to Belleville citizens to attend an athletic meet at Rathbun Acrodrome Wednesday afternoon, held under the auspices of the 42nd Wing R. A. F. The invitations are printed on colored paper with the caption "A Message from the Air (Force)."

BROCKVILLE'S GRAND OLD MAN

Brockville's grand old man, W. H. Comstock, ex-M. P., to-day enters upon his 89th year in robust health and keen intellect. Born at Batavia, Genesee County, N.Y., on August, 1, 1830, he is a son of the late Edwin P. Comstock and has been head of the W. H. Comstock Co. for over half a century. Mr. Comstock has been a resident of Brockville since 1864 and during that period has occupied nearly every office within the gift of his fellow-citizens, having acted as mayor, town councillor, public school trustee, etc. At the celebrated bye-election of April 20, 1899, for the House of Commons he defeated the late Hon. Peter White, of Pembroke, for the riding of Brockville and occupied a seat in the House until the dissolution of parliament in 1900. Mr. Comstock is also president of the Recorder Printing Company, Limited.

HORSE RAN ACROSS R'Y. BRIDGE

A sentational runaway occurerd yesterday morning about six o'clock when a horse attached to a Pine Grove Dairy wagon, was frightened and bolted while the driver was delivering milk in a house on Wharf street. The horse made quick time to the C. N. R. crossing, where the gates were down and a large C. P. R. freight train proceeding eastward and occupying the C. P. R. side of the bridge. Clash into the gates went the horse and then blocked by the train, swerved on to the C.N.R. bridge and dashed across the C.N.R. bride in record time, never making a miss-step, and negotiating the open trestlework without accident. After crossing the bridge safely the frightened animal took to the road, headed homeward, shedding milk and cream bottles and cans at every jump.

ACQUITTED ON SEDITION

The charge of sedition brought against the Rt. Rev. Bishop Budka of Winnipeg, Ruthenian Catholic bishop of all Canada, and the Rev. Fr. Bosky, a Belgian priest of Yorkton, came up for hearing before the court at Hafford last week. The Crown failed to establish the charge and the case was immediately dismissed. G. O. McHugh, barrister, acted as chief counsel for the defence, being assisted by J. D. Brown, Rosthern, and W. B. O'Regan of Yorkton. Mr. McHugh made a very able argument in behalf of the defence, contending that the statements alleged to have been made by defendants were not seditious. He traced the history of this most interesting branch of the law and showed that the British courts are without satisfactory definition of seditious intention and that our Canadian courts are still obliged to look to Britain for such definition.—North Battlefield News.

Mr. McHugh is a former resident of Belleville.

ANNESTY FOR DEFAULTERS

Attention is called to the advertisement in this issue of the Government proclamation granting annesty to defaulters under the Military Service Act until August 24th. Those who report before that date will not be subject to punishment of any kind for not reporting when called.

GIVEN SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Sadie Maracle and Mary Brown, two females from Deseronto, who were apprehended her on a charge of vagrancy, were this morning by Magistrate Masson allowed their liberty, but a suspended sentence for one year in the Reformatory is being held over them pending good behavior. Both promised to return home and sin no more.

CAMP MEETING SERVICES

Many from the city and vicinity yesterday attended the camp meeting services which are being conducted at Oak Hill Pond by Evangelist Sharpe. A tabernacle capable of seating 1,200 people was dedicated with appropriate ceremony. The attendance was such that the building was altogether inadequate to accommodate all who desired to attend the service. It is estimated that upwards of 5,000 persons were upon the grounds.

BOWLING AT CORBYVILLE

A meeting was held last Friday evening at the office of the H. Corby Distillery Company, Corbyville, Ont., for the purpose of organizing a lawn bowling club. The following officers weer elected: Patron, Sir Mortimer Davis; honorary president, Mr. J. R. Orton; president, Mr. D. J. Brennan; vice-president, Mr. W. J. Hume; secretary-treasurer, Mr. J. F. Munroe.

ASK LARGER ALLOWANCES ..

WINNIPEG, Aug. 5—Soldiers' wives and dependents of this city, are starting a nation-wide movement demanding that they receive an allowance of $100 per month instead of $42 which is now given them. This was the decision reached at a mass meeting held in the Labor Temple, at which over 300 wives and dependents of soldiers attended. The trades and labor forces of this city declare that they will back them up to the limit, and will interest the whole of organized labor of Canada in his much-needed increase in the allowance paid by the Government to the soldiers' dependents.

ALLIED SOLDIERS PASS THRU CHARNEL HOUSES

PARIS, Aug. 5—Allied forces in pursuit of the Germans have passed through veritable charnel houses, strewn with the debris of war. Bodies of men and horses are mingled with monster ammunition dumps, some partially exploded and others intact. Bodies of Germans found in clusters beyond the range of the allied artillery inflicted on the fleeing columns by the French, British and American aviators.

GERMANS PERPETRATE ACTS OF VANDALISM

LONDON, Aug. 5—Evidence accumulates that during their brief stay in the Marne salient the Germans have been again indulging in wholesale acts of vandalism. In a message sent from French army headquarters, Reuter's correspondent gives details of their conduct while in possession of Chateau Thierry.

The Germans were in the town for some time and apparently thought they would remain there indefinitely. When they found they would have to give it they apparently determined to take the only vengeance in their power. The injuries that have been inflicted on the town are such as could not be the result of shelling, the correspondent points out, as those houses which suffered most were entirely uninjured by shell, shrapnel or bullet.

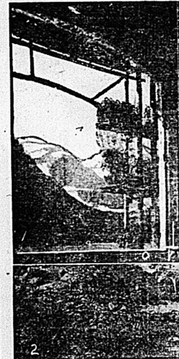
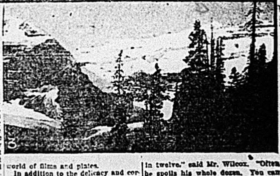
IMPRISONING LOUISE





(1) View from the Chateau verandah.
(2) Giant Steps in the Paradise Valley.
(3) At Lake Louise.

NOBODY ever gets accustomed to Lake Louise. You come down in the morning, thinking of canteloups and coffee. And at the stairhead you have your first—yes, it is a smashing glimpse of the lake.

No water could be so greenly-blue, so shot with amethyst half-shadows, so blent with undersurface diamonds and banded agates and shivering sapphires. The cinder cliffs to the left make a frame for it — the jade slopes to the right give it fire by their sombre contrast. But that dazzling, unbelievable whiteness that froth over the top of the world at the lake's end—that soaring, singing, living wonder that somebody tethered to the earth by the process of naming it the Victoria Glacier—it's unrealler than Louise itself.

But the artist looks at it with just the same worshipful hopelessness, at least so says Walter D. Wilcox, F.R.G.S., who got his first sight of Louise in 1891, and has been an annual pilgrim ever since. It was just an annex of Banff then, this wonder lake, and there weren't a hundred people in the east who had ever seen it.

"You can't paint it," declared Mr Wilcox this year, out of twenty-seven season knowedge of its dancing modiness. "You get your clouds and your rock colors in. Then you try for the water. But the clouds you painted are gone and this lake is quite different in tone from the lake that went with your light effect. You might work for years and never see the precise combination repeated that you tried to get—and got a maddening half of."

Mr. Wilcox made his second visit with some college friends in 1893, and this time he brought a camera, a little 5 x 7, that laid the foundation for all his future reputation in the world of films and plates.

In addition to the delicacy and correctness of his photographs, Mr. Wilcox can claim to have taken the largest picture ever achieved in Canada at a height of 10,000 feet. This is his panorama from Mt. Niblock with an IXX 14 camera, and so real looking that a hot day makes you want to put it up beside the electric fan as a chill-producer.

Mr. Wilcox's famous Lake Ohara study in another bit of wizardry.

"It took me just four years to get that one," he told me. "I believe I brought the camera back at least ten times, and when I finally had a promising day, I waited from eight till twelve o'clock for the psychological moment that brought the light I wanted on the water and the mountains."

Another scene the picture-maker coveted was the sparkling Giant's Steps in Paradise Valley.

"I worked on that falls for two days and I had a man to help me. We cut down a tree that interfered with the camera and we tidied up heaven knows how much rubbish. I don't believe in making a scene artificial but I do believe in making it artistically natural."

"The beginner doesn't get one plate in twelve," said Mr. Wilcox. "Often he spoils his whole dozen. You can be 'a little careless' and still have some sort of result in ordinary photography. But in color work, it's all or nothing.

"Nowadays I'm going over all the old beauty spots here in the new way. I have the composition worked out from my experiments of years ago. The precise location of the camera is marked in every case. All that I have to do is to wait for the right light effect."

Sixty-two thousand people came to see Louise last year. Wont it be wonderful, folks, when the time comes that will give every pilgrim the chance to carry it away with him, imprisoned in a little gorgeous opalcolored miniature!

But alas, even that wont altogether satisfy the true Louise-lover. You can't photograph the spice of the firs, the cool breath that blows straight from the glistening heart of the glacier, the puff of snow-spray and the long rumble that spells avalanche to the tranced watcher on the hotel verandah. And you can't have a fairy movie-man standing behind your wee autochrome, stirring the shifting shadows of cloudland into the spell of your lake. R. T.

FLANKS OF ENEMY TURNED BY ALLIES

PARIS, Aug. 5—Both flanks of the German forces between Rhemis and Soissons appear to have been turned. The French have forced a crossing of the Vesle, West of Rhemis. German reinforcements are reported arriving in the Soissons sector from the north. The allies continue their advance, according to latest reports, although it is held within prudent limits. The allied left wings has moved faster than the right and further progress in the Soissons region might expose it to a counter-attack from the enemy.

ons of Bombs On German Posts

tish Airmen Shell Stations at Feres and Stienwerck

LONDON, Aug. 6—The official tatement on aerial operations issued last night says:

"Rain and low clouds during the greater part of the day interferred with work in the air. Five tons of bombs were dropped by our airmen, and seven hostile machines and one balloon were shot down.

"In spite of a very dark night, five tons of bombs were dropped by us on the stations at Fives, southeast of Lille, and Steenwerck. Two day-flying airplanes and one of our night-bombing machines are missing."

Old Barrister Is In The Toils

COBOURG, Aug. 6—S. Burnham, aged about 76 or 78 years, came up in the Police Court here, charged with received $5.50 from Mr. F. M. Field in the summer of 1916, under false pretences. Last week he paid a second visit to Cobourg and, it is alleged, tried unsuccessfully to work the worthless cheque game on two local banks. He was taken into custody by Chief Rose and came up on the 1916 charge, pleeded guilty, and was remanded until Monday. It is stated that in May last, Burnham was sentenced to six months in jail at Hamilton for beating a board bill. Also that he has a record at Kitchener, Chatham, St. Catherines, St. Thomas, Peterboro, and other places. He states that he has been a barrister for more than 50 years, and laid claim to being the o ldebtsarrthen5 to being the oldest barrister in Canada.

MAY CALL HER "HONEY" PUTS BAN ON "HUN"

KINGSTON, Aug. 6.—The name "Hun" may be a "lovey-dovey" name in times of peace, but not so in times of war. You may call the girls "honey" but don't call them "Hun."

The war had a direct bearing on a case, which came before Magistrate Farrell, in the Police Court. A well-dressed young man stood accused of the non-support of his wife. Husband and wife stood side by side and Magistrate Farrell, after getting the particulars of the case, enlarged it for a week, in order that the two might reach a satisfactory settlement.

From what can be learned it appears that the entire trouble between the two, who were married some time ago in Buffalo, N.Y., is the fact that the wife is a German, while the husband is British. This has made things very disagreeable. The wife does not care to be referred to as "Hun", and one thing led to another till the charge of non-support came as the climax. However, the wife has a snug bang account, and it is said would not suffer if her hubby did fail to look after her wants.

CONDUCTORS CHARGED WITH STEALING FARES

WINNIPEG, Aug. 6. — Canadian Pacific railway conductors on sleeping cars were placed on trial to-day charged with stealing railway fares and accepting commissions from passengers. Their run was from Winnipeg to Montreal. Thiel detectives who had been working on the case claimed the company lost a quarter of a million dollars from such thefts in the last few years. The C. P. R. allows the sleeping car conductors to collect railway fares, and they hand the tickets over to the train conductors at the door of the the first sleeper. The system of theft is said to be deep-rooted and bold in its purpose.

The preliminary hearing of F. Williams, C. J. Packams and A. R. Bowden the conductors, is now on before Magistrate Noble in the provincial police court. Several detectives from the Thiel agency, who had made a journey on Williams train to detect him in the crime, alleged that he allowed them to travel without paying the regular fare, in being given a sum of money as a gift.

The four conductors arrested last week running from Winnipeg to the coast pleaded guilty and paid a $500 fine each. The evidence did not come out then.

SEIZE CHEMICAL WORKS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Seizure of the Heyden Chemical Works at Garfield, N. J., second largest corporation of its kind in the United States, with exclusive right to use many valuable German patents, processes and formulas for the making of salol, sodium salicylate, saccharine and other by-products of carbolic acid, was announced by Alien Property Custodian Palmer. The plant will be operated for the Government, Mr. Palmer said, and the patents and formulas Americanized.

MARNE SALIENT WIPED OUT BOASTED HUN OFFENSIVE ANNIHILATED

AND PARIS MANY MILES AWAY NOW

COMPLETE DEMORALIZATION OF HUN THRUST TOWARD PARIS AND THE CHANNEL PORTS HAILED WITH JOY IN FRANCE AND ENGLAND, WHILE BERLIN, EVEN WITHOUT A FULL KNOWLEDGE OF THE DISASTROUS DEFEAT OF THE CROWN PRINCE'S ARMY, IS IN DESPAIR — HINDENBURG, THE DEAD AND RESSURECTED ONE, PROMISES AN OFFENSIVE IN SEPTEMBER — INDICATIONS THAT GERMANY IS SHAKEN TO FOUNDATIONS AND PEOPLE ARE NERVOUS AND RESTIVE — ALLIES MEET RESISTANCE AT VESLE RIVER, BUT ESTABLISH BRIDGEHEADS ACROSS THE AISNE — RETREATING ENEMY BURNED EVEN AISNE BRIDGES.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

Paris, Aug. 6.—North of the Vesle the Germans have been repulsed in an effort to dislodge the French and American units which crossed from the south bank. The French statement today also reports a French advance to the Avre River, north of Montdidier. Prisoners were taken by French troops in the repulse of a German raid southeast of Montdidier.

HUN GAS BOMBARDMENT.

London, Aug. 6.—German Guns were active last night in the region north of Villers-Bretonneux, on the front northeast of Amiens, the War Office announced today. They threw gas shells into the British lines. The Germans attempted to pick off a British post in the district northeast of Merris, on the Marne front, but failed under a British counter attack.

RETIRE BEFORE BRITISH.

With the British Army in France, Aug. 6.—Advanced lines on a sector nearly half a mile long north of Labassee Canal have been evacuated by the Germans, and the British have pushed forward and occupied this ground.

HUN RESISTANCE STIFFENS.

With the French Armies in the Field, Aug. 6.—German resistance stiffened all along the Vesle river yesterday. French patrols which crossed at several points, bearing machine guns and large supplies of grenades, reported there are indications that the enemy still has large forces on the river.

The Germans are employing artillery freely to harass the Allied troops.

Muizon, five miles west of Rheims, was hotly disputed, but the Germans were pushed back and the French threw small forces across the river there.

Violent fighting occurred at Vauter farm and station, near Rheims but the Germans were unable to recapture them.

North of the Vesle, LaGrange farm has been mined and blown up by the Germans.

On the end of the line nearest Rheims, a heavy artillery duel is going on. The machine gun fire in this region is very severe. Similar conditions prevail between Fismes and Sermois, near the confluence of the Vesle and Aisne.

The enemy artillery maintained a steady fire on the valleys south of the two rivers in an attempt to catch Allied concentrations. German aviators also were active, descending often to harass Allied infantry with machine guns.

HUGE GERMAN LOSSES.

London, Aug. 6.—German losses since July 15, the date when the Crown Prince began his last drive, was unofficially estimated today at from 300,000 to 350,000, of which 40,000 are prisoners. Allied losses certainly are much less.

ENEMY RESISTING FOCH'S FLANK MOVE.

Paris, Aug. 6.—French artillery heavily shelled a large concentration of Boche troops in the region of St. Thierry, three miles northwest of Rheims. Mention of a large enemy troop concentration at St. Thierry indicates the Germans are determined to thwart Foch's attempts to flank them from Soissons and Rheims. St. Thierry is three miles northwest of Rheims, two miles north of the Vesle, and on the railway running northwestward from Rheims, which the Allies would naturally follow in carrying out a flanking movement from this direction.

ALLIED BRIDGEHEADS NORTH OF VESLE.

Paris, Aug. 6.—Allied troops have established two strong bridgeheads on the north bank of the Vesle, at Bazoches, three miles west of Fismes, and at Jonchery, six miles east of Fismes.

The German losses in the Fismes region have been as severe as at any point in the retreat, it is reported.

Since July 15 Von Hindenburg has engaged 87 divisions (1,044,000 men), including 47 divisions (564,000 men) in the Marne pocket.

HUN WAR BEAST LEAVES SLIMY TRAIL.

With the French Armies in the Field August 6.—Wherever the German war beast is going, its a slimy trail he is leaving behind. I stood on Hill 205, dominating the plateau leading toward Fismes, this afternoon. The landscape was one of unusual loveliness, but moving on to the plateau I found a wide path of destruction. Villages were battered and burned, fields were a lacework of shell holes, forests were mangled and uprooted, while roads were pitted, although a busy labor battalion was rapidly levelling them again, using crushed stone from the ruined houses.

Over all clung the odor of death. Grey-clad bodies of the Prussian Guards who had remained to fight rearguard actions lay all about. In one field the German helmets were as thick as daisies. Pleshier-Hulen wood was shot to pieces. In an open field between the wood and the town of the same name there was every indication of a bitter battle, including great numbers of unburied dead.

Soissons shows less recent damage than might be expected, although it bears out the report of the Chasseurs that the Germans made some slight resistance.

Here and there were futile barricades of the flimsiest sort stretched across the street.

Another Cut Likely In Price of Coal

Dominion Fuel Controller Limits Overhead Costs of Coal Dealers

A letter received by Fuel Commissioner T. F. Wills of this city from Dominion Fuel Controller Magratn makes the announcement that the margin allowed the coal dealers or Belleville, had been fixed at $2.65 for prepared sizes of antracite coal and $2.50 for bituminous or soft coal. The letter is as follows:

Office of the Fuel Controller
Ottawa, Aug. 1, 1918.

Dear Mr. Wills:—Under authority vested in me by order-in-council of July 27th, 1918. I beg to notify you that the maximum gross margin for the City of Belleville for coal delivered from the bins or yards shall be as follows:—

(1) Anthracite Coal, prepared sizes larger than pea $2.65 net ton of 2,000 lbs.

(2) Bituminous Coal, run-of-mine or prepared sizes, $2.50 per net ton of 2,000 lbs.

By "gross margin" is meant the difference in the cost of the coal to the dealer f.o.b. cars or boat at Belleville and the retail selling price of such coal delivered in lots of at least one ton under the conditions of delivery which prevail in your city. These maximum gross margins are to go into effect on the 5th day of August.

Your attention is called to the fact that this notification does not in any way relieve the dealers of the responsibility for any non-compliance with the coal regulations which may have existed in your case up to the present.

Your truly,
C. A. MAGRATH,
Fuel Controller for Canada.

In order to be perfectly clear in the matter as to coal delivered from bins or yard, Mr. Wills wired to the fuel controller and on Saturday evening received the following reply:

Ottawa, Aug. 3rd, 1918.
Thos. Wills, Fuel Commissioner,
Belleville.

Margin of $2.65 for Belleville includes unloading charges but not harbor dues or marine insurance. Average cost of unloading ten cargoes at Belleville last year from records submitted by Belleville dealers was about twenty-five cents per ton. With 20 per cent. increase in the wages over last year's average, this cost would now be 31 cents. Average gross margin at present authorized for 25 American cities of about the same size as Belleville is only $2.26. Hence I feel that figures set for Belleville are fair.

C. A. MAGRATH.

This means that with the invoice cost of coal at Oswego of $7.01, coal should be sold her at $11.06 per ton.

If, however, freight rates are increased, as there is some talk of it to $1.37 a ton the retail price here should be $11.18 per ton.

Toronto Rioters In Police Court

Disappearance of Major Sharpe May Not Have Been Drowned

KINGSTON, Aug. 6.—No trace of Major W. J. S. Sharpe, whose clothing was found near the pump house at the Outer Station on Saturday morning has been found, although every effort to locate the body, which may be in the river near the scene where the clothing was found, has been made.

The case is rather a curious one, and one in which several conclusions may be arrived at. It is pointed out that Major Sharpe was not fond of bathing, and it is rather unusual for him to go bathing at such an out-of-the way place and at such an hour as he may have.

On Saturday night Driver A McDonald was engaged by Major Lawson to search the waters in the vicinity where the clothing was found, and although he was in the water several hours, he found no trace of the body. Yesterday morning bloodhounds were engaged and they followed a trail out of the water. However, the test for the hounds was a very bad one, as the ground had been trodden considerably and was very dry. Five explosions of dynamite were discharged yesterday near the scene in the hope that if the body was in the water, it would come to the surface.

When the clothing was found it was taken in charge by S. S. Corbett who was on the scene. Every article was neatly folded as if the owner was bathing. In the pockets were found a watch the property of Major Sharpe, and the sum of thirty-five cents. Major Sharpe was known to have several hundred dollars with him on Friday night, and the fact that so little was found on his clothing, has led some to suppose that if he is dead, he might have met with foul play. However this deduction is not considered probable, although it might be possible. The boots were very clean and looked as if they were just out of a shoe shine. The clothes were methodically arranged.

This morning the military authorities would venture no opinion as to the case. It is not thought that Major Sharpe committed suicide, for he was in exceptionally good spirits on Friday evening. Major Lawson, Capt. Alyea, Lieut. Askwith and Dr. J. G. Evans are conducting further search this afternoon for the body.

Major Sharpe was, without doubt one of the most popular officers that headquarters. He was a manly and upright man, despised anything mean or unmanly." He served at the front with the 21st Battalion and was promoted to the rank of captain being gassed and returned to Canada where he was promoted to the rank of major and appointed Casualty Officer. It is possible that as a result of being gassed Major Sharpe might have suffered a mental collapse, and might have gone in bathing while in such a state and remained under water or he might have suffered a lapse of memory and wandered away. In any event the incident is a most regretable one, and his many friends regret his passing.

Capt. "Ken" Williams Passed Away

Famous Football Player Died Saturday— One of Queen's Most Famous Athletes

Capt. Kenneth F. A. Williams, one of Kingston's most famous athletes passed away in Ottawa on Saturday, following an operation. Capt. Williams was returned from the front some time ago, and had been attached for duty at Ottawa, illness causing him to undergo an operation, which resulted fatally.

The late "Ken" Williams was perhaps the greatest punting half-back Queen's ever boasted of. He received his early education in the separate schools at Kingston, and went to Queen's University, where he graduated in arts in 1909 and in science in 1910. During his term at Queen's he figured on the football teams of the college, and his wonderful playing resulted in many victories for the university teams. Later he went to Ottawa and was the star of the Ottawa College rugby team for three years. He was without doubt the greatest kicking half Queen's ever produced and his name was heralded in sporting circles all over the country. Early after the outbreak of war he enlisted in the Army Service Corps, and was promoted to the rank of captain while serving with the C. A. S. C., with the 2nd Division in France.

Deceased is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Williams, 150 University avenue, Kingston, three brothers Lieut. Jack Williams, formerly of the 80th Battalion; Sergt. Leo Williams, who went overseas with the 116 Battalion, and Howard and two sisters, Mrs. (Dr.) E. Sparks, and Miss Dorothy Williams at home.

Hun Zeppelin Brought Down

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—In last night's raid on England by German airships one of the enemy craft, a Zeppelin, was brought down, it was officially announced today.

The text of the official statement follows: Five enemy airships attempted to cross the coast last night, but while still at sea were attacked by Royal Air Force contingents co-operating with naval units. They were engaged and one was shot down in flames forty miles from the coast. Another was damaged but probably succeeded in reaching its base.

Among the war courses at Princeton in the fall naval training will be a feature. There will be classes for naval officers under the supervision of the Navy Department.

Two Barns Consumed, Third Badly Damaged

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 6—A fire which originated on the farm of Wm. Eichember in the Delaware district completely destroyed two barns filled hay and badly damaged a third Saturday. J. B. Merrill and Mrs. Jas. Hill were the others who suffered losses, but the damage done to the latter's building was not so severe, mainly through the efforts of the neighbors who fought the flames.

Landing of Allied Forces at Archangel

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON Aug. 6—Official announcement was made today of the landing of allied forces, naval and military, at Archangel on August 2. The landing was in concurrence with the wishes of the Russian population, it is stated, and created general enthusiasm.

ALLIES NOW OCCUPY PORT OF ARCHANGEL

KANDALASKA, Russian Dapland, Aug. 6.—A revolution against the Bolsheviki and in favor of the allies has occurred at Archangel, the Russian port in the Arctic. The Soviet troops have fled from the city.

After the revolution had been brought about, an allied detachment was landed at Archangel, occupying the railway station and the telegraph office with insignificant resistance.

Apparently there were no losses to the allied forces in their movement.

GERMAN WAR STORES LOST BY EXPLOSIONS

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 6.—A number of German powder stores have recently blown up, owing to the defective quality of the explosives, according to The Echo Belge. In one explosion at Mons 50 Germans were killed and 100 were killed when an ammunition train blew up.

The Rev. William J. Finn, director of the Paulist Choristers, formerly of Chicago and recently transferred to New York, is organizing a new choir there.

Britain's Part In War Lauded

N.Y. Observes With Solemnity Entrance of United Kingdom Into War

NEW YORK, Aug. 6—New York observed solemnly on Sunday the fourth anniversary of Great Birtain's entrance into the war, paying tribute to her 'contemptible little army" which helped the Belgians and French to meet the first onslaught of the Germans, to her navy which has kept the German fleet from the seas, and to her men and women who have given their lives and treasure that freedom might live.

Everywhere the Birtish flag was raised besides the Stars and Stripes and it seemed as if New Yorkers could not do enough for Canadian and Australian soldiers visiting the city.

In nearly all the churches clergymen took for the theme of their sermons the part Great Britain has played in the fight for democracy.

The service which attracted perhaps the most attention was that held at Trinity Church, where Charles Clive Bayley, British Consul-General in New York, and members of the British Mission in this country, represented Great Britain's army and Government. Many American army and naval officers also were present. Flags of all the allies waved above and in the processional and recessional the colors of Great Britain and the United States were carried down the aisle of the historic edifice behind the cross.

Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, rector of the church, who has been serving for many months as a Chaplain at Camp Upton, preached a sermon in which he praised the spirit of Britain and her colonies.

Death of Belleville Aviator In Scotland

Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Frederick, 76 Victoria Avenue, have received the following letters referring to the death of their son, Flight-Lieut. L. M. Frederick, who was killed in an aeroplane accident at Montrose, Scotland, on July 8, while on active service:

St. Mary's Rectory,
Montrose, Scotland, July 15.

Dear Mrs. Frederick:—I am wr'ting to you as Chaplain to the R. A. F. at Montrose, to offer to you and your husband my sincere sympathy on the death of your son. I did not know him personally; it is extremely difficult to make acquaintance of individuals in a big station like this where there is so much coming and going.

He was manoeuvring his machine—one of our Scottish customs. The volleys were fired and the Last Post Sounded. The burial service of the Prayer Book was used.

I feel very much for you so far from home, and if I can be of any service to you will you please just let me know.

Again assuring you of my sincere sympathy, I remain

Yours faithfully,
H. M. RANKIN, Chaplain.

6 Training Squadron, R. A. F.,
Montrose, Scotland, July 7, 1918.

Dear Mr. Frederick:—I very much regret having to write this letter to you telling you of your son's death in an aeroplane accident yesterday afternoon. He went up into the air in a single seated scout to have a sham fight with another pilot. I was watching the fight and the feats your son performed showed that he was a daring and efficient pilot. During the fight the two machines collided and fell to the ground.

While your son was training here he had always shown himself to be a keen and enthusiastic worker and his loss in the R.A.F. is very great, but nothing of course compared with your own. He had the pluck and stamina which has made our pilots so predominant over the Germans.

I can only add my deepest sympathy and that of his instructor and brother officers in your great loss.

If I can furnish you with any more details concerning your son's stay here, I shall be very pleased to do so.

Yours sincerely,
Arthur C. Jones-William, Capt.

Letters from Overseas

Miss Simpson received the following letter:

Somewhere on Earth, July 11.

Dear Luella:—I received your ever welcome letter and was very pleased to hear from you, and hope this finds you well, as it leaves me at present. I received one letter from you a while ago but lost your address, so I decided you would write again and give me the address, but I never received any papers as yet from you. I certainly am in good health, and I hope I will continue so, and the same for you. I am sorry to say I never saw anything of your brother Charles as yet, for I have been in France since the middle of March. It is quite a while, but there are some who have been here two years or more. The light brigade was just moving to Witley Camp when I was leaving. We have had some lovely weather here in France but it has been raining here for the last three or four days. I guess Chas wrote back and told you he could not find me, did he not? He had a good reason for saying so for I don't think I was in Whitley Camp when I left for here. I am answering two letters, one of May and one of June 1st for I received both the same day. I certainly do like it here better than in England, but I would rather be in Canada. I guess there was some big doings in Canada on June 3rd. There was in France July 4th and a General Sports Day on July 6th There is a bby here who gets no mail from home. I will give you his address, but don't say who gave it to you. I hope you will write him a nice long letter to please me. I have seen quite a few Belleville boys in my travels. There was one Belleville boy, Geo. Conboy, who was with me at Witley Camp, but he is in some battalion in France now. I don't know which one. As news is scarce over here I guess I will close. Write soon.

Yours sincerely,
W. J. J. CONOLLY.

Music and Drama

GOOD PHOTOPLAY PROGRAM

Two very talented stars appeared at Griffin's last night and gave a very good account of themselves in the photoplays in which they appeared. "Her Surrender" with Anna Q. Nilson in the leading part concerns the transfusion of blood from one person's veins in to another's. The author of the story claims that with the passing of the blood from one to the other, the influence of the mind also changes from one to the other. In the story a young woman is taken seriously ill and the doctors advise the only chance of recovery is by transfusing the blood of a healthy man into her. Advertisements inserted in the papers brings a healthy young man to offer his blood but he has had a past and has been a convict. The doctors seeing no chance of recovery unless the operation is performed right away do not stop to quibble about such a thing as a past but go ahead, with the recovery of the man and woman. A change has come over the woman and she strangely finds herself in love with the man that gave her his blood. From this on the author has constructed a story that even scientists have been unable to answer, but the author treats the subject in a big way and a very novel and entertaining story is the result.

A "News" film contains numerous scenes of the Yankee preparations for war, a new chapter of the Eagle's Eye shows more of the German spie's work to hamper America's war preparations.

And Doug Fairbanks is here in a new one called "Say Young Fellow" which concerns the many trials and troubles that befalls the average newspaper reporter in his quest for news; broken heads and broken bodies sometimes are the results of persevering efforts to get news but Doug always comes up smiling and looking for more bumps. One might mention that there is some very good common sense in this his newest picture in as much as the road to success is shown to be far from paved with luck, but insteads many disappointments and drawbacks.. Doug in his own dogged way perseveres until in the end he succeeds and brings home the bacon and also a wife.

At the Palace "The Woman in the Web" serial offers some new clever stunts and also "Musty Suffer" is here once more in his own style of comedy and the big picture "Wuold You Forgive" completes a program that must be seen to be appreciated.

"A CROWN OF SHAME"

By FLORENCE MARRYAT

Author of "The Poison of Asps," A Star and a Heart," "Written in Fire," etc.

CHAPTER XXI.—Continued

"My dear girl, I never saw any thing like it! Sir Russel is certainly the most generous of men, and the whole island is talking of him. He has given a carte blanche order for all the white flowers procurable, and the ball-room will be decorated with nothing else. It will look like a huge bridal bouquet."

"Or a funeral shroud," suggested Quita, with a disagreeable laugh.

"My darling! what a strange thing to say. We won't have it too white, if you have such unpleasant comparisons to make. I will suggest to Sir Russell to have the wreaths tied with blue ribbons; or pinroses interpersed with the white ones, would look very pertty."

"I'm sure I shouldn't take the trouble, if I were you, mamma! Let him have his own way. What does it signify what it looks like?"

"I think it signifies a great deal," returned Mrs. Courtney warmly; "and when I come to consider the matter white will not set off the dresses as a little color would do. For most of the ladies will be in white; and you will wear your wedding-dress, of course, Maraquita.'"

"I suppose so, mamma."

"You will have to open the ball with Colonel Symonds, being the next gentleman in rank to the Governor on the island, and Sir Russell must lead out Mrs. Symonds. It will be a magnificent sight with all the officers in uniform, and the military bands in the orchestra. The supper-tables are all to be laid for three hundred, though I don't know where they are all to come from; but Sir Russell is so generous. It will be the proudest day of my life—next to your wedding-day, Maraquita.'"

"I shall be very glad if you enjoy it, mamma."

"Come, come, my dear girl, I won't have you speak of it in that uninterested tone, as if you were an old woman of eighty, past all thoughts of dancing and admiration. Why, there's not a girl in the island that dances better than you do, Quita; and think how every eye will be fixed upon you, and how the women will envy your dress and your beautiful jewels, and wish they had your luck." Why, there is not a girl in San Diego but who would give her eyes to stand in your shoes."

"I daresay! but they pinch sometimes," said Quita, with a yawn.

"My darling, all wives' shoes pinch sometmes," replied her mother. "Marriage is not a bed of roses, any more than any other condition. But it is necessary to a woman's well-doing, and you have drawn a splendid prize in the matrimonial lottery. And now what time will your ladyship please to drive this afternoon?"

Quita smiled. She liked to be called "your ladyship." If there was one thing above another that reconciled her to the step she had taken, it was to hear herself addressed by that much-coveted title. What children most women are, after all, and how easily caught with glittering baubles. Jewels and a title make up the sum total of domestic happiness for the majority of the sex. Maraquita believed herself to be wretched for the loss of Henri de Courcelles, but had she been put to the test, she would not have given up her newly acquired dignity, nor one of her sets of ornaments, to bring him to her feet again. She would sit for hours with her jewel cases in her lap, fingering the bracelets, and rings, and necklaces that Sir Russell had given her, and holding up the blood-red rubies, and the grass-green emeralds, and the deep blue sapphires, and the pure white diamonds to the light, laughing to see them catch the sun's rays, and shoot out a thousand little stars of fire to meet them. And as the day for the grand ball drew near, she seemed to recover her cheerfulnss. Mrs. Courtney was delighted to see the interest she suddenly evinced about her dress, and the ornament she was about to wear with it, and the manner in which she arranged her hair; and when the evening arrived, she was flushed with excitement, and as eager for the festivities to be a success, as any one could have wished to see her. It was a proud moment for Mr. and Mrs. Courtney when they stood by the side of the dais which had been erected for the convenience of the newly-married pair to receive their numerous guests. Sir Russel, in his Governor's uniform, looked imposing if not handsome; and Maraquita, arrayed in her wedding garments, stood by his side like a dainty fairy. All San Diego—that is, all the respectable portion of it—passed before them in single file, to offer their congratulations before the ball commenced, and there was but one opinion of the appearance of the bride—that she was the handsomest woman on the island. Mr. and Mrs. Courtney swelled with pride as they overheard the various comments on her appearance, and felt rewarded at last for all the trouble and anxiety their wayward daughter had given them. The ballroom at Government House was a long apartment, with five or six windows on either side, all open on account of the heat. The spaces between these windows were hidden with trophies of flags, and flowers, so that it looked like a vast bower of leaves and blossoms, open at intervals to the outer air. Six large chandeliers pendant from the ceiling and laden with wax candles, made the ballroom a blaze of light, and rendered it a conspicuous object from the outside. That the poorer part of the population should not consider themselves entirely shut out from the wedding festivities, Sir Russell had ordered a handsome display of fireworks to be sent up from the Fort at ten o'clock, and hundreds of colored people were waiting around, in anticipation of the display. The supper, which had taken many days to prepare, was laid in another room on the same floor on a series of tables, which were glittering with knives and forks, and glass and silver; and everything promised to go as merrily as the proverbial marriage bell. As soon as they had received their guests, Sir Russell and Lady Johnstone opened the ball with the two people of highest rank present, and dancing became general.

Maraquita who was passionately fond of the exercise did not miss a single turn. Her card was naturally soon filled up, for every man present tried to secure a waltz with the bride and she flew all over the room like a beautiful Bacchante, flushed and smiling, whilst her parents looked on with admiring complacency, and one at least thanked heaven secretly that the threatened danger was at an end, and her child had begun at last to properly appreciate the benefits of her high position. The evening had waxed towards midnight, and though the dancers gave no signs of fatigue, Sir Russell had just made his way towards Mr. and Mrs. Courtney to consult them whether it would not be wise to give the signal for supper, when a loud cry of alarm and sounds of confusion were heard to proceed from the apartment where it was laid. Sir Russell turned pale. He had heard something of the sort before and guessed its import; but he had no time to communicate his fears to his friends, when a crowd of natives rushed into the room, armed with pistols and knives, and every open window simultaneously blocked with dusky faces, ready to bar egress, or to leap inside at a moment's notice. The band stopped playing at once—the dancers screamed with alarm—all the men felt their hearts stop, and many of the women fainted without warning. But Sir Russell was English bred and rose to the occasion at once. He looked almost majestic as he met the oncoming horde of mutineers with an uplifted hand, as though he challenged them to advance one step further, and demanded in a voice of thunder what they required in his private apartments.

"Your life!" shrieked one of the mob, "and de lives ob all dese d—d white trash. And we'll hab them too! On wid you, darkies! Cut 'em down like de dogs what dey are."

"I'll shoot the first man who tries to pass me!" shouted Sir Russell, as he drew a revolver from his pocket; and then turning to his father-in-law, he exclaimed quickly,—"Mrs. Courtney—Maraquita—get them away for God's sake."

Maraquita had already flown to her parents for protection, and was clinging to her mother in an agony of tears.

"Mamma! mamma! what will they do to us? Oh, we shall all be killed! Why did I ever leave Beauregard?"

'Hush! hush! my darling! it will be all right. There must be some mistake," replied her mother, although she was shak'ng so violently that she could hardly stand.

But if it was a mistake, it was a very terrible one, for the next moment the sound of several shots, and a piercing scream proved that the rebels had already commenced their murderous work.

"This way, Nita," said Mr. Courtney hurriedly, pushing his wife and daughter before him. "Keep close to the wall, and escape by the door into the libarry. It is your best chance."

But before they had gone many paces, elbowing their way frantically through the crowd that pressed on them from every side, the dark faces that had guarded the open windows perceived their means of exit, and with a cry of fiendish delight, leapt into the room to prevent it.

Canadian Vessel Burned By U-Boat

Crew Reaches Canadian Port and Tells the Story Of Their Capture

A Canadian Port, Aug. 5—The four-masted schooner Dornfonteine, launched at the Straight Shore, St. John, a few weeks ago, was captured and burned to the water's edge on Friday afternoon by a German U-boat off the Atlantic coast. The ship encountered the enemy craft at noon, and after holding her crew on board for five hours, the Germans told them to take to their life-boats and row for the nearest shore. The captain of the Dornfonteine and his crew arrived in this city about 10 o'clock Saturday evening. They were none the worse for their experience and went immediately before the naval authorities to give a full account of what had happened.

It is believed that the undersea boat which destroyed the Dornfonteine was the U-56, one of the latest type of the submarine. After taking from the ship all her valuables and foodstuffs, as well as a large quantity of gasoline, which was stored on board to be used for motive power for the hoisting apparatus, the Germans start ed a fire in her forecastle, and another in the after-cabin, and the schooner burned to the waters edge.

A member of the crew of the U-boat stated that there were only four submarines operating in these waters, but more were expected later, and others statements easily recognizable as German propaganda.

THREE MORE SUNK

Saturday afternoon there were further developments in the activities of German U-boats in the Bay of Fundy, when three fishing schooners bound from Boston to the Banks, were blown up and sunk 40 miles west of Seal Island.

These schooners were the Muriel, the Rob Roy, and the Anna M. Perry, their crews set adrift in dories, all managed to reach the Nova Scotian coast, and are at present in Yarmouth The submarine lay in sight of Seal Island until Sunday morning, when it submerged.

This triple sinking followed immediate after the burning of the Dornfontein, of St. John, on Friday afternoon, by probably the same submarine, which seems to direct its attention to smalled fishing vessels.

Night Service Before Attack

In the blackness of the night one tiny flame quivered at the door-way of what had been a Flanders home, but was now just three walls and a bit. The tiny flame was that of a burning candle. It jumped nervously and flickered in the throbbing darkness under the concussion of the artillery which was thundering its message at the German trenches, writes S. M. in the London Daily Mail.

From various points of the night came men in twos and threes, and now and then a small squad would march towards the tiny light, entering at the 'door' and disappearing into the interior of the place that had once been a home. A man clad in a long cassock and white sleeves came towards the little flame.

"There are no lamps and no oil, boys," he said. "All we have is this candle. What shall we do?"

"Carry on," replied the boys.

But someone discovered a handful of candles, and these were served out, the boys sticking them on the top of their helmets, where they burned fitfully. At the end of the poor, almost roofless building, amid the pile of rubble and dust, was a pile of ammunition boxes, over which a Union Jack had been draped. On the top lay an open book. . . .

The man with the cassock began to read, droning his words as he bent over the book, beside which a candle had been placed. He read for about five minutes. The background of sound to his voice was the rumble of exploding shells and the wail of the missiles as they hurtled through the air. The candles gave a ghostly radiance to the scene.

The man with the cassock ceased to drone and knelt beside his altar of ammunition boxes.

A few minutes later he rose. This time he spoke loudly.

"Boys," he said in his Scottish burring tone, "there's nothing like the Old Hundred. Let us sing."

So they sang the Old Hundred, then another hymn. A crash not far off shook the building and made the earth heave. Some of the boys stopped singing.

"Boys," came the voice from the ammunition boxes, "Brother Boche is getting the range. Let us disperse. And let each do his damnedest in the next five hours. God bless us all."

The candles were extinguished and the boys came out of the wretched building. In twos, and threes they disappeared in the blackness. The man with the cassock was the last to leave. As he came through the 'doorway' he bent and blew out the candle. Then he, too, went into the night.

What was it? you may ask.

It was a night service before the attack at daybreak.

Editors Visit King George

Discuss Canadian Affairs With the Royal Family

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The Canadian editors visited Buckingham Palace Saturday afternoon where they saw their Majesties and the Princess Mary. They were accompanied by Col. Galloway and Major Montague Whitmore of the Department of Information. The King discussed Canadian affairs with each member of the party and recalled incidents of his visits to Canada in 1901 and 1908. The editors were much impressed with the King's knowledge of the Canadian Provinces.

The King spoke in French to the editors from Quebec and expressed his great pleasure at the efforts of the men and women of Quebec. His Majesty also showed a lively interest in the visit of the editors to France, and said there were no troops better than the Canadians. He also referred to the splendid condition of the Americans who were passing through the country. His Majesty expressed great appreciation of the officers produced through the Royal Military College at Kingston.

AN HOUR WITH KING

Mr. Stewart, editor of The Chatham World of New Brunswick, who is 75 years of age, and ascended in an airplane over Vimy Ridge, said it was the greatest experience of his life to see the King, who talked with him for ten minutes. Altogether the editors were nearly an hour with the King.

Mr. W. Buchanan, M.P., of Lethbridge, Alta., Herald, in an interview said:

"Any impression we may have had that democracy and simplicity did not prevail in the household of the present Monarchs of Great Britain was removed when we were given an opportunity of meeting the King, Queen and the Princess Mary at Buckingham Palace Saturday afternoon. The party felt at home from the very moment they stepped into the presence of the Royal party. There was no stiffness whatever about the reception Their Majesties impressed us all with their wide information about affairs and their exetional knowledge of Canada.

KINGSTON V. A. D.'S IN ITALY

KINGSTON, Aug. 6.—Two Kingston girls Miss Eva Coon and Miss Freda Burns, are now in Italy doing V. A. D. work. They were chosen out of five called for duty there and in France.

At a knitting bee to be held on the Mall in Central Park, New York, next Tuesday under the auspices of the Comforts Committee of the Navy League there will be several thousand contestants.

PICNIC PUBLISHING PAPER.

The Tweed News gave its staff and a few favored friends a picnic last week with "eats" and all the pleasant properties of a regular old-fashioned picnic. While it is no picnic to run a newspaper, weekly or daily, the idea of a paper picnic is appealing (Note to Printer—Don't get APPEALING—APPALLING if you value your life.) and this fore-gathering in the open under the trees, with the Editor-in-chief, reporters, business manager, bookkeepers, correspondents, printers, proof-readers and pressmen, where all misunderstanding and typographical errors can be forgotten and a new start made, looks like the real thing. Barred from such gatherings should be those correspondents masquerading as "Disgusted Tories" and "Disgruntled-Grits" and the gargoyle who owes several years' subscription and allows the paper "ain't wuth a cuss no more," and where only kindly thoughts are permitted of the great mass of appreciative readers who would rather miss a meal than miss the home paper, which, whether it is little or big, carries all the important home news. This week the Tweed News enters its thirty-third year, and as it grows older it grows stronger, better and wiser, one of the best weekly papers in Canada, well edited, with strong opinions and courage to express them, well written in every department and well printed—a newspaper to be proud of. We wish the Tweed News many happy returns of the day.

TAMING A RATTLESNAKE.

Actual experience on the firing line in France inculcates a deep contempt for the "peace talk" of folks back home. That the time to talk peace with a rattlesnake is when the reptile's head is separated from its body, is evidently the opinion of Lieut. Leslie S. Lee, of Detroit, who writes:

> I want to tell you this, Bill. Tell the people over there to forget this peace talk for a while. The time to talk peace is when the Boche is so badly whipped that he will crawl to us and ask us to stop. We can do it, and we will do it, if the people at home only keep their mouths shut about something of which they know nothing. Let them devote as much time to getting tobacco and magazines over here. What we want is the enemy scattered so far that he will never be able to come back.
> The war has brought a lot of suffering to France and it is going to bring a lot to the United States; but, after all, it is well worth it. The people at home don't know that we are at war. They may think that having meatless, wheatless, and a few other less days is hard, but wait till they come to what France has had to come to. I hope the United States will never have to exist as France has had to, but if it did it might jar our people into the realization that we really are at war.
> The French soldier is magnificent. I have seen quite a few. All show the marks of much suffering, and yet their spirit is as high as at the first days of the war. He and our troops get along wonderfully. In the cafes you will see a group of our men and the French, each with a dictionary in his hand, telling the other what a good man he is.

CANADA'S GLORIOUS ACHIEVEMENT.

Canada's achievements in the four years of the war are reviewed in a statement given out by the Director of Public Information.

Canada entered the war with a regular army of only 3,000 men. At the beginning of last month she had sent overseas no less than 390,000 soldiers, and on the same date there were in this country about 60,000 men being trained for service in France. This makes a total army of 450,000.

Canadian soldiers to the number of 43,000 have given their lives to the cause. Of these 27,000 have been killed in action, 9,280 have died of wounds, 2,257 have died of disease, and 5,342 are presumed to be dead.

The names of 113,000 soldiers have appeared in the casualty list as wounded or sick. Between 30,000 and 40,000 of these have returned to duty; about 50,000 have been sent back to Canada as unfit for further service; 2,225 Canadians are still in German or neutral military prisons, and 384 are set down as missing.

Bravery Recognized.

The bravery and devotion of Canadian soldiers and nursing sisters have not been without recognition. Some 10,000 of these have received distinctions of one kind or another.

The extent to which she has produced munitions of war can be shown by the following figures:

Total production of shells up to recent date, 60,000,000 pounds; total production of explosives and propellants for cartridges and shells, 1,600,000,000 pounds; total production of airplanes 2,500; total value of orders placed in Canada by British Government, $1,200,000,000; of this amount $600,000,000 has been loaned to the British Government for this purpose by the Dominion of Canada.

Canada is doing her share in shipbuilding. Contracts have been placed in the Dominion for 112 vessels, with a total tonnage of about 450,000. Most of these will be launched during 1918.

Great Financial Effort.

In the supply of food to the Allies Canada has made an impressive showing. Her annual net export of wheat and flour for the supply of Great Britain and the Allies in Europe has increased over the average annual export before the war by about 80,000,000 bushels. Net exports in beef have increased by nearly 75,000,000 pounds per annum, and net exports in pork and pork products have increased by 125,000,000 pounds per annum.

In the financial effort necessitated by the requirements of war the country has arisen splendidly to the occasion. By March 31 of this year Canada's total outlay for war purposes was about $857,000,000. The national debt before the war stood at $336,000,000. When the accounts for this fiscal year are closed it will reach about $1,200,000,000.

The grand total of gifts from the people of Canada for war purposes—as nearly as it can be estimated at present—is $90,000,000. This is a splendid figure; it amounts to over $11 per capita of our population.

PAY-ROLL BANDIT KILLED

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 6—Two city policemen were shot, one perhaps fatally, one pay-roll bandit killed or fatally wounded, and two other bandits injured in a gun battle at noon Saturday following the theft of $22.861, the pay-roll of the H. J. Walker Company airplane plant. The money was all recovered by detectives later when the bandits' car was wrecked in its flight.

Toronto police seem to have messed things up considerably when they finally made up their minds to try and quell the riots of returned soldiers in that city, according to press reports. Evidently their batons were no respecters of persons for among the casualties are numbered reporters, a blind man and other innocent spectators. In addition they arrested Major Hunter, official of the Great War Veterans Association, who was very outspoken in his denunciation of the excesses of the returned soldiers. Of course, a riot is an ugly thing to handle, but a little more judgment might have been expected on the part of the Toronto police.

Our coinage is symbolic of the change in America's attitude. On the new quarters the eagle is seen in full flight eastward, with beak and talons ready for action. On the old quarters the eagle simply stood still on its tail and flapped its wings. One claw held a few antiquated weapons, the other waved an olive branch, while its beak was entangled with scroll.

The Old Girl Is Game.

Kansas City Star.

We owe England a cheer for this. The old girl is game. She has, in the nautical phrase of one of her own favorite sons—and ours—laid a point closer to the wind for us than a man could expect of his own married wife. She has stood by at every crisis from the start. Her destroyer fleet took the sea before ours was ready and battled the submarine at a time when it seemed that monster might dispute our passage. She sent us coal last winter when thousands of tons of ships were tied up in our own harbors for want of fuel. Let's not forget it. England's been a good neighbor and a good ally right through the time when most of the flowers we were sending down to the footlight were marked for her co-star, La Belle France. Let's not forget that she never failed to join her voice to ours in acclaiming that wonderful people—and kept right on doing hard, practical, handy jobs for us.

Not Crazy, But Dishonest.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

There are some who are inclined to let the Kaiser escape the deep condemnation that belongs to him by suggesting that he is crazy. But this readiness to excuse the brutality and sturdiness of the German leaders and their sympathizers by suggesting that they are not in their right minds may easily be carried too far, as indeed a judge of the United States Court very tartly decided in Hartford, Conn. He curtly cut short the tearful protest of Rev. Theodore Buessel, found guilty of sedition, that he was "out of his mind," by saying, "No, you are not crazy, only disloyal and dishonest." They are all tarred with the same stick, pastor and kaiser and diplomat and warrior. They are dishonest and they lead all their followers into such extremes of duplicity and disloyalty that their acts almost seem to be those of madmen. But this moral blindness is simply the hidden natural caveman German coming out in the open.

Dealing With Sedition.

Chicago Tribune.

The severe punishment which is being given persons who are foolish or insane enough to make contemptuous remarks about American sacraments and purposes, about the flag, the anthem, the uniform, and the cause of the war, the effectiveness of American troops, and the ideals of the American republic, seems at times out of proportion to the importance of the offensive individual and the importance of what he thinks or says. A blustering bootblack told three soldiers he had no respect for their uniform. He was beaten up, handed over to the authorities and indicted. A wild German said the Kaiser was the greatest man on earth, and that the Germans would win. He was handed over to the authorities in bandages and indicted. Another lunatic German ridiculed the flag, knocked a protesting girl down, and was carried to the authorities on a stretcher, and indicted—all the indictments returned under the espionage act. If these outbreaks, outrageous to sentiment as they are, seem trivial in possible effect, and unworthy of severe process, the alternative of stern repression must be considered. It is a triviality that a lunatic German should be disrespectful and offensive, but to permit such exhibitions without punishment would be a violation of national self-respect which would be unendurable.

The Poet's Corner

THE SEA AND HER DEAD.

Guy N. Pocock.

Years ahead, years ahead,
Who will honor our sailor dead?
For the wild North Sea, the bleak
North Sea
Threshes and seethes so endlessly,
Gathering foam and changing crest
Heave and hurry, and know no rest.
How can they mark our sailor dead
In the years ahead?

Time goes by, time goes by—
And who shall tell where our soldiers lie?
The guiding trench-cut winds afar,
Miles upon miles, where the dead men are.
A cross of wood, or a carven block,
A name-disc hung on a rifle-stock—
These shall tell where our soldiers lie
As the time goes by.

Days to come, days to come—
But who shall ask of the wandering foam,
The weaving reed, or the rocking swell
The place of our sailor-dead to tell?
From Jutland reefs to Scapa Flow
Tracks of the weary warships go—
But deep sea wastes lie green and dumb
All the days to come.

Years ahead, years ahead,
The sea shall honor her sailor dead!
No mound of mouldering earth shall show
The fighting place of the men below—
But a swim of seas that gather and spill;
And the wind's wild chantry whistling shrill
Shall cry "Consider my sailor dead!"
In the years ahead.

DREAM LEAVE.

When the night is hushed and still
To the mothers wrapped in dream,
Down the valley, round the hill,
Through the heath, across the stream,
Come the six-foot fighting men
Laughing little boys again.

They have set away their swords,
They have laid their belts aside;
For an hour the battle-lords
Go without their garb of pride,
Lead their gay patrols no more,
Rid them of the dust of war.

In the glass the sands run back,
Backward spin the creeping years
Down the dim and shadowy track,
Through the wood of smiles and tears,
To where boyhood bold and blithe
Hides from Time his hungry scythe.

Youth her empire reaffirms,
Bramble-torn about the knees,
Grubby-handed gathering worms,
Green and sticky climbing trees;
Boyhood with its brown legs bare
Takes the kiss of sun and air.

Up the stairs of old they crowd,
Answering the mother-call,
Merry step and laughter loud
Ringing back from roof and wall,
While the mother hearts awake
To the music that they make.

And the trophies that they bring!
Not the spoil of any foe,
But a bird with broken wing,
Or a may-bough dropping snow;
Or a wound to be made well
Where some proud young climber fell.

Ah! the bugles blow them back,
Long before the East is red,
To adventure and attack
Round their sleeping brother-dead;
Belt and sword they bind again,
Boys no more, but fighting men.

Edinburgh.

Canadian Flyers Win Destinction

LONDON, Aug. 6—A feature in The London Gazette, which contains notice of a large number of wards, is the conferring of the Distinguished Flying Cross on Major W. A. Bishop, the Canadian flyer, "the most successful and most fearless fighter of the air, whose acts of outstanding bravery have already been recognized by awards of the Victoria Cross, the Distinguished Service Order, bar to Distinguished Service Order, and Military Cross."

The Distinguished Flying Cross is conferred "for signally valuable services in personally destroying twenty-five enemy machines in twelve days, of which five were destroyed on the last day of his services at the front. The total number of machines destroyed by this distinguished officer is seventy-two, and his value as a moral factor to the Royal Air Force cannot be overestimated."

Other Canadians who are gazetted for the Distinguished Flying Cross are:

of the Canadian Supply Column, who, when attacked by two triplanes and four biplanes, although his tank had caught fire and he also had fifty holes made in his machine, reached our lines after a quarter of an hours' fighting. He then returned and reached 19,000 feet to complete his photography.

Captain William Fulton Cleghorn, of Dovercourt Road, Toronto, participated in fifty-nine bombing raids, last engagement, when he was attacked by a large number of the enemy aircraft, three of whom he destroyed and five more he downed.

Major Raymond Collinshaw who already holds the D.S.O. and D.S.C. with bar, belongs to New Westminster, and has accounted for forty-last twelve months.

Captain Cecil Darley, Toronto, has done twelve months' night bombing work, being on one occasion in the air in bad weather for seven hours.

Lieut. Blayney Edmund Scott, formerly of the Canadian Artillery, when his petrol tank was struck he climbed out twice to plug a hole under heavy fire at the time.

Lieut. Joseph Leonard White, formerly of the Machine Guns, destroyed three enemy craft and downed two more.

The following was awarded the Distinguished Service Order:

Lieut. Fred McCall, formerly of the Albertas, accounted for fourteen enemy machines, destroying four during a morning patrol and another in the evening in each case at point-blank range.

When he failed to appear for dinner investigations were made and he was found dead in his room from apoplexy.

GUNNER DRAYCOTT WRITES

Mr. G. A. Bennett received a card from Gunner G. A. Draycott, dated July 23, at Frensham Camp, Surrey, England, saying, 'Arrived safe, and had a fine trip; it's some life, believe me. It rains every day over here, but we don't mind that if we have some good Canadian tobacco and chocolate bars, but the worst is we can't buy that here; all we got is money and not any too much of that."

JUST A NOTE OF WARNING

Many boarding-house keepers and others engaged in the restaurant business in a small way, particularly in the smaller towns and villages, have not yet taken out licenses as they are required to do by the Canada Food Board. These parties are therefore liable to the penalty required by the regulations. It must be borne in mind that a public eating place subject to license is, according to Food Board Order No. 46, "Any place whatsoever where meals to the number of fifteen or more per day are served or sold to others than members of the family or household of the proprietor or caterer." Persons supplying meals to the number as stated must obtain licenses, otherwise they are liable to fine or imprisonment, or both.

THE FATHER'S GRIEF

Masons returning from the Grand Lodge at Windsor, tell a story illustrating the deep feeling of friendship existing between Colonel Roosevelt and Sir John Gibson. The former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario rose to second a motion of condolence which was moved to be sent to the great American citizen (and craftsman) on receipt during session of the news of the death in action of Lieut. Quentin Roosevelt, son of the former President of the United States. Sir John Gibson faltered and his voice shook with emotion as he told how some time ago a similar, only more personal message had been received by him from Col. Roosevelt, his friend, on the death of his own son in battle. The entire assembly arose and stood in silence while a message of comfort to the beloved "Teddy" went from the hearts of all. Toronto Masons state that the incident was most affecting, especially as bringing out the simplicity and warm-heartedness of great men when the artificialities of public life are stripped away by war sacrifice and stress.

HOGS ADVANCING IN PRICE

Live hogs have again advanced in price. To-day Mr. R. Empson and Sons shipped a large consignment to Montreal, and the price paid was $19 per hundred weight.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Charles McConnell and William Bell, two young men, the latter a stranger in the city, were this morning before Magistrate Masson charged with having on July 15th assaulted and caused grievous bodily harm to John James Barry. Mr. Carnew represented the Crown and Mr. A. Abbott appeared on behalf of the accused. Through their counsel the two men pleaded not guilty, and made no election as to their trial. Barry, it will be remembered, was on the night of July 15th, brutally assaulted on the corner of Foster Ave. and Dundas street, whilst he was proceeding to his home. He was dealt a severe blow on the head with the butt end of a baseball club, and the result was a wound requiring several stitches to be taken. Although Barry had a considerable sum of money upon him his assailants did not rob him as they were frightened away when he yelled for help. The accused were suspected, hence their arrest. The result of the preliminary investigation was that both were committed to trial at the next court of competent jurisdiction. McConnell was able to furnish bail and was allowed his liberty, but Bell had to go to jail.

May the joyful notes of the bell be a happy augury of other and greater victories bringing early and permanent peace.

BROCKVILLE GIRL'S SUICIDE

Mrs. Joseph Ernest Jewett, a bride of a few hours, committed suicide at Brockville yesterday by throwing herself from a canoe into the St. Lawrence, opposite the old Electric Light Company's dock. Saturday evening the young woman, who was Stella E. Morgan, daughter of Charles Morgan, of King Street west, was united in marriage by a local clergyman to Joseph Ernest Jewett, a returned soldier. The couple went to Mrs. Swaine's boarding house, Perth street, and during Sunday night the bride, upon examining her husband's letters and other effects, found, it is alleged, that he had a wife and young child residing in Bristol, England. Leaving him sleeping, she went to her home and addressed a letter to her sister, informing her that she intended taking her life, as she could never bear the disgrace. She then went to her own boathouse, and taking out a canoe, carried out the deed, which was witnessed by William Franksom and Frank Armstrong, two men fishing nearby. A crowd collected on the shore, among others Jewett, who missed his wife, and who was placed under arrest by Chief of Police Burk, and now faces a charge of bigamy. Deceased was 24 years old and bore an excellent reputation.

The Farmerettes

Whether from city or country find themselves living under an unusual strain. The unusual work necessitates the use of different muscles and this development demands a good supply of pure, rich blood.

Because it goes directly to the formation of new blood, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is of the greatest assistance in building up new cells and tissue and strengthening the muscles.

Wedding Bells

ROWE—HENDERSON

A quiet wedding took place at the rectory, Commercial street, this morning, when Miss Carrie B. Henderson, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Henderson, Cedar street, Belleville was united in marriage to Mr. Douglas Row, also of this city, the Rev. Rural Dean Swayne, rector of Christ Church, officiating. They were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Row left for a short honeymoon to western points. On their return they will reside in this city. The many friends of the popular young couple will unite with The Intelligencer in wishing for them many years of happy wedded life.

Generous Citizens Will Send Kiddies to The Sand Banks

Belleville, Aug. 5th, 1913.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly permit me to make an appeal through the columns of your paper to all who love children and who does not love the little ones we want your help. It is proposed to take the children in the Shelter to the Sand-Banks on Thursday for a picnic. Think of the joy you will bring into the hearts of these little ones by giving something towards this outing, and I may say this is the only trip they get in the year.

Remember the tots. Some of their fathers are over at the front doing their bit; and the mother; whose joy it would have been to take the little ones for an outing, but who has passed over the border. Now will you do your bit towards giving these children a good time? Our treasurer, H. F. Ketcheson, 26 Bridge Street, will be pleased to receive any contribution and the same will be acknowledged through the press. Also those who can send along food, candy or fruit will you kindly do so. If the same is left at the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday it will be called for. Thanking you in anticipation of your favor,

I remain your sincerely,

THOS. D. RUSTON,

Inspector Children's Aid.

Sporting Notes

PLAYGROUND BASEBALL

The first game for the championship in the playground league was played at the West Belleville Playgrounds last evening, and a very good game was played. Clarke, captain for the Beavers, and Bongard, captain for the Canucks, had their men in good shape and some fast baseball was seen. The Canucks started first at the bat and proceeded to bring in runs, the first three men up were able to get their runs across the plate, and with two men down, Wims was able to come across with a run, the next batter fanned, retiring the side. The Beavers then came in for their innings and were able to bring in five runs before being retired, the score thus standing 5 to 4. In the next innings the Cannucks were able to score one, while the Beavers were unable to put one across. In the third both teams failed to tally a run, but in the fourth the Canucks got busy and were only able to score one; the fifth and sixth ended for Canucks with only one tally, while the Beavers were able to come up with only two more runs to tie the score. The seventh started out in real earnest, Canucks getting one run and the Beavers tied the score Two more innings were played before the winners were decided, the Beavers winning out by a score of 13 to 11. The next game will be played at the East Belleville Playgrounds on Friday evening at 7 o'clock.

The line up:

Beavers—Symons, N. Doolittle, Ashley, Woodley, Symons, Harden, Clark, Moxom.

Canucks—Read, Arnott, Ketcheson, Hurley, James, Wims, Arnott, Bongard, Marshall.

The score:

Canucks—5 0 0 5 0 0 1 0 0—11.
Beavers—5 0 0 1 0 3 2 1 1—13.

TO MAKE HAIRS VANISH FROM FACE NECK OR ARMS

Keep a little powdered delatone handy and when hair growths appear make a paste with some of the powder and a little water, then spread over hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be entirely free from the hair or blemish. This simple treatment is unfailing, but care should be exercised to be sure and get genuine delatone, otherwise you may be disappointed.

More Praise For Y.M.C.A. Overseas

Corp. H. W. Knight, in a letter to his father, speaks of the Y. M. C. A. work overseas, as follows:

"You ask me what I think of the Y. M. C. A. I think it is good. Their canteens are the best in the country. The Imperial fellows are delighted with the quick service they give. At an Imperial canteen you wait until they are good and ready to serve you and they don't seem to care whether you get what you want or not. The Y.M.C.A. keeps a good stock of Canadian goods, which are better than the English stuff. Baseball outfits, and, in fact, all sporting goods are given free. All one has to do is to ask for them. We (D. R.'s) have a gramophone and at Y.M.C.A. headquarters we get needles and new records whenever we want them."

Marne Salient Has Been Wiped Out Boasted Hun Offensive Annihilated

GERMANS RETREATED TWENTY MILES.

London, Aug. 6.—Since the Crown Prince began his retreat his armies have fallen back twenty miles and lost forty thousand prisoners. The present German position is nearly a straight line between Soissons and Rheims. The latter too is still surrounded by the enemy on three sides, though the latest successes have relieved the pressure east of the city.

The enemy requires fewer divisions to defend this line than if he retreated across the Aisne, whose many windings would necessitate large bodies of troops to defend them. The Aisne, however, would be most dangerous in the rear of a beaten army and indications are that the enemy will continue his retirement to north of the Aisne, as even this natural rampart has been jeopardized by the French bridgeheads at Soissons and its suburb St. Vaast, the latter commanding the whole sharp bend of the river east of the city.

FRENCH OPINIONS ON THE RETREAT.

Paris, August 6.—The Petit Parisien reflects the general sentiment of the press of the nation over the retaking of Soissons when it says:

"It is a great victory we have scored on the anniversary of our general mobilization of four years ago. France has today the right to be joyful."

The entire press regards the German retirement as of the utmost importance. Commandant Civrieux, a keen observer, says in the Matin:

"It is an indisputable victory, the consequences of which will be without doubt of considerable amplitude.

"From messages reaching Paris it becomes evident that this time it is not more or less an involuntary retreat on his part that the enemy has carried out to avoid pressing danger. It is under the direct shock of the allied armies that the enemy is giving way and falling back in disorder. The two lateral supports of the Germans being lost, they cannot maintain themselves much longer south of the Vesle, nor beyond that river, now that the Allies beyond hat river, now that the Allies are in a position to push on by Soissons to the north of the Aisne.

"The Crown Prince is beaten. Clearly he does not seem to have any other resources than to regain in all haste other positions.

Later telephonic messages indicate how the new advance was executed. The German flank was turned southeast of Soissons by a particularly brilliant advance by French, British and American troops on the high ground overlooking the little river Crise. From here the Allies are able to shell the German artillery and reserve positions in the Crise valley and to fire into the backs of the Germans on a line facing south.

"The allies are now solidly established on the right or eastern bank."

BERLIN IS IN DESPAIR TODAY.

Berne, Aug. 6.—"The Marne defeat has produced unspeakable scenes of despair in Berlin," the Tageblatt declares. "Such outbursts of utter discouragement and downheartedness never before were witnessed."

The Frankische Tagepost deplores the wild rumors that the Kaiser and Von Hindenburg have been assassinated, and that Von Hindenburg was killed in a duel with the Crown Prince as betraying the most dangerous nervousness.

The Government threatens severe penalties for the ones responsible for spreading these rumors.

GERMAN PUBLIC RESTIVE.

Rotterdam, Aug. 6.—The German people are beginning to feel restive under the effects of the defeat at the Marne. This is evidenced by statements from Ludendorff and Von Hindenburg to newspaper correspondents tending to bolster up the spirits of the public.

The Fremdenblat, copies of which have been received here, reports riots in the markets, with the police unable to cope with the situation. Rumors are current that Von Hindenburg will stake all upon a final blow against the Allies in September, with three points his objectives—the Champagne, farther north along the coast, and at Verdun, with Paris he ultimate goal.

Berne, Aug. 6.—The German offensive has been stopped and present operations cannot be publicly discussed, declared General Hellingrath, Bavarian Minister of War, in speaking in the First Chamber Saturday.

"The fourth year of the war ends by what amounts to a stoppage of our offensive," he said, "but it is not possible to judge the situation apart from the operations now in progress, which cannot be discussed in public. Besides, our people are sufficiently steady and patiently will accept the events which delay a final result."

Try Magnesia For Stomach Trouble

It Neutralizes Stomach Acidity, Prevents Food Fermentation.

Doubtless, if you are a sufferer from indigestion, you have already tried pepsin, bismuth, soda charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and you know these things will not cure your trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up hope and deciding you are a chronic dyspeptic just try the effect of bisurated magnesia—not the ordinary carbonate, citrate, oxide or milk but the pure bisurated magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powdered or tablet form. Take a teaspoonful of the powder or two compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in your stomach which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn and the bloated or heavy lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat.

You will find that, provided you take a little bisurated magnesia immediately after a meal, you can eat almost anything and enjoy it without any danger of pain or discomfort to follow and moreover the continued use of the bisurated magnesia cannot injure the stomach in any way so long as there are any symptoms of acid indigestion.

AIMS OF BRITAIN TOWARD RUSSIA

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The British Government has defined its aims regarding Russia, in a reply to the provisional government of Siberia, according to The Daily Mail's correspondent at Vladivostok. The statement follows:

"The aim of his majesty's government is to secure the political and economic restoration of Russia without internal interference of any kind and to bring about the expulsion of enemy forces from Russian soil. His majesty's government categorically declares that it has no intention of infringing to the slightest degree on the territorial integrity of Russia."

LONDON, Aug. 7.—In an attack carried out this morning southwest of Morlancourt, the British regained ground taken from them by the Germans yesterday along the Bray-Corbie road north of the Somme. The British line astride Clarence River on the Flanders front has been advanced a short distance. A few prisoners were taken during the course of operations.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 8—After being marooned on a sand scow within two feet of the brink of Niagara Falls for 16 hours, Geo. Harris of Buffalo and Gus Lofberg, Swedish sailor, were rescued by the Youngstown Life Saving Crew this morning.

On French Front, 2.30 p. m. Aug. 7.—The allies to-day threw a strong force across the river Vesle where it met and defeated the Germans. The enemy launched a strong counter-attack, but was repulsed by violent barrage.

Montreal Factory Prey to Flames

Damage Done to Extent of Half Million Dollars and Four Firemen Hurt

MONTREAL, Aug. 8.—Damage of over half million dollars; a factory, a public bath and thirty dwellings destroyed. Three arrests of persons wanted as witnesses at the forthcoming enquiry, one of them suspected of being an alien enemy; four firemen hurt girls leaping from windows; thrilling rescues; over a hundred residences placed in jeopardy. These were some of the outstanding features of the fire which broke out this morning at the premises of the Montreal Biscuit Company, St. Henri, in this city.

The flames jumped the street for a distance of a thousand yards. Both sides Brewster ave., where the factory is located, were flaming fiercely from St. James to St. Antoine streets. Back and front of the factory residences were the scene of residents moving their household effects as quickly as possible.

1,000 GERMAN GUNS TAKEN IN ADVANCE

Also Millions of Rounds of Ammunition.

London, Aug. 8.—Since the Germans began their retreat from the Marne, the Allies have captured a thousand guns, thousands of machine guns and millions of rounds of artillery ammunition, agency despatches received here from the front report.

Americans Extend Ages of Service

New Man-Power Bill Makes Men Liable to Forty-Five

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The new tdministration man-power bill extending the selective service act to all men between the ages of 18 and 45 inclusive and authorizing the president to call such persons into military service "in such sequence of ages and at such times" as he may prescribe was introduced in both houses of congress.

The measure, which was prepared by Secretary Baker with the approval of the president and the Provost Marshal General Crowder, was referred to the military committees. Congressional leaders plan to have the measure considered soon after the summer recess period is over the latter part of this month.

Two Marooned Men Rescued at Niagara

Stuck in Scow All Night Near Edge of Horseshoe Falls

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 8—Henry James Harris, 40, and Gus Lofburg 54, employes of the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock Company, engaged in dredging the Niagara River and Hydraulic Power Company's canal for increased power development, were rescued yesterday morning from a scow on which they were marooned 1,000 feet above the Horseshoe fall and 850 feet from the Canadian shore. The scow lodged on a shelf of rock in the rapids above the cataract at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon after a tow line between it and the tug Hassayampa broke while the vessels were a short distance above the upper rapids.

HELPS HIS COMRADE IN

Harris was the first taken off. He was helped into the breeches buoy by Lofburg. eH was landed on the roof of the Electrical Developement Co., at 8.40 o'clock. Lofburg was landed an hour later. The men made the trip from the standard scow to the roof of the great power plant in a breeches buoy operating on lines shot across the scow by the United States coast guard from fort Niagara.

Both men collapsed after they were brought ashore. Thier condition is not critical, it was believed but long hours of hard work without food and the terriblo nerve strain told heavily on the men. Harris was entirely submerged for nearly a minute while being hauled ashore. Thousands of volunteer workers, coast guards and American and Canadian soldiers assisted in the rescue from three o'clock yesterday until the last man was brought ashore to-day.

READY TO SACRIFICE SELF

"Lofburg made me come over first; I was about all in," Harris said.

The breeches buoy was hauled back to the scow by Lofburg and half an hour later he was safe ashore. He was able to keep his head above water at all times, despite the heavy sag of the lifeline.

NEW YORK SWELTERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—New York sweltered in the hottest August 5 since 1899 with a high temperature of 90.7 degrees registered at 5 p. m. At 10 p. m. the mercury registered 85 degrees as hot as it was in mid-afternoon. New York's high record is 92.

ALLIES START NEW OFFENSIVE DRIVING HUNS OUT OF AMIENS SECTOR

FIELD MARSHAL HAIG IN COMMAND

ATTACK, WHICH BEGAN AT DAWN, IS ON A WIDE FRONT, WITH FIELD MARSHAL HAIG IN COMMAND AND IS PROCEEDING SATISFACTORILY ACCORDING TO EARLY REPORTS — PRESENT ATTACK HAS GREAT STRATEGIC IMPORTANCE AND FORMS PART OF SERIES OF BLOWS AT ENEMY ALL ALONG THE LINE, APPARENTLY AIMED AT COMPLETING DEMORALIZATION BEGUN BY DISASTROUS DEFEAT AND RETREAT OF CROWN PRINCE'S ARMY—ALLIES HAVE TAKEN INITIATIVE ALL ALONG THE LINE AND ARE EVERYWHERE AGGRESSIVELY HAMMERING THE ENEMY AND FORCING HIM FURTHER BACK—NOW EJECTING HUNS FROM AMIENS SECTOR.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(Official)—British troops launched an attack southeast of Amiens this morning, says a statement from Field Marshal Haig today. Early reports indicate that the attack is progressing satisfactorily. The attack is under command of Field Marshal Haig and is on a wide front. The statement adds that the troops engaged—the British Fourth Army and the French First Army—advanced at dawn.

The attack is probably aimed to weaken, if not to wipe out entirely, the German positions in and around Montdidier, where the battle line swings to the north. The British troops hold the sector of the Somme which joins up with the French lines south of Villers-Bretonneux. Late last week the Germans withdrew to the east of the Avre in the region west and northwest of Montdidier. Since then the French have been gaining ground on the same front. A line from the Somme to the Avre and thence south along the river faces fairly opon country, and the region of Picardy in front of it is part of the region devastated by the Germans in their retreat from the Somme in March, 1917. A break through in the Montdidier region would have a menacing effect on the German lines from Rheims to Ypres.

ALLIES GAINED ALL OBJECTIVES.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—British troops attacked over a 12-mile front on both sides of the Somme. They gained all their objectives within four hours and have captured a considerable number of prisoners and guns. British and French troops in the Picardy sector have advanced at some points to a depth of more than three miles. Franco-British tanks have crossed the Avre luce valley in a new drive begun today.

With the British Army in France, Aug. 8.—In the offensive on the front east of Amiens today the British have taken Hahner Wood, Dodo Wood and probably have possession of the towns of Marcel-Cave and Lamotteen-Santere.

PENETRATED HUN LINES TWO MILES.

An advance by the British to Marcel-Cave and Lamotten-Santerre would represent a penetration of approximately two miles into the German lines. The latter town is about three miles east of Villers-Bretonneux, slightly to the east of which the former British line ran. Marcel-Cave is two miles southwest of Lamotten-Santerre and two and one-half miles southeast of Villers-Bretonneux. The woods named do not appear on available maps. The advices indicate that the principol force of the British stroke was exerted in the Villers-Bretonneux area slightly to the southeast of Amiens where Field Marshal Haig's troops had an advantageous jumping-off place from Villers-Bretonneux ridge.

MANY VILLAGES CAPTURED.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—A very considerable number of villages have been captured in the Franco-British offensive and substantial progress made according to news received here this afternoon.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—The Allied attack on the Albert-Montdidier front today apparently was a complete surprise to the Germans and many prisoners were taken. One German division was surprised as it was coming up to relieve front line troops,

Sun Goes Over Top Warmest Day In Year

And the Most Tropical Since July 30, 1916 — 100-Mark Passed

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—Old Sol went over the top yesterday in Toronto where the thermometer passed the 100 mark in the shade in the early afternoon hours.

Yesterday was the hottest in the year and was the hottest day in Toronto since July 30, 1916, when the mercury registered 100.2, which was the highest point reached yesterday.

Several Sentenced For Street Rioting

Year Is the Longest Term Imposed By Toronto Police Magistrate

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—Following the street riots of Saturday night, Magistrate Denison, in the Police Court yesterday, sentenced Walter Salmon, a returned soldier, to one year at the Ontario Reformatory, and Private F. McCheney, of headquarters' staff, to a like term. The charge against the latter was that of assaulting the police.

John Ross, a civilian from Calgary, was sentenced to nine months; Arthur Draymond and Ernest Haggiss, two returned wounded men, received six months' terms each; and three boys, Barker Neil, Henry Harrington and George McIlkeny, were fined $10 and costs or 10 days each. Theon Major, another soldier, was remanded one week to the reception hospital.

Frank Edwards was given six months for assaulting a policeman last night.

Tanker Sunk By Submarine

Went Down off Canadian Coast After a Fight of Three Hours

A Canadian Port, Aug. 8—After a three hours' battle with a German submarine about 30 miles west of here the oil tanker Lux Blanca was torpedoed and sunk and two of her crew killed. The oil tanker left port at eight o'clock in the morning and three hours later the battle opened with the U-boat. Both ships opened fire and the shelling kept up for over two hours The U-boat had the longest range guns and her shots had a more telling effect. Failing to sink the tanker by gunfire, the submarine launched a torpedo which ripped open the stern of the steamer and she soon disappeared into the depths.

The captain and crew took to the boats, two of which have been brought in here, and the occupants of the third have been rescued and are on their way here. Another steamer which was about 5 miles distant when the fight opened, returned to port.

Mutinies and Riots Frequent In Austria

Deserters are Forming Bands of Outlaws— Forty Thousand in One

ROME, Aug. 8.—Austrian prisoners declare that mutinies, desertions and rioting are occurring regularly in Austro-Hungary, according to despatches from the Italian front. Deserters are forming bands of outlaws, and in Moravia one armed band of forty thousand was organized, the despatches said.

At Rakersburg the 97th Regiment consisting of 2,000, mutinied on May 23, looting and setting fire to headquarters. They were quelled after one officer and four soldiers were killed. Eight soldiers were executed.

Woman Drowned In Sight of Husband And Children in Bay of Quinte

Mrs. William Deacon, While Bathing Near Bay Bridge Stepped Into Deep Place and Was Drowned in Plain Sight of Her Husband and Three Small Children

Yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock the first drowning accident of the season occurred, when the waters of the Bay of Quinte claimed Mrs. William Deacon of this city, as a victim. A most distressing feature of the unfortunate occurrence was that the woman was drowned with her husband and three children but a few feet away. It appears that Mr. and Mrs. Deacon and the three children left the harbor in a row boat, and proceeded towards the bay bridge. Near the eastern approach of the crib work leading to the bridge and near the cut made by the dredge when dredging was done for the roadway of the bridge there is a projection of land running out into the bay. When the family party reached this point Mrs. Deacon decided she would like to take a swim. She partially disrobed and jumped into the water, but had only been in a few minutes when she was seen to throw up her hands and call "O Will," meaning her husband. Mr. Deacon made every effort to heach her in time with the boat, but in vain.

An alarm was raised and in a short time assistance arrived. Some thirty minutes after the unfortunate woman sank the body was recovered, but life was extinct. The grief of the husband and criidren was saddening to witness, the children clinging to friends and pleading for their mother who had been so suddenly taken from them. The body was taken to Tickell & Sons undertaking establishment, where it was prepared for burial, and then removed to the family residence, 44 Mill street.

Mrs. Deacon, whose maiden name was Miss Catharine O'Connor, was a daughter of the late Mr. William O'Connor of Belleville, and was born in this city 41 years ago. She had resided here all her life and had many friends who sincerely regret her untimely death. She was a member of St. Michael's Church. To the bereaved husband and motherless children will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of all citizens.

The body was recovered by Mr. Charles Baker of Rossmore, who was in a boat with Mr. Robt. Andrews, and another gentleman. It lay in about ten feet of water.

Toronto Woman Gave Up All Hope

Mrs. Gorringe Never Expected To Be Well Again—Tanlac Restores Her

"Positively, the day I started taking Tanlac was the turning point in my life, and I wouldn't be without this wonderful medicine for anything," declared Mrs. Ivy Gorringe, of 49 Perth avenue, Toronto, who is employed by Telfer Bros., Ltd., the other day.

"Last winter," she continued, "I underwent a serious operation that was such a severe shock to my nervous system that when I left the hospital I was on the verge of collapse. My strength was completely gone my vitality was at a low ebb and I didn't seem to be able to improve at all. My appetite failed and the little I forced myself to eat did me no good for I fell off till I weighed only ninety pounds and was little more than skin and bones. My skin was so pale and sallow it looked like I had no blood in my veins and I just can't describe how utterly worn out and rundown I was. I gave up hope of ever getting any better and was so blue and despondent that I actually didn't care whether I lived or not.

"I never was much of a believer in medicines of any kind, but when one of my friends who worried herself over my condition begged me to try Tanlac, I decided to do so just to please her. Well, sir, it did me so much good that before I had finished my first bottle I was feeling like a different person. I have taken six bottles now and it is really astonishing the way I have improved. I have a splendid appetite and my food is doing me good, for I have already gained ten pounds since I started taking Tanlac. I have entirely recovered from that nervous, rundown condition following my operation and am actually in better shape today than I have ever been. I know there are others who are prejudiced as I was about taking medicines, but if they will only give Tanlac a trial I am sure they will be convinced like I was that it is the best nerve tonic in the world."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

HUNTER-POET DEAD.

Sir Clive Phillipps-Wooley Had Adventurous Career.

Sir Clive Phillipps-Wooley died suddenly at his home at Somenos, near Vancouver, on July 9th. He was one of the best known poets in British Columbia.

Sir Clive Phillipps-Wooley was born in Devonshire, England, sixty-five years ago, being a descendant of the noted British family of which Lord Clive, who established British rule in India, was a distinguished member. He was a captain in the British army and later in the royal navy and came to British Columbia thirty-five years ago on a big game hunting expedition.

His letters descriptive of his trip at that time were published in the British press and were later published in book form.

Sir Clive's son, a lieutenant-commander in the navy, was the first Canadian-born Britisher to be killed in the present war. He was killed in the battle of Falkland Islands. Deceased was a personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt, who knew him as a big game hunter. He was a noted poet and was given the title of Knight Bachelor a year ago in recognition of his contribution to Canadian literature. He was the author of several books.

The late Sir Clive Phillipps-Wooley's career was one of conservative and thrilling adventure. In his youth—he was then Capt. Clive Phillipps, the Wooley being added upon the death of a relative whose will made it a condition of his inheriting—he accompanied the famous Capt. Fred Burnaby on his ride to Khiva on a seret service mission for the British Government. For later years he distinguished himself as the champion swordsman, boxer and rifle shot of the British army, and for several years acted as charge d'affaires at the British Embassy in Russia. Thereafter he took a commission in the navy, which he held until personal interests, upon the death of a wealthier relative, induced his withdrawal from the service. Big game hunting next claimed his attention, Africa, India and the Farthest West in turn claiming his attention. For some time he was the close companion of F. C. Sellers, the lion king, later being associated fraternally with Sir Rider (then Mr. Haggard), in several of whose works he figures under a fictional name as one of the principal characters. Settling down, as he confidently believed, in England, he was for a time the editor of the Badminton Magazine, and afterward the originator of the Badminton Library, the authoritative encyclopediae for all British sportsmen, several of the principal volumes in which are from his pen. An ardent Imperialist always his natural poetic genius had during the past thirty years been displayed almost continuously in preaching the gospel of preparedness for the war which ten years ago he predicted confidently to a derisive or indulgent people. In his collected verse under the title "Songs of an English Esau" are some of the most stirring Imperialistic poems of the age, the gem of the collection being perhaps "The Sea Queen Wakes." In the field of fiction he has been an active worker, a new book bearing his name appearing almost annually until about five years ago. "The Chicamon Stone," and "Gold, Gold in Cariboo," are favorite romances in which the charm and atmosphere of the British Columbia mountains are admirably caught and communicated. Latterly Sir Clive has been playing his own important role in the machinery of war organization as chief censor for Western Canada.

The Wrong Time.

A Y.M.C.A. secretary with the expeditionary force in Paris tells this one. Some Canadians attended a theatrical performance the other evening. I speak French pretty well myself, and I went along with one of the boys as an interpreter. After the curtain had gone down on the first act, the principal comedian came out and addressed the audience. When he had finished, my companion broke out in vociferous applause. "Why did you applaud that curtain speech?" I whispered. "I wanted to make some o' these other doughboys think I understood French," he answered. "What did the guy say?" "He announced to the audience," I answered, sadly, "that his part must be taken by an understudy for the rest of the performance, as he had just received word that his mother was dying."

Soldiers of the Soil.

Nearly twelve thousand Soldiers of the Soil boys are hard at work on the farms, helping in the campaign for greater war-time production, in addition to those who arrange for their own employment independent of the Soldiers of the Soil organization. The Soldiers of the Soil are divided as folows:

British Columbia	669
Alberta	646
Saskatchewan	1,405
Manitoba	1,006
Ontario	4,621
Quebec	670
New Brunswick	677
Nova Scotia	1,788
Prince Edward Island	500

A Youthful Colonel.

Kingston beats all records in the production of young lieutenant-colonels. James C. Stewart, son of Postmaster James Stewart, left Canada in August, 1914, as captain, and was then 22 years old. He was major at 24 and lieutenant-colonel at 26, was awarded the D.S.O., and was twice mentioned in despatches. He was wounded three times, and is still on active service.

Emergency Diet.

Klondike Indians are facing starvation through failure of their fish and game supplies. One trapper recently was reduced to eating his caribou-hide blanket, which he chewed after soaking and scraping off the hair. Many dog teams have died of starvation.

Letters From Overseas

21ST. BATT. BAND WON OUT.

Mrs. Garnet Dobbs has received a letter from her husband, Sergt. G. E. Dobbs, telling of the splendid success the band had in a contest held in France of all the different bands. He explains just what their band was up against and the number competing.

There are four bands in their brigade and only one of the four could compete, and it fell to the 21st Batt. Band (better known in Belleville as the 254th Battalion Band). There were seventeen brass bands, eleven pipe bands and eight fife and drum bands, all competing in their different classes. Sergt. Dobbs says in part:

"We found we were to play between two of the best bands in the Canadian corps, one before us and the other following us. There were six Canadian bands and eleven Imperial bands altogether, and some mighty good ones, too. After listening all day to the different bands I concluded that if we were in the running at all we would be lucky. Well, our turn came and we entered the ring, got our inspection of dress over with, the signal came to start playing, and we waded in. The boys all kept their heads and worked together very nicely, working just like a piece of machinery, and almost before we knew it we were through playing and out of the ring. After the last band played they held a massed band program, all the flute bands combining (about 150 players) and playing a tune, and it was pretty fine. As soon as they finished the pipers, who had been forming up in the meantime, started to play—and you should have seen it. There were about 250 pipers and drummers, and with the ribbons and kilts flying in the wind and the drumsticks twirling, etc., it was a magnificent sight an done I shall never forget. When they were finished we did our stunt, the seventeen bands massing and playing the French and British National Anthems, under Dr. Williams of the Grenadier Guards. There were over 850 in his turn, and you can imagine that we kicked up quite a row. Just at the finish of this the result of the contest was announced: The King's Royal Rifles first; The 21st Canadians second, and the Royal Scots third.

Well, I could scarcely believe my ears when I heard it. Just fancy us "cleaning up" all the "crack" Canadian bands and all but one of the Imperials also. There were several of our officers in attendance and I thought they would go crazy! It was certainly a fine band that beat us to first place and we feel satisfied at the decision, although a great many of the Imperial bandsmen thought we should have been given first. However, the judges were two of the best musicians in England, namely: Dr. Williams and Dan Godfrey, Jr. The whole affair was carried out very fairly. The musical judges could not see the bands at all, everything being done by numbers, and they couldn't tell whether it was a Canadian or an Imperial band playing, so I guess we must have won on our merits. We've been receiving congratulations ever since, and this morning a message came over from headquarters, conveying congratulations from the General and staff of the brigade to Bandmaster E. R. Hinchey and players on their splendid success.

Are You Deceived?

Have you been led to believe that the knife is the only cure for piles?

If so, it is unfortunate, for many thousands are being cured by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Sometimes after operations have failed and often when doctors have said that an operation was the only hope.

It won't cost you much to try this treatment in your home. It is sure to relieve and usually effects complete cure.

TRIPLETS IN PARRY SOUND.

Parry Sound, Aug. 8.—Dr. S. B. Biehn officiated at the rather unusual ceremony of the birth of triplets. Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Michaelis, near the town, were presented with three healthy children, two boys and one girl, whose combined weight was a little over twenty-one pounds. The youngsters are thriving and give evidence of becoming good Canadians. The parents are Germans who have no use for the Kaiser or militarism.

List Paper Mills As Essentials

On Understanding That U.S Publishers Will Practise Economy

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. — Paper mills have been listed as an essential industry, the priorities division of the War Industries Board announced today, on the understanding that the greatest possible economy will be exercised in the use of paper, and that newspapers will reduce their consumption of newsprint 15 per cent. on daily editions and 20 per cent. on Sunday editions.

Publishers believe it was said to-day that with the discontinuance of many wasteful practices and the institution of a sliding scale of reduction in reading matter they will accomplish the required curtailments without interfering with the advertising columns.

The War Industries Board is said to favor the principle that no new newspapers be started during the war.

A MIS-HIT

Did you make a mis-hit the time you employed the last "help."

Don't worry. There are lots of good fish in the sea, and a sure bait to catch them is a Want Ad.

SINCLAIR'S

THE GODDESS FRONT LACED is probably the most popular Front Laced Corset ever offered by Corset manufacturers, and the reason is simply this: The Goddess carries an absolute guarantee. Here it is:

"If within One Year from date of purchase a Steel in this Corset Breaks or Rusts, or if the Fabric Tears, we will replace it Free of Charge providing the Corset is returned to us with Tag, as soon as the Rust, Break or Tear is discovered."

Besides this guarantee for One Year, the Goddess is one of the most comfortable Front Laced Corsets ever introduced to the Canadian trade. We show the Goddess in several styles, to sell from $2.25 to $4.50 each.

See our Model 820 to sell at $4.00.

Ladies' Knitted Bathing Suits

Never have we sold such quantities of Ladies' and Misses' Cotton and Wool Knitted Bathing Suits. We think our styles and prices are absolutely correct. These suits sell in Cotton at $1.50 and $2.50 each and in Wool Knitted Garments at $7.00 each.

Buy one of these suits and enjoy your Summer outing. Swimming adds years to your life.

Silk and Cotton Smocks

FROM $2.00 to $12.50 EACH.

This is surely a Smock Season, and we certainly have them in many styles in Cotton, Linen, Silk, Shantung and Crepe de Chine.

Landmarks in Montreal

As the oldest city on the continent with the exception of Quebec, Montreal has many spots of historical interest for the tourist. Most of these are well known and are amply described in the guide-books. But there are some landmarks that are half-forgotten even by the natives of the city.

Among these are the two quaint towers at the entrance to the Grand Seminary of St. Sulpice on Sherbrooke street. These two towers have a remarkable history, dating back to the wild adventurous days when Montreal was a mere settlement in an Indian-haunted forest.

In those days, now over two centuries ago, there was a walled settlement at this spot, and the two towers were built into the wall to form part of the system of protection against marauding Indians. Within the walls there was a colony of Jesuit missionaries and a village of Indian converts.

The old histories relate that from these towers the watchmen peered anxiously towards the forests by which they were surrounded, expecting yet dreading the approach of their dangerous and savage foes. Many years ago Mrs. Leprohon, a local poet, wrote a long poem on the towers, one verse of which reads as follows:

These towers tell of a time long past,
When the red man roamed o'er regions vast,
And the settlers, men of bold heart and brow,
Had to use the sword as well as the plough.
When women (not lovelier now than then)
Had to do the deeds of undaunted men,
And when higher aims engrossed the heart
Than study of passion's and toilet's art.

One of the old towers in early times was used as a chapel of the Indian mission, and the other was used as an Indian school. In the former, the body of a Huron Indian named Francois Thoronhiongo is buried. He was baptized by the Rev. Father Brebœuf, who was the hero of one of the most dreadful martyrdoms recorded in Canadian history. In 1644 he and Father Lalemont, both Jesuits, were tortured to death by Iroquois with every cruelty devisable.

A little to the eastward of these towers is a tablet marking the camp of Gen. Amhert's army at the time when the surrender of the town marked the completion of the British conquest of Canada.

At Chambly, a short distance from Montreal, is a most interesting fort. Chambly is on the Richelieu river. This river was the highway traversed by the Iroquois in their raids on Canada. Consequently a series of forts were erected from its mouth to the head of Lake Champlain. Of these forts, the largest was the one still remaining at Chambly. It was built in 1665, and rebuilt in 1711. In the stormy times of the old regime it was always well garrisoned.

At Lachine, nine miles from Montreal, which is well known to tourists because of the Lachine Rapids, there is still remaining the building which at one time formed the headquarters of the Hudson Bay Company in Canada. It was here that Sir George Simpson, the famous explorer, lived at the time when he was governor of the company. By the way, he was the first man to make what is described as the first "all-land" tour round the world. Sir George and Lady Simpson were great figures in the local life in those days. It is related that when there were balls or other social functions at night in Montreal, Sir George and Lady Simpson used to drive in from Lachine, and the Bank of Montreal was kept open until the social functions were over in order that Lady Simpson might deposit her jewels in the safe of the bank before driving back to Lachine.

At Ste. Anne de Bellevue, 25 miles from Montreal, is the ancient house in which the famous Irish poet, Thomas Moore, composed his well-known Canadian boat song, which reads as follows:

Faintly as tolls the evening chime,
Our voices keep tune and our oars keep time.
Soon as the woods on shore look dim,
We'll sing at St. Ann's our parting hymn.
Row, brothers, row, the stream runs fast,
The Rapids are near, and the daylight's past!

Why should we yet our sail unfurl?
There is not a breath the blue wave to curl!
But when the wind blows off the shore,
Oh! sweetly we'll rest our weary oar.
Blow, breezes, blow, the stream runs fast,
The Rapids are near, and the daylight's past!

Utawas' tide! this trembling moon
Shall see us float over thy surges soon.
Saint of this green isle, hear our prayers,
Oh! grant us cool heavens and favoring airs!
Blow, breezes, blow, the stream runs fast,
The Rapids are near, and the daylight's past!

The house where Moore sojourned is now used as a branch of the Bank of Montreal.—J. Robertson Findlay.

ECONOMY BECOMES LAW.

Citizens Who Are Not Thrifty Will Be Punished.

Enforcement of the Canada Food Board's regulations as to food conservation has been placed in the hands of the police machinery of the municipalities and of the different provinces throughout the Dominion.

It is the duty of the provinces to enforce Federal laws and the orders of the Canada Food Board have the effect of Federal law, being passed upon authority of orders issued by the Privy Council and published in the Canada Gazette. It, therefore, becomes the duty of police officers throughout the Dominion to acquaint themselves with these regulations regarding our food supply and to see to it that they are obeyed. At this stage of the world's food situation, when 4,750,000 people in Europe have starved to death as compared to 4,250,000 soldiers who have died as the result of battle, it is beyond cavil or dispute that these food regulations are absolutely necessary. Indeed, many people in communication with friends in England or in France think our Canadian regulations mild in view of what people on the other side are undergoing. Patriotism as well as duty should inspire submission to these restrictions by the public and vigilant enforcement of them by the officers of the law.

In cases of convictions secured by the municipal police officers, it should be noted that where these convictions result in the imposition of fines, the money from these fines is to be paid to the municipal treasuries, and similarly in the cases where provincial officers secure convictions. The Canada Food Board has circularized these orders in official form throughout the police machinery of the various provinces, beginning with the Attorneys-General and continuing through the lists of Crown Attorneys and Crown Prosecutors. In some provinces the chief constables have also received copies of the various orders affecting the public. As a result, throughout Canada of recent weeks, there has been a crop of convictions. In all cases the magistrates have stood firmly behind the regulations and imposed the penalties as provided. These run from $100 to $1,000, in fines or imprisonment up to three months or both. Restaurant keepers, who have served meat on prohibited days and hours, served sugar on the tables or wasted food, have been brought to task and the widespread publicity this has entailed will do a great deal more to assure conservation of food in public eating places than anything else.

The anti-loafing law, also bearing upon our war-time food production, has likewise been enforced. Magistrates have seized the opportunity of dealing with loafers, tramps and "sports" by putting them to work on the farms. "Non-essential" industries have been interpreted by some magistrates into more or less definite groups and men who had no better excuse than employment in said questionable industries have been ordered to get into more useful occupations. In Winnipeg a great change has been observed in the streets since this law went into effect. The idlers and loafers have disappeared.

Behind In Meat Schedule.

Because of the shortage of shipping Great Britain has already fallen behind 25,000 tons in her schedule of meat shipments guaranteed to France, compared to the total of 70,000 tons shortage in the schedule for 1917.

The Lessons of War.

"So you're saving up to buy an airship? You're quite an ambitious little boy."

"Yes, sir; I want to fly over Jimmie Mack's yard and drop bricks on him."

HE KNEW NO FEAR.

Calgary Soldier Has Been Awarded Victoria Cross.

The Victoria Cross has been awarded to Lieut. George Burdon McKean, Canadian infantry, aged 30. He enlisted at Edmonton as a private in January, 1915. He won the Military Medal and was wounded in 1916 and received a commission in May, 1917. He is still in France. His mother lives in Calgary. McKean's party was held up in a communication trench by a most intense fire from grenades and machine guns. Realizing this block unless destroyed might mar the success of the whole operation, McKean ran into the open, leaped over the blockhead on top of the enemy. When a man rushed at him with a bayonet McKean shot him through the body, then shot the man underneath him who was struggling violently. This gallant action enabled the capture of the position.

McKean's supply of bombs ran out and whilst waiting a further supply he engaged the enemy single-handed. On bombs arriving he fearlessly rushed a second block, killing two and capturing four and driving the remainder, with a machine gun, into a dugout, which was destroyed. This officer's splendid dash and bravery undoubtedly saved many lives.

Talked of "Prussianism."

J. A. Cross, a prominent farmer of Tutela Heights, was fined $500 and costs by the magistrate at Brantford for making the observation, in criticizing the Government order-in-council calling out farmers' sons, that "We had just as well be under Prussian rule as under Canadian." Several witnesses told of Cross using the expression and the defendant admitted having said something to that effect when his son was called up for service after having been previously exempted. His counsel declares that he was but exercising the right of free speech common to Canadian citizenship. Magistrate Livingston, in giving judgment, stated that since the order-in-council of April 16, such a remark could only be construed as detrimental to the cause of the Canadians and the Allies, and was the very thing which it was desired to stop. When the life blood of Canadian young men and women was being poured out against the Prussians, such an expression of opinion was insulting, as well as traitorous, and the magistrate said as far as he was concerned it would be stopped. Cross took a prominent part on the farmers' deputation to Ottawa and participated in meetings of protest to the Government. Four witnesses, all farmers, gave evidence against him. M. W. McEwen, appearing for Cross, declared that farmers all over the country had used that kind of language, and stronger, whereat the magistrate replied that a lot of those farmers should have been put in jail and that there had been a laxity in law enforcement. Counsel further declared that the Act of the Government, aimed to stop criticism of its actions, was highly Prussian in itself.

He Smuggled Whiskey.

A fine of $100 was paid the other day at Bangor, Me., by a man who kicked a barrel of whiskey so that it rolled from one side of a room to the other, says the Utica Press. The man was not a prohibitionist fighting the demon rum, but a friend of said demon. The barroom is in Aroostook county, Me., and is exactly astride the international boundary line between the state of Maine and the province of New Brunswick. The barrel of whiskey was on the Canadian side of the room, and when a friend of the owner of the whiskey heard Canadian officers were about to raid the place he aimed a kick at the barrel which sent it to the Maine side of the room. For that kick he was arrested for smuggling whiskey across the border and fined $100.

To Escape From the Huns.

Pat O'Brien, the daring aviator who escaped from a train bearing him to a German prison camp, says in the American Magazine:

"I began to cough violently, as if the smoke in the compartment was choking me. So, when I opened the window again, as if I had to have air, the guards didn't interfere. I had been figuring out a plan for making the jump a quick enough one to prevent their catching me and pulling me back.

"I had some bread and sausage in a sort of knapsack I had made out of an old gas bag, and I acted as if I wanted to put this up in the rack. To do this, I stood on the edge of the seat and took hold of a strap. Pretending to sway with the train, I tested this strap and found it would bear my weight. So then with my bag and the precious food in it I gave one or two lurches, as the train rocked, and then threw myself straight out of the window.

"I landed on my feet, but my head struck the ground at almost the same instant and I lost consciousness. It was only for a few moments, however, for I pulled myself together quickly and started to run off the right of way. The train was stopped half a mile further on, but by the time they came back I was lost in the darkness. Fortunately, I was so dazed that I had headed the wrong way—back into Germany. I say 'fortunately' because if they searched for me, they probably went the other way. By the time I changed my course I was able to make my way through a different section where they were less likely to be looking for me."

Lieut. O'Brien trained with the R.F.C. at Camp Borden.

A Comparison.

The following was heard on a street car one very cold day in winter in a Canadian city. At a corner the car was boarded by a husky soldier in the picturesque Highland uniform—the kilts of which leave the knees bare. On the car was a young dude still in mufti, seated with his best girl. The girl cast admiring glances at the attractively uniformed "kiltie," much to the displeasure of her slacker escort. So he undertook to make fun of the uniform by remarking, "I think that outfit is most ridiculous. That fellow's knees look as if they were frozen." The kiltie, overhearing the comment, glanced contemptuously at the dude's civilian clothes, then scornfully replied: "Well, young fellow, it is a sure thing my knees aren't as cold as your feet." The slacker got off at the next stop.

A Narrow Escape.

Tommy Atkins likes to pass a joke even when he is hurt. "Coming through Ypres during hot fighting," says a Canadian soldier-author, "I passed a friend. 'You have a fine bruise on your forehead,' said I, pointing to a raw bump the size of a goose-egg. 'How did you get it?' 'I haven't an idea,' he answered, 'unless a shell bounced off it. Some of 'em have come close enough, so one might have done it.'"

Has Polar Disease.

Vilhjalmar Stefansson, the Arctic explorer, who is now en route from Fort Yukon to Victoria, is just recovering from a mysterious malady to which Constable Lamont of the R.N.W.M.P. and many of the natives succumbed. The disease was epidemic last winter on Herschel Island.

Owners Must Pay Penalty.

It will be interesting to garden owners to know by a recent decision in the Hespeler court that when a dog scratches up a private garden, fenced or unfenced, the owner of the dog may be legally held liable for damages.

EY SHALL NOT PASS," NOW HAS GREATER SIGNIFI- THAN EVER.

DAY OF THE PESSIMIST IS DONE. THE CLOUDS REAKING AND THE CHEERY OPTIMIST IS COMING IS OWN.

nday afternoon shortly after five o'clock the bell of Bridge Street rang out in joyous peals in honor of the Allied victory which has t the Marne salient, so long a menacing wedge for the Germans, ing to open up the road to Paris and the Channel ports. The note of victory in the clang of the bell made many a loyal Can- eart beat quicker and awakened many sleepers who have been but scant attention to the war.

hen the bell began its chant of British courage and confidence, joy ent victory and faith in complete victory to come, The Intelligen- ephone began to buzz with enquiries:

Any new victories?"

What's the bell ringing for?"

Has the Crown Prince been captured?"

Is it true that the Kaiser has committed suicide

Is it true that the Allies have taken 700,000 prisoners?"

And the bell kept on ringing, pealing out the nation's joy that the of the Allies, the genius of a Foch, the magnificent bravery of our ers with their will to conquer had humbled the braggart Hohenzol- cub in the dust of humiliating defeat, had

Saved Paris from the threat of German occupation,

Saved the Channel ports from possible capture by the Huns,

Wiped out the huge wedge cut into the Allied lines which was in the road to Paris,

Thrown the Crown Prince's armies back in disorderly and disastrous eat more than twenty miles, and still going.

Do we realize the significance of the events on the Western front?

Berlin evidently does, for Berlin is in despair.

No camouflage or counter-moves by the Germans can disguise the t now that the Allies have the upper hand everywhere, on land, on and in the air, and it is only a question of time when the cracks in German war machine will widen into the chasms of complete defeat.

In the meantime the duty of Canadians is to speed up war prepar- ons and work for the soldiers in every possible way—the war may not st much longer, so let's make a glorious finish. And let's begin now cultivate the victor's spirit, cutting out and casting aside petty jealous- s and carping criticism of our hard-worked war Premier and members the War Government. Let's get our feet out of the mud and planted n the mountain top where the air is pure and sweet with undiluted atriotism, where troubles of the valley shrink into small proportions efore the broader and wider outlook.

Let's try and get that big and better vision, now that Foch has brushed the Cobwebs from the face of Freedom.

VICTORY PROSPECTS NEVER SO BRIGHT.

"Hold fast," was the keynote of a message to the British Empire issued by Premier David Lloyd George and promulgated in a dramatic way throughout the British Isles at 9 o'clock Monday night. The mes- sage was read to the audiences in theatres, concert halls and other places where people were assembled. Sealed copies of the message had been distributed to the managers of all these places, with the request that they open and read it at 9 o'clock. The message follows:

"The message which I send to the people of the British Empire on the fourth anniversary of their entry into the war is, 'Hold fast.'

"We are in this war for no selfish ends. We are in it to recover freedom for the nations which have been despoiled, and to prove that no people, however powerful, can surrender itself to the lawless ambitions of militarism without meeting retribution, swift, certain and disastrous, at the hands of the free nations of the world. To stop short of victory for this cause would be to compromise the future of mankind.

"I say 'Hold fast,' because our prospects of victory were never so bright as they are today. Six months ago the rulers of Germany deliberately rejected the just and reasonable settlement proposed by the Allies. They partitioned Russia, cast aside the last mask of moderation, enslaved Rumania, and attempted to seize supremacy by overthrowing the Allies in a final and desperate attack. Thanks to the invincible bravery of all the allied armies it is now evident to all that this dream of universal conquest, for the sake of which they wantonly prolonged the war, can never be fulfilled.

"But the battle is not yet won. The great autocracy of Prussia will still endeavor, by violence or guile, to avoid defeat and so give militarism a new lease of life. We cannot seek to escape the horrors of war for ourselves by storing them up for our children. Having set our hands to the task we must see it through till a just and lasting settlement is achieved. Life under the microscope widens in significance since the war food regulations caused such a constriction policy in the eating houses. With the gradual shrinking of the portion served it should be compulsory to serve a microscope with orders to properly separate the meat from the tatere. No microscope is necessary in reading the check.

THE REINDEER.

This Animal Is Taking Important Place in America.

The reindeer is the department store of the far north; he produces everything from a spool of thread to a milk-shake. He is jack-of-all trades, meat market, dairy, haberdasher, tailor, shoemaker, notion counter and jitney all rolled into one. He is even legal tender in the erratic currency of the far north, where a piece of pink soap can buy almost as much as a gold nugget.

In 1890 Dr. Sheldon Jackson turned up the collar of his fur coat and shuffled through northern snows on an inspecting tour of the mission stations. He discovered that the natives in Arctic and sub-Arctic Alaska were rapidly losing their source of food supply.

The whales had taken it into their heads to swim farther north away from the occasional steam launches of modern hunters; the walruses and seal followed them and disappeared. The wild caribou, simple creatures that the Eskimos and Arctic Indians had caught easily, had been frightened away by the efficient guns of traders.

Besides losing the greater part of their food, their clothing supply also had stopped, because for years the Eskimos had traded ivory walrus tusks, sealskin and whale oil for Siberian reindeer skins.

In 1891, Dr. Jackson suggested his plan of importing reindeer from Siberia. There had never been reindeer on this continent and the Eskimos knew nothing about the animals. A private fund of $2,000 was raised by people personally interested in Dr. Jackson's plan and the first herd of sixteen reindeer was brought across Behring Strait from Siberia and landed in good condition.

Siberian herders, and a little later the more intelligent and efficient Laplanders, were imported to teach the native Eskimos and Indians the whys and wherefores of the deer.

Before 1902, 1,280 deer had been imported; at the last report in 1914 there were 35,000 Government deer in Alaska, rapidly increasing.

When the deer are two years old they are broken in for driving. A deer makes an average speed of from eight to twelve miles an hour. But it is not his speed that makes him invaluable as a means of transportation; it is the fact that the deer can travel across Alaska without a trail, living on the moss which carpets the country.

Dogs cannot haul enough provisions to feed themselves on long journeys, while one of these cattle of the north can haul two hundred pounds of cargo, up mountains and down valleys, and finish the journey in as good condition, if not better physical shape than when the trip was begun.

Each Arctic mission station should own at least 5,000 deer. In the first place, a herd of deer banishes the terror of famine or isolation or extreme cold. The milk of the does is thick and creamy, and mixed with water makes a delicious drink; venison has always been considered a luxury. In the second place, the revenues gained through selling the young fawns and the meat of the older deer can eventually support the missions. And thirdly, there is always present an efficient and comfortable method of travel.

Fearful Saints Need Not Fear

THE Canadian A.P.M. in London is Major G. S. Clifford, of Calgary. He has held this position ever since the First Division landed in England. In earlier years he served in the Imperial forces, and took part in the South African war.

Thanks to the A.P.M.'s runabout, we contrived in the course of the evening to visit seven variety houses, two railway stations, three hotels, and also to give a look-in at a couple of other places where the young officer with a little leisure and money—or a lot of both—is wont to spend a portion of his time when in London, says the correspondent of the Associated Press.

In one sense it was rather a dull evening, even if there were small incidents innocent enough in themselves, which aroused memories in my companion of experiences during the past four years which had shown how the young man devoid of understanding may bring himself to the correction of the stocks.

The A.P.M. was known everywhere. Much-belted janitors at the swingdoors — old soldiers nearly every one—saluted him punctiliously as he passed in and gave a "good evening" to the great man in evening dress standing easily in the lobby. At all the halls the procedure was pretty much the same. Pass right through. A stroll round the back of the stalls, with a friendly nod for some acquaintance (and occasionally a different sort of recognition for acquaintance of another class), a walk upstairs into the now almost deserted promenade, a shrewd look at the parties in the boxes, and a glance into the lounge and refreshment rooms. At one place a slight ebullition of animal spirits from some subalterns in the foyer caused the A.P.M. to turn on his way out. The offenders recognized him, and the demonstration evaporated. The A.P.M. gave me a slight grin. Innocent and guilty alike hold his uniform in healthy respect.

We spent a quarter of an hour in the approaches of a big railway station. "Red caps" were busy examining the passes of soldiers, perhaps the "Red caps" had guile enough to be busier than usual while the A.P.M. was in the vicinity. He did not seem disposed, though, unduly to interfere with them or with anybody. He was just out, seemingly, to satisfy himself that the men in khaki with Sam Brownes or without, were conducting themselves as befits their uniform. Our one capture of the evening was effected close to a famous hotel. He was some twenty years old, and was sauntering along cheerfully, hand in pocket and pipe in mouth. Probably he had only come out of the hotel for a few moments. It was the pocket and the pipe that offended. The A.P.M.'s own hand was laid gently upon his sleeve, a few words in an undertone followed, then a prompt bestowal of the pipe into a far less conspicuous position, and a salute from the one admonished — et voila tout.

Finally, and after nightfall, we brought up in the purlieus of a much-thronged centre. The A.P.M. knew very well all that he was looking for. It was here that he was led to tell me of some dark experiences which come to those whose charge it is to "pluck the spoil of the wicked out of his teeth." Doubtless there will always be the way open in London for the simple to pass on and be punished, but the "fearful saints" who distress themselves unduly over the temptation which London holds "in the twilight, in the evening, in the black and dark night" for the young soldier, commissioned and non-commissioned, would find cause for fresh courage were they able to make a similar round of London's haunts of an evening.

A Strange Appeal.

At Ingersoll recently a number of farmers were only dissuaded with difficulty from approaching the Duke of Devonshire with a request that he dismiss his constitutional advisers over their steadfast devotion to the M.S.A.

BUILT FAKE FRONTIER

GERMANS SUCCEED IN DECEIVING ESCAPED PRISONERS.

Men Are Lulled Into Belief That They Have Reached Neutral Territory, Say Canadians Who Have Been In Hunland — Other Examples Given of Cruel German Humor.

ACCORDING to some Canadian prisoners recently escaped from Hunland via Holland, a fake frontier is the latest German contrivance for outwitting our men who seek to make their get-away from the horrors of life in Hun prison camps.

This barrier consists of a replica of the formidable barbed wire and electrically charged fence which has existed since the outbreak of war along a large part of the Holland-Germany border line. The new barrier, however, stands five miles back from the frontier, well into German territory. Fugitives, unwarned of this trap, would naturally suppose that once across the strands of spikes and highly charged wire, they were free, and, according to reports, more than a few who had successfully negotiated the dangers of breaking camp and traversing weary leagues through enemy country, have finally fallen victims at this fake boundary. Night is, of course, the usual time for attempting to cross the frontier, and the poor chaps who thus essayed it, throwing off all restraint once across, walked straight into the arms of the Hun sentries lying in wait for them.

Some returned officers who evidently escaped the fatal delusion of the fake fence, relate what they consider the one "humorous" episode in a term of dreary imprisonment, a long retrospect of German brutality and general meanness. It was the sole occasion, they say on which the stolid, materialistic mechanical minds of their Hun raptors evinced the slightest degree of being human. And at that, it was a very cruel sort of humor, of the cat and mouse variety, and thoroughly German in that sense.

Several of the imprisoned officers were contriving an escape. Under the floor of one of the sheds in the camp they were, secretly, as they thought, digging a tunnel which in a day or two would take them out under the wire fence which girded the camp. Excellent progress was being made, and the Huns did not appear to have the slightest knowledge of the scheme. One morning the Hun commandant suddenly announced that they were all to move camp. The officers were told to pack their belongings and get ready for a journey. A muster presently showed that the three candidates for freedom were absent. As a matter of fact they were toiling in their tunnel, hoping to escape that night.

The commandant gave everyone to understand that he thought they had escaped, and had sent out the usual warning to the authorities. Presently all the officers were put aboard a slow train to proceed to their destination. Then the commandant with a grim smile, called the guard, and going to the entrance to the tunnel, in a mocking voice called to the fugitives to come forth. The crest-fallen officers emerged. They were then marched to the railway station, smuggled in through a side entrance, and spirited aboard an express train. When their fellow-prisoners arrived at their destination some hours later by the slow train, there, sitting disconsolately on the platform awaiting them were the three poor chaps so cruelly baulked of their escape.

Contrast this with the treatment meted out to the pampered Hun officers in England! Can anyone conceive of a British camp commandant so deliberately setting out to play a cruel joke on prisoners?

No Lacrosse Sticks.

There is one big difficulty in keeping lacrosse alive this year that is being overlooked by the supporters of the national pastime but not by those who are behind the clubs. It is the absence of sticks. A journey around to the various sporting goods stores in Canada reveals the fact that there are not a dozen good sticks in all and little likelihood of securing any more. The factories in the east have stopped making them and instead are doing war work. Down in Cornwall "Joe" Lalley's factory in Cornwall they are making boxes to transport munitions. Indians in and around Cornwall have made a few sticks for their own personal use, but that is all.

A Moving-Picture Soldier.

Private Billings went over the top one morning, was knocked down by a German shell, stabbed five times, rolled off a trench parapet, run over by two tanks and dragged three miles by a runaway mule, but came back fresh and smiling. Before enlisting he was a "stunt man" for a motion picture company in Canada. He says war is child's play.

Alaska, the Superlative.

Alaska scenery is not scenery—it's nature's coup d'etat.

Here glaciers as tall as the dome of St. Paul's gleam like meadows of glass.

And now and again, when a berg is born, great sheets of water seem to splash the very sky and angry waves toss the baby glacier about as if it were a cork in a basin of water.

Alaska's mountains out-Alp the Alps. A mountain under 12,000 feet is ignored as a mere foothill.

Alaska's trees out-giant California's mammoth specimens. Here a canoe capable of carrying sixty warriors has been made by the Indians from the trunks of a single poplar tree.

And Alaska's mosquitoes out-Jersey Jersey's fiercest. It is said that nothing short of a coat of tar and lard will discourage these man eating animals. Ordinarily unguents prove to be nothing more than appetizing sauces. To kill a mosquito is mistaken judgment—so many relatives gather for the funeral. Huge, apparently self-reliant bears have been so badly stung about the eyes that they have become blind and unable to find food—murdered by these tiny pests.

A POPULAR HERO.

Col. Joseph Boyle Saves Lives of Roumania Deputies.

Col. Joseph Boyle, a Canadian officer from the Yukon, has become the popular hero of Roumania and wears the highest Roumanian decoration within the gift of the King for saving a number of Roumanian deputies from certain exile and probably death at the hands of the Russian Bolsheviki, according to travellers reaching France from Jassy, the temporary Roumanian capital.

Soon after the Russian Bolsheviki broke off relations with Roumania last January, as the result of alleged anti-Bolshevik activities on the part of the Roumanian deputies, several of these officials were arrested at Odessa, following the invasion of Bessarabia by Roumanian troops. They were sentenced to exile to Sebastopol and were placed on board a ship to be deported. None of them knew what their fate might be and everyone was convinced they would never see their native country again.

Col. Boyle pleaded in their behalf with the Bolsheviki leaders and insisted upon their innocence. The Bolshevik authorities were deaf to his appeals, and would not revoke the sentence of exile. Col. Boyle then declared that if the Roumanian deputies were deported he would share their fate. A special steamer conveyed the deputies and Col. Boyle to Sebastopol, where, after a stay of several days, during which the party suffered many hardships, Col. Boyle finally convinced the Russians that the Roumanians were innocent and all were released.

Col. Boyle took them back to Odessa by the steamer on which they were deported to Sebastopol and accompanied them to Jassy, where he was given a great reception by the people and the Government. King Ferdinand awarded him the Crown of Roumania, the highest Roumanian decoration.

Col. Boyle is six feet tall, rugged and broad as the country he comes from. It was he who, when all other means of communication were impossible, carried from Jassy to Odessa the Roumanian peace terms with the Bolsheviki, thus preventing hostilities, which at the time seemed imminent.

WELL MAY THE NATIONS REJOICE AND THE CHURCH BELLS RING, FOR THIS GREAT VICTORY IS BUT AN EARNEST OF BIGGER EVENTS TO COME.

"THEY SHALL NOT PASS," NOW HAS GREATER SIGNIFICANCE THAN EVER.

THE DAY OF THE PESSIMIST IS DONE, THE CLOUDS ARE BREAKING AND THE CHEERY OPTIMIST IS COMING INTO HIS OWN.

Monday afternoon shortly after five o'clock the bell of Bridge Street Church rang out in joyous peals in honor of the Allied victory which has wiped out the Marne salient, so long a menacing wedge for the Germans, threatening to open up the road to Paris and the Channel ports. The stirring note of victory in the clang of the bell made many a loyal Canadian heart beat quicker and awakened many sleepers who have been giving but scant attention to the war.

When the bell began its chant of British courage and confidence, joy in present victory and faith in complete victory to come, The Intelligencer telephone began to buzz with enquiries:

"Any new victories?"

"What's the bell ringing for?"

"Has the Crown Prince been captured?"

"Is it true that the Kaiser has committed suicide "

"Is it true that the Allies have taken 700,000 prisoners?"

And the bell kept on ringing, pealing out the nation's joy that the valor of the Allies, the genius of a Foch, the magnificent bravery of our soldiers with their will to conquer had humbled the braggart Hohenzollern cub in the dust of humiliating defeat, had

Saved Paris from the threat of German occupation,

Saved the Channel ports from possible capture by the Huns,

Wiped out the huge wedge cut into the Allied lines which was to open the road to Paris,

Thrown the Crown Prince's armies back in disorderly and disastrous retreat more than twenty miles, and still going.

Do we realize the significance of the events on the Western front? Berlin evidently does, for Berlin is in despair.

No camouflage or counter-moves by the Germans can disguise the fact now that the Allies have the upper hand everywhere, on land, on sea and in the air, and it is only a question of time when the cracks in the German war machine will widen into the chasms of complete defeat.

In the meantime the duty of Canadian is to speed up war preparations and work for the soldiers in every possible way—the war may not last much longer, so let's make a glorious finish. And let's begin now to cultivate the victor's spirit, cutting out and casting aside petty jealousies and carping criticism of our hard-worked war Premier and members of the War Government. Let's get our feet out of the mud and planted on the mountain top where the air is pure and sweet with undiluted patriotism, where troubles of the valleys shrink into small proportions before the broader and wider outlook.

Let's try and get that big and better vision, now that Foch has brushed the Cobwebs from the face of Freedom.

VICTORY PROSPECTS NEVER SO BRIGHT.

"Hold fast," was the keynote of a message to the British Empire issued by Premier David Lloyd George and promulgated in a dramatic way throughout the British Isles at 9 o'clock Monday night. The message was read to the audiences in theatres, concert halls and other places where people were assembled. Sealed copies of the message had been distributed to the managers of all these places, with the request that they open and read it at 9 o'clock. The message follows:

> "The message which I send to the people of the British Empire on the fourth anniversary of their entry into the war is, 'Hold fast.'
> "We are in this war for no selfish ends. We are in it to recover freedom for the nations which have been despoiled, and to prove that no people, however powerful, can surrender itself to the lawless ambitions of militarism without meeting retribution, swift, certain and disastrous, at the hands of the free nations of the world. To stop short of victory for this cause would be to compromise the future of mankind.
> "I say 'Hold fast' because our prospects of victory were never so bright as they are today. Six months ago the rulers of Germany deliberately rejected the just and reasonable settlement proposed by the Allies. Throwing aside the last mask of moderation, they partitioned Russia, enslaved Rumania, and attempted to seize supreme power by overthrowing the Allies in a final and desperate attack. Thanks to the invincible bravery of all the allied armies, it is now evident to all that this dream of universal conquest, for the sake of which they wantonly prolonged the war, can never be fulfilled.
> "But the battle is not yet won. The great autocracy of Prussia will still endeavor, by violence or guile, to avoid defeat and so give militarism a new lease of life. We cannot seek to escape the horrors of war for ourselves by laying them up for our children. Having set our hands to the task we must see it through till a just and lasting settlement is achieved.
> "In no other way can we assure a world set free from war.
> "Hold fast.
> "(Signed) Lloyd George."

Life under the microscope widens in significance since the war food regulations caused such a constriction policy in the eating houses. With the gradual shrinking of the portion served it should be compulsory to serve a microscope with orders to properly separate the meat from the taters. No microscope is necessary in reading the check.

THE REINDEER.

This Animal Is Taking Important Place in America.

The reindeer is the department store of the far north; he produces everything from a spool of thread to a milk-shake. He is jack-of-all-trades, meat market, dairy, haberdasher, tailor, shoemaker, notion counter and jitney all rolled into one. He is even legal tender in the erratic currency of the far north where a piece of pink soap can buy almost as much as a gold nugget.

In 1890 Dr. Sheldon Jackson turned up the collar of his fur coat and shuffled through northern snows on an inspecting tour of the mission stations. He discovered that the natives in Arctic and sub-Arctic Alaska were rapidly losing their source of food supply.

The whales had taken it into their heads to swim farther north away from the occasional steam launches of modern hunters; the walruses and seal followed them and disappeared. The wild caribou, simple creatures that the Eskimos and Arctic Indians had caught easily, had been frightened away by the efficient guns of traders.

Besides losing the greater part of their food, their clothing supply also had stopped, because for years the Eskimos had traded ivory walrus tusks, sealskin and whale oil for Siberian reindeer skins.

In 1891, Dr. Jackson suggested his plan of importing reindeer from Siberia. There had never been reindeer on this continent and the Eskimos knew nothing about the animals. A private fund of $2,000 was raised by people personally interested in Dr. Jackson's plan and the first herd of sixteen reindeer was brought across Behring Strait from Siberia and landed in good condition.

Siberian herders, and a little later the more intelligent and efficient Laplanders, were imported to teach the native Eskimos and Indians the whys and wherefores of the deer.

Before 1902, 1,280 deer had been imported; at the last report in 1914 there were 35,000 Government deer in Alaska, rapidly increasing.

When the deer are two years old they are broken in for driving. A deer makes an average speed of from eight to twelves miles an hour. But it is not his speed that makes him invaluable as a means of transportation; it is the fact that the deer can travel across Alaska without a trail, living on the moss which carpets the country.

Dogs cannot haul enough provisions to feed themselves on long journeys, while one of these camels of the north can haul two hundred pounds of cargo, up mountains and down valleys, and finish the journey in as good condition, if not better, physical shape than when the trip was begun.

Each Arctic mission station should own at least 5,000 deer. In the first place, a herd of deer banishes all terror of famine or isolation or extreme cold. The milk of the does is thick and creamy, and mixed with water makes a delicious drink; venison has always been considered a luxury. In the second place, the revenues gained through selling the young fawns and the meat of the older deer can eventually support the missions. And thirdly, there is always present an efficient and comfortable method of travel.

Fearful Saints Need Not Fear

THE Canadian A.P.M. in London is Major G. S. Clifford, of Calgary. He has held this position ever since the First Division landed in England. In earlier years he served in the Imperial forces, and took part in the South African war.

Thanks to the A.P.M.'s runabout, we contrived in the course of the evening to visit seven variety houses, two railway stations, three hotels, and also to give a look-in at a couple of other places where the young officer with a little leisure and money—or a lot of both—is wont to spend a portion of his time when in London, says the correspondent of the Associated Press.

In one sense it was rather a dull evening, even if there were small incidents innocent enough in themselves, which aroused memories in my companion of experiences during the past four years which had shown how the young man devoid of understanding may bring himself to the correction of the stocks.

The A.P.M. was known everywhere. Much-belted janitors at the swingdoors — old soldiers nearly every one—saluted him punctiliously as he passed in and gave a "good evening" to the great man in evening dress standing easily in the lobby. At all the halls the procedure was pretty much the same. Pass right through. A stroll round the back of the stalls, with a friendly nod for some acquaintance (and occasionally a different sort of recognition for acquaintance of another class), a walk upstairs into the now almost deserted promenade, a shrewd look at the parties in the boxes, and a glance into the lounge and refreshment rooms. At one place a slight ebullition of animal spirits from some subalterns in the foyer caused the A.P.M. to turn on his way out. The offenders recognized him, and the demonstration evaporated. The A.P.M. gave me a slight grin. Innocent and guilty alike hold his uniform in healthy respect.

We spent a quarter of an hour in the approaches of a big railway station. "Red caps" were busy examining the passes of soldiers; perhaps the "Red caps" had guile enough to get even busier than usual while the A.P.M. was in the vicinity. He did not seem disposed, though, unduly to interfere with them or with anybody else. He was just out, seemingly, to assure himself that the men in khaki, with Sam Brownes or without, were conducting themselves as befitted their uniform. Our one "capture" of the evening was effected close to a famous hotel. He was some twenty years old, and was thrusting along cheerfully, hand in pocket and pipe in mouth. Probably he had only come out of the hotel for a few moments. It was the pocket and the pipe that offended. The A.P.M.'s own hand was laid gently upon his sleeve, a few words in an undertone followed, then a prompt bestowal of the pipe into a far less conspicuous position, and a salute from the one admonished — et voila tout.

Finally, and after nightfall, we brought up in the purlieus of a much-thronged centre. The A.P.M. knew very well all that he was looking for. It was here that he was led to tell me of some dark experiences which come to those whose charge it is to "pluck the spoil of the wicked out of his teeth." Doubtless there will always be the way open in London for the simple to pass on and be punished, but the "fearful saints" who distress themselves unduly over the temptation which London holds "in the twilight, in the evening, in the black and dark night" for the young soldier, commissioned and non-commissioned, would find cause for fresh courage were they able to make a similar round of London's haunts of an evening.

A Strange Appeal.

At Ingersoll recently a number of farmers were only dissuaded with difficulty from approaching the Duke of Devonshire with a request that he dismiss his constitutional advisers over their steadfast devotion to the M.S.A.

Lived Like Hermit.

BUILT FAKE FRONTIER

GERMANS SUCCEED IN DECEIVING ESCAPED PRISONERS.

Men Are Lulled Into Belief That They Have Reached Neutral Territory, Say Canadians Who Have Been In Hunland — Other Examples Given of Cruel German Humor.

ACCORDING to some Canadian prisoners recently escaped from Hunland via Holland, a fake frontier is the latest German contrivance for outwitting our men who seek to make their getaway from the horrors of life in Hun prison camps.

This barrier consists of a replica of the formidable barbed wire and electrically charged fence which has existed since the outbreak of war along a large part of the Holland-Germany border line. The new barrier, however, stands five miles back from the frontier, well into German territory. Fugitives, unwarned of this trap, would naturally suppose that once across the strands of spikes and highly charged wire, they were free, and, according to reports, more than a few who had successfully negotiated the dangers of breaking camp and traversing weary leagues through enemy country, have finally fallen victims at this fake boundary. Night is, of course, the usual time for attempting to cross the frontier, and the poor chaps who thus essayed it, throwing off all restraint once across, walked straight into the arms of the Hun sentries lying in wait for them.

Some returned officers who evidently escaped the fatal delusion of the fake fence, relate what they consider the one "humorous" episode in a term of dreary imprisonment, a long retrospect of German brutality and general meanness. It was the sole occasion, they say on which the stolid, materialistic mechanical minds of their Hun captors evinced the slightest degree of being human. And at that, it was a very cruel sort of humor, of the cat and mouse variety, and thoroughly German in that sense.

Several of the imprisoned officers were contriving an escape. Under the floor of one of the sheds in the camp they were, secretly, as they thought, digging a tunnel which in a day or two would take them out under the wire fence which girded the camp. Excellent progress was being made, and the Huns did not appear to have the slightest knowledge of the scheme. One morning the Hun commandant suddenly announced that they were all to move camp. The officers were told to pack their belongings and get ready for a journey. A muster presently showed that the three candidates for freedom were absent. As a matter of fact they were toiling in their tunnel, hoping to escape that night.

The commandant gave everyone to understand that he thought they had escaped, and had sent out the usual warning to the authorities. Presently all the officers were put aboard a slow train to proceed to their destination. Then the commandant with a grim smile, called the guard, and going to the entrance to the tunnel, in a mocking voice called to the fugitives to come forth. The crest-fallen officers emerged. They were then marched to the railway station, smuggled in through a side entrance, and spirited aboard an express train. When their fellow-prisoners arrived at their destination some hours later by the slow train, there, sitting disconsolately on the platform awaiting them were the three poor chaps so cruelly baulked of their escape.

Contrast this with the treatment meted out to the pampered Hun officers in England! Can anyone conceive of a British camp commandant so deliberately setting out to play a cruel joke on prisoners?

No Lacrosse Sticks.

There is one big difficulty in keeping lacrosse alive this year that is being overlooked by the supporters of the national pastime but not by those who are behind the clubs. It is the absence of sticks. A journey around to the various sporting goods stores in Canada reveals the fact that there are not a dozen good sticks in all and little likelihood of securing any more. The factories in the east have stopped making them and instead are doing war work. Down in "Joe" Lalley's factory in Cornwall they are making boxes to transport munitions. Indians in and around Cornwall have made a few sticks for their own personal use, but that is all.

A Moving-Picture Soldier.

Private Billings went over the top one morning, was knocked down by a German shell, stabbed five times, roled off a trench parapet, run over by two tanks and dragged three miles by a runaway mule, but came back fresh and smiling. Before enlisting he was a "stunt man" for a motion picture company in Canada. He says war is child's play.

Alaska, the Superlative.

Alaska scenery is not scenery—it's nature's coup d'etat.

Here glaciers as tall as the dome of St. Paul's gleam like meadows of glass.

And now and again, when a berg is born, great sheets of water seem to splash the very sky and angry waves toss the baby glacier about as if it were a cork in a basin of water.

Alaska's mountains out-Alp the Alps. A mountain under 12,000 feet is ignored as a mere foothill.

Alaska's trees out-giant California's mammoth specimens. Here a canoe capable of carrying sixty warriors has been made by the Indians from the trunks of a single poplar tree.

And Alaska's mosquitoes out-Jersey Jersey's fiercest. It is said that nothing short of a coat of tar and lard will discourage these man-eating animals. Ordinarily unguents prove to be nothing more than appetizing sauces. To kill a mosquito is mistaken judgment—so many relatives gather for the funeral. Huge, apparently self-reliant bears have been so badly stung about the eyes that they have become blind and unable to find food—murdered by these tiny pests.

A POPULAR HERO.

Col. Joseph Boyle Saves Lives of Roumania Deputies.

Col. Joseph Boyle, a Canadian officer, from the Yukon, has become the popular hero of Roumania and wears the highest Roumanian decoration within the gift of the King for saving a number of Roumanian deputies from certain exile, and probably death at the hands of the Russian Bolsheviki, according to travellers reaching France from Jassy, the temporary Roumanian capital.

Soon after the Russian Bolsheviki broke off relations with Roumania last January, as the result of alleged anti-Bolshevik activities on the part of the Roumanian deputies, several of these officials were arrested at Odessa, following the invasion of Bessarabia by Roumanian troops. They were sentenced to exile to Sebastopol and were placed on board a ship to be deported. None of them knew what their fate might be and everyone was convinced they would never see their native country again.

Col. Boyle pleaded in their behalf with the Bolsheviki leaders and insisted upon their innocence. The Bolshevik authorities were deaf to his appeals, and would not revoke the sentence of exile. Col. Boyle then declared that if the Roumanian deputies were deported he would share their fate. A special steamer conveyed the deputies and Col. Boyle to Sebastopol, where, after a stay of several days, during which the party suffered many hardships, Col. Boyle finally convinced the Russians that the Roumanians were innocent and all were released.

Col. Boyle took them back to Odessa by the steamer on which they were deported to Sebastopol and accompanied them to Jassy, where he was given a great reception by the people and the Government. King Ferdinand awarded him the Crown of Roumania, the highest Roumanian decoration.

Col. Boyle is six feet tall, rugged and broad as the country he comes from. It was he who, when all other means of communication were impossible, carried from Jassy to Odessa the Roumanian peace terms with the Bolsheviki, thus preventing hostilities, which at the time seemed imminent.

"A CROWN OF SHAME"

Author of "The Poison of Asps," A Star and a Heart," "Written in Fire," etc.

"We are lost!" cried Mrs. Courtney, "Oh, Mr. Courtney, in Heaven's name what are we to do?"

"Stand before Quita. Conceal her at all risks, and I will help you," replied the father, as he ranged himself by the side of his wife, and in front of his daughter; and then he whispered, "Have no fear, Nita; they can have no object in wounding us. Their malice is against Sir Russell and our poor child. Spread your skirts over her, for Heaven's sake."

Meanwhile the slaughter became general. The rebels rushed hither and thither in search of Maraquita, wounding or killing every girl they thought to be the bride, with, in most instances, the men who resented the murder, until the ballroom reeked in blood, and the screams of the unhappy victims were appalling. But the alarm had been given at once, and in a few minutes the opposition shots of the military forces were heard, and scores of the rebels bit the dust, whilst many more were taken prisoners. Among the latter was a young and handsome Spanish half-caste whose dark eyes were on fire with the lust of revenge, but you made no effort to free himself from his captors.

"The danger is past! Thank God that you are both safe," eclaimed Mr. Courtney, as he turned to embrace his wife and daughter.

Sir Russell had been wounded in the wrist by a slash from one of his own dinner knives; but the Fort physician had bound it up, and, now that the first alarm was over, he was able to go in search of his bride.

"Maraquita, my dearest!" he exclaimed fervently, as he saw the pale little figure which Mr. Courtney was supporting. "this is a terrible affair but thank God, the brutes have not injured you, nor your parents! You must come away from here at once, my love. Take her, Mr. Courtney, I beg of you, to her own apartments. This is no sight for her."

Quita closed her eyes, and shuddered as her glance fell on the prostrate corpses, both black and white, that lay on the ballroom and heard theli moans of those to whom the surgeon was already attending; and she was quite willing to go away with her parents, and try and forget the terrible business in sleep.

"Yes, yes," she murmured, clinging to her father; "take me away at once, papa—I cannot bear it."

But when she had advanced a few paces into the room, her eyes opened again from sheer horror, and fell on a sight which paralyzed her. There, standing before her, though held back by the pinioning arms of his captors, was Henri de Courcelles, whom she believed to be in America, with such hatred and fury in his glance as she had never seen before.

"Henri!" she shrieked involuntarily, before she could prevent herself.

"So you have escaped!—curse you!" eh answered, glaring at her like a fiend. "Then what am I doing here? I must be free, to live to avenge myself on you." And without another word, and a sudden effort that took the men who held him completely by surprise, Henri de Courcelles wrenched himself away, and rushing to the open window, leapt into the darkness and was gone.

"He must have killed himself!" exclaimed one of the soldiers, looking out upon the night. "There is a fall here of about twenty feet."

"Order the guard round to take him prisoner!" shouted Sir Russell. "The wall beneath the window is sixteen feet high. They will take him like a rat in a trap. And if not, tell them to shoot him like a dog."

"No, no!" cried Maraquita wildly. "They must not—they shall not—he—he—he—"

But there she fainted, and fell in a heap at her husband's feet.

"He is the ringleader of the whole mutiny—the greatest rascal of them all! What can she know of him?" demanded Sir Russell, with a frown.

"Nothing; she never saw him before," replied Mrs. Courtney boldly, though she was shaking with fear lest Maraquita should betray herself.

"But she called him 'Henri.' I heard her," said the Governor.

"He was a servant on Beauregard once, Sir Russell. I forgot that when I said Maraquita had never seen him before. But really this terrible business has shaken me so that I don't know what I am saying. But my poor darling must be carried to her room. She is not fit to walk. I hope this shocking affair may not unsettle her reason."

"It seems as if it had done so already, when one hears her pleading for the life of a murderer," said Sir Russell, as he assited Mrs. Courtney to carry the unconscious girl to her own apartments. "And now, Mrs. Courtney I will leave my wife in your charge. This is a very serious matter and may necessitate my sitting up all night. The rebellion is quelled for the moment but I must not rest until measures have been taken to prevent its recurrence. My guests murdered before my very eyes. It is incredible that such a thing should happen in Her Majesty's dominions. And we must crush the mutiny, if we string them all up to the Fort gates. And this ringleader, (this old servant (as you say) of yours, shall be the first to suffer. I will give him lynch law as soon as ever the dawn rises. I will teach him what the penalty is of addressing the Governor's wife as he has dared to do."

And with this threat upon his lips, Sir Russell stalked gloomily away.

CHAPTER XXII.

As soon as the Governor had disappeared, Mrs. Courtney tried hard to get her husband out of the room; but he was obstinately bent on remaining until his daughter had recovered her consciousness, and so, when Maraquita opened her eyes, both her father and mother were bending over her.

"Where am I?" she exclaimed, as the world broke indistinctly upon her again.

"In your own room, my darling. Lie down, Quita. Don't attempt to rise You are quite safe here. No one can hurt you here."

"Safe!" repeated the girl in a bewildered tone. "Ah I remember now! The ball-room—the blood —those dreadful cries! Oh, mamma," she continued, clinging to her mother, "I shall never forget it! And Julie Lutreille too. I saw her murdered at my side. It ois too, too horrible!"

"No, no my dearest! You are mistaken. Julie is not dead. She was wounded and they have taken her to the hospital. But don't think of it any more to-night. Let me undress you that you may try and get some sleep."

"Not think of it!" said Maraquita, with staring blood-shot eyes, as she sat up on the couch in her white lace dress, all crumpled and spattered with blood, "not think of it. Why, I shall never cease to think of it. And there was something else too. What was it? Ah, Henri! and he cursed me!"

"Mr. Courtney, I must request you to leave us!" exclaimed his wife hurriedly. "You see the excitable condition she is in, and I can do nothing with her whilst you are hanging over her like this. The less people she has with her the better. You must positively go, and leave her to Jessica and me."

CONSTANT PAIN AFTER EATING

The Tortures of Dyspepsia Corrected by "Fruit-a-tives"

St. Martin's, N.B.

"For two years, I suffered tortures from Severe Dyspepsia. I had constant pains after eating; pains down the sides and back; and horrible bitter stuff often came up in my mouth.

I tried doctors, but they did not help me. But as soon as I started taking 'Fruit-a-tives', I began to improve and this medicine, made of fruit juices, relieved me when everything else failed."

"Well, my dear, if you think it necessary, of course I will go; but you will lose no time I hope in getting the poor child into bed."

"Do you suppose I don't know what is best for her, Mr. Courtney? I am only waiting till you are gone, to undress her."

"And you will send me word how she goes on—I shall not retire till I hear she has recovered her composure and is in a fair way to sleep."

"I will send Jessica to you in half an hour. By that time, I hope, we shall both have somewhat overcome this terrible shock. I shall stay with her all night, and you had better go and tell Sir Russell so."

And Mrs. Courtney, who had been carrying on this colloquy just inside the bed room door, opened it, and gently pushing her husband into the passage, reclosed it and locked it with a sigh of relief.

"Thank Heaven!" she said to old Jessica, "we are safe! I trembled for what she might say net."

"A'ays dat cursed obserseer," observed the old negress, who stood by Quita's head.

The girl herself was sitting up on the couch when her mother returned to her, staring into vacancy, and repeating the word "Henri" in a low voice.

"Maraquita!" said Mrs. Courtney firmly, as she shook the girl to rouse her to a sense of her position, "who are you talking to? There is no one here! You are quite alone with Jessica and me. You are perfectly safe. All the danger is over, and Government House is guarded by the soldiery on every side. Come to bed now, like a good child, and try to sleep."

"But he—where is he?" asked Maraquita wildly. "Did they fire on him? Is he hurt?"

"Sir Russell, my darling? Well, nothing to signify! The brutes slashed at him with their knives, and caught him on the wrist, but the doctors says it will be all right in a few days, and he will come and see you by-and-by, dear."

"Not him! I don't want him!" returned Maraquita fretfully "but Henri—where is my Henri? He jumped out of the window, and Sir Russell ordered them to kill him. Oh, tell me, in Heaven's name, is he dead?"

Mrs. Courtney did not know what to answer, but Jessica was ready with the information.

In the Days of Lifetime Corns

Wrong Ways
Which Millions Have Now Abandoned

THIS is why people kept corns in the old days, and why nearly everybody had them.

Most folks soaked and pared their corns—usually once a week. They never tried to end them. Many people then had corns half as old as they were.

To protect the corn—to stop the pain—they simply used a corn pad. Thus feet were always kept unsightly. And the corn stayed on.

Then someone found that a certain acid often loosened up a corn. A flood of corn cures—liquids and plasters—came out with that discovery. And hundreds yet remain.

They were both harsh and uncertain. And were rarely confined to the corn. They were spread on the healthy skin as well, and that often led to soreness.

People tried one, then another, but all were alike. So they finally became discouraged. Then they went back to paring and to pads.

In those days one or more corns deformed nearly every foot. A corn ache blighted nearly every occasion. Nearly every pretty foot had a pad on it. And paring was as common as the bath.

That is true of millions still. But other millions never suffer corns, and never will. Now let me tell you why.

The Right Way
Which Half the World Now Uses

A FAMOUS chemist, after years of studying corns, evolved the Blue-jay method.

Bauer & Black, well-known makers of surgical dressings, make and market Blue-jay.

Now anyone can stop a corn ache in a jiffy, and end the corn completely in two days.

The method is scientific. It is gentle and yet certain. It centers itself on the corn.

Apply the Blue-jay and forget the corn. Leave it on two days. Then remove it and the corn will disappear.

B&B Blue-jay Corn Plasters
Stop Pain Instantly
End Corns Completely
The Modern, Scientific Method
Large Package 25c at Druggists
Small Package Discontinued

Nine corns in ten will do that. One corn in ten needs another application.

Blue-jay has ended in this gentle way, some eighty million corns. It is now removing tens of thousands daily. Perhaps half the corns which develop are now being ended in this way.

Millions of people—users of blue-jay—keep entirely free from corns. Ask the folks about you. You will be amazed to know how few people nowadays suffer corns.

Try Blue-jay on one corn tonight. Note the results. What it does to that corn it will do to all corns. Every new corn after that will have a two-day limit.

ONTARIO STILL LEADS.

The Military Service Act Has Received Loyal Support.

As the Province of Ontario was enthusiastic for the Military Service Act, the citizens of the province have done their duty to the full under the act. It will be remembered that the act called for 100,000, and that these were allotted in proportion to the population without considering what the various provinces had done under the volunteer system. Ontario went right at the new task, and it was announced several weeks ago that the Ontario Military Districts, like some of the districts in the West, have already filled their allotments and are continuing to draft men. If the eastern districts had done as well, the full draft of 100,000 men would now be in uniform, but as the east has not done so, Ontario still continues to show her metal. According to the last figures supplied, Ontario has given 28,000 men under the Military Service Act as compared to 8,000 from the Province of Quebec. Great interest was recently aroused by a statement regarding this matter made by Lt.-Col. H. A. Machin, director of the Military Service Act branch of the Ministry of Justice and member of the Ontario Legislature for Kenora. Col. Machin went overseas as a colonel in command of the 94th Battalion, having refused a judgeship in order to do so, and his present position, which he says he does not expect to hold, is worth $6,000 a year.

Col. Machin said: "I have been sent to Montreal to devise a means whereby the Militia Department will be able to handle more recruits than they have been able to do. At the present time there are over 11,000 eligible for call in this district; they have not been called because the Militia Department has not been able to take them.

"In the meantime, only those who have been requested to be called by the G. O. C. of Montreal and Quebec districts have been taken. This has resulted in only 8,000 under the Military Service Act being called in the Province of Quebec. The fact that Ontario has called 28,000 against 8,000 in Quebec was given out by the Militia Department last week. Immediately the Government became concerned and I was plainly told by Messrs. Sifton and Mewburn that unless I produced the proper quota from Quebec I could look for another job. I reminded these gentlemen that recruits had been called in the Province of Quebec as fast as the Militia Department could take care of them."

MONTREAL DEATH TOLL

MONTREAL, Aug. 8.—Montreal's death roll for the week ending last Saturday included 150 children under five years of age, being no fewer than 60 per cent. of the total mortality of the week. For the previous week, infantile deaths were 127 despite the intense heat but it is pointed out that the effects of heat waves are cumulative, while changes of temperature are also fatal. For the corresponding week last year the total of deaths or children under five years of age were 142.

PROCLAMATION

GEORGE the FIFTH, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, KING, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

To all to whom these presents shall come or whom the same may in any wise concern,—GREETING:

A Proclamation of conditional amnesty respecting men belonging to Class 1 under the Military Service Act, 1917, who have disobeyed our Proclamation of 13th October, 1917, or their orders to report for duty, or are deserters or absent without leave from the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

E. L. NEWCOMBE, Deputy Minister of Justice, Canada. } WHEREAS considerable numbers of men belonging to Class I under our Military Service Act, 1917, called out on active service in our Canadian Expeditionary Force for the defence of Canada under Our Proclamation of 13th October, 1917, although they have thus become by law soldiers enlisted in the Military Service of Canada,

Have failed to report for duty as lawfully required of them under the said Military Service Act and the regulations thereunder, including the Order in Council duly passed on April 20 last,

Or have deserted,

Or absented themselves without leave from our Canadian Expeditionary Force,

And it is represented that the very serious and unfortunate situation in which these men find themselves is due in many cases to the fact that, notwithstanding the information and warning contained in Our Proclamation aforesaid, they have misunderstood their duty or obligation, or have been misled by the advice of ill-disposed, disloyal or seditious persons.

AND WHEREAS we desire, if possible, to avoid the infliction of the heavy penalties which the law imposes for the offences of which these soldiers have thus been guilty, and to afford them an opportunity within a limited time to report and make their services available in Our Canadian Expeditionary Force as is by law their bounden duty, and as is necessary for the defence of Our Dominion of Canada.

NOW KNOW YE that we in the exercise of Our powers, and of Our good will and pleasure in that behalf, do hereby proclaim and declare and cause to be published and made known THAT THE PENALTIES OF THE LAW WILL NOT BE IMPOSED OR EXACTED as against the men who belong to Class 1 under Our Military Service Act, 1917, and who have disobeyed Our Proclamation aforesaid; or who have received notice from any of Our registrars or deputy registrars to report for duty on a day now past and have failed so to report; or who, having reported and obtained leave of absence, have failed to report at the expiry of their leave, or have become deserters from Our Expeditionary Force, PROVIDED THEY REPORT FOR DUTY ON OR BEFORE THE TWENTY FOURTH DAY OF AUGUST 1918.

AND WE DO HEREBY STRICTLY WARN AND SOLEMNLY IMPRESS UPON ALL SUCH MEN, and as well those who employ, harbour, conceal or assist them in their disobedience, that, if they persist in their failure to report, absence or desertion until the expiry of the last mentioned day, they will be pursued and punished with all the rigour and severity of the law, SUBJECT TO THE JUDGMENT OF OUR COURTS MARTIAL WHICH WILL BE CONVENED TO TRY SUCH CASES or other competent tribunals: and also that those who employ, harbour, conceal or assist such men will be held strictly accountable as offenders and subject to the pains, penalties and forfeitures in that behalf by law provided for their said offence.

Provided however that nothing contained in this Our Proclamation is intended to release the men aforesaid from their obligation to report for duty as soon as possible or to grant them immunity from arrest or detention in the meantime for the purpose of compelling them to perform their military duty; Our intention being merely to forego or remit the penalties heretofore incurred for failure to report, absence without leave or desertion incurred by those men of the description aforesaid who shall be in the proper discharge of their military duties on or before the said twenty-fourth day of August, 1918.

Of all of which Our loving subjects and all others whom these presents may concern are hereby required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Canada to be hereunto affixed. Witness: Our Right Trusty and Right Entirely Beloved Cousin and Counsellor, Victor Christian William, Duke of Devonshire, Marquess of Hartington, Earl of Devonshire, Earl of Burlington, Baron Cavendish of Hardwicke, Baron Cavendish of Keighley, Knight of Our Most Noble Order of the Garter; One of Our Most Honourable Privy Council; Knight Grand Cross of Our Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George; Knight Grand Cross of Our Royal Victorian Order; Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of Our Dominion of Canada.

At Our Government House, in Our City of OTTAWA, this FIRST day of AUGUST, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighteen, and in the ninth year of Our Reign.

By Command,

Thomas Mulvey

Under-Secretary of State.

To-Day's Outlook After Four Years of Combat

(By W. R. PLEWMAN, Writer of The War Reviewed.)

The fourth year of the war has just closed after four months of the greatest strain for the Allies that they have experienced since the first battle of the Marne in 1914. The spring campaign opened this year with the enemy possessing the second best opportunity he ever had of gaining victory in the war. Not since the opening of hostilities has he been able to gain first rate successes on more than one front. In 1914 he gained an advantage in the west but suffered badly in the east. In 1915 he scored great victories in the east but was held in the west. In 1916 he suffered defeats in the west, east and south-west, but closed the year with the over-running of Rumania in the south-east. In 1917 the eastern fronts were eliminated by the desertion of Russia with half the allied soldiery, the Italian armies suffered a colossal disaster on the south-western front, and it became probable that the British and French, who had gained partial successes in the west during the year would be fighting for their lives in the early part of the 1918 campaign. It was also evident that the Italian armies would be called upon to go through a severe ordeal after the terrible setback they suffered last fall.

Confidence Warranted at Opening of Fifth Year.

Today we face the fifth year of war after having turned a very nasty corner. The spring campaign developed into a crisis of the first magnitude but today midsummer has been reached in safety, and the situation is wonderfully improved. The Teutons have suffered a severe check on the Italian front, where, however, our friends may be called upon to undergo another trial, and in France the enemy has met with the worst reverse he has experienced since Von Kluck's flank was turned almost four years ago. For these reasons we can look forward confidently to the unrevealed events of the fifth year of combat. Our chief cause for concern still is the Italian front,, although we have no real reason for apprehension, so far as known facts there are concerned, rather to the contrary. But the enemy, who appears to have lost the power to make himself really dangerous in the west, still has that power in the southwest, provided he is prepared to employ a hundred thousand German troops on that front, which we believe to be probable. The extent to which Germany may draw on Russia for foodstuffs, war materials and manpower is one of the unknown factors that enter into the outlook for the fifth year of the war, but the indications are that matters on the east will grow worse insead of better for the enemy, and that the east will harm him rather than help him. The most dangerous development during the coming year promises to be the propaganda of the enemy to persuade allied peoples to make a peace that represents a German triumph. We believe it will fail and that the civilized world will firmly adhere to the position that the banditti now ruling Germany can obtain peace only by unconditional surrender.

Casualties of All Kinds Exceed Thirty Millions.

The price humanity is paying to establish civilization on a new basis is staggering. One authority estimates that the total casualties to date in dead, wounded, and prisoners, reach 30 millions, of which the dead number seven millions. The total of 30 millions is a little under a rough estimate made by the writer of the casualties of the four principal nations on both sides., which works out as follows:

	Allied Four Years' Casualties		Enemy Four Years' Casualties
Britain	2,350,000	Germany	8,500,000
France	4,500,000	Austria	5,000,000
Italy	900,000	Turkey	1,100,000
Russia	8,000,000	Bulgaria	400,000
	16,250,000		15,000,000

Combined allied and enemy casualties since August 4, 1914, total 31,250,000. It will be noticed that these figures show the allies suffering 1,250,000 more casualties than were inflicted on the enemy, although the losses of Rumania, Serbia, Belgium and other small powers are not included. These would swell the total by another million. At least two or three million casualties represent unwounded prisoners. The dead probably total eight millions, the disabled eight millions, the less seriously wounded 10 millions, and the prisoners 5 millions. The British casualties so far this year reach half a million. It has been reckoned that the loss of potential lives due to the decline of the birth rate during the war, reaches more than twelve millions.

War Expenditure Almost 150 Billion Dollars.

The cost of the war in money also passes the comprehension of ordinary mortals. The expenditures of both sets of belligerents totals 147 billion dollars, made up as follows:

Allied Expenditures.	Billions	Enemy Expenditures.	Billions
Britain	35	Germany	32
France	20	Austria	17
Russia	22	Bulgaria and Turkey	3
United States	12
Italy	6
	95		52

From one-half to one-third of the national wealth of the larger nations in the war, excepting the United States, has been used up in the struggle. The interest Germany will have to pay yearly on her war expenditures exceeds her entire pre-war debt. Even in the case of Canada the yearly interest equals the revenue of the Dominion for the year 1900. Some economists declare that after the war the world will spend one-third of its time working to pay off its war debts.

World Should Make an End of War and Militarism.

Viewed from any angle, the world's experience with war during the past four years should harden the resolution to go on with the struggle until an end is made once for all of militarism and the habit of settling international disputes by wholesale slaughter. Justice is not to be had in that way. Absolute justice may not be meted out by a league of peace any more than it is meted out by our national law courts, but at least it would approach nearer to perfection and be less of a reflection on the humanity and intelligence of mankind. Allied peoples should not tolerate in high public offices men who will not work earnestly for universal disarmament, the compulsory arbitration of international disputes and the maintenance of order by a police force representing civilization as a whole.

Music and Drama

ENID BENNETT AND TYRONE POWER

At Griffin's to-night and for the rest of the week Ennid Bennett in a picture called "A Desert Wooing." The story concerns a family of apparently rich people who are really at their wits end to make ends meet but finally manage to match their only daughter with a westerner, who has saved a small but snug fortune through his frugal ways of living. Meeting the only daughter during one of his business trips to New York he just naturally loses his heart right away. The daughter is intent on marrying him and eventually divorcing him again with a large sized alimony. The story at first looks like as if it has been seen many times in the pictures but such is not the case; the author has so written the story that one is surprised at the many peculiar turns Life on a ranch is shown in all its simplicity and a glimpse of the life the average westerner lives, and also the close of the story is the most novel part of all. The costumes are well worked into the story and also the settings and photography could not be improved on and last but not least, the cast of players is excellent. Miss Bennett being ably supported by Jack Holt in the part of a Westerner.

Another good picture will be presented called "A Modern Lorellii" dealing with the bird and animal life of the sea and its lonely islands, it is an exceptionally novel story containing some very fine scenes taken by the sea, and the leading parts are taken care of by Mr. Tyrone Power and Frances Butnham, which should promise a good picture. Other good pictures will complete a program that is hard to beat.

PRICE OF COAL SEE-SAWS

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.—The price of coal in Ottawa yesterday is 20 cent per ton less than it was Tuesday or $10.55 a ton. This results from the issuance by C. A. Magrath, Fuel Controller for Canada, of an order instructing local dealers to reduce their prices to the extent named. However, comparatively few residents of the capital will benefit by the drop in prices by reason of the fact that an increase of the same amount will go into effect on August 12th, on which date the advance in freight rates recently granted the Canadian railroads will go into effect, and these will amount to the same figure per ton as the reduction in price ordered by Mr. Magrath.

KAISER APPEALS TO KARL

BERNE Aug. 8.—The Kaiser has appealed to Emperor Karl to start another offensive on the Italian front to relieve the pressure against the Germans on the west front, according to a iVenna despatch received here yesterday. It is believed such an offensive will be launched soon, despite Austria's reluctance.

Soils.

There are light and sandy loams underlaid by sand and gravel which need no sub or artificial drainage, but for clay loams it is essential for the best results, not merely to take away water in the spring, and allow early seeding, but to make the soil more moist throughout the season. No amount of surface tillage, no amount of manure or fertilizers, can ensure maximum crop production on a poorly-drained soil. Surface evaporation is slow in the early months of the season. Tile drainage is needed therefore that the heavier soils may be worked to advantage before the seeding time passes. Poorly drained soils are water-logged soils, and this means a condition absolutely injurious to growing crops, for the root system needs air. Crops can die of suffocation, even after they have got a fair growth. Poorly drained soils are cold and wet. — Royal Canadian Institute.

LINK WITH OLDEN DAYS.

Canadian Officers' Club Surrounded by Galaxy of Peers' Homes.

The residences of Lord Islington and Lord Londesborough, in Chesterfield Gardens, have been secured by the "Beyond Seas Association," of which Lady Hilda Murray, wife of Sir Malcolm Murray, controller of the Duke of Connaught's household, is the prime mover, as a club house for Canadian officers.

Chesterfield Garden has, or used to have, up to a short time back, more peers to the square yard than any other part of London. Of the nine houses there were seven inhabited by peers, and one of the remaining two was occupied by Mr. J. F. Mason, M.P., for the royal borough of Windsor, whose wife is the daughter of an earl. Lord Beaconsfield's house has been lent as a club for American officers.

All these houses, however, belong to very modern history, being built about fifty years ago, but the site formed part of the original gardens of Chesterfield House, which is now leased to the Duke of Roxburghe, and which was built about 170 years back for the Lord Chesterfield of the "Letters" fame. One of the romantic associations is with the brief but furious courtship of Elizabeth, one of the beautiful Gunning sisters, by the Duke of Hamilton who lost his game of faro but won a bride, being married to her two nights later at midnight at a chapel in Curzon street notorious for clandestine marriages.

Hiding In the Woods.

Rumors persist that there are hiding in the forests of Northern Maine hundreds, if not thousands, of Canadians, who are either too proud or two timid to fight for their country. Some of these are from the Province of Quebec, a few are said to have come from the Maritime Provinces of New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. The fact that one of the big lumbering concerns was not obliged to come to Canada for its log drivers this spring indicates that a new source of labor supply has suddenly been developed.

"Starve the Cities."

Charles Stafford, a Yarmouth Township farmer, recently made the statement that he was not satisfied with the amendment to the Military Service Act, and he believed the farmers should take down their fences, turn their cattle into the grain, and starve the city people and the Government out.

Spain Is Silent.

PARIS, Aug. 5.—Considerable surprise is manifested here over the apparent silence of the Spanish press in the face of the torpedoing of so many Spanish ships in the past month. Fast on the heels of the news of the sinking of the Ramon Lariniga and Roberto, flying the flag of the Spanish Ministry, and conveying the ambassador from Athens, comes the report of the latest outrage. The steamer Eguspuza, returning from Alexandria with a cargo of cotton, was torpedoed in the Mediterranean. Part of the crew were lost.

Apart from a brief announcement in Madrid that the Spanish press considers the sinking of the Ramon Lariniga "the gravest incident produced between Spain and Germany since the beginning of the war," nothing further has been said or done. Diplomatic circles exhibit a keen interest in knowing what the Spanish Government will do in view of the circumstances. A perusal of the Spanish papers arriving here indicates that the press appears to have been prevented from saying much about the sinking. It seems the Government is trying to use the new espionage laws to prohibit comment.

Soldiers Raid B. C. Labor Temple.

VANCOUVER, Aug. 6.—More than 200 returned soldiers, officers and men, paid an unannounced visit to the Labor Temple late Friday afternoon, broke down some inside doors, secured entrance to the offices, and threw books and records into the street. V. R. Midgley, a prominent Labor man, was taken into the street and secured his freedom after he had kissed the Union Jack.

Because Albert Goodwin, alleged draft evader, and once prominent in Labor union circles, was shot by a Dominion policeman, who is now charged with manslaughter, about 4,000 union workers of Vancouver laid down their tools at noon and say they will remain idle 24 hours as a protest.

Crack Flyer Believed Killed.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Major Edward Mannock, one of England's most successful flying men, who had 58 German machines to his credit up to a month ago, is missing, according to the Evening Standard.

Major Mannock was last seen fighting over the German lines July 20, when his machine was observed to fall in flames.

Naval Chief Is Out.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 6.—Admiral von Holtzondorf, chief of the German Admiralty Staff, has been retired for reasons of health, according to an announcement by the semi-official Wolff Bureau, of Berlin. Admiral Reinhardt Scheer, commander of the battle fleet, has been designated to succeed Admiral von Holtzondorf.

Clemenceau Is Sustained.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—Premier Clemenceau's Government was given a vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies, the ballot standing 312 to 164. The vote of confidence was asked on the question of rejecting an amendment providing for the calling up of the 1920 class of recruits.

Traitor to Serve Life Sentence.

LONDON, Aug. 6. — Lance-Corpl. Joseph Dowling, of the Connaught Rangers, who was landed on the coast of Ireland from a German submarine three months ago, was pronounced guilty and sentenced to death. The sentence, however, was commuted to penal servitude for life.

FARMER FOUND KILLED

BLYTH, Aug. 8.—A fatal accident happened to John McElroy, a farmer living in the township of Morris, about three miles from here. He was alone at the time but as far as can be learned he was leading a team of horses attached to a binder out of his barn, when the horses took fright, became unmanageable and knocked him down, and dragged the body under the binder across a field about forty rods. When he was found life was extinct, death being supposed to have been instantaneous, as his neck was broken and his body badly mangled.

Winnipeg Travellers Get Chance to Study Hinterland

New Ontario's immense forest reserves and seat of Provincial Colonization Scheme of Great Interest

The traveller nowadays wants something more than formal seat space, and the well established service of the Canadian Northern to Western Canada affords ample opportunity for thought. The immense stands of merchantable timber, the untold wealth in water power, and the great commercial and agricultural possibilities of Northern Ontario should be matters of common knowledge to Canadians. Modern trains of standard and tourist sleeping cars and coaches leave Toronto Union Station at 10.00 p.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, connecting at Winnipeg for all points in Western Canada.

For information, literature, tickets and reservations, apply to G. H. [illegible], C.P.A. Belleville or write General Passenger Department, 68 King St. E. Toronto, Ont.

APPRECIATION

is a term we feel permitted to use, as being descriptive of the state of mind of many of our CUSTOMERS who have taken advantage of OUR SUMMER FUR PRICES. The response to our offer of these special PRICES for summer work, has been gratifying to us, and no doubt means some lightening of our HEAVY FALL burden. By no means are we deploring our HEAVY FALL TRADE, far from it; but it is with a view to educating the PUBLIC to the MUTUAL advantages of preparing well ahead of winter to make void its many terrors, by having your FURS attended to NOW. LOW PRICES, FREE STORAGE, FURS ALL READY WHEN NEEDED, are to your advantage. It will be easily seen that IF our customers do this, we shall be relieved of many an all-night session in the fall. Thus, by equalizing our working days it would be to our advantage; hence these offers of LOW PRICES

FINED $200 AND COSTS

Walter Chatterson, of Trenton, was convicted on Tuesday before Police Magistrate O'Rourke of that town of having liquor in a place other than his residence and a fine of $200 and costs was imposed. A charge of selling liquor was dismissed. Mr. R. Arnott, License Inspector, prosecuted in the case.

THE COOLEST SPOT

Zwicks Island Park was visited by hundreds of citizens yesterday and the cool breezes from the bay afforded decided and refreshing relief from the heat of the city. Bathing was the favorite pastime, emphasizing as usual the deplorable lack of facilities for those wishing to shed their clothes for a cooling plunge.

PLEASED WITH BELLEVILLE

Mr. C. H. Esson, General Manager of The Standard Bank of Canada, and Mr. H. Langois, a director of the same institution, visited Belleville and were the guests of the local manager, Mr. John Ellictt, for two days this week. Both gentlemen expressed themselves as well pleased with the bank's office here, and the beauty and prosperity of this city and the Bay of Quinte district.

GIRLS NOT VAGRANTS

Before the Police Magistrate yesterday an adjourned case of two girls charged with being vagrants was disposed of. His Worship dismissed the charge, but ordered that one of the accused, whose home is in Madoc, return to that village, which she did. The other girl's home is in this city.

CORP. CLIFFORD HONORED

For rescuing Second Lieut. C. C Coleridge, of England, from a burning flying machine at Deseronto air camp on July 23, Acting Corp. G. Clifford, of the 89th Canadian Training Squadron, has been cited in orders issued at the Royal Air Force headquarters by Gen. Hoare, G.O.C., for his gallant conduct. The orders state: "The G. O. C. of the R. A. F. wishes to highly commend Acting Corp. G. Clifford, 89th C. T. Squadron, Deseronto, for his conspicuous gallantry in removing Second Lieut. C. C. Coleridge from a burning machine on July 23 under circumstances of the greatest risk to himself, thereby upholding the very best traditions of the Royal Air Force."

LETTER "B" RUST SIGN

In the opinion of Dr. Frank T. Shutt, assistant director at the Experimental Farm, the letter which observers of natural phenomena have found on oat leaves, and whose presence they have interpreted as forecasting the end of the war, is not a "B" nor the figure "8" either, but possibly the letter "R" instead. But Mr. Shutt does not consider the mark as a good omen. Instead, he says that its real portent is that another war must be waged—not against the Hun, but against rust, which destroys thousands of dollars' worth of grain every year. It is not an unusual occurence for rust to form in the shape of the letter "R" on oat leaves, but every year since the war started credulous persons, seeing the letters for the first time, have jumped at the conclusion that it is a mystic sign foretelling the end of the war or the end of the world in the immediate future.

AVIATORS ATHLETIC MEET

Despite the intense heat yesterday the athletic meet of the 42nd Wing Royal Air Force at Camp Rathbun attracted a large crowd of visitors, including many from Belleville. The grounds were gaily decorated with flags and bunting and the aviators excelled themselves in providing entertainment for the visitors. A pleasing feature of the afternoon was the presence of the band from the aviation camp at Long Branch, which rendered a splendid program. This band is composed of excellent musicians, and is the only band composed of aviators in Canada. Hundreds of automobiles were parked about the athletic grounds, and the taxies did a thriving business taking visitors from the town and C. N. R. railway station to the grounds. The program concluded with an enjoyable assembly in the evening, when the lads and lassies danced away the hours, with the greatest pleasure.

PORT HOPE TAX RATE

Port Hope tax rate this year is 31 mills on the dollar which, whilst exceptionally high, is a lower rate than Belleville.

ALL YEAR ROUND CAMPS

At Mohawk and Rathbun Camps many workmen are busy enlarging the facilities of the camps and building new hangars, indicating that the announcement made some time ago that these camps will be continued as training quarters during the winter will be carried out.

TRAVELLERS HOT!

A number of commercial travellers who laid off Monday thinking that civic holiday was general on that day, had an unpleasant surprise yesterday when they landed in Belleville to find business places closed. They were obliged to lose the whole day much against their will. Whoever invented a mid-week civic holiday should be given a permanent holiday.

HOT! HOTTER!! HOTTEST!!!

Yesterday was conceded to be the hottest day of the year, and perhaps for many a year. During the day a breeze tempered the heat waves, but with darkness the breeze died away and the heat just baked bedrooms and living apartments. Early this morning a thunder storm cleared the air a little, but old General Humidity soon started his offensive again and another humid day was in prospect. A thick haze obscured the sun during the day and this helped to mitigate the heat.

ACCIDENT AT BEAMSVILLE

On Friday evening at 5.30 at Beamsville when an officer and Cadet L. E. Wells of Belleville, were returning from firing into the lake, they saw a cadet who was making a forced landing on account of his engine having given out, smash to the ground. As it looked like a bad accident they immediately flew to the aerodrome and dove around the ambulance as a sign for them to follow. When they got back they dove down to show the ambulance where the crash was, and hit a line of wires, which were hard to see on account of the trees. The machine was broken in two but Cadet Wells was the only one injured, his hip being badly cut, requiring twenty stitches. It is too bad that an accident happened just at this time as Cadet Wells expected to receive his commission for overseas in a few days. z

SERIOUS FIRE AT COLBORNE

On Saturday morning last a disastrous fire occurred in the Village of Colborne, entailing a loss of several thousands of dollars. Mr. F. A. Philip's block was destroyed and besides the loss of the building, Mr. Philips lost a big stock of flour and feed, binder twine, cement, etc. His loss is estimated at $12,000, insurance $7,000. The Colborne Creamery, occupying East side, lost $3,000 worth of new butter manufacturing machinery, besides valuable books and papers, and some cash. Insured. Chase Bros. Company, nurserymen, in offices upstairs, lost furniture, plate books, circulars and stationery. Small insurance. Capt. A. G. Willoughby, residence upstairs, lost practically all his household goods, clothing, etc. Only a small portion in bedding, etc., having been taken to his summer cottage, which is otherwise permanently furnished. Insured.

TRUE BLUE PICNIC

The picnic held on Victoria Park yesterday by Derry Lodge True Blues, of this city, was a decided success, large crowds attending both afternoon and evening. A fine list of sports was put on during the afternoon and competition was very keen, especially in walking the greasy pole, which furnished heaps of fun for the large crowd of spectators and boys who attempted it. George Dicks was the successful competitor in performing this difficult feat. Another interesting feature and which was witnessed by a larger number of spectators than any of the other sports was the tub race. In this the boys had to swim across the harbor to the tubs and get in and paddle themselves back with their hands without upsetting. The winner was Russell Clarke, he being the only one to arrive back without turning over. Mr. Frank Welsh managed to keep a good crowd stepping lively on the dancing platform. The 15th Regimental Band looked fine in their new uniforms and rendered a number of selections. The True Blues feel very grateful to all who helped to make their first picnic the success it was. The proceeds in excess of the expenditure, will be donated to the True Blue Orphanage at Picton.

CADET KILLED AT NAPANEE

Cadet F. R. Cook was instantly killed in a flying accident near Napanee about 7.20 a. m. yesterday. His mother, Mrs. E. Cook, lives at Clan William, Manitoba.

RATHBUN MILITARY HOSPITAL

A new hospital, to be known as the Rathbun Military Hospital, will be opened at Deseronto on Monday next. All R. A. F. cases will be treated there, and removed for convalescence. It is reported that Major Kenneth Mundell is to command this hospital.

TYPHOID AT KINGSTON.

Officers commanding all units at Kingston have been instructed to see that all officers, non-coms, and men who have not been inoculated against typhoid must be treated at once, in view of the fact that a number of cases of typhoid have developed in the city. The city's water supply has been found all right, and the cause of the fever is attributed to a food supply, possibly ice cream. The Medical Officer of Health has advised people to boil or otherwise cook all food consumed.

MARK THE DANGER SPOT

The sad drowning accident yesterday, while not at Zwick's Island Park, emphasizes the need of properly marking the danger spot at the island where a deep hole claims yearly victims. Repeatedly attention has been called to the death trap, and a coroner's jury recommended that a large sign be placed in close proximity directing attention of bathers to the danger. It should not be necessary for another life to be sacrificed to have this precaution taken.

Called by Death

PATRICK McHUGH

Mr. Patrick McHugh, a well known resident of this city, passed away on Tuesday evening. Deceased was 61 years of age, and was a life long resident of Belleville. For some years he was a faithful G. T. R. employee. He was a member of St. Michael's Church. Less than three months ago his wife predeceased him. One son, and five daughters survive. The son, John, is somewhere in France, having left Belleville with the 155th Battalion. The daughters are Mrs. Harry Knott, Misses Mabel, Madeline, Kathleen and Stella. Two brothers, Thos. of Toronto, and George of Battleford, Sask., also survive. Mr. McHugh was highly esteemed by all who knew him.

Blame The Nerves

When you cannot sleep and are easily irritated and worried you have reason to suspect that the nerves are below normal,

They are not getting proper nourishment from the food you eat and need a little special help. A few weeks' treatment with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will do wonders for anyone in this condition. Note your increase in weight while using this food cure.

DEATH NOTICES

McHUGH—In Belleville, Wednesday, the 7th August, 1918, Patrick McHugh, in his 61st year.

The funeral will take place from his late residence, Olive Street, Friday, the 9th inst. at 2 p.m. to St. Michael's Church. Interment, St. James cemetery. 1t

H. C. HOCKEN M. P. NEW GRAND MASTER

The annual convention of the Grand Orange Lodge of British America, which was held last week at Charlottetown, P. E. . was attended by delegates from all over Canada. During the week the discussion of various changes to the constitution occupied much of the time. Addresses from many prominent members of the order were heard. Among these was an address from Mrs. Akerley Grand Mistress of the L.O.B.A. The election of officers for the year resulted in the election of H. C. Hocken, M.P., former Mayor of Toronto, Grand Master. Other officers elected were: Deputy Grand Master, G. D. Wright, Mayor of Charlottetown; Grand Chaplain Rev. F. C. Ward-Wate, N. S., Grand Sec. William Lee; Grand Treas. Capt. Jos. E. Thompson; Grand Lecturer, W. H. G. Armstrong, Saskatchewan; Grand D. of C. William Crawford; Deputy Grand Sec. John Easton; Deputy Grand Treas. A. W. Wright; Grand Auditors, Wm. Chenery and J. F. Harper.

Just Apply This Paste and the Hairs Will Vanish

(Boudoir Secrets)

The judicious use of a delatone paste insures any woman a clear, hairless skin. To prepare the paste, mix a little of the powdered delatone with some water, then apply to the objectionable hairs for 2 or 3 minutes. When the paste is removed, and the skin washed, every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain attends the use of the delatone and it will not mar the most sensitive skin, but to insure results, see that you get real delatone.

Warships Seeking U-Boat Off Canada

British and American on Trail of Pirate at Bay of Fundy

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.—A fleet of submarine chasers from the United States and British navies has put off after the enemy submarines, which, at the week-end, played havoc off the coast of Nova Scotia.

"All steps possible are being taken to meet the situation," was the announcement at the Naval Department. The mouth of the Bay of Fundy and waters eastward, as far as Shelburne, are in the zone covered by the United States patrols, it is understood. Seal Island, the locality where defenceless fishing smacks have been sunk, is southwest of Yarmouth, the island light being discernible from Yarmouth itself. The island is inhabited by fishermen, and the neighboring grounds are fished over by fleets from Yarmouth, Tusket, Shelburne and adjacent towns and villages.

The enemy evidently picked a place where prey was plentiful. It is understood that the destroyers are on the scene today.

4 Days' "Cheap" Coal Under the New Order

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.—The new cola order issued by Fuel Controller Magrath is not so much an order decreasing the price of coal as it is an order decreasing the spread between buying and selling prices, though it should work to the benefit of the consumer. Under an order passed last winter the coal dealers were allowed a fixed sum to cover all expenses incurred from the time the coal is received in the railway yards until it is laid down for the consumer. This sum was calculated to be large enough to allow the dealers 50 cents a ton profit. The "spread" between buying and selling price has until now been approximately $2.65 in Ottawa whereas under the new order it must be reduced to $2.45 on anthracite and $2.35 on soft coal.

As a matter of fact it was contended for some time past that figures compiled by the cost of living branch of the Department of Labor indicated that the fifty cents a ton profit allowed by Controller Magrath was considerably more than they had ever made before.

It is stated here that the effect of the order, which is only good until August 12, when the new freight rates will be effective, will be that those consumers who receive their supplies during a period beginning to-day and ending August 11th will get their coal at a price of $10.55 a ton, as compared with $10.75 a ton in effect yesterday.

Immature Boys And Deformed Men

With the French Armies at the Front, Aug. 8.—The fifth year of the war has opened disastrously for the Germans, who during the week-end have been forced to abandon what now amounts to four-fifths of the territory captured by them since their offensive of May 27.

On the road I passed a batch of some 300 or 400 prisoners. They were nothing like the men of the early stages of the war, but they could not be classed as men of poor physique. Prisoners taken during the present operations have, however, included fourth-rate material, immature boys and deformed men.

SUDBURY GIRL IS DROWNED.

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 8.—The body of Miss Anna Pelletier, 18-year-old girl of this town, was discovered floating in the bay Tuesday morning. She has been missing from home since July 8. Blood stains on the face give rise to suspicions of foul play, but at the inquest, which was held at Cachebay Tuesday night, the coroner's jury decided that there was no evidence to support this theory and returned a verdict of accidental drowning.

Sporting Notes

WIN FOR THE T. N. T.

Despite the extreme hot weather, yesterday afternoon some 400 spectators wended their way to the Agricultural Park for the purpose of witnessing a baseball match between the T. N. T. team in connection with the British Chemical Works at Trenton, and a team picked from the players of the Belleville Twilight League. It was anticipated that a good game of ball would be witnessed and such proved to be the case although the winning score was not on the side the great majority of those present desired. The visiting team has an enviable reputation for playing good ball which they demonstrated to a niciety yesterday. At the conclusion of the game the score was 9 to 4 in favor of the T. N. T. team, and of the 9 runs, no less than four were home run hits. In the third innings the visitors took a decided lead in the game by scoring 4 runs. While Belleville had an outside battery in Graham as pitcher and Giese as catcher they were unable to lower the flag of the T. N. T. Graham pitched a good ball but was not given support in the field at critical points of the game that he deserved. Fred Goyer Belleville's well known pitcher who is engaged at the Chemical Works did the twirling for the Trenton team and as usual he pitched a fine game and was well backed up by the other players of the team. M. Connell, who played right field for Belleville, and who by the way is an old ball player made a circuit of the bases by a long drive to centre field the right through the fielder. All the members of T. N. T. team are good stick handlers and they play well their positions in the field. The teams have played a number of games this season and in nearly every match have proved victors. The team is certainly a credit to the town of Trenton and especially the works they represent. Mr. Ellis of the Y. M. C. A. of this city was the umpire and fulfilled that position in a manner that was satisfactory to members of both teams. Mr. Brouse was base umpire. The line up of the teams was as follows:

T. N. T.—Goyer p, Nolan c, Driscoll 2nd b, Stringer s s, Mays l f, Cummings c f, Doyle 3rd b, Butler 1st b, Hunter r f.

BELLEVILLE—Graham p, Geise c, Gerow 1st b, Meagher 2nd b, Lynch s s, Kelleher 3rd b, Andrews r f, Green, c f, Connell l f.

WIN FOR THE ATHLETICS

On Tuesday evening a twilight game of baseball took place between the Athletics and Ponies, city league teams. Owing to darkness the game was called at the end of the sixth innings, the score being 9 to 6 in favor of the Athletics. A goodly number of spectators were in attendance at the game and at times good ball was played. Mr. Ellis of the Y.M.C.A. was umpire and Mr. Ernest Lang base umpire. The line-up of the teams was as follows:

Athletics—Young, 1st b.; Stewart, 2nd b.; Connell, s.s.; Mills, 3rd b.; Meagher, p.; Quincey, c.f.; Orr, l.f.; Hunter, r.f.; McCuaig, c.

Ponies—Moore, c.f.; Lynch, s.s.; Canning, c.; Philps, 1st b.; Duesberry, 3rd b.; Thomas, r.f.; Kelleher, p.; Andrews, l.f.; McGuire, 3rd b.

Score by innings—

Athletics	4	1	1	1	0	2—9
Ponies	0	2	0	1	2	1—6

20,000 Prisoners Captured

Ten Thousand Hun Prisoners Bagged First Few Hours of Drive

Allies Smash Enemy Line on 26-Mile Front

FOCH GIVES ENEMY NO TIME TO RECONSTRUCT AND REORGANIZE, BUT KEEPS SMASHING THEM BACK TOWARD THE RHINE — NEW OFFENSIVE STARTED BY ALLIES ON 26-MILE FRONT GAINS ALL OBJECTIVES — 10,000 HUN PRISONERS AND OVER 100 GUNS CAPTURED DURING FIRST FEW HOURS OF NEW ALLIED DRIVE — TANKS SWEEP FORWARD WITH ALLIED INFANTRY — FRENCH AND ENGLISH, CANADIAN AND AUSTRALIAN TROOPS IN NEW DRIVE — BRITISH SMASH HOLE IN ENEMY CENTRE FIVE MILES DEEP — SO MANY PRISONERS TAKEN DIFFICULT TO HANDLE THEM — CRACKS IN KAISER'S WAR MACHINE STEADILY WIDENING.

LONDON, Aug. 9.—More than twenty thousand prisoners had been captured by the Allies in the Somme drive up to noon today. More than two hundred guns also have been taken.

PARIS, August 9.—The battle on the front south of the Somme was resumed early this morning and Franco-British forces made favorable progress from the start, reaching various selected objectives. Powerful cavalry forces are in action. During the night there was a good deal of activity on the part of the German artillery in Champagne. The Germans undertook several raids in the region of Prosnes and Souain, but they were repulsed.

CLEANING UP THE SKY.

LONDON, August 9.—In aerial fighting on Wednesday, preceding the offensive in Picardy, British airmen accounted for 22 German machines, 15 of which were destroyed, says the official statement on aerial operations. Eighteen tons of bombs were dropped during the day and night. One British machine is missing.

ALLIES VICTORIOUS.

PARIS, (Noon, Friday)—Reports received to this hour of the fighting on the Franco-British front indicate that it is developing most victoriously for the Allies.

BRITISH CAVALRY CHASING ENEMY.

LONDON, August 9.—Advices from the battle front south of the Somme today report that British cavalry, armored cars and tanks in advance of infantry have reached to within a mile of Chaulnes, an important railway junction.

14,000 PRISONERS AND MANY GUNS.

LONDON, August 9.—Fourteen thousand prisoners and guns too many to mention have been taken in the British drive on the front south of the Somme. The cavalry is still pursuing the enemy.

From Lihons the line runs southward to Mcharicourt, southeast of Rosieres. This represents a total maximum advance of eleven miles. It will be impossible for the Germans to hold their Montdidier position, it is believed here. The allied progress in continuing. The French have taken Fresnoy-en-Chausee, while the British have reached a point east of Le Quesnel and Caix.

BRITISH ADVANCE IN FLANDERS.

LONDON, August 9.—(Official)—The Germans are evacuating their positions in the Lys valley, on the Flanders front. On the Lys front the British now hold Locon, LeCornet, Malo, Quentin, LePetit, Pacaut and Lesart.

Above the Lys region on the front north of Kemmel the British carried out a local operation last night in which their line was advanced somewhat on a front of more than 1,000 yards.

CANADIAN TROOPERS CAPTURE MANY HUNS.

LONDON, August 9.—(Via Reuter's)—Canadian horse troopers, co-operating with French cavalry, cut off a large force of the enemy in today's operations on the Somme front.

FOR THE GLORY OF CANADA.

With the British Army in France, August 9.—(Via Reuter's)—The Germans are blowing up their ammunition dumps in the battle area.. This is considered an indication that they are preparing to retreat further. The British casualties since the beginning of the present drive are but three fifths of the number of prisoners counted up to three o'clock this afternoon. The British cavalry has rounded up many prisoners, but the larger part of the 14,000 so far taken were captured by Australians and Canadians.

HUNS ABANDON MUNITIONS.

An enormous quantity of stores and ammunition has been abandoned by the Germans in their hasty retreat.

ALLIED AIRMEN MOW ENEMY DOWN.

Cavalry patrols accompanied by swift "whippet" tanks are reported by airmen to be far out ahead of the infantry advance. The infantry at many places was apparently checked only by sheer physical inability to push on any farther. This afternoon enemy transport lorries have been rolling along the few good roads left in the Somme valley. They afforded excellent targets for the allied airmen, who played havoc with the escaping convoys and speedily littered the roads so that they were impassable.

PROMINENT GERMAN OFFICER CAPTURED.

LONDON, Aug. 9—It is reported that a prominent German divisional Major-General has been captured in today's drive by the British forces in France.

London, Aug. 8.—British troops have reached Harbonnieres (an advance of about five and a half miles) it was learned this afternoon. Several thousand prisoners are reported to have been taken.

Harbonnieres is seven miles east of Villers Bretonneux and two miles north, and slightly west of the important railway and highway centre of Rosieres.

Rosieres is the junction point of the great east and west railway line which divides the two Crown Princes' armies and the first north and south railway connecting the Albert and Montdidier regions.

The British thus have made their greatest penetration at the most vital point in the whole new battle front.

Several thousand prisoners—so many in fact that the British are having difficulty in handling them—numbers of guns, and large quantities of important war material captured, and an advance of from two and a half to three miles along a front of 28 miles, were the first fruits of the new offensive launched by the British fourth army and the French first army between Albert and Montdidier. Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig is in direct command of the operations, having as his lieutenant Sir Julian Byng, that brilliant expert of tank warfare.

Whippet Tanks Pave Way.

Hundreds of light British "whippet" tanks paved the way for the assaulting infantrymen who went over the top after a British bombardment lasting only three minutes, and a French artillery preparation of forty minutes. Despatches from the front emphasize the fact that the enemy was taken completely by surprise. He had expected an attack on that front, and had already partially carried out retirements in order to evade the threatened blow. The offensive was launched, however, before the foe had completed arrangements to meet it, and at the moment when at least one of his divisions was being relieved.

The allied forces scored an immediate success all along the line attacked, and in less than three hours had taken all their initial objectives on both sides of the Somme. As the day drew on despatches continued to report satisfactory developments all along the line.

The allied progress is throwing the German front backwards on both sides of Von Hindenburg's main southern lines of communication.

The extension of the fighting front toward Montdidier by the French strongly suggests that Marshal Foch is using the present drive to threaten a break through at this dangerous corner, unless Von Hindenburg immediately brings up strong supporting units.

To find fresh reinforcements would gravely disorganize Von Hindenburg's disposition of his reserves for the retention of the Chemin des Dames against Franco-American assaults north of the Vesle and the Aisne. Until it is seen how Von Hindenburg meets this threat Marshal Foch will doubtless refuse to reveal his future intentions. They may consist of a continuance of the present offensive east of Amiens, or a new drive led by the Americans north of the Vesle may be ordered.

Hun Transports in Flight.

British Army Headquarters in France, Aug. 8—On the horizon enemy motor transports have been visible scurrying away.

The 27th, 43rd and 108th Divisions of Crown Prince Rupprecht's army have suffered heavily, while the 117th Division, which came into the line only last night, has been badly cut up.

The only determined enemy stand was made around Morlancourt, where there was heavy fighting yesterday, the enemy making several counter-attacks, but without recovering any ground.

Offer $5,000 to Find German U-Boat Base

Halifax Papers Offer Rewards—$500 to Find Enemy Agent

HALIFAX, N. S. Aug. 8.—The Halifax Herald and Evening Mail offer a reward of $5,000 to any persons who will supply information of the location of a base on the Nova Scotia coast, or the seaboard of the Bay of Fundy used by the German submarines now operating in the north Atlantic waters and which information will lead to the seizure and destruction of said "base for the operations."

The Herald will also pay $500 reward to anyone giving information that will lead to the first arrest and punishment of "any" of the enemy agents who, it is alleged by the Herald infest Halifax.

Splinter Passed Through His Body

WHEATLEY, Aug. 9.—On Wednesday of last week William Williams of this village met with a most serious accident, and for a time no hopes were entertained for his recovery While he was in the mill sawing wood for onion crates a large splinter of wood flew off and passed completely through his body, entering almost directly over the stomach and emerging a couple of inches to the left of the spinal column. He pulled the stick out by his own efforts and was able to walk to the auto which conveyed him to his home. Pieces of his underclothing and overalls were found that had been carried through the body by the stick. The physicians think this probably prevented the rough edges from seriously damaging the structures as it passed through. Mr. Williams is now to all appearances out of danger and will probably be around again in the course of a few days, none the worse for his strange experience.

Huns Hold N. Bank of River Vesle

LONDON, Aug. 9.—News from the Soissons-Rheims front this afternoon is that the Germans are holding the northern bank of the Vesle in considerable strength with a large number of guns. They are believed to have destroyed some of the bridges over the Aisne and to have taken some of their heavy guns across the river.

Although the Germans have recently carrried out various withdrawals between Montdidier and the sea, there is no indication that they have made any extensive preparations for a retirement. It is considered probable however, that the enemy may be forced to abandon the line on the Vesle.

IDENTIFIES THE TOWEL.

Mrs. W. J. S. Sharp, wife of the missing Casualties Officer of this district, Major Sharp, has identified the towel found by the clothes of her husband as the one hemmed by herself. She says that her husband did not take it from their home in Kingston when he left on Friday evening to go to the armouries. She still believes that he has been drowned while bathing. A Dominion Police detective who has been making investigation, it is understood, is doubtful if the Major has been drowned. A clue leads to Montreal.

STORM CAUSES GREAT DAMAGE

LAFAYETTE La. Aug. 9.—The tropical storm which swept the Louisiana coast wrought great havoc in Lake Charles and vicinity according to reports early to-day. Ten persons are reported to have been killed and property damage will reach more than a million dollars. Hardly a building in Lake Charles escaped damage more than a hundred being entirely demolished. Electric lights, telegraph, and telephone wires were down and the city was in darkness last night.

Naval Department is Ready to Receive Applications From Young Men

OTAWA, Aug. 9.—Hon. A. K. Maclean, Acting Minister of the Department of the Naval Service, has announced the formation of the Royal Canadian Air Service. This organization will come under the direction of the Naval Department, and has for its primary object the defence of Canada's coasts but men enlisting in the Air Force will be liable for service outside the Dominion if necessary. Candidates accepted for the Royal Canadian Air Service will be entered as cadets, and will be required to sign on for three years, or for six months after the duration of the war.

It was stated at the Department today that pilots for seaplanes, airplanes and kite balloons were required immediately in connection with the organization. Only young men, British-born, or naturalized British subjects, between the ages of 17½ and 26, and in the highest medical category, will be accepted, and arrangements have been concluded with the militia authorities under which accepted candidates will be released for service in the Royal Canadian Air Service. Seaplane cadets, it is stated will be trained in the United States this winter, and airship cadets will be sent to England for training.

The Naval Department is now open to receive applicants from young men with the necessary qualifications who wish to enter as pilots in the air service. Applications should be made on the forms supplied for the purpose, which may be obtained by writing to the Recruiting Secretary Department of the Naval Service Wellington street Ottawa. The department requires that applicatinos shall be accompanied by a copy of the candidate's birth certificate a recommendation as to character from some responsible adult and a doctor's certificate as to medical category. Instructions will be given by the department as to the nearest doctor for purposes of medical examination, and in connection with this, traveling expenses, where necessary, will be refunded.

Hold-Up of Gang On The C.N.Ry.

PARRY SOUND, Aug. 9.—Yesterday near Porlock, on the Canadian Northern Railway, north of Parry Sound about eighty miles, two masked men appeared, and after firing several shots from a repeating rifle from rocks nearby ordered the foreman of an extra gang of fifty men grading on the line to line up his men. One man on the rock with the rifle kept guard, while the other with two revolvers and a bag tied to his waist commanded the men one by one, to come forward and drop their valuables in it. Also they took with them some registration cards and birth certificates. When they had secured all the valuables, which amounted to $3,500, they commandeered two men and a handcar, and ordered them to pump them south towards Bayswater, meantime covering the gang with the guns. At mileage 77, they ordered the men to walk back and took to the bush. nineteen to twentytwo years old, in height about five foot six and five foot eight inches, and dressed in overalls and brown boots and leggings. A number of constables are now on the ground, and all ports are being closely watched. The extra gang have quit and will not work there again. The country is very sparsely settled, and if the robbers get into the woods it may be hard to locate them, though there are but few centres they can get to where they will not be apprehended.

Man Power of The Enemy Dealt a Staggering Blow

With Zenith Passed Months Ago, Germany Cannot Recover From Shock of Allied Counter-Offensive— Allied Strength Increasing Every Day

PARIS, Aug. 9—One of the most important results of the present fighting aside from regaining the initiative recovering French territory, and wiping out the menace to Paris, is the effective depletion of German man-power.

Since July 15 Ludendorff has hurled no less—and probably more—than 770,000 men against the allies, of which 75,000 will never fire another shot. More than 40,000 of these are prisoners. Tens of thousands are buried in the Rheims-Soissons pocket, or are lying in German hospitals, permanently maimed. In some places the former enemy bulge is still cobbled with Boche dead, the French and Americans having no time to bury them.

Reports received from Switzerland state that long trains behind the German lines are bearing off wounded to the already congested hospitals.

In man-power alone the allies have dealt the enemy a staggering blow from which he cannot recover. German power passed its zenth months ago, while daily, almost hourly, the allied strength is growing as each ship from America touches these shores.

Planes From Front Guard Enemy Towns

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Allied airplanes are making it hot for German towns according to advices reaching London. Their activities have increased within the last ten days, forcing the enemy to detach a large number of fighting machines from the front in order to protect the menaced towns.

During a recent raid over Saarbrucken the allied aviators encountered 40 German fighting planes. This is regarded as an indication of the very serious moral military effect that the air raids are having on Germany.

FOOD BOARD FLASHES FOR FEMININE FOLK

Are you in the "sensible" buyer class or are you one of the great crowd of indifferent buyers who leave selection to their dealers?

The sensible buyer does her buying at first-hand—and not over the telephone. She goes out with her basket and picks what she wants. She encourages the cash and carry system and she believes in the groceteria. She buys what is in season. She does not let herself be beguiled by the thing that looks tempting. She encourages the fish store all she can because fish spells conservation of meat. She studies the commercial page as religiously as she does the woman's page because there she finds the market prices.

She adds the final touch to sensible buying by steering clear as far as possible of wheat products, of beef and of bacon. By such means she is becoming not only a sensible but also a patriotic buyer.

Germans Forced to Abandon Guns

LONDON, Aug. 9.—Reuter's correspondent at French headquarters says, describing the part Gen. Berthelot's army took in the second victory of the Marne that the general never had less than fifteen enemy divisions opposed to his forces and had perhaps the hardest fighting of all. When Gen. Mangin's counter-offensive transformed the position Gen. Berthelot's object was gained and he endeavored to exploit the situation to the utmost disadvantage of the enemy. Accordingly he decided to throw the whole weight of the attack upon the eastern edge of the pocket in the direction of Fismes so that the enemy was constantly threatened with having his rear turned along the Ardre valley. The latter was consequently forced to accelerate his retreat, and these tactics of Gen. Berthelot's thus achieved their object. The Germans had to abandon everything but their guns, and even a good many of these were come upon in a wood north of the river. Two hundred thousand heavy shells were discovered neatly hidden from air observation and it is not yet possible to count the material captured. Thousands of machine guns hundreds of Minenwerfer and mountains of ammunition for both make up the allied booty. The army of Gen. Berthelot now has two complete field gun batteries which the French are utilizing against the Germans firing the latter's own ammunition at them. Machine guns were so plentiful that the Germans seem to have used them at the rate of one machine gun for every two infantrymen.

Dr. Beland's $10,000 Is Awaiting Him

OTTAWA AAug. 9.—Hon. Dr. Beland, M.P. has $10,000 waiting for him at the Capital. During his absence of four years on active service and as a prisoner of war his sessional indemnity of $2,500 has been voted by Parliament each session. The accumulated amount now awaits him here as some small compensation from his services and sacrifice.

Furthermore, if Dr. Beland will accept a position in the Cabinet as a much-needed representative from Quebec the Prime Minister and his colleagues will welcome him to the Government. It is understood that Dr. Beland who met Sir Robert Borden in England, has already been asked to enter the Government, but that he has not yet given any definite answer pending consultation with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux and his former political associates here.

Should Hon. Dr. Beland be induced to enter the Cabinet he would probably be given his old portfolio of Postmaster-General, now held by Senator Blondin. The latter would be transferred to some other department, or else just kept in the Government for the present as a Minister without portfolio.

BARN AND HAY CROP BURNED AT EDGELEY

EDGELEY, Aug. 9.—A disastrous fire occurred here on the farm occupied by Carson Smith, when the bank-barn driving-shed, and implement-shed were burned to the ground. The loss on buildings alone, which are owned by Mr. John Smith will amount to $4,000 les $2,000 insurance. The loss of contents amounts to 30 tons of hay, all implements and harness and one calf. The rest of the livestock was driven out. Insurance $1,000. The cause of the fire is unknown. Mr. Smith was taking supper in his house when it broke out. The barn on the same site was burned four years ago.

On Tuesday morning the barn of James Bell at Elder's Mills, was struck by lightning and two calves were killed but no fire occurred.

Crops in this district are progressing well and a good deal of cutting has been done. Spring wheat barley and oats are specially strong this year.

Canada's Army to Play An Important Part in Great Events to Come

CRITICISMS OF SIR ROBERT BORDEN RESENTED BY CANADIANS IN MOTHER COUNTRY—IMPATIENT WRITERS ILL-INFORMED.

By F. D. L. Smith,
Editor-in-Chief of The Toronto News.

London, Aug. 8.—In addition to Great Britain's immense services to the common cause in holding command of the sea and the financing and equipping of the Allies, the Mother Country now is maintaining on the field the largest of all the Allied Armies. She is thus showing fresh strength as the titanic war enters upon its fifth year.

British, French and American troops are greatly encouraged by the recent successes north of the Marne, and I look for great events in the near future and for the Canadian army to play an important role in these events.

Informed Canadians here resent the criticisms levelled against Sir Robert Borden because of his prolonged stay in England. The Prime Minister hopes to get away shortly, but is detained in connection with problems of vital importance to the welfare of the Canadian army and the Allied cause. When the facts are known some of the impatient writers in Canada will regret their present attitude.

Was Going Down Hill Fast, He Says

Newton Was Just About "All In"— Like New Man After Taking Tanlac

"Talking about things that help people, this Tanlac has done me more good than anything else I ever got hold of," said Matthew Newton, recently. Mr. Newton lives at 2482 St. Clair avenue, Toronto, and is employed in the yards of the Canadian Pacific railroad.

"I bought Tanlac," he continued, "because I needed something to get me out of that awful run-down condition which I have been in for six or seven months. I have been on the night shift now for sometime and for the past three months, especially, I haven't felt at all like myself. My appetite was bad, my strength was away down and I felt tired and draggy all the time. I would come home in the mornings exhausted and 'all in,' and what little sleep I got seemed to do me no good. I actually dreaded to start out to work at night because I felt so worn-out and no account, and I seemed to be losing ground every day

"Tanlac has acted different from any other medicines I have ever tried. It has built me up in every way. My appetite is much better and I can eat what I want and thoroughly enjoy it. That drowsy, mean feeling has left me and I get home from my work in the mornings feeling like a different man. I was in pretty bad shape and Tanlac has straightened me out to where I am now feeling fine. Tanlac has been a fine thing for me and I can conscientiously recommend it to anyone."

There are thousands of people who complain of being nervous and run-down. There are not sick exactly, but feel tired out and good for nothing most of the time. They need something to build them up and throw off symptoms of this weakened, debilitated condition.

The system, besides being purified by Tanlac, is toned up and invigorated as the medicine, aside from assisting the blood, reinvigorates the constitution, overcoming as it seems to quickly do, nervousness, indigestion, non-assimilation of the food, headache, backache, kidney derangements, general debility and many other ailments that are so common to the thousands of half-sick depressed men and women.

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton, by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. H. Lattimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby, by Jas. Campbell and in [illegible] by J. H. Blakely."

Quit Search For Maj. Sharp's Body

KNGSTON, Aug. 9.—There have been no new developments in the mysterious disappearance of Major Sharpe. Every effort to locate the missing man is being kept up, but as the hours pass nothing new is brought to light. It was learned that the search for his body among the weeds at the deserted spot where his uniform was found has been abandoned, and hour by hour the evidence produced by the action of the bloodhound Sandy is becoming more important. Many friends of the missing man now incline to the belief that the body is not in the waters of Cataraqui Bay, in fact a rumor that Major Sharp had been seen in Montreal gained currency about the streets but no one in position to know could be found to say that it had any foundation.

Local members of the Dominion police who have been working on the case from the first discount entirely the theory of foul play. They point out that there was absolutely no trace on the neatly piled clothing of any struggle had taken place. It seems impossible they assert, that foul play could have happened without leaving some trace and that if it had more than one trail would have been picked up by the bloodhound Sandy.

MANY 77-MILLIMETER GUNS

AMONG THE BOOTY CAPTURED

PARIS Aug. 9.—Each day adds to the booty captured by the allies. It will be impossible to take full stock for some time but the booty includes a considerable number of 77-millimeter guns, many of which were found in the depths of Arsy and Tournelle and the forest of Fere. The number of 77 millimetre shells salvaged up to the present totals 1,500,900.

"No, Missy Quita, he not dead. Governor's Sambo tells me all de news just now. De guard go after him, and take him prisoner, and shut him up in Fort cell, where he can't come out. And so my missy quite safe, and can go to sleep comfortable."

"There, my darling, you hear what old Jessica says," interposed Mrs. Courtney soothingly. "They have got him in prison. It was like his insolence to speak to you as he did; but you have given him so much encouragement, that the creature is beside himself. But he has overleapt the mark this time, and will never trouble you again."

"Will they—kill him?" said Quita, with a shiver.

'I hope so, I'm sure. It would be the best thing for all of us, and drive this romantic nonsense out of your head, Maraquita. Why, what is this, my dear? You are surely not weeping for the fate of this murderer, who his instigated his fellows to kill half your friends, and would have killed you, and your husband, and your parents, if he had had the opportunity? I shall begin to think you have very little love for your father or myself, if you prefer his life to ours."

"Oh, no, mamma, it isn't that! I am very thankful to think you are all safe. Only—only—Henri, who used to love me so—to die! Oh, it must not be! it is too shocking!"

"If a man sees all the laws of his country at naught, he must pay the penalty of his wrong-doing," said Mrs. Courtney sententiously.

"Yes; but there is some excuse for him, mamma. Think of his grief for my loss, his jealousy, his revenge, it was I who drove him to it. I should have been true to him at all hafiards, and then this terrible business would never have happened. Oh, mamma, he must not die, or his spirit will haunt me all my days," said Quita, trembling with close eyes.

"Maraquita, you are exaggerating the blame that is due to you in this matter. In the first place, we don't know that the mutiny was organized on your account at all. The negroes are disaffected, I am sorry to say, all over San Diego. And if it were, it is an outrage which should call forth nothing but resentment on your part. You have been foolishly weak in former times with regard to this man; but he must have been insane if he ever believed you would marry him. You followed your parents' wishes in accepting Sir Russell Johnstone, and have nothing to reproach yourself with in regard to it. Now, leave the rest of the matter to him, and don't worry your head about it. You may depend upon it, the Governor will do what is just and right, and such a dreadful affair will never be allowed to happen again."

'But Henri—what will they do to Henri?" moaned Maraquita.

"Oh, this is unbearable! You are past all reason!" cried Mrs. Courtney impatiently. "Here, Jessica, help me off with her ladyship's things, and let us put her into bed."

She pulled off the various garments of cambric and lace, almost roughly, in her indignation at her daughter's weakness; and having seen Maraquita laid in bed, she left her in her old nurses care, whilst she went to ask the doctor for a sleeping draught.

Jessica had been installed at Government House as she had desired, and her wages had been raised to nearly double their former sum. Lady Russell had felt uncomfortable at first to remember that there was some one beside her who knew all about her maden life, but in her present extremity she turned to her old servant with a feeling of security that she need hide nothing from her. As her mother left the room, she moved on her pillow with a heavy sigh, and laid her little white hand in Jessica's dark palm. The negro nature if vindictive and revengeful under injustice, is also very affectionate and easily conciliated. The caressing action on Maraquita's part touched her old nurse's heart. It was some time since her little missy had shown any token of love for her, and it won her over on the instant to her side.

"Jessica," sighed Quita, "I'm very unhappy."

"I know you is, poor missy," responded the negress. "Yop'se feelin' berry bad tonight. And, sakes! it's no wonder. But it'll be all right bimeby, missy."

'I loved him, Jessica, very much," continued her young mistress. "You knew all about us, and how I used to slip out when everybody was asleep and go to meet him in the Oleander Thicket."

"Ah, yes, missy, Jessica knew. Many the night I've sot up, and watched and waited for you to come back; but it was generally daylight before you came. Ah! you used to love de oberseer in those days, Missy Quita, pretty strong."

'And I love him still Nurse! I can't help it!" cried Quita feverishly, as she sat up in bed, with her dark hair floating about her, and stared at the negress with dilated eyes. I have loved him all along; and if they kill him, they will kill me too."

"No, no missy; Governor not killing Massa Courcelles. Only keep him in prison little while, and den let him go free. Lie down, missy, and go sleep. All right bime by."

"But I want to see him!" exclaimed Quita excitedly. "I want to hear everything they are going to do to him; and I want to ask his forgiveness for having married Sir Russell; I must see him, Jessica. I shall go mad if I don't."

'Den missy shall see him," replied the servant soothingly.

"Will you manage it for me, Jessica?" asked the girl eagerly; "and without saying a word to mamma. Will you find out where Monsieur de Courcelles has been taken, and if I can possibly get permission to visit him, and if there will be a trial, and when? Find out everything, Jessica, and let me know to-morrow morning, and you shall have the pair of gold bangles pappa gave me last birthday. Stay! you shall have them now,' continued Quita, as she sprang from her bed and took the ornaments off her dressing-table. "Put them on your wrists, Jessica, and remember you are to find out everything!"

"Missy berry good to ole Jessica," said the negress, as she clasped the glittering circlets on her dusky arms and feasted her eyes on them; "and I will know de whole truth by tomorrow morning. Only missy must lie down again now and keep all dis berry dark, or de ole missus nebber let me tell nuffins."

The entrance of Mrs. Courtney at this juncture with the opiate draught put a stop to further confidence, and Maraquita, having obediently swallowed it, soon lost sight of her troubles in sleep. Mrs. Courtney dismissed Jessica for the night, and lay down by her daughter's side; but it was long before she followed her example. She trembled not only for the fright she had gone through, but for the influence she feared it might have upon Maraquita's future.

Poor child!" she thought, as she contemplated the lovely face, now tranquil in slumber on the pillow beside her, she is passing through a terrible ordeal. I only trust it may not cause a rupture between Sir Russell and herself. I am certain he suspects somthing. I did not half lik the look with which he received my explanation of the matter. It was the most unfortunate thing in the world that that fellow should have been planted right in Maraquita's way as she left the room. Two minutes sooner or later, and she would not have seen him. Now, I hardly dare to think how it may end. If he is condemned to death, she certainly must not hear of it; I must invent some reason to Sir Russell for taking her away. Her emotional nature would break down altogether under such a strain. What an awful thing it is that she should have fallen into his clutches!" And Mrs. Courtney sighed over it until she fell asleep.

As soon as the morning broke, Maraquita having passed a good night, and everything being tranquil at Government House, she accompanied her husband to Beauregard for the day, for all the planters were entertaining grave fears for the continued submission of their coolie hands, and it was not thought advisable to leave the estates for long at a time without a ruling eye. Her departure was the signal for a long conference between Lady Russell and old Jessica. The negress had ascertained that it was possible for the friends of the prisoners to obtain access to them through a written order from the Governor but that the privilege would only be extended in the case of relations.

"That renders it impossible!" exclaimed Quita despairingly, for she was not a woman with the wit to overcome difficulties.

"How so, missy?" demanded Jessica. "Why impossible? I can get order quick enough."

"You, Jessica? But Sir Russell knows you. Besides, he would never believe you were related to Monsieur re Courcelles."

"Oh, missy, I not going to work dat way at all. Course he not gib it to me; but if missy gib me five dollar note, dat half-caste woman Rosita will go swear she's de oberseer's aunt, or his moder, and want to speak to him with her daughter—dat's you, missy. Den you put veil over your face, and big cloak, and go with Rosita and see de obeerseer."

'But Rosita may tell," said Maraquita, shrinking from the idea.

Jessica shrugged her shoulder contemptuously.

IT'S PURE

IT'S STRONG

Careless Shampooing Spoils The Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every praticle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Army of 5,000,000 For United States

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—In urging enactment of the Administration man-power bill extending draft ages from 18 to 45 years, General March, chief of staff, told the Senate Military Committee that the War Department plans an army of approximately five million men to be raised as soon as possible.

CANADA'S LANDMARKS

HISTORIC ASSOCIATION DOES VALUABLE WORK.

Many Spots That the Citizens of Our Young Nation Should Remember Have Been Marked by Monuments and Plates — Places of Interest Found In Every Province.

THE ravages of war have destroyed many of the relics of antiquity that marked northern France and Belgium as a Mecca for tourists. The wanton destruction has made an indelible imprint upon the minds of all civilized peoples; France and Belgium have not been alone in mourning their loss.

Yet here, in Canada, the onrush of progress, the gigantic commercializing of a great growing nation, has bidden fair to obliterate landmarks that should be dearer to us than any in Belgium, any in France, any in the other countless sections of the old world—should be dearer, and would be, if the Canadian people as a whole knew of them and appreciated them.

Do we?

Assuredly, we do not.

Shall we?

The Historic Landmarks Association of Canada is making a Dominion-wide effort to accomplish this.

The association seems to have been launched in the reflected glory of the battlefields of the Plains of Abraham. Its aim is to spread the dauntless spirit there generated, across the continent, asking from the whole of Canada all that is worthy of record and permanent preservation, as national heirlooms that will tell the story to generations to come —"lest they forget."

It desires to gather from all parts of the Dominion of Canada, all the knowledge available regarding each site or case it is proposed to mark—obtain verification of the same from documents in the Dominion Archives, and other reliable sources, submit reports from each province to the Council, which will then consider the merits of each application and, when desired, recommend them to the Government for approval.

The "Memorial Tower," of Halifax, erected to commemorate the first Parliament of Nova Scotia, or of what was then Canada, initiated by the Canadian Club of that city, was carried to a successful national completion through the efforts of our distinguished citizen, the late Sir Sandford Fleming, of "Winterholm," now the Sir Sandford Fleming Military Convalescent Home, Ottawa.

The Nova Scotia Historical Society have marked many sites and erected, among others, memorial tablets to Col. J. F. W. Desbarres; Hon. Joseph How; Sir William Dawson, Rev. T. MacCullough, D.D., and "The site of the first printing press in Canada, established by Bartholomew Green, Jr., 1751; and of Bushell's press, where the Halifax Gazette, the first newspaper in Canada was published in 1752."

Anent the Port of Halifax, among historic relics recently received is a Bill of Lading the quaint phraseology of which comes home to us now:

"From Liverpool the good schooner, the Four Brothers sails by the Grace of God (the Danger of the Seas only excepted) and so God bring the good Ship to her Desired Port in Safety, Amen."

The New Brunswick Historical Society has commemorated the discovery of the Port and River St. John, in 1604, by the Sieurs de Mont and Champlain; and placed memorial tablets of early settlement on St. Croix and Caton's Islands; while the Daughters of the Empire have erected a memorial tablet on the wall of the building on Queen street, Fredericton, in which the Provincial Legislature first met. Old Fort Howe, the site of the landing place of the U. E. Loyalists, and grounds, is now known as Fort Howe National Park.

In Quebec City, so full of historical sites, on the Plains of Abraham the re-erected Wolfe memorial, is a history in itself: "The First Memorial was the stone that Wolfe's own army rolled here to mark the spot on which he died, 1759. A Second Memorial was placed in position, 1832. The Third Memorial was set up by the British Army stationed in Canada, 1849. This Fourth Memorial reproduces the Column of the Third —preserves its Crowning Piece and two inscriptions and was set up by the National Battlefields Commission, 1913."

In Montreal, rich in memories, all important sites have been marked by the well-known Antiquarian and Numismatic Society, now in charge of the Chateau de Ramezay, a favorite objective of tourists. It was erected in 1705 by Claude de Ramezay, Governor of Montreal, and occupied as his official residence for nearly twenty years. In 1745 it became the property of "La Compagnie des Indes." After the conquest it was leased to the British Government and became the residence of the Governors. Purchased by the city in 1893; it contains a unique collection of old portraits, prints, coins and historic relics of every description.

At Chambly is a noble monument to Col. de Salaberry.

Travellers up the Ottawa sight at Portage du Fort a simple shaft commemorating the "visit of Lady Head who made the tour of the Upper Ottawa in a bark canoe in 1856." The wife of Sir Edmund Head, Governor-General of Canada, B.N.A., she was the first white woman to make the tour of the Upper Ottawa with Indian guides.

Further on at Calumet Island, is erected a monument to Cadieux, who held a war party of Iroquois at bay while his friends escaped.

Throughout the Province of Ontario many monuments and tablets mark historic spots. At Ottawa the Federal Capital, the site of Col. By's house is marked by the two memorial stones, taken from the arch of the old Sappers' and Miners' bridge, over the Rideau Canal, on its demolition for "Connaught Place," July 24th, 1912, and preserved by the Women's Canadian Historical Society. These bear respectively the "Coat of Arms" of the Royal Engineers, and "Lt.-Col. J. By, Comm. Royal Eng." A bronze tablet affixed bears the inscription: "To commemorate Lt.-Col. John By, R.E., founder of Bytown, Ottawa, the Federal Capital of the Dominion of Canada, Builder of the Rideau Canal, 1826-32, Comm. Royal Engineers. This tablet is erected on the site of his house on Major's Hill, by the Historic Landmarks Association of Canada, May, 1915."

Two important historic events have marked the past season at the capital. The first of these took place on the first day of September, 1916, when His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, then Governor-General of Canada, relaid for our new Parliament Building the same foundation stone originally laid on the first of September, 1860, by his brother Albert Edward, Prince of Wales, our late King Edward VII. The second, again on Parliament Hill, when the Duke of Devonshire unveiled before a large and enthusiastic assemblage the axial column of the new Parliament Building bearing the following inscription: "July, 1867-1917. On the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Commemoration of the Confederation of British Colonies in North America as the Dominion of Canada—the Parliament and people dedicate this building, in process of reconstruction after damage by fire—as a memorial of the deeds of their forefathers — and of the valor of those Canadians who in the great war fought for the liberties of Canada, of the Empire and of Humanity."

Recently, in the home city of Alexander Graham Bell, an ideal memorial was unveiled to him whose inventive genius has brought humanity into closer touch than any invention of modern times. The sculptor (W. S. Allward) sought to bring out, as the dominant note in this memorial, the discovery by man of his power to transmit sound through space. "Above the reclining figure of Man is Inspiration, urging him on to greater endeavors, while, at the other end of the panel are the floating figures of Knowledge, Joy and Sorrow, brought to man by the telephone. A former resident of Brantford, invalided home from the front, acted as Mr. Allward's model, and afterwards re-enlisted. At the side of the main portion of the monument are two heroic female figures in bronze on granite, representing Humanity, the one being depicted in the act of sending, the other of receiving a message over the telephone. These two figures are some distance apart, to tell in stone the power of the telephone to travel great distances.

At the head of Lake Superior, the gateway to the Northwest, the Thunder Bay Historical Society have erected a national monument: "to commemorate the locality made famous by the Pioneer Fur Traders of the Great Northwest," and giving a concise history of the companies (some 2,000 letters) from 1812 to 1889.

The brass memorial tablet on Fort Garry in Winnipeg, Manitoba, presented by the Canadian Club of that city, bears an interesting historical record from the erection in 1806 of the first fort named Gibraltar—the second in 1822, re-named Fort Garry; rebuilt in 1835, demolished in 1882, except the gateway which in 1897, with the park, was presented by the Hudson Bay Company to the City of Winnipeg. To the heroic Hudson, from whom the company derived its name, there is, as yet, no memorial.

In Saskatchewan, at Fort Qu'Appelle, a fine monument has been erected by the Western Art Association, Saskatchewan Branch, to commemorate the First Treaty between the Indians of the Northwest Territories and Queen Victoria represented by her Commissioners, known as the "Qu'Appelle Treaty No. 4," whereby the Indian chiefs ceded "all their rights, titles and privileges to all lands wheresoever situated within Her Majesty's N.W.T. to Her Majesty the Queen and her successors forever."

Interest attaches also to the story of the little stone school house of Saskatoon, built in 188[illegible], where the first efforts of education began in that part of the great prairies. It is built of their varied colored stones. When the need for a larger school arose, the original one was preserved through the efforts of the Golden West Chapter, I.O.D.E., the stones all numbered and on October 11th, 1913, looking exactly as it did in 1887, the little stone school house was removed to a site on the University of Saskatchewan campus.

On the confines between Alberta and British Columbia, at the "Great Divide" is erected a monument—"In honor of Dr. James Hector, K.C.M.G., Geologist and Explorer to the Palliser Expedition of 1857-1860, one of the earliest scientists to explore the Canadian Rocky Mountains. He discovered the Kicking Horse Pass, through which the Canadian Pacific Railway now runs from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean."

Many historic landmarks in British Columbia are still calling for recognition, notably those of David Thompson, explorer and mapmaker. The only Bastion left standing in this province is in Nanaimo, retained and preserved by the Women's Club of Vancouver. They have placed the Memorial to the Indian Princess-Poet "Tekahionwake, (Pauline Johnson) on Siwash Rock in Stanley Park, where they have also planned an artistic fountain to be placed after the war.—Jennie R. Simpson, in Everywoman's World.

Distinction for Ottawa Nurse.

Miss Evelyn Gordon Brown, younger daughter of the late Gordon Brown and Mrs. Brown, of Ottawa, and niece of Sir Percy Sherwood, has been awarded the Military Medal. As this has been a man's distinction, the honor is unusually significant. Miss Brown belongs to the First Aid Nursing Yeomanry Convoy, which is stationed at St. Omer, the nearest band of women to the front line.

SALVATION ARMY WAR WORK.

That the Salvation Army is rendering valuable assistance to the Allies in the great war becomes more evident every day as details of S. A. work close to the firing lines reach the public through the press. An American writer sums up in the following concise manner the principal features of Salvation Army War Work:

> On the job over three years—since Germany smashed Belgium and England took to the field!
> Forty-five thousand men under arms in the trenches—Average men!
> Seven hundred uniformed men and women serving troops behind the lines.
> One hundred and fifty-three huts—where clothes are mended, hot lunches served, small comforts provided, and the teachings of Christ, which alone can assure morale, eagerly taught.
> Forty-six ambulances given to Allies, manned by Salvationists.
> Fighting camp-followers in America. Nailing the very source of disease! Who will do it if the Salvation Army doesn't?
> Still helping the poor everywhere; now needs war-fund, not big—but what is necessary!
> Sixty-six and two-thirds per cent. goes to morale work with great common average of men in France.

> "Thirty-three and one-third per cent. for huts at United States camps, and for materials, such as yarn, so that 6,000 Salvation Army women can continue to knit for the Red Cross!
> Nothing but actual expenses—printing, and necessities are deducted!

In addition to the above activities the Salvation Army of England has placed 153 recreation, comfort and refreshment huts at the front in Europe with the Allies, and the Salvation Army of the United States has, since Uncle Sam declared war against Germany, established seven such huts for recreation, rest and refreshment close to the front occupied by United States soldiers in France.

DOG IN THE MANGER.

Considerable fun is being poked at the Canadian editors privileged to see at first hand men and conditions in the war zone on the western front as well as get "close-ups" of the big men of France and England who are keeping this old world right side up despite the exertion of forty years accumulated war effort on the part of the Huns. It is all right to josh the scribes because this little jaunt is being financed by the government, but there is also an occasional note of malicious disapproval which does not sound nice coming from the pens of writers who would no doubt have accepted with delight an invitation to join the party. Let's cut out this dog-in-the-manger stuff and rejoice that some of our brothers of the Fourth Estate are privileged to visit the scenes of the Great War while the smoke of many battles still mark the struggles between civilization and savagery for the freedom of the world. The trip is worth all that it may cost in educational value alone and the fortunate editors selected represent every part of Canada. Their published views when they return with a broader vision and wider outlook upon the problems of humanity, the possibilities of the Great British Empire united in the bonds of blood upon the altars of patriotic sacrifice, and the best thought of the master minds of the world upon the momentous question of how best to face and plan for reconstruction days after the war, will be like good seed sown all over Canada. Too many of us have become stilted and shrunken in outlook through continued peeking through a knothole, when we might have been in the grandstand if we had been a little more progressive and daring and taken advantage of the many opportunities to travel and gain a higher and wider vision. The press continually sits in judgment upon the government and it is well that the government should see the necessity of spending a little money occasionally educating the press.

The Kaiser has postponed his next offensive until Foch stops pushing.

The Crown Prince's pocket was picked on the Marne and he was lucky to escape with his clothes.

The allied world is still waiting for that promised thrill announced in a cable despatch from Paris last Sunday as coming shortly in the figures of Hun prisoners taken in the emptying of the Marne pocket.

In revenge for the Marne defeat a British hospital ship was sunk by the Huns. The Kaiser realizes that his military machine is more effective against wounded soldiers, nurses, women and children, than against fighting men.

The announcement from Ottawa that soldiers in Canada who previous to enlistment had been engaged exclusively in farm work would be given six weeks' leave of absence indicates that the critical stage of the war has been passed and the tension to a large degree relaxed. There may be plenty of hard fighting yet but recent victories indicate that the Hun will be kept busy trying to block the road to Berlin.

The Food Board asks that Canadians restrict their consumption of sugar to one and a half pounds a month per individual. Canadian householders should economize on sugar as much as possible, but some of them may recollect that the new United Station ration limit is two pounds a month, and, we understand, even in Britain the allowance is two pounds a month.—Mail and Empire.

The many drowning accidents recently emphasize the necessity of exceptional care being taken by bathers. One prolific cause of deaths in the water is the practice of plunging in when the body is overheated. This is one of the greatest dangers to bathers as the shock is liable to cause unconsciousness and drowning results. Cool off first and plunge afterward when the temperature of the body is not at too wide a variance with the temperature of the water. Drowning accidents from canoes are also prevalent. No one should go out in a canoe who can not swim, for the danger of an upset is ever present.

Games are not called on account of darkness or wet grounds in the big league to which professional ball players have been transferred. The trenches will give them more scope to develop their diamond strategy and fatten their batting average at the expense of the enemy.

Deeds Not Words.

Moose Jaw News.

Anything that puts an obstacle in the way of the military authorities in the carrying out of their duties is playing false with those who are holding down the line for Canada. We are constantly bursting forth into panegyrics of their fineness and our own backing of them. But let us prove it in every way, not by mere lip service.

Car-fares in Boston.

Boston Globe.

We have become accustomed to the nickel as a standard price for a street car ride. It is an arbitrary price, however, and, as the price of every other commodity has been advanced, even that of transportation on steam railroads, so it has become necessary to part with our five-cent fare standard if the street railway is to pay its way. The two-cent increase is frankly a tentative measure. The trustees give warning that, if the added income is inadequate "other expedients will have to be tried."

The Reward of Steadfastness.

Washington Post.

As the great day of victory approaches, the great Allies will do well to search their hearts continually, to purge therefrom all temptation to take advantage of their position by denying justice to the small and weak. If they do justice they will be rewarded by enduring peace and prosperity. If they forget their trust and deny liberty to others they will be punished by another war, in which they will again fight for their existence, perhaps without the help of the combination of elements that is now winning them the victory.

The Fighting Men.

Le Mid, Paris (France)

Let us acclaim the American soldiers, but never forget the British sailors, without whom Germany would continue to utter sarcastic remarks on the vain menace and fruitless efforts of America. She already knows, and will know better tomorrow, all that this menace means. The day when the American army gains the big success to which we are looking forward, let us pay homage to the British sailors, those unseen and silent conquerors who are guarding the seas for us.

Fortune's Champion.

New York Evening Post.

The Kaiser is sadly missed nowadays. Early in March we used to hear from him two or three times a week, telling the world what he was going to do, advising us of the "historic moment" of complete German victory which he was about to usher in, and mouthing great things about the "German sword." Why has he suddenly fallen silent. The world will not know what to think without his guidance. No one else is so deep as he in the counsels of Gott, and if he does not reveal them to us every day or two, we shall be in danger of wrong doing.

Climbing Two Steps at a Time.

Philadelphia Ledger.

Some of us are trying to live our lives all at once. We would cramp the slow development of years into the coming month or week; we would compress the work of an hour into the next five minutes. Nature—patient, tireless, cunning laborer that she is—does not favor this plan. She takes her time—"Because it is hers!" some one makes prompt answer. "She has command of all the time there is. She can be as deliberate as she chooses. We must make haste because our little lives are so soon clipped off. The darkness too early rounds our day. Our work must be put through with speed and under pressure or we shall not finish."

KINDRED.

As one at night in anguish, who smiles
on her child at morn,
So out of the pang and pain of war shall certain truth be born.
The miner and the merchant
Are both brave men,
See them both in khaki,
They do not differ then—
One 'mid death and danger,
In deed and daring one.
And these shall still be comrades
When the course of war is run,

Now this shall be the great reward
when o'er a world in strife,
Like sun that bursts through thunder
the great Peace lifts to life.
The statesman and the workman
Are both true men.
See them with one purpose,
They do not differ then—
One who guides a nation,
One who makes a gun.
And these shall still be kindred
When the new day greets the sun.

The world is torn with its torture, with pain that knows no rest,
But this shall be the glory at morning on her breast.
The statesman and the workman
Shall be of one estate;
The miner and the merchant
Shall be as mate to mate;
The sham of caste has crumbled,
Man knows his brother's worth,
And these shall be of one blood
When the new dawn greets the earth.

THE HARVESTER'S QUICKSTEP

Toronto World.

How does the man on the binder know the quality of the crop he is cutting? By the way his horses have to go up on the collar and the sharp and heavy kick by which the sheaves are shot out on the stubble. The horses have to move to make the shuttle knives do their work when the grain is thick; and the men who do the shocking get to feel the weight and to know the frequency of the sheaves. Lots of heavy sheaves close together, and stooks equally close, tell the tale. And this was the song in most of the thousands of Ontario grain fields where thousands of binders were playing the Harvester's Quickstep yesterday. The binder is a more cheery sound to the farmer than the motor on the road or the noisy airplane overhead. There must be horsepower, absence of stones on the field, and the machine must be tuned up to the work and the song. Then it's all some music to the ear and some reward for previous labor. Go on with the quickstep, oh you horses and farmers and you toilers behind the sheaves!

There are other fields "over there" with a grimmer harvester and reaper; more mettled horses struggling amid deafening thunder to the ear; and many men and riders going over the ground as best they can; and some of them are singing and cheering, fighting and dying, for those in the harvest fields at home in Canada. There, or here we are working in these fields that civilization may live. Go to it, too, oh you Canadians in the greater sweat and in the more deadly field. Yours is to be a harvest that will never die!

AGAINST RETURN TO HUNS

CAPE TOWN, South Africa Aug. 9.—Impressive war anniversary services were held at the principal centres in the Union including an open air service in the Church square at Pretoria which was attended by several Cabinet Ministers. Minister of Justice De Wet speaking in the Johannesburg Town Hall said the Union's war message was one of courage sympathy and faith.

At the meeting at Nairobi it was unanimously decided that under no circumstances shall the conquered East African territory be returned to Germany.

Canadian Masons In England

H. S. Carmichael, Passenger and Freight Manager of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, was installed W. M. of the Canada Lodge at the installation banquet held recently in London, England, attended by the Rt. Hon Sir Edward Clarke, Sir Gilbert Parker, General J. G. Ross and many other Canadians and English representative men interested in Canada.

The Canada Lodge No. 2527 on the Register of the United Grand Lodge of England was founded in 1911, in order to provide a Masonic centre for Canadians resident in Great Britain and Brethren from the Dominion visiting the Old Country. The object of the founders was also to form a bond of union between the Brethren of the Dominion and the Brethren of the United Kingdom in the strong hope and confidence that Freemasonry might so even still further assist in the great work of forming these bonds of "indissoluble attachment" which shall forever unite the component parts of the British Empire. The Lodge has now 282 members, many of whom are Dominion members resident in all parts of Canada. No fewer than 150 are initiates of the Lodge, 205 members of the Lodge are on active service in H. M. Forces.

Mr. Hugh Strain Carmichael, the newly-elected W. M. of Canada Lodge, is a native of Glasgow. He has been connected with the Transatlantic steamship trade since 1888, when he joined the staff of the State Line, which in 1891 was taken over by the Allan Line. In 1895 he commenced his long connection with the Canadian Pacific Company at Glasgow, transferring to its Liverpool office in 1903, when the company established its transatlantic passenger service. In 1908 he was promoted to be general passenger agent for Great Britain and Europe. Since the establishment, in 1915-16, of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, Ltd., which manages the entire fleet of the C. P. R. and Allan Lines, Mr. Carmichael has occupied the position of passenger and freight manager, and has his headquarters at Waterloo Place, London, England.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

By Rev. A. M. Hubly.

THE CHRIST-TAUGHT CREED

Article III.

Luke xviii:19.—"God is our good Father."

Four years of the most horrible war that this world has ever known are rounded out this holy sabbath, August fourth, nineteen hundred and eighteen. And still its bloody stream of suffering and sorrow spreads and widens.

The cry of the defeated, the shouts of the victors, the moans of the sick and dying, the sobs of breaking hearts—what a refrain sweeps the holy Sabbath calm! God lives and knows it all! It all enters into His ear, as the cry of a lost and ruined world. Does our Father hear and pity? O, yes: He both hears and cares! He cheers the defeated, He tempers the victor, He heals the sick, opens a door of life for the dying, and comforts the bereaved. Yea, amid all the dissonance there are harmonious notes of praise. Hearts aflame with love to God for His goodness, sing their songs of hope; the struggle in the midst of the battle inspires sweet companionship and fellowship in suffering with Him who faced the cohorts of earth and hell and was wounded for our transgressions and dyed the steeps of Calvary with His blood, but conquered in the fight!

All this, because of the goodness of our Father. "God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

It is not strange that "God is our good Father," should be an article of faith in the "Christ-Taught Creed."

Jesus, from the manger to the cross, by person, word and work emphasized the goodness of the Father. But, on one very special occasion He put it in plain speech. The incident is recorded by the three synoptic gospel writers. A young man of great wealth addressed our Lord—"Good Master." Jesus said unto him: "Why callest thou me good? There is none good but one, that is God."

Jesus taught us that God was our Father and exhorted us to learn of Him manners and temperments which would fit us for the heritage of His children. He said: "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for He maketh the sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. For if ye love them which love you what reward have ye Do not even the publicans the same? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? Do not even the publicans so? Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect." How tenderly all this touches the sweet affinities of father and child. My father is good, is the thought of every little child where parental affection is normal and unimpaired by the brutality of our fallen nature.

Sometimes the child face will be stained with tears, and sadness will swell the little heart to sobs and sighs.

Lack of knowledge of good and evil in the child may cause an uncertain questioning regarding the father's harsh restrainings and disciplinary methods, but back comes the testimony, "Father is good."

I once said to a young man, "I am very pleased that you and your father are getting along so well together in business."

He said: "Yes, father sometimes appears, to me, too exacting in little matters, and in larger transactions expects rather much of me; but I respect him too much to disregard his opinion. He is so good that I would suffer anything rather than offend or grieve him."

He continued: "I am his only son, and we have always been together. In youth I thought father was too severe in restraining me from enjoyment and amusements to which other boys had free access. I often felt like rebelling, but I see it all now in a clearer and better light, which reflects the results of unrestrained pleasures of boys in the characters of men. The one ambition of my life is to be as good a man as my father." There is a story told of the very learned Dr. Dryander and his little pupil who was a prince of the realm. It was catechism hour. The lesson was on the doctrine of total depravity. The little son of a royal house said: "Dr. are all men sinners?" "Yes," said the professor, "all men are sinners?" asked the boy.

Now the boy's papa was the doctor's royal master and king of the realm, and a subject must not say much or aught against his majesty, but the teacher and the preacher must be true to the fundamentals of the Divine revelation: "All men are sinners." "There is none good but one, and that is God." What could Dr. Dryander say to the little prince but "Yes, your papa is a sinner." After a thoughtful pause the little fellow said: "Dr. is my mamma a sinner?" "Yes," said the teacher, "your mamma is a sinner."

Then the princely face of the boy flushed, the eye flashed with inward indignant fire, the child doubled up his fist, and answered back to the teacher: "Well perhaps all men are sinners, and it may be that my father has sinned, but my mamma is not a sinner; she is too good."

Is it not heavenly manna and soul-refreshment to enjoy such confidence in those to whom we owe our being? How blessed is the faith of children!

True, our earthly parents may play us false, and abuse our confidence; even then we shall but err on the right side. But confidence in the goodness of our Heavenly Father can never be misplaced. Our Father is not only benevolently good, but morally perfect. "God is our good Father," is a sentence embodying more than creed, to be recited, and then allowed to float away in the mist of a nominal profession; it is an affirmation that makes character.

As I came from a funeral a friend said to me: "That was a good man you buried today." I answered "What do you mean by a good man?" Not having an answer to my question ready he looked embarrassed. I said: "When I speak of a good man I mean a God-man: one who obeys God—one who serves and lives for Him." He said: "I suppose that is what I meant." I said to him: "Why, then, should not you and I be good men?" "If God is our Father we should endeavor to grow like Him."

Beloved, believe me, there is no warrant for goodness in the universe save the nature of the good God Himself. That is what Jesus meant by the words: "There is but one good, that is God."

The speaker was good because He was God. He said: "I and my Father are one." You who are children of God by faith in His Son, can only be good as you partake of the divine nature.

Let us give a little earnest thought to this proposition.

For the past quarter of a century the trend of university teaching has been to weaken faith in the supernatural. There is no graver menace to the spiritual life of our students than the teaching of ethics without a "Thus saith the Lord." There is nothing noble, good and true that has not divine warrant for it, and that warrant should be ever kept in the foreground of all ethical teaching. The presentation of moral life upon a basis other than the character of the eternal God has been cutting deep under the religious life of the people of this generation. It has been as acidulent rust on the anchor chain of hope, and as decaying garbage to the foundations of faith. Ethical standards placed only upon material and physical fitness may be but the paint which covers the rotten fibre of an empty jewel case. Respectable outer garments do not determine the moral character of the man. Education, refinement, esthetic environment and respectable upright living indicate the existence of moral life, but these are only the easy outer garments of the soul. They may be marks of happy, useful men and women, but not one, not all of them can warrant divine goodness. As the apostle says: "Have not the faith of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Lord of glory with respect of persons."

How apt are we to do this! To judge by the gold ring and goodly apparel rather than the essential qualities and destiny. Be assured of this one thing—no standard of righteousness but the character of our sovereign Lord can meet human need. Listen not to the deceptive voices that clamor for attention.

Have an ear only for Him who hath said: "Be thou holy, for I am holy." He still imparts, to all who believe, and with open heart will receive it, His own holiness. His perfection meets the requirements of both the old and the new covenant, and is the only warrant for a redeemed life. "God is good." This is the creed that came down from the Great White Throne. It came to change men from bad to good, so that they might walk the earth in transformed life.

It was in the troublesome sufferings of the United States, when North and South were at war, that some men questioned John Greenleaf Whittier regarding divine providences. "The same old baffling questions," said he, "I cannot answer them."

I have no answer, friends, for thee or me, save that I have learned at my mother's knee—All is God that is, or is to be, and God is good."

This is the panacea for all ills and the anaesthetic for all pain, even of death. It stills all fear and drives away all doubt. It eclipses the cloud by the star of hope. It hides the muddy waters of despair by the wings on which we mount up into the heights afar. It gives foretastes of coming joy and makes the heart sing songs in the night.

"God is our Father, and God is good."

"Germany Slowly Going to Pieces"

With the British Army in France, Aug. 9.—Documents of the most significant character, indicating that recent events have brought about an extremely marked state of depression in the German army, have fallen into the hands of the British. Most significant of all, perhaps, is an extract from a German officer's diary, in which he relates he had been asked by the Divisional Headquarters whether the troops in the line favored peace or a continuation of the war, his answer being:

"Immediate peace or an immediate decisive battle."

This entry was dated before the German drive for the Marne began.

Hardly less important is a letter taken from a German prisoner. It was written to him by another German who was stationed along the Marne. It reads:

"You will be in the thick of it now. Shirk as much as you can. Do not be stupid. We are risking our lives only for big victories. Now we are taking the offensive on the Marne, and we will never get out of this mess at all. Our regiment has been nearly wiped out and we have not pushed far. The war is becoming a greater massacre than ever. What is going to happen I don't know. Germany is slowly crumbling to pieces."

Another prisoner just captured on the British front says that the official figures show that 12,000 of his comrades were made prisoners in the Champagne fighting, but that rumor along this front is that 60,000 Germans and 800 guns were lost.

Adding to the gloom of his division, which realizes that Germnay has suffered a great defeat, the prisoner said the food given the men was very poor. He said that poor rations had ben especially noticeable for the past three months. The only time that good food is served, he said, is before the Germans are to participate in an offensive.

Reply Was A Stifler For the C.P.R. Supt.

Had Never Heard Before of a Barber's Pole as Tomb-stone

The following interesting communication, purporting to be signed by the General Superintendent, has been much enjoyed by them:

In accordance with our policy, our solicitor was instructed to notify certain parties who were conducting different lines of business using the letters "C.P.R." such as C. P. R. Hotel, C. P. R. restaurant, barber shop, etc., that the use of the sign was illegal and they should be prosecuted.

One party received this notice who had a barber shop bearing the sign, "C.P.R. Barber Shop—Cut Rates." Our solicitor has sent his reply, which reads as follows:

"Deer Sor: I got yure no'tis, I don't want no law soot with yure big company, or I don't want to paint a new sine on my shop. Times is bad and I have a large wife and fambly to sport. I no yure company owns most everythink—raleroads, steemers, most of the best land and the time, but I don't no as you own the hole alfabet. The letters on my shop don't stand for your raleroad, but for somethink better. I left a mutter in ould Ireland. She is dedd and gonn, but her memries dere to me. Her maiden name was Christina Patricia Reardon, and, what I want to no is what you are going to do about it. I suppose you won't argu that the balaas of my sign what reffers to cut-rates has got ennything to do with yure raleroad. There aint been no cut-rates around these hear parts that I nos of.

(Signed) "Timothy O'Brien."

There is an element of reason in Tim's argument and defence that I find difficult to combat, and if the trial were before a jury I am rather inclined to think we'd get the wrost of it and Timothy would continue to do business at the old stand and under the old name.

I have heard of various methods of perpetuating the memory of departed relatives, but this is the first instance I have known of using a barber's pole as a tombstone.

With the numerous intricate problems that come before your department, perhaps you would favor me with some advice as to what we should follow in dealing with this gentleman from the Emerald Isle.

STUDIED WHILE A PRISONER.

Highest Musical Honor Won Under Unusual Circumstances.

Completion of his studies for the degree of Doctor of Music by Mr. Ernest MacMillan, of Toronto, while interned in the notorious Ruhleben prison camp in Germany has been rewarded by the grant of the high honor by Oxford University. Held captive since the outbreak of the war, this young University of Toronto man has displayed rare pluck and devotion to his art and reports are that he has made remarkable progress as composer and conductor.

Dr. MacMillan, son of Rev. Alexander MacMillan, of Toronto, went to Paris for summer musical studies in 1914 after completing his third year in the course in Modern History. Attending the Wagner Festival at Bayreuth, Bavaria, that July, he remained to aid a friend who had fallen ill. The war intervened and, after a short confinement in Nuremberg Castle, he was sent to Ruhleben, where he remains with the civilian prisoners. In 1915 he was graduated with first-class honors as a Bachelor of Arts by the University of Toronto, the news being forwarded to him.

During the past four years occasional reports have come through of his studies in Russian and of his generous activities in relieving the depression of his comrades. But the word now comes from England that in his squalid confinement he has prepared for, and passed, the regular examination papers which were sent out to him from Oxford. During confinement the doctor has, incidentally, prepared the orchestral parts for musicians who possessed various instruments when interned.

Mr. MacMillan has had an unusual career. At thirteen he was an Associate of the Royal College of Organists and that in 1910 he became a Fellow, heading the list of nineteen successful candidates out of 113, and winning the Cart Lafontaine prize as the candidate most distinguished in the theatrical and practical branches. In 1907 he was medallist in Advanced Harmony in the University of Edinburgh, while but thirteen years of age. His latest honor is the highest academic distinction in music that is given in the British Empire. While at university he was the Convocation Hall organist and choir conductor.

Learning French.

One difficulty that our soldiers in France have in learning to speak French like the natives is that colloquial French has so many humorous or slang synonyms for the perfectly good words that might be used, says the Outlook. A French-English dictionary, with a suggestion of Dr. Johnson's habit of interpolating the lexicographer's personality into his definitions, hits off this idea under the word centre: "Belly, abdomen: in the slang of those who never call things by their proper names, stomach."

The war has seen an astonishing list of these variations from normal words, invented by the lively fancy of the poilu (itself one of these invented substitutes, standing, of course, for the good word soldat).

Another difficulty that the Canadian soldier has in his struggle to pick up French is humorously illustrated by the remark attributed to a Tommy "over there": "These people know how to spell their language, but they don't know how to pronounce it. Here's vin, for example; do you know what they call that? Why, van. And when you've learned how to spell cat in French—they spell it with an h, chat—they pronounce it sha!"

A Real Patriot.

In the vicinity of Winnipeg, a new scheme is being tried. One of the municipalities just on the edge of the city contains a large amount of land, which has never been brought under cultivation. Just before the war part of this municipality was purchased by a land company and resold in lots running from five acres to fifty acres. It is beautiful virgin prairie soil, and adjoins the farm of the Manitoba Agricultural College. The real estate man who had the most to do with the sale of this property conceived the happy idea that it would be easily cultivated by the Agricultural College staff if a lease could be obtained, and he set himself to the task of securing the consent of the 200 odd owners of the property. The area involved is 700 acres. In less than a month's time he had the consent of all the owners, who appointed him their agent to make the lease. The land is leased to the Agricultural College for a term of three years, absolutely free, and the college has to turn into the Red Cross fund of Manitoba every dollar of the net profit derived from the crops of this land.

A Family Reunion.

At Fenwick recently Mrs. Rebecca Smith celebrated her 95th birthday anniversary, surrounded by 160 relatives, including children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and great-great-grandchildren. Of her own family still living there were present Mrs. Swartz, 90; Mrs. Piper, 85, and Mr. Benjamin Lane, 81 years of age.

WOMAN SAVED MUCH SUFFERING

By taking Friend's Advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

West Plains, Mo.—"I was all run down in health, had indigestion and terrible cramps every month so I was unable to do anything. I had tried every doctor in West Plains, also every remedy I could think of, without relief. One day when I was suffering greatly a friend was at my house and said, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?' So I did, and through it, I found relief from my suffering and I really believe it saved my life. It does not seem as though I can say enough in praise of this wonderful medicine for the health it has brought me."—Miss CORA LEE HALL, West Plains, Mo.

Perhaps it may seem an extravagant statement to say that this great remedy saved a life; but women like Mrs. Hall, to whom it has brought health, appreciate the danger and suffering they have escaped too well to doubt it! All who suffer should try it. Why risk life and health without it?

For special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

LIEUT. KELLY REPORTED DEAD

In a recent casualty list the death of Lieut. E. T. S. Kelly of Picton, was reported. Lieut. Kelly was taken a prisoner after being severely wounded, and his death was learned through German sources. The young officer was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Emmet Kelly of Picton and went overseas with the 155th Battalion from this city. Previous to enlistment he was connected with the Union Bank at Picton.

MEMORIAL TO BISHOP MILLS

To found and endow a Lennox Mills bursary, as a memorial to the late Bishop Mills, the Synod of Ontario has received $5,500 in Victory war bonds of 1937, as a gift to the diocese from Mrs. Mills. Interest is to be devoted annually to some student preparing for holy orders.

PROMOTED IN SERVICE

W. H. Parsley, of Montreal, a former well known resident of Brockville, has been recently promoted in the G. T. R. service. He is now an engineer in charge of a locomotive hauling the International Limited. He replaces Engineer F. Conrad, assigned to other duties. A new engine, No. 220, pulled the fast train into her on a trial trip.

FARMER'S NARROW ESCAPE

The house and barns belonging to Hiram Covill, of Union Grove street, near Algonquin, with all their contents, were destroyed by fire. Mr. Covill and two children barely escaped with their lives, Mrs. Covill and other children being away on a visit. The fire is supposed to have been caused by a defective chimney. The loss is partially covered by insurance.

CARRIED NO PAPERS

William George Prumley, a resident of Harlem, near Brockville, went to Ottawa yesterday to spend a holiday, and shortly after his arrival there was nabbed because he failed to carry his military papers. He confessed that he had taken no steps to obey the Military Service Act, and had not registered under the Canada Registration Act. He spent the night at the police station, and was put in uniform this morning.

GUILTY OF BIGAMY

Before His Honor Judge Reynolds at the Court House, Brockville, the case of King vs. Ernest Joseph Jewett, charged with bigamy, came up. The accused pleaded guilty. He was not represented by legal counsel, and requested that sentence be imposed immediately. Judge Reynolds deferred passing sentence until Wednesday next. Jewett is the returned soldier who, although having a wife and child in England, married a Brockville girl last Saturday. Shortly after the marriage the bride discovered that her husband was a bigamist, and she immediately took her own life, leaving a letter to her sister explaining her reasons. The letter led to the arrest of Jewett and his subsequent confession

DR. JACKSON RETURNS

Captain W. Fred Jackson, M. D., of Brockville, and Mrs. Jackson, Miss Athol Jackson and Master Bobby Sears reached New York on Saturday on their return from England and immediately proceeded to Ottawa, where Capt. Jackson has been appointed to a post under the Board of Pension Commissioners in a medical capacity. Capt. and Mrs. Jackson went overseas in March, 1916, the former as an officer in the Canadian Army Medical Corps. He has since been attached to various military medical institutions in the old country, while Mrs. Jackson has been an active worker in the interests of the Canadian Red Cross society and other organizations.

RETURNED SOLDIER MISSING

Pte. William N. Smith, a returned soldier, whose home is in Ottawa, has disappeared under the most extraordinary circumstances. He has been missing since April 15th last, and although a constant search has been made for him by the police, no trace whatever can be found of his whereabouts. He has a wife and four little children in Ottawa. Pte. Smith returned from the front in March last, and on April 9th came to Kingston to get his final discharge, after two years' service. He remained in Kingston till April 15th, when the necessary papers were handed to him, and then he disappeared as if swept off the face of the earth. It is believed that he may have suffered mentally as a result of his service at the front, and wandered away.

A JOINT MEETING.

This afternoon at the Council Chamber a joint meeting of the Board of Health of the city, some members of the City Council and representatives of the Corby Distilling Company was held. The matter under consideration was the dumping into the river of refuse from the Corby plant at Corbyville.

NEW SUPERINTENDENT APPOINTED.

The House of Refuge Committee of the County Council, to whom was given the power to select a superintendent for the House of Refuge to replace Mr. Wilson, who resigned, have selected Mr. John Leigh as superintendent, and he has assumed his duties.

COOLER WEATHER FOLLOWS STORM

The city and vicinity was last night visited by an electric storm which fortunately did not do damage to any extent. In some places in the country standing grain was knocked down, which will necessitate extra work in cutting it. The storm had one effect which all were thankful for, and that was a change in the atmosphere to cooler weather. The thermometers today recorded a drop of several degress over the two preceding days.

SOLDIERS FOR FARM WORK.

Instructions regarding leave to soldiers in the C.E.F., to participate in the harvest, as telegraphed by the Adjutant General to E. Guss Porter, K.C. M.P., and published in yesterday's intelligencer, reached military headquarters from Ottawa. Men in categories lower than "A" have been obtaining permission through their Commanding Officers to assist in farm work, but the latest order is general, and will apply to all. It reads: "Men who were working on farms immediately prior to their enlistment may be granted leave of absence to work on a specified farm, not necessarily the one upon which they were employed. The leave will be without pay. It will be limited to six weeks, subject to immediate cancellation by wire or letter. The regulations are stricter than in former years. During 1916 many obtained leave under regulations which permitted them to draw army pay as well as pay from the farmer.

Called By Death

(Picton Gazette)

ALEXANDER MacD. TERRWILLIGAR

The death of Alexander MacDonnel Terwilligar occurred July 16th at the family home on Water street, St. Augustine, Florida, terminating an illness which extended over three years. The deceased was a Canadian by birth having been born in Picton, seventy-eight years ago. He was for many years a resident of Florida, and has been one of the largest fruit growers and shippers on the east coast of Florida, owning groves at Mims and Titusville.

There survive the bereaved widow and one son, Alexander Clement Terwilligar.

The funeral was held on July 18th at the home on Water street, when many friends gathered to attend the services conducted by Rev. L. Fitz-James Hindry, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church. Interment was made in Evergreen Cemetery. Beautiful floral tributes betokened the love and esteem of friends and relatives and were also an expression of sympathy for the bereaved family.

When a young man Mr. Terwilligar was a photographer and had a studio in Picton and also in Belleville, where he built what is known as the Terwilligar Block. For several years he was also in the boot and shoe business in that city. About forty years ago he went to Florida, and made a great success in orange growing and shipping. At Mims in the southern part of Florida, where he owned several large groves, he built a packing house with a capacity of packing several carloads of oranges a day. He was also interested in other industries, one being one of the largest fertilizer plants in Florida. Great quantities of this fertilizer are used in orange groves. He enjoyed making visits to Picton and Belleville where he met many old friends and acquaintances. The last visit he was able to make to Picton was two years ago, when he and his son Clement spent several summer months with his nephew Albert Powers, Mrs. Terwilligar not being able to accompany them on account of her mother who lived with her being too feeble to undertake the long journey from their home in St. Augustine.

Mr. Terwilligar's many friends, relatives and acquaintances throughout the county of Prince Edward and the City of Belleville, are sorry to learn of his death and extend their sympathy to Mrs. Terwilligar, who was a Picton girl, her maiden name being Miss Brock, granddaughter of the late Philip Clark of Bloomfield.

Deceased was a cousin of Mr. T. R. Terwilligar, of Belleville.

JAMES W. A. HOSIE

After, an illness of some months' duration Mr. James William A. Hosie passed away at an early hour this morning at the residence of his mother, 190 Foster Avenue, city. Deceased was in his 50th year, having been born at London Ont., in 1868 and was a son of the late Mr. John Hosie. Deceased was a locomotive engineer, and his home was at the Bush Terminal Brooklyn, N.Y., where his wife and four children reside. About a year ago Mr. Hosie came to Belleville owing to failing health, and despite every medical attention death resulted. Deceased was a member of the Presbyterian Church. He was also a member of Day Star Lodge A. F. & A. M., of Bush Terminal, Brooklyn, and a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. In addition to the wife and children, his mother, three brothers, who have the sympathy vive. Deceased was universally esteemed by a large number of relatives and friends, who regret his demise. Funeral notice later.

MRS. A. STREBE

Death came suddenly on Monday morning to Mrs. Amel Strebe, of Eldorado. Deceased was on her way to the berry patch when she became seriously ill and had to be taken into Mr. D. Wannamaker's, where she died soon after. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, a little son about 2 years old, her parents, one sister and thre brothers, who have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

JAMES EAKINS

The many friends of James Eakins of Port Hope will regret to know that he has passed away. During the 80's and 90's in the railway, steamship and live stock world he was a well-known and popular figure and among his business associates in Ontario, Montreal Liverpool, and Glasgow he enjoyed the confidence and esteem of a wide circle of friends. Although he carried on his extensive export trade single-handed he was a dominating force in the Canadian live stock trade. He always maintained that he owed his success to the unfailing devotion and help of his friends.

Mr. Eakins was born in 1841 and was a descendent of the well-known Ulster family. He is survived by his five children: H. . Eakins Imperial Munitions: Major J. M. Eakins, first Canadian contingent, Montreal; Sergt. R. C. Eakins, Canadia Field Artillery B.E.F., Mrs. Erskine Oxley and Miss Marjory Eakins.

Used Sacred Vessels As Beer Mugs

PARIS Aug. 9.—Father John J. O'Leary of Scranton, Pa., chaplain of a regiment engaged on the Marne and Vesle fronts has brought to Paris a silver ciborium and a gold chalice such as are found in every Roman Catholic church in France the former containing cigarette ashes and the latter some dregs of ill-smelling beer. These were placed on the desk of Monsignor Connolly head of the Roman Catholic chaplains with the Knights of Columbus, and photographed as evidence of the outrages committed against French churches by the German invaders.

Father O'Leary said that Sergt. Hawkins, of Alabama, when he led a platoon into a captured dugout, found altars, vestments, statues, candlabras paintings, a chalice and a ciborium, the latter having been used as a beer can. All about unmistakable signs of the most cruel disecration. Many churches will show this exhibit as evidence of German depravity.

RED CROSS PENNY BAGS.

Collection for July.

No doubt most of our soldiers at the front, especially those who have been there for the entire four years, are heartily tired of the war and would gladly be out of it all, but for the fact that each one is so anxious to "do his bit" in achieveing the victory which has not yet been won that he is willing to sacrifice comfort, home, even life, rather than fall short in doing his duty.

Shall we who are enjoying these joys as a result of the sacrifice they are making, grow weary in well doing and fall short in what we have undertaken to do—in the little things it lies in our power to do in making life more bearable for those who are wounded or fighting somewhere in France? The Red Cross penny bag collection for July, 1918, was a fine one, but it falls more than two dollars short of that for July, 1917, and nine dollars short of the amount collected in June, 1918. Murney Ward shows a very substantial increase. Samson Ward has again gained first place.

A DESERT WOOING

Enid Bennett appeared at Griffin's last night in a new picture called "A Desert Wooing," and it is a desert wooing without a doubt. Miss Bennett has the part of a supposed wealthy young girl of New York, who had every whim and desire satisfied, but suddenly is faced with the reality that her father is dead and that he died by no means wealthy. A young doctor is trailing after the young woman, when a wealthy westerner comes into her life. At first her thought of this young man of the plains is but an infatuation with the thought of eventually marrying him, securing a divorce, and a big grant of alimony; but time wills otherwise. The story is composed of many thrillnig turns and in the end this young untrained young woman suddenly finds out that after all her rugged hubby, who she chooses to call a Barbarian because he compelled her to cook, is confronted with the fact that the ideal of her heart has come to her, and very nearly through her ignorance became lost to her again. The story is logical and the work of both Miss Bennett and Jack Holt is very well done.

THE MODERN LORELEI

Another good picture is called "The Modern Lorelei," which is somewhat of a fairy story and some very pretty scenes are shown that have been taken at a seaside. Some beautiful scenery of the sea is shown, such as rocky passe and hills, which slope far out into the water, and also the story is very cleverly written. A good comedy brings to a close a variety program of pictures.

AT THE PALACE

At the Palace Mae Marsh is appearing in an excellent story called "All Woman," which is a story of the ability of a young girl to clean up a bad town through her perseverence and fighting qualities. Old Demon Rum comes in for a large amount of scathing comment and as old John Barleycorn seems to have been handed an upper cut all over the country this story can be said to be very timely. Other good photplays make up this quality program of pictures.

Literary Notes

AUGUST ROD AND GUN

"The Skunk and Dolphus" by Jane Dilworth, a story of the visit of that particularly obnoxious little animal with the white stripe down its back to the cabin of a French Canadian; "A Wet Breakfast on a Dry Stump" by Marlow A. Shaw, showing the psychological effect of continuous rain on the mind of an ordinary cheerful camper-out; "When Grandpa Jumped over the Traces," the story of a trek to the northern gold fields; "Five Shots at a Chuck" by F. V. Williams; are among the list of contents in the August issue of Rod and Gun. Such departments as Rod and Gun Mechanics, Fishing Notes and Guns and Ammunition are well maintained while a specially illustrated account of the tournament of the Canadian Indians at Niagara on the Lake on July 1st and 2nd is contained in this issue. Prominent trap-shooters in Indian costume are shown in connection with this account. Rod and Gun is published by W. J. Taylor Ltd. Woodstock, Ont.

DEFEAT FOR ONTARIOS.

On Wednesday the members of the Ontario baseball team of this city wended their way to Deloro for the purpose of taking the measure of the latter team. Our boys felt confident that they would defeat the bushmen, as they termed their opponents, but it was a case of counting chickens before they were hatched. When the runs had been tallied up at the end of the Ontarios' ninth innings only two could be found for them, while the Deloro team had scored five in their eight innings. It was a decided win for the gold workers, who naturally were elated over their victory. At the conclusion of the game the visiting team was handsomely entertained. The return match will be played in this city on Wednesday, the 21st inst., and the Ontarios will in the meantime practice hard in an atempt to regain their lost laurels. The line-up of the teams was as follows::

Ontarios—Colling, Weir, Casey, McWilliams, Mills, Hagerman, Canning, Morden, c.; Cornell, p.

Deloro—Lapierre, Wright, Elliott, Gravel, Guneau, Lorrien, p.; Lolimiere c.; Lossee, Brosseau.

Score by innings:

Deloro	0	0	0	3	2	0	0	0	x	—5

WHEN PEACE RETURNS

FIGHTING MEN DISCUSS THEIR PROBLEMS FRANKLY.

All Agree That a "Military Caste" Must Not Continue to Exist In Canada, But Many of Them Wonder How They Will Get Back Into Civil Life Once More.

EVEN in midst of the war much thought is being given by men of all ranks in the Canadian army in France to the return of the army to civil life. All realize the greatness of the problem and believe that even with the end of war not in sight it is still possible to develop plans for the accomplishment of this object. A proper conception of the task can only be realized by a visit to the army in France. It is only there that a knowledge of the various problems is possible and from among those in the army concerned in this matter can be gleaned the true situation. Men of all ranks are frank in discussing the problem. They realize that Canada cannot perpetuate a standing army or create a military caste, but must return to productive work the men who have fought so valiantly in France.

"Here we have in France" said a veteran colonel, "thousands of young men who have in the service of their country lost in a measure the initiative of their former civil life. They have no thought of the morrow, their clothes and food are provided, their pay is regular and assured and there is no necessity of saving or providing for a rainy day or loss of occupation. Their business is to fight and the country's business to provide for them. Many of these will immediately conform to civil conditions, but thousands must be educated in the demobilization to depend entirely on their own resources and initiative.

Another prominent officer, a brigade commander referred to another class. "We have in the army," he explained "many men of over forty who have sacrificed everything. They return home after years of service, without means, without a business and to find that in their absence competitors have captured the field. These men, many aged beyond their years through stress of conflict, will not find it an easy task to regain their former positions in civil life without capital and with their energy sapped."

There is still another class that will have difficulty in finding a place in civil life. Thousands of young Canadians enlisted from high school, college and university. They had never worked. Three and four years of their life when otherwise they would have been making their place has been spent in the army. They must find a place in civil life and theirs is a difficult task.

"What am I going to do when the war is over?" asked a young officer. He left Canada when eighteen, has been wounded three times, wears the Military Cross and bar and carries in his body several pieces of shrapnel.

"You will probably remain in the army," was suggested.

"Oh, no," he replied, "no army life in peace time for me. But what am I going to do? I never worked, have no profession and little money."

And his problem is that of hundreds of others who have given of their best years to the service of their country. Many are anxious of the future. They desire work, but fear that they may find themselves handicapped in the race by lack of training and loss of opportunity.

Much has been done in training for civilian life by the educational and vocational courses of the Vimy Ridge University. Those interested in this work believe that their great opportunity will be the demobilization period. Even under the most favorable circumstances our army could not be returned to Canada in less than eighteen months. The ruined cities of France must be rebuilt, its farms again brought under cultivation, mines reopened, forests replanted and industries revived. Men engaged in this work while in the army would be educating themselves for civil life. While in this work those whose studies were interrupted could complete their training under skilled teachers serving in the army. Men could learn trades or improve their knowledge of trades followed before the war. That is the period of opportunity in Europe.

Leaders of thought in the army favor the return of men from Europe to immediate occupation in Canada. They fear the effect on the men of a long period of idleness at home as much as the effect of army life in foreign countries. They are anxious that other fields of labor than agriculture be provided. Farming will appeal to but a small percentage of the army. Years in the turmoil of war, its excitement and association, is not the best of training for the quiet life of the prairie farm. Industrial expansion in Canada must come if the army is to be provided with occupation.

There will be the sincere co-operation by army leaders with civil authorities to solve this problem. Probably the army leaders see more clearly the difficulties of the situation. It is the men in France who have a complete knowledge of the aspirations and desires of the Canadian army. There will be no unwarrantable demands, no factious opposition. In the army has come through stress of conflict with its sacrifice and victory a wonderful national spirit. The men in France will not place personal desire before national welfare, but they believe the satisfactory return to civil life of three hundred thousand men in Europe will give a great impetus to national unity and national prosperity.

British Decoy Ship Traps Submarine

Sir Eric Geddes Tells Thrilling Story of Sea Fight

LONDON, Aug. 10—A thrilling story of a fight between a British decoy ship and a German submarine was told by Sir Eric Geddes, first lord of the admiralty, at a weekly concert held for the American troops at the Palace Theatre Monday night. He explained that the Germans now know about the ruse and it is needless to withhold the story longer.

"The decoy, known as "950," had the appearance of a dingy old collier, with an undisciplined-looking crew which was suitably attired, he said. This ship sailed into the Atlantic with the necessary orders and finally sighted a German submarine. The decoy turned and ran away, but the submarine overhauled her and opened fire. Some of the German shells fell on the decoy's deck and members of the crew were wounded and killed. The flight of the decoy continued and she signaled for help. An hour and a half later the submarine drew nearer.

In the meantime the decoy's decks had been set on fire and the captain knew that her magazine would soon explode. In fact the explosion came in a short time and sent one of her guns hurtling through the air.

The submarine had now swung around in front of the decoy. The captain of the latter signaled to a man-of-war which had been keeping below the horizon and then unmasked the forward gun of the decoy and heavily shelled the submarine. One projectile tore away the enemy's conning tower and another hit her in the hull. She sank after the fight had lasted for five hours.

The warship, which had been keeping out of sight, hurried up and rescued the crew of the decoy.

"There is no longer any need of secrecy," concluded Sir Eric. "Admiral Sims and I have more ways than one of trapping submarines."

Grape-Growers Want Assurances

Deputation to Wait on Sir William Hearst About Native Wines

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—Representatives of the grape growers and wine manufacturers of the Niagara district will wait upon Sir William Hearst to ask for an understanding of the Government's attitude toward the continued sale of native wines in the Province. Under the Federal "dry" regulation the manufacture of wines was allowed to continue only until December 31 of this year, but no restriction was placed upon selling, the Federal authorities leaving the control of sales to the Provincial Government The Ontario Temperance Act permits the sale of native wine in wholesale quantities purchased at the place of manufacture, but there is a general impression that next session the Government will place restrictions upon further sale.

The uncertainty as to future action if it continues will react upon the grape growers, since the manufacturers will hesitate to buy freely, fearing that they will not be able to dispose of their stocks. It is likely that the Government will be asked for an assurance that a reasonable time will be allowed for the sale of wines manufactured before December 31.

Dutch to Make Mediation Offer

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Rumors are current in Dutch political circles that Deputy Nolens, who has been charged with the formation of a new Government, intends to prepare the way for peace by suggesting to the new Cabinet that it make an offer for mediation to both belligerents, according to Amsterdam despatches to the Central News.

In this connection, the intended inclusion in the Cabinet of the Dutch Minister to the Vatican is considered significant. The Nieuwe Courant of The Hague warns the Government against any such attempt, saying that it might bring Holland into difficulties with the group which does not desire mediation.

Fighting still continues. Last night south-east of Amiens south of the Somme French forces during the day made an advance of four miles and British from two to three miles.

ARMY OF VON HUTIER IN FULL RETREAT BRITISH DRIVE SWEEPS ALL BEFORE IT

Canadians Take Glorious Part in New Drive

24,000 PRISONERS REPORTED EARLY THIS MORNING AND STILL COMING IN — VON HUTIER'S ARMY IN FULL RETREAT HACKED AND HARRASSED BY CANADIANS, AUSTRALIANS AND BRITISH — ESSENTIALLY A BRITISH DRIVE WITH FRENCH TROOPS IN SUPPORT — INDICATIONS THAT ENEMY WILL EVACUATE MONTDIDIER SALIENT—ENEMY SMASHED BACK EVERYWHERE WITH TERRIFIC LOSSES IN KILLED, WOUNDED AND PRISONERS — CANNON AND MUNITIONS IN GREAT NUMBERS AND QUANTITY CAPTURED.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, August 10.—Paris morning newspapers say that many more than 20,000 prisoners have been captured by the Allies in the new drive up to the latest reports received last night from the battle area. The bag of prisoners had increased early this morning to 24,000.

VON HUTIER'S ARMY IN RETREAT.

PARIS, August 10.—(Saturday Official)—The German army of General Von Hutier is retreating from Montdidier on the Noyon line. The towns of Assan-Villers and Rubescourt were captured and the French reached Faverolles, less than two miles from Montdidier. Northwest of Montdidier the French have advanced east of Arvillers, six miles northeast of Roye, and have captured Davenscourt, two miles east of Pierrepont. The French began movements southeast of Montdidier last night and virtually have that place surrounded.

The German line from Montdidier to Noyon is between 25 and 30 miles in length and forms a semicircle swinging southeast from Montdidier to the south of Noyon. The retirement on this line probably means that the Germans are going to give up the Montdidier salient which would be the first marked consequence of the Franco-British offensive in Picardy. In retreating from this line the Germans are forced to use the roads and railway going through Roye, which is six miles southeast of Arvillers, east of which the French continued to advance last night.

It is not improbable that the French reached a point south of Montdidier Friday night in a northeast direction, and reaching Faverolles, two miles east of Montdidier, compelled a retreat here. Montdidier apparently is in a pocket, but the French official statement does not say anything concerning the fate of that town. If the Germans have not evacuated Montdidier the French advance would seem to place the Hun soldiers there in a most dangerous position, as their retreat is cut off virtually on all sides. There is a small loophole to the north, but this is being closed rapidly by the French advance to Davenscourt.

The Canadian's Part

With the Canadian Forces in France Aug. 10.—(By J. F. B. Livesay, Canadian Press Correspondent in France.)—Although the full fruits of the great victory on the Somme are not yet garnered, enough is known at this time to place it among the imperishable deeds of arms of this war.

The Canadian force held an honorable position in the allied armies which attacked the enemy lines on a twenty-mile front. The Canadians went over the top at twenty minutes past four on August 8 and sixteen minutes thereafter the first prisoners began to come in. By eight o'clock a large part of the initial objective had been captured.

The victory has been notable for a number of things. For the first time Canadian cavalry found itself on the same battle field with infantry. For the first time too, the Canadian forces employed tanks in large numbers both of heavy and the whippet varieties. Also it was the first time the Canadians have fought side by side with their brethren from Australia.

Wonderful Staff Work

The victory, however, is notable chiefly for wonderful staff work that alone made it possible. There was no artillery preparation in the usual sense of the word. The men went in immediately behind the barrage and kept up with it as it lifted. The Boche was taken completely by surprise and prisoners were astounded to find they were surrendering to Canadians.

Joy of Canadians

The Canadian soldiers never went into action with more irrepressible eagerness and determination not to be refused than they did Thursday. Behind the rampart of valor they had builded at Vimy and Arras they have lain all this spring and summer chafing that they were denied their opportunity of taking part.

RETREAT SPEEDED

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The retrograde movement of the Germans is being accelerated by the favorable progress of the new attack south of Montdidier.

MORE PRISONERS

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The Picardy battle is spreading to the south of Arras, the Pall all Gazette says this afternoon. Heavy fighting occurred this morning in this battle area with the allies making satisfactory progress and taking large numbers of prisoners One hundred additional German guns have been taken by the Allies.

MONTDIDIER CAPTURED

LONDON, Aug. 10—(official) The important town of Montdidier which was approximately at the apex of the German salient south of the Somme has been captured by the Allies.

Canadian and Australian forces have taken, Bouchoir, Maharicourt, Lisons, Rainecourt and Proyart.

French have taken Le Tronquoy, Le Fretoy and Assainvillers.

British and Americans took Morlancourt.

The number of prisoners has been captured to 24,000.

New French Attack

LONDON, Aug. 10—(Noon)—A new attack by the French has extended the battle line some sixteen miles further to the southeast in Montdidier area. In this movement the French scored an advance of four miles in six hours To the north the important junction of Chaulnes is now quite untenable for Germans, as it is well within the fire of British field guns.

Chief Lusitania Murderer Dead

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Germany has now officially admitted that Lieut.-Commander Schweiger, who commanded the submarine which sunk Lusitania was himself lost with the German submarine U-88 which was destroyed by British mines last September.

Mrs. Crothers wife of the Minister of Labor, brought about the settlement of a strike of chambermaids and waitresses in Vancouver.

Casualties Are Not Unduly Heavy So Far

LONDON Aug. 10—Canadian Headquarters in London had for some days realized that the corps in the field was imminently likely to be heavily engaged. So far the English newspaper correspondents make no special reference to the part of the Canadians but reliable information goes to show that the casualties already tabulated are not unduly heavy considering the completely effective style with which the forces attained their primary objectives.

The manner in which the hitherto quiescent portion of the line blazed into sudden battle was undoubtedly the biggest surprise to the Boche who seems to be largely in ignorance of the composition of the forces before him and seemingly totally unaware that the Canadians were to participate in this area.

The engagement when fuller particulars come, is likely to be found totally different in the larger details from Vimy, but the results are confidently expected to be even more valuable. The secret concentration of Canadian and other troops in an entirely new portion of the line is considered here the most gratifying feature. Critics are agreed that of the present push can be sustained for a prolonged period, very considerable possibilities open up, but it is too early to say yet if such is possible.

Field Marshal Foch, entirely satisfied with progress made, says Germans suffered enormous losses.

End of the Tunnel Is Nearer Declares Lloyd George

Every Right to Feel Confident— Will Be No Vengeance When Final Triumph is Accomplished

LONDON, Aug. 10.—"We have a right to feel confident in the good news; the end of the tunnel is nearer, "Premier Lloyd George declared yesterday in a speech at Neath. "We are fighting for the right. God, in His righteousness, will see us through. When victory comes there will be no greed, no tearing up, no vengeance.

"I have no apology for the part I have taken in this conflict. I propose to fight through to the end. I don't think I've been too optimistic."

Pagan God Of Kultur Fast Crumbling

Glorious Sun of Assured Victory Illuminates The Allied World

The magnificent success of the British drive which accounted for more than twenty thousand prisoners and over two hundred cannon up to noon yesterday sent a thrill of joy through Canada, nowhere more noticeable or pronounced than in Belleville. Coming so closely after the great victory of the Marne salient the success of the present drive in the Amiens sector strengthened the faith of close observers that the Allies have taken the ascendancy and have the upper hand, while the enemy is trying desperately to "carry on" with tires punctured and carburetor cracked on his military machine—and Foch shows no signs of letting Fritz stop to make repairs.

The ringing of the bell of Bridge street Methodist church again yesterday afternoon in joyful acclaim of the additional victory was appreciated by many who had not been down town and consequently were unaware that history, deep and significant, was being made on the fields of Flanders and France and another severe defeat handed to the braggart Huns.

A pleasing feature of the news was the outlines given of glorious deeds by our own Canadian boys who have already done so much to make democracy safe for the world, and in this great British drive have already covered themselves with glory—Canadian cavalry cutting off a large force of the enemy and taking them prisoners.

The air forces of the Allies, which include many Canadian soldiers of the sky, are also doing magnificent work, swooping down like gigantic eagles over the hastily retreating Hun hordes and harvesting a hideous crop of enemy dead with machine guns and bombs.

Well may we rejoice at the glorious victories of the Allies which in a short time have changed the whole aspect of the war from one of dread to one of eager anticipation—has changed doubt to faith and certainty in the ultimate decisive triumph of liberty and justice and the overthrow and destruction of the Pagan Idol of Kultur which the Kaiser sought to compel all people to fall down and worship.

The darkness is disappearing and the beautiful dawn will soon glorify with peace and victory and a new and better world the sacrifices of four years of war which have taken the best and bravest as the price of world freedom.

Just across the Silent River in the Glory Summer Land the Great Army of Heroes are resting, waiting for the dawn of peace which they paid for with their blood and suffering—waiting to rejoice with their pals and loved ones "over there' and "over here"—the proud pale heroes who have saved the world from a fate more horrible than any death could be.

VICTORY CELEBRATION MONDAY EVENING

In view of the great allied victories which have changed the whole aspect of the war and thrilled the allied world with the assurance of ultimate victory and early peace Mayor Platt is arranging for a civic celebration Monday evening in which all citizens can express their joy as loudly as they wish. The band will furnish patriotic music and an appropriate program will be arranged.

Turn out and bury forever all traces of pessimism in a glorious new faith in the unconquerable spirit of British heroes and the unfailing justice of the Great God of Battles.

VON HUTIER'S RETREAT CUT OFF

PARIS, August 10.—(Noon)—Von Hutier's retreat from Montdidier was cut off when the French captured Faverolles. The German position along the Montdidier-Roye road is precarious. The retreat of Von Hutier's army is showing traces of the utmost haste. Much war material is being left behind. The German rearguards are fighting desperately.

Late Telegraph Briefs

Canadians have occupied the outer defences of Amiens.

The safe arrival in the United Kingdom of a large number of troops is announced.

Major Ernest H. Young, C.A.M.C., has been appointed to command the Military Hospital at Cobourg.

Thirteen thousand nine hundred and forty-one recruits for the Canadian Expeditionary Force were secured during July in Canada, the United States and England.

Sir Robert Borden received information from the front that Canadians captured all the objectives on schedule time. The Canadian losses were light.

Vienna Sees the Last Ray of Victory Gone

ZURICH, Aug. 10—The German hope of ending the war by a military decision before the arrival of the Americans was blasted by the recent allied offensive, the Socialist newspaper Arbeiter Zeitung of Vienna points out in concluding a recent article on the military situation.

"All the explanations and comments cannot alter the patent fact that in this double offensive the gain of ground and consequently the only visible sign of success is on the allied side," the newspaper says.

"While it is admitted that this victory does not yet possess any decisive character, there is one result which cannot be called in question—the strong moral effect produced by three German offensives against Amiens and Paris has been completely destroyed The allies to-day have a chief whose name inspires confidence and whose ability is in no way inferior to that of Ludendorff or Von Hindenburg. Furthermore the only hope of the Germans to end the war in a military way before the Americans were in line has disappeared as the result of this last French offensive."

Will Seize 50,000 Ulsterite Rifles

If Without Trouble, So Much the Better Says Mr. Shortt

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Edward Shortt Chief Secretary for Ireland announced in the House of Commons the Government's determination to seize 50,000 rifles which are said to be in the hands of the Ulsterites. Mr. Shortt added significantly that if the Government could get them without trouble so much the better. This statement was loudly cheered by the Nationalist members.

ITALIANS REPEL FOE

ROME, Aug. 10.—Enemy attacks on the Asiago plateau, directed against the Col del Roso salient, were repulsed by Italian fire, the War Office reported yesterday.

On the Asiago plateau early yesterday enemy detachments twice attacked the Col del Roso salient, the statement said. "Both attacks were crushed under our fire.

"On various portions of the front we inflicted heavy losses with accurate fire on enemy concentrations. Artillery fire and patrol action were reported.

"Our airships bombed military establishments. Two hostile machines were downed in the fighting."

A FIGHTING PARSON.

New York Sun

The spirit of that noble battle cry, "Give 'em Watts!" still inspires some preachers of the Gospel. Chaplain Bringham, earnestly edging far into the Soissons battle front to minister the service of his office, overran his objective as if he were a doughboy, was captured, roughly manhandled, turned on his captors, killed one, and with apostolic zeal brought in the other a prisoner. A fighting parson, in truth, whose text, we venture to guess, he finds these days in the Gospel according to Matthew x:34—"Think not that I come to send peace, but a sword."

Cholera Infantum

Cholera Infantum is one of the fatal ailments of childhood. It is a trouble that comes on suddenly, especially during the summer months and unless prompt action is taken the little one may soon be beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets are an ideal medicine in warding off this trouble. They regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus prevent all the dreaded summer complaints. Concerning them Mrs. Fred Rose, South Bay, Ont., says—"I feel Baby's Own Tablets saved the life of our baby when she had cholera infantum and I would not be without them." The Tablets are sold by Medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EMPTY SLANDER

Toronto News

Two delegates from the United Farmers and the Farmer's Clubs of Lambton County were appointed to investigate the rumors of tyranny, bad sanitation, bad food, and under-feeding, at the military camp of Carling's Heights, London. They were given every facility. The inquiry was thorough. They now declare, over their signatures, that the rumors were all unfounded. They believe that German sympathizers or persons maliciously inclined were to blame for starting them.

Canada has suffered too much from German propaganda in this form. It has been made possible by the willingness of unthinking persons to spread whatever story may be told, particularly if it be told in whispers and in confidence. Hundreds of fantastic tales which have become the common belief of whole communities have been investigated and found to be without foundation. There are hundreds more which still travel unchecked, and which encourage the rise of unreasoning criticism against the government and against the military authorities. Some people believe all they hear and tell a little more.

How Motor Car Prices Jumped Past 6 Months

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—Since last February, when Ford reversed its traditional policies of lowering prices to increase output, it has been patent that the era of low prices in the automobile industry has passed for a time—at least, until peace returns. But the scope and number of price increases that have been quietly put into effect by practically all of the big companies this year, especially during the last sixty days, are far greater than generally appreciated save by the actual buyers.

The advances have been notable. Chevrolet, launched at $490 to reach the field just above the Ford, is now $245 away from its original price base—all but $60 of which has been tacked on since January 1917. Dodge, unconsciously regarded as a fixture in the $750-$800, has moved up practically into the $1,000 class. Maxwell too, has been jolted out of the low $700 class into the $800 field. Studebaker has gone from $940 to $1,125. The popular Overland 90 since January 1917, has gone in five gradual steps from $665 to $895.

PACKARDS ADVANCE $1,500

In the high-priced machines the increases stand out even more prominently. The sum total for instance of Packard's five advances since the first of teh last year is almost $1,500 with a "twin six" now costing $4,300, as compared with $2,865 twenty months ago. Cadillac which occupied the $2-500 field so completely has been forced up on three different occasions stopping at $3,200. Pierce-Arrow stationary all year, notwithstanding a greatly restricted output has yielded to the inevitable with a $1100 increase from $5,400 to $6,500.

Other significant indications of the fundamental price trend lie in the four advances by the conservative Franklin management in their "air-cooled" product from $1,850 last April to $2,450 this June; in the Chandler $100 increase, in Hudson's $350 and in various other increases by representative concerns.

The new prices, of course, are ex-freight and war tax." If included these would make price comparisons between 1918 and 1917 more striking.

Allied Food Control Will Cut Competition

Co-operation Will Steady Prices and Abolish All Serious Rivalry

LONDON, Aug. 10.—John R. Clynes, in his first speech as Food Controller in the House of Commons Thursday, dealt mainly with the potato crop. He said the Government would take over the 1918-1919 crop from November and anticipated its ability to stimulate the consumption of potatoes to a greater extent than last year. The American troops in Great Britain and France also had to receive large quantities of potatoes grown in England.

The Food Controller emphasized the need of continued economy in food.

The policy of the allied Food Controllers, he declared, was to effect compdete co-operation. Arrangements had not been completed but when complete co-operation. Arrangements be found that all competition had been abolished as fell as all jealousy and serious rivalry between the allies. This would also have a tendency to steady prices and increase production.

Willard to Box for the Salvation Army

CHICAGO Aug. 10.—Jess Willard, champion heavyweight pugilist will box here to-day for the benefit of the overseas war fund of the Salvation Army. This announcement was made based on a telegram from Willard at Lawrence, Kansas reading: "Have altered business arrangements and will be with you August 16."

The man to be pitted against the champion has not been selected according to the arrangement committee of the athletic carnival, which will be held at the White Sox baseball park.

Exempted May Be Called to Serve

Government Action Is Likely Against Those Employed in "Essential Occupation"

VANCOUVER, Aug. 10.—The Government of Canada intends in future to institute proceedings under the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act in cases where the Act is violated, according to Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labor for Canada, who is in the city for a few days. The Minister also inferred that the Government was considering taking action against men who have been exempted from military service because of their employment in essential occupations

Bones of Saint Were Rescued

Were In Golden Casket in French Basilica in Rhiems Cathedral

With the French Armies, Aug. 10.—The golden casket containing the bones of St. Remi, who baptized King Clovis and who gave Rheims its name, was saved from a fire which burned St. Remi basilica. The Germans, wishing fittingly to close their four years of ignoble war-making, deliberately sent incendiary shells into the age old church, which the inhabitants of Rheims venerated even more than the cathedral.

By a seeming miracle, three officers and three poilus were near the church when it burst into flames. They dashed quickly through the fire and smoke, risking burial under crumbling masonry, sought the St. Remi tomb, and opened it. The casket was there, but almost too heavy to carry. Exerting all their strength, the six devoted men managed to shoulder the precious burden, and slowly gained the outside. They were enroute to Chalons, so they deposited the casket in their automobile, and transported it to Chalons with them. They delivered it to the bishop there. All along the road soldiers looked surprisingly at the golden casket hastening by in the automobile. Thus France's dearest relic, all that remains of the man who instituted Christianity among the Gauls, fled from the Germans to a place of safety where it awaits the day when it may be restored to Rheims. The venedable church is but a stone heap to-day added to the great and growing collection of monuments that will shame future German generations.

The St. Remi basilica was built in the thirteenth century.

A Serious Matter

There is a delicacy about mentioning piles. And yet so many suffer needlessly who could be readily relieved and cured if they only knew about Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Men tell one another about this remarkably successful treatment. But many women pine away their health and vitality, dreading a surgical operation and not knowing how easily they can be cured at home by Dr. Chase's Ointment.

How New Draft Treaty Operates

Official Statement Issued by the Justice Department

OTTAWA, Aug. 10.—A detailed explanation of the manner in which the compulsory military service convention just ratified will operate and regulations to govern applications of Canadian in the United Sates for exemption have been prepared by the military service branch of the Department of Justice.

Canadians in the United States who contemplate joining the army of their native land within the periods stipulated in the treaty may obtain information and enlist at any of the offices of the British and Canadian recruiting missions in New York, Buffalo, Boston, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Portland, Me; Baltimore, Chicago Detroit Duluth Minneapolis, Kansas City, Spokane, Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Canadians seeking exemption which will enable them to continue residing in the United States, have two courses of action open to them. Those, who if find unentitled to exemption, are prepared to serve in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, may apply for "Diplomatic" exemption which the British Ambassador is empowered to grant. They are required to submit their claims in writing established by affidavits to the Director of Military Service Branch, Department of Justice Museum Building Ottawa. They must set forth details of their birth places, ages, occupation, state whether they are married or unmarried and whether registered under the United States draft law. They may claim exemption upon grounds similar to those set forth in the Military Service Act, and they must give an undertaking that if refused exemption they will serve in the Canadian Expeditionary Force. An organization for receiving and dealing with these applicants has been provided at the Museum Building here.

Canadians who do not wish to join the military forces of their own country and who desire to claim exemption in the United States may do so after the expiration of the periods fixed by the convention by application to the United States boards.

FOR AMERICANS IN CANADA

Americans residing in Canada, who wish to become subject to the draft law of their own country are advised to apply to the American consul nearest them for information as to the course they should adopt. Americans who wish to become members of the Canadian forces will make no more during the sixty-day period. They will then come automatically under the provisions of the Canadian Military Service Act, and may make application for exemption to the ordinary tribunals. It is announced however that provision will be made for a general registration throughout Canada, of such men.

Letters from Overseas

IN DEFENCE OF THE Y.M.C.A.

France, June 11, 1918.

Dear Maida,—Your welcome letter of May 14th received today. I wrote you yesterday but as you asked about the Y.M.C.A. work here I will try to give you some idea of what they do.

The Y.M.C.A. today is not only doing all it says, but if anything a little bit more. It supplies us with sporting goods, organized concerts, parties, provides moving picture theatres, reading and writing rooms with free note paper and envelopes. In the trenches and billets behind the lines it also furnishes free tea and lemonade. The Y.M.C.A. canteens are without exception the best canteens on the western front. The greater portion of their stock consists of Canadian goods such as chocolattes, biscuits, cigarettes, tobacco, canned goods and magazines, all sold practically at Canadian pre-war prices. Cigarettes and tobacco are cheaper than in Canada because all cigarettes sold to soldiers are duty free. Some English magazines and papers are circulated through their canteens free of charge. The majority of their canteens carry a small library known as a "franc library". A franc, roughly speaking, is 18c., and is charged for the first book borrowed by any soldier. He can exchange this book for another free of charge or if he returns it and does not draw another he receives a franc for it

The tea stalls, as they call them, are open day and night and sell biscuits, chocolates, cigarettes, etc., and are often as close to the front line as supports, which are anywhere from five hundred to a thousand yards behind the front line. At times the canteens run out of supplies, but that is usually caused by difficulty in getting transportation.

I must admit that in the fall of 1916 and the early winter of 1917 the canteens were not what they are now, but this was the case with all canteens simply because they had not had the time or opportunity to develop.

I know very little about the Great War Veterans Association; but from what I have heard of it, it is simply an association I would not care to join. Every soldier is to a certain extent a grouser. To grouse is a soldier's privilege. Some are worse than others—but we all grouse at times. When the war is over and everyone is discharged most of us will forget all about grousing; but there will be some who will grouse till their last breath is drawn. That is the class of men who will join and take an active part in the G.W.V.A., so that no man who takes a real interest in his surroundings will be bothered with it. A man with interests of his own has no time to grouse.

A large number of the discharged men in Canada are those who have never been in the trenches or have been there only for a short time. They have done their bit as well as the rest of us, but have not had the opportunity of seeing the difficulties under which the canteens and other institutions of the same class have to work and so are in no position to judge them.

Those men in Fort William who tried to reduce the amount of the subscriptions to the Y.M.C.A. during the collection May 7, 8, 9, by making statements, the truth of which is at least very doubtful, would be wise to think twice before they attempt the same thing again. To damage an association so popular as the Y.M.C.A. is in France might prove embarrassing after the war. Men like that always call to my mind that contemptible little animal known as the skunk.

You can publish this letter if you like as the Y.M.C.A. deserves more praise than it gets. There are thousands of Canadian soldiers here, will agree with what I have said.

With love,
R. R. GRAHAM.

Fighting for Happiness

When you get into a frame of mind that makes life seem one tiresome duty after another, with no pleasure in it; when ill-health seems to take all the joy out of life and you worry over things that are really not worth worrying about, then your nervous system is becoming exhausted, and you are on the way to a general breakdown in health. In this condition your health and happiness is worth fighting for and good, rich, red blood is what your system needs. It is a hopeless task to try to restore your health while your blood is deficient either in quantity or quality. And remember that no medicine can be of any use to you that does not build up your weak watery blood.

To build up the blood and strengthen the nerves there is one remedy that has been a household word for more than a generation—Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. It is the actual mission of these pills to make new, rich, blood, which strengthens the nerves and tones the entire system. They give you a new appetite, make sleep refreshing, put color in the lips and cheeks, and drive away that unnatural tired feeling that oppresses so many people. If you want to experience new health and happiness give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial.

You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Letters to the Editor

LETTER "B"

Belleville, Aug. 8, 1918.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer

Dear Sir:— Considerable excitement has arisen about the letter "B" on oat leaves. This is nothing more than common, but a great many people never knew that this letter "B" is on the oat leaf every year. I have noticed it for years. The right interpretation of this letter is the letter "B" stands for blood, as our Saviour was crucified in an oat field. It has nothing to do with Britain or the war of which some are prophesying. Hoping you will publish this, dear editor, that people may know the true meaning. I am

Yours aruly,
A SIDNEY FARMER.

21,741 MEN FOR C. E. F.

OTTAWA, Aug. 10.—The total number of recruits obtained in the United States by the British-Canadian recruiting mission to date is 26,693. Of this number 1,952 who reported were rejected, leaving 21,741 men who have been secured for the C. E. F. through the efforts of the mission.

France Stirred by Prophesy of New Jean D'arc

Has a new Joan of Arc arisen in France?

Is the nobility of purpose, the simple patriotism and the mystic spirituality of the Maid of Orleans duplicated today in another heaven guided phophet?

This is the question which all France is asking to-day, the puzzle which has set scientists to the task of unravelling, turned scoffers into believers, and wrung an acknowledgement of her spiritual powers from hardened sceptics.

"Who is she? Where is she to be found? What are the visible tokens of her mission?

Her name is Claire Ferchaud, and she is twenty-two years of age.

Like her great spiritual prototype she is no more than a young peasant, humble and obscure. But among sage and reverend fathers of the Catholic Church she has already commanded attention.

High personages of state have granted her audiences or have paid personal visits to her home. She was introduced to President Poincare and it is openly admitted that one of the French Generals who won fame at Verdun made the long journey to Loublande to see her.

But the prophecy that has set all France talking and made this young girl's name a household word in scores of families is one that has already been fulfilled and one which she helped to bring about by her womanly persistency and her strong belief in the divine origin of her own powers.

Premier Clemenceau is a busy man and is not generally regarded as one of profoud religious beliefs. After first refusing he finally consented to hear her for "five minutes," but yielded to the mystical charm of his young compatriot (for he is a Vendeen himself), and remained talking with her for a full hour. I am even told that she urged him to recall into active service Gen. Mangin, brought into disgrace last year owing to the intrigues of certain politicians, asuring him in the name of the Sacred Heart that he would soon lead our troops to victory.

The Prophecy Fulfilled

It is past history now to tell how Gen. Mangin prepared his victorious drive under cover of the forest of Villers-Cotterets and launched the stroke that not only held the Germans in check, but robbed them of the initiative and drove all thought of their reaching Paris from the minds of the High Command.

Cause of Riots In Queen City

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—What was the match that ignited the powder keg?

Said a returned man to The Toronto Telegram: "I was in the White City restaurant at 11 p.m. on Thursday night. A veteran, Cludsey, who I think is partially paralyzed, came in. He is a very badly crippled man, and has to walk as if his right side were lower than his left sire. Cludsey is only a little fellow, and quite accidentally collided with a big waiter, who, without a word of warning, hit him. Two other waiters came and took Cludsey out to Ann street, and when they got him there they kicked him on the head. We got round to Ann street as soon as we could, and saw the cowards beating him. We found Cludsey in a pool of blood on the ground and semi-conscious. We did what we could for him and got him away.

"A number of us, including some R. A. F. officers, went to the manager and demanded the man who struck Cludsey. He said he was gone, and also said he could not tell us the Turk's name or where he could be found. The proprietor also said that the Turk had beaten up two other returned soldier. We told him we would give him—the proprietor—until six o'clock last night to tell us the name of the Turk and where we could find him."

Why It Spread

Asked the reason why they went to the other cafes, the reply was: "Because the proprietor of the White City is the owner of the others, and he had told them that after the Turk had beat up the other two soldiers he thought it best to send him elsewhere. On one occasion the Turk had been to Leaside. They broke up Klees' butcher shop because he had business cards with the words, "German Pork Store."

The men state that they will get that Turk if they have to search all Canada for him.

"The whole trouble is the consummation of a series of irritations which have been experienced for some time', stated a returned officer this morning. "Many stories aree received from the men of the way in which they have been insulted in restaurants run by foreigners. It is another instance of the protest of the returned soldiers to the Givernment for tolerating them aliens and allowing them to take all their money.'

'Every eating place you go into, it is a case of handing your money over to foreigners," stated another crippled returned soldier, who recited an incident of how he had been insulted himself by the proprietor of a restaurant.

Are You Master

or does your business master you? Does it insist on following you home and to bed and worrying you day and night until you are on the verge of nervous collapse?

A few weeks' use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food will do wonders for any business man or business woman whose nervous system has failed to stand the strain. It nourishes the nerves back to health and vigor.

Bulgarians Disobey German Commands

MILAN, Aug. 10.—Germany's position in Bulgaria is becoming serious according to advices reaching here. Bulgarian soldiers are refusing to obey their German officers and at Sofia bombs have been thrown at the German legation several times. The German Minister's demand for protection is alleged to have been refused. German soldiers have protested because they were forced to wear Bulgarian uniforms.

On July 1 a mob is reported to have made a joint demonstration against the Turks and Germans. The Turkish legation was attacked and windows broken. Mud was thrown on the Turkish flag.

Paris Carries on Despite Hun Shells

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The bombardment of Paris by the long-range German gun renewed again has not changed one whit the aspect of the city nor the demeanor of its people. —The streets are filled with pedestrians and vehicles. Among the latter motor lorries packed with cheery American soldiers are a conspicious and popular feature.

"Big Bertha" naturally gained victims, but, as the Parisians say, "you can't make an omelet without breaking eggs."

The newspaper view of the fresh bombardment is briefly summarized in in these extracts:

The Matin: "It was expected after the check of their offensive. They are taking revenge on women and children for the reverses inflicted by our troops."

The Petit Parisien: "It is the lust for destruction. Shells from this cannon may serve as balm for the wounds of the Germans, but they will not restore lost ground nor divisions that have been annihilated."

The Journal: "The Germans are strangely deceived if they hope thus to lower the morale of the Parisians. One of our oldest employes was killed on his way to work. That is not a victory which will restore the Germans to the banks of the Marne."

Canadian Airmen Win Flying Cross

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Awarded Distinguished Flying Cross: Capt. Arthur Claydon, Winnipeg, formerly of the Artillery. He went to the assistance of another officer attacked by 11 biplanes and six scouts. He not only extricated the other pilot, but drove down several of the enemy. Lieut. Barry Fall, Cowichan Bay B. C. who participated in 60 night raids in seven months. Capt. James Forman, of Kirkfield, who participated in 77 offensive parties in ten months. Lieut. Lionel Shoebottom, of London, nt., who after being up four hours joined a long-distance night raid, thus being in the air ten out of twelve hours.

HUSTLING THE HUNS.

Foch is not playing the game according to the Kaiser's rules or the way of his predecessors. Heretofore the fashion was to hit the Hun hard, then sit down and rest for a few weeks while the enemy was recuperating. Foch has that strategy beaten forty ways. He hits the Hun as hard as he can and then keeps on hitting him and hustling him when he is too tired and disorganized to have much stomach to fight back. It is this kind of fighting of which knockouts are made. More power to Generalissimo Foch who is daily upsetting all the predictions of arm-chair experts and the musts of machine made military science.

ONCE AN ACORN, NOW AN OAK.

Joseph W. Norcross, one of the biggest men in Canadian shipping circles, was baptized into the ancient and honorable guild of those who go down to the sea in ships in and on the Bay of Quinte many years ago. In 1890 Mr. Norcross was Master of the steamer Varuna plying between Bay of Quinte ports and a well-known craft to Belleville citizens. In December, 1913, he became Managing Director of Canada Steamship Lines, Limited, and was appointed Vice-President in January, 1915.

Mr. Norcross was one of the men selected by the Government in June of this year to take charge of the big shipbuilding enterprise at Halifax and upon the organization of the company, Halifax Shipyards, Limited, he was elected President.

Mr. Norcross was born in Port Colborne, Ontario, May 14, 1872, son of Samuel R. and Susan (Deeks) Norcross.

Like many another man with brains and big ideas who started business careers in and about the Bay of Quinte, grit, courage and ability has carried Joseph W. Norcross to the front rank of Canadian Big-Business Men.

BUSY BELLEVILLE'S BIG SHOW.

Belleville Agricultural Society has an opportunity this year of placing Belleville on the map with the reputation of holding the best small city fair in Canada. Last year the fall exhibition was an improvement on previous years, a considerable improvement, rather less of a joke than usual, and more of an exhibition. This year the improvement should be multiplied many times and the first of a series of really worth while fall exhibitions held.

This year conditions are exceptionally favorable to the success of a real, live up-to-the-minute fall fair at Belleville. Many of the competing fairs have been cancelled for various reasons, including Brockville and Prescott and Belleville Fair should draw visitors from a wide area.

The seal of progressiveness should be placed on Belleville Fair this year. It should be an exposition of all the wonderful resources of Hastings and Prince Edward Counties—the fields, orchards, vineyards, dairy and cattle interests, not forgetting the wonderful mineral assets of this section.

PEP should be the distinguishing feature of the fair management from this time henceforth and the old easy-going ruts departed from. Bigger and Better prizes should be offered, especially in the departments of dairy and thoroughbred cattle, for which this district is famous, and visitors should be made fully acquainted with the glories of Prince Edward and Hastings Counties in the food production line, both in quality and quantity, always with the end in view that the great Canadian public which lives and moves and has its being upon its stomach will not be satisfied unless their cheese, pork, bacon and canned goods have the Bay of Quinte brand and flavor.

To make a mighty fair at Belleville it is necessary to have faith and courage—to face deficits if need be for a year or two until the fame of our exhibition covers the country and jams the city full of visitors every fall for a few days or a week.

To make the fair successful it is necessary to provide a good program of entertainment in fast horses and other lines, for the visitors do not come altogether for educational purposes.

Going to the fall fair is an outing dating back into history and seems to have originated with an annual gathering where the principal feature was the settling up of all neighborhood feuds of the year and all private grudges in fist fights which for blood and bumps had the prize ring faded forty ways. Of course the fights were fanned by the whisky so plentiful and the slugging and cussin' was "somethin' fierce."

Times have changed, however, and entertainment must be high class, novel and thrilling now to make any hit with holiday crowds. In these days of automobiles and railways people do not live the narrow, cramped lives their forefathers did and continually demand something new and original in the entertainment line.

Gentlemen of the Agricultural Society, the opportunity is yours—stay in the rut with a fall exhibition no one is proud of, or put Belleville in the limelight of public approval and favor it with a first class fall exhibiton.

It's up to you!

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

It wasn't Hindy's fault, the Clown Prince pushed him!

The Kaiser is willing to knock a few dollars off those phantom indemnities if the Allies will quit smearing his soldiers all over the French landscape

If the Mayor of Toronto would can some of his everlasting chatter there would be fewer riots and Toronto would be a better city all round.

And they say that the Kaiser hit the high spots, and not all of them, as he flew back to Berlin. At that he had trouble keeping up with the Clown Prince.

Most of the writers who are calling so caustically for Sir Robert Borden to return from England at once would laugh themselves to death if Sir Robert never came back.

The evidence in rebuttal submitted in favor of the Y.M.C.A. war work is so overwhelming as to constitute a unanimous vote of confidence from the real boys who are "carrying on" over there.

This letter B business on the oats is getting the goat of many people with guesses galore. B stands for Bunk, so why not letter-B?

When you come to think of it the American Army would have had to stay home if the British fleet had not sealed up the German harbors and kept the Kaiser's fast cruisers and battleships from spreading Hun Kultur to the ends of the earth.

Silence deep and heavy with significance from the Kaiser's personal press bureau. He was announced as watching sonny's drive from a high tower, but when the drive degenerated into a runaway, Wilhelm soon hit the high spots for the Rhine. All engagements for Paris calls have been cancelled by the Kaiser and his personal press bureau given a holiday.

Five million men for the United States army is the figure set by Secretary of War Baker, who believes in backing up his first million with a comfortable margin. The more men fighting for the freedom of the world over there the quicker will that freedom be a reality and the easier the task for all concerned, Atta-boy; more power to you, Uncle Sam!

When the millions of baseball fans in the United States cheerfully accept the war order which puts professional baseball on the blink it shows that they are taking the war seriously. Why, the fans are not even writing to the papers about the colosal iniquity of closing the ball parks! "Carry on" over there is a bigger noise than "play ball" over here.

Some of the most interesting happenings since the war began are still unpublished in detail, including the German plot to invade Canada from the United States, blocked by the vigilance of the British Secret Service acting in conjunction with the U. S. Secret Service. The Hun murder Junta in the United States planned to lay Canada waste with rifles, dynamite and the torch. Thanks to the cleverness of the British Secret Service Canada was saved from a visitation of Hun Kultur.

When Hindenburg set the date of April 1, 1918, as the occasion for his triumphal entry into Paris he made allowances for all contingencies he could think of that might possibly cause delay and by a perfect process of reasoning knew that he would have plenty of time to mop up France with the remnants of the Allies, drive the English swine into the sea, and saunter into Paris on All Fools' Day to feasts of fatness and fountains of wine. While making all allowances he could think of for possible delays Hindenburg's Germanized mentality left Foch out of his reckoning, and the trip to Paris was changed into a mad rush for the Rhine. Hindy's chances of getting to Paris were not nearly as good as his getting to Heaven and for failing to make good his boasts he is a dead one, politically and militarily, if not actually.

"Character is destiny," the old Greek proverb says. Germany's moral deficiencies will prove her final undoing. There is nothing she can say, no pledge to which she can put her signature, that will satisfy the honorable nations of the earth. They are compelled to fight on against her until she is no longer capable through other broken promises of menacing the peace and freedom of the world.

In song and joke through all the ages the goat has had most of the left-handed compliments. All that the goat has done to redeem his character counts for nothing. The most fashionable men and women wear on their feet and hands the skin of the kid. The finest of shawls, some of the most popular winter garments, are the product of these flocks. Dainty children are fed with the milk of the goat, and it produces the finest of cheese. But there are few good words for the benefactor.

The Poet's Corner

A SONG OF SONGS.

There's a song that hits with the early breeze,
Where the white mists shroud the meadow,
And a song that croons to the friendly trees
In the twilight's silver shadow;
There's a song of storm and a song of shine—
And it's each to its tune and meter—
But the song that lives in this heart of mine
Is a better song and sweeter.

There's a song that comes with the day's good wage,
And a song to lights its earning;
There's a song that falls like the calm of age,
And a song of youthful yearning;
There are songs half heard as the day dreams go
And the glad years turn to many;
But the blithest song is a song I know—
And I love it more than any.

There's a song that springs from the heart of things,
With the wondrous others round it,
And I hear it still as it sings and sings,
And I know that I have found it!
But the song that's best in the winging gloam
When the rest trail silent after,
Is the thrill and lilt of a welcome home,
Of love—and a baby's laughter.

"WHO HAVE NO SONS"

You pity those who go, the gallant men who fight and fall
Afar from peaceful homes and from those reaching childish hands
And flutelike voices, pleading one more fairy tale, at dusk. . . .
You pity boys who lie in sodden trenches while the guns
Play evermore their grim tattoo, and tattered, faded flags
Wave proudly over countless mounds—that dear, immortal dust!
Where poppies flame, less bright than blood of heroes shed
To cleanse a sorry world of tyranny and savage lust. . . .

But I? I pity only those who cannot go—
Who cannot brave a splendid death—who never, never know
The shining pride of men who dare the vengeance of the foe!

You pity women who have borne heroic sons and who Must wave farewell to them to-day, white-lipped, with shaking hands,
And then return to desolated homes, to sleep and dream
Of happier days forever gone—those golden days
When eager soldiers fought terrific wars, yet slept at night
In little trundle beds, all soft and warm and safe—so safe!

But I? I pity her whose home the other sons defend—
The childless woman, unafraid, but childless to the end—
Those women loyal, fiercely brave, who have no sons to send!

You pity girlish brides abandoned by their soldier mates
Who go a-marching down the street to sound of rolling drums,
And little children, fatherless, while War doth rack and tear
A fever-haunted world; you mourn the ghastly, sodden waste
And utter wantonness of War, its pain, disease and crime,
Its victims, all who love and part—and never meet again!

But I? I pity little loves not great enough to see
The splendor of that lover who shall die for Liberty—
His heritage to unborn sons, a world safe and free'

An Important Discovery
Swollen Veins Relieved

That Absorbine, Jr., would relieve varicose veins was discovered by an old gentleman who had suffered with swollen veins for nearly fifty years. He had made unsuccessful efforts to get relief and finally tried Absorbine, Jr. knowing its value in reducing swellings, aches, pains and soreness.

Absorbine, Jr., relieved him and after he had applied it regularly for a few weeks he told us that his legs were as smooth as when he was a boy and all the pain and soreness had ceased.

Thousands have since used this antiseptic liniment for this purpose with remarkably good results.

Absorbine, Jr., is made of oils and extracts from pure herbs and when rubbed upon the skin is quickly taken up by the pores; the blood circulation in surrounding parts is thereby stimulated and healing helped. $1.25 a bottle at druggists or postpaid. Foch Now A Marshal Petain Gets Honor

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The Council of Ministers has elevated Gen. Ferdinand Foch, commander-in-chief of the allied forces on the western front, to be a Marshal of France.

The Ministers also have conferred the Military Medal on Gen. Petain, commander-in-chief of the French armies on the western front.

The awarding of the 'Medaille Militare" to Gen. Petain is a distinction rarely given to officers, the decoration generally being reserved for enlisted men. Marshal Joffre is one of the few officers who have received this honor.

A memorandum issued prior to the promotion of Gen. Foch says his elevation to the rank of marshal will not only be a reward for past duty, but will also "consecrate even more deeply the life of the great warrior called upon to lead the entente armies to a definite victory."

The citation accompanying Gen. Petain's decoration says: "He has always succeded in maintaining a firm, benevolent discipline in the armies, in upholding the morale to a supreme degree and inspiring a high degree of confidence. He has acquired imperishable rights to national gratitude by victoriously repulsing the German onslaught."

"Rosita not tell—what good her telling? but if missy gibs her ten dollars 'stead of five! den I swear she not tell."

'And what else did you hear, Jessica?"

"Sambo say de Governor would hab hung all de mutineers dis morning, same like dogs, only de Colonel ob de forces tell him dat berry bad plan, and make big fight, and he better have proper martials. So dat am fixed for to-morrow, and den dey will be hung at sunset fire—dat what Sambo says."

"And—and—what more, Jessica?"

"Dat's pretty well all, missy, only de corpses had been cleared away, and will be buried dis evening. And Miss Latreille berry bad in hospital, and both de Missy Burns dead, and dere fader hab sworn if Governor don't hang de rebels, he will."

"Oh, it is terrible!" sighed Maraquita. "I shall never have the courage to visit the cells. I am so afraid of being found out."

"Den missy better not go."

"But Jessica, he will die without my seeing him and I shall never forgive myself. I don't know what to do."

She vacillated, like the weak creature she was, between two opinions until it was almost too late for Jessica to arrange the matter for her; but finally, under the dread of her mother's speedy return from Beauregard, she made up her mind to visit De Courcelles, and Jessica was dispatched with a ten-dollar note to make the necessary preparations.

When the afternoon sun was somewhat on the wane, and Sir Russell Johnstone, having passed a sleepless night and believing his wife to be safe in her own apartments, had thrown himself down on a couch to obtain some rest, Maraquita, effectually disguised with veil and cloak, stole down the back staircase of Government House, in company with the negress, and sought the abode of the half caste woman Rosita, who had been fully instructed in the part she had to play. Leaving Jessica behind them, the two women immediately set out for the Fort, where they were received by the officer commanding the prison guard. He threw one glance on the Governor's signature and gave them immediate admittance.

"Friends to see the prisoner No. 14, by the Governor's permission," he shouted to the warder, who, unlocking a heavy iron-clamped door, ushered the visitors into a stone passage, from which there seemed to be no possibility of egress. Maraquita's feeble courage was fast failing her, and had it not been for the cool nerve and determination of Rosita, she would have probably betrayed herself. But the half-caste woman was quite equal to the emergency.

"Ah, sir, tell me" she exclaimed, as soon as they were alone with the warder, will they really kill my poor nephew? Is there no chance of a reprive?"

"Don't think so, ma'am," was the official's answer; 'but no one can tell for certain till after the court-martial tomorrow. Your nephew you say?"

"Yes! and this poor girl, my daughter, was to have been married to him before long. It's a terrible trial for her! I don't know how she'll stand the interview."

"She'd better not see him. 'Twon't do no good," said the warder roughly; "though she had a lucky escape from such a rascal."

"But I've come on her account alone. She can't rest till she's seen her cousin. Now, Clara, my dear, you'd better go in by yourself first, and then when the time's up, the warder will let you know."

"All this had been pre-arranged between them, but Rosita played her part much better than Maraquita had the power to do. Her large eyes glanced up almost appealingly when No. 14 was reached, and the gaoler's keys rattled in the door, and had not her companion pushed her into the cell she would have turned round and run away. But it was done, and her retreat was cut off. She stood in the same room as Henri de Courcelles.

"Friends for No. 14," sung the warder, as he opened the door; only fifteen minutes allowed, so make the most of them."

Henri de Courcelles looked up in amazement as the order sounded on his ear. He knew of no friends to visit him in his trouble. He was sitting in a small whitewashed room, which contained a pallet, a table, and a couple of chairs. His day's rations were before him but he had not touched them. He was still in his usual attire, for it had not been thought worth while to put him into prison clothes, and notwithstanding an unshorn face and unkempt hair, he was looking as handsame—perhaps handsomer, than ever, for disorder suited his gipsy style of beauty. As he caught sight of Maraquita's shrouded and veiled figure, he started a little, but he never supposed for a moment it could be she, until she lifted her veil, and gazed at him with scared and mournful eyes.

Henri," she exclaimed, in a piteous voice, I have come to see you!"

In her vanity, she had believed she had only to stand before him, and look miserable, to bring him to her feet again. She had forgotten the deadly insult she had put upon the man by marrying Sir Russell Johnstone; the lies with which she had attempted to deceive him to the very end; the treachery by which she and her mother had procured his dismissal from Beauregard. She trusted, like many another of her sex, too much to the power of her beauty to sway the minds of men. But mere loveliness cannot supply the place of truth and fidelity, and she had become nothing in the eyes of her former lover but a whited sepulchre, and was the last person upon earth he desired to see. He sprang to his feet as her voice fell on his ear, and looked at her with ineffable scorn.

"You have come to see me, and why?"

"Oh, Henri, how can you ask? Do you think I am made of stone, that I have entirely forgotten? When I saw you amongst those terrible mutineers last night, it nearly killed me."

"It's a pity it didn't kill you," he replied, "for women such as you are not fit to live! Do you know why I was there,—why I headed their numbers, and incited them on to rebellion and slaughter?—in order that I might kill you,—in order that you should not live to deceive other men, and drive them to desperation, as you have done me."

"Oh, Henri, Henri," she exclaimed, panting with fear, "you are raving! You would not injure me! Think, Henri, think of the hours I have lain with my head on your breast and my lips to yours; think how you have loved me,—of the tie betwen us, and I am sure that you would die sooner than hurt a hair of my head."

"Think of it!" he repeated, with a bitter laugh; 'haven't I thought of it until it has turned my brain, and made me lust for your blood? To think of all your profession of love, and how they have ended, is to hate and despise you. The tie between us! It had better die, and rot where it lies, than grow up with one tithe of its mother's falsehood. No, Maraquita the time for my belief in you is past. If you came here to hear compliments you have wasted your time, for I have nothing but loathing and hatred to give you."

"Oh, Henri!" she said shivering, with her face hidden in her hands, "don't speak to me like that! I will go away, and never attempt to cross your path again, only promise me that neither you nor your friends shall hurt me. It was not my fault, indeed it wasn't. I married at the command of my parents, and I have been so miserable since, Henri. I have dreamt of you almost every night, and longed to see you again. Oh, don't look at me like that! Kiss me, and say you forgive me, or I shall never know another happy moment."

"Kiss you! Forgive you!" he repeated witheringly. "Never! Neither in this life, nor the life to come. You escaped me last night, Maraquita, but you shall not escape me for ever. I have sworn to have your life, in return for all that was precious to me in mine, and I will have it yet. I only bide my time."

'Then her fancied passion died out beneath his threats and blazing eyes, and she turned and taunted him with his inability to carry out his intentions.

'You will have my life? What are you thinking of, to talk in so absurd a manners? Do you forget where you are? Are you aware that you will be brought up for trial to-morrow morning, and that if I give the Governor one hint of this conversation, sunset will see your execution. How will you be able to carry out your threats against me then?"

'And so this is the woman who will never know another happy moment without my forgiveness!" he returned sarcastically—"who can calmly contemplate my possible execution as the means of her own deliverance, and hint that she may expedite it! I thank you, madam, for showing me your true nature so openly, else I might have been weak enough, in these last moments, to believe you had really preserved some little feeling for the man who should have been your husband. But I have a word to say to you in return. I shall not die tomorrow—I shall live until I have the weapon in my hand wherewith to strike you down. And then I shall not care how soon I go too. But in hell Maraquita—even in hell—I shall be beside you, to haunt you with the treachery which sent us both there."

"Oh, have pity!—have pity on me!" she cried, upon her knees.

PROCLAMATION

GEORGE the FIFTH, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas, KING, Defender of the Faith, Emperor of India.

To all to whom these presents shall come or whom the same may in any wise concern,—GREETING:

A Proclamation of conditional amnesty respecting men belonging to Class 1 under the Military Service Act, 1917, who have disobeyed our Proclamation of 13th October, 1917, or their orders to report for duty, or are deserters or absent without leave from the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

E. L. NEWCOMBE, Deputy Minister of Justice, Canada. } WHEREAS considerable numbers of men belonging to Class I under our Military Service Act, 1917, called out on active service in our Canadian Expeditionary Force for the defence of Canada under Our Proclamation of 13th October, 1917, although they have thus become by law soldiers enlisted in the Military Service of Canada,

Have failed to report for duty as lawfully required of them under the said Military Service Act and the regulations thereunder, including the Order in Council duly passed on April 20 last,

Or have deserted,

Or absented themselves without leave from our Canadian Expeditionary Force,

And it is represented that the very serious and unfortunate situation in which these men find themselves is due in many cases to the fact that, notwithstanding the information and warning contained in Our Proclamation aforesaid, they have misunderstood their duty or obligation, or have been misled by the advice of ill-disposed, disloyal or seditious persons.

AND WHEREAS we desire, if possible, to avoid the infliction of the heavy penalties which the law imposes for the offences of which these soldiers have thus been guilty, and to afford them an opportunity within a limited time to report and make their services available in Our Canadian Expeditionary Force as is by law their bounden duty, and as is necessary for the defence of Our Dominion of Canada.

NOW KNOW YE that we in the exercise of Our powers, and of Our good will and pleasure in that behalf, do hereby proclaim and declare and cause to be published and made known THAT THE PENALTIES OF THE LAW WILL NOT BE IMPOSED OR EXACTED as against the men who belong to Class 1 under Our Military Service Act, 1917, and who have disobeyed Our Proclamation aforesaid; or who have received notice from any of Our registrars or deputy registrars to report for duty on a day now past and have failed so to report; or who, having reported and obtained leave of absence, have failed to report at the expiry of their leave, or have become deserters from Our Expeditionary Force, PROVIDED THEY REPORT FOR DUTY ON OR BEFORE THE TWENTY FOURTH DAY OF AUGUST 1918.

AND WE DO HEREBY STRICTLY WARN AND SOLEMNLY IMPRESS UPON ALL SUCH MEN, and as well those who employ, harbour, conceal or assist them in their disobedience, that, if they persist in their failure to report, absence or desertion until the expiry of the last mentioned day, they will be pursued and punished with all the rigour and severity of the law, SUBJECT TO THE JUDGMENT OF OUR COURTS MARTIAL WHICH WILL BE CONVENED TO TRY SUCH CASES or other competent tribunals: and also that those who employ, harbour, conceal or assist such men will be held strictly accountable as offenders and subject to the pains, penalties and forfeitures in that behalf by law provided for their said offence.

Provided however that nothing contained in this Our Proclamation is intended to release the men aforesaid from their obligation to report for duty as soon as possible or to grant them immunity from arrest or detention in the meantime for the purpose of compelling them to perform their military duty; Our intention being merely to forego or remit the penalties heretofore incurred for failure to report, absence without leave or desertion incurred by those men of the description aforesaid who shall be in the proper discharge of their military duties on or before the said twenty-fourth day of August, 1918.

Of all of which Our loving subjects and all others whom these presents may concern are hereby required to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

IN TESTIMONY WHEREOF, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Canada to be hereunto affixed. Witness: Our Right Trusty and Right Entirely Beloved Cousin and Counsellor, Victor Christian William, Duke of Devonshire, Marquess of Hartington, Earl of Devonshire, Earl of Burlington, Baron Cavendish of Hardwicke, Baron Cavendish of Keighley, Knight of Our Most Noble Order of the Garter; One of Our Most Honourable Privy Council; Knight Grand Cross of Our Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George; Knight Grand Cross of Our Royal Victorian Order; Governor General and Commander-in-Chief of Our Dominion of Canada.

At Our Government House, in Our City of OTTAWA, this FIRST day of AUGUST, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighteen, and in the ninth year of Our Reign.

Put 5 Big U.S. Packers Under Control of Government

Federal Trade Commission Recommends to President That They Be Acquired— Declares They Hold Big Meat Monopoly— Charges Power "Illegally Used" to Manipulate, Defraud, Crush, and Profiteer

WASHINTON, Aug. 10.—Government acquisition and control of all the principal stock yards cold storage plants and warehouses and both refrigerator and cattle cars has been recommended to the President by the Federal Trade Commission to destroy a monopoly which it declares Swift & Co., Armour & Co., Morris & Co., Wilson & Co., Inc., and the Cudhay Packing Co. excercise not only over the meat of the country, but other necessaty food supplies.

The commissions report is based upon exhaustive hearings conducted recently in many cities and was made public to-day through the White House It has been in the hands of the President since July 5 and it was explained that it had not previously been issued "because the President wished first to be in possession of full information"

THE CHARGES MADE

Basing its statement upon a great volume of evidence examined, much of it taken from the confidential files of the packing companies, the commission said the power of the five packing companies "has been and is being unfairly and illegally used to:"

Manipulate livestock

Manipulate livestock markets

Restrict inter-stae and international supplies of food.

Control the prices of dressed meats and other foods.

Defraud both the producers of food and consumers.

Crush effective competition.

Secure special priviledges from railroads, stockyards, companiesa nd municipalities and profiteer.

Byrne Says Court Gives Him Fortune

MONTREAL, Aug. 10.—Rev. David S. K. Byrne, ordained minister of the late W. G. Byrne an American millionaire. The heir was formerly David S. Kidd, and on the death of the daughter of the millionaire, whom he rescued in Chicago in April, 1907 was adopted as a son. The girl died in Florida a year later and Kidd was left her share amounting to $10,000,000, providing he adopted the name of Byrne and carried out the conditions of the will. One of the conditions is that he erects and endows in Toronto a memorial tabernacle for which the sum of $1,580,000 is set apart. The building is to be used for Christian and uplift work Byrne has all the papers complete and will start soon on the erection of the building.

Travels 16,000 Miles to Claim His Bride

WATERTOWN, N.Y., Aug. 10.—A 16,000-mile trip was made by Sergt. Frederick H. Johnson, of the Phillippines, to be married on Thursday afternoon, Miss Edna H. Rickett, Three Mile Bay, being the bride. He has been in the city several days, but news of the wedding has been with held from the parents of the couple.

Sergt. Johnson is the son of Mr. and Mrs, Duncan Johnson, Clayton, and until 1908, when he enlisted in the regular army, had been a resident of that village. He has seen service on the Mexican border and two and a half years ago was sent to the Phillippines, where he completed his enlistment of seven months before returning to this country. Miss Rickett is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rickett, Three Mile Bay.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of othine—double strength—from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength othine as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

Divorced Friday Married Monday

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 10.—Francis X. Bushman, who was divorced on Friday of last week by Mrs. Josephine H. Bushman, was married on Monday to Beverly Bayne, who played Juliet to his Romeo in the moving production of the play. They are now spending their honeymoon at Bushman Manor, at Riderwood, in the Green Spring Valley, Maryland, which was vacated by the first Mrs. Bushman three weeks ago. The first wife is living in Mount Washington, where she is likely to met the Romeo and Juliet of the moving picture world at any time as they motor over the roads of Baltimore County.

Mr. Bushman's second wife is 23 years old and ten years his juniar The divorce decree granted the first Mrs. Bushman $40,000 alimony.

FULL OF LIFE

Open a bottle of Imperial. Pour quickly, or it will foam over. Fill your glass with the amber beverage, watch the bubbles rise. Clear as crystal. Now for the crucial test. How does it taste on the palate?....Ah! that's fine—the mellowness of the malt—the tang of the hops. You get it all in

O'Keefe's IMPERIAL BEERS
Lager : Ale : Stout

After effects? Yes, you feel refreshed, invigorated, you have the inclination to smack your lips. This is wholly due to the nutritious, tonic value of well-brewed malt and hops, not in the least to alcoholic content, for the law is strict and is strictly observed in Imperial brews.

Your whole family can drink O'Keefe's Imperial Lager, Ale or Stout with real benefit as well as pleasure. Its use is ideal at this season of the year. Try it. It is full of Life and Zest!

Order a case from your grocer. Ask for O'Keefe's at hotels, cafés or restaurants.

O'Keefe's Ginger Ales in all flavors, including Cola, are indisputably the best of their kind. Your grocer can supply you.

Allied Push Progresses Captive Cermans Pile Up

Prisoners Rounded Up by British Cavalry are Coming Back Rapidly— At Most Points Hun Resistance Is Overcone

Canadians Take Beaufort Town.

London, Aug. 9.—The Canadians, this afternoon's advices state, have taken the town of Beaufort.

Huns Destroy War Material.

With the British Army in France, Aug. 9.—Thursday night the flashes from the British guns firing from their new positions in prepartion for Friday's fighting were blotted out now and then by flares in the sky, which appeared to indicate that the enemy was destroying material he was unable to move.

Strong Hun Batteries Captured.

London, Aug. 9.—(4.26 p.m.)—The majority of German prisoners captured in the new Picardy drive were taken between Amiens-Vermand and Amiens-Roye roads it was learned. Strong German batteries were also captured on the heights between these highways.

Vermand is thirty-six miles due east of Amiens. Roye is 25 miles southeast. The former road crosses the present battle front at Foucaucourt and the latter at Le Quesnoy.

The allies have penetrated an average depth of eight miles on the whole twenty-mile front.

French and Canadian troops advanced two miles this morning toward the Montdidier-Chaulnes railway. Chaulnes is now known to be the allies' objective. It is probable that Montdidier will soon be evacuated.

The Amiens-St. Just-Paris main railway can now be used as the result of the allied offensive, it is learned. The railway is in good condition and probably already is working.

With the Britsh Army in France, Aug. 9.—Prisoners rounded up by the British cavalry divisions are coming back rapidly.

Early Friday morning the combined Franco-British force began following up the victory of Thursday from the positions reached Thursday night. Reports received from along the front shortly before 11 a.m. said that satisfactory progress was being made. Undoubtedly resistance developed at several points, but this seems to have been materially overcome, except at the left, where during the night sharp fighting developed and the allied troops were unable to maintain their footing on the Chipoilly spur, principally because of the nature of the ground.

The French at the south began their push forward at the same time as did the British in the morning, and it is reported, though not officially confirmed, that they have captured Le Quentin (Le Quesnil?). The enemy in the Montdidier pocket is now certainly in an even more precarious position than yesterday. The widely-flung operations of the British cavalry menaces all the men and materials the enemy has there.

The allied air forces continued the vigorous operations they initiated Thursday, and besides blowing up many of the Somme bridges, seriously hampering the German effort to remove material, the airmen attacked troops, billets and transports.

The prisoners taken by the British forces in Thursday's fighting totalled 260 officers and 11,721 of other ranks.

PLANT TO EQUAL KRUPP WORKS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Approval of plans for a big gun relining plant to be built in France at a cost of $25,000,000 to $30,000,000, was announced yesterday by the War Department. It is said eingineering work for the great project, which will compare in size to the Krupp works at Essen, Germany, were completed and orders for equipment actually issued within thirty days after conception of the plan by the ordnance officers.

Mrs. McDonald, who resides at Point Ann, reported to the police here that a wooden pump had been stolen from her premises.

COAL CHUTE COLLAPSED

On Wednesday afternoon a large chute recently erected on the wharf at Cobourg by Geo. Plunkett & Son, collapsed, causing considerable excitement. Fortunately no person was injured.

BIG HUCKLEBERRY CROP.

The huckleberry crop this year was the best in years. Mr. C. C. Thompson, a merchant of Northbrook Hastings County, handled over 3,500 pounds of huckleberries. Hundreds of people visted that section and all secured all they could carry.

CHARGED WITH NON-SUPPORT

Sergt. Harman of the local police force, in company with County Constable J. Trulasch last evening visited a farm in the 8th Concession of Tyendinaga Township ,and placed under arrest a man named Allan H. Mitchell who is wanted in Cobourg on a charge of non-support. The accused was today taken back to Cobourg by Chief of Police Ruse of that town.

OPERATION SUCCESSFUL

Mr. Charles Holland, who had been working upon a farm near Wellman's Corners in Rawdon Township, was taken seriously ill on Tuesday and was brought to the hospital here, where he was successfully operated upon for appendicitis. He is progressing satisfactorily.

GETTING READY FOR THE HUNS

Gunner Forhan, from Petawawa Camp, is in the city on leave visiting his mother. He is as brown as a berry and as fit as a fiddle, showing that army life agrees with him from the ground up. Gunner Forhan came in on a special train of fifteen coaches with batterymen taking their monthly leave of five days which is being granted now. The battery to which Gunner Forhan is attached has progressed in its training to the point where real sure thing ammunition is used and targets are blown to smithereens. Soon these guns will be facing the Huns and shooting holes in German kultur.

MEETING ON BAY SHORE

Mrs. George T. Woodley invited the members of Holloway St. Women's Missionary Society to hold their regular August meeting at her summer home on the Bay Shore. On Thursday afternoon about twnety ladies motored out in Huffman's motor bus. Leaving town it was oppressively warm, but the air at the cottage was delightfully cool and refreshing. Mrs. Woodley welcomed all in no uncertain manner, after which for about one hour was enjoyed one of the finest meetings ever held by the Auxiliary. In fact it would have been quite perfect only for the absence of the beloved President, Mrs. W. H. Phillips, who is critically ill in Toronto General Hospital. This occasioned much sorrow and her sweet, cheerful presence was missed. Prayers were offered for her complete recovery. Miss I. Martin in her own splendid way occupied the chair and kept up an interest from which even the fine setting of the meeting could not detract. After the meeting wading and bathing were enjoyed for a time, after which the hostess served a delightful tea. All agreed that Mrs Woodley was a most perfect hostess and voted her hearty thanks for her kind hospitality.

HIGH JINKS AT SAND BANKS

The Children's Shelter Annual Picnic to the Sand Banks on Thursday was a great success, the day was beautiful and the drive in the motor bus and cars was indeed very refreshing the rain the night before having laid the dust and made the air cooler. The kiddies certainly enjoyed it and what with singing and the giving vent to the Shelter, yell or war whoop cry (A regular college yell) they startled the natives as they passed along the road. When they arrived the quick work of the shelter staff with the kind assistance of Mrs. A. E. Bailey, the president's wife a splendid dinner was laid It was indeed a pleasure to see thirty-six younsters neat and clean looking, the picture of health, sit down and do ample justice to the good things provided by kind friends. After which they went on the banks and shore, the larger boys and girls enjoying a splash in the lake. After a most enjoyable day spent by the lake where the cool breezes blew, a day long to be remembered by the children, they again scrambled into the bus and turned home-wards which was reached before the storm, all safe and sound, tired but very happy. The Board is very grateful to those who contributed to kiddies outing. Mrs. R. J. Graham one of the friends who takes a personal interest in the welfare of the neglected and dependant children, again manifested that interest in a very practical way, also Mr. A. E. Bailey (The President), his wife and H. F. Ketcheson, the treasurer, who each time the cry goes out for assistance is ever ready and willing to see the youngsters have a good time. It is just such work as this the C. A. S. is doing all along, bringing hope and joy into the hearts of the little ones, a smile where once was fear. It needs your help. Why not become a member if you are interested get in touch with Captain Ruston, the Inspector. Visit the shelter on visiting days, Tuesdays and Fridays 2 to 5 o'clock or Thursdays after 6 o'clock. Help to rescue the children and make good citizens of them.

Music and Drama

“MISSING” AT GRIFFIN'S

A very unusual story is the photoplay “Missing” which comes to Griffin's for the first three days of next week. The story is written around two orphans, Nell and Hester, who live in an English village, the latter a proud woman who craves wealth and position which she hopes to attain through the beauty of Nell, and whom she aims to marry to some rich man. But Nell loves Lieut. Surratt, a poor army officer who waiting orders to go to the front. Nell agrees to marry him before his departure to France and she is preparing for the event when Hester learns of the project and raises a row. The marriage takes place and Lieut. Surratt returns to France. Sir William Farrell meets Nell and pays her marked attention. Word is received that the husband is missing and from this point in the story many thrilling situations occur which marks the story as very timely and written around the present world war. How Nell finally located her husband and discovers the seeming other sister and also finally brings back her husband's memory with the strains of “Bonnie Sweet Bessie” makes a very pretty story by a well known author and is also very timely.

Along with this very fine picture Vivian Martin is appearing in a pr[illegible] story called “Viviette” taken from the book of the same name which with a new chapter of the fine serial picture “The Eagle's Eye” and a “News” film will complete a fine quality photoplay program.

JEAN SOTHERN AT THE PALACE

At the Palace Jean Sothern is appearing in a very interesting story which is made up of some very fine scenes and is also a fine story, with a good cast of players, a new chapter of The Woman in the Web and also other good photoplays will entertain for the first half of next week at the cozy Main street house.

DEATH OF INFANT

Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Twiddy, residing at 156 Moira Street west, have been bereaved owing to the death of their infant daughter which occurred last evening. The little one had been ill for some days.

MET IN CONFERENCE

Mr. Appell, chemist for the Corby Distillery Company, Mr. Hume and Mr. Brennan, who are connected with the company, were in the city yesterday afternoon and were in conference with members of the Belleville Board of Health, and Dr. Clinton, District Provincial Health Department, in reference to the refuse which is being deposited in the River Moira at the company's plant at Corbyville. It is alleged that the refuse from the molasses used at the plant causes not only the water to become very much discolored, but also causes a smell. The party visited several places along the river bank and samples of the water at different points were taken. No definite action was taken in the matter.

Bravery of Pte. Marshall

The following letter has been received by Mrs. C. A. Gibson, 72 Victoria Avenue, from Divisional Military Headquarters at Kingston, in regard to the Military Medal awarded a relative of hers, Pte. J. Marshall, for out standing bravery:

British Chemical Co. Purchase Permanent Homes For Officials

Trenton Industrial Prosperiiy Seems Built Upon Permanent Foundations— Everything Humming— New Silverware Factory a Great Success— Significant Real Estate Transfers

From our Own Correspondent

TRENTON, Aug. 10.—The British Chemical Company have purchased the residences of Dr. Jacques', Mr. Russel White's, Mrs. Will Reynold's, Mr. James Bonter's, Mr. Russel Haines' and the house on Marmora Street owned by Mayor Ireland, at present occupied by Mr. Cromwell.

These houses are for members of the staff and the aggregate purchase price was well over $35,000. This deal is another indication of the permanence of this great industry in Trenton.

A large gang of workmen, carpenters, blacksmiths and laborers numbering over one hundred have been busy overhauling the large C. P. R. steel bridge which spans the Trent here. The foundations have been given special attention.

The scarcity of houses is as pronounced here as ever and the new housing scheme of the government is receiving the close attention of Mayor Ireland and the members of the Town Council. Trenton will without doubt be glad to take advantage of the government's progressive move.

Trenton is as busy as ever, busier in fact, the only quiet section being the moving picture industry which closed down for the hot weather on account of the actors refusing to take part in a North Pole drama during those awful two weeks of heat; just a matter of temperment. They do Miss Marguerite Snow for those Arctic scenes.

The new silverware factory is a very busy place and this thriving youpng industry promises to expand to very large proportions to keep pace with the demand.

Riverside addition, opened by Mr. H. B. Nichol to cope with the great demand for houses consequent upon Trenton's sudden industrial expansion is now a thriving suburb, having over one hundred houses, all erected within a year. Nearly $200,000 worth of building lots in a year is the record of Mr. Nichol, who is one of those live wires, few and far between, who are a decided asset to any town.

After the war activities in Trenton, it is said, will include a large fertilizer plant, perhaps the largest in North America. This will replace any slackening of industrial activity caused by the cessation of the war, and will be operated by a strong English company.

CHAPMAN—MULLEN

The marriage was quietly solemnized on Tuesday morning, August 6th 1918, at the Methodist parsonage, Prescott, Ont., of Miss Florence Emily Mullen, daughter of Mr. and nest Chapman of Pembroke, formerly nest Chapmon of Pembroke, formerly of Prescott. The Rev. A. Wilkinson was the officiating clergyman. They were unattended. The bride wore a navy blue taffeta suit with pale pink blouse and a black picture hat with French trimmings. A luncheon was served afterwards at the home of the bride's parents, with only the immediate relatives present. Mr. and Mrs. Chapman afterwards motored to Brockville, where they took the steamer “Toronto” for Toronto, Niagara Falls and Campbellford, and on their return will reside at Brockville. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful presents from a large circle of friends of both parties.

FOOD BOARD FLASHES FOR FEMININE FOLK

Just to remind the picnickers again—it is not necessary to have a license or permit of any kind in order to have a picnic—

But—no sandwiches between 11.30 and 2.30.

What then? Well, oatcakes, for instance. And any housekeeper can think of other things.

As for meat—you have to watch the day you are having your picnic. You can have beef or veal on Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings. And you can have pork at the mid-day meal on Monday and Saturday. That is clear enough, isn't it? For the rest you may have eggs, salad, chicken fruit and plenty of other things.

But remember—no icing on your cake.

Literary Notes

HISTORICAL CHURCHES IN CANADA.

Everyone interested in church history should read the article by Madge Macbeth in the August Canadian Magazine entitled “Historical Churches in Canada.” While Mrs. Macbeth merely sketches the foundation of Christianity in Canada and traces its progress down to recent times, her article is instructive and very interesting. To Quebec Province naturally attaches most of the early events, but Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Ontario have their share, and the record comes down late enough to embrace the old church at Bath, Ontario, and the Mohawk (Indian) church at Brantford.

FODDER CONCENTRATES FOR ONTARIO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Aug. 9.—At least half a million dollars, and probably a much larger sum, will be invested by the Ontario Government in feed concentrates, with the object of creating a reserve to tide the farmers of the province over the difficult months. The agricultural section of the resources yesterday approved of an agreement under which Jas. Richardson and Sons, of Kingston, will act as agents of the Government in purchasing supplies in the United States and storing them at convenient shipping points in Ontario.

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Improvements and General Repairs to Warehouse at Belleville, Ont." will be received at this office until 12 o'clock, noon, on Tuesday, August 27, 1918, for improvements and general repairs to warehouse at Belleville, Hastings County, Ont.

Plans and forms of contract can be seen and specification and forms of tender obtained at this Department and at the office of the District Engineer at Equity Building, Toronto, Ont., and at the Post Office, Belleville, Ont.

Tenders will not be considered unless made on printed forms supplied by the Department and in accordance with conditions contained therein.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, equal to 10 p.c. of the amount of the tender.

NOTE—Blue prints can be obtained at this Department by depositing an accepted bank cheque for the sum of $10, payable to the order of the Minister of Public Works, which will be returned if the intending bidder submit a regular bid.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

FRIENDS THOUGHT HE WOULD DIE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Conquered Dyspepsia and Restored His Health.

MR. ROBERT NEWTON.

Little Bras d'Or, C. B.

"I was a terrible sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation for years. I had pain after eating, belching gas, constant headaches, and did not sleep well at night. I lost so much weight —going from 185 pounds to 146 pounds—that I became alarmed and saw several doctors who, however, did me no good. Finally, a friend told me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'.

In a week, there was improvement. The constipation was corrected; and soon I was free of pain, headaches and that miserable feeling that accompanies Dyspepsia. I continued to take this splendid fruit medicine and now I am well, strong and vigorous". ROBERT NEWTON.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WHEAT SUBSTITUTES.

Are you insisting on getting wheat substitutes from your grocer and are you, as a housekeeper, trying them out in your kitchen? There is no use saying they are not available, because with possible exceptions in some districts, they are, and if you dealer does not carry them, then it is his fault and yours. Next week the largest substitute milling concern in Canada is to be opened at Peterborough by the Quaker Oats Company. Cornmeal, oat flour, oatmeal and corn flour will be turned out at the rate of 7,000 barrels a day.

The darker the bread you have these days the more patriotic you are, so don't insist on getting light bread from your baker. On the contrary encourage him to go even further than the regulations specify in the use of substitutes.

What Canada's Done to Help Feed Allies

OTTAWA, Aug. 10.—The Canada Food Board issued a summary of the results of the special food production and conservation of wheat, meat dairy products and sugar, which already have been saved in very large quantities for export overseas.

"The very notable and gratifying results which have already been obtained show the importance of small individual food-saving when multiplied by hundreds of thousands," the Food Board states.

"In the case of pork Canada and the United States have been able to meet the allies' requirements for the present, but it must not be assumed that our task is complete. It is still true that all food saving will count for victory. The action of the Food Board in removing the restrictions on the use of pork as soon as they could safely be withdrawn may be taken as proof of the desire and intention to relax any or all restrictions as conditions warrant. At the present time other conservation measures must be relaxed, but the public may follow the regulations and advice of the Food Board in full confidence that restrictions will not be retained longer than is absolutely necessary to safeguard the food position of the allies and of ourselves."

Another Proposal For Damming River

OTTAWA, Aug. 10.—Another application for approval of a project involving the damming of the south channel of the St. Lawrence River at the Long Sault Rapids will shortly be made to the International Waterways Commission according to information which has reached the Government here. The applicant will it is stated be the St. Lawrence River Company which already is developing the Messina Springs, N. Y., and which is stated to be a subsidiary corporation of the Aluminum Company of America.

Two years ago application was made by the St. Lawrence River Power Company for authority to dam the St. Lawrence at the Long Sault and at the same time a bill providing for the incorporation of the St. Lawrence Power Transmission Company was introduced in the House of Commons. Both the application and the bill were vigorously opposed by the Commission of Conservation of which Sir Clifford Sifton was and is, chairman; the Ontario Electric Commission and many members of Parliament including Hon. J. D. Reid, the present Minister of Railways and Canals. Both were finally defeated.

The Markets

The attendance upon the market today was not large, especially the interior, and as a consequent prices were high for dairy products. HOLIDAY WAR BULLETINS

Special to the Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited

LONDON, According to German prisoners the German Crown Prince is the most unpopular leader in Germany

BERLIN Aug. 11.—German headquarters report says that Allies have gained ground on the centre of the battlefront.

ROME Aug. 11.—Allies have made slight advances on the Austro-Italina at several points and taken a number of prisoners.

PARIS Aug. 11.—Montdider fell to the French First Army. Many prisoners and great quantities of material were taken by the French. The number of prisoners is increasing hourly

PARIS, Aug. 11.—The number of prisoners taken thus far in the Allied offensive in Picardy is placed at 36,000. Thirty-six thousand including one thousand 1,000 officers. More than five hundred 500 guns have been captured.

With the British Army in France, Aug. 11.—The present battle has brought more German wounded to the allied casualty clearing stations than there are wounded among the allied soldiers. Since July 18th the Germans lost almost as much material as they captured in their big offensive early in the year.

PARIS, Aug. 11.—The strongest German resistance now centres around Noyon about midway between Soissons and Montdidier. German resistance is stiffening against the fourth British army in the region of Lihons which changed hands twice last night but is now safely in the hands of the British.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—Chaulnes, in the heart of the Somme battle front, the key to the southern line of the German salient was captured by Canadians and Australians yesterday. Further progress was made by the British on their left flank on the Picardy front north of the Somme. The line was advanced one mile and a half to the southwest of Brey. On the right centre French troops have pushed forward on the south bank of the Avre and reached the outskirts of east of Montdidier.

Black and Dark View Seen By Hun Press

LONDON, Aug. 9.—The deepondent tone of the latest German press comments is emphasized daily in special despatches from Holland. A despatch to the Daily Mail from The Hague yesterday includes an editorial by the Duseldorf Nachrichten, which says thfat nobody looking into the future can seen an end to the war. "For, though it is true that the end might come quickly," it adds, "it could only be an end of terror, as in Russia."

The Vorwaerts, of Berlin, says that events of recent days at last have shattered the illusion created by inspired optimism that Germany is invincible. It says: "The German people at last realize the colossal gravity of the situation. Let us have courage to admit that as long as the war is not ended it is not won and can be lost."

The principal North German organ of the majority Socialists, the Burger Zeitung, of Bremen, says: "Black and dark is the hour. The sacrifices made by the people are immeasurable and those of the fifth year of the war will be gigantic, but no refreshing breath of freedom and civic equality blows through the oppressive night of our discontent."

Man Hunt In The Gatineau

KINGSTON Aug. 12.—On Thursday morning Inspector J. J. Graham, of the Dominion Police of this District and eight picked men carried out a successful raid in the Gatineau District, Ottawa, rounding up ten draft evaders.

The raid was successfully planned and well-timed. At two o'clock Thursday morning, Inspector Graham and his picked men started from Rockcliffe to where the defaulters were thought to be. About three miles from their destination, the party left their autos and started on foot into a bush near Kirk's Ferry, just outside of Ottawa. It was bad going, the party proceeding through swamps and underbush, often wading deep pools of water. On approaching the camp where the men were known to be, the inspector threw out a cordon, completely surrounding the spot.

He then closed in on the men, several of whom were sleeping. Some of them tried to make a getaway, but the constables succeeded in foiling their attempts to escape. That the men meant business was shown by the capture of three guns, two being shotguns, and one Winchester repeater, all of which were loaded. These were confiscated by the police. Some of the captured men had no papers to show their military standing and nearly all of them were French-Canadians.

Hun Airship Brought Down In Flames

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Aug. 12.—A German airship has been brought down in flames north of Ameland on the northern Dutch coast, the Admiralty announced today.

British Motor Boats Failed to Return

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Aug. 12.2—The Admiralty announced to-day that six British motor boats have failed to return from the reconnoitring expedition carried out on August 11 along the West Friesland Coast of Holland.

COMMUTES LIFE TERMS OF CONSCIENTOUS OBJECTORS

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 12.—The drastic manner in which the military authorities intend to enforce the Military Service Act was emphasized at Niagara Camp today when ten conscientuous objectors tried by court-martial head their fate. The original sentence was life imprisonment but this was commuted by the department at Ottawa to ten years.

The men sentenced were H. G. Calma W. D. Calma, Eric Kitcher, Sam M. Sullivan N. H. Bailey A. T. Grimsley J. G. Phillips,, A. E. Scott, F. G. Wilkie and F. T. Bradley.

Hun Destroyer Sunk By Striking a Mine

LONDON, Aug. 11.—A German destroyer was sunk eight miles off Zeebrugge according to an official statement issued by the Admiralty to-day. The statement says that it is probable that the destroyer was sunk by striking a British mine. The text of the statement reads:

"During a reconnaissance carried otu yesterday by Royal Air Force contingents working in conjunction with the navy, a German destroyer was observed to be sinking eight miles northwest of Zeebrugge. This destroyer, was in all probability, sunk by a British mine.

"Enemy mine sweepers operating off Zeebrugge were heavily bombarded by the British aircraft."

DEFENCE IS STIFFENING.

Paris, Aug. 11—The Germans tonight are holding the Chaulnes-Roye-Noyon line, but the Allies are making progress south of Noyon. The enemy's reserves are coming into action, and the defence is stiffening all along the battle-front from Noyon to Chaulnes.

Desperate fighting is going on between the British army of General Rawlinson and the German army of von Der Marwitz. The enemy is counter-attacking savagely west of Noyon, and seems determined to hold the town at all costs.

ENGLAND TO EGYPT BY AIR ROUTF

LONDON, Aug., 12.—Two Royal Air Force officers, with two mechanics have completed a flight from England to Egypt a distance of 2,000 miles, in a type of airplane that has seen considerable service on the front. The official report, in announcing this feat says: "One or two halts were made for petrol, but the flight was merely a bit of routine work."

OTTAWA, Aug. 12.—It was officially stated last night that a Canadian military unit of considerable strength will be sent to Siberia.

FORTY THOUSAND PRISONERS CAPTURED AND SEVEN HUNDRED CANNON

OVER ONE THOUSAND GERMAN OFFICERS CAPTURED

ALLIED ADVANCE CONTINUES DESPITE STRONG RESISTANCE — ENEMY BRINGS UP STRONG REINFORCEMENTS —PRISONERS STILL COMING IN — MORE THAN ONE THOUSAND GERMAN OFFICERS CAPTURED IN THIS OFFENSIVE — NEW POSITIONS LINKED UP AND CONSOLIDATED — TOWN OF ROYE REPORTED CAPTURED.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—Nearly forty thousand prisoners and seven hundred guns have been taken by the Allies in Picardy, according to reliable information here.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—Extremely bitter resistance is being encountered from the Germans along the line of Chaulnes-Roye-Noyon. The enemy is bringing up strong reinforcements, while the Allies are preparing for an advance.

FRENCH TROOPS APPROACH ROYE.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—French troops have advanced nearer to the important point of Roye from the southwest by the capture of the villages of Armencourt and Tilloy. South of the Somme British troops captured two hundred prisoners. British positions east of Mericourt, south of the river, have been linked with the British lines east of Etinhem, north of the river. British positions south of Lihons were attacked last evening by the Germans. The attack was repulsed.

With the British Army in France, Aug. 12.—There is an unconfirmed report this afternoon that the town of Roye, which the Germans have been desperately defending, has been evacuated. British tanks have been seen operating at a considerable distance east of that town.

Casualties Among Canadian Troops

GASSED—F. R. Blackwell, Peterboro.

DIED—Capt. K. F. A. Williams, Kingston.

Lenine And Trotsky Hike For Hunland

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Special

LONDON, Aug. 12.—Premier Lenine and his chief assistant, Leon Trotsky, have fled to Kronstadt, naval base near Petrograd, according to a despatch sent out by the semi-official Wolff bureau of Berlin.

With the Canadian Forces in France, Aug. 12.—By the evening of the first day's fighting of the present offensive the Canadians had advanced fourteen thousand yards, taken six thousand prisoners, and captured every objective set for them.

Canadians Will Go to Siberia

Force of 4,000 Men Will go to Vladivostok

The following official statement was handed out to-night.

OTTAWA, Aug. 11.—"For some time past the situation in Russia has been under close consideration by the Allied Governments and decisions have been reached which will lead to the rendering of assistance to the Czecho-Slovaks and Russians who are resisting the aggression of the Central powers.

Canada will take part in this movement and the following important communications from the Prime Minister, the Government authorized the mobilization of a special force of about 1,000 for active service in Siberia with a base at Vladidostok.

"A further announcement will be made shortly."

Final Defeat for Foe in 16 Months Says Toronto Editor Overseas

Editor F.D.L. Smith Says Outlook Has Improved But End Is Not Yet— Knew Canadians Would Be Factor

LONDON, Aug. 12.—(By F. D. L. Smith, editor ,Toronto Daily News, to Canadian Press)—Some days ago I cabled that fresh events of unusual importance were pending on the western front and that Canadian troops would have an important part therein. I knew then, but was unable to say that Canadian forces which we visited two weeks ago in the Arras sector had been moved south of the Amiens region.

PART OF 4TH ARMY

According to Chancellor Bonar Law, they now form a part of the 4th British Army and have had a part in that army's latest successful attack under the leadership of Field Marshal Haig.

Canadian infantry, cavalry and artillery were in splendid fighting form when we inspected them, and nobody need be surprised if they maintain the glorious traditions established at Ypres Vimy Ridge and a dozen other historic battles.

FOE'S FINAL DEFEAT COMING

The whole outlook of the war has been materially altered for the better in the last month. The German retirement should, however, not be accepted as indicating an early termination of the war. Great Britain and her allies have matured such preparations for concerted action on land, sea and air as it is hoped will end in crushing and final defeat for the enemy in the next sixteen or eighteen months.

The work being done by the British Ministry of Information is proving a vital factor in stiffening the allies' morale and in rousing them to fresh efforts on the gigantic scale necessary for a complete triumph of the cause of civilization and humanity.

French Loss Is 1,000,000 Killed

And Another 1,000,000 Have Been Permanently Disabled

In view of the vague guesses which have been made from time to time regarding the size of the French Army it is interesting to have an authoritative statement from an official representative of the French Medical Department, Col. Charles U. Dercle, whi is liason officer in the office of the Surgeon General of the United States Army, that about 1,000,000 of the French Army have been permanently disabled and a little more than 1,000,000 killed in battle.

Early in 1917, there were not including natives of the French colonies, and workmen in war factories, 4,725,000 men and officers in the French Army, of whom about 3,000,000 are at the front.

The western front measures 755 kilometers in length; of this the Belgians hold twenty-five kilometers, the English 165, and the French 565, or three quarters of the line.

This is a wonderful showing for a people who were reported in some news papers to have been a year ago "bled white."

Private Gray Gets Ten Years

His Habeas Corpus Application Was Made Test Case at Ottawa

NIAGARA CAMP, Aug. 12.—The sentence of Pte. George Edward Gray was promulgated in camp here by Major A. C. Lewis, Brigade Major, with the various camp units drawn up in hollow square and Gray in the middie thereof. Gray was given ten years in prison, as in the case of each of the ten conscientious objectors whose sentences were promulgated in camp on Saturday, the sentences by the general court-martial to penal servitude for life having been mercifully lessened to a period of ten years. The promulgation took place just prior to the regular Sunday morning service on the parade ground. Col. J. I McLaren, Camp Commandant, was in command. George Edward Gray is the young farmer from Mathieson, Ont., whose habeas corpus case was made a test case before the Supreme Court a short time ago. He was taken to Toronto to-day, along with the ten who were formally sentenced yesterday to spend the night at Stanley Barracks and be transported to the penitentiary at Kingston Monday morning.

Hun Subs Busy off Atlantic Coast

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Today's reports indicate further activity by German submarines along the Atlantic coast. The British steamer Peniston, 4000 tons, was sunk off Nantucket, presumably by the same sub which destroyed the nine fishing schooners on Saturday. Survivors of the Swedish steamer Sysland, sunk by a sub on Saturday, have also arrived here. There is no news as to the fate of the crew of the Peniston.

Woman Has Five Living Husbands

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadien Press, Limited.

TORONTO, Aug. 12.—Having admitted having had five hunbands, Margaret Lequille was today sentenced to the penitentiary for three years. In 1911 she married Charles Osborne at Chatham, Ont., and later ventures were with Clarence Rankin, Henry Burleigh, of London, Ont., Charles Graham, of Jackson, Mich., and one other man.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—There is extreme confusion in the enemy retreat. Among the prisoners taken are generals, colonels and officers of all other ranks.

Civic Joy Celebration To-Night For Great Allied Victories

There will be a hot time in the old town tonight and a more or less faithful representation of the fate deserved by the Kaiser will be given on the Market Square where his super-Satanic Lese Majeste will be burned in effigy.

At a meeting of the City Council this morning presided over by Mayor Platt, arrangements were completed for the civic joy celebration tonight to fittingly express the jubiliation of the citizens over the recent great allied victories which have changed the whole aspect of the war and are bright with promise of early and decisive triumph for the armies battling for the freedom of the world.

A parade will be held, starting from the Market Square at 7.45, led by the 15th Regimental Band and Pipe Band, and participated in by the Great War Veterans and citizens generally.

Church bells and factory whistles will sound from 7.45 to 8 o'clock.

Citizens owning automobiles are requested to turn out and join in the parade, which will form at Market Square at 7.45 and proceed along Front street to the Upper Bridge, returning to Dundas and thence back to Market Square, where the Kaiser's effigy will be cremated.

Brief speeches will given by Mayor Platt, ex-Mayor Ketcheson, Col. O'Flynn and others.

It is desirable that the parade be made as large and imposing as possible, hence every available motor car should be in line.

Latest Telegraph Briefs

PARIS, Aug. 12.—Roye and Noyon are being bombarded and the Germans cannot hold them much longer.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—Two Royal Air Force officers flew from England to Egypt, two thousand miles, making two stops.

Donald C. MacDonald 165 Heward avenue, Toronto, was drowned near Picton.

Miss Lottie Devins, Woodbridge, was drowned in the lake her companion being saved.

The award in connection with the civic employees' dispute was received with satisfaction by both the city and the men.

Long-Range Gun Silent For Two Days

Allies Are Approaching Its Location in Noyon District

PARIS, Aug. 12.—The long-range cannon with which the Germans have intermittently bombarded Paris for more than four months past, have now been silent for two days. This fact may be explained by the allied advance toward Noyon and Guiscard, 6½ miles north of Noyon, whence the recent firing is said to have been proceeding, as these localities are now endangered by the French forward push.

Hearst Close to Bolo Pasha

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Attorney-General Merton E. Lewis made public to-day a number of affidavits which, he declared, show that William Randolph Hearst had close personal relations at one time with Bolo Pasha who was executed in France as a traitor, and with Count von Bernstorff, formerly German Ambassador to this country.

75,000 Prisoners 1000 Guns Taken

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—Seventy-five thousand prisoners and one thousand guns is the aggregate taken by the Allies in the recent Franco-American and British-Franco offensives. Prisoners are still coming in from the latter.

BUTTER IN HUNGARY TEN DOLLARS A POUND

Zurich, Aug. 12.—Owing to the scarcity of pigs in Vienna the fat supply is quite stopped. The wealthy now may obtain a small quantity at $6 to $7 per pound. ....

The pigs from Hungary are lean owing to bad feeding.

The Arbiter Zeitung complains that bread in Styria is selling at $2 a loaf, butter at $9 and $10 per pound, eggs at 55 to 60 cents each, cherries at $1.20 and apricots at $2 per pound.

Retreat at Montdidier Assumes the Rapidity of a Rout

On the French Front in France, Aug 11.—When the French troops entered Montdidier at 12.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon the Germans had not yet completely evacuated the town, clinging to the outskirts of the place with the help of machine guns, some of which were being served by the officers of the detachments, all the men having been killed or wounded.

The French troops are pursuing their success, and have now progressed far east of Montdidier, gathering up along the route thousands of prisoners, together with enemy cannon and machine guns. Harassed by the French cavalry, which had pushed far ahead, the Germans were thrown into great disorder as they sought to fall back. In the wake of the cavalry came armored cars with automatic guns, which scattered terror and destruction among the retreating foe. The enemy was engaged in a desperate effort along the roads to the rear, crowded with masses of men and material, seking to disengage himself from the French pursuit.

Farther south the French army, on the right continued equal pressure, taking the heights of Boulogne-la-Grasse. At the end of the day yesterday the French held the front of Orvillers, Boulogne-la-Grasse, La-Poste, Conchy-les-Pots, La Neuville, Piermont, Le Plessier and Chevrincourt.

The French artillery has under its fire important enemy concentrations of men and material retreating near Noyon and Guiscard.

Everything tends to confirm the impression that a great victory has been won.

COULD NOT STOP FRENCH

PARIS, Aug. 10.—A supplementary statement issued by the War Ministry yesterday concerning Thursday's fighting says:

"The Germans succeeded at some points in temporarily staying our advance, defending themselves energetically, particularly between Morisel and Moreuil, which they defended bitterly with machine guns. We took Morisel by storm. The battle was also stubborn in oreuil but already our troops have advanced north of Moreuil to a point north-east of the wood which commands the village while an other group had crossed the Avre south of the town. The Germans were obliged to withdraw.

"With irresistable courage, our soldiers climbed the hills east of the Avre.

"Meanwhile our charging cars, crossing the river upon bridges hastily thrown over the stream and proceeding up the hills, joined and assisted the infantry."

HOW MRS. BOYD AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well.

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. MARIE BOYD, 1421 5th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

Sometimes there are serious conditions where a hospital operation is the only alternative, but on the other hand so many women have been cured by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after doctors have said that an operation was necessary—every woman who wants to avoid an operation should give it a fair trial before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

If complications exist, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of many years experience is at your service.

The Results Have Astonished Him

McKenna Had Rheumatism So Bad Muscles Felt Like They Were Tied in Knots

"The results I have gotten from Tanlac have really astonished me," said Frank J. McKenna, a well known employe of the Verral Storage Company, living at 524 Dupont street, Toronto, recently.

"It has relieved me entirely," he continued, "of rheumatism and kidney derangements which I have suffered from for several years, causing me untold misery. The rheumatism would often catch me in the left hip and extend on down, and when these attacks struck me my leg was simply useless to me, and I could hardly stand the pain. After the pain left my muscles would feel sore like they had been tied in knots. My kidneys bothered me a great deal and I always had a pain across the small of my back which was so severe at times I couldn't straighten up or get out of my chair when sitting down. When I stooped over to lift anything my back felt like it would break and when I worked it hurt me so bad I thought I would be compelled to give up and go home. Many a night I couldn't turn over in bed or get a wink of sleep and nobody, except those who have suffered the same way, knows what I had to go through with. I was getting all rundown and all my strength and energy seemed to be leaving me.

"My wife, who had taken Tanlac, insisted on me trying it and so I bought a bottle to please her, not that I expected much good from it. I have been useing it about three weeks now and, as I said, the results have been astonishing. My kidneys seem to be in fine shape and the pain has disappeared from my back entirely. The rheumatism has also left me and if you could see me helping to lift bales of wool weighing around four hundred pounds all day you wouldn't think I even had anything the matter with me. I never thought I would give a testimonial for a medicine, but Tanlac has done me so much good that I feel it my duty to tell others about it."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

Police Notes

A horse and buggy belonging to Ernest Pope of Gilbert Street, city, were taken from the yard of the Crystal Hotel Saturday night. Whoever commandeered the outfit kept it until Sunday evening when the horse was found in the yard adjoining the Walton sash and door factory.

The police raided the living apartments of Michael Maraskas, opposite the Town Hall on Front street, Saturday night and discovered several bottles of whisky hidden in a coal bin. A charge was laid against Maraskas, who is a Greek restaurant keeper, for a violation of the Ontario Temperance Act, and he gave bonds for appearance when called upon.

Complaints have been made to Chief of Police Newton of boys bathing at Zwick's Island without suits. Unless the practice is stopped prosecution will follow.

For France!

Someone has related a graphic story of a conversation between a group of soldiers of the allied countries. They had met, somewhere in the region of battles, and "pal'd on." And so a lusty Scotchman put the query: "Boy, what are you fighting for? Do you know?"

"For outraged Belgium!" an Englishman cried.

"For the British Empire," shouted a Canadian.

"For freedom and democracy," said an American.

The Frenchman stood silent. Finally they pressed him. "Tell us, what are you fighting for?" they insisted.

He stooped down and scooped up a little of the earth at his feet. Raising it to his lips he kissed it reverently—"For France!" he said.

Great In the Air.

"He's no good on earth," we used to say,
But he volunteered and he sailed away;
And when we heard of the lad again
He'd downed his eleventh German plane.

Back From the Dead.

Howard G. Leighton, mentioned in a Canadian casualty list as having died on a battlefield in France, startled his sister, Mrs. W. C. Jones, by appearing at her home in Pembroke, Mass., the other day.

"I thought you were dead," was the sister's greeting.

"I thought so myself," the soldier replied.

Leighton, who enlisted at Boston with a Canadian regiment, said he was pronounced dead, and the body ordered removed for burial. As he was being taken away stretcher-bearers noticed signs of life, he said, and took him to a hospital, where he recovered. Notice of his death was conveyed to his family in March.

A Mysterious Disappearance Solved

By WILLIAM CHANDLER

Some workmen tearing down a building in Paris, on reducing the level of a compartment, closet or something of the kind about big enough for one to stand in upright, came upon a human head. There was hair on it, but not much. It was more than a skull, yet not exactly a head. As the men went on lowering the walls they revealed a female figure in the clothing of a man, which crumbled as they proceeded downward.

The figure faced an iron door behind wainscoting. A panel was made, or, rather, had been made, to slide sideward, and the door behind it opened inward, leaving sufficient room for the figure to get into the closet and shut the door. There was a latch on the outside. The panel had originally been moved by weights and locked with a secret spring. But both door and panel had been walled up a long while before, and their existence had become unknown.

The master workman sent word of the find to the owner of the building, asking for instructions as to what to do in the matter. The owner came, accompanied by a gentleman wearing the button of the Legion of Honor, and the latter examined both the body and its incasement carefully. He was a professional antiquarian. He advised that the body be buried and began a search for the reason of its having occupied for so long the position in which it was found. In time he published in a Paris magazine the result of his investigations, the following being an abbreviation of a long story:—

The building in which the body was found dated back to the reign of Louis XI. In this reign the king increased his power at the expense of the nobles, and the royal authority became absolute. His successors maintained what he had gained, and from that time down to the beginning of the reign of Louis XVI. the government was one of tyranny and intrigue.

In the reign of Louis XIII. plot and counterplot reached their height. The king was a weakling, and Cardinal Richelieu governed virtually in his stead. There were conspiracies against the king, the cardinal and every one connected with the court. At this time the building was occupied by the Marquis de Fontayne, a nobleman who was mixed up with these feuds and joined a coalition consisting of the king's brother and other persons to seize the government. Mlle. Louise de Fontayne, the marquis' daughter, was in love with Rissioli, one of those favorites Catherine de' Medici had brought with her from Italy.

Now, this Rissioli was as black hearted a villain as ever lived. Being implicated in that conspiracy which was the most formidable of all the plots against the king, when it was discovered his name was given to the prime minister as one who must be taken at all hazards. Knowing his influence with Mlle. de Fontayne, he fled to her house and begged her to conceal him.

Louise, who was a noble character, proposed that they exchange clothing. While she was being taken away in his stead he might escape as herself, and upon her identity being discovered she could rely on the influence of her father to save her from punishment for aiding and abetting the escape of one of the king's enemies. Rissioli acceded to this, and the exchange was made.

It was not long after this that the main door of the chateau was thrown open and a party of armed men burst in, seeking the Italian. It was plain that if they found him they would kill him on sight. He had expected this and had realized that whosoever they found personating him would be stabbed to death, but was too contemptible to decline to permit Louise taking this risk. Hearing the clamor below for his blood, he darted away, leaving Louise to her fate.

Louise, realizing that if found in Rissioli's clothes and mistaken for him she would be killed, ran to a secret closet of which she knew and intended for a place of concealment in case of danger. Having removed the panel and opened the door, she stepped into the closet, shutting both behind her.

Rissioli escaped to Italy and was never again seen in Paris. He being the only person with Mlle. de Fontayne when the party came for him and not knowing where she had gone, there was nobody in the secret of her hiding place. After the commotion she was missed. Day after day passed and she did not appear. Indeed, though every effort was made to find her it was unsuccessful.

The antiquary found records of this disappearance of Louise de Fontayne occurring at the time of the discovery of the conspiracy against the king. He also found a statement made by Rissioli giving an account of his being with Louise up to the time the men broke into the house and he and she darted away in different directions. This enabled the searcher of the story to tell it up to that moment.

A careful investigation was made of the apparatus for opening the doors of the closet with a view to determining why the imprisoned girl could not release herself, but so old and decayed were the apparatus and locks that it was impossible to tell why they had not worked. Only a hypothetical solution could be given. The iron door was found closed and locked. For some reason it could not be unlocked, but as to why there was no evidence.

Aged Man Killed At Ry' Crossing

PETERBOROUGH, Aug. 10.—John Morrison, aged 9 , whose home was with his son, John Morrison, 281 Park street, was fatally hurt at the Charlotte street crossing of the Grand Trunk, when he was struck by the buffer beam of the engine hauling the Toronto train, which was coming into the station.

Mr. Morrison was hurried to Nicholls Hospital, where he died a few hours later.

Mr. Morrison was returning home after a trip up town when the accident happened. He had passed the gates, which were down, and did not hear the warning given by the gateman of the train's approach, his hearing being defective. He fell to the pavement in an unconscious condition.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—All bridges across the Somme between Peronne and Ham have been destroyed by allied aviators. The Germans are now attempting to throw temporary bridges across the stream.

"A CROWN OF SHAME"

By FLORENCE MARRYAT

Author of "The Poison of Asps," A Star and a Heart," "Written in Fire," etc.

CHAPTER XXII.—Continued

"I have no pity," he answered, in a low voice and I shall have none. You've left me only one feeling with regard to you—determination to carry out my revenge. When I think of it, I feel as if I had the strength of ten thousand devils in me, and could tear these walls asunder with my bare hands and set myself free, only to be revenged on you."

"Time's up," called the warder from outside the door.

"Henri, will you not speak one word to me?—give me one look before I go?" wailed Maraquita.

He advanced upon her with the eyes of a demoniac.

'Speak to you? Look at you?" he exclaimed. "What have I to say to you that I have not already said? Leave this cell, as you value a few more days' existence, or I shall tear you to pieces where you stand."

And at the sight of his up lifted hands and glowering eyes, Maraquita gave a low cry, and hastened through the open doorway.

"Not a very pleasant interview, I guess," observed the warder, as Quita walked down the stone passage again, sobbing as if her heart would break, and clinging to Rosita's arm. "I told you you'd better not see him. He's more mad than sane, and I was half afraid he might do you some harm."

"Is there," demanded Maraquita, as soon as she could command her voice sufficiently to speak, "is there any chance of his being able to escape from prison?"

The gaoler laughed.

"Escape?? Well, no. I wouldn't set my heart on that, if I was you, miss. 'Twould take a better man than he—though he's a powerful fellow, too—to break through these walls, when he's once inside them. He'll never leave them again, unless it's by the Governor's orders—you may take your oath on that."

At Rosita's house, Jessica received her weeping young mistress again, and conducted her safely back to her apartments but it was long before Maraquita could make up her mind whether she should speak to Sir Russell on the subject of De Courcelles or not. Some suspicion might attach to her doing so, though, she trusted to her native cuunning to make a good story of it. But if she said nothing and the court took a lenient view of the part he maintained in the mutiny, Henri de Courcelles might be set at large again, and accomplish his wicked designs on her life. The love of living, so strong in every human breast, finally outweighed all other considerations, and Maraquita, after a night of painful deliberation, asked Jessica to summon Sir Russell to her side

The Governor, unused to such amenities on the part of his bride, came with alarcity, and full of tender solicitude for the apprehensian and terror she had passed through.

"You must try and dismiss it all from your mind now, my darling, for the danger is really past. We try the mutineers to-day, and I have very little doubt of the sentence which will be passed upon them."

"There is one—the man who spoke to me the other night," said Maraquita, trembling; "what will they do to him?"

The Governor frowned.

'You mean the ringleader? I cannot tell; but if I had to decide, I should say that hanging was too good for him. Why do you ask, my dear? Surely you are not interested in his fate."

"Oh, no, no! I am afraid of him," replied his wife. "He was papa's overseers once, and he—he—presumed to fall in love with me; and because—because I married you instead, he has sworn to kill me; and he will, Sir Russell, I am sure he will, if they let him go free!"

"He shall not go free!" exclaimed her husband indignantly. "Such outrages from the half-caste population against European settlers are not to be tolerated. I am glad you have told me this, Quita; it will go greatly against him, if the court should be disposed to show him any favor."

"Oh, do send him away—get rid of him at all risks. He frightens me. I shall die of fear," she whispered, clinging to Sir Russell's arm.

"He shall never frigthen you again, my darling. I will take care of that," replied the Governor decidedly, as he pressed her to him. But as he was embracing her, Jessica entered the bedroom, with an official paper.

"Orderly from Fort bring for Governor," she ejaculated.

Sir Russell glanced over the contents.

"Good heavens!" he cried, "he has escaped us!"

"Who—who?" demanded Maraquita.

"The very man you were speaking of—Henri de Courcelles. He has broken, by some miraculous means, out of his prison cell, and is missing. I must order out the mounted police at once to follow him. Don't be afraid Maraquita. It is impossible that he can escape the vigilance of the law, in such a little place as San Diego."

"He will—he will!" exclaimed the unhappy girl, as her husband rushed out of the room. "He will live, as he said to murder me."

And with that she fell back unconscious on her pillows.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The account of the attempted massacre at Government House reached Lizzie through Mr. Courtney; but he did not tell her that Henri de Courcelles had been arrested as one of the butineers. He knew that she had regarded his late overseer with affection, and he wanted to spare her the pain of the suspense of learning his fate. It would be time enough, he thought, for her to mourn when her friend had been tried and condemned. But his kind consideration was wasted, for the news came to her by means of the yellow girl, Rosa, who burst into her presence on the day of De Courcelles' escape from the Fort prison, brimfull of the intelligence.

"Oh, Missy Liz! dar's grand news come from Government House. De Fort prison doors is bust open, and dey's all gone—ebbery one of dem mutineers, and Massa Courcelles, he gone wid them."

"Monsieur de Courcelles?" exclaimed Lizzie, hardly bielleving her ears. "What are you talking of, Rosa?"

"Jes' God's truth Missy Liz. Massa Courcelles de ringleader ob all de mutiny, dat's what William Hall, dat hab jes' come from de Fort, say; and dey take him prisoner ob Tuesday night, and put him in cell, and dis morning he was to be tried by martial; but he is clean gone, and de mounted police am scouring San Diego for him."

"De Courcelles amongst the rebels!" repeated Lizzie. "This, then, is what he meant by his revenge. Oh, that it had been in my power to save him from falling so low!"

"But dat ain't all, Missy Liz; dere's more to come. William Hall say de police catch sight of Massa Courcelles ober de gully, close by Shanty Hill, and he 'scape them again, and run straight for de Alligator Swamp."

"He did not enter it?" cried Lizzie, turning pale.

"Oh, didn't he though? De police gallop after him, and he run same like deer, and jump de fences, and go squash right in de swamp, where de hosses couldn't follow him, 'cause of de morass. And William say when Massa Courcelles get on edge of swamp, he turn and wave his hand and hollo and dive in bushes. And den de police see no more of him: but dey is waiting dere now, horses and all, till he come out again. But Massa Courcelles nebber come out again, Missy Liz. Dat what all de niggers say; alligator and swamp take him pretty quick, and got him now, maybe, de bad fellow!"

Lizzie did not answer her chattering handmaid, except by asking.—

"What time is it, Rosa?"

"Jess' gone tree, Missy Liz."

"And when did this happen? I mean when did the police lose sight of Monsieur de Courcelles in the Alligator Swamp?"

"Eleben o'clock, Missy."

"Four. hours," said Lizzie to herself. "God help him! What can I do?"

She began turning over the contents of a medicine chest as she thought thus, and pouring the liquid from one bottle into the other, in an apparently mechanical manner.

"Rosa!" she said suddenly, turning to her open-eyed attendant, "I am going out presently, and I may be detained longer than I anticipate. Take great care of the baby whilst I am away, and put her to sleep in your own room tonight. Do you understand me?"

"Yes, yes, Missy Liz."

She watched her mistress array herself in her walking things, and take down a broad sombrero hat, and along cloak, which had belonged to her father, from the cupboard where they hung, and place brandy and a bottle of quinine, and strong-smelling salts and camphor in the basket she hung upon her arm. These proceedings only excited Rosa's curiosity; but when Lizzie went on to load a revolver and place it in her belt, and take a huge staff in her hand, the yellow girl could contain herself no longer, but cried out,—

"Oh, Missy Liz, Missy Liz! what are you going to do with all dem things?"

"Dare I trust you?" said Lizzie, turning her grave, pale face toward her. "Will you be faithful and keep my secret if I tell you what I am going to do?"

VIVIAN MARTIN IN "VIVIETTE"

Without a doubt two of the best pictures that have been seen at Griffin's in a long time will be shown to-night to Wednesday. The first will be Vivian Martin in a fine picture called "Viviette" taken from the book of the same name, and the picture is said to be better than the book. A fine cast of players support Miss Martin and she is a favorite in this city no doubt her many admirers will be on hand to give her a good reception the usual high standard of settings that always are shown in Martin Pictures will be used in "Viviette."

Another good picture is "Missing" taken from the novel of the same name by Mrs. Humphrey Ward written about an incident that happened in this present war and concerns a young woman who loves an army officer not overburdened with goods of this world a scheming sister who is secretly planing to have the young woman wed a rich acquaintance presumming that by such marriage she will be able to profit by it. The young woman does the unexpected and marries the young officer before the sister knows of it. In due course of time the young officer is called up for service and has to leave his wife who has taken the sister to live with her. The officer is wounded and through shell shock for a time loses his memory. From this point on the author has woven a very tensley interesting story that is but one happening in this war of wonderful happenings how he is brought back to life after being very near to the valley of the shadow is vividly brought out in this fine picture "Missing."

There will be the usual chapter of the "Eagle's Eye" serial dealing among the children of the States by the German spies.

At the Palace "Her Good Name" is the title of the special picture with a new chapter of the serial "The Woman in the Web" and other photoplays

"Civilization" a wonderful picture said to be greater tha the "Birth of a Nation" is coming soon.

PERVERTED CHRISTIANITY.

How German Kultur has distorted the ideas of God and Christianity appears in a Corpus Christi day article signed by Pastor Edouard Foick one of the most noted "divines" in the German Empire. It was published in the Berlin Morganposte. The words of the pastor to his flock give further proof of what we already know of how the whole nation, including the Church, is saturated with the brutality and the hypocrisy of Kaiserism. This is what Pastor Foick says:

> The spirit of Pentecost is the spirit of action, and since the first Pentecostal day that dawned over the hills and valleys of Judea nineteen hundred years ago, no people on earth have more brilliantly fulfilled this divine doctrine than the German.
> It was the inventive German spirit, the spirit of seclusion and holy concentration, that built for itself the slender airship which at length fulfilled the ideal dream of humanity.
> It created the marvel of the U-boat, which defies all the cunning counter measures of the enemy, and day by day breaks off piece after piece of England's world prestige.
> It brought forth that stupendous piece of artillery whose fire reaches to the ethereal regions of the atmospheric ocean and carries death and devastation across a distance of 70 miles into the ranks of the foe.
> The German spirit creates order there where the ill-directed impulse towards so-called "freedom" has crushed into fragments all that is decent and orderly, and has turned everyday life into chaos.
> In this way the German spirit, the spirit of Pentecost, which is the spirit of action, comes as a blessing also to other nations besides our own, because it is the one true representation of the force of Christianity.

When ministers of the Gospel of Jesus Christ are so hypnotized by the shadow of the Kaiser's supposed greatness that they embrace and defend the slimy doctrine of Kultur which they seek to glorify, as the above quotation shows, it is plainly evident that Germany has a long and bitter road to travel before even partial purification will come. There can be no peace by understanding with a nation which refuses to understand.

FOCH AND MALVY.

The baton which Marshal Foch carries today is more than a well earned honor from a country justly proud; it is the seal of the Allied world's confidence in its generalissimo, says the Montreal Star.

By a long and cruel road the Allies came to the unity of command which was obviously essential to success in such a far-flung war. There were many prejudices, many jealousies, much insularity to override. As late as a couple of months ago, a powerful element of British public opinion still resented and distrusted the new departure. But the second victory of the Marne has changed all that. Foch has made good. He takes rank today with the great generals of history and holds the confidence and pride of the democratic world.

The cables which brought the news of this reward for loyal service brought word which shows that France can be stern as well as grateful. Louis J. Malvy, minister of the cabinet under three premiers and one of the foremost political figures in France, retires today into exile and dishonor. It matters not whether it was greed, or fear ,or conceit that led Malvy unto the forbidden valley, where dwell spies and traitors and the parasites who trade there for gold.' There are no places for the weaklings on the top rungs of the ladder.

The shouts of praise and the noise of cheering that ring round the world today carry a deep meaning. They are a faint echo of a lasting appreciation of the strong men who in the government at home and on the field of battle, have delivered France from the clogging mires of defeatism and national disgrace and set her feet on the firm ground that leads to honor and ultimate victory.

Clemenceau, Foch, Petain and Mangin are the embodiment of the spirit of France, strong, resolute, loyal and daring. Bolo, Malvy, Duval and Almereyda were a cancerous growth that threatened to poison the whole body politic.

The loyal and the strong conquer; the traitors perish.

The Poet's Corner

TODAY.

The following poem has appeared in newspapers in every part of the world where English is spoken and has been credited to various authors. The Literary Digest now gives "the credit to the poet to whom the credit belongs"—Douglas Malloch.

Sure, this world is full of trouble—
I ain't said it ain't.
Lord! I've had enough an' double
Reason for complaint.
Rain an' storm have come to fret me,
Skies were often gray;
Thorns an' brambles have beset me,
On the road—but say,
Ain't it fine today?

What's the use of always weepin',
Making trouble last?
What's the use of always keepin'
Thinkin' of the past?
Each must have his tribulation,
Water with his wine,
Life, it ain't no celebration
Trouble? I've had mine—
But today is fine!

It's today that I am livin',
Not a month ago,
Havin' losin', takin', givin',
As time wills it so,
Yesterday a cloud of sorrow
Fell across the way,
It may rain again tomorrow,
It may rain—but, say,
Ain't it fine today?

MEN AND WOMEN.

Town Topics.

Men come and go upon this little ball,
Some are worth while and others not at all.
And women love them, often loving best
The meanest one, and scorning all the rest.

The women come, and while on earth they stay,
They all make good, in some especial way,
One is a saint who saves a man his pelf
So he can spend it all upon himself.

Another woman picks the "crooked stick"
And makes him straighter, through some gentle trick.
While yet another, wicked as she can be
Will shame a scamp into some decency.

Men come and go and leave no special trace,
But women come and fix things for the race.
Both good and bad, no matter what their plan,
It all redounds to this—the good of the man.

It is gratifying to notice that only one London newspaper regards the Lansdowne letter with favor, and that the newspaper is the Daily News, the leading exponent of British pacifism, which protested against Britain's entrance into the war and argued that it would pay the nation far better to keep out of the ruck and sell munitions to the belligerents.

Editors on Visit To Grand Fleet

See Gigantic Power of Navy—Subs Larger Than Any of Germany

LONDON, Aug. 10.—J. S. Douglas of The Toronto Mail and Empire, says Canadian newspaper men have received a new and overwhelming sense of the power of England on the seven seas as a result of the visit to the Grand Fleet. The most vivid pen cannot adequately describe the magnificent sight of the Grand Fleet at anchor, he said.

Describing the visit of the Canadian press delegates to the Grand Fleet, Mr. Givens of The Kingston Standard says they were permitted to make a first-class study of the wonderful submarines and destroyers recently added to the fleet, which are, so to speak, the last word in naval architecture and construction.

By a happy coincidence, just as the Canadian editors came from lunch they were given a rare and unexpected treat, when, as though it had been specially arranged for their benefit, they saw a division of battleships, a divison of destroyers and a division of light cruisers in full battle line, headed out for sea.

Aimed at Germany

"As we saw these mighty ships depart quietly and unostentatiously," said Mr Givens, "it seemed to some of us that they were like great darts aimed straight at the heart of Germany, and that here in truth was a tireless and ever-vigilent force that would never rest until the foul deeds of German on the seas had been avenged and the world finally rid of their accursed menace. It was a striking exemplication of the truth of the saying that 'the navy never sleeps.'

"Then followed our visit to the submaries and destroyers—submarines larger and better and more up to date than Germany possesses. Destroyers so new that their paint seems yet fresh, and armed with great guns which, like the men who man them, are ready on the instant to do their bit. It was a novel and instructive experience for the members of the party.

"In the glorious display of British naval strength which so amazed us Canadians and so convinced us anew of Britannia's might, and her growing might on the seas, American battleships share, as the Star Spangled flag flies here together with the Meteor Flag of England.

"Most of the newspaper men lunched on one of the ships, while one section accepted the hospitality of the Admiral at his residence."

LARGEST BARNS IN ESSEX BURNED

WINDSOR, Aug. 10.—Fire caused by a spark from a thrashing engine or from a passing locomotive, destroyed the barns and crops of Jeremiah Collins of Maidstone Crossing twelve miles east of here early this morning. The barns the largest in the county, contained some two thousand bushels of wheat, all of which will be a total loss. The damage is placed at approximately $10,000.

Why They Go Back

When I joined the army I was filled with an overwhelming curiosity as to what war was like, also a few impulses which might be put down as patriotic—there was a fight going on and I stumbled on to some excuse for getting into it.

Well, my curiosity is more than satisfied. The wonderlust has all been stamped out of my system, and my patriotic impulses are entirely without fireworks. I've been in the fight and have been rather badly hurt, but not beaten, for I want to get back into it.

The desire to go back is a funny things. Ask any of the boys here if they want to go back to France, and both hands will go up in horror—"No, no!" As for volunteering, far be it from them—"a man would be crazy to go back." Yet the week I landed here (at base for convalescents) several "casualties" who were taken off a draft, to be replaced by men who had not been over, put up an awful howl. One day a call was made for twenty-two "casualties" who would be willing to go back; over a hundred volunteered, and those who were picked were accused of having some sort of pull.

Then an order came that no more casualties were to go back for a while, and the order was freely quoted as "the unjust manner in which the army is run."

A man, if he has volunteered to go back, will deny it most indignantly, even when confronted with undeniable proofs. I wonder why it is? I don't think anybody can explain it. The boys are "fed up," there is no doubt about that. The mud, the wet, the cold, monotonous food, shell fire and all that sort of thing, are enough to break any man's heart. The greatest ambition of any Canadian Tommy is to get a nice little "Blighty"—one of those kind like a small piece of shrapnel in the foot or in the knee, a nice wound clean through the shoulder — one of those that don't hurt much and takes a long time to heal. Think of it!—two or three months sleeping in a soft bed with a pretty nurse to bring you all sorts of good things—lots of good eats. A hospital is looked upon as a place where a man gets "eats" every day —of the kind that most people have only on Thanksgiving, Christmas, or New Year's. Then, after that, ten days' pass; ten days of unadultered liberty with plenty of money. Ten days of associating with "white people" once more and living as a human being once again; then, perhaps, if one is lucky, a nice "Bombproof" at the base or in the pay or records office. That's the highest ambition of the man in the front line, that is, if you believe what he says.

Well, he realizes this ambition—a nice Blighty, or perhaps it was a bad one — but anyway he made it and lived. There was the nice soft bed, pyjamas and sheets. The grub—well, it wasn't so bad—anyway, he wasn't hungry. There was the little nurse—"Gee, she was a peach!" Then the ten days' pass, then back to the base for a "bombproof"—and along comes a chap that was his pal down in the Somme or up in front of Vimy or at Passchendaele. He made Blighty in the June 3rd scrap, you know.

They fight it all over again. "Remember that night we were bringing up rations and got lost and wandered into Heinzie's front line?"

"Bet your life! I'll never forget it. What became of old Shorty Foster? He was along that night."

"He's still there—got three stripes now, the same old Shorty, though. Remember the night we went up to Hersin — wasn't that a lark of a time?" And so on through night after night.

Before long the dull routine at the base begins to pall. Shining brass and doing parades doesn't conform to his ideas of what should be. He begins to think of those long trips in a quiet part of the line, where he didn't shave for twenty days; he remembers that "over there is a certain officer who, instead of waving commands of "Form fours; right, quick march!" says, "Let's go!" He remembers another officer whom he knows as "Windy" instead of "Sir." He does not forget that shellfire that puts the fear of God into the bravest man; but that doesn't happen every day. The uppermost thought is of that good fellowship and freedom from petty discipline that exists "over there." There is also a thrill about a "big scrap" that no man yet has been able to describe. Yet the misery, the cold, the mud, the wet, and the shellfire are all there; but the man whose blood was red enough to go out there of his own free will—that man, away down in his heart, wants to go back and yet he will deny it to the last minute. Is it false modesty, or what?

The man who has been out there knows the big chance he is taking with his life. He knows the exact proportion of chance he has — it is one in five of being wounded, and one in ten of being killed. Often it is a rotten death. He knows also that the longer he has been out there, the poorer his chances of getting back.

But luck is a funny thing. According to all logic, all common sense and the ordinary idea of things, he is absolutely crazy to go back, unless forced to go. He is afraid some will say that he is "battle mad," yet give him the chance, and back into it he goes.

I have a bombproof here at the base, sorting mail and hunting up missing soldiers' addresses, but I've volunteered for motor machine gun work and I'm going back if the M. O. will let me.—Letter from soldier of the 6th Canadian M. G. Co., Canadian M. G. Base, Seaford, Sussex Co., England.

Hon. N. W. Rowell, President of the Privy Council, will address his constituents on Wednesday and Thursday when he will deal with aspects of the war.

VICTORY BOOSTS STOCKS

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—The New York Evening Sun's financial review to-day says:

Spectacular military events on the front in Picardy, seeming to reveal surprising weaknesses in the enemy line the recapture of Montdidier at the tip of the Amiens salient and an extreme advance of fifteen miles by the British and French found direct reflection in to-day's stock market, which was unwontedly animated for a Saturday session. The entire list responded readily to the gratifying new developments.

U. S. Steel crossed 112 in the first hour. The shipping and chemical shares were in good demand. The tobacco group made a favorable showing and some individual stocks were briskley bid up. Trading subsided to some extent in the second hour, but prices made little material change from the top levis.

CAN'T BE OVERESTIMATED

London, Aug. 10.—The general feeling here is that the importance of the successful new battle cannot be over estimated. It is regarded as the turning point of the year's campaign and perhaps even the turning point of the whole war.

It was only a month ago that all the talk of the British military critics was whether the allies could hold on in the face of the great German offensive, which the German people had been told was to finish the war. The initiative has now been taken from the enemy and within the month the allies have engaged in two important battles with conspicuous success.

APPRECIATION

is a term we feel permitted to use, as being descriptive of the state of mind of many of our CUSTOMERS who have taken advantage of OUR SUMMER FUR PRICES. The response to our offer of these special PRICES for summer work, has been gratifying to us, and no doubt means some lightening of our HEAVY FALL burden. By no means are we deploring our HEAVY FALL TRADE, far from it; but it is with a view to educating the PUBLIC to the MUTUAL advantages of preparing well ahead of winter to make void its many terrors, by having your FURS attended to NOW. LOW PRICES, FREE STORAGE, FURS ALL READY WHEN NEEDED, are to your advantage. It will be easily seen that IF our customers do this, we shall be relieved of many an all-night session in the fall. Thus, by equalizing our working days it would be to our advantage; hence these offers of LOW PRICES

Junior Examinations For Matriculation

Honor Results and Pass Lists Announced by Education Department

The results of the examinations for honor junior matriculation in this district are given below. The standing obtained in each subject is indicated after a candidate's name—I., indicating first-class honors; II., second-class honors, and III., third-class honors, respectively.

The statement of standing of all candidates will be mailed in the course of a few days to the principals or inspectors. In the case of those who wrote at the University of Toronto, their statements will be sent to the registrar of that institution. Candidates should apply to these parties for further information.

The Man With The Hoe

Hoeing is a severe strain on the back. It calls into play muscles not used much in lifting or in other kinds of farm work.

If you have a weak back you cannot stand much hoeing unless you use Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to set the kidneys right and remove the cause of weakness and lameness of the back. Just try one pill a dose at bed time and see how much better you will feel.

FIRE AT CODRINGTON

COBOURG, Aug. 10.—Fire, caused by a coal oil stove, destroyed Mr. A Van Blaricom's house at Codringotn. The family were all absent at the time excepting the two daughters. The flames caught in the window curtains and spread so rapidly that by the time help arrived it was impossible to save teh house. Most of the household effects and clothing were saved.

TAKING A HOLIDAY.

Several of the local factories are observing today as a holiday in preference to the mid-week civic holiday.

REPAIRING BRIDGES.

The Bridge and Building Department of the C. N. R. are busy making repairs to bridges in this vicinity with a large staff of workmen who make their headquarters in boarding care in the local freight yard.

GREETINGS FROM "OVER THERE"

Gunner W. C. Riggs, a former employee, sends greetings from "Over There," to The Intelligencer, and states that he is fully restored to health. He is gardener to one of the O. C.'s, but is looking forward to marching into Berlin when the time comes.

"GED-DAP!" "WHOA!"

Women are stepping into the place of men and making good in many industries, and this morning a woman was observed driving an ice wagon thus releasing a man for the army food production or munition work.

CELEBRATED AT BRANTFORD.

Brantford celebrated the recent victories of the Allies Saturday evening with an automobile parade headed by the band. The streets were gaily decorated with flags and bunting and enthusiasm ran high. The parade terminated in the park where the program finished with a dance.

SHIPMENT FOR OVERSEAS

The Myrehall Red Cross met at the home of Mr. Fred Coulter on August 8th, nineteen members being present. They sent the following to Foxboro: 19 pairs of socks, 15 day shirts 18 suits of pyjamas, 2 quilts, $$41.60 proceeds of social.

LOOKING FOR TAXI DRIVER

That on Friday last Major Sharp the missing Kingston officer, was driven from the Kingston armouries to the outer station by a Kingston taxi driver is the latest clue that special officers working on the case have secured, and they are working on it. The detectives are confident that Major Sharp is alive and put no faith whatever in the suicide theory.

AVIATOR LOST NEAR MURVALE

Friday afternoon an aviator from Camp Mohawk lost his bearings near Murvale station and landed safely in a field owned by Mr. John Fowler. He had been in the air from four o'clock Friday morning and was trying to make his way to Kingston. After he had secured his bearing he took the air without difficulty, and soon was lost in the distance.

KIDDIES IN A CAR.

Five little children living in a box car and enjoying it, too, is the strange sight to be witnessed from the local C. N. R. depot. The wife of the foreman of the bridge gang is spending the summer with her husband on the work and has a freight car nicely furnished with all the comforts of home where the five youngsters have all kinds of fun, but spend most of their time, when not picking berries, alongside the track, in the cook's car where some wonderful things to eat are made. The kiddies in the car range from about five to ten years of age.

AIRMEN LOCKED TOGETHER

A flying officer's escape and another's death in collision at a height of about 700 feet were described at an inquest in England. A brother officer of Lieut. Owen Hewitt Dampier Bennett, who was killed, said the latter was flying between 300 and 400 feet over him when he suddenly fell. Witness tried to get out of his way, but had not sufficient speed. The nose of his aeroplane jammed in the under carriage of Lieut. Bennett's machine and they locked together. Both machines rolled over and over for 300 feet, when witness' machine broke adrift and smashed the lower planes of the other machine, which crashed to the ground. Witness came out of the lock in a dive and then planed down. A verdict of accidental death was returned.

CHILDREN AT THE MOVIES

An agent of the Children's Aid Society writes to the Head Office and asks: "Has there been any relaxation in the rule of prohibiting children under fifteen years of age from attending the picture play houses unless accompanied by a parent or adult? Dozens of these children are at these performances every night, and the Chief of Police and others say that the law is not expected to be carried out." The question was referred to the Provincial Inspector, having the direction of this law, and he replies, "Am very much surprised to learn that any Police Officer looks upon this regulation as a dead letter. The Act contemplates that the Municipal Police shall enforce the Act and the Council should see that men are appointed to this position that are competent and willing to carry out the various duties connected therewith."

G. T. R. BASEBALL

A baseball match will be played this evening on the Pine Street School ground, beginning at 6.45 between the Grand Trunk shop and the G. T. R. office staff. This is the first of a local series which will be played.

SMUGGLING PREVALENT.

Mrs. White, Customs detective, is at Gananoque for a few weeks to look into smuggling there. Gananoque is opposite Clayton, N.Y., and it is said that a great deal of goods enter there without payment of duty, motor boats being used to transport from the United States Express offices at places in the Thousand Island region.

KINGSTON COLONEL CHIEF EXAMINER.

Lieut.-Col. W. G. Anglin has received the appointment of Chief Medical Examiner for the Kingston district for Board of Pension Commissioners. He served in Egypt with the Queen's University Hospital and owing to total physical disability was discharged and pensioned.

HIGHER BRIDGE TOLLS.

Mrs. (Dr.) Sprague and Miss Sutherland, of Toronto, President and Secretary of the Belleville and Prince Edward Bridge company are in the city in connection with the bridge business and the increase of tolls sanctioned by the government which comes into effect on August 23. The increases will average fifty per cent.

FAIL TO FIND MAJOR SHARP

Grappling for the body of Major W. I. S. Sharp, supposed to be drowned near Kingston Junction, was continued on Friday and Saturday, and dynamite was again used, but the searchers failed to locate the missing officer. Lieut. Charles Askwith is in charge of the search. The work of searching for Major Sharp will be carried on energetically and every clue will be followed to ascertain if he is dead or alive.

ON ACTIVE SERVICE

Captain Ketterson, who went over with the 80th Battalion as Chaplain, has returned to Canada for recuperation after an arduous time in France. He has been nineteen months at the front and for about eighteen months was Senior Chaplain of a Western Brigade. He has been through the battles of Vimy, Lens and Passchedaele and says Canada should be proud of her gallant sons, as they certainly have made good upon the battle fields of France and Flanders.

Captain Kitterson is bringnig out a book which he has edited, entitled, "On Active Service." It contains over 700 quotations selected by Canadian officers on active service. Twenty Generals have subscribed to the book, including General Sir Julian Byng, Lt.-Generals Sir Sam Hughes, Sir Richard Turner, Sir Arthur Currie, Major-Generals Sir David Watson, Sir H. Burstall, L. J. Burstall, A. C. McDonnell, Brig-Gens. Ketcheson, Morrison, Radcliffe, Thacker, etc.

The book is dedicated to the gallant Canadian officers and men who have died in the great war. The editor's profits will ge devoted to their widows and orphans.

AVIVATORS AT TWEED

Considerable of an event was the landing of an aeroplane at Tweed recently, according to the Tweed News which describes the sensation as follows: 'Sunday evening an aeroplane lighted in a grainfield belonging to Mr. Frank Lajoire a short distance east of the Separate School. The occupants of the machine were Lts. Burwash and Henry of the aviation camp, Deseronto. That morning they had been to Montreal and returning had lost their way and reacherd here short of gasolene. They succeeded in making an excellent landing in spite of the rough nature of the ground. The grain was in shooks and their machine must have manoeuvred amongst them like Gartley's automobile for only two or three of them were knocked down. The arrival of this huge bird was a strange visitation for us natives and it was not long before a huge crowd gathered about the visitors. Monday forenoon the field was again visited by crowds from all around. Owing to the haziness of the atmosphere the aviators could not make an early start. It was just twelve o'clock noon when they started the great buzzing, whirring thing on its course down the field between the rows of sheeves lined up on either side. The machine just went a few rods when it began to rise as gracefully as a great bird. Over the fences over the wires, over the trees over the lake and the distant hills it went and soon was lost to the view of the wondering gaping throng."

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT

Charles McConnell and William Bell committed for trial from police court upon a charge of assaulting John Barry, who claims he was held up late one night on the street and struck over the head with a baseball bat, appeared in County Court this morning. The case was still in progress when The Intelligencer went to press.

DROWNED AT PICTON

Donald C. Macdonald, of 165 Heward avenue, Toronto, was drowned near Picton, where he was spending his vacation. His mother, Mrs. Archie Macdonald, with whom he lived, left immediately for Picton on receipt of the news of the fatality. The late Mr. Macdonald was an employee of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, and left about a week ago on a holiday trip to Picton.

DIES FROM DOG BITE

David Strathearn, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Strathearn, formerly of Sault Ste. Marie, died at Port Colborne of hydrophobia. Mr. Strathearn was bitten by his pet bulldog a few weeks ago, and the dog was immediately shot, but no such serious developments were looked for until Friday evening, when young Strathearn became suddenly ill. He is survived by his widow and infant son and parents.

SUICIDE'S BODY RECOVERED

The body of Stella Victoria Morgan, who committed suicide by drowning at Brockville, shortly after her marriage to Ernest J. Jewett, returned soldier, was found floating in the St. Lawrence River Saturday, and was handed over to the authorities for an inquest. The cause of the suicide according to a note left by the young woman was due to the dead woman learning that Jewett had another wife and child living in England. He is now in jail awaiting sentence on a charge of bigamy, to which he pleaded guilty. Jewett hails from Brantford, Ont

SENECA SOLD TO KINGSTON MAN

Senator H. W. Richardson of Kingston has purchased the yacht Seneca from Aemilius Jarvis, Commodore of the Canadian Yacht Racing Association, and sailed her to Kingston, arriving on Saturday.

The Seneca is a famous yacht built to defend the Canada's Cup. She was the subject of prolonged dispute between the Rochester Yacht Club and the Royal Canadian Yacht Club during the races for the Canada's Cup some years ago. She raced at Boston, where she is well known as well as in Lake Ontario waters. Kingston yachtsmen regard her as a great addition to the local club.

WRECKED IN STORM.

During the wind and rain storm of Thursday night three boats went aground in the St. Lawrence River at different points in the midst of the Thousand Islands. The steamer Compton of the Ogdensburg Coal and Towing Co., is on the rocks about three miles above the Sister light. It is loaded with coal for Montreal. The steam barge Isabella H., met a similar fate at Thousand Island Park. The craft is owned by A. R. Hinckley of Oswego. The boat has a cargo of coal for J. R. Brennan & Sons of this town. The steam barge McVittie is aground almost opposite Pine View. The windstorm which caused the craft to come to grief is said to have been the worst experienced by mariners on the rivers and lakes in years.

STREET CAR RIOTS TROUBLE DETROIT

DETROIT, Aug. 12.—Because of the attempt of the Detroit United Railway to compel passengers to pay sixcent fares when according to the best legal opinion, the company has no right to charge a higher rate than six tickets for a quarter or five cents straight, street car traffic throughout the entire city was almost wholly demoralized yesterday. In some section of the city, more notably in the vicinity of the large industrial plants where thousands of men are employed, there was rioting. Street cars were turned over and employes of the D. U. R. who attempted to collect the extra pennies were set upon and beaten. Police reserves were powerless to quell the disorder at times, and when they were strong enough to control the crowd their sympathies plainly showed that they were on the side of the public

SIX ARE INJURED IN MOTOR WRECK

RIDGETOWN, Aug. 12.—When the motor car in which they were riding turned turtle yesterday afternoon six children were injured. The car was driven by R. Coates of Dutton and contained his children and those of James Stane of Ridgetown, nine in all. Coates apparently lost control of the car going over a crossing, as the car turned completely over and is badly wrecked. Gracie Coates is unconscious and may have concussion of the brain. The others escaped with serious cuts and bruises.

Canada's Debt.

Canada's net debt at the end of June amounted to $840,973,167,, an increase during June of $12,179,397. Revenue on consolidated fund account during June amounted to $23,469,304, as compared with $21,828,580 in June last year.

War expenditure for June, 1918, on capital account was $14,291,523, as compared with $9,250,611 in June last year. In this regard, however, it is pointed out that the totals are merely those of accounts which have actually passed through the books during the period.

For the first three months of the fiscal year ending June 30 the revenue totalled $67,070,724, as compared with $68,322,589 for the same period last year.

"HOW'S FISH?"

The Fishermen Do Their Part In Winning the War.

Men greet each other on the street in Eastern Canada with the question, "How's fish?" Vessels hail each other at sea with the same salutation. Whatever road you take through maritime Canada it is a highway of fish. Eastern fishing does not have its "on and off" years like the salmon fishing of the west, and stability of the catch—never falling below, but frequently exceeding the average—is what, the "governments" and "people" counting on the work that fish can do in "loosening up" the food markets of the "allies," must be assured of.

One way and another by "stabilizing the catch" east and west and by judicious disposition of the overplus here and there, Canada throughout is this year more than measuring up to standard in her output of fish.

Gloucester schooners laying "off and on" the little outports of Nova Scotia, Cape Breton and Quebec are able to buy up their cargoes of "green fish" for American market as usual. Their decks awash, these daredevil, fleet-winged schooners are beating into port, all sails adrawing, on the minute, with the "freight" seven days out from Vancouver to Boston, chock-a-block with its boxes of frozen halibut. This is the first time in the history of railroads that the express is side-tracked to let the freight pass, and this is the first time since codfish practically saved the life of the early New England colonies that fish has downed all other competitors in the food line, and come into its own, waltzing on to the menus of our large and most exclusive hotels and landing on the smallest home table in the land.

This time, of course, was bound to come, for fish is a fundamental. But at the same time fish could not have done the work it is doing to-day, in going to the trenches itself and in springing to the assistance of the home table, freeing the tons of beef it has freed, had it not been for Canada.

The old local slogan of the hook-and line regions, "Fish against beef," has now come into a world-wide significance — a significance that has come to stay, but one that never could have come about had it not been for "King Cod" and those "Vikings of the North," the Canadian fishermen.

CRUSH ELEVEN DIVISIONS

Communications So Disorganized That Reserves Cannot be Put Into the Battle.

London, Aug. 12.—Eleven German divisions have been not only defeated in the fighting of the past three days, but so utterly crushed that the German higher command has been unable to make any counter-stroke anywhere. The German communications have been so disorganized that thus far only two divisions of reserves have been identified, and these new troops have not been able to make any impression on the advancing Allies.

Great Joy in Great Britain

LONDON Aug. 12.—While military opinion here is still divided as to whether the Allied offensive which has been attended with such amazing success, is to develop into a real attempt to completely smash the German lines, the news from the battlefront, as confirmed by the formal official announcements, is the best that the Allied peoples have had in a long time. Already the new offensive overshadows that which, beginning on July 18, so rapidly changed the German offensive into a mad scramble for safety, and every report is adding to the number of prisoners and guns taken and the recovery of ground of great strategic importance.

The Successful Bidder

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

The Earl of Attesborough, a Scotch peer of the British realm, then about fifty years of age, had three sons, all fine, manly fellows, and he did not worry about having a direct successor to the title. The youngest of these boys, Alan Redwood, was desperately in love with Lady Gladys Fellowes, second daughter of the Duke of Arranton. The estates were contiguous, and the young persons of the two families were thrown a great deal together. The love affair between Alan and Gladys, aged respectively twenty and seventeen, was as natural as the mating of a pair of birds.

Unfortunately both the earl's and the duke's estates were in a bad financial condition. The former wished his eldest son and the latter wished his daughters to marry wealth. As for the younger sons, they were supposed to shift for themselves. The duke absolutely forbade any union between Gladys and Alan, and, indeed, such a marriage was next to impossible, for there was no income on either side.

Alan concluded to go to America, and his father gave him enough money to get there and have left a few hundred pounds to keep him till he could begin to earn a living. It was a sad parting between him and Gladys, both being sensible that they must drift apart. Alan took passage on a sail ship and after a month on the ocean reached America. He never wrote a line to any one after his arrival, and in due time he seemed lost to his family and former associates.

Five years after he left England the Crimean war came on, and his next older brother, who was an officer in the British army, went there with his regiment and died of disease in the trenches before Sebastopol. During the war the oldest brother broke his neck in a fall from his horse while fox hunting. This left Alan heir to the title. Inquiries were made in America for him, but nothing could be learned from him. But a record was found of the death of an Alan or Allen Redwood in New York who had come from somewhere else and lived alone, and papers were executed to show that the direct heir to the title of Earl of Attesborough was dead. A cousin who was next of kin took possession of the title and estates, but found the finances in such poor condition that he inherited an empty honor.

The Crimean war took a great many ablebodied men from the British isles, a number of whom left families behind them. In the country in which the Attesboroughs and Arrantons lived were so many destitute families from this and other causes that in order to relieve them a fair to end with a masked ball was held on the duke's estate under his patronage. Everything was done to get money, including the offering of the partnership for the first dance of five prominent unmarried ladies, one of whom was Gladys, the duke's second daughter. An auction was to be held before the ball for this privilege, the money accruing to go into the general fund of the fair.

On the day of the fair the duke's house and grounds were opened to all. The affair was a sort of fete champetre during the day, and at evening guests came in masks and fancy costumes for the ball. When all was ready for the auction the lady of highest rank with whom the privilege to dance first was to be auctioned stood on a dais and the bidding began. A goodly sum was realized, and the others took their turns. Lastly Lady Gladys stood up before the assembly.

A rich cotton spinner who had learned of the duke's necessities and had loaned him money started the bidding with £100. This man, MacCormack, was trying to put the duke under such obligations that he would consent to give him Lady Gladys in marriage. A man in the garb of an American miner—woolen shirt, sombrero and boots to his knees—raised the cotton spinner's bid £100. The cotton spinner went up a hundred more, and it was not long before these two were climbing over each other a hundred pounds at a time till the miner raised the other £1,000. At the price it would cost £5,000, or $25,000, to dance the first dance with the lady. Since the cotton spinner had not much hope of getting her in marriage he retired from the contest, and the privilege was knocked down to the miner.

Cries were now heard, "Unmask!" and the successful bidder advanced to the front of the dais and removed his face covering. Lady Gladys started.

"A stranger!"

"Who is he?"

"Give your name!"

These were some of the cries that came from all parts of the room. The stranger, turning, faced the crowd and said:

"I am Alan Redwood, earl of Attesborough."

Old friends gathered round the newcomer to hear his story. He had reached America shortly before gold was discovered in California and had made the journey there across the great American desert and the Rocky mountains. He had taken some goods with him and sold them at a great profit. The proceeds he had invested in mining property and had become very rich.

The duke was now glad enough to give his daughter to her former suitor, who cleared his estate of its indebtedness and had plenty over.

VOL. 54 BELLEVILLE ONTARIO, TUESDAY, AUGUST 13, 1918. NO 283

Belleville Citizens Celebrated The Great Allied Victory

City Streets Resplendant With Flags and Bunting— Motor Car Parade Led By Band and Pipers—Burning the Kaiser— Great Enthusiasm

Belleville citizens showed their confidence in the allied armies, faith in ultimate victory, and pride in the achievements of the Canadian army in an enthusiastic celebration last evening in honor of the great victories in the valley of the Marne, and on the Plains of Picardy, which have changed the whole aspect of the war.

Brief as was the notice of the proposed celebration, Front street was lined with citizens of both sexes early in the evening, and the crowd swelled to large proportions when the City Hall bell began to peal forth defiance to the enemy and ringing peals of victory, with Bridge Street Methodist Church bell as usual sending out its joyous peal of confidence and faith.

It was one glorious evening when patriotic aCnadians renewed their vows of confidence in the triumph of right and again showed their faith and patriotic Canadians renewed their armies of the allies, after four years of war, full of sacrifice and hope deferred.

At eight o'clock the parade formed up opposite the City Hall and led by Mayor Platt and members of the City Council in an auto started along Front street amid cheering crowds of citizens who lined both sides of the street.

The 15th Regimental band came next, playing patriotic selections.

Next came an auto with Lieut.-Col. O'Flynn, ex-Mayor Ketcheson and Great War Veterans, followed by other autos containing veterans of this and other wars.

The pipers band gaily decorated with the flags of the allies, came next, playing the airs which have cheered gallant Highlanders to many a hard fought victory.

Then the Boy Scouts on wheels carrying victory banners showed that they were in it to the last boy.

Ben Sandford's gaily decorated chariot carried the bold inscription "TO HELL WITH THE KISER."

A merry auto truck loaded with laughing girls was an evidence of the happiness inspired among the fair sex by the severe check given to German Kulture by allied arms.

Then came Chief Brown and his brave fire laddies with the hose wagons and ladder trucks gaily decorated with the flags of the allies and an old and grizzled Scotchman perched high on a ladder truck merrily piping the "Cock O' the North," and other songs of victory on a fife.

A pretty little girl riding upon a neatly decorated Shetland pony represented that under the flags of the allies the children were safe from the baby killing and licentious Huns.

Hundreds of motor cars tastefully decorated with flags and bunting took part in the parade, which was one of the best ever seen in Belleville.

When the parade returned to the Market Square several thousand people had gathered and everybody was happy and jubilant.

Ex-Mayor Ketcheson took charge of the proceedings from this point and first called upon the band to lead in the National Anthem. All joined in singing "God Save the King" with a will.

Mr. Ketcheson then made a brief address, referring to the day four years ago when he stood near Buckingham Palace in London and listened to the hearty singing of the National Anthem by quarter of a million husky Britishers. Canadians had much to be thankful for and rejoice in celebrations such as these. After four years of the hardest fighting, trials and disappointments our fighting men are coming into their own and showing the Hun how empty is the braggart boasts of the Kaiser. It took sixteen years to defeat Napoleon but Brita'n never faltered or feared that the task was too great. The Kaiser is just as sure of defeat and in a good deal less than sixteen years. Britain will fight to the end and victory is assured.

Ex-Mayor Ketcheson's address was punctuated by enthusiastic cheers showing that there was no lack of confidence among the citizens assembled.

Lt.-Col. O'Flynn

Lieut.-Col. O'Flynn was received with enthusiastic cheers as befitted one of Canada's brave soldiers who had been through the hell of those early days when the Canadians thrust their bodies as living barriers before the Hun hordes, rushing through Ypres toward the sea, and said "You shall not pass," making glorious history for Canada though outnumbered, surrounded and drenched with gas before masks were invented.

Lieut.-Col. O'Flynn spoke briefly but pointedly, saying that battles were not won by speeches. He said that the war had entered a new and final stage where the allies after four years of being the anvil receiving the blows are now the hammer and the Hun must take the blows from now on. It was a time for cheering and great joy for the allies were going to defeat the Hun so decisively that the children in such numbers on the Market Square would not have to go through the hell their fathers and brothers were going through over there now to save the freedom of the worldd.

Lieut.-Col. O'Flynn paid a high tribute to the loyal Canadian women whose inspiration had resulted in such a splendid morale among the Canadian soldiers. Concluding he said that liberty was safe with our gallant soldiers over there who merited our confidence and faith in glorious victory.

Enthusiastic cheers and singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," followed the address of Lieut.-Col O'Flynn.

Mayor Platt

The Mayor then made a very brief patriotic speech and called attention to the last number on the program, which took place just around the corner.

THE KAISER'S FINISH

Alderman Hanna officiated at the last glad rites for his Hohenzollern effigy which dangling from a rope slid to the centre of the street over the heads of the crowd. The Kaiser at first refused to burn, true to his Satanic character, but this reluctance was soon overcome, and to the great delight of the young folk the Beast of Berlin blew up and burned up in truly lurid style.

Celebration Echoes.

Mayor Platt's announcement that 75,000 prisoners had been captured and nearly 500,000 enemy slain in the Marne and Picardy drives was greeted with great cheering and applause. The Mayor said that if the Kaiser could see Belleville Market Square this night he would crawl into a very small hole and drag the hole in after him.

"O Canada," "The Maple Leaf Forever," and "Rule Britannia" were sung lustily by the gathering, led by the band.

The pipers continued to play and march up and down street even after the main part of the celebration was over.

Little Violet De March mounted on her Shetland pony, bedecked with the flags of the Allies, was a pleasing feature of the parade.

Front street was gaily decorated with many flags and profuse bunting while the store windows also reflected the general air of celebration. The Ritchie Store had a special patriotic window very tastefully and appropriately dressed for the occasion. Miss Britannia with the American flag in support was prominent, while large paintings represented "The Canadians at Ypres", "British Bull Dog," and Lloyd George's "We are Smashing Through" was featured.

The nation that can cheer like Britons is unbeatable.

A German cheer is a grunt for more beer.

A lady spectator, overcome with excitement, fainted and was carried into the Queen's Hotel where she quickly recovered.

Chief Newton, Sergt. Harman and P. C. Ellis represented the Majesty of the Law in the forefront of the procession.

GERMANS EVACUATING TRENCHES FORCED BY FRENCH ON OISE RIVER

ALLIED PRESSURE FORCES HUNS BACK

GERMANS DIG IN ALONG THE OISE BUT HAVE TO MOVE ON BEFORE VICTORIOUS FRENCH TROOPS — CHEERY REPORTS OF SUBSTANTIAL PROGRESS FROM ALL FRONTS —FRENCH AND BRITISH CAPTURE MORE PRISONERS — ENEMY TRIES COUNTER ATTACKS, WHICH ARE SPEEDILY BROKEN UP.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, August 13.—(Official)—British troops have gained additional ground north of Roye and on the north bank of the Somme. The Germans delivered a local attack near Foquescourt on the line between Roye and Chaulnes. It was repulsed. The text of the statement reads:

"On the battle front our troops effected further improvements in their positions north of the Roye road and on the north bank of the Somme and captured additional prisoners. A local attack made by the enemy in the neighborhood of Fouquescourt was repulsed. We captured a few prisoners last night in patrol encounters south of the Scarpe, on the Arras front, and in neighborhood of Vieux-Berquin in Flanders. A hostile attack against our positions in the Merris sector was repulsed after sharp fighting.

NIGHT ON THE BATTLEFIELD.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—(Official)—Last night was without important developments on the main French battle front.

HUNS EVACUATING TRENCHES.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—German troops are evacuating trenches in the river bed of the Oise, just west of Bailly, according to news received here early this afternoon. The move has been forced by French pressure in the valley of the Oise. Bailly is a village situated on the east bank of the Oise river about a mile and three-quarters east of Ribecourt. It is near the southern end of the Ourscamp Forest, a wooded section which is of great strategic value in that part of the battlefield.

KAISER PUNISHES HIS OFFICERS.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—General Von Mura and General Liebrecht, who commanded the German armies in the offensive which began on July 15, have been placed on the retired list, according to Berne newspapers which have been received here.

General Von Mudra was one of the German commanders during the Verdun fighting in 1916. He was decorated by Emperor Wilhelm for his services there.

HUN RESERVES BEING EXHAUSTED.

So far thirty-three German divisions have been identified in the fighting. The enemy's reserves according to all indications are gradually being exhausted, and he is drawing troops out of the line to extend his flanks and cover any gaps. This is an operation, however, which can only be carried out to a limited degree.

CANADIANS ARE IRRESISTIBLE

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Sir Edward Kemp has given out the following statement:

Reports up to last night regarding the work of the Canadian Corps in the present offensive further emphasize and confirm the extent of their success. The corps' prisoners now total 9,000 with over 150 guns captured. The depth of the corps' advance at its maximum point is over thirteen miles. The activities of the past three days have been on the scene of the old Somme battleground where the ground is fully traversed by old trenches and other defensive works making the operations of our tank units, motor machine-gun companies cavalry and infantry more difficult thus accounting for the slowing down of the early advance. All ranks of the corps are in the best spirits and in the words of the corps' Commander, who is highly enthusiastic "they are simply irresistible."

THRILLING AIR FIGHTING

With the British Army in France, Aug. 13.—Stories of the air fighting over the battle lines are amazing.

One observer coming into his station shot down four machines. In the same fighting a British pilot chased one enemy plane to earth, and was swooping down to finish off his antagonist when the man climbed out of his machine and held up his hands in token of surrender.

"So I didn't kill him," the British pilot said. "But on my way home I met a group of enemy machines, and got a bullet in me, but managed to land inside our lines."

The reort of this incident ends with the statement that the pilot died in a hospital short after relating his story.

A British two-seater shot down two enemy machines during a battle royal in the air. The pilot was badly wounded and fell across his controls. The observer, however, leaned forward and secured his comrade's body and managed to get control of the machine. He brought it to earth, where it crashed but both the occupants escaped death.

Another pilot during the course of a fight started for home, wounded. When ten feet above the ground inside his own lines he collapsed from loss of blood.

There are dozens of thrilling tales of how machine after machine skimming close to the ground, fired point-blank into bodies of enemy troops, killing a great many, in spite of the fire from the ground, and how they wiped out the crews of enemy machine guns holding up the allied advance. They also effectively attacked the poorly constructed German tanks before they ever had a chance to get into action.

30 MORE FOE GUNS

With the British Army in France, Aug. 13.—In Sunday's fighting the French added two thousand prisoners, and more than thirty guns to their captures. There was stiff fighting yesterday. Crown Prince Rupprecht having hurried up part of his diminishing reserves to try to check the retirement of the armies of Generals von Der Marwitz and Hutier. The greatly increased weight of the enemy's artillery and machine-gun fire was proof of the rapid strengthening of his reinforcements.

Canadians Captured 6,000 Prisoners First Day of Advance

Also Corralled Every Gun Fronting Them— Their Maximum Gain of 15,000 Yards Was Record for a First Day's Gain— Used Cavalry and Tanks and Formed Batteries of German Cannon

With the Canadian Forces in the Field, (Delayed in transmission)—It is now possible to sum up the broad results of the first day of the battle. By the evening of the first day Thursday, the entire Canadian corps had attained its objectives, these being an average advance of 14,000 yards. The maximum advance was 15,000 yards, and this constitutes a record in this war for a first day's advance, not even excepting the German advance of last cepting the erman advance of last March. The total number of prisoners taken by the Canadians on the first day will reach 6,000. In addition every gun fronting us was captured.

So complete was the surprise that many of these still had on their muzzle covers and their guns were still in their dugouts.

It may be said here, in parenthesis that one of the most remarkable things to be seen from the heights, when the great barrage broke at our 20-yard line, was the almost total absence of reply from the Boche batteries, that put up a shrapnel barrage over our advancing troops, but made no effort to counter our batteries.

GUNNERY WAS WONDERFUL

This war has had no more wonderful exhibition of scientific gunnery than that which broke on the enemy yesterday, in a barrage far more intense than even that of Vimy and pursued his retreating forces relentlessly raising the precise distance in yards at stated intervals of minutes as our men got into him. It would have been wonderful if the ground had been known and prepared and every feature of the artillery problem carefully studied in advance as at Lens; it was nothing less than marvelous, when there are taken into account the facts that many of the batteries were only brought up a few hours before the engagement opened, that it was impossible for them to expose themselves by any attempt at registration, and that a great part of the work of the barrage was done from maps by trangulation. The guns were in dormant batteries, unregistered and without permanent emplacements. It was a triumph for Canadian gunnery.

But this was not all. Yesterday the Canadian field batteries were handled like a show of the Royal Horse Artillery, limbering up, dashing for a road, and unlimbering, hard on the heels of the retreating enemy. By nine o'clock batteries were three miles inside the front German line at zero, the hour when the show opened. So sure were the gunners of success that some field batteries started off at that very minute with their horses. After long, bitter years of trench warfare, all ranks were mad with joy to get at the Hun in open warfare. One of our batteries, carried away by the spirit of the thing, pushed so deeply in that they actually unlimbered within the enemy barrage and lost a number of horses in consequence. It is such stories as that that make Canadian hearts beat proudly.

TURNED GUNS ON ENEMY

The story of our wonderful infantry has yet to be told, but this incident may serve now. A Canadian battalion pushing on theoughout the fog, came up upon an enemy battery. Without a moment's hesitation the company charged the positin, took it and immediately turned the guns on the fleeing enemy. Presently a message came over the field telephone to headquarters "For heaven's sake rush us some gunners we are being held up here, serving these beastly guns."

At Vimy we took three German batteries and they were at once turned on the enemy, being named the First, Second and Third Pan-German Batteries. By yesterday afternoon there was a whole pan-German brigade at work, and by now, probably there are two of these, including heavy guns. Among the ascertained booty, at an early hour yesterday were four 4.2.-inch guns. Since then the guns have been too hot to count.

All's Well With Allies In Lassigny Fighting

French Troops Push Eastward From Gury in Effort to Turn German Positions on Heights— Rupprecht's Reserves Hasten Up—Tries to Slacken Allied Advance

LONDON, Aug. 13.—French troops are pushing eastward from Gury (south-west of Lassigny) in an effort to turn the German positions on the heights to the south-east, it was learned yesterday afternoon. The fighting there is going well.

Heavy fighting is in progress all along the lines, especially in the Chaulnes and Roye sectors, where the Germans are trying to guard the important roads and railways a little longer.

In the Bray sector American and British troops are striving to push eastward toawrd Peronne, along the north bank of the Somme.

The artillery fighting is growing in intensity. The concentration of guns is one of the greatest of the war. The battle is becoming more stabilized, particularly on the northern part of the front, where further progress depends largely on success to the southward. There is no indication, however that the Germans intend to make their present lines permanent.

Crown Prince Rupprecht so far has thrown in eight divisions of reserves and only has about fifteen divisions (probably 180,000 men) left.

HUNS MAY TRY AGAIN

With the British Armies, Aug. 13.—Rupprecht is throwing in his reserves as fast as he is able to bring them up for the purpose of slackening the advance. Since Thursday ten fit divisions of his already limited reserve have been identified, making a total of thirty-one divisions engaged since the start. Prisoners say that six of these divisions were hurried from the Vesle region in omnibuses.

Indications are that the German high command will make its biggest effort within the next forty-eight hours to hold up the allies on the present line, which is practically the same as the old Somme line.

DING-DONG BATTLE

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Only slight changes in the line as a whole are reported in despatches reaching London this afternoon, but a ding-dong battle is raging all up and down the northern section of the present battleline. American troops are in the suburbs of Bray to-day fighting a continuous battle outside the little French city.

Entire Heights of Lassigny Were Captured by French Troops

3 P.M. Special Despatch to The Intelligencer.

LONDON, August 13.—French troops have gained control of the heights of Lassigny on the southern end of the Picardy battle front, according to advices received this afternoon. This gives them command of the town of Lassigny and the valley of Diverte, as well as the entire district to the north.

French Close to Lassigny Last Night

LONDON Aug. 13.—The allies have captured the town of Gury, on the right flank of the Somme battlefront, according to news from the front this evening.

On the south of the battlefront the French have not yet reached the crest of Lassigny Massif, possession of which would put the Germans both to the north and to the south in uncomfortable pockets.

The French War Office Sunday morning statement announced that the French had reached the outskirts of Gury This town is an important point on the Lassigny Massif, within two miles of Lassigny itself, which is the immediate French objective in this sector, possession of which would be likely to cause a considerable retirement by the Germans both to the east and the west on this end of the battleline.

Quebec Youths In War Till End

QUEBEC, Aug. 13.—An interesting sidelight is thrown on the numerous habeas corpus cases here which are agitating waters judicial by the announcement that many of the young men want to serve, despite the proceedings taken to get them out of the army. The lads involved say they have gone to the trouble of swearing to it, and when the cases come up for hearing on Wednesday next, affidavits will be produced containing their formal declarations that they didn't know anything about the habeas corpus until the documents were served on them.

Letters From Overseas

FROM PTE. STAPLEY

Pte. E. C. Stapley, with the Canadians "Over There", writes to his sister, Miss Minnie Stapley, a very cheery letter, the following extracts from which will be of general interest:

This is Sunday and the Hun is very quiet to-day. He isn't sending over much iron rations to us, but he raised the devil last night all night. It has been raining quite a bit this last few days and very muddy with these big mud scows on, our Kitchener army boots. I get anchored sometimes with the heavy wet clay. Our guns certainly strafe the Boche and they have been pounding and roaring like a hundred elephants at him or like a big thunder storm with the flashes of lightning lighting up the sky like a big prairie fire. I wish the people of Canada could witness a lot of these sights as they are wonderful, far more fun than going to an exhibition or a big circus. I was just out walking around with two other fellows and we saw old trench pill boxes and dug-outs all blown in. There was some severe fighting here when they drove the Hun back, but he is coming this way again. We are going to surprise him and give him one of the biggest lickings that he ever had. He is looking for it. I hope the rain keeps off for a while. The Hun sent over three shells last night and shrapnel flew all over. It is ragged pieces of iron and makes a bad wound for a man if he is hit. But when our lads get hit they smile and laugh. We are not afraid of the sauerkrauters, as we call them.

The Imperial Gordon Highlanders went over the top and they bayonetted the Huns right and left, until there was no fight left in them. The Huns crouched in shell holes and dugouts crying "Oh, Jock, don't kill," but they had no mercy on them, as they crucified one of the Gordons some time ago.

It is funny to see the fights in the air, two or three times a day, and at night our fellows go after the Huns twenty and thirty planes up in the clouds scraping, and they get a lot of the Heinie Planes too.

Don't forget to send me a daily paper, as I like to see the news, for we don't know what we are doing but I am sure we are winning.

I am very busy to-doy. We got up at four this morning, and walked to a place called Ferfay, where we were inspected by Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, and in battle order. We were tickled to death to see the Premier and cheered for half an hour.

I suppose you have been reading about the Huns bombarding Bethune. Well, I saw the bombardment. We were on the left of Bethune digging trenchly, commonly known as a working party, and our big guns were all over and they put on a barrage on the Boche. It was terrific. It is a big town and houses were blown to pieces. Fires broke out. They missed us all, but I got hit on the head with a piece of shrapnel, but out helmets are made of steel and heavy, so it bounced off like a marble. The Town of Chocques is near Bethune, and we could see the people fleeing and leaving everything behind. After the bombardment was over the soldiers went to the deserted houses and took the bed to the trenches; they are great things to have in one's dugout. The town is about the size of Trenton.

I was also in St. Eloi and Arras when they were bombarded. We use the holes the shells make for wash bowls and bath tubs. I saw six men and twenty wounded by one shell which landed about fifty yards from me. I flopped flat on the ground and was covered by dirt and stuff. It was dreadful to see these poor lads suffer.

MORE ABOUT THE Y.M.C.A.

(Extract from a letter written by a sapper who has been in active service for sixteen months).

France, June 27.—"Beatrice sent me a copy of the charge the G. W. Veterans made against the Y.M.C.A.. One incident they make great mention of was that, one of their "Veterans" had been charged half a franc for a book in a Y.M.C.A. library, which was given to the Y. by some woman in Toronto. No doubt that sounds like a pretty bad bold thing for the Y.M.C.A. to do. Well, now, here: First of all, the man is either a liar or has a bad memory, for the price "charged" is really a franc instead of half a franc. Then he did not go on to tell the public that the book which he got may be exchanged for another book in any Canadian Y.M.C.A., and when the man thinks that he has read enough books, or gets broke, all he has to do is to turn in a book, (either the first one, or if he has exchanged it; the one he has got in exchange) and his franc will be refunded, so that in reality the reading which he gets is free of charge altogether. The only reason the Y. demands a deposit is so that the books will not be wasted or destroyed. This is in justice to the people who have been good enough to donate them. In spite of anything you may hear to the contrary the Y.M.C.A. is a wonderful institution and of greatvalue to the soldiers. What surprises me is that they do not go after them, because of their style of religious endeavor out here. It is hard to explain conditions, in fact practically impossible, and so no doubt you would think it strange to hear the language used sometimes in addressing a meeting at the Y., but it is the only way of getting at the men, and Y. officials are wide enough awake to konw it greatly from the old hard and fast custom.

"On Christmas Day I saw a Chaplain buy a bottle of champagne and give it to the boys. No doubt if the W.C.T.U. could get hold of his name, he would be run out of his job as a preacher, and yet I do not know of a more successful chaplain out here. The boys respect him and take his advice to heart.

"I was very pleased to see that Dr. Pidgeon called the W.C.T.U. down for their statement re cigarettes. They are a foolish and misguided bunch of Old Maids that are doing more harm to their own cause in a minute than cigarettes will harm the boys in a year.

"It would be nice, I suppose, to think that all the boys over here did not smoke, but there is a war on, and while it would be nice for us to have pink spats and white collars, and a few other things, they are not very practicable for this country, while cigarettes are.

"Please excuse all this surplus energy which I am putting down on paper, but a fellow gets peeved when he reads the Canadian papers, and finds that the wrong impression is being given to the public; because I think they must feel that sometimes their good money is not being used to the best advantage for the comfort of the troops, whereas that is not the case."

ALL BRIDGES ACROSS SOMME DESTROYED FOR 15 MILES

PARIS, Aug. 13.—All the bridges across the Somme between Peronne and Ham, a stretch of about 15 miles have been destroyed by allied aviators. The Germans have been attempting to throw temporarily bridges across the stream and the allied airmen are now systematically bombing these improvised structures.

SPLENDID PICTURES AT GRIFFIN'S

Although the celebration last night naturally made small attendance still numerous parties attended Griffin's towards the close of the celebration and they were not disappointed at doing so. The big picture "Missing" was the special attraction and it gave good satisfaction. The story concerns an incident that has occurred more than once in the present world war. A young girl is engaged to an army officer who is not overburdened with the good things of this world; so in time they were married, and also in time he was called for active servicee. An older sister, who has always had ambitions to be someone in society, conceives the idea that if her sister can be married to a man of wealth things in this life will be more rosier for her. The young officer goes to the front and is shell shocked and for a time is entirely speechless from the shock of making his escape from the German lines. From this point on the author takes the spectator through the many sufferings that the hero goes through and shows how the singing of a favorite song of the young officer "Bonnie Sweet Bessie," finally brings back the lost speech and also his memory. No doubt the author got the inspiration for her story from an incident in the present war. While the picture is a war story there is no fighting shown in it.

Another good picture was "Viviette" with the favorite Vivian Martin in the leading part. The usual fine settings, costumes and players are feature in this newest Martin picture.

A new chapter of the serial "Eagle's Eye," shows how Imperial Germany spread the germs of infantile paralysis among the children of the United States. This epidemic was prevalent over there just two years ago this summer. A good news film completes a high class program of photoplays.

"HER GOOD NAME"

At the Palace the special picture is called "Her Good Name. There was also a new chapter of "The Woman in The Web" serial and a good comedy.

"CIVILIZATION"

The big pucture "Civilization will be at Griffin's soon. It is said to be even greater than "The Birth of a Nation. Another good pucture is the return engagement of "The Lone Wolf."

Draft Evaders Caught In Bush

SUDBURY, Aug. 13.—Following sensational robberies at Coniston, Warren and St. Charles, during the past week, the Provincial Police Thursday afternoon rounded up three young men on the west arm of Lake Nipissing. The other young men, part of a gang of five who broke jail in Parry Sound last week, eluded the officers and are still at large. Reports are circulated that the robberies in those places were comitted by defaulters and deserters under the Military Service Act, for the purpose of securing supplies of clothing and food, arm sand ammunition, but the police claim there is no connection.

The gang was tracked down to the west arm of Lake Nipissing, and when the officers were cruising the shores in search of their camp they came across three of the alleged gang out in a canoe fishing. There was a dash for shore in which a number of shots were exchanged, but the officers intercepted the landing. Two of the men offered no further resistance, but the third made matters very interesting for a while. Two members withdrew to the bush while the third was deprived of his weapon. The three taken into custody were young Dalton, aged twenty-eight, whose home is in that section; Joe Fahant, an American, and Cvila Martin, a French-Canadian. All three men were brought to Sudbury jail Saturday morning. The Dalton boy had the keys of the Parry Sound jail in his possession, when captured, it is said.

FOOD BOARD FLASHES FOR FEMININE FOLK

How about a goat for an enfant de guerre?

It comes as the natural result of all this talk about war gardens, war-time pigs, war-time bunnies and last but not least, war-time chicks.

The goat is undoubtedly butting into Canada in her own inimitable way. She comes from the south and is making her debut in British Columbia, where she is now being bred extensively. Application to the Goat Breeders' Association in that province will elicit further information on this question.

The point is that the goat makes an excellent backyard cow. She gives about two quarts of milk a day. Indeed, a well-known English woman has a fine herd of goats on her estate in Sunderland and during the "butterless" days that preceded the ration card system she made all her own butter from goat's milk.

All things considered, Nanny and Billy are worthy of serious consideration as war-time measures.

Kink in the Back

You bend over and can scarcely get straightened up again. This comes on you so suddenly you can't understand it.

This is lumbago. Like backache and rheumatism, it is the result, of poisons in the blood. The kidneys are deranged, but the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will soon set them right. The pains and aches will disappear with the poisons when the kidneys do their work properly.

HUN CRITICS DUMB AND PEOPLE GLOOMY

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 13.—Morale in Germany has suffered severely from the recent defeats. Military critics are dumb and the people are gloomily suggesting that the army may be compelled to fall back a long way all along the line, according to information from German cities received here to-day.

Some of the evenin, newspapers admit that Haig has given the Germans a serious check but explained that the withdrawal was due to unfavorable weather, a heavy mist giving the allies an initial advantage. Others asserted the British and French successes would not endure and that they were not of any permanent importance.

The Kreuze Zeitung declared the only unpleasant feature of the battles was the loss of guns and the number of prisoners taken by the allies.

Encumbered Roads Slow up the Allies

Felled Trees and Abandoned Material More of Barrier Than Foe's Resistance

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Reuter's correspondent on the French front under date of Sunday attributes the slower rate of progress on Saturday than on the first two days less to the resistance of the enemy than to the fact that the roads over which the allies must advance are so encumbered with abandoned material and trees, which the enemy felled in great numbers across the roads, that the progress of the cavalry and infantry has been impeded. This is not so much on their own account but on account of the difficulties met by the ammunition and supply column which follows them.

On the other hand, he adds, the enemy's haste prevented the mining of roads and the setting of death-traps as he did in 1917. It is possible therefore to explore abandoned towns and villages without fear of being blown to pieces.

"A CROWN OF SHAME"

By FLORENCE MARRYAT

Author of "The Poison of Asps," A Star and a Heart," "Written in Fire," etc.

CHAPTER XXIII.—Continued

"Missy Liz, I will!" replied Rosa solemnly. "I knows I'se berry bad gal to you once. I said dreffiul things what I didn't mean; but I'se only ignorant yellow gal, Miss Liz, and I didn't think how bad I was. But Massa Norris, he make me promise when he go 'way that I'd be good faithful servant to you, and take care of you, and he's bring me lubly dress from England next time he come; and I would do it, Missy Liz, without de dress, and only because I love you for all you done for me."

"I believe you, and I will confide in you, for I must have a friend to help me. Rosa, I am going to the Alligator Swamp to try and find Monsieur de Courcelles."

"De Alligator Swamp! Oh, Missy Liz! you nebber going there? You can't walk der for de swamp, nor de thorn bushes; and de green slime hab a smell what chokes you. Missy," continued Rosa earnestly, "even a nigger can't stay dere. You will lose your way d'reckly—dere's no path to guide you; and de alligators is awful Dey kill you d'reckly dey see you. Oh, Missy, for God's sake, don't try to go!"

"Listen to me, dear Rosa. I must go! It is of no use to try and stop me. Monsieur de Courcelles has been very wicked, no doubt—I don't defend his conduct—but once I loved him, Rosa, and a woman can never quite forget the man she has loved."

"No, dat's true, missy. Juan want me to marry him, but I keep thinking too much ob dat rascal sailor boy what was de fader of my poor leetle Carlo—dat's truth," answered Rosa, shaking her black curls.

"Well then, perhaps you can understand a little what I feel now, Rosa. Monsieur de Courcells is in fearful danger. I know his spirit. He will never come out of the swamp to be taken prisoner again. He will faint from the fumes o fthe fearful miasma first, and sink for ever in the morass, or he will cast himself before the first cayman in his path. I may not find him, or I may be too late to give him any assistance, but I must try. I have the proper medicines here to counteract the effect of the swamp, for him and myself; and if I find him, I think with this disguise I may get him safely out again without attracting the notice of the police. I shall not go by Shanty Hill, Rosa. I shall make my way round by the Miner' Gulch. There is an entrance there at the back of the Sans Souci plantation."

"And if you find him, Missy Liz—what den?" inquired the yellow girl.

"Ah, Rosa! that is where I shall want your assistance and your fidelity," replied her mistress. "If I find him, I must bring him here, and hide him from the police until I can get him safely away from the island."

"Dat berry dangerous work, Missy Liz."

"I know it, but how can I do otherwise? Could I let the man whom I once believed would be my husband, perish in the Alligator Swamp, without an attempt to rescue him; or deliver him up to die a murderer's death upon the gallows, as long as I can keep him from it? Oh Rosa, Rosa!" cried Lizzie, weeping, "it is the same with all of us, black and white alike. Love—although a love that is dead and over—sanctifies everything, and claims a certain duty even for its ashes."

The yellow girl did not understand her mistress words, but her tears appealed to her heart, and she cried with her.

'Yes, Missy Liz, I understand. Dat's jes' same like me and de sailor fellow. But you must take great care of yourself, Missy Liz. You must be berry 'ticular wher you step, and how you go, and keep a sharp look-out for de alligators. Dey berry cowardly, Missy Liz. Dey frightened of noise and dey caan't run no ways; so if you don't tread right on dem, you'se all right."

"Yes, yes, Rosa! I know that, and I will take every possible caution," replied Lizzie. And then she kissed the baby, and kissed Rosa, and walked bravely off, as though she had been going on her daily rounds.

The Alligator Swamp was situated in a deep gorge or valley between two high hills, and was simply a stagnant bog, thickly clothed with poisonous vegetation—indeed no healthy trees or bushes could have existed in such an atmosphere. The fatal upas tree spread is thick branches over the morass, sheltering deadly fungi of orange and red and white. Thorny bushes were matted and interlaced about it, so that had there been a solid foundation to the Alligator's Swamp, it would have been impossible to force one's way through, or find a path whereon to tread. The only resting-place for one's feet consisted of the logs and trunks of decayed trees, which had dropped, rolling into the slime, and choked it up. But they were treacherous paths, as may be well imagined, and it was difficult in the semi-darkness to distinguish them from the caymen—the largest and fiercest breed of alligators—from which the swamp derived its name. These creatures lay on the top of the slimy deposit just like rugged brown logs in appearance, until a sound or a touch caused the apparently inert mass to move, and a ferocious head, with two diamond bright eyes, and an enormous mouth, with cruel fangs, rose up suddenly and snapt its jaw over its unsuspecting prey. For there was no real daylight in the Alligator Swamp. The branches of the trees were so thickly interlaced overhead that the sun had no chance to penetrate them and cleanse the Augean Stable with his health-giving rays; and so the decaying vegetation and the slime had festered on together for years past and the caymen had bred and flourished there, until the boldest negro of them all considered it certain death to breathe the air which they inhaled. If the foolhardy creature who attempted to traverse the swamp were not immersed in the sinking mud or seized by the hungry alligators, he was bound after a little while to sink down giddy and intox'cated from inhaling the various poisons around him, and so fall a prey to either one or the other. Lizzie Fellows was perfectly conscious of the terrible risk she ran,—more so, perhaps, than most women would have been, for her father had fully explained to her the dangers of the swamp, and warned her of its precincts. She knew that the reason runaway negroes and escaped prisoners took refuge in the Alligator Swamp was not because they sought safety in it, but because they preferred death by its horrors to giving themselves up to the law. They knew they went to their grave when they entered it, but they knew also that the police would refuse to follow them there, and that they would be left to die unmolested. She had a long walk to take before she reached it. She was anxious to meet no one who should inquire her errand, or try to prevent it, and so she took a circuitous route to Sans Souci, and crept round the back of the plantation until she came to a clump of dense underwood, through which she knew a path led to the fatal spot. She tied a handkerchief steeped in some disinfectant across her mouth and nostrils as she entered it, and then, with a short prayer to God for protection and success, went bravely on. She carried a knife in her hand, with which she sliced the bark of the trees as she walked along for she was afraid of losing her way altogether, and perhaps never finding the sunlight again; but for the first few minutes the Alligator Swamp seemed to be a harmless place enough. The grass beneath her feet was was bright and green, from the humidity of the atmosphere and the shade of the trees, but the first indication of danger was given by her foot suddenly sinking in wet soil up to her angle. She drew it back quickly, and commenced to walk more slowly, and tapping the ground before her with the stout stick she held in her hand, before she ventured to tread on it. Her heart beat fast at times as a rustle in the bushes betrayed the presence of a rattlesnake—about the only living thing that shared the swamp with the alligators—or a splash in the surrounding vegetation proved she was approaching the haunts of the caymen. Still she went on, the rotten trunks that lay across it and swayed and rolled as she mounted them, as if they would give way beneath her weight, and let her fall into the slimy pool they floated on. Soon she began to feel the effects of the mephitic vapors with which the place abounded, and had recourse to her smelling salts, to prevent her from getting giddy. All this time Lizzie had kept up a continual note from a whistle she had hung about her neck, and at intervals she had called upon Henri de Courcelles by name. As she advanced to the centre of the swamp the daylight seemed to be entirely excluded, and she lighted a lantern which was tied at her girdle. With her staff in one hand and her revolver in the other she now began to pick her way step by step, her heart sinking with fear and disappointment as she went. For not a sound came in answer to her whistle or her call. The profoundest silence reigned in the Alligator Swamp. The stench of the decaying vegetation was more and more apparent, and the only light by which she walked was the feeble glimmer thrown in advance from the little lantern at her waist. It was a situation to appal the bravest spirit. Once she stepped forward almost confidently, and placed her foot on a broad bridge formed, as she believed, of the corrugated trunk of a fallen tree, but as she touched it it sank beneath the slime, and rose again immediately with two fierce twinkling eyes and an open jaw full of pointed teeth, to confront her.

WHEN A SOLDIER IS DISABLED

It is not always from wounds. A great many men are disabled through foot trouble. Even the bravest man cannot "carry on" if he is suffering from sore feet. Hence the necessity for Zam-Buk to keep the soldiers' feet in good condition.

A military authority in "The War Office Times" says: "If every man in the service were supplied with a tin of Zam-Buk it would, in my opinion, greatly add to the efficiency of the army."

For blisters, cuts, scratches, burns and sores of all kinds Zam-Buk is unequalled. All dealers 50c box.

Letters to the Editor

THE CITY SWIMMING BATH

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—As the City Council is about to make a move in the matter of the swimming bath at Victoria Park that the late Senator Corby left a donation of $5000 for, I am sure it would be pleased to accept suggestions in regard to that matter.

A good swimming bath will be a great boon to the youth of this city, and in fact, to the older citizens. A desirable place for bathing and swimming has been a long felt want in this city and through the beneficence of Senator Corby, who was proud of his native city and realized the necessity for a proper and convenient bathing place, the council is enabled to supply such a place; but before starting the project the question of the best location for it at or on Victoria Park (because that is where it is required to be constructed under the terms of Mr. Corby's will) should be decided, and we should be careful that we make no mistake on that point, and the next point to be decided is as to the kind of bathing place to construct. I am sure the citizens generally would like to see the money so generously provided by Mr. Corby for this purpose, intelligently and discreetly expended to obtain fo rthe benefit of the people all that the money should provide.

I have heard intelligent and interested parties express views regarding the matter that I think it would be well for the council to take into consideration when dealing with the matter. Some people think that the water around Victoria Park is somewhat stagnant and therefore would not be desirable for swimming purposes, and the idea of some is that the Island should be excavated in some part and a cement inclined bottom put in and the water allowed to filter in. They think that the water filtering into a basin would be fresher and purer than the water at any point surrounding the island; but it seems to me that unless there was some way for the water in the basin being changed frequently that it would be more stagnant than the water surrounding the Island as the basin would fill up to the height of the water surrounding the Island by filtering in, and there it would stand unless there is some inexpensive means of running it off.

At the present time all along the west side and south end of the Park and for some little distance north on the east side it is very weedy and a green scum covers the water in places, but from about one hundred yards on the east side from the point of the Island the water seems to be clear of weeds and scum, and although there is no apparent current there, the water appears clean and fresh. If a bathing place was constructed on that side it would likely have to be made in a northerly and southerly direction parallel with the Island instead of being run out into the harbor; it would probably be best to have the bath on the west side of the Island if the weeds and scum difficulty can be got rid of, as there should be more of a circulation in the greater expanse of water on that side.

Some other persons think that the water for the bath should be the water works water, but would that not mean a very large unnecessary expense yearly as there would require to be a very large quantity of water pumped for a big public swimming bath, which would have to be run off and renewed very frequently. The upkeep of the bath to be supplied with the city water could be expensive. It is, however, for the council to thoroughly look the situation carefully over before proceeding with the matter. Mr. Corby very generously gave the money for the purpose of having it sensibly and judiciously expended for the above object for the benefit and enjoyment of the people, and he certainly expected the council to act worthily of the trust. I mention this because I have heard more than one person say that the money would not be judiciously spent for the purpose; that it either would be frittered away, or some person would be given a contract who would make a profiteering business of it and we would have very little to show for Mr. Corby's benefaction; but the council certainly can avoid this by exercising reasonable care. This is a matter that everyone here should be interested in and there should be no hesitation in any one giving expression to his or her ideas through the press. After the council has acted in the matter it will be too late to make suggestions.

Yours truly,
F. S. WALLBRIDGE.

A FREE BRIDGE AND BETTER ROADS.

The condition of the Trenton road and the approach of increased tolls on the Bay Bridge are questions of vital importance to the citizens of Belleville and should receive immediate attention and energetic action.

A great deal of trade comes to Belleville over the Trenton road ordinarily, but it is in such a condition now that no one cares to ride over it unless compelled to do so by urgent business.

The road between Trenton and Belleville is part of the proposed provincial highway system and if the attention of the government was called to its disgraceful condition no doubt improvements would be made at once. A carefully selected delegation should be appointed to wait upon the provincial government at once and point out the necessity for immediate attention to the Trenton road.

The toll bridge across the bay connecting Prince Edward county with Belleville is another and serious handicap to the prosperity of this city and keeps business away. The tolls will be increased fifty per cent. on August 28, which means that the business of Belleville will receive another hard knock.

Toll bridges, like toll gates, have no place in modern progressiveness—everybody wants a free bridge, but no concerted action is being taken to make a free bridge possible.

The City Council is elected to look after the interests of the citizens and it is up to the Council to get busy on the free bridge question as well as a good road to Trenton.

Upon these questions the Council and Board of Trade could cooperate advantageously.

THE FARMER AND GOOD ROADS.

A writer in the August issue of Conservation, the bulletin of the Commission of Conservation, points to the value to the farmer of good roads. The Office of Road Inquiry at Washington estimates after an investigation that the increase in the value of farm lands due to good roads ranges from five dollars to twenty dollars an acre. In the State of Indiana the average selling price of land has been increased to the extent of $6.48 an acre through roadway construction, and farmers of that state estimate that if the improvements were extended to cover all roads the increase in the value of their lands would average $9.

The contribution the farmer is called upon to make toward permanent roadway construction is so small as to be inconsiderable when compared with this increase in the value of his property.

The writer in Conservation points out that "one of the first things the prospective purchaser of a farm wants to know about a district is the distance from the railway station and the character of the road from the station to his farm." While the grain grower can manage to get along with roads that are passable only at certain times of the year, storing his grain until such time as he can use the roads, he is forced to do his marketing without regard to market conditions, to his monetary loss. To the dairy farmer, the fruit farmer and the vegetable grower, good roads are absolutely essential.

Apart from the financial considerations, good roads through the farming districts provide distinct advantages. Among these are better facilities for the education of the children, improved social conditions and more opportunity for pleasure, more convenience in church attendance, better mail and delivery service.

The farmers should be among the first to lend their support to the good roads movement that is showing such energy in Eastern Ontario.

The Poet's Corner

TO THE TIME-KILLERS.

If you have time upon your hands
Don't kill it as some people do,
'Tis precious now, in distant lands
Where heroes bravely fight for you.

Take every second you can spare,
How great or little it may be,
And every surplus minute share
With those across the rolling sea.

Make use of it for them that fight,
And with it lengthen out their span:
Who kills one moment swift or light
Is traitor to his cause and clan.

TALES TOLD TO CIVILIANS—THE FLY.

A. P. H., in Punch.

Have I been at the Front?—O Lor!
Was I over the bags?—You bet.
They tell me I won the mouldy war
At the Battle of Nouvilette;
The bombs was terrible thick,
And the shells was mountain-high,
And many a Boche went back to base,
But I can't say much about what took place,
For I had a fly in my eye.

We were just getting up to Fritz,
When the horrible thing occurred,
And bang in my eye the blighter sits,
The size of a well-fed bird;
"Come on," the officer says;
I says to him, "Bye-and-bye!
It's all very well to say 'Come on!'
I would if my arms and legs were gone,
But I've got a fly in my eye."

Have you been on a bicycle, sir,
And copped it proper the same,
When the world was only a misty blur
And your eye like a red-hot flame,
So that you wept great tears,
So that you longed to die?
Well, think what it is when there happens to be
A battle you specially came to see,
And then get a fly in your eye!

They say there ain't no doubt
What I ought to have gone and done:
Turned my upper lid inside out
And over the under one;
But I tell you the bombs was thick,
And never a man said "Hi!
Just monkey about with your upper lid!"
So I blew my nose and I wept, I did,
And I still had a fly in my eye.

And then, sir, I just went mad,
I groped for my trusty hype,
And I laid about like a Tyneside lad
With a good blind circular swipe;
They tell me I killed ten Huns
And laid out Corporal Fry;
The Huns they took to their heels and fled,
And even the company wished me dead,
And I still had a fly in my eye.

I fell on my poor old face,
I lay in a hole and swore;
And now they call me a shell-shock case
And tell me I won the war;
They gave me the D. C. M.,
And that's why I seem to shy,
But this is the truth I've told to you
And you never can tell what a man won't do
With a darned great fly in his eye

OTHER VIEWS

The Tiresome Mr. Dewart.

Toronto News

The fact that Mr. Hartley Dewart is contemptuous of Hon. Dr. Cody and vicious toward the Hearst Government is another proof that both are worthy of public confidence.

The Bolsheviki Described.

From Dr. Dillon's "The Eclipse of Russia" (Doran).

"In the Bolshevik movement there is not the vestige of a constructive or social idea. Even the western admirers of Trotsky and Lenine cannot discover any. Genuine socialism means the organic ordering of the social whole, and of this in the Bolshevik process there is no trace. Far from that, a part is treated as the whole, and the remainder is no better off than were the serfs under Alexander I. and Nicholas I., for Bolshevism is Czarism upside down. To capitalists it metes out treatment as bad as that which the Czars dealt to serfs. It suppresses newspapers, forbids the liberty of the press, arrests or banishes the elected of the nation, and connives at or encourages crimes of diabolical ferocity."

The Mud of Flanders.

From Letter of American Soldier.

There is not in all the world mud like that in France. It weighs more than concrete and sticks like a porous plaster. If it dries on legs and arms it has to be broken up with a hammer before the clothing will come off. If well dried it is shell-proof and turns a bayonet like a duck's back turns water. Outside of armor-plate and the hide of a cheap politician, I have never seen anything quite so invulnerable as the French mud. It rains every day at the front, so a plentiful supply of mud is never lacking. Some say that the concussion of the heavy shelling makes the naturally rainy climate even worse, but be that as it may, it's wet enough and then some.

The Ties that Bind.

London Daily Telegraph.

Instead of domination, instead of Imperium in the Roman sense, what we have aimed at is a vast confederation. We have not asked our colonies to subordinate their wills to ours. On the contrary, we have respected the love of liberty and independence which we recognize to be the master passion of the English mind, and we have granted to the full responsible government—the free chance to our colonists of making their own mistakes and correcting their errors by experience gained in actual legislation. In one sense, of course, a confederacy of sovereign states represents the weakest of links; in another sense it is the strongest, because it is not dependent on material means, but is based on spiritual elements and the inspiring influence of similar ideals. That principle was finely expressed by Mr. Lloyd George when he said that "in life the most enduring ties are the invisible ones."

Not All Waste.

London Daily Express.

If waste from the kitchen table will keep a pig or a thousand pigs, what could not be done with all the other waste in the world? Waste is not only material. It is not only a matter of cabbage leaves and potato peelings. We are all wasting something every hour of the day. If all our wasted efforts could be gathered up by some Controller of Energy and used for the common good, what a force could he wield! If all our wasted opportunities could be recalled, what a matter for self-reproach! We waste our affections and our favors. We waste our tears and our repinings when it would be better to set our teeth. We might begin to believe that everything is wasted in a world where life itself is being wasted at a rate that would appal a master spendthrift. Yet all is not waste. Cheerfulness is never wasted. It recreates itself even in a world of gloom, and gives us new courage—to go on wasting.

A Laugh or Two

The Kaiser is now telling the Germans the worst is yet before them And this time it is not the wiener wurst.

"I suppose because business with the bee is always humming."

A Call-Down.

He—I know that you love me, dearest.

She—Because I have sworn never to marry a man who knows more than I do.

Reformed

"They say that Perkins is a confirmed bibliophile."

"Well, he may have been, but he doesn't drink a drop now."

Visitor—Gee whizz! My wife ought to have married it.

Setting Himself Right.

"A man is knowed by de company he keeps," sententiously said good old Parson Bagster, desiring to point a moral in the course of a recent sermon.

"'Scuse me, pahson," said a recently arrived brother, rising in his place in the midst of the congregation; "but to fix my statuary wid dis 'semblage I'd just like to enumerate dat dem ratty-looking niggers dat I was seed wid yiste'd'y isn't no company dat I keeps any mo' dan I kin he'p—dey's some o' muh wife's trifin' kinfolks from 'way ober at Judranville."

Up and Doing.

The country boarder from Boston had risen early and taken a stroll. Returning an hour later he met the farmer.

"Well, young man," said the latter "been out to hear the haycock crow I suppose." And the sly old chap winked at his hired man.

The Boston man smiled. "No," he said suavely; "I've merely been out tying a knot in a cord of wood."

BEARS ATE THE BREAD

An amusing little incident reported from Banff, Alberta, shows how two bears proved to be food patriots even while they were breaking one of the commandments.

They were foraging in the larder of the Alpine Club House which, of course, was not strictly "within the law"—but then bears will be bears! They helped themselves to four loaves of brown bread and left unmolested the white bread, pies and cakes which were in the larder.

Whether the distinction was a matter of taste or patriotism it is impossible to tell, for the animals are still at large. There are lots of human bears, however, who grab the white bread and cakes first and ignore the brown bread and other food conservation products despite the exigency of food conditions in Europe.

THOUSANDS OF MEN REQUIRED FOR HARVESTING IN WESTERN CANADA

Thousands of men are required to help in the work of harvesting the Western crop. The C.P.R. has completed arrangements to transport to the West this great army of workers.

Chronic Famine Nearer the Truth

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Germany's unrestricted U-boat warfare could neither keep the army of the United States from taking part in the battles on the fields of France nor break the will of the allies to continue the war, is the admission made by the Munich Post, a coy of which has been received here. In a review of the situation at the beginning of the fifth year of the war the Post says:

"Eighteen months of unrestricted submarine warfare could not break the enemy's will to war nor revent Americans putting a well-equipped army of a million men on the western front. Hopes that after the conclusions of peace in the East the final struggle in the West would be deceptive, and the eastern peace itself is a disappointment, and not only politically."

The Post takes exception to the word "unfavorable" in describing the food situation in Germany, and says "chronic famine" would be nearer the truth.

CONGRATULATES CANADIANS

Is Greatest Success in History, Says Sir Edward Kemp in Message to Sir Arthur Currie.

London, Aug. 13.—Sir Edward Kemp sent the following message to Sir Arthur Currie:

"My heartiest congratulations to yourself, to corps, and other attached Canadian units, including cavalry and motor machine-gun brigades on greatest success in history. Canadians have more than maintained their past splendid record. Canada will be prouder than ever of them and their glorious achievements."

Beland Stirs Great Crowd

LOUISEVILLE, Que., Aug. 13.—Commending the magnificent spirit, the heroic bearing of the French-Canadians in the war—forty thousand of them, he said, there were—the Hon. Dr H. S. Beland, former Postmaster General for Canada, told the people of his native town, wt beflagged and decorated their dwellings, and turned out in thousands Sunday to welcome the doctor to his home and congratulate him on his escape from German detention how proud they might be if they had sons or other righteousness humanity and justice against German barbarity. It was a splendid address marked with all the feeling and delicacy of Dr. Beland's natural eloquence and his direct plea to their sense of right and justice stirred his great audience to an inspiring demonstration of sympathy for the speaker and the cause he urged. This was most striking after Dr. Beland had shown how the war was forced upon the allies by Germany.

APPRECIATION

is a term we feel permitted to use, as being descriptive of the state of mind of many of our CUSTOMERS who have taken advantage of OUR SUMMER FUR PRICES. The response to our offer of these special PRICES for summer work, has been gratifying to us, and no doubt means some lightening of our HEAVY FALL burden. By no means are we deploring our HEAVY FALL TRADE, far from it; but it is with a view to educating the PUBLIC to the MUTUAL advantages of preparing well ahead of winter to make void its many terrors, by having your FURS attended to NOW. LOW PRICES, FREE STORAGE, FURS ALL READY WHEN NEEDED, are to your advantage. It will be easily seen that IF our customers do this, we shall be relieved of many an all-night session in the fall. Thus, by equalizing our working days it would be to our advantage; hence these offers of LOW PRICES

DISMISSED THE CASE.

Charles McConnell and Wm. Bell, charged by John L. Barry with assaulting him with a baseball bat one night recently on Dundas street, were discharged from custody yesterday afternoon by His Honor Judge Wills. A. Abbott appeared for the accused, Crown Attorney Carnew for the prosecution.

PROMPT ACTION NECESSARY.

The condition of the Moira River constitutes a severe menace to the public health. If the refuse deposited in the river at the distillery is the cause of the dead fish and polluted atmosphere it is the duty of Dr. Clinton, District Officer of Health, to take immediate steps to have the nuisance abated.

ENGINEERS LOSE POINT

The Railway Board, in a judgment issued yesterday at Ottawa, refuses the application of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers for an order directing the railways to equip all switch and transfer engines with wedge tanks, low enough for enginemen to seetover, and with a headlight on the rear.

ANOTHER BELLEVILLE

Sergt. Lorne F. Green sends greetings to The Intelligencer from the western front and encloses a picture of an altar in the soldiers' church at Belleville (over there) decorated with shells and shell cases picked up by the padre near by.

LT.COL. EIMER JONES KILLED

Lieut-Col Elmer Jone, barrister of Vancouver, formerly of Brockvill , is reported killed in action. This gallant officer was awarded the D. S. O. for exceptional bravery under fire and an additional bar for further merritorious actions. He was well-known in Belleville.

BOIL THE WATER AND BE SURE

Upon the advice of the Provincial Board of Health the quantity of chlorine added to the city water daily has been materially increased. Tests are made weekly and while the first samples were reported as impure and dangerous, recent samples have been pronounced as free from dangerous bacteria.

ENGINEER FALLS INTO HOLD

The steamer Keystone, en route to Montreal with coal, put into Kingston to secure medical attention for Second Engineer Giveault, who had fallen into the coal hold and lain there for ten hours. He was suffering from concussion and cuts, and was removed to the Hotel Dieu, where he lies in a serious condition. His home is in Montreal.

OFFENCE AGAINST GIRL.

A man named Harden is under arrest at Trenton as the result of investigations by Capt. Ruston, of the Children's Aid Society. Harden, a married man, is accused of enticing a young girl, ward of the Children's Aid Society, away from her foster home for immoral purposes. Yesterday at Trenton before Police Magistrate O'Rourke Harden was fined $30 for enticing a ward of the Children's Aid Society. He is now charged with a more serious offence against the girl. Crown Attorney Carnew is prosecuting, A. Abbott appearing for the defence.

COMMENDED BY GOV'T.

S. B. McCready, Assistane Secretary of the Organization of Resources Committee of the Ontario Government, wrote to D. H. Ackerill, V.S., saying: "I was much interested in reading your letter to the Belleville paper of July 2nd dealing with the proposition of organizing parties to pick wild berries. The plan suggested by you is I believe being carried out in a small way here and there throughout the province "and is deserving of wide publicity" so that next year we may equip ourselves better to handle the proposition. We have developed good community gardening schemes and we have a fair start here and there in the province in company farming. We may extend our organizing activities very perceptibly in the direction your letter indicates. Should your scheme work out successfully in Belleville we would be glad to have word from you concerning it.

NOTED ACTRESS DEAD

Nerves

Shattered nerves are the source of greatest suffering to many a returned soldier.

The doctor can give something to relieve physical pain, but when the nervous system breaks down and you are sleepless, nervous and mentally worried, real cure only comes when the exhausted nerve cells are nourished back to health and vigor by such restorative, upbuilding treatment as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Called by Death

MRS. J. CANTRELL

The sad death occurred in Kingston Hospital on Monday, Aug. 5th, of Mrs. (Rev.) J. Cantrell, nee Miss M. Gertrude Hornick, daughter of the late Samuel H. Hornick of Kitley Township. She leaves to mourn her loss a husband and one child, and a mother and two brothers. Mrs. Cantrell had not been well for over three months and on July 12th she was taken to Kingston Hospital. She was buried at Easton's Corners, the services being conducted by the Rev. S. T. Tackaberry in St. Anne's church. The deceased was an Anglican, greatly devoted to her church. She was a great help to her husband in his work at Bancroft. The Rev. Mr. Cantrell is now in charge of the parish of Shannonville. A lovely wreath was sent by the members of the Trinity Church (Shannonville) congregation.

Obsequies

JAMES W. HOSIE

The funeral of the late James W. Hosie took place from the home of his mother, 199 Foster Avenue, yesterday afternoon. The service was taken by Rev. Ramsay, under the auspices of the B. L. E. The bearers were all engineers, namely, John Robinson, T. Daly, T. Hiddleston, P. Frichette, A. E. Cole and John Deegan. The service at the grave for the engineers was taken by Mr. Thos. Marshall and Mr. Skelcher. There were many floral tributes. Interment in the family plot in Belleville cemetery.

Stomach Troubles Are Due to Acidity

Tells Safe, Certain, Speedy Relief for Acid Indigestion.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, gas, sourness, stomach-ache and inability to retain food are in probably nine cases out of ten, simply evidence that excessive secretion of acid is taking place in the stomach, causing the formation of gas and acid indigestion.

Gas distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive, burning feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excess development or secretion of acid.

To stop or prevent this souring of the food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid, and make it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, a good and effective corrector of acid stomach, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water after eating or whenever gas, sourness or acidity is felt. This sweetens the stomach and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments and is a perfectly harmless and inexpensive remedy to use.

An anti acid, such as bisurated magnesia which can be obtained from any druggist in either powder or tablet form enables the stomach to do its work properly without the aid of artificial digestents. Magnesia comes in several forms, so be certain to ask for and take only Bisurated Magnesia, which is especially prepared for the above purpose.

G.T.R. Office Staff 3—G.T.R. Shops 0.

Last evening at Pine Street School grounds before a good crowd the G.T.R. staff won the first game of the series for the city championship of the G.T.R. from the Shops team by the score of 3 to 0. The field was fast and both teams played exceptionally well, making very few errors. The Shops team have a well balanced aggregation having played together all season, winning a good percentage of their games. Ford pitched a good game and was given nice support.

The Office Staff team were together for the first time, getting out two or three old timers, Charlie Taillon, Harry Pringle and Ross Yott, who were right on the job, playing snappy ball. Morden caught a great game and succeeded in breaking a bat or two hitting the pill.

Shorty Brown and Tommy Smith umpired the game to the satisfaction of both teams.

The line-up:—

Office—Young 1st, Andrews 3rd, Pringle s.s., Meagher p., Taillon l.f., Yott 2nd, Morden c., McKendry r.f., Ferguson c.f., Jose r.f.

Shops—Rainbird 1st, Shane r.f., Gamble s.s., Taylor 2nd, Shreider 2nd, McKinnon f., Fowell c., Ford p., Miles f., Baldree 3rd, Brown (pinch hitter).

Score by innings —

Shops	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0—0
Office	2	0	0	0	1	0	x—3

The second game will likely be played Wednesday or Friday night of this week.

CITY LEAGUE BALL.

This evening the city league match calls for the Athletic and Vimy teams to play. The Vimys are league contenders and the Athletics have struck their stride; the result is that the game should be a good one.

CITY LEAGUE STANDING

	Won	Lost	Tied	To Play
Vimys . . .	2	1	1	2
Ponies . . .	2	2	0	2
Park Nine .	2	2	0	2
Athletic .	1	2	1	2

In case a tie game affects the league standing it will be necessary to replay the game.

NO CHANGE PROBABLE ALONG VESLER LINE

With the American Army on the Vesle Front, Aug. 13.—A general survey of conditions along the Soissons Rheims front indicates the improbability of any immediately radical change there, the Germans have stabilized their line between the Vesle and the Aisne and the French and Americans continue their persistent reconnaissance work which may develop into a general action.

More thrusts by both sides continue but except for furnishings means for serving information, they are serving little purpose. In general the Franco-American line is along the river and the railroad, with the Germans on the higher ground beyond.

American aviators have secured photographs of bridges over the Aisne and of German military works, despite the enormous odds in enemy aircraft against them.

HUNS SCATTER POISON GAS ON OCEAN

Washington, Aug. 13.—Using poison gas, a German submarine attacked the coastguard station and lighthouse on Smith Island, off the North Carolina coast Saturday night, the navy department tonight announced. Six men were overcome by the gas.

The gas was released from oil spread over the surface of the water by the submarine, the navy department said. Three large areas of the oil, each larger than an acre, grounded near the island. The gas, which appeared similar to mustard gas used in fighting on the western front, was effective about forty minutes. None of the men overcome by the fumes died.

Huns Move Huge War Stores Preparing to Flee From Perronne

Roads Crowded With Enemy Transports in Attempt to Get Material to Safer Spot— Huge Ammunition Dumps Abandoned

LONDON, Aug. 13.—(4.37 p.m.)—The French gains on the Lassigny Massif already have forced the Germans to avacuate a long line of trenches in the valley of the Oise and are calculated to force further evacuations almost immediately. Noyon will come under fire of the French guns as soon as the artillery can be moved up. Then the road transports on the whole network of highways around Lens will become a difficult problem for the Germans.

PARIS, Aug. 13.—(4.10 p.m.)—The Germans have been hurriedly removing enormous quantities of war material from Perrone during the last 48 hours and enemy troops are crossing the Somme.

Roads about Perrone are reported to be crowded with German transport attempting to get this material back to a safer spot.

Huge ammunition dumps at Resson-sur-Matz and Orvilliers containing a million shells were abandoned by the enemy in his flight and have been captured intact by the French, it was learned today.

Meanwhile, although there is a comparative lull in the fighting between the Oise and the Somme, it is believed the allies are preparing for some new activity. The military critic of La Presse expresses the opinion that Lassigny has been enveloped by the French and possibly has already been captured.

How First Phase Ends

With the French Armies in the Field, Aug. 13—(2.15 p.m.)—With the enemy throwing gas and heavy shells and clinging desperately to such positions as Des Loges Wood and the heights nearest Lassigny, the first phase of the new battle is ended.

When the second phase begins the Germans may be between the prongs of the allies' pincers. The allies have won the necessary solid bases and are prepared to squeeze.

Lassigny's Fall Expected

LONDON, Aug. 13—(4.25 p.m.)—The fall of Lassigny, expected hourly, porbably will force the Germans to retreat to the Somme Canal line—an additional retirement of five to ten miles all along the front—according to information received here this afternoon.

The Somme bridge at Peronne has been smashed, cutting off the enemy's supplies from that direction and hindering the retreat.

Karl's Warriors Shy

LONDON, Aug. 13.—An Austrian division which Emperor Charles sent hurriedly westward to help out his hard-pressed German ally has not yet appeared in the line. It is at present, in fact, encamped in Belgium, and is reported as showing no anxiety to get into the raging furnace to the southwest.

Huns Beaten Back

PARIS, Aug. 13.—The furious counter-attacks which the Germans continued to launch yesterday are attributed here to their imperative need of holding the Chaulnes-Roye-Noyon line, the loss of which would amount to a disaster to them. The counterattacks were all beaten off, the enemy had reached ground with which he was perfectly familiar in previous fighting and was occupying a line which gave him good holding ground because of the old defences there.

The German resistance along this line is compared by commentators to that offered by the enemy in his retirement from the Marne, when he based his intermediate defence upon Oulchy and Fere-en-Tardenois. When these two centres of resistance were broken the entire front fell in and the Germans were compelled to evacuate the pocket and withdraw to the Vesle. The same effect is looked for here when, as anticipated, Chaulnes and Noyon fall, the Germans then will have to retreat across the upper Somme.

Hutin said that more than 1,000 cannon and over 10,000 machine guns have been captured.

German Sub Sinks American Ship Close to New York Harbor

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

NEW YORK, August 14.—The Associated Press this morning carries the following: "German submarines, approaching the very gates of New York harbor, sank the oil tanker Fredrick R. Kellogg, in Ambrose Channel last night. Thirty-five members of the crew brought here today reported that seven others are missing. These survivors were picked up by an American steamship.

The Frederick R. Kellogg was a new tank ship of 4,450 tons owned by the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Co. of Los Angeles. She was 450 feet long with a beam of 57 feet and was built at Oakland, California, last year. The tanker was commanded by Capt. White and was bound from San Pedro, Mexico, for Boston.

BRITISH TROOPS GAIN GROUND AT APEX OF LYS SALIENT IN FLANDERS

BRITISH PATROLS ESTABLISH NEW LINE

ONLY ARTILLERY ACTIVITY REPORTED ON FRENCH FRONT LAST NIGHT—ALONG VESLE RIVER GERMANS ATTEMPTED RAIDS ON FRENCH AND AMERICAN POSITIONS, BUT WERE REPULSED—FRENCH RAID ENEMY LINES IN CHAMPAGNE DISTRICT AND BRING BACK PRISONERS.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, August 14.—(Official)—British troops have gained further ground at the apex of the Lys salient in Flanders. East of Meteren the allied line was advanced somewhat, while east of Vieux-Berquin, south of Meteren, patrols established a new line.

ARTILLERY ACTIVE DURING NIGHT.

PARIS, August 14.—(Official)—Only artillery was active during the night on certain sectors between the Avre and the Oise. Along the Vesle river, where French and American troops are stationed, the Germans made raids which were repulsed. The French took prisoners in raids in Champagne.

HUNS BRING UP BIG GUNS.

With the British Army in France, August 14.—There was no change in the situation on the new Somme battle front this morning except for the fact that considerably increased artillery fire indicates that the enemy has finally decided to bring up more of his guns.

PARIS, August 14.—General Humbert, operating on the southern end of the Picardy battle line, is reported today to be progressing steadily towards Noyon. The desperate German defence of the Chaulnes-Roye road has caused delay in the storming of the Noyon position, which is said to be impending. The British army of General Rawlinson, which is holding the line just to the north of the French positions, is meeting with most desperate resistance along its whole front. The Germans seem determined to retain the Chaulnes heights at all costs.

(Toronto Globe Summary)

Ludendorff is steadily losing his grip on the Braye-Chaulnes-Roye-Noyon line, the last natural system of defence west of the Somme. With Lassigny enveloped and practically the entire massif of Lassigny under their control, the Allied artillery within the next few hours will not only dominate the network of communication lines converging at Roye and Noyon and make the occupation of those two towns exceedingly perilous for the Germans, but the guns of Humbert will also compel a rapid German retreat toward the Somme that may develop into another disaster such as the foe experienced last week farther west. The crossings of the Somme are already under the constant fire of Allied flyers, and one despatch yesterday stated that the Germans were with feverish haste removing all valuable supplies from Peronne in anticipation of a swift retirement enforced by Haig's armies. A big ammunition dump fell intact into the hands of the French. In fact, the enemy ere now must have become reconciled to the humiliating prospect of speedily withdrawing to the Hindenburg line, from which he debouched with such confidence a few weeks ago. It is highly probable that no result short of this will satisfy Foch this summer.

Canadian Cavalry Captured Foe Brigade Headquarters

Wonderful Work Done by Dominion Mounted Troops in Drive— Broke Through Gap in Foe Lines— Armored Cars Also Very Busy

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Sir Edward Kemp, Overseas Minister of the Militia Forces of Canada, has issued the following official statement regarding the work of the Canadian cavalry and machine-gun brigade:

"The cavalry broke through one gap in the German lines so rapidly that they captured a Brigade Headquarters intact, gaining valuable information as to the disposition of troops and taking hundreds of prisoners. Having insufficient men to take these prisoners back an officer ordered the latter to proceed along unarmed to the advancing infantry. The prisoners obeyed, forming an extraordinary procession of "hands up" along the Amiens-Roye road. Between Mezieres and Beaucourt a lone prisoner shouted to the cavalry captain to take the neighboring village, where the Brigade Headquarters was situated. The squadron stampeded the horses of the enemy and bombed his dugouts. The scared Brigadier and his staff emerged surrendering.

KILLED WHOLE FORCE

"Three snipers who were skirting the hill expecting to meet their own squadron encountered: 50 Germans with machine guns. All took cover and one returned to warn the squadron; the other two swiftly changing their position, caused the enemy to think the position was strongly held. One trooper accounted for 20 Germans. At the critical moment when the enemy rushed the gallant couple, the cavalry dashed up killing all.

"The cavalry pay a great tribute to the infantry, who often accomplished their task without the cavalry's support. The Canadian armored cars and tanks also did excellent work.

Recruiting has begun in London, England, for a "Pal" Battalion of the Woman's Auxiliary Army Corps for service with the American Expeditionary Forces. Five thousand women are needed.

Thousands of women are to be drawn into railway work in the United States within the next few months to take the place of men entering the army and going into other industries.

Kingston Mystery Is Now Solved

Major Sharpe Traced by Secret Service Men— Announcement Later

KINGSTON, Aug. 14.—Dominion Officer E. Carroll of Ottawa, who was in the city some days ago investigating Major Sharp's mysterious disappearance, came back to the city yesterday after following a clue to an eastern point. From well-informed circles it was learned to-day that the entire facts in the Sharp case would be given to the public in a few days. All theories have been set aside now, and it is simply a case of preparing the facts for the public. As a result of investigation conducted supplementary to that of the Dominion officers here last week it is now practically an assured fact that Major Sharp was neither drowned nor met with foul play but left the city without any serious motive. The fact is also fairly well established by secret service men that Major Sharp left the city in an automobile from a local taxi stand, driving in the direction of the outer station and remaining there until near train time, then leaving the city altogether.

Two Thousand Tons of Coal Available For Small Consumers

Schuster Co.'s Offer to Board of Trade Not Reported on Yet by Committee— Bay Bridge, Zwick's Island and River Pollution Discussed

The offer of the Schuster Coal Co. of Belleville to furnish the city with two thousand tons of coal to be sold only to small consumers at a price to be fixed by Dominion Fuel Controller Magrath, was discussed at the Board of Trade meeting last evening. The offer from the Schuster Co. was made by letter to the Secretary of the Board of Trade and by him handed over to the Fuel Committee of the Board. No report had been made by the committee.

Ex-Mayor Panter said that this matter should be immediately acted upon and could not afford to be laid over until the September meeting. He moved, seconded by Mr. John Elliott, that the Coal Committee acting in conjunction with the City Council take immediate action on the offer of the Schuster Co. The motion carried without dissent.

Small Attendance.

On account of the storm the attendance at the August meeting of the Belleville Board of Trade was small, but the proceedings were quite interesting, chiefly on account of the presence of Mayor Platt who was asked a number of questions concerning civic administration and furnished considerable information which for some reason had never been made public.

In the absence of the President, Col. Marsh, who is enjoying his annual vacation, the chair was occupied by F. S. Deacon, Vice-President, while Col. Ponton filled his customary position as Secretary.

Capt. Henderson, of the steamship Sardinian, was introduced to the Board by Mr. John Elliott, and was welcomed by Chairman Deacon and Secretary Ponton.

Communications.

A number of communications were reported by the Secretary, including several inquiries for factory sites. A letter from President Marsh stated that C.P.R. officials had informed him that the appropriation for a freight shed at Belleville had been made but it was not the intention of the company to undertake any new work until after the war unless absolutely necessary.

The Secretary reported having on file recent rulings of the Railway Commissioners including increase in freight and express rates.

A letter was read from the Government asking for opinions from members of the Board of Trade on new taxation, especially working of income tax.

Belleville's Rubber Industry.

The following letter in regard to the Mackintosh Rubber Co. was laid on the table:

The Board of Trade, Belleville, Ont.
Gentlemen:—

It is desired to afford Belleville's business men the opportunity of advancing suggestions that might be beneficial to your City and practical in connection with the organization of a Rubber Works.

And to inform you that it has been decided to withdraw any application for financial assistance from the City (together with the former application for your assistance in connection with same). The recital in detail will enlighten you as to the present position and object of the organization.

Following the liquidation of The Mackintosh Rubber Company of Canada Limited, a Syndicate was formed from the former shareholders to purchase the Assets, subscribing to the amount of $17,000. These were secured on June 17th, 1918 from the Master in Chancery for the sum of $16,160.38, consisting chiefly of 4½ acres of Land, Reinforced Concrete Buildings with 23,000 square feet of floor space which formerly cost $36,318. 50.

The assistance of Mr. R. J. Graham Mr. H. W. Ackerman and Col. L. W. Marsh was solicited in connection with the operating of a company to equip and work these premises.

Their endorsement was obtained conditionally and with the object to establish a further industry, and one that would be beneficial to the City, financed on a sound business principles

It was decided that an additional amount of $25,000 should be subscribed by five directors and shareholders before commencing work, this with the Syndicate would give a total of $42,000 subscribed.

The capitalization to be an amount of One Million Dollars divided into Ten Thousand Shares, (no personal liability); Two Thousand Five Hundred shares to be an 8% preferable and Seven Thousand Five Hundred shares to be common stock with One Thousand Five Hundred preferred to be open for sale on completion of Board of Directors.

The directors to have the consummation of all agreements for the purchase of Galbulose rights, and Rubber Formulas for the use of which is paid for in common stock of the company, and carries the privileges of securing the services of Mr. Mackintosh as Factory Operating Manager at a renumeration based on earnings of the company, the Board to have the absolute control of corporation finances and of the business direction of the company.

There is no promotion interests and we hope you will consider favorably the proposal of obtaining your advice regarding the future of the company,

Yours very truly,
E. P. STEPHENSON.

Zwick's Island.

Ex-Mayor Panter asked Mayor Platt if the City Council had taken any action to save Zwick's Island Park from destruction by persistently cutting into it for gravel. Mr. Panter spoke of the advantages of Zwick's Island as a pleasure park for the people and deplored the mutilation of it for gravel which was wasted on the roads as it was not suitable for the purpose.

Mayor Platt said that he also was in favor of making Zwick's Island a pleasure park for the citizens and did not favor using it as a gravel pit. The matter would be taken up at the next council meeting.

The Bay Bridge.

Mr. John Elliott brought up the question of the Bay Bridge in view of the report that tolls would be increased this month. People accustomed to trading in Belleville will be driven to other places and the increase in tolls would be reflected in higher prices for market produce, so that the citizens of Belleville would really pay the increased tolls. The bridge should be free and the Board of Trade should take it up with the City Council at once.

Mayor Platt said that the Council had dropped the bridge question because the owners wanted too much money for it. The City Council was willing to pay $65,000 for the bridge, the Ontario Government had agreed to pay forty per cent. of the purchase price and maintenance, but the owners had raised the price to $72,000. Free communication with Prince Edward County was absolutely necessary, said Mayor Platt, but "when we found out that the company was trying to soak us, we decided to let the matter drop."

The Private Bills Committee of the Dominon Government had assured the Belleville delegation that $61,000 was a fair price for the bridge, but the City Council was willing to pay up to $65,000 for the bridge and did not consider it worth any more.

Mr. Stock asked the Mayor if the Private Bills Committee of Parliament had not placed a valuation on the bridge.

The Mayor answered that the Private Bills Committee told the delegation that $61,000 was enough to pay for the bridge.

Col. Ponton said that the Private Bills Committee did fix a price of $72,000, after indicating that $61,000 was enough. It would be suicidal not to buy the bridge at $65,000, as he was satisfied the value was there. He knew the structure and all about it, and it was well worth the $65,000, but he did not think bylaws for any larger amount could be carried. Col. Ponton was emphatically opposed to allowing the matter to drop—the bridge question affected the prosperity of Belleville too deeply for that. No municipality had ever received such an offer of assistance as that from the provincial government, which agreed to pay forty per cent. of the purchase price and 40 per cent of maintenance for all time to come. The bridge question should not be allowed to drop. Not only Belleville and Prince Edward are interested in a free bridge, but all of Ontario, and a free bridge would make this district a mecca for motor car tourists. He hoped the City Council

Devastated Scenes South of Montdidier

Heaps of German Dead Lie on Every Side— Foe Resistance Is Desperate

With the French Army in France, August 14.—A fearful spectacle of ruin is spread out along the great sweep of rolling pasture lands behind Boulogne-LeGrasse and Rollot, south-east of Montdidier. There the enemy is continuing his desperate resistance Heaps of German dead lie on every side, and the fields that were formerly green are now torn up and strewn with masses of debris.

The enthusiasm of the French troops has carried them up to the railway line running between Compeigne and Roye. Their more advanced position is south of Loges Forest, where the enemy is vainly counter-attacking.

The spirit of the French troops is superb. For several days they have undergone great hardships in their advance of ten kilometres through a field swept by machine-gun fire. The enemy tactics are intended to delay the French until the main German forces can withdraw, but great stocks of ammunition and war material of all kinds are being left as the Germans retire.

"Live in a Worry invites death in a hurry." Worry wastes nerve force at a tremendous rate. The more exhausted the greater the tendency to worry.

Then how is one to get out of this vicious circle? By building up the nervous system with the aid of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

As the nerves are strengthened you forget to worry and find yourself resting and sleeping naturally.

Heat Prostration Strikes Toronto

3.30 P.M. Temperature Kicks Beam at 1.02 1-2 and City Groans

TORONTO, Aug. 11.—At 3.30 yesterday afternoon the official temperature registered 102½, and the weatherman could promise no relief. This temperature, of course, was registered at the Meteorological Ofice on Bloor street west, and the more compact and crowded downtown district thermometers registered a little higher.

Soda fountains and all places of refreshments, such as ice cream parlors and even to the public water fountain on the street, were taxed to their highest capacity. The streets were crowded with coatless and perspiring humans.

Three cases of heat prostration were reported at the hospitals.

Thousands of Women For U.S. Railroads

Plans are Being Formulated to Have Them Replace Drafted Men

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Thousands of women will be drawn into railroad employment within the next few months to take the places of men entering the army and going to other industries, according to plans now being formulated by the railroad administrations.

A survey of different classifications of railway position which might be filled by women, will be undertaken soon possibly be a committee of women to be named by Director-General McAdoo. The general policy of railroads under Government operation will be to pay women the same wages paid men for similar services.

Is Finer Than In Many Years

Thomson Says Tanlac Proved It's Great Value In His Wife's Case

"My wife has gained ten pounds by taking Tanlac and her health is better right now than it has been in eight or nine years" said George Thompson a well known employe of the Belle, Etwar Ice Company residing at 94 Greenlaw avenue, Toronto, recently.

"The value of Tanlac," Mr. Thompson continued, "has been proven beyond a doubt to my mind by what it has done for Mrs. Thompson. She had been nervous and all run-down for a good many years. She had no appetite and never seemed to relish her food and her nerves were in such a bad condition that the least little unusual noise would upset her. She could not rest well at night and would get up in the mornings feeling tired and worn-out. She looked pale, had no strength and energy and was hardly able to look after her household affairs. Her whole system seemed to be in a badly run-down condition and in spite of all she could do, kept going down.

"Seeing Tanlac so highly endorsed I decided to get her to try it and before she finished the first bottle she was feeling better and I could see good results. She is on her fifth bottle now and has improved until she looks like a different person. Her appetite is fine and that her food agrees with her is shown in her increase in weight and strength. Her nervousness has left her entirely, her worn-out, listless feelings are gone and she has more life and energy than in years. We are both delighted over her wonderful improvement and advise everybody in the condition she was to try Tanlac."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

SPLENDID PICTURES AT GRIFFIN'S

The big picture "Missing" was the special attraction last night and it gave good satisfaction The story concerns an incident that has occurred more than once in the present world war A young girl is engaged to an army officer who is not overburdened with the good things of this world; so in time they were married, and also in time he was called for active service. An older sister, who has always had ambitions to be someone in society conceives the idea that if her sister can be married to a man of wealth things in this life will be more rosier for her. The young officer goes to the front and is shell shocked and for a time is entirely speechless from the shock of making his escape from the German lines. From this point on the author takes the spectator through the many sufferings that the hero goes through and shows how the singing of a favorite song of the young officer "Bonnie Sweet Bessie" finally brings back the the lost speech and also his memory. No doubt the author got the inspiration for her story from an incident in the present war. While the picture is a war story there is no fighting shown in it.

Another good picture was 'Viviette' with the favorite Vivian Martin in the leading part. The usual fine settings, costumes and players are feature in this newest Martin picture.

A new chapter of the serial "Eagle's Eye," shows how Imperial Germany spread the germs of infantile paralysis among the children of the United States. This epidemic was prevalent over there just two years ago this summer. A good news film completes a high class program of photoplays.

"HER GOOD NAME"

At the Palace the special picture is called "Her Good Name." There was also a new chapter of "The Woman in the Web," serial and a good comedy.

"CIVILIZATION"

The big picture "Civilization" will be at Griffin's soon. It is said to be even greater than "The Birth of a Nation." Another good picture is the return engagement of "The Lone Lone Wolf."

WOMEN'S RED CROSS AND PATRIOTIC ASSOCIATION

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Red Cross and Patriotic Association was held in the Red Cross Rooms, Campbell street, on Tuesday evening, August 6th. Mrs. O'Flynn, Fist Vice-President, conducted the meeting. Mrs. Lazier was also present and spoke of the planning for the Christmas boxes which must be sent early this year on account of the number to be cared for.

The secretary's report was read and adopted. Letters were read from the following: H. Milburn, Supt. of Transportation, the Canadian Red Cross Society of Toronto; Miss M. S. MacArthur, Assistant Secretary, the Navy League of Canada; Capt. Mary Plummer, C.F.C.C., England; Mrs. Arthur VanKoughnet of the Toronto Women's Patriotic League; N. S. Grace Waters; Lieut. Dan A. Cameron, Sgt. Harry A. Thompson, France; also cards have been received from the following Belleville boys prisoners of war in Germany: Cpl. Archie Cook, Pte. P. T. Jones, C. Watson, W. C. Newton, G. J. Thompson.

Treasurer's report, Miss Clara Yeomans, Treasurer:

Balance on hand July 1st ..	$849.27

Young Farmer's Leg Amputated

(From our own Correspondent)

TRENTON, Aug. 14.—Splendid progress is reported in the case of Scott Humphrey who recently underwent an operation and had his leg amputated at Belleville hospital. Mr. Humphrey is a young farmer, son of Samuel Humphrey, of Stone Point, near Brighton. Early in March his knee began giving him trouble and he immediately went to the General Hospital in Toronto, and underwent treatment until in July, being slightly improved, and believing the pure, bracing air from the beach would be beneficial he came home, but as the case continued to develop more seriously, he was removed to Belleville hospital and underwent a successful operation on Wednesday last, and if no further complications occur it is expected he will soon be home again. His sister, Mrs. Samuel Covell of Oshawa is staying in Belleville with him.

In the recent bombardment of Karlsruhe by British airmen the Queen's Palace was badly damaged as well as the railway station and arsenal.

"A CROWN OF SHAME"

By FLORENCE MARRYAT

Author of "The Poison of Asps," A Star and a Heart," "Written in Fire," etc.

CHAPTER XXIII.—Continued

Lizzie flew backward with a scream of terror, and, clinging with one arm to the branch of a tree, discharged her revolver full in the reptile's face. The bullet was probably battered against its impervious hide, but the shot had the desired effect of frightening the alligator back into its home of slime. It had another, and more unforeseen effect. It reached the senses of an almost unconscious man, who had slidden into a sitting position beside some bushes, but a few yards off, and roused him from his sleep of death. The sound of the shot conveyed but one idea to his mind, however,—that his pursuers had penetrated his asylum, and were close at hand to capture him; and with the intention to defy them to the last, he staggered to his feet, and set his back against a tree. The tall figure clothed in white became apparent in the surrounding twilight, and when Lizzie raised her eyes from the spot where the cayman had disappeared from view, it was to fix them on the form of Henri de Courcelles. She uttered a cry of pleasure at the discovery, which sounded to him like a note of victory.

"Stand off!" he exclaimed loudly; "shoot me like a man if you will, but dont' attempt to touch me with your accursed fingers, or I will dive into the swamp and escape you."

He was about to put his suicidal threat into execution, when Lizzie stepped quickly across the yielding earth which separated them, and stod by his side.

"Henri!" she ejaculated, as she clutched at his clothes with her hand and held him back.

He turned and stared at her.

"Lizzie!" was all he could say.

"Yes, it is I," she answreed simply.

At that his senses appeared to return to him. His astonishment at seeing her was so great, that he pulled himself together, as a drunken man will sometimes do, under special circstances.

"Lizzie—here!" he repeated. "But what made you come to such a place? Do you know that you are courting certain death, and that every moment may be your last? Go back at once! Don't stay here another instant! You were mad to think of such a thing."

"I am going back, and at once," she answered quickly, "but you must come with me."

"I cannot The police are waiting for me outside, and I will die here sooner than deliver myself into their hands"

She disengaged the wallet of medicines which she had carried on her back, and, pouring out a mixture of brandy and quinine, held it to his lips.

"Drink this, Henri, and listen to me. I have come here expressly to find you and save you, and you must trust yourself to me. The police shall not take you. They are waiting by Shanty Hill, and I know a secret outlet by Miners' Gulch. But we must leave this pestiferous atmosphere at once, or it may be fatal to both of us."

He clung to her like a child to its mother.

"You can save me!" he exclaimed. "Oh, my good angel! why did I ever desert you?"

"Hush! Don't speak of that now. Think of nothing excepting the best means to get out of this dreadful place. Drink some more brandy and inhale this ammonia. That is right. Pull yourself together, and follow me closely. I will go first and lead the way."

She pulled him forward as she spoke and mechanically he followed her. Step by step they went, very slowly and cautiously at first, and then faster, as the dusky twilight spread itself out, and the gleams of sunshine penetrated at intervals the dense foliage, and turned its neutral tints into living green. On they went, she in front with her staff and revolver, and he, behind, only half comprehending what had occurred to him, until they reached the thicket which abutted on the Sans Souci plantation, where he sank down upon the grass, with a low moan of exhaustion. Lizzie was busy with her wallet directly. She had anticipated that as soon as the excitement was over he would succumb to the strain he had passed through—for the Spanish Creoles have not strong constitutions—and had provided the necessary remedics against it. It was some little time before Henri de Courcelles fairly understood what had happened to him, and then his gratitude knew no bounds.

"Am I really safe, and with you?" he murmured. "What have I done to deserve such goodness at your hands?"

"You are clear of that terrible swamp, Henri; but you are not by any means safe yet; and if you would be you must follow out my instructions to the letter. See here! I have an old cloak and sombrero which belonged to my poor father. I left them under this tree when I entered the swamp. We will wait here quietly until it is a little darker, and then you must put them on, and come home to the bungalow with me and I will conceal you there until you can find some means of leaving San Diego."

"But how will that be possible, Lizzie? The bills must be out by this time putting a price upon my head, and every nigger in the island will be turned into an amateur detective, in the hope of being able to claim the reward."

"Oh, don't let us think of that now!" replied Lizzie wearily. "The chief thing at present is to restore your vitality. It is a blessing you are still alive, Henri. Eat and drink what I have brought for you, and thank God you can do it in safety. Nothing will harm you here."

"And you actually came in search of me, alone and unprotected?" he said looking at her with the deepest admiration. "You braved the dangers of this awful place—ran the risk of a terrible death, and all for me, for me, who have treated you so badly! Oh, Lizzie," continued Henri de Courcelles seizing her hand, "if the devotion of the life you have rescued can atone to you, it will."

But she drew her hand away hastily—almost with repugnance—from his clasp. Was it not that of a would-be murderer?

"Henri," she replied quietly, though her voice shook, "you must never speak to me like that again. I have done what you say, and I thank Heaven who has crowned my efforts with success; but it was done for the sake of the Past; not of the Present; and nothing in the Future, except the knowledge that your life has been saved for better things, can ever repay me. I have been shocked beyond measure at what I have heard concerning you. You have steeped your hands, or would have done so, in the blood of innocent victims, for the sake of carrying out an unworthy revenge on the daughter of your benefactors. It was a crime which would make any honest person shrink from you, which would make most people consider that a death on the gallows or in the Alligator Swamp, was your just deserts. But I cannot forget, Henri. Ever since I have known your relations with my adopted sister, I have ceased to desire your affection; but I cannot forget that I once valued it and to think of your being sent out of the world without the opportunity to repent was very terrible to me. That is why I have run this risk to save you, and why I am thankful I have succeeded. But don't speak of love to me again, or you may make me sorry instead of glad."

There was a calm, reasonable determination in her voice as she spoke, that brought conviction home to Henri de Courcelles' mind. He saw it plainly now. He had not only lost her love—he had forfeited her respect and esteem; and as the truth smote home to him, the unwonted tears rose to his eyes.

"Why didn't you leave me in the swamp?" he murmured. "I had better have remained there, to become the prey of the alligators, than live under your contempt. Let me go back," he continued, starting to his feet, "for your words have taken all my courage out of me, and I would rather die a thousand deaths by my own hand than fall into those of my enemies and swing like a malefactor from the Fort gates."

"You shall do neither!" exclaimed Lizzie, as she caught his arm, and drew him to her side again. "Come, Henri, be reasonable. Remember I am your friend, and have thought out the whole plan of your escape. Put on this cloak and sombrero. See how completely they disguise you, and cover you from head to foot. The only thing we have to dread now is lest some acquaintance should meet and question me; but that is very unlikely, as this is the general dinner hour for all Europeans, and I will take you home by the unfrequented path."

"But when I reach your bungalow, Lizzie, what will Rosa say?"

"I have been obliged to take Rosa into my confidence, Henri, but she will not betray you. As for the rest, leave it to me, and I believe that, with Heaven's aid, I can bring you out of this strait."

"You are too good to me," he said brokenly; "and I place myself altogether in your hands. Lead on, Lizzie, as you think best, and I will follow."

"No, Henri; we will walk side by side. It will be much better, in case of an encounter with any one who knows us, that I should show a perfect fearlessness in the matter. Take my staff in your hand, and sling the wallet across your shoulder. Then we shall look as if we had been searching the country for herbs for medicinal purposes; and I will gather a bundle of leaves, in order to carry out the illusion. That is right. Now come with me, and let us step out manfully together."

They traversed the couple of miles that lay between them and Beauregard, without encountering anything more formidable than a few negroes sauntering along the road as they returned from work. But as they approached the plantation, the danger of discovery became more imminent, and Lizzie conducted her companion to her bungalow by a circuitous route.

Put Vim in Jaded Muscles

by stimulating and arousing the circulation with light applications of Absorbine, Jr., rubbed in thoroughly. This invigorating liniment acts quickly and surely. It is fragrant and pleasant to use—leaves no greasy residue on the skin.

As Absorbine, Jr., is a powerful germicide as well as a liniment, it is effective for prophylactic and aseptic uses; it destroys the germs in cuts and sores; it may be diluted and used successfully as an antiseptic and germicide for the mouth and throat.

Athletes will find it efficient for limbering sore, stiff muscles. A good formula for a rub-down is one ounce of Absorbine, Jr., to a quart of water or witch hazel.

It is composed of vegetable extracts and essential oils and is positively harmless. Get a bottle to-day and keep it in your desk, in your traveling bag, in your medicine cabinet or in the side pocket of your automobile. It is health insurance of a high type.

At most druggists or sent postpaid upon receipt of $1.25. Trial bottle for 10c. in stamps.

Airmen Cut Swath Through Foe Ranks

With the French Army in France, Aug. 14.—During the battles of the past few days the aerial service, particularly bomarding squadrons has been playing a most important role. The bombing planes have virtually replaced the heavy artillery which the allies were not able to bring up fast enough to keep pace with their advance. The work of these aeroplanes is so organized that they immediately attack groups of infantry convoys and supply trains when they receive signals from reconnoitring planes.

In this their work is very similar to that of the heavy artillery in its co-ordination with the aerial service.

Bombarding squadrons are kept ready for instant service at aerodromes so that they may take the air at the instant a call is received from signal planes, troops or convoys in villages or at road terminals. This system was employed at Lassigny the other day. An observing plane reported the town encumbered with troops and supply trains, airplanes to the number of 121 flew to the spot, and twenty-one tons of bombs were dropped. This attack caused a large fire, destroyed motor lorries, and blocked the streets of Lassigny, tieing up the movement of the enemy for hours.

All cross roads as well as railway junctions where important lines of communication meet, are under continual attack from these bombing planes.

A Baby's Skin

What is so beautiful as baby's soft, smooth, velvety skin? And how is it to be kept free from chafing, irritation and distressing eczema? This is every mother's question.

Many have found the answer in the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Applied after the bath, this soothing, healing ointment overcomes irritation of the skin and prevents the development of eczema and other annoying skin diseases.

Menace to Germany Growing In the East

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Germany, in the bitterest hour of defeat in the west she has yet known is menaced in the east not only by the advance of the allied expeditions, but by the perpetually growing movement of unorganized resistance to her occupation, says the Daily Telegraph in commenting on the situation in Russia. There is not a part of Russia where German troops are stationed where the commanders have not all they can do to hold the people down, by force of arms. The task, the newspaper adds, will soon call, if it has not already, for strong reinforcements apart from the question of meeting allied expeditions.

The Telegraph continues: "If the enemy is in peril in the west, he is little better off in the east, and Prussianism is reaping wherever it has sown."

The removal of the German Embassy to Pskov, says the Daily Chronicle, is an admission by the Germans of their intense unpopularity in Russia.

The Daily News says that the salient fact of the policital situation in Russia is the failure of the Bolsheviki to provide a rallying point for the nation. It believes that the fall of Lenine and Trotzky will be but the first step toward a solution of the problem for it would mean the emergency in Russia of forces disposed to stand for national self assertions as again exploitation by Germany.

Defaulters Warned to Report at Once

It is hoped that all outstanding absentees and deserters in Military District No. 3, will take advantage of the opportunity given them to escape punishment by reporting for duty not later than 24th instant. This chance is afforded them by the Governor General's Proclamation of August 1st. Those who report for duty up to 24th August will be free from punishment; and such of them as are entitled to it will be given harvest or other leave.

All who are affected by this Proclamation should realize the seriousness of their position. The military authorities intend to deal rigorously with offenders and to allow no one wailing to report by 24th instant to escape punishment.

Absentees and deserters failing to report during the period of annesty must understand that they have no leniency to hope for. Instructions have already been received at District Headquarters to try by Court-Martial and inflict severe penalties upon all outstanding absentees and deserters apprehended after 24th August 1918.

Ontario Crop Report Very Encouraging

The following is a summary of reports made by Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:—

Some of this season's cut of fall wheat has been offered on the market in Essex and most of it is of good quality Much of the fall wheat however, will be kept for seed, as with the harvest earlier than usual there is likely to be more time given farmers for preparing the land and getting in a larger acreage of this crop than was put in a year ago.

Many are now nicely into the barley harvest, which is yielding generously; and spring wheat and oats are hurrying so rapidly toward the ripening stage that there is a danger of crowding at cutting time. All spring grains are likely to give good yields, although rather short in the straw.

GOOD CROP OF PEAS

Peas are a surprisingly good crop. Fields of forty bushels per acre are reported from Prince Edward, where the crop is being raised for the canneries.

Beans are also a most promising crop but just now are badly needing rain.

Second growth of clover is looking well despite the drouth although good rains would be most welcome. The Norfolk Representative reports twenty acres of alsike as yielding one hundred bushels of seed.

Potatoes have suffered in some localities from late blight and other diseases but on the whole the crop has done fairly.

Roots have been checked in their growth by the drouth but generally speaking they have done well especially sugar beets.

Corn has picked up wonderfully of late and looks promising.

Essex reports that tobacco plants, like beans, are suffering from lack of rain.

Tomatoes are being marketed in large quantities.

HOT WEATHER AND FLIES

Hot weather and flies have been very trying to live stock. Pastures have turned very dry, and farmers who have a midsummer supply of ensilage are being envied. The milk production has fallen off about 25% during the last two or three weeks owing to the failing grass Good milch cows are bringing from $125 to $150.

Hogs are selling at from $18.25 to $19.00 a cwt. Little pigs a few weeks old are worth $9 apiece. Hogs feed is scarce and dear.

A noticeable movement toward cooperative buying and selling is referred to by the Wentworth Representative.

Farmers so far have got along with less help than was expected, owing largely to the unusually open weather; but the rapid ripening of spring grains may cause a field rush before harvesting is through.

Coconut Oil Fine For Washing Hair

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless, is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

MENACE TO PUBLIC HEALTH.

The accumulation of dead fish in the river is becoming greater each day and the smell is almost unbearable. The condition of the river constitutes a serious menace to the public health and why no action has been taken ere this to clear away the rotting rubbish is incomprehensible. People living adjacent to the mouth of the river are talking of moving out, fearful of an epidemic. Energetic and immediate action by the authorities is absolutely necessary.

THAT FELLOW FEELING

Sociability is the key note of a crowd. When the people get together in the open to celebrate events of such deep national import as the recent victories of the Allies over the armies of the Monster of Berlin, joy is the predominate feature and as the heart warms with pleasure at the lessening of the Hun menace the barrier of social convention melts away and the pushing, surging throng becomes charged with good nature and a fellow feeling for all mankind, except the enemy which seeks to destroy this same community spirit. Remarks from the man or woman next to you, although a stranger, are sure to elicit an answering smile and reply in kind instead of the icy reserve and haughty stare which convention prescribes for ordinary occasions.

These "Get Together" events should be more frequent.

THE TONIC OF ENTHUSIASM.

Civic celebrations of national victories such as the one Monday evening are valuable in the effect they have in fanning the fire of patriotism to more active expression and eliminating war weariness with a stimulation to greater efforts in all lines of patriotic endeavor. Taking everything as a matter of course and becoming only mildly excited at the success of our brave soldiers overseas is not worthy of their sacrifice. We read of the irresistible enthusiasm of Canada's soldiers overseas which swept aside like chaff the German resistance. The glorious spirit of our boys who are fighting for our freedom overseas should stir the stay-at-homes to enthusiasm which will be reflected in stronger efforts than ever to be worthy of the sacrifices of our soldier boys and result in more effective war work in every department of patriotic endeavor.

The least we can do is to write our soldier relatives and friends bright, cheery and newsy letters, send them the home newspapers and show them how deeply their glorious achievements are appreciated at home.

∴ CRISP COMMENT ∴

One thing sure—the Kaiser isn't visitng his "brave troops" at the front these days. Safety first for Wilhelm, remarks the Toronto Globe.

Fritz is more frightened and frightful now, says the Windsor Record That's the way it usually happens to bullies.

The St. John Globe wants to know if Canada will adopt the McAdoo suggestion of an eighty per cent. tax on war profits.

"Satans" is the name given to the American soldiers by the Huns, which is a complimentary way of saying that they are devilish good fighters, says the Kingston Standard.

The citizens who live near the mouth of the Moira fail to see why they should have to breathe day and night an atmosphere polluted with hundreds of dead fish and other refuse. Why not remove the fish? The civic authorities should get busy at once.

Says the Hamilton Herald: "This talk about the anxiety of British and American capitalists over the alleged 'Bolshevik tendencies' in Canadian Governmental circles is merely designed to prevent the Government from any further expropriation of public utilities. It will not succeed."

The people of Germany are beginning to wake up and ask pointed questions and the German press is accusing the military party of trying to cover up the Marne debacle with lies. The Deutsches Zeitung, of Berlin, even goes so far as to admit that "the events between the Somme and the Avre constitute the first serious German defeat of the war." Even the Kaiser cannot fool all of the people all of the time.

OTHER VIEWS

Going Too Far.

London Advertiser.

There is a limit to all things, and that placed on the action of military or "dominion" police officers ought to be narrowed to prevent them demanding exemption papers from a man in a bathing suit who is taking a rest on shore.

Blaming the Government.

Hamilton Herald.

After careful consideration we cannot endorse the opinion of the Toronto Star that the recent rioting in Toronto is directly traceable to the habit of the Union Government at Ottawa of substituting orders-in-council for statutes.

Many to Advise the Hun.

Toronto Star.

The army of the Crown Prince has been well drubbed, but as he has always had some of the most skilled officers at his elbow trying to make a reputation for him, his defeat means a great deal more than that he was out-generaled by Foch.

Without Exception.

New York Sun.

Prince Lichnowsky having been excluded we may assume that the Prussian House of Lords is now 100 per cent liar.

Hanging on By His Teeth.

New York World

The victory in this war will be that side which at home as well as at the front retains a consciousness of victory. The Entente has recognized that more fully than we have.—(Berlin Vossiche Zeitung). And the Vossiche Zeitung doesn't dare let go long enough to spit on its hands; it might fail to "retain the consciousness of victory."

Their Just Reward.

New York Herald

There are dark days and dreary nights ahead for the Hohenzollerns. Unable to visit the capitals of polite nations, their manners will deteriorate and the fork become a mere haunting memory. For them no big game hunting in the Rockies or tiger shooting in India, no merry evenings in Paris, no trips through the beautiful English country with stops at comfortable, historic inns. To them alone, among all the dwellers on earth will be denied the pleasures and advantages of foreign travel and association with cultivated society. Truly a sad outlook is theirs!

Four companies of French soldiers and one of Annamites from China and Indo-China have arrived at Vladivostok. They were welcomed by the Czecho-Slovaks.

MOTHERS TO BE

Should Read Mrs. Monyhan's Letter Published by Her Permission.

Mitchell, Ind.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me so much during the time I was looking forward to the coming of my little one that I am recommending it to other expectant mothers. Before taking it, somedays I suffered with neuralgia so badly that I thought I could not live, but after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was entirely relieved of neuralgia, I had gained in strength and was able to go around and do all my housework. My baby when seven months old weighed 19 pounds and I feel better than I have for a long time. I never had any medicine do me so much good."—Mrs. PEARL MONYHAN, Mitchell, Ind.

Good health during maternity is a most important factor to both mother and child, and many letters have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., telling of health restored during this trying period by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Poet's Corner

KIPLING SAID IT.

We used to call 'em pleasure cars in days before the war,
We didn't know how many things the cars were useful for.
In Paris, too, where cars were born,
they really didn't know
That motors are the answer when you've really got to go.

It's "joy ride cars" and "juggernauts"
and "Can't you drive 'em straight?"
But it's "Gallieni's taxis" when the
Hun is at the gate.
The Hun is at the gate, my boy, the
Hun is at the gate;
It's "Gallieni's taxis" when the Hun
is at the gate.

It's "non-essential industries" when talking for the crowd,
They lambaste all the factories in tones distressing loud;
They tell us that we're wasters, doing
the Allies no good,
That all we do is cater to the spenders
and their brood.

It's "Stop the auto makers who are rich and fat and flushed!"
But it's "Build us trucks by thousands" when there's troopers to be rushed.
It's "Build us trucks by thousands"
when there's troopers to be rushed.

They ask us what we've ever done in aid of Freedom's cause,
Besides to buy the Bonds and things and mind the taxing laws.
Perhaps we've made a thing or two to be a little help,
In putting roller skates beneath the kaiser and his whelp.

It's "Shut 'em off!" and "Close 'em down!" and "Put 'em out for fair"
But "Great's the Liberty Motor!"
when there's trouble in the air.
There's trouble in the air, my boy,
there's trouble in the air,
And "Great's the Liberty Motor" when
there's trouble in the air.

They've tried to stop the motor in a hundred different ways,
From passing senseless statutes down to speed traps by the jays.
They couldn't block or cripple us, or even hold us back,
For the motor wasn't destined to be halted on the track.

It's "Hold 'em down!" and "Soak 'em hard!" because they didn't know That the answer is the motor when you've really got to go.
You've really got to go, my boy, you've really got to go,
And the answer is the motor when you've really got to go.

—Herbert Buckman,
in The Ohio Motorist.

A Laugh or Two

"You will be glad to hear, Henry," said Mrs. Thomson, "that my new dress does not button up the back."

"Hooray!" cried Thomson, turning a somersault. "How does it button?"

"Down the back," said Mrs. Thomson.

Doubtful Praise.

"So Bertie praised my singing, did he," she asked her informer.

"He did that. He said it was heavenly."

"Did he really say that?" she asked again, breathlessly.

"Well, not exactly, but he probably meant that, anyway. He said it was unearthly."

A Long Look Ahead.

Young Husband—Why, Mabel, what are you crying about?

Young Wife—Oh, Tom, I am afraid the baby is going to grow up to be a pugilist! Just see how he doubles up his fist!

Easily Arranged.

One beautiful summer night when the crickets were chirping in the grass and the caterpillars were dropping from the trees, John Henry turned to the charming girl who was sitting on the veranda at his side.

"Edith," said he, a trifle timorously, "there comes to me a thought. I might say a fear."

"Well, what is it?" queried the fair girl, as the other hesitated.

"I suppose," responded John Henry, suggestively, hopefully, "that were I to steal a kiss you would have me arrested?"

"Perhaps," was the ready rejoinder of the girl, "but you could find somebody to pay your fine, couldn't you?"

Exasperated Wife—"If you don't stop your flow of sarcasm I'll go crazy in a minute."

Sarcastic Husband — "You could make it, all right, and not exceed the speed limit at that."

First Chorus Girl—"Rather an old boy who took you out to supper last night. I didn't know you cared for this dotage business."

Second Chorus Girl—"He may be in his dotage; but, believe me, Mamie, he does understand table d'hote-age."

Sergeant-Instructor (to cadet)—"Na, ye'll no' mak' an officer. But it's just possible that if the warr keeps on a while an' ye prractice hardd—verra harrd—ye micht—micht, mind ye—begin to hae a glimmer that ye'll never ken the r-rudiments o' the wurrk!"

Wearing Her Shoes.

A well-known actress was indisposed and her understudy had to take her place. Though not well enough to act she was not too ill to sit in the stalls and see how her deputy got on. At the end of the performance one of the actresses asked her what she thought of her understudy. "Oh, she's all right enough; but what shocking large feet!" "But, my dear, she was wearing your shoes," laughed her friend.

Borden Has Further Interviews on G.T.R.

OTTAWA, Aug. 14.—With the return of Sir Robert Borden to the capital which is expected shortly now, the Government will take up the railway situation with a view either to reaching promptly some final solution of the nationalization problem, or else devising some modus operandi for continued financing of the Grand Trunk System until next year pending an ultimate agreement with the Grad Trunk directorate for the absorption of the system into the Government-owned and operated lines. The Prime Minister has had further interviews with Chairman Smithers and other Grand Trunk directors since Hon. Arthur Meighen left London, but apparently little further progress has been made towards an agreement as to the terms of expropriation.

The Canadian Northern is being administered practically by General Manager D. B. Hanna with a general supervision by the Minister of Railways, Hon. Dr. Reid, in regard to expenditures. All accounts of the system are regularly audited by the departmental officials here and no capital expenditures can be undertaken without the consent of the Minister. Sir William Mackenzie and Sir Donald Mann are now practically out of it and have not attended a directors' meeting of the company for months, so it is said.

No action has yet been taken by the Government to pay the award of the Royal Commission appointed to value the capital stock taken over by the Government. There is little doubt but that the full amount of the award will be recommended to Parliament by the Government for payment.

FOE BIG CANNON MAY BE CAPTURED

PARIS, Aug. 13.—A most welcome piece of news which reached Paris yesterday afternoon is the certainty that the giant cannon which has been firing on Paris throughout the week is now under the constant fire of French heavy guns. The emplacement of "Big Bertha" was discovered by our aviators during the early days of last week, north of Noyon, between Guiscard and Ham. No shell from the big gun has fallen on Paris since Thursday, which seems to imply that the French fire has been effective There is a strong hope here, in view of the rapidity of the allied advance, that the French gunners will be able to make things so hot for "Big Bertha's" crew that they will be unable to get the big gun away before she fails into our hands.

Death in New York of Noted Actress

As a Musical Comedy Star She Attained a World Reputation

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Anna Held, the actress, died here Monday after a long illness.

Miss Held had been ill since April of a rare malady known as myeloma, a disintegration of the spinal marrow and her condition was reported several times as critical. She rallied repeatedly, however, and until attacked by pneumonia a few weeks ago was regarded as on the road to recovery. Her physicians said that only her remarkable will power had prevented her from succumbing long ago.

Anna Held was born in Paris in 1873, of a Polish mother and a French father, upon the death of her father the family moved to London, where for two years prior to going upon the stage Anna was a street singer. When sixteen years old Miss Held returned to Paris after touring Holland and other countries with a comedy company and after that appeared in all the European capitals, winning renown by reason of her beauty and the daring magnificence of her gowns.

For more than ten years Miss Held was in a musical comedy on the American stage nearly every year, appearing part of that time as one of the stars in plays produced by Florenz Ziefeld. jr. Miss Held subsequently was married to Mr. Ziefeld but after several years they separated. A daughter Liane Held, now 23 years old born of a previous marriage, is now on the stage.

Ukraine Training Troops For Army Against Germans

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Bitterness among the peasants of the Ukraine against the Germans is steadily increasing according to advices reaching the State Department yesterday from an eye witness who is in the Russian province.

German soldiers when they travel about the country do so only in large squads, according to this informant otherwise they are attacked by bands of peasants who endeavor to capture them for torture or burial alive. It is declared that the Germans will not be successful in getting food in any appreciable quantity from the Ukraine or in securing forces for the fighting on the west front.

The Ukrainian Government is reported training troops for a Ukrainian army and is reported that the organization at present has approximately 800,000 men.

Dense Formation Bled Huns White

With the British Armies in the Field, Aug. 14.—A copy of an order issued by Ludendorff, which has been captured by the British, reveals how far wrong his plans have gone.

"We cannot win the war by a stubborn defence," said the order, "but only by further successive vigorous attacks. These attacks however,, cannot lead to victory, unless we stick to the improved methods methods of warfare adopted during the recent offensives.

"It is absolutely essential to avoid the old fault of attacking in too dense formations and to reduce our casualties by every possible means."

BATTERYMEN'S SPECIAL

A special train from Toronto passed through Belleville last evening conveying batterymen who had been off on the five-day monthly leave back to Petawawa Camp.

SUSPICIOUS CHARACTER

A stranger acting in a suspicious manner on Commercial street last night about 9.30 was observed by residents of that vicinity who phoned the police. A search of the locality failed to locate the man.

FLOOD PREPARATION

Building material has been placed by the C.P.R. Co. near the railway bridge for the construction of a culvert to help cope with the high water in the spring.

HORSE MISSING

Mr. Clayton Osborne, who lives at Lonsdale on the Third Concession of Tyendinaga reports the loss of a chestnut mare, eight years old, which disappeared from his pasture field. Mr. Osborne notified Chief of Police Newton of his loss.

MANY DEAD FISH

The number of dead fish floating in the river is increasing every day and the smell is very disagreeable while the possibility of disease being caused constitutes a serious problem. Some action should be taken immediately by the authorities to clear away the decaying refuse floating in the river

AMPUTATED FINGERS

Miss Hilda McKenna, who had her right hand crushed a few days ago while employed at Gill's Laundry underwent an operation at the hospital yesterday, when it was found necessary to amputate the first three fingers.

FLOOD DAMAGES SETTLED

It is reported that a claims agent representing the C.P.R. Co., is making settlement of damage claims resulting from the serious flood last spring which caused so much damage along the banks of the Moira River. It is said that a number of the cl [illegible] affected have accepted the amounts offered in settlement.

JOLLY MOTOR TRIP

Ex-Mayor H. F. Ketcheson entertained a jolly party yesterday with a motor car tour of Prince Edward County. Bloomfield, the Sand Banks, Cherry Valley and Picton were visited, with the evening dinner at the latter place. The party, which included Captain Henderson of the Steamship Sardinian, Mr. John Elliott, Mr. W. S. Cook, and the genial ex-Mayor, enjoyed the trip very much and reached Belleville on their return trip ahead of the storm.

FOR ERIE CANAL

The steamer John Webster, built last year for services on the Brockville-Morristown ferry route, has been requisitioned by the United States Government for the balance of the war, and will run on the Erie Canal between Buffalo and Troy. Capt. Chambers, Engineer Bailey and the firemen will remain with the craft while in the service of the Government. During the present season to date the Webster has ferried over a thousand autos between here and the American side.

KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

David May of the 4th concession of Ameliasburg, had a valuable horse killed by lightning during the electric storm Sunday afternoon.

FALSE RUMOR

A rumor spread quickly about the city at noon that a boy had been drowned while bathing at Zwick's Island. The lad was able to contradict the rumor in person.

BURNED TO DEATH

It is reported that a house near Crookston was struck by lightning last night and destroyed, causing the death of one of the inmates.

A SCORCHER

Yesterday was the hottest day of the season, the thermometer passing the 100 mark in the shade. The storm of last night cleared the air and the cool breezes today are greatly appreciated.

VALUABLE BARN BURNED

A severe electrical storm with heavy rain visited this district last evening, continuing for several hours. In the city no serious damage resulted, although a number of trees suffered from the rain and lightning. In the country districts the lightning was very severe, and several reflections indicated that farm buildings had been struck. It was reported that twelve barns had been destroyed between Belleville and Madoc. The most serious fire reported up to noon destroyed the barn and contents belonging to Mr. John M. Boyd, whose farm is situated on lots one and two, third concession of Thurlow Township. Mr. Boyd's barn was struck by lightning about eleven o'clock and the flames spread with great rapidity, destroying the building and contents, including forty tons of hay, twelve loads of barley and three loads of oats, together with a milking outfit, gasoline engine and various farming implements and tools. One pig was also burned. Mr. Boyd succeeded in rescuing a valuable team of horses. The barn was valued at about four thousand dollars, and was partially covered by insurance. The loss on contents will total about fifteen hundred dollars with insurance which will about cover the loss. The insurance on the building was carried by the Hudson Agency, while the contents were insured with H. F. Ketcheson.

Airmen Dropped Tons of Bombs

LONDON, Aug. 14.—The following official communication dealing with aviation was issued last evening:

"Work in the air was actively carried on in all its branches August 12. On the battle front our balloons were pushed forward close behind the line and sent down much useful information. Our artillery and reconnaissance machines were busily occupied all day

"Enemy airplanes were active and there was much air fighting. Thirty hostile machines were brought down and seven driven down out of control One German machine was shot down in flames.

"Forty-five tons of bombs were dropped by us during the 24 hours, the Peronne and Cambrai stations being heavily assailed.

"Twelve of our airplanes, including one night-bombing machine are missing."

The French official communication on aviation from Paris reads:

"On the night of August 12-13 our bombarding airplanes dropped 29 tons of bombs on stations and enemy establishments at Tergnier, Ham, Nesles, St. Quentin and Noyon. Fires are reported to have been seen at several places.

On the 12th, eleven German airplanes were brought down or put out of action. Four captive balloons were destroyed.

Deserted Child Found Beside R'y Track

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 14.—In a shawl around, which was placed a newspaper a blue-eyed baby girl about four months old, was found lying near the Grand Trunk Railway tracks in Walkerville shortly after the departure of a passenger train from the East last midnight. Watchmen, who heard the child wailing, rushed up to the spot and picked it up, looking for possible injuries. It was apparent, however, that the infant had been carefully placed where it was found, as it was in no way injured, and appeared well nourished.

A well-dressed girl who left the train at Walkerville station carrying a bundle was later seen walking along the tracks, and it is believed she placed the baby where it was found. A good description of this young woman is in the hands of the police, who have traced her as far as the Windsor ferry landing.

Polarine
FRICTION REDUCING MOTOR OIL
"Makes a good car better"

For the Camshaft

THE action of the camshaft and timing mechanism largely governs a motor's performance. Their proper action depends on effective lubrication. The oil used must be of proper body to minimize wear. It must be fluid enough to flow between the wearing parts. It must not gum and so retard the rythmic operation of the delicate timing mechanism. For best results it should be Polarine.

HITTING ON EVERY CYLINDER AND WORKING LIKE A CHARM

There's music in the rythmic whirr of a motor that never skips or misses—that hits on every cylinder. It means a steady, dependable flow of power for any hill, speed or load—frictionless harmony with all moving parts correctly lubricated—results assured by the use of

Polarine
FRICTION REDUCING MOTOR OIL

Polarine has the right body and lubricating qualities to reduce friction and minimize wear. It never gums in summer nor congeals in winter. It lessens carbon troubles—keeps down repair bills and keeps up car.

Polarine is made in two grades—Polarine and Polarine Heavy. It is supplied in one-half, one and four gallon sealed cans, also in 12½ gallon steel kegs, barrels and half-barrels. There are also Polarine oils and greases for effective transmission and differential lubrication.

Buy Polarine where you get Premier Gasoline—at the sign of the "Red Ball."

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Aug. 13.—With a run of 160 cars on the Union Stock Yards market yesterday, made up in part by 3031 cattle, there was a good demand for steers weighing 1100 lbs. and upwards. All other classes brought steady prices, with a good enquiry for canners and cutters and bologna bulls at steady prices with last week.

Good milch cows and springers are wanted. Taken altogether we would say that the good cattle were in better request at slightly stronger prices, probably from 15c to 25c per cwt., with the other lines holding steady.

In the sheep and lamb department there was a light run and the market was stronger, best lambs selling up to 20c and 20¼c per lb.; light sheep and bucks 10c to 12c.

Hogs—The run of hogs was 1006, and the market held steady at 20c lb., fed and watered; 20¼c lb., weighed off cars, and 19¾c lb., f.o.b.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Hogs—Receipts, 34,000; market closing 10c to 25c lower than Saturday's average; most decline on common packing grades; butchers, $19.15 to $19.90; light, $19.40 to $20; packing, $18.10 to $19; rough, $17.60 to $18.10; bulk of sales, $18.25 to $19.90; pigs, good and choice, $18 to $18.50.

Cattle—Receipts, 17,000; native and western steers steady to a shade higher; no choice corn-feds here; top, $18.25; butcher cattle strong to 15c higher; calves steady to 25c lower. Beef cattle: Good, choice and prime, $17 to $18.80; common and medium, $10 to $17. Butcher stock: Cows and heifers, $7 to $14.25; canners and cutters, $6 to $7. Stockers and feeders: Good, choice and fancy, $10 to $13; inferior, common and medium, $7.50 to $10. Veal calves, good and choice, $16.50 to $17.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 15,000; market strong to 25c higher; top native lambs, $17.75; westerns, $18.50; feeders, $17.65; range wethers, $14.60. Lambs, choice and prime, $17.75 to $18.60; medium and good, $17 to $17.75; culls, $12 to $14. Ewes: Choice and prime, $13.25 to $13.90; medium and good, $11.50 to $13.25; culls, $4.50 to $9.50.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

East Buffalo, Aug. 12.—Cattle—Receipts, 4800. Good, strong; common, slow; prime steers, $17.25 to $17.50; shipping steers, $16.50 to $17; butchers, $12 to $16.50; yearlings, $13 to $16.50; heifers, $10 to $13.50; cows, $6.50 to $11.50; bulls, $7.50 to $11.50; stockers and feeders, $7.50 to $10; fresh cows and springers, $65 to $145.

Calves—Receipts, 2000. Steady; $7 to $8.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 6000. Easier; heavy, $20.75 to $21; mixed, yorkers, light yorkers and pigs, $21 to $21.10, a few at $21.15; roughs, $18 to $18.25; stags, $13 to $15.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts, 2000. Easier and active; lambs, $14 to $17.50; yearlings, $10 to $15; wethers, $13.50 to $14; ewes, $6 to $13; mixed sheep, $13 to $13.50.

Trent Road.

Mr. John Elliott informed the Board that a delegation representing the County of Hastings would wait upon the Ontario Government today asking that the Trenton-Belleville road be taken over.

Pollution of River.

Ex-Mayor Panter asked what steps were being taken to prevent further pollution of the river.

Mayor Platt said that a conference had been held with officials of the Corby distillery, Dr. Clinton, District Medical Officer of Health, Dr. Yeomans, Medical Officer of Health for the city, and himself for the Council. Dr. Clinton, after investigation, did not seem to think that the refuse from the distillery was the cause of the river pollution, but Dr. Yeomans and the speaker differed from him. Dr. Yeomans was reporting the condition of the river to the Provincial Board of Health with the request that an expert be sent to Belleville at once to investigate.

Corby Bathing Pool.

A brief discussion took place upon the most desirable location for the civic bathing pool provided for in the will of the late Senator Harry Corby. It was the unanimous opinion that Zwick's Island Park was the best site.

FRENCH CAPTURE RIBECOURT AUSTRALIANS CLEAR CATEAUX

ENEMY LOSES MORE GROUND ON SOMME FRONT

FRENCH TAKE RIBECOURT, ON THE ROAD LEADING TO NOYON — MANY PRISONERS TAKEN — PREPARATIONS FOR COUNTER-ATTACKS BY GERMANS WERE SOON DISCOVERED—GERMANS EVACUATE FORWARD POSITIONS IN REGION NORTH OF ALBERT — ALL HOSTILE POSITIONS BETWEEN BRAY AND ETINEHEM FALL INTO HANDS OF AUSTRALIANS.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

RIBECOURT FALLS TO FRENCH.

PARIS, Aug. 15.—The town of Ribecourt, on the road leading to Noyon, and 6¼ miles southwest of that town, has been captured by the French, according to the official statement issued last night.

The statement follows:

"During the day our troops, continuing their progress between the Matz and the Oise, took Ribecourt.

"East of Belval our infantry elements, having discovered preparations for a German counter attack, succeeded in taking as prisoners seven officers, of whom two were battalion commanders, and a certain number of soldiers.

"In the region of Roye and Lassigny the artillery fire has been very spirited."

AUSTRALIAN VICTORY.

With the British Army in France, Aug. 15.—All hostile positions between the western outskirts of Bray and Etinehem have fallen into the hands of the Australians, thus placing the Somme River banks southwest of Bray under the control of the British. The Australians also have cleared the enemy from Cateaux Wood.

HUNS EVACUATE POSITIONS.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—The Germans have evacuated their forward positions at Beaumont Hamel, Serre, Puisieux-au-Mont and Bucquoy, lying in the region north of Albert, according to Field Marshal Haig's communication issued last night.

FRENCH CAPTURE HEIGHTS.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—French troops have captured all the high ground on Lassigny massif and are working down the northern and eastern sides so that a further retirement of the enemy in that sector is probable.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer

Canadian Press Special

LONDON, Aug. 15.—(official) British troops have advanced slightly east of Rainecourt in district north-west of Chaunes, on the Picardy battle front to-day, the war official statement announced.

ARTILLERY ACTIVE ON FRENCH FRONT

PARIS, Aug. 15.—(official statement) The night was marked by rather intense activity of artillery between the Avre and the Oise rivers. An enemy raid in Champagne against the Marquis Sector was without results.

Fierce Fighting on Lassigny Top.

London, Aug. 15.—The most terrific fighting took place yesterday on top of the Lassigny right. The French there were fighting their way stubbornly forward and yesterday afternoon were pushing solidly down the far side of the elevation, the reports declare.

The Germans were said to be putting up the fiercest sort of resistance and the fighting; it was indicated, might last a day or two before the hill was finally clear of the enemy.

TAKE OVER HIGHWAY.

A deputation from Hastings County including members of the County Council, Warden Thomas Montgomery, T. H. Thompson, M.P. for East Hastings; S. Grant, M.P.P. for East Hastings; J. R. Cook, M.P.P. for North Hastings; J. W. Johnson, M.P. P. for West Hastings, and members of the County Council, waited upon the Deputy Minister of Highways at Toronto yesterday and asked that the province take over the provincial highway in Hastings County, which is approximately 30 miles long. They also asked that another piece of road in the county which is much travelled be protected.

A. H. Gee of Hamilton Collegiate won the Prince of Wales scholarship and Miss G. V. Lewis, 357 Huron St., Toronto stood second in the Province in the recent matriculation examinations.

2,300,000 United States Soldiers In France Before June, 1919

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—In expectation of having two million three hundred thousand trained American troops in France before June 30, 1919, Secretary of War Baker and his aides presented the new draft law amendments to the Senate committee today. The main point in the amendments is the widening of the draft age, making it 18 to 45.

Alleged Deserter Has Bad Record

ST. THOMAS Aug. 15.—Thomas ("Fido") Dalton, the local man who, last Thursday pleaded guilty before Judge Ermatinger to the theft of five pairs of shoes from a M. C. R. car last September, and who was remanded until Tuesday for sentence, appeared before his Honor again yesterday morning, when he was sentenced to not less than five years and not more than ten years in the Kingston penitentiary. Dalton has a long criminal record both in this city and elsewhere. He has been convicted of theft on three occasions having been paroled from the penitentiary twice. At the time of his arrest in this city two weeks ago he was a fugitive from justice, having made his escape from the London lock-up after serving but three days on a six months' sentence for violation of the O. T. A. and attempt to steal an auto. He is also wanted by the Hamilton military authorities for alleged desertion from the army. Dalton is 33 years old.

STAR GERMAN AIRMAN CAPTURED BY BRITISH

LONDON Aug. 15.—Reuter's correspondent at British army headquarters cables last evening that the airmen on both sides continue to exploit the glorious weather to the fullest degree There are numerous aerial combats besides constant harrying tactics employed by us. Our mastery of the air is so complete that it is difficult for the Huns to cross our lines in daylight. Lieut. Dillik, one of the star airmen of the Richthoven circus, was forced to land behind our lines. It is claimed that he brought down 31 of our machines.

FARMER GETS $200,000 FOR NEW TYPE TRACTOR

WINDSOR, Aug. 15.—A farm tractor which is declared to be more easily handled than a team of horses, and which under a crucial test yesterday performed some really remarkable feats has been sold by its inventor, Leo McClosky, of Maidstone Township, to a Detroit firm at a price said to be in the neighborhood of $200,000. The deal was closed after experts had seen the tractor operated for an hour on the McClosky Farm, Tuesday.

Boches Murdered Hospital Patients

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Caspar Whitney cables as follows from Paris:

At Mount Notre Dame, three kilometers south of Bazoches on the Vesle under a hill and out of the direct fire are the charred remains of the French which the Boche burned to the ground after killing most of the doctors and nurses and the six hundred patients with their machine guns, which they brought up and pointed through the very windows of the one-storey wards.

Many Canadians In Air Forces

OTTAWA, Aug. 15.—The total number of Canadians on the strength of the Royal Flying Corps and the Royal Naval Air Force now amalgamated into the Royal Air Force, stands at 13,495. This total comprises 1,008 officers seconded from the Canadian Expeditionary Force, 10,603 enlisted in Canada for the R.A.F. and R.N.A.S.; 94 loaned to R. A. F. for airpalnes construction and 150 civilians who came to England at their own expense and enlisted in the air service.

On account of their special adaptability and initiative Canadians proved to be excellent as flying officers. It is understood that no less than 25 per cent. of the actual flying officers in France are Canadians.

Several Roumanian officers have made their way through Russia to Paris for the purpose of joining the allied armies. One of them, Lieut. Ursuleanu, made the trip to the Russian coast on foot.

Starving Peasants March on Petrograd

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 15.—The Soviet Government has issued a proclamation declaring that the Russian Republic is in danger. The Petrograd Soviet have retired to Kronstadt. Armed peasants are reported to be marching on Petrograd. They declare they are starving and the Red Guards have stolen all their food. Dissatisfaction with the Soviets, it is said, prevails everywhere in Russia.

New Hun Minister of Marine Appointed

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 15.—Vice-Admiral Behnecke has been appointed German Minister of Marine in succession to Admiral Von Capelle.

Moscow Evacuated By Soviet Troops

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 15.—Soviet troops have begun to evacuate Moscow. The gold reserves have already been removed to unknown places.

POLICE BATONS USED

MONTREAL, Aug. 15.—A clash between the police and a number of citizens over the arrest of an American naval officer took place last night at the corner of Clarke and St. Catharine streets, with the police using their batons freely. Several citizens suffered severe injuries.

It appears that the officer was told to move on by a detective in plain clothes. He refused and was promptly arrested. The crowd that gathered objected to the manner in which the officer was handled, and tried to rescue him.

The officer gave the name of Richard Perry and his home as New York City. The police dropped the case against Perry yesterday.

TWELVE AIRPLANES DOWNED BY FRENCH

Many Stations in German Lines Made Targets for Bombs

PARIS, Aug. 15.—An official statement says:

"Aviation: Our crews have downed or put out of action twelve German machines. On the night of August 13-14 our bombing machines dropped 32 tons of projectiles on enemy objectives, Tergnier, St. Quentin, Ham and Noyon; on bivouacs in the region of Ougoles and the railway stations at Maison Bleue, Guignicourt and Chatelet-sur-Tourne were copiously bombarded. Violent fires broke out at Ham and Noyon, which received as their share fifteen tons of explosives.'

THE TERM "MASSIF."

Massif, in the French language, when used as an adjective, conveys the same meaning as the English word "massive." When used with a noun after it, it means "a group." Therefore the term "Massif of Lassigny" which is appearing in the war news daily now means "the group of hills at Lassigny." These hills are immediately west of the Oise River.

AMERICAN AVIATORS IN IMPORTANT RAIDS

Attacks Proceed Against German Railway Yards at Three Points

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—American aviators have conducted successful raids on the railroad yards at Conflans, Longuyon and Dommary-Baroncourt, General Pershing reported in his communique for yesterday, which was made public last night by the war department.

Passengers Stricken With Strange Disease

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—A disease which the officers of a Norwegian steamship, just arrived here, insisted was the Spanish influenza caused the death of four persons on the voyage. When the vessel reached this port, ten men and women were severely ill and exhibiting all the symptoms of the disease which caused the death of the other four.

Riots have occurred in Kyoto, Japan, against the high price of rice. The troops had to be called out to restore order.

Crerar Appeals For Help For The Crops

Wants City Folk to Assist in Saving Every Bit of Harvest

OTTAWA, Aug. 15.—Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Agriculture, makes an urgent appeal to residents of towns and cities who have had experience in farm work to assist in harvesting operations. In a statement to the press Mr. Crerar said:

"Large areas in Western Canada have suffered very severely. Our grain crop there will, unfortunately fall below what we had hoped for. However Eastern Canada, on the whole, promises to reap a very excellent crop, and labor must be forthcoming to take this off.

"In the recent registration of the man and woman power of Canada almost 200,000 men of various ages who registered in Eastern Canada and who have been raised on farms or had worked on farms expressed their willingness to assist in doing fine work when necessary. To those I direct this appeal especially. With this number willing to help no difficulty should be experienced in saving every bit of crop."

Tank "Dominion" Led All Land Craft

With the Canadian Forces in the Field Aug. 14.—The enemy launched three counter-attacks against the Canadian division holding the northern part of our sector but was repulsed on each occasion with sanguinary losses. We remain in possession of Chailly. Our troops made good progress in straightening out their line and consolidating the position.

The tank "Dominion" led the tanks into action in this sector, with a piper of a Manitoba unit sitting astride the top. Skirling his pibroch, he came through unscathed, but another piper who piped his battalion into action was killed.

Shot Pierces Brow of Bank Clerk

HAMILTON, Aug. 15.—Charles M. Strange, of Toronto, employed for several weeks as assistant receiving teller at the Bank of Montreal is dying as a result of a shot which pierced his right temple.

Other occupants of the boarding house at 130 Hunter street west, where Strange roomed, heard a shot shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday morning and on investigation found the young man lying unconscious with a revolver close by.

CHATHAM GAS RATE BACK AT OLD SCALE

Chatham, Aug. 15.—Gas rates to domestic consumers in Chatham have been reduced to the old schedule, namely 35 cents per thousand cubic feet for cooking only and 25 cents for cooking and heating, according to a letter received by Mayor Clemnts from Chairman D. McIntyre, K.C., of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board. The manufacturer's rate, which was advanced to 35 cents by order of the board, effective July 1, will remain the same. The rates have been reduced to the old scale pending final decision in the application of the Union Natural Gas Co., for an increase which will be decided at the resumed sitting of the board in the near future. Local consumers who have paid the July bills at the increased rates, will be given rebates by the Chatham Gas Co. this month.

WILSON GOING TO EUROPE?

PARIS, Aug. 15.—According to a statement by Deputy Maurice Damour in the Journal yesterday, President Wilson will make a visit to Europe and Paris. The Temps says that neither the Minister of Foreign Affairs nor the American Embassy had een advised of any intention of the President to cross the Atlantic.

ALLIES TO OCCUPY WHOLE TRIANGLE

PARIS, Aug. 15.—"Our methodical pressure warrants the hope that the whole triangle formed by the Lassigny Ribecourt and Noyon soon will be occupied," an unoffificial statement declared yesterday afternoon.

Latest advices from battle front say Canadians launched another fierce attack yesterday morning.

Shattered Men Given New Faces by Process Startling In Effect

Marvellous Work of the Plastic Surgeon Amazes Canadian Editors — Ontario Govt. Hospital Gives Man Chance of Regeneration

LONDON, Aug. 15.—The members of the party of Canadian newspaper men now touring the British Isles as the guests of the Ministry of Information have made a tour of inspection of the Ontario Government Hospital. The hospital has two thousand beds and personnel of corresponding proportions and is among the largest Canadian institutions of its kind in Great Britain. The general public knows little of the class of casualty handled there, and were it not for the untrumpeted miracles which the plastic surgeon is performing every day there would be return to civil life out of war's maelstrom hundreds of bright lads, with every human instinct for fellowship and affection awakened and intensified by endless months of loneliness and monotony, but with the consciousness that their faces, torn and harrowed out of all human semblance must forever make them helpless objects of pitying aversion and must forever shut them off from things for which they hunger.

To speak of a soldier's honorable scars has long been part of the common currency of expression but some scars, despite the honor they deserve are so utterly gruesome as to rouse a feeling of repulsion, if not nausea. A quite respectable volume of drama and fiction has been built up around the tragedy of facial disfigurement and here the writer's art is able to make sympathy conquer horror. When however the merciful veil of romance is torn aside and we are confronted with reality, whose repellance must be seen to be conceived then is the victim's mental martyrdom complete.

Those better qualified to judge than a journalistic layman tell me that some very wonderful dental and surgical work is being done at the Ontario hospital, and from what I have seen myself, this would seem to be no more than the truth, writes the editor of the Quebec Chronicle. From the point of view of restoring the shattered human mechanism to approximate efficiency, it is probable that there are other classes of work more urgent and more vital but as a matter of personal impression both on account of the comparative novelty and tragic interest the department of plastic surgery outstands vividly, compelling wonder and admiration.

In the argot of "shop" this department is known as "the beauty parlor" but I venture to say that for those who pass through its doors the place means the whole difference between regeneration and a living death

You will not suffer from tenderness of the skin if you apply Dr. Chase's Ointment after shaving. It acts as a food for the skin, keeping it smooth and velvety.

Canada on Eve of Great Prosperity

LONDON, Aug. 15.—The Canadian newspaer party are busy seeing fresh phases of the British war efforts. They had come in the night through hundreds of miles of towns, where night was turned into day in the rush of war production. The glare of the blast furnaces illumined the sky, and lighted factory and foundry stood out in the blackness. Shops that produce six thousand six-inch shells weekly are not exceptional in this area. Some attain an output of twenty thousand weekly.

The great captains of industry directing this war effort are alive to the possibilties of the future, and discuss freely their confidence in Canada. Unanimously they predict her prosperity. Among those who believe that Canada is on the eve of tremendous development, are the shipmenders of the Clyde, of whom Hugh Latta is one. These captains said to me:

"We are already preparing plans for works in Canada for ourselves. We believe opportunities for shipbuilding in your country are unexcelled anywhere. You have the raw material and coal within easy access, and what is of great importance, a manufacturer or builder may begin afresh with you on new plans and under new conditions."

It is conceded that Canada will receive large immigration from these islands. Employers recognize this and are considerably concerned. The effective results obtained from women workers are reassuring to them in a large measure, but they feel many men who have gone to the trenches will not return to the workshops, at least not in Scotland and England. Among these are mechanics, thousands of whom are officers in the field, who will not care to be reduced to the working ranks in shops.

FATHER IS CHARGED WITH BEATING BOYS

PORT HOPE Aug. 15—James Wask Carryville, Vaughan Township, pleaded not guilty in the county police court to the charge of assaulting his two boys. The magistrate suspended sentence, although Wask's neighbors appeared and stated he was continually beating them. The boys who were stripped in court bore evidence of being roughly treated. In pronouncing the sentence the magistrate said: "I regret that I cannot send you to jail to get a similar thrashing. You are an inhuman brute and if it were not for your two children you should go to penitentiary."

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

BY REV. A. M. HUBLY

THE CHRIST-TAUGHT CREED.

Article IV.—"God is Our Near Father. John xiv:23.

Wrapped up in the idea of God is a divine personality. Jesus Christ would have us know this personality, not as some far-off abstraction of incomprehensible omnipotence, or cold automatic energy by which the universe has been created and is sustained, ruled directed; but He would have us know Him as a loving Father nigh at hand. To know God in His three-fold manifestation—Father, Son and Holy Spirit—is eternal life. To be without God is death—a kind of perdition which may be termed "out of harmony with the mind and will of God"

There is in all human life a certain idea of a supreme being and a consciousness of moral responsibility. This is not of human chance, but is because of the divine image in which man was first created. To get back to that original image and to realize redemption from sin we must exercise personal volition. There must be the desire, the yearning, the calling, for and upon God.

The Psaldist says: "God is nigh unto all them that call upon Him."

James admonishes a two-fold action for which we are responsible. He says: "Resist the devil and he will flee from you. Draw nigh unto God and He will draw nigh unto you."

Jesus says: "If a man love me he will keep my words: and My Father will love him and we will come to him and make our abode with him." This is the basic principle of the Gospel of Christ: "Immanuel—God with us."

I need not tell you that other gospels are preached, with no other purpose in view than the making merchandise of the souls of the people. It was the debasing influence of the false gospel which so degraded Christianity in many of the countries of Europe, Asia, and the isles of the sea that made Mohammed go out from its teaching sick at heart, and in his unregenerate condition institute a form of belief which drew so many followers into its filthy embrace.

If the Christian teachers had given the young man from the desert, the Christ-taught creed when he sought light and truth from the church of Christ, so-called, instead of pointing him to saints and priests, humanly appointed ordinances, ceremonies, creeds and traditions, what battlefields drenched in blood, and centuries of war, and much of the present strife the world might have been saved from!

By precept and example, by word and deed, influences are started that work harm, it may be to friend or foe, and may become of world-wide effect. How careful each one should be to speak and act as in the presence of God. A word of skepticism, a suggestion of a God far away, and only to be approached by a favored few, may ruin the faith of a loved one, and cause him to lose the blessing of spiritual fellowship, and the holy concomitants of prayer and spirit-breathed devotion.

If every Christian believer would live conscious that God was as near to him as the beating of his own heart, how different would be the results of daily life. We cannot do wrong when we are conscious of God's touch upon us. So when this "Christ-Taught Creed" becomes our creed or an article of our faith it in reality becomes a transforming element in life and character.

One of our poets has said:

"Speak to Him, thou, for He hears,
And spirit with spirit can meet.
Closer is He than breathing:
Nearer than hands and feet."

How clear is the teaching of Christ along these lines. He says: "I and my Father are one." Again, speaking to His disciples, He said: "I am in my Father and ye in me, and I in you." Surely every believer can say:

"I am so very near to God!
Nearer I cannot be;
For in the person of His Son,
I am as near as He."

My son, for whom the South African war opened the gates of Heaven, was doing sentry on a copie at night. The spot was the scene of a battle a few days previous. A number of slain Boers were buried where they fell—or partly so. Here and there a foot, or a hand protruded from the shallow graves. The odor of death's corruption was sickening. This, in the pitchy darkness filled the young soldier with a depressing sense of loneliness and helplessness. There were other guardsmen on the copie, and they were not far from one another, but perfect silence was demanded for fear of attracting the attention of the enemy encamped not far away. Although the sentries were stationed not far apart they were not allowed to speak and in the dark they could not see each other. But each could feel by the exercise of thought: "I am not alone; my comrades are near me."

This was a parable of a higher faith and a more helpful comradeship. On that dark and dreary spot of death and desolation was the "Comrade in White," the "Lord of Life," and in Him the Heavenly Father was near each lonely guardsman.

Let us beware of an art, science, philosophy or religion that do not help men to a closer adherence to this creed: "God our Father is near." The more we seek a realizing sense of the divine presence with appreciation, the more pleasure we shall have in trying to translate Christian ideals into realities. Faith in God as a refuge and very present help in every time of trouble, will become strong, and both work and recreation will be safely planned and carried out with a mind sensible of the truth expressed in the words: "Thou, God, seest me!"

"Once did I seek the time and place
For stillness and for prayer;
Now, everywhere, I seek His face,
For He is always near."

Let not this article of faith be a dead letter creed to float away on the breath that utters it, far in the distant sphere of vain speculation, but rather believe it to be as every word of Christ—spirit and life. Make it a living companion that walks this earth with the children of God day by day.

There are times when we expect to realize the nearness of our Heavenly Father. When in our "Father's house of prayer" with emotions stirred by the kindled flame of devotional enthusiasm we readily confess "God is here." But the glory of this truth is that He is found where least expected and makes His presence a very blessed reality. I can bear testimony to the finding the nearness of my Heavenly Father on the deck of a burning ship on the ocean a thousand miles from land. He is not only near when we with vision of faith see Him high and lifted up, His train and glory filling the temple of worship; but when in the fiery furnace of affliction, or in the lion's den of hatred, or amid the storm-driven debris of wrecked hopes, on sea-girt isle a prisoner "for the word of God, and for the testimony of Jesus Christ.". God's eye is over the righteous and His ear is open unto their cry, and there is nothing to hard for Him to accomplish. "Many are the afflictions of the righteous, but the Lord delivereth him out of them all."

In the story of the young Hebrew sold into slavery, falsely accused and imprisoned in Egypt, we read: "But the Lord was with Joseph and shewed him mercy." The Lord was with His suffering servant Jeremiah in the loathsome dungeon; and He also stood by Paul on the storm-driven vessel and gave him all the people from the engulfing waters, when the ship went to pieces.

This God is our Father, He is with His children on the stormy sea of life and in the darkness and shadow of death. He brings the storm-tossed seamen to their "desired haven," and puts the "everlasting song" into their lips. So, to all who are in sorrow, suffering, or any other adversity common to the children of God, while strangers upon their earthly pilgrimage toward their home, that peaceful haven will soon appear. From the sun-lit hill of glory each and every trial will be seen to be special proofs of our Heavenly Father's nearness in faithful ministry, and every trial will be encircled with a halo of love.

Only let us "walk with God as dear children." It may be that we daily go forth and "weeping"; but if bearing the precious seed of His garnering, we "shall doubtless come again rejoicing bringing our sheaves" with us.

GERMANS LEARNING.

Amsterdam, Aug. 15.—A despatch received here from Frankfort says that despite the timely alarm given, several persons were killed and material damage was done, especially in the streets of Frankfort, during the British air raid of Monday.

Barricade Halts Headlong Flight, of Two Deserters

MONTREAL, Aug. 15.—An escape with all mad adventure and excitement of a wildwest affair of bygone days was staged recently between Montreal and a little town called Dannemora, a few miles across the border from Rouse's Point.

The opening scene of this "show" was laid in Montreal, when two husky Americans who had enlisted in the Canadian forces, presented themselves to Leo Greanblatt at his Maisee Auto stand. The two recruits were so anxious to make their getaway, from all the discipline and tiresome routine of the army that they pushed $75 into Greanblatt's hand and said "Rouse's Point." Greenblatt accepted the offer and set out.

Entered Lonely Forest

Arrived at Rouse's Point, the men impressed upon their driver the wisdom of pushing farther into the United States. Near the Franklin County line the passengers instructed the driver to take a side road which lead them into a forest. After getting well into the woods Greanblatt decided to show his clients a thing or two, and protest against their orders. But it was too late. No sooner had he stopped his car that he was roughly dragged from his seat and tied to a tree, and the $75 paid for the drive, together with a few other odd dollars he had in his pockets, were recovered, and divided between his passengers. Then the bold birds continued their journey with the car.

For the next thirty minutes Leo Greanblatt worked hard to free himself, and finally succeeded. He made for the nearest farm house and got busy with the telephone. All the farms in this seltion have telephones, so it was not difficult to trace the direction in which the ex-soldiers were speding. After much phoning the word finally came from the "hello-girl" at Cannon Corner that "a huge car was coming down the road rocking like a cradle, it was going so fast," and just as instructions to stop it were to be given, she called over the line: "Oh, there it goes," and hung up the receiver.

Then the alarm was sent on to Dannemora, and the wide awake citizens of that little town took council together, and decided that the only thing that could stop a motor car from going right through the place, was a barricaded street. They pulled a large road scraper, across the highway—and just as their work was accomplished, around the corner came the car.

The strategy succeeded, and the car was stopped. The deserters were marched to the local lock-up, and from there were later transferred to the jail at Chateauguay, U.S.A. The sequel is not yet, as it is understood that it has not been decided whether the prisoners will be tried first for deserting from the Canadian Army or for robbery committed in Uncle Sam's domain.

Stand by Men At the Front

LONDON, Aug. 15.—"Like the Ministers and the press, I have made Cook's tours of the front," declared Bishop Fallon of London, Ont., at the Canadian Pay Corps' dinner Tuesday night, which was presided over by General Ross. Good-natmured laughter greeted the Bishop's statement. Proceeding in a serious vein the Bishop said: "I am sorry to say that the only criticism I have heard of the Canadians' effort has come from Canadians at home. Therefore I hope the members of the press here now will instruct and inform the people at home of the wonderful things that have been accomplished. I do not for one moment mean that Canada alone is winning this war, but there is no section doing its share more thoroughly than that element led by Gen. Currie in France, Gen. Turner in England, and Gen. Mewburn in Canada."

Value of Reinforcements.

Earlier in the evening General Turner, alluding to this week's successes by the Canadians, spoke significantly of the value of keeping reinforcements in England to full strength. "Battalions may go into line in full fettle," he said, "but after the first round they look around for reinforcements. I am confident that we shall have enough reinforcements here now to maintain our force in what may prove to be the greatest fight of the last four years."

Major-Gen. Mewburn, amidst loud cheers, said: "I am prepared to stand or fall by my efforts to support the corps at the front. I feel our efforts in Canada have not been in vain. When he was asked in Canada why the men already in England could not be used as reinforcements I looked on the matter as a business proposition and resolved to create a reserve for a rainy day, for I knew the morale of the corps would be greater knowing reinforcements were already in England."

General Mewburn also expressed the hope that in the years to come a scheme would be promoted whereby the militia units would be able to carry battle honors won by their own men on their colors.

Hon. C. C. Ballantyne expressed the belief that Canada would shortly have a maritime unit of its own working in harmony with the Admiralty. Sir George Perley proposed the health of the visitng pressmen, H. H. Cummings responding.

How Your Neighbor
Ends Her Corns

HAVE you noted how uncommon corns are nowadays? That pained look—that slipped-off shoe—are not very often seen. The reason lies in Blue-jay, which millions have adopted. An easy, gentle, scientific way to forever end a corn.

Those corn-free folks don't pare corns. They don't merely pad them. They don't use old-time treatments, harsh and mussy.

When a corn appears they wrap it with a Blue-jay, then forget it. It never pains again.

In two days, usually, the corn disappears. Only rare, tough corns need a second application.

The way is simple, easy, quick. It is right and scientific. A noted chemist evolved it. And it is made by a world-famed surgical dressing house. Don't keep paring and protecting corns. They are deformities—remove them.

Learn how Blue-jay does it. It will be a revelation. After that test you will never again let a corn annoy you.

Make the test tonight.

THE BAY BRIDGE.

Mayor Platt's statement to the Board of Trade in regard to the attitude of the City Council toward a free Bay Bridge was far from satisfactory to the members present. The statement was neither frank nor fair and stopped short of the whole truth, even with abundant opportunity to make a supplementary statement in explanation.

The Mayor announced that the City Council had decided to drop the negotiations for the purchase of the Bay Bridge because the company "tried to soak us." He also said that the city representatives had offered $65,000 and that the Private Bills Committee of Parliament had named $61,000 as a fair price for the bridge.

Mayor Platt was asked by a member of the Board if the Private Bills Committee had not fixed a price at which the company must sell to the municipalities, considerably in excess of $61,000. His Worship replied that the committee had assured the delegation that $61,000 was a fair price.

Col. Ponton interposed here with the statement that the Private Bills Committee had fixed the price which the bridge company must sell to the municipalites on demand within a given time at $72,500.

Expert Valuation of Bridge.

It is only fair to say that the representatives of the city in agreement with the members of the Private Bills Committee employed an expert accountant, Mr. Clarkson, to place a valuation upon the bridge from the standpoint of investment and depreciation. This resulted in a valuation considerably in excess of $72,500, but was scaled down to that figure by the Private Bills Committee and so reported to Parliament and embodied in an Act of Parliament which makes it obligatory upon the company to sell out to the municipalities concerned at $72,500 at any time within six months from the passage of the bill.

City Paid Part of Valuator's Bill.

Mayor Platt and the representatives of the Belleville City Council were parties to securing the services of Mr. Clarkson and the city's share of his bill for making the valuation was paid without question.

If Mr. Clarkson had named a purchase price under $65,000, the city representatives, according to their own statements, would have jumped at it—according to his investigations, however, he found a higher valuation, and according to Mayor Platt's statement, the City Council quit cold, or as he put it "agreed to drop the free bridge question because the company tried to soak us."

City Valuator Fixed Price.

Now according to all the information available it was the valuator hired and paid by the City Council who was responsible for the price being fixed at $72,500—why say that the company "TRIED TO SOAK US"?

It is absolutely necessary to be fair, honest and above board in this free bridge movement and treat the bridge company as British subjects and business people.

No Right to Drop the Bridge Question.

The members of the City Council have no right to drop the question of a free bridge, and if they are true to their oaths of office they will "carry on" until this barrier to the progress of Belleville and Prince Edward County is removed forever. Belleville business men have given Mayor Platt and his colleagues no mandate to drop the bridge question. Prince Edward County and Ameliasburg do not wish the bridge question dropped and the attitude as expressed by Mayor Platt is PLEASING ONLY TO A SMALL CLIQUE OF POLITICIANS who have worked early and late to bedevil and confuse the whole question of a free bridge with the object of preventing its consummation. That is the only conclusion any one can arrive at from their actions.

HOW ABOUT OUR PARTNERS?

The parties directly interested in the purchase price of the Bay Bridge are the City of Belleville, Prince Edward County and the Ontario Government, the Government agreeing to pay forty per cent. of the purchase price and maintenance. What right has the City Council of Belleville to drop the bridge purchase matter without consulting the other parties interested, and in direct opposition to the wishes of all progressive citizens of Belleville?

$2,500 THE STUMBLING BLOCK.

Belleville's share of the difference between the price offered by the City Council and that fixed by Parliament would be about $2,500, and for this trifling amount thousands of dollars will be driven away from the city if the City Council's attitude "to drop the bridge question" is maintained.

The Poet's Corner

KITCHENER OF KHARTOUM.

Not with burial psalms we laid him in old Albion's soil away,
Where all nations with his countrymen could view the shrine each day;
He was sent to help far Russia, calling out for sudden aid,
And he left his home and army, stern of face but unafraid.

'Mid the sands and heat of tropic climes he had shown his fighting worth,
Now sent to northern lands to thwart
the Madmen of the earth;
To nerve and drill Slav soldiers till they equalled Prussia's best
And turn the Huns back in the East as three nations held the West.

Not so 'twas fated, for his ship was sank in storm and gloom,
And deeper sank the hearts who loved brave Kitchener of Khartoum.
What greater loss from submarines has been or yet will be,
Than when on deck with eyes uplift
he drowned in midnight sea.

E'en burial in Westminster, the world's most famous shrine,
Could not make his name more famous, nor with greater glory shine.
The seven seas which guard the coast of Britain's island shore
Will sound his call to service in each wave for evermore.

In the murmur of the seashell and the whisper of the breeze,
When the winds each morn from seaward caress her flags and trees;
In the cry of seabirds, thunderstorms,
and breakers' roar and boom,
Britain hears three heroes: Nelson,
Blake, join Kitchener of Khartoum.

Each lad who feels this challenge will grow up a braver man;
Each maid will answer "Here am I to do the best I can."
His death but crowned a noble life to God and duty sworn,
His fame a help for present stress and to children yet unborn.

—James Henry Darlington, Bishop of Harsissburg, in the New York Herald.

Buffalo News.

It is no longer a question of restoring pre-war conditions. Status quo ante bellum is as dead as the language in which it is written. It is now a matter of seeing with clear eyes the immense possibilities of well-being for the human race, which can come only when the war is won, and the formation of a lasting alliance made up of a resolute combination of democratic institutions with the conduct of public affairs in the spirit of the golden rule.

Paid in His Own Coin.

Kansas City Star.

The Russian who was robbed, cheated imprisoned, held to practical serfdom by a czar, would not find robbery, cheating and imprisonment more tolerable under a kaiser. The harder that foreign yoke was pressed down upon him the fiercer he would resist it, and his resistance would take the form it took when he first learned it was easier to cast a bomb in Russia than a ballot, easier to work in twos and threes from behind a wall than in battalions or regiments on a pitched field.

The Mortgage on Our Shipping

London Daily Mail.

Food in the United States is one thing and food in Great Britain is quite another. Until the shortage of shipping is completely removed we must exercise great caution at home and in no circumstances must we allow our programme of food production to be reduced. The submarine campaign may be held in check, but it is certainly not defeated as yet; and at any moment the Germans may put forth fresh and more desperate efforts to cripple our merchant service. And there is another mortgage on our shipping. Every ton that we can spare must be used to bring over troops from the United States. The more food we can grow here, the more we tighten our belts now, the earlier will come the victory.

The World's Bad Man

Boston Globe

In a frontier town it sometimes happens that there is no organized government, no semblance of law and order, until the "bad man" forces the rest to co-operate in self-defence. The Kaiser is the "bad man" who has compelled co-operation and organization in this world community of ours. We can thank him, if for nothing else, for the enemies he has made.

Where the Gold Was.

Boston Herald.

Those who have good memories will recall how loudly our Germans and pro-Germans complained in the early days of the war that the newspapers of the United States were being corrupted with "British gold," and that this was the explanation of America's apparent sympathy with the allied cause. And among the most vociferous shouters of this strain was the same George Sylvester Viereck, former editor of the defunct Fatherland, who last week admitted that his own campaign of pro-German propaganda had been financed under the direct sponsorship of Berlin. How many more are there who, while professing earnestly their genuine Americanism, were in reality the agents or the employees of the German government? Let us have every name.

A Laugh or Two

Going Some.

"What a powerful voice that tenor has!"

"Yes, I can't hear myself talk when he's singing."

Hard to Tell.

"Pa, were you rich when mamma married you?"

"No, my dear."

"Well, papa, what was it, then, do you think, that mamma married you for?"

Old Stuff.

"What is that string around your fingers for?"

"That is to remind me that I forgot something my wife tied it there for me to remember."

Has Been Done.

"I met your friend Spongely this morning."

"How did he strike you?"

"He said he left his change at home in his other trousers."

Beat Him To It.

It chanced in the days before the war that an Englishman in Berlin became acquainted with a young German officer. One day they were lingering over a tete-a-tete luncheon.

The officer got up and said, "I will give you a toast." Raising his well-filled glass, he added: "I drink to "The Day!" and there was a smile on his lips which hinted at some hidden jest in his words.

His companion, the Englishman, looked at him quietly. "Indeed, Herr Lieutenant" he said, "let me follow your toast with one of my own: "Here's to the Day After"

They Do.

Advocates of a league to enforce peace must hail with joy the selection, as the first president of that organization, of Gen. Ferdinand Foch.—New York Herald.

Too True

He—"Most girls, I have found, don't appreciate real music."

Second He—"Why do you say that?"

He—"Well, you may pick beautiful strains on a mandolin for an hour and she don't even look out of the window, but just one honk of the horn and out she comes!"

In Close Quarters.

Mrs. Ascum—Did you ever do any fighting at close quarters, Major?"

Major Weddely—Yes; most of my married life has been spent in a flat."

Not Worth It.

He—Yes, you know it's costing me $500 a year just to live because of the war prices.

She—I shouldn't pay it; it isn't worth it.

Well, He's Pretty Nearly There.

"The Kaiser keeps talking of divine right."

"Yes," observed Miss Cayenne. "He is so positive in his ideas of divine right that he doesn't seem to think he needs a friend on earth."

Lake Fishermen Making Fortunes

TORONTO, Aug. 15.—From Port Stanley, via St. Thomas, comes the real fishing story of the season, but it will not appeal very strongly to the men who would rather cast a fly all day without getting a bite than catch a fish by netting. It is to the effect that the Port has never known such a season, and that pound net owners and tug owners are getting "big eyes" through counting the money that is rolling in on them. One owner is reputed to have cleared twenty thousand dollars net profit for the season so far, while ordinary fishermen and assistants are making one hundred and fifty dollars a week with wages overpay and commission. There are twenty-seven boats in operation at the present time, with seven to eight men to a boat, and the report states that the wages paid to these men for the week ending Saturday last totalled $5,000 which was not up to the average. The finishing touch is that women engaged in the fish houses are getting four to five dollars a day for cleaning, icing, etc., according to their experience.

"HELP," CRIED THE KAISER

GENEVA, Aug. 15.—Twenty divisions of troops were demanded of Germany's allies by Gen. Ludendorff during the retreat from the Marne, according to the Democrat, which received the news from German sources. Austria Hungary refused but after General Ludendorff had made threats, Vienna sent two divisions to the western front.

For this reason the Austro-Swiss frontier was closed recently.

FOUND DEAD AT NIAGARA

NIAGARA CAMP, Aug. 15.—The body of R. W. Banks of the machine gun corps, was fished out of the Niagara River, near the International Bridge at Queenston. The body appeared to have been in the water for some time. Banks disappeared a week ago. He was 28 years of age and came here from Calgary. His father is R. Banks, Dangerfield, Texas.

DROWNED IN DUCK POND

Richmond Hill, Ont., Aug. 15.—Roy Espey, a young man about twenty-one years of age, was drowned Tuesday in a duck pond on the farm of W. S. Rumble. He left home about one o'clock in the afternoon and was not found until evening. He was subject to epileptic fits.

"A CROWN OF SHAME"

By FLORENCE MARRYAT

Author of "The Poison of Asps," A Star and a Heart," "Written in Fire," etc.

CHAPTER XXIII.—Continued

It was reached at last, however, and as De Courcelules sank into one of the familiar chairs in the sitting-room, he felt like a man who has been delivered from the very jaws of death to be suddenly transported into paradise.

"But you must not rest here, Henri," whispered Lizzie, as she quickly closed all the jalousies. "Mr. Courtney or one of the hands might enter at any moment. There would be a continual risk of discovery."

"Where, then?" he demanded, in the same tone.

"In my dear father's bedroom. It has never been opened since his death and you are not likely to be disturbed there. You know what these silly, superstitious natives are. They would not enter a chamber where a death has occurred, to save their lives. They would be fearful of encountering my dear father's wraith. You see now my object in dressing you up in his cloak and hat. If any of our negroes had seen you, he would probably have run shrieking to his hut, to spread the report that the Doctor's ghost was walking about Beauregard. You must remember to keep up the idea, should any unforeseen risk occur. But here, for a few days at least, I believe you will be safe," continued Lizzie as she unlocked the door of her late father's apartment, "until I can get you away from the island. You will have to be my prisoner," she added playfully; "and I shall lock you in, and bring you your meals at the stated times. But keep the jalousies bolted inside night and day, and try to do with as little light as possible, to avoid attracting attention. You will find my dear father's wardrobe in the cupboard here. Use it as you think best and try and be contented under the restraint, and thankful as I am) that Heaven has spared your life to you."

He turned round as he crossed the threshold, and sank on his knees before her.

"You have forbidden me to speak of love," he ejaculated, "but I must say something to express my gratitude. You have indeed heaped coals of fire on my head! You have done what no other living creature, male or female, would have done; you have risked your life and safety for me, who have treated you worse than any one else. Let me say Heaven bless you for it, Lizzie. I feel if there is a hell beyond the one we suffer here, that mine will be to remember always the terrible mistake I made in allowing a woman's personal beauty to blind me to the virtues of the friend whom I now feel I have loved and honored above all the world."

He took her hand and kissed it as he spoke, and Lizzie was not ashamed to let her tears fall freely on them both.

"I am glad now, Henri," she uttered falteringly, "and I shall be glad in the days to come to think over the words you have just said, and to remember that you knew me for your true friend. There are different kinds of love from the one we once thought we felt for each other—and perhaps better ones—and something of the sort I shall never cease to feel for you. And if you think you owe me gratitude, Henri—if you would repay me let it be by abandoning all ideas of revenge and murder for the future. Do not let me have the terrible self-reproach that I have wasted my affection on one so utterly unworthy of it."

"I have taken a different oath, Lizzie, but I will rescind it for your sake, and, here on my knees, I swear to you that if I am spared to escape the gallows, I will abandon all ideas of revenge in the future. After all, Marquita is but a false woman, not worthy of a man's revenge. There are dozens such; the world is peopled with them."

"She is the woman you loved, Henri," replied Lizzie, gravely, "and, therefore, she is the woman you should always be most lenient to. But she has passed out of your world, and the kindest thing you can do for her and yourself is to forget her. But you must not talk of such exciting topics tonight. It may be some time before you shake off the effects of the poisonous vapors you have inhaled. Go to rest now, and sleep without fear. I will guarantee that no one shall disturb your slumbers."

De Courcelles took her advice and flung himself, exhausted through excitement and fatigue, upon the late Doctor's bed, whilst she, with a divine light almost akin to maternal solicitude upon her countenance took a seat in the outer room and prepared to watch all night against a possible surprise for the man she held prisoner.

CHAPTER XXIV.

But from that moment Lizzie had not a moment's peace. She dreaded everything and everybody. Each casual visitor she believed to be a spy and the appearance of a friend made her think that the hour of discovery had come. Rosa made her a thousand promises of fidelity, but the yellow girl though devoted to her mistress's interests, was, after all, very much like other women, and found it a hard task to hold her tongue. The whole time she was employed in exercising the baby in the plantation, was a season of torture to Lizzie, who pictured her confiding the whole story to her most intimate friend, under a promise of inviolable secrecy. Meanwhile Henri de Courcelles, though confined to one room during the day time, and only venturing out after dark by means of the window, and with a disguise on, was passing a fairly pleasant time. The two women fed him royally, and waited on him like servants, and he had several conferences with Lizzie as to the possibility of his getting down to the Fort by night, and embarking as a seaman on board one of the Spanish crafts that lay in the bay of San Diego. They would have carried this plan, of which they had arranged all the minutiae together, into effect at once, had it not been deemed advisable that De Courcelles should lie perdu until it might be supposed by the authorities that their prisoner had perished beyond all doubt in the Alligator Swamp. As soon as the guard of mounted police who watched for him outside the swamp was withdrawn, Lizzie and De Courcelles decided that his first attempt at an escape from the island should be made. He had been concealed in the bungalow for two days when Mr. Courtney walked in one morning and took his seat beside Lizzie. The planter looked worn and anxious, and as he removed his hat, and passed his handkerchief across his brow, he seemed to have grown older of late, notwithstanding the brilliant marriage his daughter had made. The words with which he opened the conversation, had reference to Maraquita.

"Sir Russell and Lady Johnstone have come to stay with us at the White House, Lizzie."

"Indeed, sir," she replied. "I suppose Quita is nervous of staying at the Government House, after what happened there last week. And I don't wonder at it, poor girl! I should be glad to hear that the Governor had decided to take her to England."

"So should we, my dear, and they will go before long—there is no doubt of that—only, it would hardly do for the Governor to run away whilst the island is in this state of ferment. But he judged rightly in thinking that our dear Maraquita would feel safer and happier with her parents, and in her old home. For she has received a terrible shock, Lizzie, and it is telling on her visibly. She seems ten years older to me."

"Poor Quita, she cannot fail to feel it," replied Lizzie, looking at the matter in a totally different light from that in which Mr. Courtney regarded it.

"Yes, and I wish I could think that there was no further reason for her fears. Lizzie, I have come here this morning for one purpose only—to persuade you to return with me to the White House."

Lizzie started and colored.

"Oh, Mr. Courtney, I cannot. I don't know why you want me there, but unless it is in my capacity as medical adviser, I must refuse. You forget that Mrs. Courtney ordered me never to show my face there again."

"I can allow no feminine quarrels to interfere with your safety, Lizzie; and it is to secure that that I beg of you to take up your residence at my house until this mutinous ideas have been knocked out of the coolies' heads. I do not feel that you are safe,—that we are, any of us, safe. I begin to distrust even my own hands, for whom I have done all in my power."

"Mr. Courtney, I appreciate your kindness, but there are too many reasons why I cannot accept it."

"Name them, my dear."

"I have named one already, sir. Another is my infant charge. Do you suppose I would desert her?"

"Bring her with you. There is room in the White House for us all."

"No, Mr. Courtney," she answered proudly, "it is impossible. I will not take the child under the roof of the very woman who has falsely accused me of being its mother."

"But I am sure, Lizie, that neither my wife nor Maraquita really believe that story."

Use More Milk

LET milk play a bigger part in your daily diet. Use more milk—for health's sake. Use more milk—for economy's sake. Use more milk—for loyalty's sake.

Food specialists, doctors, experts all say that milk is one of the richest and most nourishing foods that Nature provides. And it is one of the most economical.

At this season of the year you should use lots of milk. Drink it at every meal—as a food. Let it take the place of meat, bacon, and other foods needed "over there." Use more of it in your cooking—because it adds a richer flavor, because it is more nourishing, because it aids digestion.

Try using more milk in your diet—for one week. See how much better you feel. See how much you save.

MAKE Carnation Milk Week August 15th to August 22nd—a memorial week in your home. Become better acquainted with the goodness, the many uses, the economy of milk—Nature's first food. And become acquainted with Carnation Milk—Nature's first food in absolutely pure form.

Into thousands of homes—all over Canada and the United states—we shall be introducing this better milk during the week of August 15th to August 22nd.

Thousands of new homes will learn that Carnation Milk is milk in its handiest form—in its safest form —that, unopened, it will keep fresh for weeks!

—that it is economical (no waste)

—that it can be ordered with your groceries!

CARNATION MILK is rich, pure milk "from Contented Cows." It is "whole milk"—evaporated to the consistency of cream. Then sealed in air-tight cans and sterilized. Nothing but water is taken out of it. Nothing is put in to sweeten or to preserve it. It is just pure whole milk—of uniform richness and quality—sealed safe from contamination.

And you can use it for everything—for cooking—for creaming vegetables and soups—as cream for coffee—diluted, as a safe, nourishing drink for your children. It is the only milk supply your home needs.

Order a week's supply of Carnation Milk from your grocer—he is the Carnation Milkman. Always keep a few cans handy for unexpected needs.

NATIONAL PARKS VALUABLE ASSET

Draw Tourist Traffic to Canada and Augment Dominion's Income by Many Millions of Dollars.

Ottawa, August 15.—The national parks of Canada, being powerful magnets for tourist traffic, are becoming an increasingly valuable asset to the Dominion. The immense sums now being added to our national indebtedness make it doubly desirable that the great potential source of revenue which Canada possesses in her scenic wonders and recreational areas be developed to the full, says Mr. J. B. Harkin, Commissioner of Dominion Parks, in his annual report. Mr. Harkin believes that the establishment of a national bureau for tourist travel is an example which might well be followed in Canada.

The Secretary of the Interior at Washington estimates that in 1915, over $100,000,000 of the money which formerly went to Europe was diverted to the United States national parks. Their total number of visitors was 278,000. The number of visitors to the Canadian parks during the same year was 121,533, or about 43 per cent of that which went to the United States parks. On the same basis of expenditure the travel to the Canadian parks would have been worth somewhere in the neighborhood of $43,000,000. While the amount of money spent in the Canadian parks or brought into Canada through the parks has never yet been closely estimated, it is evident that it reached each year a very large sum. It constitutes a harvest which warrants considerable effort and expenditure to reap. There is probably no field of enterprise in which a small investment brings such a large return.

The railways in Canada, as in the United States, have borne the burden of the important work of attracting this valuable tourist traffic. When the railway development of Canada is spoken of, the services rendered by the Grand Trunk naturally come to mind. This was the pioneer road of the Dominion, and year by year it has extended its lines to open up new playgrounds and new industrial and agricultural territories. It has introduced to tens of thousands of tourists the great Canadian resort districts, such as Muskoka Lakes, the Algonquin Park of Ontario, the Thirty Thousand Islands of the Georgian Bay, Timagami, Lake of Bays, and (in the Rockies) Jasper National Park, the Mount Robson region and Alaska. It has made "The Highlands of Ontario" known to vacation seekers in every state of the Union. It early realized the magnificent asset which Canada possesses in her scenic territories.

250 HUGE WHALES DRIVEN ASHORE

AMHERST, N. S., Aug. 15.—A school of two hundred and fifty whales is ashore at River John, Pictou County They were driven in by motor boats and were left on the beach by the outgoing tide. Hundreds of people have come from all parts of Nova Scotia to witness the sight. The whales run from ten to thirty-five feet in length. No one in the vicinity has knowledge of the methods used to secure the oil and the gigantic animals will probaly decompose on the beach. Three other whales are ashore at Tatamagouche.

Ontario Motorist Was Killed

REGINA, Aug. 15.—Because he was driving his automobile carelessly, going at a rate far beyond reason, and because only one of his headlights was working, and that appreciably dimmed, T. H. Conboy, whose home is at Mountain Grove, Ont., was instantly killed when he drove into a team and wagon near Rosetown.

From evidence adduced at the inquest, it appears that Conboy, with three others was driving from Hughton to Rosetown, tearing along at a pace far in excess to that used by cautious drivers. He drove the car into a team of horses and wagon driven by N. Dorn, and the impact threw Conboy against the front of the car, crushing his chest and severing his windpipe. Death was instaneous. The other three occupants of the car escaped death, but have been under medical treatment. The body of Conboy has been shipped to Ontario for burial.

Better Than Rat-Hunting

What Wounded Canadians Say About the Big Drive

LONDON, Aug. 15.—"None of them have serious wounds, only just nice little holes," declared the Sister in charge of a ward in a mighty London hospital where arrived the first batch of wounded Canadian officers from the great fight. The Canadian Associated Press first encountered a Captain well known in the Yukon Territory, with his wife at his bedside. The Captain declared he could not have picked a nicer blighty if he had the choosing. He has a clean bullet wound through the thigh. "It was the greatest thing that ever happened," he exclaimed sitting up, in enthusiasm for the wound gave him no pain. "Our machine-gun batteries kept them on the run for twelve miles. I was up the line with an armored car, acting as a link between the most advanced Canadian cavalry and the leading French infantry. I agree entirely with all that has been said about the success of the operation due to the complete secrecy with which our concentration was effected.

"You must get me a new outfit for my trousers are shot to pieces," he declared to his wife. They have a son a Lieutenant in the same brigade, but a different battery, who was all right when the father last saw him.

Another officer belonging to Toronto also well known in Edmonton, said it is simply impossible to hold the boys back. "I was on the top tank" he continued, "when I got a scratch, just enough to make Blighty. Our platoon was eight hundred yards in advance of the company, with Fritz in between'"

"We could have cut it off, but, instead we took 300 of them. My but the boche was fooled that day when we took these prisoners back. A tank went ahead and we chalked the number of our battalion on it, so that all passersby could see who had done the deed."

PROBABLY CAPT. MACHELL OF TORONTO

A Toronto Captain on the other side ward, told the Canadian Press with equal eagerness now the boche fled before our men. He agreed completely about secrecy being the deciding factor in such complete success. "The truth is we were as much surprised as anybody else to find where we should have fight," he added. "We all thought when we got orders to pull out that we were going to a totally different part of the line. All officers agree Fritz fought like a wildcat. In the first 1,000 yards most of our casualties came from machine gun nests which had to be rooted out as we advanced." "It was great fun, better sport than rat-hunting," remarked one Captain who has a foot shattered.

Toronto Man to Command the Canadian Forces in Siberia

OTTAWA, Aug. 15.—Brigadier-General J. H. Elmsley, C.M.G., D.S.O., Royal Canadian Dragoons, Toronto, has been selected to command the troops which are now being mobilized in Canada for service in Siberia. This announcemnt was made through the Militia Department yesterday.

General Elmsley is at present in England, where he and the Minister of Miltia, in consultation with the Imperial authorities, are concerting methods of procedure. He is in his 40th year, and is a Staff College graduate. He was dangerously wounded in the South African war (King's and Queen's Medals), and has served in India.

In the year 1914 General Elmsley proceeded overseas with his regiment, and in due course was appointed to command the 8th Brigade (Canadian Mounted Rifles).

It is not expected that the Canadian contingent will be actually despatched across the Pacific until late autumn. It is understood that a British battalion now stationed in the West Indies will also be sent with the Canadian force under General Elmsley.

General Elmsley is a son of the late Mr. Remy Elmsley of Barnstaple, Elmsley place, Toronto, and is one of the smartest and best-liked Canadian officers. He has two brothers in the service, Basil, who left with the second contingent, and Theo, on H.M.S. Tiger.

In Old Age

Health and comfort in old age depends largely on keeping the liver and kidneys in healthful action.

Pains and aches, stiffness of the joints, lumbago and rheumatism tell of poisons left in the blood by sluggishness of the liver and kidneys.

People in advanced years hold Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in high esteem because of the promptness and certainty with which they awaken the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

Justice Duff Back on Job

OTTAWA, Aug. 15.—After an enforced fortnight's holiday to recuperate from the strenuous work of the Central Appeal Court during the past six months, Hon. Justice Duff is now back on the job again, with some fifteen or twenty thousand appeals still to be disposed of. So far he has dealt with nearly thirty thousand cases, working day and night, and accomplishing a marvelous daily output of sound and considered decisions. All "type" cases have now been dealt with and the remaining cases to be heard will probably all be disposed of by next month.

Brings Aviators Safely to Earth

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y., Aug. 15.—Inventions have been presented to the Naval Consulting Board of the United States by Wm. Lorenz, a jeweler here. One is a life-saving guard for aviators. It is so constructed that it will bring the pilot to the ground, whether he is dead or alive. As soon as the aviator falls from the machine this bit of mechanism works automatically. It is worn as a regular life-saving guard for the water, being a little heavier, but not so clumsy to wear. The wearer will always reach the ground feet first.

The second invention is an automatic control for airplanes. Nothing can be made known about it, as the Government does not wish the inventor to give away secrets concerning it.

Newspapers Exempted From Telegraph Tax

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Special taxes of $10 a year on occupation or profession, except the war industry trades, farmers, teachers and ministers of the Gospel, were written into the $8,000,000,000 War Revenue Bill by the House Ways and Means Committee. A similar tax was placed upon any business with receipts of $2,000 a year or more, with a levy of $25 a year on wholesale houses with receipts of $200,000 or more.

Secretary McAdoo will appear before the committee to discuss the Treasury's new plans for an excess profits tax based on rates in the present law, with an alternative war profits tax. This is the main issue between the committee and the Treasury.

Newspapers, press associations and periodicals were exempted from the proposed 10 per cent. tax on the amount paid for leased telegraph and telephone wires in the pending $8,000,000,000 Revenue Bill after a vigorous fight by Representatives Rainey of Illinois and Longworth of Ohio. It was amended so as to apply only to the stockbrokers' lines.

A French Government Commission has sent to the Military Governor of Paris a report tending to charge Senator Humbert with communicating with the enemy. A bill will be introduced to suspend Parliamentary immunity.

Many Want to Join Canada Air Service

Flood of Applications Already Received by Department

OTTAWA, Aug. 15.—The organization of the new Canadian air service is proceeding, and its popularity is indicated by the large number of application from candidates who wish to join the force. Hon. A. K. MacLean, acting Minister of the Naval Department, has issued the following announcement with regard to the new service:

"A flood of application for cadetships in the new air service has been recived, and within a few days a reply will be sent to every one. Until this can be done, candidates are requested not to send hasteners to their original applications; these are being dealt with as fast as possible.

"It is not wished to encroach upon the existing personnel of other flying services, and it must be distinctly understood that no application from officers or men on the strength or on the reserve of the British Royal Air Force can be entertained.

"Only applications from British subjects will be examined, and Canadian citizens will in all casese be given the preference.

"In a few exceptional cases, applications will be considered from officers and men of other than the flying branch of His Majesty's Imperial and colonial forces, but in all cases these must be accompanied by the official written concurrence of the commanding officer of the unit or service to which the applicant belongs."

Wedding Bells

MULLEN—RANKIN

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Rankin, 10 Purdy street, yesterday morning at nine o'clock, their daughter, Miss Jean Campbell Rankin was united in marriage to Mr. William Leonard Mullen, of Acton, Ont. Rev. D. C. Ramsay, of John Street Persbyterian Church officiated. They wer unattended. Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played by the bride's sister, Miss Irene Rankin. ELSIE FERGUSON AT GRIFFIN'S Charming Elsie Ferguson comes to Griffin's for the last three days of the week in a fine picture called "The Danger Mark," and as usual Miss Ferguson has a strong supporting company. There will also be another good picture called "The Bravest Way with the clever Japanese actor, Sessue Hayakawa in the leading part.

A FIGHT FOR MILLIONS

Starting next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, a new serial photoplay will start at Griffin's, 15 chapters, "A Fight For Millions," and the cast is composed of William Duncan who so successfully appeared in "The Fighting Train," and "Vengeance and The Woman" serials, supporting him will be Edith Johnson, Chet Ryan and other clever artists.

"CIVILIZATION"

On the same date the big picture "Civilization" will be shown. This picture is claimed by all who have seen it to be even better than "The Birth of a Nation. Both the big picture "Civilization" and the first chapter of the new serial "A Fight for Millions" will be shown together making one of the biggest nights ever seen at Griffin's.

"THE LONE WOLF"

Another good picture which is coming to Griffin's by popular request is "The Lone Wolf," which picture was claimed to be the best of its kind ever seen in Belleville, the date is August 29th, 30th and 31st.

SEPTEMBER IN ALGONQUIN PARK

September in Algonquin Park, Ontario, is one of the most delightful months of the year. A beneficial holiday can be enjoyed with all the comforts of home at "The Highland Inn," situated in the midst of a charming wilderness on Cache Lake. It is also a good month for the camper and canoeist. Splendid fishing is found in the innumerable lakes (over 1500) that nestle in the forests of pine and balsam. Don't leave it until the last minute to make your reservation at the Inn and write to Miss Jean Lindsay, Manager Algonquin Park Station, Ontario, for rates, etc., or to any Grand Trunk Railway Agent, or C. E. Horning, P. P. A., Toronto, for handsome illustrated booklet telling you all about the district.

The peace activities of the Dutch Socialist leader Troelstra have been nipped in the bud by Britain's refusal to give Arthur Henderson a passport to attend the proposed pacifists' conference.

Verdict of Murder Against Dom. Police

SHERBROOKE, Que., Aug. 15.—The jury in the inquest on Amedee Picard, held at Sherbrooke by Coroner Bachand, brought in a verdict of murder against two members of the civil branch of the Dominion Police, J. J. Barton and Henry Crandall.

The inquest arose out of the death of Amedee Picard at Winslow, near here. He was a draft-evader and when the Picard homestead was raided by the Dominion Police last week, his father tried to prevent his arrest. In the scuffle Amedee ran for it. He was shot in the back and died later at the General Hospital, Sherbrooke.

The medical evidence at the postmortem before the inquest showed that Amedee Picard was a tuberculosis subject, and not therefore subject to draft. He had, however, not gone before the military authorities for medical examination, and was therefore held liable to be drafted.

ACCEPT NO CLASS 1 MEN

TORONTO, Aug. 15.—It has been decided by the Militia authorities at Ottawa that no man liable for service under the M. S. A. in Class 1 will be accepted for enlistment in the Siberian expeditionary force that is now being raised in Toronto. Only returned soldiers who are physically fit and others not within Class 1 will be accepted. The decision does not enroll draftees was decided to-day by Ottawa but no explanation of the change is given. Men wishing to report for this expedition can be medically examined at the Toronto mobilization centre and if accepted will be attached to the Canadian Garrison Regiment for training purposes. No N. C. O.'s will be appointed at present and appoint-

LOCATING IN IRELAND

Mrs. J. C. Brintnell and daughter, Mrs. Anna H. Wilson, and twelve year old son, Clare, arrived in Miami Thursday of last week to visit Mrs. Brintnell's daughter, Mrs. Ed. Mitchell, and came up from Miami by auto yesterday to make Ft. Louderdale their future home, and will keep house for their son and brother, H. E. Brintnell, in the home formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Mitchell. Mrs. Wilson's former home was in North Dakota, but she visited with her mother in Belleville, Ontario, and for a season taught in the Belleville Business College, until they came South last week. Mrs. Mitchell accompanied them and remained a few days. Ft. Louderdale is glad to welcome them as residents of this city.—Fort Lauderdale, Georgia, Sentinel.

How You Can Make Hairs Quickly Disappear

(Helps to Beauty)

Even a stubborn growth of hair will quickly vanish from the face, neck or arms after a single treatment with delatone. To remove the hairs, make a stiff paste with a little powdered delatone and water, apply to hairy surface and after about 2 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left free from hair or blemish. To avoid disappointment, be quite certain you get real delatone.

Wedding Bells

CHISOLM—HENWOOD

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Central Congregational church, Winnipeg, Man., on Tuesday July 2nd, when the Rev J. B. Silcox, D. D., united in bonds of holy matrimony, one of Muskoka's fair daughters and one of the rising young business men of that western metropolis.

The bride was Alice Maud, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs William Henwood of Glenellen, Sask. formerly of Huntsville. The groom was Samuel Clayton Chisolm of the United Grain Growers, Limited, Winnipeg, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Chisolm of Belleville, Ont.

Both bride and groom were unattended. The bride's costume was of old gold broadcloth, braided in navy blue the coat opening over a dainty embroidered blouse of georgette Her hat was a smartly tailored model of blue straw, and her corsage bouquet was composed of orchids and valley lilies. The groom's gift to the bride was a sterling silver toilet set, in Patricia design.

Mrs. P. W. Harrison, sister of the bride, wore a gown of dark green, French crepe, draped with georgette. Her hat was of black lace.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Chisolm left for a tour of the Great Lakes, with Montreal as the objective point. Their trip will also include a visit with friends and relatives in different eastern cities. On their return to Winnipeg they will reside at Suite 12, Lyndhurst Apartments.—"The Huntsville Forester."

Letters to the Editor

CORBY PUBLIC BATHS

To the Editor of the Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:—

Referring to the letter of F. S. Wallbridge in your paper as to the location of the Corby Public Baths, I would suggest that the bathing place should be constructed at the south end of Queen Victoria Park. At that point the water is better than at any other point around the Park. A cement wall could be constructed a distance of 25 or 50 feet from the end of the Park or for that matter a portion of the end of the Park could be cut off. The bottom could be cemented and made so as to afford different depths. Openings could be left in each side and the end wall with iron bar gates. These would insure a constant supply of fresh water without expense.

It might be wise for the Council to have inquiry made from other places where public baths exist before final decision on the location or method of construction.

Yours truly,
W. C. MIKEL

Hun Ambassador Threatened to Bomb Constantinople

Differences Between Germans and Turks are Becoming More Frequent and Biter— People Interested in British Leaflets Dropped by Allied Aviators

LONDON, Aug. 16.—Differences between the Germans and the Turks are becoming more frequent and bitter, according to information received from Constantinople.

During a quarrel with Talaat Pasha recently, the German Ambassador is reported to thave threatened to bombard the city.

Advices from Constantinople say that leaflets dropped by the British aviators are read by the population with sympathetic interest. Posters recently found on the valls of mosques and Government buildings, declaring that the Germans are the real enemies of Turkey, called forth a strong protest from the German Ambassador and a demand for an inquiry.

Talaat replied it was impossible to discover the authors. The Ambassador then announced that German military police would take charge fo the inquiry. On the following day he informed the Grand Vizier that the majority of the offenders were in Government service, and that therefore punishment should be exceptionally severe. Talaat retorted that before punishment, he would institute his own investigation. Violent discussion followed and the German Ambassador went so far as to threaten the Grand Vizier with bombardment of Constantinople by the guns of the battle cruiser Goeben.

Pays High Tribute to Stewart Lyon

TORONTO, Aug. 16.—A striking tribute to the work of Stewart Lyon, editor of the Globe, among the Canadians at the front while acting as correspondent of the Canadian Press, was paid today by Captain the Master of Sinclair in an interview, with a Star reporter.

Captain Sinclair is in Toronto with Prince Arthur of Connaught.

"You have a man here called Stewart Lyon, who was over with us at the Canadian headquarters," he said. "He is one of the most gallant fellows I ever met, and I feel sure that the Prince would like to meet him again.

Captain Sinclair said that Mr. Lyon was most popular among the headquarters staff of the Canadian army, where he was noted for going about his work quietly and well, and never asking any questions except such as were necessary for the understanding of the maps and things. "But the man was so gallant. Whenever he heard that there was going to be an attack he would slip away quietly to the very front line trenches and there watch the men going over the top. He took chances just like the soldiers. The men got to know him and he was most popular with them. An extremely gallant fellow, and we all grew to like him immensely, for his pluck and genial good fellowship, which was worth much to us," he continued.

"I shall be disappointed if I do not see Stewart Lyon this time. I have seen him coming in from the front line time and again all covered with mud when he had been with the soldiers whom he loved."

Nine Thousand Boys Farming in Ontario; Farmers are full of Praise

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—The Canada Food Board has received a report from the Ontario Provincial headquarters of the Soldiers of the Soil movement stating that farmers everywhere throughout the Province, are enthusiastic in praise of the boys' services. "The boys are making good," the message reads.

Nine thousand boys from cities and towns, and as many more farm boys are working as Soldiers of the Soil in Ontario. Twelve zone superintendents are helping to keep them contended and enthusiastic about their work, by arranging for games, picnics and rallies for presentation of the badges offered by the Canada Food Board to boys who do a stated amount of service on a farm this year.

N. Y. WOMEN POLICE ARMED

NEW YORK, Aug. 16.—Outfitted with "billies" revolvers and handcuffs. New York's first uniformed policewomen six in number, went on duty yesterday. Commissioner Enright announcing the appointments said four other women would be named for regular police duty. They will pay special attention to the welfare of girls.

Many Big Steel and Wooden Ships Being Constructed In Canada

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—Ocean vessels having an aggregate capacity of 450,000 tons will be constructed it is estimated in Canada during the present year. There will be [illegible] out-put from Canadian yard[illegible] 59 steel ships of a total capacity of 290,000 tons and 53 wooden ships aggregating 160,000 tons. In this computation are included the vessels being completed under orders placed by the Imperial Munitions Board for the British Government, 20 steel ships to be constructed for the Dominion Government and a few being built for private parties.

The Department of Marine has just placed orders for seven more steel freighters bringing the total for which it has awarded contracts up to 20. The seven new orders are for two ships of 5100 tons to be built by the Davie Ship building and Repairing Company, Levis, Que., two of 4,350 tons to be built by the British-American Shipbuilding Company, of Welland Ont.; two of 3,400 tons to be built by the Port Arthur Shipbuidling Company and one of 3,750 tons to be constructed by the Collingwood Shipbuilding Company, Collingwood, Ont.

Three vessels of 10,500 tons each are to be laid down by November 1st at the new Halifax shipyard, now being prepared for operation.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(Official)—South of Albert the British have advanced their line slightly in the region northeast of Morlancourt.

IMPORTANT FRENCH ADVANCE.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—(Official)—French troops have made an important advance on a front of two and one-half miles west of Roye. The French progress was in the region of Villers-les-Roye, about two and one-half miles west of Roye-Staurin and Armancourt.

CANADIANS TAKE TWO VILLAGES.

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The Canadians have taken the villages of Damery and Parvillers, a short distance northwest of Roye, according to Field Marshal Haig's official communication. The British line southest of Proyart, just south of the Somme, has been advanced a short distance.

With the Canadian Army in the Field, Aug. 15, 9 a.m., via London, Aug. 16.—Except for the continual boom of the artillery and night bombing from the air, the Canadian front has been quiet for the past 24 hours. The Boche got more than he bargained for when he made his recent counter-attacks against the top of our sector. No form of fighting is so expensive as an unsuccessful counter attack." He put over three of these and his losses are correspondingly great. Besides the four enemy divisions we put out of action on the opening day, some eight more divisions have been identified as having been thrown into the line against us without avail. The Canadian force, one of the brightest swords in the armory of the Allies, is ready for anything and everything.. It is at full strength with troops well rested, whose sole desire is to be let loose again on the Hun. After nearly four years of hard fighting this eager spirit is rare and remarkable. The scarred veterans of St. Julien are just as keen as young soldiers.

Total Advance.

Starting from the point farthest back, the extreme top of the advance the enemy had made on Amiens, the Canadian force advanced at Haller to the most easterly points now held by the allies, a total depth of twenty thousand yards.

Many wonderful stories remain to be told about the work of brigades and units on that famous Thursday of last week, but none more firing to the imagination than that of the Canadian motor machine gun troops and cyclists acting along the Roye road, who did much to demoralize the enemy's resistance. The command included a number of armored cars. They received general assistance from the cavalry, which entered out front line on the north and passed through diagonally to the southeast. Part of this force had fought over the same ground last March and April, when the Canadian motor machine guns and cyclists were thrown in to help stem the German tide. The record of their deeds in those desperate days, when every inch of ground had to be contested at all costs, is known to the world. In a few hours last Thursday they overran the line of their heroic retreat and passed far beyond.

Two Nights on Road.

"We had some damn good sport up there the other day, some real honey," remarked an old soldier who had been through both. "What are they about, keeping us stuck in this bally hole, when we got to get at them again?"

The force had been on the road for two nights and went immediately into action. They were at it night and day until they got their first real test in a week on Sunday. The Amiens-Roye road traverses a difficult country bisected by ravines and bordered by woods offering excellent positions for machine gun nests. One of these held a part of the force up some time, but finally a tank came up, shot down the enemy and rode right over their stronghold. A motorcyclist sent ahead of an armored car to scout, rode right through a village, still held by the Boche, steering with one hand and with the other emptying his automatic into the astounded enemy. Seeing the car behind they surrendered. Again a part of our cavalry rode into an open village and returned with 600 prisoners.

Adventure of Lorry.

An extraordinary incident is related of a ration lorry which by mistake ran right through our lines, on the Roye road into those of the enemy and only pulled up when stopped by a German sentinel. Him they bayoneted and threw into the lorry and after him three Fritzies who surrendered. But it was too good to last. The Boche came back with bombs and put the lorry out of action. Our men, however, though wounded, succeeded in making their escape through the twilight, and in the evening they advanced again and recaptured the lorry.

The motor machine gunners have a new mascot in a fine Daschund female dog they took from a dugout, where she refused to leave the body of her master, a German officer. Just now she is suffering from shell shock and whines at every explosion, but the unit means to take her back to Canada.

Praise for Y.M.C.A.

These people, like the infantry farther north, are full of praise for the work of the Y.M.C.A. "Tell the people of Canada that they kept some of us on our feet with their hot drinks when he had no sleep nor rations for days," said a sergeant. The motor cyclists especially are delighted, for it was the first time they have had to do with any fighting, the real capacity for which they were organized. There is only one thought among them all—the Somme.

GIRL ENDS LIFE WHEN ROMANCE IS OVER

Broken hearted because her sweetheart of childhood days had married another, Margaret Palmer, twenty-five years old, committed suicide, according to the police, in her room at No. 355 Fourteenth street, Brooklyn.

Fifteen years ago the girl met a boy near her own age, and the two, who were orphans, became close friends. Recently the young man had been separated from Miss Palmer, and she had not heard a word from him until two days ago, when she received a letter from him in which he told her that he had married another girl. Mrs. Mary Cullen, in whose house Miss Palmer lived, walked past her room and smelled gas. She found the door locked and called in the police, who forced it and found the girl unconscious on the bed.

An ambulance surgeon revived her, and she remained conscious long enough to tell him her story, but became unconscious again and died.

MARRIED ONE DAY: DESERTED DAY AFTER

Meeting a girl in Hyde Park, London, one evening, Joseph Alfred Caulfield, twenty-five, a soldier, married her the next day, and the day afterwards deserted her, taking her jewellery.

At the Old Bailey he was sentenced to two months' second division imprisonment for making a false declaration in order to get the special marriage license.

"DON'T LEAVE ME!" PLEADED THE HUN

With the French Armies in the Field, Aug. 15.—The Boche soldier's spirit is almost gone. East of Muizon an escort was taking back a German prisoner. Enemy shells began falling all around. The poilu took refuge in a shell hole. The prisoner clung to the poilu's coat tails, begging in broken French: "Don't leave me or the Boches (his own words) will get me again."

ST. THOMAS BRAKEMAN ACCUSED OF BIGAMY

ST. THOMAS, Aug. 16.—Geo. F. Spencer, the former Pere Marquette brakeman of this city, who pleaded guilty three years ago to the theft of a diamond ring belonging to his landlady, and who was remanded to the county jail to await investigations on two other charges preferred against him, one of theft of a gold watch from the same lady, and the other of bigamy, appeared before Magistrate Maxwell this morning and was sentenced to not less than one year and not more than two years less one day in the Ontario Reformatory on the ring charge. After being given preliminary examinations on the other two charges, he was committed for trial by jury at the next sessions of the peace.

PANIC AMONG PEOPLE IN GERMAN TOWNS

GENEVA Aug. 16.—An official despatch received here from Frankfort Germany, says that Monday morning at 9 o'clock that city was attacked by twelve enemy aviators, who dropped twenty-six bombs, killing twelve persons and injuring five others.

Reports from Basel, however, assert that the casualties were far more numerous. These say that a bomb fell in the crowded Kaiserstrasse, killing many persons and stopping the street cars; that another fell in the middle of the large station and several in its vicinity while two more fell in the barracks and still another near Goethe's house which was undamaged.

The Basel despatch says the aerial attack has increased the panic reigning in the Rhine towns.

BORDEN'S WORK IN LONDON.

London, Aug. 16.—R. L. Richardson of the Winnipeg Tribune, one of the visiting Canadian editors, gives the following impressions recalled by his recent visit to France:

"I would say to Canadian fathers, mothers, sisters and brothers, don't worry unnecessarily about your dear ones at the front. They are happy in the belief that their country is behind them, will welcome them home, and will give them a 'square deal' when they return.

"Premier Borden is rendering more effective service here to the Empire in its great struggle than he could do if he werei n Canada."

CHINESE PARLIAMENT OPENS

PEKIN, Aug. 16.—The new Chinese Parliament was opened with ceremonies Monday in the presence of the President and members of his cabinet. Addresses were delivered by the President and the Premier. The proceedings were very brief, being completed in 20 minutes. All the approaches to the Parliament buildings were under heavy guard.

GERMANY RAIDED 96 TIMES IN JULY

LONDON, Aug. 16.—A record number of air raids was made into German territory during July. The total is said authoritatively to be 96. The bombs dropped amounted to 81 tons.

GERMANS LEAVE FLANDERS POSITIONS

London, Aug. 16—The Germans have withdrawn one to two miles on a nine-mile front, at the western edge of the Flanders salient, according to information received here. Vieux-Berquin, three miles north of Merville, was evacuated during the withdrawal.

Six Million German Casualties Since Beginning of the War

One Hundred and Twenty Thousand German Soldiers Killed Between March 27 and June 17 is Paris Estimate

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, August 16.—The total of German losses from the beginning of the war to the end of July, 1918, are understood to be six million, according to morning newspapers. The figures include 1,400,000 killed up to the beginning of the German offensive last March. From March 27 to June 17 the Germans are said to have lost 120,000 in killed alone.

Too Much Speeding Says Highway Boss

TORONTO, Aug. 16.—During April, May, June and July, there were 4,005 convictions in the Province of Ontario for breaches of the Ontario Motor Vehicles Act. The fines amounted to $27,730, which were imposed by the magistrates, and which went to swell the coffers of the municipality.

Of the 4,005 convictions, there were 3,311 for speeding. The other convictions were for reckless driving, passing street cars, no lights on front or rear of cars, boys driving under the age of 16, no license plates, or dirty and defaced plates, chauffeurs driving without licenses, driving while intoxicated, racing and failing to come back to the scene of an accident. There were 29 cases of intoxicated people driving.

"I think the number of cases for speeding is very disproportionate," said Deputy Minister of Highway W. A. McLean. "I think more attention should be paid to reckless driving, and there would be fewer accidents. Other offences should also be watched more closely."

The department also sent an officer to Trenton to see that the Act was carried out more efficiently, and this resulted in several convictions.

To-Day's Canadian Casualty List

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—The part taken by the Canadians in the present victorious movement of the Allies is commencing to show in the casualty list. Today's list of 115 casualties includes twelve killed in action and eight died of wounds. The balance were prisoners, wounded, gassed, etc.

700 SOLDIERS FOR FARMS

Ottawa, Aug. 16.—Nearly 700 returned soldiers have now taken advantage of the Soldier Settlement Act and have applied for the Government loan of $2,500 at 5 per cent. interest, to enable them to acquire land; stock and equipment. The total of advances so far made to the returned men who are settling on the land is over $700,000.

$100,000 Fire At Ottawa

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—Commencing with an explosion in a freight car, fire broke out at the G. T. R. freight sheds near the Central Station early last evening, and completely destroyed them, with 28 cars twenty of which were loaded. The loss is estimated at from $90,000 to $100,000, practically all covered by insurance.

It was a most spectacular blaze. The fire was attended by several explosions in addition to the primary one.

Three men were injured by the explosion though there were rumors that some men were caught in the shed and lost their lives. These reports fortunately proved to be unfounded. The injured men are not dangerously hurt.

Bolshevik Is Fading Fast

The trend of recent events received yesterday seems to be rapidly assuming the proportions of a rout of the Bolsheviki and of a nature to bring dismay to Germany.

With allied troops rapidly moving south from Archangel, forces of British, French, Japanese and American troops at Vladivostok and operating to the westward, and a British force at Baku, the Cecho-Slovaks have taken new heart in their heroic fight against the Germans and Austrians.

Hun Airmen Raid Region of Paris

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Aug. 16.—Several bombs were dropped in the Paris region late last night by German airplanes, says an official statement issued early the day. There were only a few victims.

British Contingent Reaches Russian Oil City of Baku

Troops in Possession of Part of the Defences— General Dokuchauff Commands the Allied Force, Which Will Try to Hold City— Turks are Advancing

LONDON, Augu. 16.—The most spectacular item of news today is that a Britsh contingent has reached Baku, the Russian oil city on the Caspian Sea, about the possession of which Germany and Turkey are now squabbling. These troops marched from Bagdad, a distance of about 700 miles. The British advance through Persia from Bagdad was accomplished under the greatest difficulties. In the mountainous sections they were resisted by a few groups of tribesmen, but they quickly overcame this opposition. The British force crossed the frontier and reached Enzelli, the port of Respt, on the Caspian Sea, by the way of Hamadan. At any rate, it is now certain that British, Russian and Armenian troops are now in Baku and that the British are in possession of part of the defences.

The Turks are advancing from Batoum. The Russian General Dokuchaieff commands the allied force and will endeavor to hold the city. In any event its oil resources can be made unavailable to the enemy. Persia at present is politically friendly to the Allies.

Whether the Allies will be able to hold Baku permanently in view of the difficulties of transporting supplies, is too early to predict. However, if the British can hold their position a short time longer, which seems likely, they probably will be able to cut off the enemy from an outlet to the sea, thus protecting the important oil fields of the Baku district.

The meagre information at hand in London that the British detachment voyaged by steamer from Enzelli, Persia, to Baku, demonstrates that the allied hold on the Caspian Sea already is fairly established.

GANG OF THIEVES

WINDSOR, Aug 16.—Working to clean up a gang of thieves said to have stolen more than $25,000 worth of merchandise from bonded cars in the Windsor yards of the Michigan Central, special agents of the railway co-operating with Detectives Reid and Broderick of the Windsor Police Department, last evening arrested three employees of the company. The names of these men will not be divulged until a Detroiter, said to be the head of the gang, has been located.

N.W. Rowell Reviews Cadets of Wave Crest— Praises English Boys

PORT HOPE, Aug. 16.—Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P., reviewed a party of cadets of the Canadian Navy League here yesterday. The yacht Wave Crest, which has been cruising on the lake and is being used as a training ship in charge of Captain Redfern, came into the harbor and the thirty cadets gave a gymnastic exhibition in honor of Mr. Rowell and his party who were making a tour of the harbor and the various factories in the town.

Mr. Rowell, who was introduced to Mayor Burnham, referred to the visit which he had paid to the Grand Fleet on his recent visit to the front. He told of his visit to H.M.S. Goliath and H.M.S. Lion, which was admiral Beatty's flagship at the battle of Jutland. Mr. Rowell congratulated the boys on making themselves fit for service in the navy and expressed the hope that they would some day be able to play a part in the Canadian navy. He said that the great part which the boys of England were playing in the war was not generally appreciated. Many were training for the army and thousands were doing coastguard duty.

Mr. Rowell was accompanied by Senator Mulholland, Mayor Burnham, Reeve Smith and a number of Councillors.

Foe Withdrawal Toward Bapaume

Amiens Cathedral, No Longer Menaced by Enemy, Was Rededicated Yesterday

With the British Armies in France, Aug. 16.—The German withdrawal toward Bapaume (ten miles northeast of Albert and four miles east of the Ancre) apparently is still under way.

The Boches have their backs toward the Amiens cathedral, which yesterday was rededicated. It had been unused, locked up and protected with sandbags since the civilian evacuation of Amiens in March. The reopening coincides with the great Feast of the Assumption.

The Germans also brought up more artillery. Few German planes are seen over the lines. The Germans are still on the defensive in the air as well as on the ground. This is due largely to their inability to replace losses.

The weather for the past few days has been superb in the battle zone. Although the ground fighters seem to be marking time, the airmen seem neither to eat nor sleep. They are giving the Germans a very warm time.

Foe Economizing Man Power.

British Headquarters in France, Aug. 16.—General Ludendorff's recent order that ground must be given up if holding on entails an undue expenditure of man power, is largely responsible for the German withdrawal around Albert. The wonderful success of the light tanks has probably impressed the German high command with the desirability of getting behind the Ancre river wherever practicable. We have now pushed posts far towards Bucquoy. The Hebuterne salient has practically disappeared.

A War Time Need, And How to Meet It

War time conditions have greatly increased the need of business establishments for more trained office assistants. Business men cannot utilize untrained or half-trained help, and they have no time and no facilities for teaching stenography or bookkeeping or typewriting or business methods to beginners; but they will pay liberally for the services of skilled and thoroughly trained stenographers, secretaries and bookkeepers who come to them prepared to do first class work from the start.

The O. B. C. training will thoroughly fit you to take advantage of these opportunities to get into business life. The cost of the training in time and money is very moderate. Now is a good time to start.

His Stomach Now A Thing of The Past

Brennan Eats Three Big Meals Every Day Since Taking Tanlac

"Besides myself I have several friends who are taking Tanlac, and they all say it has done them a world of good, too," said William Brennan, a well known employee of the Crescent Concrete Company living at 224 Sorauren Ave. Toronto recently.

"My stomach has been all out of order for several years," he continued, "and I have also suffered constantly from constipation. My appetite was so poor, that I just had to force down what little I ate, and many a day I have brought my lunch back home with me without ever touching a bite of it. I suffered terribly from indigestion, and at times my food just seemed to lodge in my stomach, and feel like a heavy lump there. I would often feel right weak from lack of nourishment and yet I had no appetite or relish for anything. I was continually taking something for constipation as well as for my stomach, but nothing seemed to do me any good. I would go off to my work in the mornings feeling tired and sluggish and could hardly muster up energy enough to do anything.

"I had read and heard a good deal about Tanlac but I had no idea it was so fine until I tried it myself. My appetite picked up in just a few days and it wasn't long until I could eat three rousing meals a day without feeling a sign of indigestion. I have only taken two bottles so far but my stomach trouble seems to be a thing of the past. I'm not constipated, sluggish and tired any more and in fact I'm enjoying better health than I have in years. I consider Tanlac extra fine, and will recommend it to anyone."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

GET IN FOR THE FINISH.

A ball game is not won until the last man is out. The final jump wins the race. The game man and the game horse show their gameness in the final moment.

The war will be won by the gamest side. The Allies have it, but it will be in the final quarter.

There is a chance for every man to get in on the finish. Farms of Canada need men and the Allies need the products of Canadian farms. Get out with the harvesters and make sure of the crop.

58,714 Is Net Number Secured Under M.S.A.

This is all That Can be Classed Properly as Reinforcements

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—Tangles in Military Service Act figures are being gradually straightened out. Investigation is now in progress by the various registrars to determine exactly how many men have been secured who might properly be classed as "reinforcements" within the meaning of the Act.

So far returns available show that up to noon yesterday the net number of reinforcements secured under the M. S. A. is 58,713. This total is exclusive of those who have reported for service voluntarily since the Act came into force. It is exclusive also of men discharged or on leave without expense to the public. Including these, the total would be:

Obtained under M. S. A., 58,713; voluntarily reporting, 19,477; number discharged or on leave without expense to the public, 23,523; total, 101,713.

This total of 58,713 reinforcements comprises:

Obtained west of Great Lakes, 22,496; obtained in Ontario, 19,734; obtained in Quebec, 8,387; obtained in Maritime Provinces, 8,106. Total obtained under M. S. A., 58,713.

From the above 3,134 have been transferred to the Royal Air Service and the Inland Water Transport, B. E. F.

The total of men ordered to report by registrars is 109,828, and 37,188 are classed as having failed to report. It is expected, however, that the revised figures will indicate many of these as having already reported in districts other than those from which the call was issued.

Canadians Capture Many Prisoners

LONDON, Aug. 16.—How war makes a variety in bed-fellowship was shown yesterday when ambulances discharged at the London Hospital two Toronto lieutenants with an Imperial Tanks officer, who had several Canadians serving in this tank. All three had been in the same section of the fight.

All three officers, declared the newspaper correspondents, seemed to think there had been an underestimate of the number of prisoners and the quantity of material captured. In machine guns, for instance, they believed the Canadians captured five times as many as they were given credit for.

The Canadian Associated Press is authoritatively informed that the Germans in their flight left tons of valuable railway material, and made no serious attempt to destroy their abandoned lines of rolling stock. The Canadian railway troops are now linking our own system with these deserted enemy lines. Here is a striking instance of how rapidly within the last few hours these rails have been made workable. Our correspondent the other night traveled over fifteen kilometers of track, which forty hours previously were in the Boche lines.

The Canadian tunnelers are also busy making the road strong enough to take the giant caterpillars, which draw two howitzers, and are also performing first aid work for the tanks mired in the first onslaught.

Gallant Canadians Not Appreciated

NEWCASTLE, Aug. 16.—"It is apparently inevitable, in a war as protracted as this and from which we in Canada are so remote, that in the quiet and peace of our own homes, our own inconveniences and hardships, our own daily tasks and our pursuit of gain, should bulk so large in our own eyes and occupy so much of our thought that we are in danger of losing our sense of proportion," said Hon. W. Rowell, addressing his constituents last night. "Our danger is that we may fail to se our gallant men at the front, their daily toil, their nightly vigil, their service and their sacrifice.

A visit to the front enables one to correct one's perspective, to see things as they really are, and to realize how small are all the ills that trouble us compared to the issues of this war and the loss and suffering of the people in whose territories this war is being waged."

Be Careful What You Wash Your Hair With

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Canada's Production of Munitions Reaches an Amazing Total

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—On what a gigantic scale are the operations in Canada of the Imperial Munitions Board is indicated in an official statement that the total value of contracts for shells, raw materials and supplies of various kinds up to May 31 last was $1,200,000,000. No less than $1,000,000,000 had been paid out on account of these orders by the board to the same date.

Of this enormous expenditure shells accounted for $664,300,000, the total number of shells produced in Canada to the end of May being 59,390,000. These shells range in calibre from those for the eighteen-pounder and the 4.5 howitzer, which form the 'barkers' of the field artillery, to the 9.2 howitzers farther back of the front line, where the 'heavies' hold forth in their deadly controversy with the Hun.

Fifteen per cent. of the total expenditures of the British Ministry of Munitions during 1917 was spent in Canada, constituting a very substantial proportion when it is remembered on what enormous scale is the manufacture of munitions in Great Britain itself, and how heavy has been her outlay in the United States.

Canada's Contribution Striking

In the report issued by the Imperial War Cabinet for 1917, the following statement is made:

"Canada's contribution during the last year has been very striking. Fifteen per cent. of the total expenditure of the Ministry of Munitions in the last six months of the year was incurred in that country. She has manufactured nearly every type of shell from the 18-pounder to the 9.2 inch. In the case of the 18-pounder no less than 55 per cent. of the output of shrapnel shells in the last six months came from Canada, and most of these were complete rounds of ammunition which went direct to France. Canada also contributed 42 per cent. of the total 4.5 shells, 27 per cent. of the 6-inch shells, 20 per cent. of the 60-pounder H. E. Shells, 115 per cent. of the 8-inch and 16 per cent. of the 9.2-inch. In addition Canada has supplied shell forgings, ammunition components, propellants, acetone, T.N.T., aluminum, nickel, airplane parts, agricultural machinery and timber besides quantities of railway materials, including no less than 450 miles of rails torn up from Canadian railways which were shipped direct to France."

450 Factories Engaged

The number of factories engaged in Canada in the production of munitions is 450. Of these 150 factories are occupied in machining the steel shells and assembling component parts which are supplied to them by the board, while 300 factories are producing component parts, which are forwarded to the machine shops to be made into the complete shell.

From 50,000 to 80,000 tons of steel and from 1,1500,000 to 3,000,000 forgings are handled monthly by the Imperial Munitions Board. To July 31 approximately 2,100,000 tons of steel had been received and distributed by the steel department of the board, resulting in the shipment to machining plants or for export of 75,000,000 forgings for shells of sizes ranging from 18-pounder shrapnel to 9.2.

The Imperial Munitions Board has also arranged contracts in Canada on behalf of the United States Government, whereby Canadian manufacturers will undertake the machining of approximately 11,000,000 shells and the manufacture of 13,000,000 forgings.

School Boy Sues Farmer For Wages

Quit in Middle of Haying Causing Loss to Farmer

KINGSTON, Aug. 16. — County Magistrate George Hunter characterized a acse that had been entered for adjudication, Edward Fowler vs. George Finnegan, the most complicated that had come before him during his service of eleven years on the bench during which time he had disposed of nearly twelve hundred cases. He therefore advised the counsel, A. B. Cunningham for the plaintiff, and G. M. Macdonell, to arrange a settlement if possible, and the court was adjourned until two o'clock. Col. Hunter stated that he had no doubt that the decision of W. L. Allison and himself who were to hear the arguments would be appealed and he advised settlement if at all posible.

Edward Fowler is a Collegiate Institute student who hired himself out to George Finnegan of Pittsburg township, at twenty-five dollars a month to secure his standing at examinations.

In July he informed Finnegan that he was going to leave, and demanded his wages, amounting to $37.50 for six weeks' work. Finnegan paid $12.50 into court, but refused to pay the rest, as he claimed that the loss of the help at a time when haying was at its height had caused him monetary loss. It is for the recovery of the other $25 that action has been brought in the county court involving some knotty problems and technicalities respecting the law of contract.

No settlement could be made by the lawyers and the case was resumed. Justices Hunter and Allison gave judgment dismissing the action.

CAN YOU RUN A CAR?

The world's greatest athletes and sportsmen have poured out their blood in a rich, red stream for humanity. In the scroll of history, the runners, the fighters, the jockeys, the ball players, in fact, all "sports" will hold large space.

There are those who follow the games who cannot get "over there." They are willing to do their share but many have not had the idea impressed upon them that saving food, producing food, and buying bonds helped much. They do, but there is still more to be done.

Can you run a motor car?

There will be much work to be done soon, in the operation of threshers and binders. Learn to operate a farm machine and help in this way. It's the work that tells.

Music and Drama

CHARMING ELSIE FERGUSON

Both Elsie Ferguson in "The Danger Mark," and Sessue Hayakawa in "The Bravest Way" pleased last night at Griffin's, and the large audience that was present showed their hearty approval by the many outbursts of applause. As both stars are well known and favorites with Belleville audience big business should be the result for Friday and Saturday matinee and night.

"CIVILIZATION"

Coming to Griffin's for the last half of next week is the best liked picture seen to date entitled "Civilization." The story took more than a year to complete, and it is said to have taken 40,000 people and 10,000 horses to complete this monster picture.

"A FIGHT FOR MILLIONS"

Next week-end will commence the new serial photoplay "A Fight for Millions," with William Duncan and Edith Johnson and Joe Ryan, favorites in the "Vengeance and The Woman" and "Fighting Trail" serials. In spite of the cruel war, the high cost of living and other troubles that this old world is beset with, in the hearts of Canadians romance still lives, responsive to the heroic deeds of brave men and devoted women. In this new serial the story concerns the ranch of Jean Benton, the finding of nickel and cobalt on her ranch and the death of her millionaire father before she is born. The father has misjudged her mother and had left her. On his death bed he learns of her innocence from Lone Star, a faithful Indian. His will leaves his property to Jean providing she marries either of two cousins, Jacob Lawless or Walter Hyde. They begin a fight for millions and the girl, Hyde getting a start on Lawless by garroting him in a hotel room. A very logical story of the great West and a reproduction through the wonderful medium of the moving picture machine of the many thrilling and stirring happenings that have taken and are taking place continuously out of the great western country. A story suitable for everyone between the ages of six and ninety six.

An Inspiration to the Editors

LONDON, Aug. 16.—(By Fernand Rinfret, Editor Le Canada, Montreal)—The delegation of Canadian newspapermen returned from Scotland greatly elated over their trip to the Grand Fleet and the great shipbuilding factories. Nothing they have seen so far has impressed them more of the might and power of the British Empire or has given them a better assurance of victory than their visit to a great cordite factory where they saw thousands of English and Scottish women engaged in the dangerous work of supplying explosives to the allies. They were all cheerful and carried on their work in the best of spirits.

The delegation paid a flying visit to Manchester where they were taken to the docks ad canal. By way of relaxation came an informal and rollicking luncheon at the Press Club in old London where they met their confrers from the great metropolis. Later the delegates were the guests of Brigadier-General James C. Ross and the officers of the Canadian Army Pay Corps at Holborn House.

The remainder of the week will be devoted to some delayed visits and a group of dinners, so eager seem the various political and army groups to entertain the Canadian representatives before they return to their country.

This week is to see the last of the Canadians in London as they are about to sail having completed their program which comprised the most wonderful group of war visits ever organized for any party. All are enthusiastic about the great experience they have been through.

WHERE THE MOTOR CARS ARE HUMMING.

Ontario farmers own 23,409 automobiles.

Ontario merchants and manufacturers own 14,825 automobiles.

Ontario editors owning motor cars are too few to make a quorum, or even raise a good sized dust.

Seems strange, but the official records show that in 1913 there were only 966 motor cars owned by farmers in Ontario, so that since the war began 22,443 automobiles have been purchased by farmers.

Wonder if the increase in automobiles has anything to do with the high price of hogs and other apparently necessary evils?

ANNANIAS AND SAPHIRA BUSY.

Rumors that a woman aviator of international reputation and popularity had been unmasked as a spy for the German Government and shot by a miltary firing squad have been absolutely denied by the United States War Department.

The lady in question may be expected to officially corroborate the statement of the War Department that she is still very much alive. How baseless rumors such as this one ever start is a mystery, but it is a known fact that there are people in the world who would rather lie than tell the truth. Many of the lies started are part of the paid propaganda of German spies masquerading under the guise of loyal citizens; "yellow dogs," they are called in the United States, where every story tending to injure military efficiency is speedily nailed with the question "How do you know?" and traced to its origin. Search for "yellow dogs" has become so persistent and widespread in the United States that reckless statements and baseless rumors are killed at birth to the discomfiture of those foolish enough to repeat them.

WHEN DID THIS HAPPEN?

When and where did the City Council decide to drop negotiations for the purchase of the Bay Bridge? Mayor Platt stated before the Board of Trade that such was the case. The ratepayers are entitled to the details of the official renunciation, the resolution and the names of the mover and seconder.

It is hard to believe that any such action was taken, but it is also hard to disbelieve the worthy Mayor. However, just to clear up any possible misunderstanding the publication of the official records will be appreciated.

It is inconceivable that all of the members of the Belleville City Council should suddenly agree to cease working for a free bridge without going the full limit in the interests of the citizens—or even that a majority should be in favor of such an unbusinesslike attitude.

The people demand a free bridge—at the least possible expense, of course—but the big thing is a FREE BRIDGE, and the matter of expense is not the principal factor.

The opinions of Prince Edward County and the Ontario Government, partners with the City of Belleville in the free bridge movement, are also worthy of consideration and any action taken must be taken jointly.

Belleville City Council has no right to stop the procession without consulting the other principals and the wishes of the ratepayers generally.

A farmer's wife, with fire in her eye and anything but sunshine in her soul, is looking for a man who robbed her on the market last Saturday. He bought four dozen fine fresh eggs from her, and stepped aside to get the change, but failed to step back again. "I find there are just as big thieves in Orillia as there are in Toronto," the lady declared, in a tone which indicated a feeling that in bringing in Toronto she had exhausted the resources of comparison. The man is described as short and dark, and dressed in a suit of navy blue, topped by a Panama hat. If you run across a man answering this description, arrest him and ring the town bell. A man who would steal eggs at present prices would rob a church.—Orillia Packet.

The Poet's Corner

THE AIRSHIP.

Through the far height, by day or night,
My ceaseless task goes on—
O'er hostile coasts, and marching hosts,
Till the long war is won.

The track I mark of that foul sea shark
The deadly submarine;
I spy his way to his destined prey,
Beneath the waters green.

I swoop from the shroud of the thunder cloud
Upon the startled foe—
And the bubbles rise with his choking cries,
From the salt sea deeps below.

With hawk-like flight my foe I fight
Up in the cloudland there—
And send him down with a flaming crown
Through a mile of empty air.

A day will come when my motors hum
O'er the city of blood and sin—
With a rain of fire, and Heaven's ire,
On thy towers and streets, Berlin!

IN DAYS OF GLOOM—1918.

By Edward Sapir

I am the smoke. I curl up out of you,
You league on league of chimnied town, and float
Off on the crest of winds. I am a boat
That glides up-current to the sunny blue.
You breathe me out, warm black, but as I rise
And rise, I lose your life and chill to gray,
And, dying towards the sky, I silently give way
To beams that rush to smile into your eyes.

am the smoke, you league on league of souls,
That fouled your dreams, but that, breathed out, now rolls
Off in a warm black cloud to die, to chill
To nothingness, and make room for the light of spring
To rush to you and grant awakening
Of hope—of hope that long lay crushed and still.

All of the patients have been transferred to a local hospital camp and plans for sending the remainder of the interned enemies to Oglethorpe are being completed.

Armor and Modern Missiles.

New York Times.

That there is any thought of dressing the soldiers on either side in this war in anything at all closely resembling the armor worn by the knights of olden days cannot be believed. It is more than probable—it is certain—that in all armies much consideration has been given to the problem of protecting the men to whatever extent is possible from modern missiles. Something along that line has already been done.

"Peace Offensives"

Philadelphia Record

The term "peace, offensive" is a particularly happy one, because Germany is decidedly more offensive when it talks peace than when it carries on war. The striking thing about these various peace offensives is that the most military nation in the world, which has believed its armies to be invincible, has no longer any hope of winning the war by arms and is trying to win by intrigue, chicanery and deception. That sort of thing worked with Russia, but it won't with America, Great Britain, France and Italy. Trickery will not save Germany. The only thing left for it is to throw up its hands.

TWO SOLDIERS KILLED IN SHOOTING AFFRAY

Quebec, August 16.—Henri Vidal, French-Armenian, recently enrolled in a Serbian detachment encamped at Lauzon, Levis, and a Serbian soldier, Ciro Dubrojuda, are dead as a result of a shooting affray which occurred about 6 o'clock last evening. The whole town of Lauzon has been arosed by the shooting, which caused much excitement there. According to what can be gathered, Vidal was the aggressor. He had not yet been served with a uniform but was returning to camp after a visit to Quebec apparently under the influence of liquor. He was stopped by two sentries, who demanded his pass, and after a little discussion, Vidal drew a revolver and shot one of the sentries, Dubrojuda, through the eye, killing him instantly. He then turned his gun on the other man, but missed, the sentry then firing four shots into Vidal's body, every one taking effect. Vidal died about fifteen minutes later.

Imperia l War Cabinet Grows In Importance

Statement Issued in Answer to the Criticisms of Borden's Absence Overseas

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—In view of continued criticism of Sir Robert Borden because of his absence in England the Director of Public Information issued a statement in explanation of the grow ing importance of the deliberations of the Imperial War Cabinet. The statement, which is based upon information brought to Canada by Ministers who have returned is as follows:

"A very great step in the constituational development of the Empire was taken last year by the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom when he summoned the Prime Ministers of the overseas dominion to the Imperial War Cabinet.

"In 1917 Australia was unable to send a representation to the meetings held, but this year the deputation from overseas was complete, and for the first time all the self governing nations of the British Common-wealth in the persons of their responsible ministers have met in a common council, in which the most important matters of state were under consideration.

ENLARGEMENT OF AUTONOMY

"The significance of the Imperial War Cabinet is perhaps not generally realized. Its creation marks a very definite enlargement of the autonomy of the Dominion. As Sir Robert Borden said recently in a speech in London, "The Dominions have always lacked the full status of nations, because the home Government exercised a sort of trusteeship under which it undertook to deal with foreign relations on their behalf, and sometimes without consulting them very much.

"That day has gone by. For the first time in British history the Dominions have been given a direct voice in those affairs of state which concerns the Empire as a whole. Although unconsulted the Dominions entered this war of wars with a willingness which admitted of fno debate. But they have now earned a voice in the conduct of the war and the peace negotiations which must follow. Such a voice has now been granted them not as a favor, but as a right.

LIMITATIONS AT THIS CABINET

"Sir Robert Borden has aptly called the Imperial War Cabinet 'a Cainet of Governments.' Every Prime Minister who sat around was responsible to his own Parliament and his own people, and the conclusions of the War Cabinet could only be carried away by the Parliaments of the different parts of the Empire. Each Dominion, each nation, retained its perfect autonomy.

"The Imperial War Cabinet must not be confused with the Imperial War Conference. The latter is the successor of the Imperial Conference which was held before the war, and deals in an advisory capacity with general questions of concern to the commonwealth, chiefly relating at present to problems of reconstruction.

MUST NOT BE CONFUSED

"Neither must the Imperial War Cabinet be confused with the (British) War Cabinet which is primarily concerned with the affairs of the United Kingdom. The latter was introduced with the last change of Government in Great Britain and its creation was intended to make a distinction between the body which was responsible for the direction of the war and those Minisers who have charge of the great administrative departments of State and should be left free to direct their activities. The general direction of the policy of the British Government during the war rests with the War Cabinet, whose members, six in number with one exception are relieved of routine administrative work, and whose time is therefore entirely free for the initiation of policy and the work of co-ordination. During the last year the British War Cabinet held more than 300 meetings.

MAKE-UP OF CABINET

'The Imperial War Cabinet which is distinct from the British War Cabinet, during its sessions this year was composed of the Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, Right Hon. D. Lloyd George; Lord Curzon, President of the Council; Right Hon. A. Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer and two Ministers without portfolio, Right Hon. Austen Chamberlain, and Right Hon. G. N. Barnes, and five Ministers of the Crown in charge of the great departments of State in the operations of which the Empire as a whole is concerned. Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, Foreign Secretary; Right Hon. Walter Long, Colonial Secretary of State for the Air Force and the following representatives from the Dominion.

From Canada: Robert Borden and Hon. N. W. Rowell; from Australia Rt. Hon. Wm. Hughes, Prime Minister and Rt. Hon. J. Cook, Minister for the Navy; from New Zealand, Rt. Hon. W. F. Massey, Prime Minister and Sir Joseph Ward, Minister of Finance from South Africa, Lt.-Col. J. C. Smuts, Minister of Defence and Hon. Sir J .Burton, Minister of Railways and Harbors: from Newfoundland, Rt. Hon. W. F. Lloyd, Prime Minister; from India, the Maharajah of Patiala and the Hon. S. P. Sinha.

BORDEN STILL IN ATTENDANCE

The Imperial War Cabinet has not yet concluded its sessions and the Prime Minister of Canada is still in attendance.

"The benefits conferred by the creation of the Imperial War Cabinet are many. Not the least of these is the opportunity which it affords the United Kingdom and the Great Dominions to co-operate in the prosecution of a great common task. The combination of unity and the preservation of autonomy is so striking that as the Prime Minister has said "in this might be found the germ of a development in the constitutional of the Empire, which would form the basis of its unity in the years to come."

Railway Heroes at the War

WRITING from war correspondents' headquarters in France, Roland Hill says: "The men who drive the big engines of Canada's ocean-to-ocean trains across the prairies and through the mountains are made of stern stuff, and have nerves as steady as the steel roads they travel. You may meet many of them at the war." Under the most trying circustances these men are carrying on the most difficult work right up behind the firing lines. The train tracks are often broken and the rail beds damaged by enemy shell fire. Men less skilled would not risk running a train over them, but these expert Canadian engine drivers often pilot their cargoes along lines that seem impassible. They bring up troops, food supplies, guns and ammunition, and they bring back the wounded to the hospitals. Nothing daunts them. Roland Hill tells of a young sergeant who in days of peace drove the Imperial Limited, from Moose Jaw to the West; this man backed up his engine to a shell dump where there were $200,000 worth of shells. Part of this dump was on fire and the shells were bursting around the brave sergeant. He coolly connected a hose with his main steam pipe and for half an hour pumped steam into the burning mass, and finally overcame the fire. His engine was bored with shrapnel holes. The flying fragments tore his clothes, and his escape was miraculous. His gallantry during the fire rallied others to his assistance. Many of these were wounded; he utilized his damaged engine to bring them to an adjacent hospital.

Private James Peter Robertson, of Medicine Hat, Alberta, was one of the C. P. R. engineers to win the Victoria Cross, the most coveted distinction in the army. A Reuter despatch says: "Number 352665, Private James Robertson, late infantry, enlisted at Macleod, displayed the utmost bravery and outstanding devotion to duty in an attack when his platoon was held up by uncut wire and a machine gun was causing many losses. Private Robertson dashed to an opening on the flank, rushed the machine gun and after a desperate struggle with the crew killed four men and turned the gun on the remainder, who, overcome by the [illegible] of his onslaughts, were sent running towards their own lines. His gallant work enabled the platoon to advance. He inflicted many more losses amongst the enemy, and then, carrying the captured gun, led his platoon to the final objective. He there selected an excellent position and got the gun into action, firing on the retreating enemy, who by this time were demoralized by the fire brought on them. His courage and coolness cheered his comrades and inspired them to finest efforts. In carrying in a wounded man he was killed in front of his own trenches."

But not only have the engineers been doing great things at the war; men from other branches of the service of the C. P. R. have been doing nobly as well. At present there are 9,500 employees of the company in the fighting ranks; they are scattered everywhere there is a fight or the prospect of one, on sea or land, and some are training at home. Many have risen to the highest official positions, and many are being promoted every day.

Private Michael James O'Rourke of New Westminster, British Columbia, was assisting in the boring of Rogers Pass tunnel—where the C. P. R. passes through the Rocky Mountains—when the war began. At Moquay Farm he won the military medal after being a short time at the war. On this occasion he spent three hours in a sap bombing Germans and when his supply of bombs ran out he lay in a shell hole sniping. He was subsequently helping at a Lewis machine gun, and went away to get ammunition. While absent the gunner was killed. O'Rourke got another gunner who shared the same fate. Then O'Rourke located a bomb, killed a German with it, took a lot of bombs from the German and flung them into the German lines.

Private O'Rourke was in the thick of the fight for twenty-eight months without receiving a serious wound. Some months ago he won his Victoria Cross unscathed. This is how he did it: For three days and nights he was a stretcher-bearer working without halt going into No Man's Land and bringing in the wounded, dressing them and getting them food and water. On one occasion he saw a wounded man, blinded, and stumbling ahead of him, who was being fired on by the enemy. Regardless of his own safety O'Rourke guided that man into safety. On another occasion he went out fifty feet in front of the British barrage where he was exposed to very heavy shell and machine gun fire, and brought in a wounded man. In a single trip to No Man's Land O'Rourke dragged no fewer than six wounded into the shelter of a trench. Throughout the entire operations the area in which he worked was subjected to incessant fire of all kinds, but this hero was all the time absolutely reckless regarding his own safety, and though almost exhausted stuck to his task unflinchingly.

Corporal E. E. Reece, formerly an employee of the Canadian Pacific Railway, is another to win the military medal. He rescued a number 12 howitzer gun that had been left in a dangerous position and was liable to be put out of action by the enemy. The gun was taken back four miles under a terrific shower of shrapnel which lasted for four hours and was struck eight times during the removal to the rear.

Lieutenant L. A. Coulin of the 22nd Battalion was awarded the military cross for splendid work in rescuing the wounted under heavy shell fire during the battle of Passchendaele. Previous to enlistment he was employed in the passenger department of the C. P. R.

These are only a few instances of the heroism displayed by the soldiers recruited from the services of Canada's great railway.

"A CROWN OF SHAME"

"And I am sure of it too, sir; but that only places their cruelty to me in a more heinous light. Forgive me for saying it, Mr. Courtney, before you, who have always been so good to me and my poor father, but I will never again place myself voluntarily in the society of either Mrs. Courtney or Marquita, until they have publicly acknowledged that they have done me a foul wrong."

"They have been very hard on you," sighed the planter; "but their conduct cannot blind me to my duty. I cannot consent to your remaining here, Lizzie. The negroes may rise at any moment, and this bungalow is in the very midst of their quarters. I have received secret information concerning them, that has seriously alarmed me. The general disaffection has spread much further than I dreamt of, and even the hands on Beauregard are believed to be ripe for rebellion. Were they to take it into their heads to rise, what would you do?"

Lizzie laughed at the idea.

"In that case, sir—did I believe it possible (which I can hardly do) that your coolies could so utterly forget all they owe to you—I should be much safer here than at the White House. Why should they have any resentment against me? They loved my dear father, and I believe they love me for his sake, and I have nothing to do with their fancied causes for complaint. If they do rise, which God forbid, it will be the White House against which they will make a raid."

"Ah, my dear child, long as you have lived amongst them, you do not know the negro nature as I do. Once roused, he becomes a devil, and has no power of distinguishing between friends and foes. This bungalow will be the first piece of my property which they will have the opportunity of destroying, and I feel sure they will not spare it, nor perhaps even you. Lizzie, I beg, I implore you to accept my offer of protection and transport yourself, and all you value, at the White House."

But Lizzie was firm. She quailed a little before the possible picture Mr. Courtney had conjured up,—before the remembrance too of certain words of Captain Norris, in which he had expressed his own fears for her safety; but they had no power to alter her determniation. There was her poor prisoner in the next room to them. Guilty as he had proved himself to be, she had promised him her protection, and she would stand by him to the last, even if they were doomed to perish together. So she only shook her head, and smiled, and continued stitching at her work.

"Your obstinacy is incredible to me," said Mr. Courtney, half angrily, "and you put me in a very unpleasant position. I promised your father (as far as I could) to supply his place to you. I look on you as second only to my own child, yet you refuse to accept from me a father's protection, or to yield me the obedience of a daughter."

"I am sorry to appear ungrateful to you, Mr. Courtney, but I have my own reasons for remaining in my own home, and your arguments have no power to shake them. Pray don't be under any further apprehension for me—I have none for myself; and if your workers are disposed to mutiny, it is all the more reason that I should remain amongst them and try to bring them to a better frame of mind."

"Ah, I have heard of your attempts in that direction already, Lizzie, and that the coolies call you the angel of Beauregard. You are a good girl, my dear, and may God reward you for all you have done. I am only sorry that unfortuitous circumstances should have laid this burden of secrecy upon you. But cheer up; the day will come perhaps, when it will be removed as unexpectedly as it appeared. And no one shall rejoice more when that day comes than I shall, Lizzie."

She sighed, but she answered nothing. She knew that if the day he spoke of ever dawned, it would be to bow her benefactor's head with shame.

"And so all my entreaties are in vain?" said Mr. ourtney, as he rose to go.

"Yes, sir; I shall remain here; and honestly, I do not believe you have any cause for fear."

Yet she pondered over what he had told her all that day, not from any dread of her own safety; but endeavoring to think of some plan for getting Henri de Courcelles away before there was any possibility of his detection. For she felt that if the coolies on Beauregard did rise, and proceed to incendiarism or slaughter, Henri de Courcelles, who had been their tyrannical master in the days gone by and their inciter to rebellions in the present, would be the first victim of their lawless passions. Her mind was still running on the same subject when the evening shadows closed, and Hugh Norris unexpectedly walked into the room.

Her first feeling at seeing him was one of such unmitigated pleasure, that she could not help betraying it.

"Oh, Hugh—I mean, Captain Norris" she exclaimed, "are you really back again? I am so glad—I didn't think—I was afraid that—" and here she stopped, blushing for her incoherency.

"Are you really glad?" he said, taking her hand, and warmly pressing it, whilst his open countenance revealed his emotion. "Have you felt my absence, Lizzie? Have our two months of separation stretched themselves out to their full term?"

"Indeed they have," she answered ingenuously. "I have been counting the days till you should return. For we have passed through a terrible time since you left us. But perhaps you have already heard of it."

"Indeed I have heard of it, Lizzie," he said gravely, "and I thank God that it was no worse. What should I have done had you been involved in this horrible catastrophe? But I am here, and you are safe, and I will not leave San Diego again until I take you with me. Was I not right in my forebodings?"

"Partially so; but you see that no one has harmed me yet. What a quick passage you have made this time, Captain Norris."

"Very quick; but you may imagine that I wasted no more time in England than I could help, Lizzie. I was not out of sight of San Diego before I was longing to get back again, and thanks to favorable winds, and an obliging supercargo, I have made the double passage in as short a time as is possible. But I found time to accomplish my heart's desire, all the same."

"What was that?" she demanded curiously.

"Do you remember the packet of letters you threw me to read when we last said good-bye, and you had to run to attend to some infant or other?"

"Yes, yes, I remember. It was Mammy Chloe's baby," she answered, laughing.

"The first letter I opened surprised me more than anything has ever done in my life before. It was from your late father to Mr. Courtney, and he signed himself 'Herbert Ruthin,' and wrote in familiar terms of his father and mother, Sir William and Lady Ruthin, and of their place in Scotland—Aberdare."

"Well, well, of course; it was his own home," interrupted Lizzie impatiently. "Why should it have so greatly surprised you?"

"Because, Lizzie, my mother (whose maiden name was Mary Herbert) is a second or third cousin of Lady Ruthin and when her ladyship came to Maidstone, which is close to mother's home, a few years ago, she called on us, and took dinner at the cottage."

"Oh, Hugh, how very, very strange." cried Lizzie, forgetting etiquette in her breathless surprise.

"Yes, it is only another proof of how small the world is, and how we are all but one large family. I remembered Lady Ruthin's visit to my mother distinctly, and also that I had heard she had had great trouble about her second son Herbert, but I fancied he was dead. When I learnt the truth from those letters, I determined to see Sir William and Lady Ruthin on my return to England and I did so."

"You did!" echoed Lizzie ; "and, oh! what did they say?"

"I was only at Aberdare two hours, dearest," replied Captain Norris, growing bolder as he gained his advantage, "but it was long enough to serve my purpose. I told them everything, Lizzie—what a good life your dear father had lived here, expiating his youthful error by a course of self-abnegation, and how like a martyr he had died, stricken down by exhaustion consequent on his labors for others. And I soon found that if their pride and mortification have prevented their speaking of their lost son for so many years past, it has not been because the love of him has faded from their hearts. They concluded he was dead long ago, but as I spoke of him, they were both melted into tears, and reproached themselves bitterly for not having employed stronger measures to ascertain his fate."

"My poor darling father!" exclaimed Lizzie, weeping; "how I wish he could have had the comfort of knowing that his parents felt for him."

"Doubtless he knows it now, dear. But my story is not done yet, Lizzie. When I had told Sir William and Lady Ruthin all I knew about your father, I spoke of you, and their excitement became painful to witness. They are longing to see you, my dear, and make up to you for all you have suffered on account of your poor father's exile. I am the bearer of a letter from them begging you at once to return to England and place yourself under their protection. I shall see you in your proper position at last, Lizzie, and reaping the reward you so richly deserve. I cannot tell you how proud and happy I feel to have been made the instrument of this change in your destiny."

Lizzie looked up at him gratefully.

"It was so good of you to think of it," she murmured, "but I can hardly believe it yet. My dear father's parents! They will seem like part of himself to me, and especially if they cherish his memory. And I shall owe it all to you. What can I do for you in return, Hugh?"

Have Saved Copper Worth $5,000,000

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—No more striking example of the importance of conservation could be given than that contained in a report of the Imperial Munitions Board. In making the turnings on the copper driving bands of shells produced in Canada for the British Ministry of Munitions a large quantity of copper scrap is accumulated. This is refined and cast into ingots. Up to date 10,000 tons of copper has thus been reclaimed, representing a value of approximately $5,000,000.

Steel scrap is also being continuously recovered in large quantities the present annual value of which is approximately $5,000,000.

British Forgings, Limited, a subsidiary organization of the board, operates one plant which is the largest electric steel plant in the world, where the steel scrap accumulation collected from hundreds of munitions factories in Canada is converted by the electrical process into ingots and forgings.

Operations commenced in July, 1917 and the present monthly capacity of the plant is about 5,000 tons of shell steel. Up to May 31, 900,000 6-inch forgings had been produced, in addition to 69,500 9.2-inch shell forgings.

WINS ITALIAN DECORATION

TORONTO, Aug. 16.—Word has just reached Toronto that Lieut. William E. Sommerville, M.A., has just been decorated by the King of Italy with the Italian Distinguished Service Medal, called the Croce al Merito di Guerra."

According to the official Italian statement, the award was made for signal bravery, "in carrying wounded along heavily shelled roads, and also repeatedly under rifle and machine gun fire. Lieut. Sommerville, who is a graduate of Trinity University, was in his second year at Osgoode Hall when he enlisted in 1916.

The decoration appears to have been given as a direct result of the signal service rendered on the Piave when for days the wounded were removed from the most advanced front line positions under continual machine gun and rifle fire. Lieut. Sommerville is a son of Mrs. Frank Somerville, 286 Crawford street, and before leaving for the front was studying law in the office of his brother, Norman Sommerville, 59 Victoria street.

Sir Robert Opens War Exhibition

LONDON Aug. 15.—Premier Borden in opening the exhibition of war specimens collected by the Canadian Army Medical Corps, remarked that the British and French hospitals were keeping the most careful records of war cases. He was assured that these would be of the greatest service in the future to medical science. It was, he added, gratifying to know that the Canadian medical officers backed up the Canadian Government, were assisting in this work.

Hapsburgs Having Interesting Time

LONDON, Aug. 15.—Turmoil in Bohemia has resulted in the execution of seventy-four Czech soldiers and wholesale arrests in many raids, newspapers of Munich and Dresden say, according to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Zurich. The Hungarian garrisons have been reinforced and arms are being confiscated. Public and private meetings have been prohibited and several newspapers suppressed, while others are censured.

Munich newspapers say it is believed that even a slight incident will bring about a general uprising in Bohemia.

Literary Notes

AUGUST CANADIAN MAGAZINE

There are several first-class short stories by Canadian writers in The Canadian Magazine for August. First mention should be given to a new writer, Laura A. Ridley, whose story, "Miss Bartlett's Evening Out," is a fine character study. The illustrations by Mary Essen are unusually good. "Troops", by William Hugo Pabke, is a moving sketch of the troop train delayed for a few hours at a junction point in New Brunswick. There are also personal and travel sketches, historical articles and a chapter of Sir John Willison's entertaining reminiscences.

Germany's Certain Doom

New York Times.

We shall have 3,000,000 fighting men in France next spring; 2,000,000 more will be ready to respond to the call if they are needed. Germany may read her certain doom in the lines of this new army bill, in the resolve of the Inter-Allied Conference that the war shall be forced to an early conclusion. The issue between German military autocracy and civilization is to be settled for all time, and soon. It is not alone with men that we respond to the call. The boundless resources of industrial America are enlisted in the cause. We have curtailed or suspended non-essential effort; the energies of our 100,000,000 people are concentrated upon the undertaking of the war. It is madness for Germany to continue the struggle another day, and her persistence in the attempt to stem the irresistible tide running against her is proof that she fights on, not under the guidance of reason or of hope, but with the blind fury of a madman.

Airmen Cause Enemy Tremendous Losses

Tons of Bombs are Being Droppeb Night and Day

With the British Army in France, Aug. 16.—In addition to a continuous harrasing fire from the artillery, the Germans are suffering at the hands of the British air forces. Tons of bombs are being dropped on them day and night, and transports in towns and villages behind the lines have been hit. The brigades accross the Somme at Peronne and Elf have been bombarded heavily.

HAVE CAUSED TREMENDOUS LOSSES

Prisoners captured are unanimous concerning the effectiveness of the low flying British airplanes. They say the airmen have caused tremendous material losses and frequently have blocked roads completely by direct hits. They also have done heavy execution by pouring streams of machine gun bullets into enemy masses at close range.

All the prisoners mention the work of the tanks and seem to have stamped on their minds visions of steel monsters spitting death. One German company commander concluded his remarks about the tanks by saying: "They are a magnificent weapon and I can't understand why we have none to speak of."

GERMAN AERIAL LOSSES HIGH

A German aviator shot down within the British lines declared he was positive that the German aerial losses in recent weeks had been much greater than is admitted officially. He said he knew of one instance where five German two-seaters fell to earth well inside the German lines, but, he added there was no mention of them in official reports.

SHE SUFFERED FIVE YEARS

Finally Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Key West, Fla.—"For five years I suffered from irregularities, with terrible pains and an awful weakness in my back. The doctor gave me different medicines but they did me no good. A friend asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I found it to be the best medicine I ever tried because it made me well, and I can now do my housework. I am telling my friends about it."—Mrs. J. M. CAMUS, 726 Caroline St., Key West, Florida.

Many women at some period in their life suffer from ailments peculiar to their sex and which in most cases may be readily relieved by this famous root and herb medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, just as Mrs. Camus found it helped her after suffering for years and trying everything else in vain.

If you have any annoying symptoms you fail to understand, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The results of their 40 years experience in advising women on this subject is at your service.

APPRECIATION

is a term we feel permitted to use, as being descriptive of the state of mind of many of our CUSTOMERS who have taken advantage of OUR SUMMER FUR PRICES. The response to our offer of these special PRICES for summer work, has been gratifying to us, and no doubt means some lightening of our HEAVY FALL burden. By no means are we deploring our HEAVY FALL TRADE, far from it; but it is with a view to educating the PUBLIC to the MUTUAL advantages of preparing well ahead of winter to make void its many terrors, by having your FURS attended to NOW. LOW PRICES, FREE STORAGE FURS ALL READY WHEN NEEDED, are to your advantage. It will be easily seen that IF our customers do this, we shall be relieved of many an all-night session in the fall. Thus, by equalizing our working days it would be to our advantage; hence these offers of LOW PRICES

BELLEVILLE FIRST

The first penalty for violation of the regulations prohibiting the use in the manufacture of ice cream of more than 10 per cent. of fats or more than 6 pounds of cane sugar to 8 gallons of ice cream, has been imposed by the Canada Food Board, the offender being Mike Maraskas, 243 Front Street, Belleville. An analysis of the sample of ice cream sold by this dealer showed that he was using excessive amounts of both butter fat and sugar. For this reason he has been ordered to close his busy for a period of 15 days, from August 19th to Septeember 2nd, both days inclusive. During the period of suspension he is prohibited from buying or selling any foodstuffs.

HASTINGS IN SWEET CLOVER COLUMN

Hastings has swung into the sweet clover column, says District Representative McIntosh. This movement in Hastings began three or four years ago and there are hundreds of acres in this crop there now. This has proved satisfactory both as a hay and pasture crop and as a soil builder. Hay crops are fair, but there will not be as many hay stacks in Hastings this year as there were last. Grain crops are looking splendid and even corn is in fair condition. Buckwheat shows a considerable increase in acreage. Spring wheat has also been more largely sown than usual. The fruit crop will be a very light one in the country, hundred of apple and pear trees having been killed last winter.

BUSH MISSIONARIES

Preaching the Gospel to the shantymen in the forests of Canada and distributing copies of the Scriptures is the work of the Shantymen's Christian Association which has been doing a good work for the paste ten years. The association has eighteen missionaries actively engaged among the shantymen in the camps and work accomplished last winter included 545 camps visited, 667 Gospel meetings held, 30,256 men ministered to including 5,232 French-Canadians and 7,700 foreigners. The missionaries walked 3,984 miles to and from the camps in zero weather and covered 1,231 miles by dog team. Rev. Thos. Toplin of Toronto, is Field Secretary, and the local representative is Mr. A. Blackburn, (manager of Strouds).

156TH BAND INSTRUMENTS

After having been almost two years overseas in the hope that a revival of the band might take place, the instruments presented to the band of the 156th Leeds and Grenville Overseas Battalion by Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Hardy, have reached Brockville. In accordance with the terms of the gift of the instruments, they now become the property of the 41st Regiment, the band of which has already commenced to make use of them. It is said that some of the instruments give evidence of having received careless usage during their absence from this country. The instruments were presented to the 156th Overseas Battalion by Mr. and Mrs. Hardy when organization of a band for that unit was first mooted. They did service throughout the recruiting of the battalion and afterwards at Barriefield camp, when Bandmaster John Coughlin, now of the Governor-General's Body Guard, Toronto, was leader. A few months before the departure of the unit for England in October, 1916, the band was disbanded, but the instruments nevertheless accompanied the unit overseas. When the 156th was broken up, efforts which have only now had effect, were made to secure the return of the instruments to this country.

MOTORISTS FINED

Two inspectors from the Provincial Highway Department have been engaged at Trenton rounding up offenders against the motor Car Act. Several prosecutions and convictions resulted. Four boys under eighteen found running motor cars without a license were fined. Two cars without numbers resulted in fines. Others were fined for parking cars at night with lights out.

CHEESE FACTORY BURNED

While attending the meeting of the Cheese Board at Brockville yesterday afternoon, Norman Tackaberry was notified that his cheese factory situated at New Dublin, was destroyed by fire. The factory was one of the largest and best equipped in this district. It received between 8,000 and 10,000 pounds of milk daily.

LARGE BARN DESTROYED

The large barns of the McCarthy farm, just west of Prescott, were totally destroyed by fire, together with all the contents, at an early hour yesterday morning. Shortly after 2 o'clock Leonard Place, employed on the farm, who was sleeping in one of the buildings, was aroused by the crackling flames and had to make a hurried exit to save his life. As it was his face and hands were singed. The fire broke out in a large frame barn containing six mows filled with 200 tons of hay. It spread to a brick barn nearer the river, in which were three horses, eight pigs and four waggons. Nothing could be done to save either building or contents and the loss will be heavy.

Death Toll Is Now 50,000

Wastage in C.E.F. in Four Years is a Hundred Thousand

OTTAWA Aug. 16.—Canada's death toll from four yaers of war is now approximately 50,000. The wastage of men in the Canada Expeditionary Force during the four years, including also those incapacitated by wounds, illness or by other causes, is estimated to be a little over 100,000 or at any rate of about 25,000 per year.

The operation of the Military Service Act, which has so far directly produced 58,713 men, not including 23,529 men who reported for duty under the act, and have been either discharged for medical unfitness or other reasons or who have been granted leave of absence for necessary agricultural or other work, has thus produced a reinforcement reserve that should secure under average conditions of wastage the maintenance at full strength of the divisions at the front for a considerable period to come.

It may be noted also that in addition to the 58,713 draftees actually put into training, voluntary enlistments since November last has added 19,477 men to the Canadian army.

FIGURES OF WASTAGE

The figures of wastage up to the recent Picardy offensive in which the Canadians were heavily involved and from which the total of casualties is not yet available for publication include in round numbers 27,200 killed 9,350 died of wounds, 2,300 died of disease 4,350 presumed dead, and 400 missing. This makes a total of 43,200 to which may be added 2,774 prisoners of war and the fallen in the battles of last month, bringing the approximate absolute wastage for these categories up to about 50,000 men have been returned to Canada as being unfit for further service through wounds or other causes.

PENSIONS $4,000,000 ANNUALLY

The total number of pensions already granted to returned soldiers is now approximately 30,000 involving an annual payment of over $4,000,000.

In these figures no account has been taken of the wastage through desertions transfers to the Air Service or other branches of the Imperial army, which, of course, has made necessary the recruiting of many thousands more to take their places in all the various units of Canada's army. The figures are given only to indicate the war's actual toll from Canada in lives lost or men disabled.

NEW INDUSTRIES IN CANADA

OTTAWA, Aug. 16.—Details of the progress being made in the development of new industries in Canada are given in a statement issued by the Imperial Munitions Board. The demand for supplies of zinc and copper—required in the manufacture of munitions—led to an investigation in 1[illegible] to ascertain the feasibility of refining copper and producing metallic zinc in Canada.

This resulted in the establishment of the copper refining industry in this country for the first time in its history and a zinc plant was erected by the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. at Trail, B. C., at a cost of $2,500,000.

The production of zinc was increased from a daily output of 1,000 pounds to a present production of approximately: Metallic zinc, 18,000 tons; refined copper, 6,000 tons.

Stewed Crow A Great Luxury Soap A Fond Memory in Germany

NEW YORK Aug. 6.—The ordinary crow if well stewed is a fine dish in Germany.

A 50-cent egg fried in butter that costs $7 a pound is a luxury.

Clothes made of cloth instead of paper are reserved for the folk with money soap is merely a memory.

The non-combatants in the cities of Germany have become resigned to the death of children from malnutrition The old people pass away as a matter of course.

Milk is sold only on a physician's prescription.

In short the only way to survive in the Kaiser's realm to-day is to fight the allies or make munitions.

In substance this was the impression of the Germany of to-day as expressed by Miss Florence MacAvoy of Montclair N. J. who has just arrived on a Norwegian steamship. She left Germany on March 23.

Miss MacAvoy and her sister Mrs. Ida M. Utx of Hoboken went to Germany eight years ago to try to regain their health.

"We had been in Germany since 1910," said Miss MacAvoy, "We left on March 23, just about the time the whole country was getting jubilant over the great peace offensive that was to end the war. News had come in about that time about the success of that horrible long-distance cannon that was hurling shells into Paris and everybody I saw was happy.

"They knew nothing about the horde of Americans that was piling into France. Neither did we, because all this had been most cleverly kept from the German people. We spent most of our time in Dresden. No one there believed that America could possibly get actively into the war. They had been assured that the U-boats would keep American troops away from the continent, and the few Americans that were taken prisoners were merely a handful of adventurous spirits.

Britishers Subscribe Five Billion Dollars

LONDON, Aug. 16.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Right Hon. Arthur Bonar Law, in a statement issued yesterday announced that the subscriptions for National War Bonds had reached the stupendous figure of $5,000,000. Hitherto the world's record was held by the great war loan of 1917 yielding £918,459,000.

"Most remarkable is the fact that the great result was achieved by regular continuous week by week investment," said the Chancellor. "Consequently we avoided the dislocation of the money market and the upheaval of credit which after a great loan render it impossible for the Government to issue another loan for many months.

"It may therefore be stated that the success of the National War Bond issue is a unique achievment. Undoubtedly the excellent result obtained will serve as a stimulus to fresh endeavors. We need £25,000,000 weekly and rely therefore on the patriotism and sense of duty of our people. We know now that the finacial efforts of the country will not only be sustained but surpassed and shall be able to finance the war through to victory."

Bishop Brent Appointed.

Bishop Charles Henry Brent, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, has been appointed by Gen. Pershing as senior headquarters chaplain, with the rank of major. Two other chaplains will serve as aides to Bishop Brent—one a Roman Catholic and the other a Protestant. These three men will be known as general headquarters chaplains and will represent the body of chaplains in France to the commanding general and his staff. It will be their duty to keep in touch with every sector occupied by the American forces, provide for ministration wherever needed, and have a general oversight of the commissioned chaplains.

Bishop Brent has been in France for several months actively interested in the work of the chaplains and of the Y.M.C.A. In 1901 he was consecrated bishop of the Philippine Islands. Bishop Brent has been active in all subjects for the advancement of all natives in the Philippines. Recently he was made bishop of the diocese of western New York at Buffalo. He is the author of many well-known religious books.

Gen. Pershing and Bishop Brent have long been close friends. Bishop Brent confirmed Gen. Pershing and has baptized members of the Pershing family.

These facts are interesting to people in this country because Bishop Brent is a Canadian by birth and was educated in the Dominion, being a graduate of Trinity University, Toronto

Sporting Notes

Last evening at the fair grounds a twilight ball game was played between the Ponies and Vimys, which resulted in a tie, 2 to 2. The game was called at the end of the fifth innings on account of darkness. A very small crowd witnessed the game.

The teams:

Ponies—Philp, p.; Canning, c.; Kelleher, 1st; Andrews, 2nd; McGuire, 3rd; Lynch, s.s.; Coon, r.f.; Moore, c.f.; Duesberry, l.f.

Vimys—Smith, p.; Arnott, c.; Smith, 1st; Duesberry, 2nd; Morden, 3rd; Weir, s.s.; Moore, r.f.; Goyer, c.f.; Bryant, l.f.

Umpires—Cornell and Ellis.

The score:

Ponies . . . . . . 1 0 0 1 0—2
Vimys . . . . . . 1 1 0 0 0—2

On Tuesday last the Junior Ontarios of this city visited Madoc and easily defeated the northern team by the one-sided score of 21 to 6.

FIRE LOSS VERY GREAT

WASTAGE SAPS ECONOMIC VITALITY OF DOMINION.

Figures Compiled by Commission of Conservation Indicate That Canada's Annual Fire Waste Is Larger Than That of Any Other Civilized Country In the World—Has Become a Grave Problem.

CANADA'S annual fire waste is $2.73 for every man, woman and child, and is larger than that of any other civilized country in the world, according to a most exhaustive report by the Commission of Conservation just made public. This enormous waste, the commission asserts, is sapping the economic vitality of the country, and the immediate adoption of compulsory fire prevention measures is necessary.

The investigation also revealed the fact that the expense of conducting the business of fire insurance in Canada is unduly high, and that there are grave abuses inherent in the department agency system.

The report, which was compiled for the commission by J. G. Grave Smith, says that since Confederation, fire loss in Canada, excluding forest fires, has been $700,000,000. Of this sum $350,000,000 is made up of direct fire losses, $150,000,000 represents the cost of maintaining public and private fire protection service, whilst $197,000,000 is the amount of insurance premiums paid but not returned to policy-holders in compensation for losses. Nearly 200 people are burned to death and about 500 seriously injured by fire every year. In the four normal years, 1912-1915, Canada's annual per capita fire loss was $2.73, as compared with $2.26 in the United States, 64 cents in England, 74 cents in France, 28 cents in Germany and 13 cents in Switzerland. A disquieting feature is that the losses in this country are increasing with great rapidity.

The commission says that 70 per cent. of the fires in Canada are caused by carelessly faulty building construction, arson and lack of fire prevention laws, such laws as exist being but poorly enforced. The Canadian fire departments are described as the best in the world, but they are not preventing a steady growth of fire losses.

In dealing with the remedy for preventives the commission says that compulsory legislation, making individuals responsible for their own careless acts, is imperative. The public, it is asserted, must be aroused to their relative responsibility so that public opinion will urge and support the adoption of restrictive legislation. The Dominion Government not being given direct jurisdiction by the B.N.A. Act, it should, the commission thinks, conduct a campaign to educate the public to their responsibility. The purpose of this would be to assist provincial fire prevention efforts. The Dominion Government, it is said, should also maintain a testing laboratory to establish standards in building materials and devices.

The commission contends that the high cost of doing business implies extravagant administration on the part of the insurance companies, and says that from 1869 to 1916 the public has paid the insurance companies 65 cents for distributing every dollar of indemnity. This, it continues, gives food for thought when it is remembered that, under present Government management, the collection of customs and inland revenue cost less than five per cent. of the receipts. Since the establishment of Government insurance in New Zealand in 1905 the rates on mercantile risks have been reduced 10 per cent., and on dwellings 33 1-3 per cent. The report asserts that insurance agents in Canada are paid, on the average, a commission of slightly over 20 per cent., obviously a large expenditure on middlemen. It is also stated that the number of agents is excessive, a circumstance which makes necessary a higher commission than is economically necessary.

"The root evil of the insurance business and one of the greatest factors in the excessive fire waste in Canada is undoubtedly the method of compensating agents solely on a commission basis," the report declares. The careless agent is paid equally well with the careful agent. This tends to over-insurance, carelessness in the use and care of property, and arson, all of which cause a heavier fire waste. The remedy for this, the commission says, is a profit-sharing commission for agents, whereby those who write good risks would be more highly remunerated than those who write bad ones.

The Canadian Fire Underwriters' Association, it is pointed out, has attempted, but failed, to enforce a similar system of contingent commissions on account of the disadvantage under which it would place its members in competition with non-board companies. The Commission of Conservation, therefore, recommends that uniform legislation be drafted into the Dominion and Provincial Insurance Acts to establish the principle of profit-sharing commissions for all companies, leaving the companies and their agents to work out the details.

Telephoning From Trains.

The Railway Department, through the Moncton management of the Intercolonial, has during the past three months been facilitating tests of a device for telephoning from and to moving trains. The experimental stage has not yet passed, but tests would seem to establish the practicability of the invention.

Consecrate Relief of Picardy's Capital

Impressive Ceremony Is Held in Famous Cathedral Torn by Shell Fire

With the British Armies in France, Aug. 17.—Amiens is no longer silent and deserted.

One of the most dramatic ceremonies of the war, while the famous cathedral resounded with speech and song for the first time in nearly five months, the relief of Picardy's capital was consecrated Thursday, simultaneously with re-consecration of the edifice, which has been battered and profaned by German shell and bomb since March.

Today the Germans are seventeen miles away at the nearest point.

The cathedral was re-opened at a mass attended by every soldier who could arrange the journey. They came from miles around. The choir was composed entirely of soldiers in dusty, rusty, horizon blue. The organist and violinist were attired the same way. Only the pastor was garbed for the occasion. His assistants, like the choir, wore the ordinary uniform of the trenches.

Flags Over the Altar.

Over the high altar fluttered the flags of the Allies, the wind blowing freely through the shattered windows, from many of which the last splinter of glass is gone.

High in the nave and transept, astonished pigeons, used only to the crashing of shells, fluttered about.

In this setting the pastor told the story of the cathedral. Listening were American, British, French, Belgian, Italian, and other allied officers and soldiers, standing or sitting between columns protected by sandbags.

A few civilians wandered in to give thanks.

Arisen from the dead, the city of Amiens today is alive.

Allies Occupy Villers Les Roye Also St. Aurin

With the French Army in France, Aug. 17.—Allied forces occupied Villers-les-Roye and St. Aurin, and reached their old line of trenches east of Armancourt Thursday. Farther north they pressed forward toward the Chaulnes-Roye line, taking Damery Wood in the evening.

Sharp fighting continues east of Armancourt. Just west of Lassigny there was a lively combat for Chasseurs trench, in the middle of Plessier Park. The fighting ended in a victory for the French.

The Germans are still clinging stubbornly to the Lassigny-Roye line. They have given no indications whether they hope to hold it longer than may be necessary to save material and withdraw troops from communication trenches from flanking movement.

Capture of Ecouvillon, which facilitated the taking of Ribecourt, has been followed by the occupation of the Monolithe Farm, giving the third army another grip on a vital position near Thiescourt and threatening the German line of retreat along the road to Noyon.

Canadian Doctors and Nurses in Big Battle

Are Playing a Great Part in Care for French and American Wounded

OTTAWA, Aug. 17.—Roland Hill, Canadian correspondent at the front, referring to the recent great allied offensive, cables from British correspondents' headquarters in France as follows:

"In the maelstrom behind where the fierce fighting is now occurring from Soissons to Rheims, there is a Canadian Hospital doing its duty administering to French and American wounded. For some months it has been established out in the French lines tending to the wants of our allies, and now those doctors and nurses from Canada are having their reward by taking part in what may be the greatest battle in history. Stories reach me, too, that several of our Canadian forestry units have joined in the fray, and though not actually fighting, are doing valuable work of an engineering character."

Woman Appointed Master of U.C. College

TORONTO, Aug. 17—For the first time since the founding of Upper Canada College in 1829, a woman has attained to a mastership in that institution of learning. The person thus singularly honored is Miss Mary C. Tucker of the St. Thomas High School staff. She is the granddaughter of Mr. Saul Stacey, a pioneer of St. Thomas, who settled there in the forties and had a brilliant student career. The board of governors of the U.C.C. have appointed her head of the science department. She will not be a resident master, but will have charge of all the science teaching in the school. The appointment was made because of her qualifications and because of the scarcity of male teachers.

STRICKEN ON U. S. MISSION.

A Pacific Port, Aug. 17.—Albert Metin, head of the French economic mission now in the United States, which is on its way to Australia, former minister of blockade, died here at midnight last night from a stroke of apoplexy, shortly after his arrival here with the mission of which General Paul Gerald Pau, noted French military leader, was joint head.

FAVORS NATIONAL SCHOOLS.

Montreal, Aug. 17.—The Trades and Labor Council here, a two-thirds majority of which is French-Canadian, last night on a vote of 52 to 25, supported a minority report of a committee in favor of national schools directly controlled by the State and with free and compulsory education.

ALLIES ARE MARCHING ON ROYE GERMANS IN DIFFICULT POSITION

FALL OF ROYE MATTER OF HOURS ONLY

GERMANS HAVE BEEN TENACIOUSLY CLINGING TO TOWN OF ROYE, AN IMPORTANT STRATEGICAL POSITION NOW ALMOST SURROUNDED BY FRENCH, ENGLISH AND CANADIAN TROOPS, WHO ARE CLOSING IN ON THE TOWN—GERMAN FORCES ARE IN PRECARIOUS POSITION—BRITISH CONTINUE TO ADVANCE IN PICARDY — TWO GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACKS NEAR RIBECOURT REPULSED.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—(Official)—In the region south of Roye French troops have made further progress in Loges Wood and have reached the outskirts of the wood on the east. There was heavy artillery firing west of Roye during the night. Northwest of Ribecourt the French have repulsed two strong German attacks.

BRITISH TROOPS ADVANCE.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—(Official)—In Picardy British troops have made additional progress. The British lines have been pushed eastward north of the Amiens-Roye road and north of the Ancre.

The text of the statement reads: "The pressure of our troops north of the Roye road and north of the Ancre River continues and progress has been made by us in both sectors. In the neighborhood of Vieux Berquin our patrols had sharp fighting yesterday and further encounters took place during the night. Our troops made progress in this sector and in the neighborhood of Merris and have taken prisoners. The hostile artillery has shown considerable activity about Mount Rouge and Cherpenberg and in the vicinity of Zillebeke Lake."

BRITISH GAIN GROUND.

Field Marshal Haig reports that the British have gained further ground in the neighborhood of Vieux-Berquin, at the apex of the Lys salient.

GERMAN POSITION SERIOUS.

PARIS, Aug. 17.—(By Havas Agency)—The Germans are preparing to evacuate the Roye-Lassigny-Noyon salient, says the Echo de Paris. It is indicated by the fact that German pioneers and laborers are at work behind the German front lines on new side lines. The German position in Roye is serious as not only are the Allies a mile and one-quarter west of the town, but the roads leading out of it toward Peronne, Nesle and Noyon are under the fire of allied guns.

ROYE MENACED BY ALLIES.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The Associated Press today issued the following:

Roye, the central bastion of the German defence line from Peronne to Noyon, which has withstood the allied thrust for four weeks, is menaced seriously by the Advancing French, British and Canadian troops, and its fall would appear to be probable during the next few hours. With the town in allied hands the southern end of the German line, at least, would have to retire, although the northern end through Chaulnes to Peronne would be affected. The Allies are now but a scant one and one-quarter miles from the town, while they are pressing eastward in the north and south. Along a front of nearly nine miles, north and south of the Avre, which flows through Roye, the Allies have pushed back the enemy in stubborn fighting. The most notable advance was made on a front of three miles in the centre by the French and Canadian troops, who are now fighting on a line through Goyencourt, St. Mardles, Triot and Laucourt.

"Stand!" Cried the Kaiser, But His Germans Didn't Stand

Hun Retirement Before British, French, and Americans Was Against Orders Issued by the German General Headquarters —Month's Campaign Was Sound Drubbing For Teutons

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—The German retreat before the victorious Americans, French and the British was not a voluntary withdrawal, but a hard-fought retirement against the plans and orders of the German high command, entent military authorities here are able to announce today.

Absolute falseness of the German contentions that they drew northward from the Marne and above Montdidier and Albert on a pre-arranged tactical plan is proved in copies of orders of the German general headquarters found in the possession of captured German officers.

The orders show positively that the Germans expected the allied counter-offensives and that the Teutonic forces were ordered to hold their lines at all costs. To advance in certain cases even in the face of the enemy's artillery barrage is one unusual section of the order.

Officers are instructed to have their men ready to resist the enemy attacks at all costs and to be prepared beforehand for all sacrifices.

"Infantry officers and even chiefs of a higher rank have to try and bring their men to give proof of sangfroid under all circumstances; they must continually see to it that their men, following the example of their own calm and exemplary attitude, are kept in a state ready to immediately resist or counter-attack," reads the order.

The high command also directed that a retreat should be made only after the first line and the reserves had been overwhelmed, and then only under orders from the chiefs of armies, "who will then organize a methodical attack to retake the lost ground."

Can a City Assault? Writ Says Toronto Did

TORONTO Aug. 17—Charles H. Blackmore, a reporter who was beaten up in the recent riots has issued a unique writ against the city; at any rate it is considered unique at the City Solicitor's office because it charges the City of Toronto with assault. "A city cannot assault anyone" declared City Solicitor Johnston to-day. "There is a provision that the Police Commissioners may assume liability under certain circumstances and disburse damages as a consequence, but that is voluntary with the commissioners, and the city is not liable for the acts of policemen." The Legal Department has advised the riot victim to withdraw his writ.

In the capture of Damery Wood by the British one hundred and fifty prisoners were taken. The enemy made counter attacks but was repulsed.

The number of prisoners taken by the Canadians in recent operations is estimated at ten thousand, with one hundred and fifty guns, while twenty-two towns were recaptured, some of considerable size.

Heavy Canadian Casualty List

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, Aug. 17.—The Canadian casualty list this morning of 273 names ,includes nine killed in action, eighteen died of wounds, twenty-one other death in various ways, and the remainder wounded, gassed, etc.

This is the heaviest list for some months and is indication of the Canadians heavy part in the recent British victory.

GET THE TY COBB IDEA

Ty Cobb this summer got into one of the worst batting slumps of his great career and sporting editors have been declaring that Father Time had started to count him out. Most folks thought the same. Ty did not and he has been hitting the old pill from here to yonder. He refuses to be counted out.

Canada is going to show the Ty Cobb idea and be up there at the finish. Every man can get in this by saving food producing food, saving money, and working unselfishly for one cause.

There's a war winning job almost, if not right up to your door. Get to it now. There's a farmer waiting for your help.

HUSBAND OVER THERE HUSBAND OVER HERE

TORONTO, Aug. 17.—While her ligitimate husband was a prisoner of war overseas, Minnie Whitworth met and "married" Claude B. Stocks, a dashing young R. A. F. cadet. When the husban unexpectedly returned he found the two living together in his home. As a resultant charge of bigamy Stocks was remanded a few days ago on $2,000 bail, but the woman could not be found. She was arrested in Guelph yesterday, and Stocks was again with her. He is now in the custody of the military authorities, but will be brought back to Toronto on a warrant. To-day in the Woman's Court the eerring wife was sentenced by Magistrate Denison to six months' imprisonment. Her counsel, H. S. Honsberger, pleaded in her behalf that the tragedy was largely the result of an early unhappy marriage, to which she was scarcely a consenting party at the age of fifteen. On a charge of "aiding and abetting" by acting as bridesmaid at the second and unlawful ceremony her sister, Emily Reckwad, was sent down for thirty days.

REFUSED $7,500 TO PLAY BALL

"Davy" Robertson, the former brilliant outfielder for the New York Giants, has refused an offer of $7,500 to play baseball. He is serving with the Mine Sweepers. He is doing this willingly, too.

That is another example of self sacrifice of ball players.

All cannot do that sort of thing but there are many ways of helping in the Great Cause. A three weeks' holiday on a farm will give you a chance to do some good and give that old conscience an easy feeling.

Welland Canal Gates Carried Away by Ship

Steamer Pawnee Causes Accident — Lockmaster Drowned While Lowering Valves

Port Colborne, Aug. 17.—The steamer Pawnee, bound up, light, owned by the Montreal Transportation Company, carried away the head gates at lock 12 of the Welland Canal at 10 o'clock this morning. The flow of water also carried away six of the foot gates, drowning Richard Carrol, lockmaster and Reeye of Merritton, who was lowering the valves at the time. Navigation will be delayed from 24 to 40 hours, as a result of the accident.

130 Miles of Railway Finished in 100 Days

Will Improve Communications Between North and South Behind French Front

PARIS, Aug 17.—A railway more than 130 miles in length behind the French front has been built in less than 100 days, and Thursday was opened for traffic. Its purpose is to improve the communications between the northern and southern parts of the northern railway system. The construction of the line involved the building of two important bridges and a tunnel some 3,752 yards in length.

Premier Clemenceau and Albert Claveille, the Minister of Public Works, were present at the ceremony of putting the new road into operation. The Premier congratulated the engineer in charge of the work and the men who had perfromed the task.

"All France" exclaimed the Premier, "is working until the day when victory shall come—a day of which the dawn is breaking."

Borden's Absence Defended By Rowell

PORT HOPE, Aug. 17.—The part that the Union Government has played in the last eight months both in Canada and overseas in prosecuting the country's share in the war was reviewed so graphically last night by Hon. N. W. Rowell, K.C., M.P., that when he had concluded the address the large crowd applauded for several minutes, and then arose and cheered him to the echo.

He warmly defended the action of Sir Robert Borden in remaining in not go to England because he wanted to go, but he went because it was his duty to Canada that we should be represented at the Imperial Conference, which included representatives from all parts of the Empire, who came together for the purpose of securing a more successful prosecution of the war," declared Mr. Rowell. "If the Prime Minister is in London to-night it is because in the judgment of his colleagues who accompanied him that on account of the duty he owes to Canada he should remain there. Although we belonged to different political parties, I firmly believe that Canada is being worthily represented in London by the Prime Minister in his work of furthering the interests of the Canadian soldiers and of Canadian affairs." (Applause.)

Little American Girl Saves Returned Man

Masters Heavy Waves at Jackson's point in Rowboat to Reach Drowning Soldier

TORONTO, Aug. 17.—With unequalled heroism Miss Esther Taylor, a little 18-year-old American girl, of Evanston, Ill., rescued a returned Canadian soldier from drowning on Saturday afternoon at Jackson's Point. "There really wasn't anything very much to do, and I certainly didn't do much out of the ordinary," she said modestly yesterday, as she narrated her experience. "It was no more than what anyone else would have done in my place."

She was visiting her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Tugman, at Jackson's Point, and on Saturday afternoon was sitting on one of the wharves in conversation with a returned American who had enlisted in the Canadian army and gone overseas in 1915. He had lost an arm, and though he could not swim he came with his friend, a returned Canadian soldier, for a bathe.

Huge Liquor Seizure 6 Persons Arrested

House in West Toronto and a Warehouse in Riverdale Searched

TORONTO, Aug. 17—Thirteen hundred bottles of brandy and Irish whiskey, valued at $5,000, were seized Thursday night—one case in an automobile, another in a house in Pacific avenue, and the remainder in a cartage warehouse in Munro street—by the police of No. Nine Division, West Toronto. It is the largest individual seizure of liquid contraband yet made in Toronto, since prohibition came into effect. No. Eight police station is piled high with boxes and barrels. A team and driver which left West Toronto at 1.30 a.m. to transport the goods from Munro street to the police station labored and sweated at the job until sunrise.

Five Dollars a Bottle

For some time Inspector Mulhall and his men have had the Pacific avenue house under supervision. Not long ago they caught James McCormack leaving the place with a couple of bottles, for which he said he had paid $5 apiece; and secured his conviction for the B. O. T. A. On another occasion, Plainclothesman Bruce tried and failed to board an auto leaving the door. Last night he and Constable Underwood watched again. An auto drove up and two men, Fred Morris and E. J. Taylor, were presently seen carrying a case out of the house. The officers arrested them; took the men and goods to No. Nine station; and found the case to contain 60 bottles of brandy; but the two men denied all previously knowledge of the contents.

Arrested Two More

Then the officers returned to the house, seized 95 bottles more, and arrested Chester Hodgson and his housekeeper, Rose Edwards. Acting on information received from Taylor, Plainclothesman Bruce, Constable Underwood, Acting Detective Hazelwood and P. S Lutton hurried away to Munro street, where they found the remainder of the contraband nicely laid away in unlabelled boxes and barrels. The latter place is still under supervision, and several unnamed persons are suspected The police are now working on the clues which they confidently believe will lead to even larger results than have yet been obtained.

Huns 'Dig in' on Vesle and Use Machine Guns

With the American Armies in France, Aug. 16—Intermittent bombardment of the rear areas along gthe Vesle continues. Otherwise this portion of the front is generally quiet.

American patrols crossing the river at a new point found the Germans had dug in their entire line there and were strongly defending it with machine guns.

Three Italian soldiers captured near Soissons early in July, reached the American lines to-day, and related experiences similar to those recently described by two escaped British soldiers. They corroborated the latter's stories about the cruel treatment of allied prisoners and lack of food.

A big chateau dating back to the fifteenth century has just been cleared of several tons of high explosive planted by the Boches before their retreat. Innumerable traps had been set. A step ladder leaning against the wall was conected with wires and batteries. If the ladder were moved the explosion would have been set off. In one room was an American rifle. Its removal would have released a switch connected with high explosives.

Ruins nearby, dating back to the fifth century, were similarly mined, although they were useless in a military way.

"HE FELT FUNNY" WITH THROAT CUT

MONTREAL August 16—With his throat slashed from ear to ear and almost unconscious from the loss of blood Jeremiah Walsh 47 years of age calmly walked into the office of the general hospital and informed the attendants that he felt funny."

He was at once rushed to the operation room where the scurgeons did their best tao save his life.

Latest reports are that although his condition is very serious he probably will survive.

TRUMPET OF THE DEAD

Tromp Le Mort, J. E. Widener's crack imported three year old, is one of the season's great race horses.

He came from France and his name being translated means "The Trumpet of the Dead." His wins are always popular as many have the hunch that as an Ameriacn he is calling the nation to sound the trumpet for the death of Hun devilishness.

Every man in Canada can sound the trumpet. It will help. Grow something. Save something and show a willingness to help in the crisis by joining the harvesters. This is the game that all can play.

PLANE FELL ON TRAM.

Marseilles, Aug. 17.—An airplane returning from a flight because of engine trouble fell upon a tram car which was preparing to leave the station. Four persons in the car were killed and several others injured. The two aviators in the machine were severely burned.

THE RETURN OF "THE NUT"

Before the war a familiar type of well-dressed, tight-waisted, silk-socked, and brogue-shod young man was popularly known as a nut. The name was given, says the London Daily Mail, half in admiration, half in derision.

The summer of 1914 was the very heyday of the nuts. They ripened to full glory in that year, when every nut drove his own motor-car or rode a high-velocity motor-cycle.

Then, out of that summer sky the tocsin boomed, and like a mirage the pageant of the nuts faded into a monotone of khaki. We know where the nuts have been since then and what they have done, on the land, on the water, under the water, and in the air.

Thousands of them, in the sweet of youth, have given their lives for us as gaily as ever they drove down the Portsmouth road, and far more casually than ever they gave their tailors an order. Thousands of these young men, whose chiefest preoccupation was believed to be the set of a necktie, have proved themselves more glorious than the Paladins of old in a war whose horrors the Paladins could not have imagined in a nightmare.

We have missed the nut, and in his absence we have forgiven him with a smile or a sigh, for all his gay and careless extravagances, which he has redeemed with so much quiet heroism. Now the number of silver-badged young men is increasing and the nut is reappearing. No one smiles now at the careful color-scheme of his handkerchiefs, his socks, and his ties, or resents his dandyisms. For in the lapel of his coat shines his guerdon and he lights up our world again.

Music and Drama

So many inquiries have been made as to whether the admission charges would be increased for the big program of photoplays, "Civilization" at Griffin and the opening chapter of the new serial "The Fight for Millions" that the management announces that there will be positively no advance in admission for the last three days of next week, it might be mentioned here that Messrs John and Peter F. Griffin are the sole owners of this great production, which cost a large fortune to bring to Canada and it is said to be even better than "The Birth of a Nation." It took one whole year to complete the picture, and it is said that the picture contains 40,000 people and 10,000 horses. "Civiliation" played to capacity audiences at the Criterion Theatre, New York,and has been drawing wonderful crowds wherever it has been shown.

The first chapter of the new serial photoplay in fifteen chapters will commence on Thursday, August 22nd. The new serial is called "A Fight for Millions" and has for the leading parts Wm. Duncan and Edith Johnson and Joe Ryan, who all made a hit in both "The Fighting Trail" and Vengeance and the Woman" serials.

The serial contains a stunt that has never before been worked into pictuers a real head-on collision between two trains, and to make the story realistic the collision was real, the two trains being provided for the purpose. Another good picture coming is the return of the big picture "The Lone Wolf," which made such a wonderful impression, when shown last here.

MAKING TWO SOCKS AT ONCE

Ingenious knitters, the kind that can knit with their eyes shut and never drop a stitch, will be tempted to try knitting two socks at once. It can be done, but one must remember that the socks are not mates. Amateur knitters would do well to keep to the beaten path and make one sock perfectly and then the mate.

To do the new way (which is really an old method) one needs two balls of wool, and it is much better to have the balls of contrasting color—white and khaki or grey, for instance. If one casts 64 stitches for a sock the three needles must hold 64 stitches of the white yarn and 64 of the grey, alternating regularly on the needles. The wool is carried over the first finger of the right hand for the outer sock and over the second finger for the inner sock. If it is easier one thread of wool can be passed over the first finger of the left hand.

Every stitch for the outer sock (after the top ribbing) is a purl stitch, and every stitch for the inner sock is plain knitting or "continental" stitch). This seems less complicated when one realizes that the right sides of the two socks are together. When knitting for the heel insert needle through two stitches belonging to the front socks and knit them together. Slip the intervening stitch that belongs to the back sock on to the left-hand needle and knit that with its mate. Follow this rule wherever stitches are knitted together.

When lifting stitches along the side of the heel purl those on the outside sock and knit the inner ones plain. To cast off for the toe slip all stitches belonging to the outer sock on to a thread and finish the toe of the inner sock from the other and set the outer sock on to the needles and finish using purl stitch. Some prefer to do the band of top ribbing for each sock separately. In that case slip from the needles on to a string after knitting the required depth, and then slip one "tub" inside the other and pick up the stitches alternately on the three needles. One set of four needles is all that is necessary. Using two colors of wool is almost imperative because it prevents the interchanging of stitches. If a stitch form one sock is knitted with stitches from the other the two socks will be joined together and the work will be spoiled.

More Trains For Exhibition

It is customary each year for the Canadian railways to give specist rates to the Canadian National Exhibition. This year there has been no public announcement regarding the intention of the railways in this respect, but it is understood that the local agents have received a circular giving them instructions regarding the matter and anyone applying to them will find this information available. The traffic congestion has been immeasurably improved since this time a year ago and prospects at the present time are that there will be a larger and better train service from all points to Toronto and return.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Sir:—

Will you kindly give me space in your valuable paper to make a few remarks on the dog question. Why are dogs allowed to go running at large destroying people's flower and vegetable gardens while the owners wil walk casually on and will not even attempt to call them out of mischief? It is very discouraging after one goes to the expense and trouble to try and keep up their lawns by beautifyingg them with flowers and have two or three dogs have a game of tag through your choicest collection. Besides flowers have advanced like everything else greatly in price. One does not have any very large collection for twenty-five dollars. If Belleville people want and need those dogs that is perfectly right I think when a dog tax is put on the dogs they should add a clause also that they must not be allowed runing at large and that each individual owing a dog is held responsible for any damage done by them. Recently a resident of our city had a very choice urn of flowers which alone cost her over five dollars and just as they had reached the budding stage they were turned over and completely destroyed.

How Belleville might be made very much more beautiful than it is only just for this very reason. One hears the remarks constantly: "Oh, I do not try to grow flowers any more, there are so many dogs running the streets" Now which add the most to the appearance of our city, dogs or flowers, I think the majority of the people will say flowers but we cant have the both. If people will only keep their dogs in their own yards and not have them tearing after them and another suggestion is feed them plenty so they will not go for miles for garbage pails This is one reason, I think, that induces them to follow their owners and run the streets is that half of them are hungry since the scarcity of food for we must economize but the poor dog's appetite is just as good now as it was before the war. So if our Council will only insist that dogs must be kept on their premises it will not only help the writer but many other residents who have been bothered in the same way.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for the space.

A LOVER OF FLOWERS.

Letters From Overseas

FROM PTE. ANDERSON

The following extracts from a letter written by Pte. W. G. Anderson from France to his mother, Mrs. J. H. Anderson, 12 Moria Street, will be of general interest:

I have been down the line sick with influena, but I soon got over it.

I suppose you have read about the big offensive the Germans started last month, but they did not get where they wanted to. The French and American advanced farther than they were supposed to have gone so I guess it was easy to drive the Germans back.

The way things look over here the war may end any time this year but something may happen and it might last another year. The Americans have thousands of men in France and they will do a lot towards ending the war.

Has Charlie Mott signed up yet? You said he was in Kingston so he must be in the army. Have you seen Frank Rayfield since he returned the last time I saw him was just after the scrap at Hill 70 last year.

CROOKS AS SOLDIERS

That many crooks are now "making hay" by posing as soldiers and that banks everywhere are "falling" for these uniformed crooks is stated in a bulletin issued by the Illinois Bankers' Association. The association takes occasion to warn its members that it is necessary to exercise the same precaution in dealing with uniformed men as it is with strangers, many swindles and forgeries are being perpetrated almost every day. Worry, vexation and loss can be saved by demanding of all men in uniform adequate identification. Officials are advised to post their tellers or anyone who waits on the public positively not to cash nor take on deposit a cheque from anyone whom they do not know. "Impress upon them to make this one of the standing rules of their bank career—always safety first; take no chances whatsoever with strangers. It is better to spend fifty cents or one dollar finding out about a cheque rather than take chances on the same and probably lose a large amount."—Financial Post.

WHY SUGAR IS SCARCE

Here is one of the many reasons why sugar is scarce to-day—and especially in Europe.

Sugar production in France has fallen to less than 25 per cent of the pre-war output because in the early days of the war when the German troops were retreating from occupied portions of France they took pains to destroy virtually all of the sugar mills that would have assisted the French to maintain their sugar stocks.

During the years 1912-13 213 French mills turned out 967,440 short tons of sugar. For 1916-17, 65 mills produced only 204,405 short tons. To further complicate the French sugar situation the yield per acre of sugar beets decreased from 13.30 short tons per acre in 1912-13 to 11.70 short tons per acre in 1916-17.

If it had not been for the assistance given by the North American continent the majority of the French people would be going entirely without sugar at the present time.

Called By Death

STEPHEN B. LEAVENS

The death of Stephen B. Leavens occurred at his home in Wellington on Monday August 12th, after a long illness of three years' duration. During all this time Mr. Leavens had been suffering from paralysis, and he bore his long illness with splendid Christian fortitude.

Mr. Leavens was nearly 77 years old. He was born in the Township of Hillier where he resided for many years. Early in life he married Lydie Leavens and their farm home in the third concession of this township was for many years a model of well ordered neatness and successful farming and an object lesson to the entire community.

Few couples have held the universal esteem of all those with whom they come in contact to a greater degree than Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Leavens. Mr. Leavens was an excellent farmer and his farm and farm buildings were always kept in the best of condition.

He was a member and a faithful attendant of the Methodist Church at the Bowerman appointment, and his home was always open to the pastor where he was made a welcome guest.

About fifteen years ago, retiring from the farm they moved to the village of Wellington. Mrs Leavens died nearly four years ago. Since her death Mr. Leavens has made his home with his only child, Mrs. Nelson Benson.

The surviving relatives are his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Benson and grandson, Gerald Benson; Mr. Paul Leavens of Hillier, an only brother, also survives.

The funeral was held from his late residence on Wednesday, August 14th at 2 p.m., services being held in the Methodist Church at 2.30, Rev. A. J. Terrill officiating. Interment in Wellington cemetery.

DONALD CARSON MACDONALD

The untimely death of Donald MacDonald, Toronto, at the age of 23 years, who lost his life at an early hour on Saturday morning, August 10th, through an accident while rowing in East Lake Outlet, is deeply deplored by the people of Picton. He was born in Picton, the son of John Carson MacDonald and Anna Bell MacDonald. His widowed mother and family removed to Toronto some years ago, where the deceased in due time and Rubber Co. He became secretary-treasurer of the Riverside Athletic Club of which he was a member and was held in high esteem. He was drafter in May in Class A2, but obtained leave of absence owing to illness.

The deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved mother and sister, Mrs. W. O. Widgett, and the brothers John and Alfred, also the young lady Miss Lucy Wallis, who was his betrothed.

The funeral service was held on Monday afternoon in the home of Mr. D. A. Lambert, Mary Street, Rev. Mr. Brown and Rev. Mr. Mullen, pastor of the Disciple Church, West Lake, officiated. The interment was made in Glenwood.

There arrived from Toronto friends of the deceased, Eugent Dopp, Frank Guay, Wm. Collins ,G. D. Morrison, Cyril H. Clancy and W. Widgett, who acted as pallbearers. There were many floral tributes, among these one from the Goodyear Company and one from the Riverside Club, attesting the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

Old Ideas Die Hard

FORBIDDEN GROUND

An aviator in trouble landed in a cornfield. The farmer came running up, mad as a hornet. "Here, you!" he shouted, "what do yer suppose I put up them scarecrows for?"

The Firs tLine of Defense

Pure blood is the body's first line of defense against disease. Strong, healthy blood neutralizes the poisons of invading germs, or destroy the germs themselves. That is why many people exposed to disease do not contract it. Those whose blood is weak and watery and therefore lacking in defensive powers are most liable to infection. Everybody may observe that healthy, red blooded people are less liable to colds and the grippe than pale, bloodless people. It is the bloodless people who tire easily, who are short of breath at slight exertion, who have poor appetit'es, and who wake up in the morning as tired as when they went to bed. While women and girls chiefly suffer from bloodlessness the trouble also affects both boys and men. It simply affects girls and women to a greater extent because there is greater demand upon their blood supply.

To renew and build up the blood there is no remedy can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They tone up the entire system make the blood rich and red, feed and strengthen starving nerves, increase the appetite, put color in the cheeks, give refreshing sleep and drive away that unnatural tired feeling. Plenty of sunlight and wholesome food will do the rest.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHEN WHEAT WILL SLUMP

(San Francisc Chronicle)

There is in store in Australia the surplus of two crops of wheat, aggregating 300,000,000 bushels. Some time that wheat, possibly augmented by other crops will come on the market, and then a big slump in the price of that grain is inevitable.

That situation is not appreciated by some who urge the Government to guarantee a price of $2.50 per bushel. The only way a Government or anybody else can guarantee a price is by buying at that price all that is offered There is risk in trade which government can no more escape than others. Logically, if the Government guarantees any price for wheat, it should guarantee relative prices for other grain. The risk, however, is too great, and it tries to secure moderation in prices by agreements and regulation of profits of middlemen.

There is in the world a great abundance of food for all its inhabitants. The only trouble is transportation. If ships were available to carry surpluses of commodities to where they are needed everybody everywhere could buy, sell and consume according to his desires.

The war came suddenly. In spite of the present outlook, peace may come just as suddenly. And the moment peace comes there will be pressure to sell from all parts of the world whatever is salable. Our Government therefore, objects to committing itself too deeply as to future transactions. And it is an example safe to be followed by everybody.

SHIRT TAILS TO BEAT HUN

(Seattle Post)

Men of consequence in the world, who have achieved a record and have stood in the spotlight, are requested to assist in slamming the Hun by saving their old shirts and sending the tails to patriotic women to be made into kitchen aprons.

Miss Eugene Stuart, of Des Moines, Iowa, evolved the plan, and she particularly solicits the shirts of prominent men whose names may follow and attach value to and become the designation of the apron.

Having thus attached greatness and dignity to this useful article, the idea is to auction it off to the wondering multitude for vast sums. Reduced to poetry, Miss Stuart's plan is presented as follows:

With fingers nimble and deft,
With scissors and needle and thread
They will make the tail of your little old shirt
A nice kitchen apron instead.
Please, please, please
Help to give this movement a spurt;
Assist in bringing the Hun to his knees.
By sending the tail of your shirt.

Enjoying Life in British Hospital

"For goodness sake keep the Y.M. C. A. going," and, "I believe the Peace Bell will be ringing before this year is out," are the messages sent to his home, Valleyfield, Que., in a letter by Lance Corp. Thomas Moir, of the 24th Victorian Rifles. The letter is written from the First General Hospital, Stourbridge, near Birmingham and the writer gives the highest possible praise to the hospital staff.

"Fancy a bunch of nice nurses and sisters to wait on you, lying in bed and having your meals brought to you. Why, its worth while getting wounded, for this is the best part of the war—hospital.

"For goodness sake keep the Y.M. C.A. going," implores Lance Corp. Mair, who in his comfortable quarters in hospital does not forget the discomforts of the boys still in the trenches.

"Just think of coming out of the front line after a hard trip, wet, tired and hungry; never having a hot drink for days, to say nothing of a hot meal and right up near the line you find the 'Y' with steaming hot tea and a smoke waiting. I don't know what we would do without them. I think if people really knew what the Y's are doing they would give more."

The writer concludes with the prophecy that the war will end this year. Austria's back is broken he declares and Germany cannot spare troops from the western front to help her ally.

"Dinner time" is the excuse for an abrupt ending to an interesting letter and the last sentence is the cheerful prediction that "The Peace B will be ringing before the year is out."

Freckle-Face

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-Face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

MAKING FORESTS FIREPROOF

People are becoming aware of the tremendous loss to Canada through forest fires. Fire is not necessary accompaniment of settlement and can be stopped. The cost of equipment and patrol necessary to stop fires amounts to only a small fire insurance premium on the value of the forest. How fires are caused the influence of the weather, and wha amount of damage they do are told in Bulletin No 64, "Forest Fires in Canada 1914-16," just issued by the Director of Forestry Ottawa. This is the first attempt on systematic lines to give the statistics of fires for the whole of Canada and to classify their causes. By this means the most prolific sources of fires are shown so that means may be applied for their prevention. Those interested in this subject will receive a copy of this bulletin free upon application to the Director of Forestry, Ottawa.

Dangerous Antiseptics and Germicides Are Unnecessary

A dependable antiseptic has come to be considered a necessity in most homes. Especially is this true since Absorbine, Jr. has had such a wide introduction, because this liniment is not only a powerful antiseptic and germicide but it is absolutely safe to use and to have around the house. It is not poisonous and it cannot do harm even if the children do got hold of it. That is a big point to consider.

Absorbine, Jr. is concentrated and is therefore economical. It retains its germicidal properties even diluted one part Absorbine, Jr. to 100 parts water —and its antiseptic properties, one part Absorbine, Jr., to 200 parts of water.

The antiseptic and germicidal properties have been repeatedly tested and proven in many prominent chemical laboratories. Detailed laboratory reports mailed upon request.

Absorbine, Jr. combines safety with efficiency. $1.25 a bottle at most druggists or postpaid.

Send 10c for liberal trial bottle. W. F. Young, P.D.F., 457 Lymans Bldg., Montreal, Canada.

The Lieut. Awakes in a Hospital

I know my own mind, doctor! Let me go!
Let go my wrist. We must retake the farm!
They hiss like red-hot beetles in my ears,
They crush, they never stop. No, no, no, no!
Oh, not my leg! Oh, doctor, not my leg!
Damn you, sir, let me up. I want to walk.
The Captain fell, I tell you—through the head.
Already dawn is creeping past the church
And down the pasture lane. They come too late.
I hear the machine guns coughing in the mist:
Write this report: the color of pain is red
And black on hills of gray. He died a man.
Grenades at fifteen yards! Now, boys, once more!
I charge, with all my heart, with all my soul!
—Paul Scott Mowrer.

WILL BE A "HUM-DINGER"

We are informed by President Jones of the Belleville Fair executive board that the Belleville exhibiton this year will be a "hum-dinger" and worth travelling a long distance to see. There will be special prizes and special attractions which will please old and young and some of the finest and fleetest specimens of thoroughbred horse-flesh will be here from all parts of the country.

Belleville Fair this year will be two big "GET TOGETHER" days, a monster gathering of the neighbors from far and near to talk over old times with old friends and live again the happy days of yore in the happiness and prosperity of today. The fun will begin Labor Day, all day, and the day after.

Get Together, Folks, at Belleville Fair this year and have the time of your lives.

CASTING CIVIC MONEY TO THE WINDS.

Another big bite was taken out of the people's park, Zwick's Island, yesterday; another will be taken today—and so it goes, yesterday, today and forever, until the time may come when Zwick's Island will only be a memory and a bad taste in the mouth from Zwick's Island dust deposited on the roads, stirred up and swept away by the wind and swallowed by the citizens. The destruction of Zwick's Island is criminally foolish and a deplorable waste of public money and public assets.. Cutting away Zwick's Island Park for gravel has been condemned by the Board of Trade and citizens generally, and Mayor Platt says he is absolutely against it and will insist upon remedial action at the next meeting of the City Council.

In the meantime the work of demolishing the island is being speeded up with seemingly fiendish ingenuity, with machinery and several teams to draw away the gravel.

It is bad enough to destroy the island but the charge is made—without challenge—that the gravel taken from Zwick's Island is absolutely useless for road-making purposes.

Even the Mayor believes that the taking of gravel from Zwick's Island is a waste of time as the gravel is unsuitable for road purposes.

The ghastly mockery of the thing is that despite general acknowledgment that it is wrong to destroy Zwick's Island Park and that the city is throwing money to the winds in digging that gravel out, carting it to the city and putting it on the roads for the wind to play with—the farce continues day after day.

Is it necessary to wait until the September meeting of the City Council to put a stop to this crime?

The Mayor, chief executive officer of the city, should order the work stopped at once, or some progressive citizen should stop it by injunction.

WILL YE NO COME BACK?

Some Canadian newspapers are trying to arouse a feeling of public resentment over the absence of Sir Robert Borden and some of his colleagues in England and keep harping on the strain that they are needed worse in Canada than overseas. Inasmuch as he most vital interests of Canada, present and future, are being decided overseas the presence and activities of the Premier of Canada and his colleagues in England and France at this critical period in national and Imperial affairs makes it apparent to anyone not threatened with a relapse to pre-war partizanship that the Canadian ministers are serving Canada best across the sea. The habeas corpus epidemic and other minor national ailments here at home are receiving the right kind of curative treatment even if the Prime Minister is absent, and the early resumption of the national debating club at Ottawa would only give agitators the opportunity they are seeking of raising dissension. The chief business of Canada just now is fighting to preserve the nation and the Empire from dislocation and political speeches will not win the war. Premier Borden and his colleagues have not had any joy ride but have been busily engaged using their best efforts overseas to advance the best interests of Canada.

The opinion of Canada's distinguished visitor, Prince Arthur of Connaught, upon the presence of the Canadian Ministers overseas, is interesting. In the course of an interview by a Toronto Star reporter Prince Arthur said:

> "I like the idea very greatly of your Cabinet Ministers going to England, I consider their visit of the utmost importance that they may get in touch with the Mother Country and give their views on the Empire."
> Developing his theme, he said that it appeared to him too much cannot be done to bring together the statesmen of Canada and Australia and South Africa in order that the idea of a United Empire might be realized. "We are such a widely scattered family," he said.

CRISP COMMENT

Boche may rhyme with Foch but it chimes differently.

The Germans have trouble pronouncing the name of the Allied generalissimo, but they are satisfied that Foch sounds like a hard winter for the Boche.

When Foch hit the Boche right smack on the nose he started a home run which isn't finished yet.

The Kaiser has called in his retreat specialist, Von Bum, to conduct the German advance upon Paris via Berlin and China.

Canada's Fuel Controller is not going to be responsible if the west freezes next winter. The west can put that in its soft coal furnace and smoke it says the Toronto Telegram Ups and Downs man.

First thing anybody knows some genius will come along with a transparent automobile body and an open-faced suitcase and cook John Barleycorn's goose to a turn. And he's considerably done already.—(Savannah News). But he won't be well done until the short coat which reveals the hip pocket returns to fashion, adds the Ottawa Journal.

One phase of the war time fuel situation which may or may not be considered beneficial is the fact that it takes money to buy coal, "cash on the nail" before delivery. Most people would prefer paying for this winter's coal next summer, if convenient. Well, let's cheer up, it might be worse! What if the coal dealers adopt the "cash and carry" system?

A Toronto newspaper, being short of regular fellers, sent its best poet to report the street riots one night recently. The versifier was among the first to fall, with a cracked cranium from a policeman's baton. Quite a reverse as it were.

At Brockville some thief has been getting up early in the morning and covering the milk routes, taking the money from the milk bottles before the milk dealers arrived on the scene. If the milkmen fail to appreciate the change to empty bottles the change is certainly appreciated by the thief, but the milk business is depreciating.

A Manitoba Kiltie, sitting astride the Canadian tank Dominion, piped the Canadian tanks into action and through a hell of bursting shells this fearless Scotch-Canadian played the airs which have always cheered Scots on to victory and which Canadians love so well.

OTHER VIEWS

So It Seems.

Simcoe Reformer

The Kaiser's idea of hell is a place where there are no women and babies to murder.

A Wonderful Pearl.

United Empire.

What is claimed to be the finest drop-shaped pearl yet raised in Australian waters was found recently on the north-west coast of Western Australia. It has been exhibited in Melbourne, and is an object of interest to connoisseurs. The pearl, which is about the size of a sparrow's egg, has been named "Star of the West," and is remarkable for its perfect shape and coloring. Its discovery has given an impetus to the pearl-fishing industry of Western Australia.

A Leaf From Our Book.

Ottawa Evening Journal.

When Britain was helping to make Germany rich and powerful by letting German manufactures free into Britain and all the British Empire save the self-governing colonies, and being barred out of Germany in return by heavy custom duties, Canada clapped a super-tax on German goods, and made that country crawl in regard to a piece of commercial arrogance which the Huns had tried on us. And this helps to illustrate where the British tariff was really a dead duck, and the Canadian tariff a live wire. Also it helps to illustrate why British statesmen are now announcing that they propose to take a leaf out of Canada's book by taking up the principle of Imperial tariff preference.

Planting Fruit Stones.

Chicago Post

"When I was a boy in Iowa, says a writer in The Harvester World, "a French family moved into our neighborhood. There was a boy in the family about my age. He could already speak a little English, and we soon became friends.

"One day we took a long walk into the country. As we were passing an orchard, we saw the farmer among his peach trees which were loaded with fruit. The farmer called to us and we filled our pockets.

"As we walked along the road eating our peaches I saw the French boy do a peculiar thing. When he had finished his peach he walked out beyond the used part of the road, bored a hole with his heel and planted the stone. He did this unconsciously and I watched him repeat the operation two or three times. Then I spoke to him about it. He explained that the French always do that, that they are taught from infancy not to waste the seeds from any fruit which will grow, but to plant them for future generations."

This war will give our boys a chance to learn many frugal habits from the Europeans. Liberty Bands and Thrift Stamps will teach us at home to save, while the example of our Allies will teach the thrifty instincts to our boys abroad. After this war America will be less wasteful and extravagant.

TOLL GATES CLOSED.

Ottawa, Aug. 17.—Because the Ottawa, Montreal and Russel' Consolidated Road Company has failed to comply with instructions from the Ontario Highways Department to repair the Montreal road between Cummings Bridge and St. Joseph Village, the Montreal tool gates at Eastview and Greens Creek have been put out of business; the company being deprived of the privilege of collecting tolls until such time as the road is put in proper repair.

The Poet's Corner

HER WAR DREAMS.

By Edmund Vance Cooke.

O, dreams are sombre and dreams are glad,
But sweeter dreams never a dreamer had
Than the dreams I dream of my soldier lad,
My soldier across the sea;
For I drowse at night when the thought grows dim;
I lie at the wide world's outer rim,
And I watch the little stars fly or swim
As I fall to dreams and I dream of him
And dream that he dreams of me.

I wake at morn and I dream all day,
I dream at my work and I dream at my play,
Idream of my laddie who's far away
And the miles that intervene;
So I send my kisses across the sea,
And they meet the kisses he sends to me
And they sing as they pass in their ecstacy;
They sing of our love and the days to be,
When no seas lie between.

PETAWAWA.

(By a Belleville Batteryman)

The boys from Belleville or Kingston
Just to serve the Flag and King,
So we'll open up our throttles
And we'll make the welkin ring;
And while we have the wind with us
We think we all should sing
Of dear old Petawawa.

The boys go in the river,
Just to get a daily scrub.
The boys come out the river
And they have a daily rub.
They also have an appetite—
But Heaven bless the grub
At dear old Petawawa.

We harness up the horses
From the traces to the bit;
We would like to have a cushion
In the saddle where we sit;
But since we joined the army
We are sure we made a hit
At dear old Petawawa.

When the trumpet blows for cookhouse boys,
Although we have no band,
We fall in at the double—
And a hungry bunch we stand.
And we think we'd like the rations
If it were not for the sand
At dear old Petawawa.

The O.C. drills the Major,
And the Major drills the S.M.
The S.M. drills the Non-Coms,
And the Non-Coms. drill the men.
The men they drill the horses,
Then the trumpet blows Amen
At dear old Petawawa.

We always do a picket
And we always do a guard.
The S.M. greased the rifles
With half a pound of lard.
But there's really nothing in it,
For we never get it hard
At dear old Petawawa.

Now when we all get overseas
And land in dear old France,
We'll unlimber all our pieces
And we'll make the Boches dance.
And I wouldn't give a nickel
For the German Kaiser's chance
At dear old Petawawa.

We have not got a battery
That could not stand the test.
The 73rd, the 74th,
And all the blooming rest;
But of all the smartest batteries
The 75th's the best
At dear old Petawawa.

Now when the war is over
And to Canada we come,
We'll march behind a blaring band
To beat the fife and drum;
And when the lassies greet us—
My! Won't they be going some,
At dear old Petawawa.

A Mystery Explained.

"What's become of your old friend the Sea Serpent?" asked a vacationist at the beach. "Has he been frightened off by the submarines?"

"Guess not," returned the hotel manager, "I rather think he's sore over our treatment of him. Last time he was here we chased him off the coast. You see he caused so many men to sign the pledge that he was killing our bar business."

The Summer Widower.

His wife returns tomorrow night—
He eyes the sink and wishes
He hadn't let the total get
To 'bout a thousand dishes.

Reply to Kitchener.

One of the best stories of General Smith-Dorrien, who is to take the Gibraltar command, is that which he used to tell against himself of an incident during the South African war. An orderly arrive dat his quarters one day with important despatches, which he delivered with a verbal message—this in language that was rather unconventional, judged by his rank. Smith-Dorrien read the dispatches and dismissed the man with a reply that he would be ready to move in two hours. "And," he added "say 'please' the next time you speak to me."

The orderly delivered Smith-Dorrien's reply to Kitchener:

"What did he say?" he was asked.

"He said he would be ready to move in two hours," the soldier answered, "and would you kindly say 'please' the next time you speak to me."

His Conjecture.

"What did your landlady mean by telling me she had a bone to pick with me?"

"Don't know, unless it was an invitation up to dinner?"

Lover of Nature.

"I wish to buy a motor car horn to replace the one we now have—something distinctive," said the haughty matron.

"Yes ma'am," replied the salesman. "Would a siren do?"

"Dear me, no! It must be something entirely different from the ordinary motor horn."

"But we have a siren that exactly imitates the howl of a timber wolf."

"Ah! That ought to suit my husband. He's a great lover of nature."

A Wife in a Million.

"Wal," said the farmer, "my wife is one in a million. She gets up in the mornin', milks seven cows and gets breakfast for ten hard-workin' men before ten o'clock."

"She must be a very robust woman," said the commercial traveller who happened to be present.

"No stranger, she ain't strong; she's more pale and delicate-like. If, that woman was only strong I don't konw the work she couldn't do!"

Emergency Repairs.

"Where is the billiard parlor in this hotel?"

"To the left, madam, but we don't allow ladies to play."

"That's all right. I just want the chalk a moment to powder my nose."

One phase of the war time fuel situation which may or may not be considered beneficial is the fact that it takes money to buy coal, "cash on the nail" before delivery. Most people would prefer paying for this winter's coal next summer, if convenient. Well, let's cheer up, it might be worse! What if the coal dealers adopt the "cash and carry" system?

A Wonderful Pearl.

United Empire.

What is claimed to be the finest drop-shaped pearl yet raised in Australian waters was found recently on the north-west coast of Western Australia. It has been exhibited in Melbourne, and is an object of interest to connoisseurs. The pearl, which is about the size of a sparrow's egg, has been named "Star of the West," and is remarkable for its perfect shape and coloring. Its discovery has given an impetus to the pearl-fishing industry of Western Australia.

A Leaf From Our Book.

Ottawa Evening Journal.

When Britain was helping to make Germany rich and powerful by letting German manufactures free into Britain and all the British Empire save the self-governing colonies, and being barred out of Germany in return by heavy custom duties, Canada clapped a super-tax on German goods, and made that country crawl in regard to a piece of commercial arrogance which the Huns had tried on us. And this helps to illustrate where the British tariff was really a dead duck, and the Canadian tariff a live wire. Also it helps to illustrate why British statesmen are now announcing that they propose to take a leaf out of Canada's book by taking up the principle of Imperial tariff preference.

Planting Fruit Stones.

Chicago Post

"When I was a boy in Iowa, says a writer in The Harvester World, "a French family moved into our neighborhood. There was a boy in the family about my age. He could already speak a little English, and we soon became friends.

"One day we took a long walk into the country. As we were passing an orchard, we saw the farmer among his peach trees which were loaded with fruit. The farmer called to us and we filled our pockets.

"As we walked along the road eating our peaches I saw the French boy do a peculiar thing. When he had finished his peach he walked out beyond the used part of the road, bored a hole with his heel and planted the stone. He did this unconsciously and I watched him repeat the operation two or three times. Then I spoke to him about it. He explained that the French always do that, that they are taught from infancy not to waste the seeds from any fruit which will grow, but to plant them for future generations."

This war will give our boys a chance to learn many frugal habits from the Europeans. Liberty Bands and Thrift Stamps will teach us at home to save, while the example of our Allies will teach the thrifty instincts to our boys abroad. After this war America will be less wasteful and extravagant.

TOLL GATES CLOSED.

Ottawa, Aug. 17.—Because the Ottawa, Montreal and Russel' Consolidated Road Company has failed to comply with instructions from the Ontario Highways Department to repair the Montreal road between Cummings Bridge and St. Joseph Village, the Montreal tool gates at Eastview and Greens Creek have been put out of business; the company being deprived of the privilege of collecting tolls until such time as the road is put in proper repair.

HER WAR DREAMS.

By Edmund Vance Cooke.

O, dreams are sombre and dreams are glad,
But sweeter dreams never a dreamer had
Than the dreams I dream of my soldier lad,
My soldier across the sea;
For I drowse at night when the thought grows dim;
I lie at the wide world's outer rim,
And I watch the little stars fly or swim
As I fall to dreams and I dream of him
And dream that he dreams of me.

I wake at morn and I dream all day,
I dream at my work and I dream at my play,
Idream of my laddie who's far away
And the miles that intervene;
So I send my kisses across the sea,
And they meet the kisses he sends to me
And they sing as they pass in their ecstacy;
They sing of our love and the days to be,
When no seas lie between.

PETAWAWA.

(By a Belleville Batteryman)

The boys from Belleville or Kingston
Just to serve the Flag and King,
So we'll open up our throttles
And we'll make the welkin ring;
And while we have the wind with us
We think we all should sing
Of dear old Petawawa.

The boys go in the river,
Just to get a daily scrub.
The boys come out the river
And they have a daily rub.
They also have an appetite—
But Heaven bless the grub
At dear old Petawawa.

We harness up the horses
From the traces to the bit;
We would like to have a cushion
In the saddle where we sit;
But since we joined the army
We are sure we made a hit
At dear old Petawawa.

When the trumpet blows for cookhouse boys,
Although we have no band,
We fall in at the double—
And a hungry bunch we stand.
And we think we'd like the rations
If it were not for the sand
At dear old Petawawa.

The O.C. drills the Major,
And the Major drills the S.M.
The S.M. drills the Non-Coms,
And the Non-Coms. drill the men.
The men they drill the horses,
Then the trumpet blows Amen
At dear old Petawawa.

We always do a picket
And we always do a guard.
The S.M. greased the rifles
With half a pound of lard.
But there's really nothing in it,
For we never get it hard
At dear old Petawawa.

Now when we all get overseas
And land in dear old France,
We'll unlimber all our pieces
And we'll make the Boches dance.
And I wouldn't give a nickel
For the German Kaiser's chance
At dear old Petawawa.

We have not got a battery
That could not stand the test.
The 73rd, the 74th,
And all the blooming rest;
But of all the smartest batteries
The 75th's the best
At dear old Petawawa.

Now when the war is over
And to Canada we come,
We'll march behind a blaring band
To beat the fife and drum;
And when the lassies greet us—
My! Won't they be going some,
At dear old Petawawa.

His State of Mind.

The Girl—Do you really love me, or do you only think so?

The Boy—Oh, I really love you; I haven't thought a deuced thing about it.

Reply to Kitchener.

One of the best stories of General Smith-Dorrien, who is to take the Gibraltar command, is that which he used to tell against himself of an incident during the South African war. An orderly arrive dat his quarters one day with important despatches, which he delivered with a verbal message—this in language that was rather unconventional, judged by his rank. Smith-Dorrien read the dispatches and dismissed the man with a reply that he would be ready to move in two hours. "And," he added "say 'please' the next time you speak to me."

The orderly delivered Smith-Dorrien's reply to Kitchener:

"What did he say?" he was asked.

"He said he would be ready to move in two hours," the soldier answered, "and would you kindly say 'please' the next time you speak to me."

he was here we chased him off the coast. You see he caused so many men to sign the pledge that he was killing our bar business."

His Conjecture.

"What did your landlady mean by telling me she had a bone to pick with me?"

"Don't know, unless it was an invitation up to dinner?"

Lover of Nature.

"I wish to buy a motor car horn to replace the one we now have—something distinctive," said the haughty matron.

"Yes ma'am," replied the salesman. "Would a siren do?"

"Dear me, no! It must be something entirely different from the ordinary motor horn."

"But we have a siren that exactly imitates the howl of a timber wolf."

"Ah! That ought to suit my husband. He's a great lover of nature."

A Wife in a Million.

"Wal," said the farmer, "my wife is one in a million. She gets up in the mornin', milks seven cows and gets breakfast for ten hard-workin' men before ten o'clock."

"She must be a very robust woman," said the commercial traveller who happened to be present.

"No stranger, she ain't strong; she's more pale and delicate-like. If that woman was only strong I don't konw the work she couldn't do!"

Emergency Repairs.

"Where is the billiard parlor in this hotel?"

"To the left, madam, but we don't allow ladies to play."

"That's all right. I just want the chalk a moment to powder my nose."

AUTO-INTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" Absolutely Prevents This Dangerous Condition.

The chief cause of poor health is our neglect of the bowels. Waste matter, instead of passing from the lower intestine regularly every day, is allowed to remain there, generating poisons which are absorbed by the blood.

In other words, a person who is habitually constipated, is poisoning himself. We know now that Auto intoxication, due to non-action of the bowels, is directly responsible for serious Kidney and Bladder Troubles; that it upsets the Stomach, causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Sleeplessness; that chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Pain In The Back, are relieved as soon as the bowels become regular; and that Pimples, Rashes, Eczema and other Skin Affections disappear when "Fruit-a-tives" are taken to correct Constipation.

"Fruit-a-tives" will protect you against Auto-intoxication because this wonderful fruit medicine acts directly on all the eliminating organs.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

LITTLE GIRL STRUCK BY AN AUTOMOBILE

PETERBORO, Aug. 16.—Jessie May aged 10 of Toronto, stepped off a Charlotte street car and was run down by an auto driven by F. P. Pocock, Brockville. The child was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital. Pocock in his statement to the police, says he came off George St., and in turning to go west of Charlotte received a signal from the traffic officer to proceed. When he saw the girl alight from the radial he turned his car toward the curb but was unable to prevent the accident.

"Only one thing, dear. Let me take you back to England, and present you to your grandparents as my wife."

"Did you—did you—say anything to them about it?" she asked timidly.

"Well, I gave them a hint on the subject," he answered, laughing; "as far, that is to say, as I am concerned—I could not answer for you, you know, because you have not answered for yourself."

"And how did they take it?"

"They were good enough to say that they would make no objection whatever to me as your husband provided I gave up the sea and kept you on dry land. And Sir William promised, moreover, in that case, to help me to obtain suitable employment. And so you see, my dear, the conclusion of the matter rests with you. What is your answer?"

She saw the deep blue honest eyes gazing fondly into her own, and had just placed her hand in his preparatory to saying, "Yes," when a loud unmistakable cough sounded from the inner room.

"What is that?" exclaimed Hugh Norris, starting to his feet, his senses always acutely alive to possible danger. "There is some one in your father's bedroom. Stand aside, Lizzie, and let me see who it is."

"You cannot enter that room, Captain Norris. It is fastened."

"Then some one—a mutineer, perhaps—must have got in by the window. I am certain my ears did not deceive me. The sound we heard proceeded from that room, and I must satisfy myself on the subject."

He was about to pass her, when she put out her hand to prevent him, and he observed how very pale and strained her face (but a few moments ago so smiling) had suddenly become.

"Captain Norris, I hold that room sacred to myself, and neither you nor any man, shall cross the threshold."

He looked full at her then in his amazement, and the truth seemed to flash suddenly upon him.

"You have been deceiving me!" he exclaimed; "you have some one concealed there whom you are ashamed to tell me of! Who is it?" he continued, in a low voice, which threatened danger—"that blackguard De Courcelles, who would have slaughtered every European in the Fort, if he had had his way, and whom I hear has been in hiding every since?"

Lizzie was silent. Twice her mouth opened to utter a lie in the defence of her former lover, and twice it died unuttered on her lips. Hugh Norris knew her too well to misinterpret her want of courage. He threw her one look of deep reproach, and, turning away, sat down by the table, and buried his face in his hands. Lizzie could not withstand the action. She crept after him,(and laid her hand timidly upon his shoulder.

"Hugh," she whispered, "Hugh—"

But he jerked the kindly touch away almost roughly.

"Don't come near me," he muttered. "Don't speak to me. You are false, and you have destroyed all my faith in womankind."

"No, no Hugh! you shall not say that of me. Listen and I will tell you everything. I should have told it to you in any case, for I sorely need your counsel and advice, only we have had no time as yet to speak of anyone but ourselves. But you are good, and noble and true, and if you do not approve of my action, you will at least not betray it. I will not deceive you, and I think, when you know all, you will acknowledge you would have done the same. Henri de Courcelles is in that room a fugitive hiding from the law! No, don't look at me like that. I call Heaven to witness he is not there as my lover, but that I would have extended the same succor to any fellow-creature who threw himself upon my mercy. Hugh! I heard that he had escaped from the Fort prison, and eluded the pursuit of the police by taking refuge in the Alligator Swamp. Could I have left him there to perish a miserable death, without making one effort to save him?"

Captain Norris looked up at her in amazement.

"But what could you do?" he inquired. "Not a man in San Diego would venture to penetrate the horrors of the swamp, unless he wished to die."

"Yet a woman did," she whispered.

"Lizzie, you do not mean to tell me that you went yourself?—that you risked the awful dangers of the miasma and the alligators, for the sake of this man, and that you live to tell the tale?"

"The danger was not so great for me as for another, Hugh, because I knew the proper preventatives to carry with me. Anyway, I went, and was successful. I found the unhappy and misguided man nearly unconscious from the effects of the poisonous air he was inhaling, and I brought him safely out of it, and have hid him here for the last two days, until I could devise some plan to get him away from San Diego. Will you help me, Hugh? I know it is a great thing to ask at your hands; and I have not another friend whom I would trust with the secret; but I shall not rest till I know he is secure from suffering a malefactor's death upon the gallows."

"He deserves it, Lizzie, if any one ever did."

"I know it! but if we all receive our deserts in this world, how badly we should fare! Hugh, you will believe me when I tell you that such love as I once entertained for Henri de Courcelles is all past, and for ever. I see his character in its true light at last—as vindictive and revengeful and untrue! But that does not alter the case that once I thought him good enough to be my husband, and mine is a heart that cannot entirely forget!"

"What do you want me to do for him, Lizzie?"

"To get him down to the docks in disguise, and ship him on board one of the vessels there that are bound for Spain or America. It would be cruel to send him anywhere else. And if that should be impossible to do so at once, couldn't you let him stay on the Trevelyan till you are able to send him away?" continued Lizzie wistfully.

"You ask me to do a very dangerous thing, my dear—to harbor a rebel against the British Government, and cheat the gallows of its just due."

"No Hugh—to succor a wretched fellow-creature, who was half driven to madness by a woman's treachery, before he dreamt of commiting such a crime. I cannot tell you all his story, but if you knew it, you would pity him as I do."

"Nothing of the sort. I despise the fool for having thrown away such a heart as he had found in yours! Why, Lizzie, you are a heroine, and the noblest woman I ever met! Well, and suppose I help this rascally lover of yours to escape the ends of justice, what reward am I to expect for the risk I shall run?"

"What reward do you want?" she answered, smiling at him through her tears. "You shall name it, Hugh, for I see you are going to do this great and generous thing for my sake, and hold out a helping hand to your unfortunate rival."

"Promise to become my wife, Lizzie! Nothing short of this will quite satisfy me of the purity if your benevolence for De Courcelles—because I know your nobility of character too well to think you would bestow your hand on one man whilst there was a remnant of love left in your heart for another."

"You only do me justice there, Hugh; for if I am not true I am nothing. Yes, I will be your wife, whenever you choose to ask me, and (God helping me) a good and faithful one."

"And a loving one into the bargain?" he returned interrogatively, "I will not accept your hand without your heart, Lizzie."

"Can any wife be good and faithful if she is not loving, Hugh? But do not be afraid! I love you. Is that enough?"

"Then come to my arms!" he exclaimed, as he rose and held them out to her. She was hesitating just a little, not entirely from coyness, but because it is so sweet to dally with our happiness—when a low murmuring sound, like the first menacing tones of thunder, or the moaning of a sleuthhound when it finds the trail, which evidently proceeded from the negroes' quarters, made them start asunder, and change color.

"What was that?" demanded Lizzie under her breath, as Hugh Norris threw his arm round her for protection.

"It is the groaning of a crowd," he answered. "It is the first note of mutiny. Lizzie, there is something wrong! For God's sake, let me take you away from this."

But she struggled to free herself.

"If they are rising, Hugh, let me go to them! No one understands them as I do! Let me speak, and they will obey me! I can do with them as I like."

But before he had time to put into words his entreaty that she would resign herself to his protection, a piercing shriek seemed to rend the evening air, and the next minute Rosa, the yellow girl, rushed into the room, with Maraquita's infant in her arms.

"Oh, Missy Liz," she cried, "what have they done to my baby? Dis crowd of niggers is all cryin' out for dere rights, and down with de planters and I coming along, and dey pulled de poor baby from my arms, and hit it on de head with a stone. Oh, Missy Liz, I couldn't help it! I screamed to dem to leave my poor baby alone! But dey call out 'tis Missy Quita's chile and Massa Courcelles', and den dey strike it again. And the baby's berry sick, indeed," continued Rosa, weeping, and rocking the bundle in her arms.

FEEDING THE 200 PETS

(Cleveland News.)

The farm manager of the city's municipal gardens has solved the perplexing problem of feeding the animals at the zoo, and also taking a sound wallop at old King H. C. L. His plan of raising the foodstuffs for the birds and animals on vacant plots will save the city, officials say, a few thousand dollars.

It is purely experimental, the manager volunteering to do the work. In one space he has planted one-eighth acre of rape for the birds. In another plot he has planted an eighth acre of Japanese millet for a forage crop and may be fed to the deer, elk, elephants, in fact for most four-footed animals except the bears, who won't touch it.

There will also be a substantial crop of mangel-wurzels of the best family. They are of enormous size, and may be fed to practically all of the animals, either chopped up or in halves. It costs the city about $6,000 annually for animal food.

WHEN DEATH JOINED THE CIRCUS

THE GRIM REAPER TOOK 53 LIVES AT ONE CALL, BUT

THE CIRCUS WENT ON!

The Hagenbeck-Wallace circus, when it showed at Michigan City, Ind., before the wreck of its circus train, had twenty-five numbers. At Beloit, Wis., where the first performance after the disaster was given, only one of its twenty-five was intact. Of the others, they were strangers in the cast, some sent by Ringling, some by Barnum & Bailey. Others were footlight performers picked up in Chicago. The show was "there" and it "got across," but strangers did it, strangers and the determination of the survivors that the show must go on. Of the appearance of the circus in Beloit, Ben Hecht, staff correspondent of the Chicago News, wrote to his paper:

The circus has come to town. Ma and pa and the kids have driven in from all over Winnebago County. They've tied Dobbin to the hitching post and parked the Ford behind the Radway House. Since 9 o'clock the streets have been filling, waiting for the big parade. There's a blare of music from the end of the street. A covey of kids come racing down the deserted stretch between the crowded sidewalks.

"Here they come! Here's the big peerade!" And down the street, with the six bands playing and the scarlet and purple pennons flying and the great red and gilt wagons creaking and rumbling, comes the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus, the calliope tooting in the distance and the lions roaring out of the golden barred cages.

Down the street comes all that is left of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus. The rest of it lies in the morgues of Gary and Hammond, Ind., and under the black debris at the Ivanhoe switch. Some of it lies in the hospitals of Gary and Chicago, groaning and begging to die!

The covey of kids races ahead of and around the parade shouting and throwing hats in the air.

SISTER DEAD, BUT SHE SMILES.

"Hooray! Ain't she a peach? Gee willikins!"

It's Mrs. Bobbie Cottrell they're cheering. Mrs. Bobbie, on a thoroughbred white circus horse, rides with a spotless white mantle thrown from her shoulders. Mrs. Bobbie's sister, Louise Powell, lies burned to a cinder in the undertaker's at Gary. She was part of the act of the famous Cottrell equestrian troupe of bareback wonders. Mrs. Bobbie bows magnificently at the cheering throng.

Mr. Bobbie, in his black satin breeches and his ruffled shirt, returns the salutes of his admirers. The Cottrell equestrian troupe of educated and bareback wonders goes on this afternoon under the big top minus pretty Louise Powell.

And here comes the cages of performing tigers and lions, drawn by purple plumed horses. There on the high gilded seat is where Millie Jewell used to ride—Millie, the death-defying queen of the lions' den, who capped the show with the big tiger and elephant act. The high gilded seat is empty. Emil Schwyer, the "world's famous wild animal trainer," stands alone on the vast and magnificent platform drawn by four champing grey and black horses. Millie is dead in the morgue at Hammond. The famous tiger and elephant act goes on this afternoon under the big top with Emil alone.

RED LINES THROUGH THE LIST.

And here comes another troupe of the merry monarchs of mirth capering and jumping about in their white clown suits. They're all there—all but Joe Coyle. Joe never missed a parade in his life before. But Joe's wife and two kids lie in the morgue in Indiana. He just couldn't parade this time. Harry LaPearl's partner, Eddie Dever, lies in the morgue in Indiana.

"What's the matter with the clowns?" cries a kid from the side line.

"They're all right!" yells the Beloit High School cheermaster. And the crowd begin to yell, "They're all right." "What's all right?" "The clowns."

And the clowns go by, leaping and yelling, until they get to the Radway House. There Harry LaPearl and his cowbell and his stuffed bologna drop out. The fifth band strikes up "the champagne gallop," and the tooting calliope stirs the sidewalks.

Bert Cole, the official announcer, looks at a printed bit in his hand. On this paper the name of Eddie Ward, of the famous Ward family of aerial wonders, is crossed off. So are the names of Joe and Art Derrick and Max Freehand. They are the world's famous strong men who used to support a runway with three elephants on it. Joe and Art are in the morgue. Max is dying in the hospital. Rene McCree's name is off and Hattie Hodgins, his wife has a red line through her name.

There are one hundred odd red lines through the names on the paper. Bert Cole shakes his head. "I'll be calling them," he whispers, "sure as God made little apples. I'll be calling the Derrick act and the Eddie Ward act."

A SOLDIER'S FUNERAL

BY DON MARTIN

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, AUGUST —.

He had been a slender, handsome boy. Now he was being laid to rest by comrades who knew him only by the name on his tag and a number. A piece of shrapnel had struck him and he died on the way to the hospital.

The top sergeant was a rough man. War and death ordinarily mean little to him. He gave orders in a stern deep voice.

"Hansen, get down there and straighten the boy out! Move his feet this way—there, just a bit more—careful, careful, all right—that'll do!"

Hansen, a ruddy faced, red haired youth, lifted himself slowly and quietly out of the grave. The top sergeant, with a shade of softness in his voice, falteringly read a short funeral service. On the faces of the young men who were paying the last tribute to a comrade—a youth who had made the supreme sacrifice—was an expression which showed that tragedy sickens the hearts of even those who live in the wake of war.

The words "dust to dust" were spoken. The sergeant picked up a handful of earth and sprinkled it over the blanket covered body of the hero. Guns boomed. They are always booming. The sun beamed. A lark sang. The top sergeant spoke:

"We've put him away the best we could, boys. Hats off to him and to his mother somewhere back home!"

The seven soldiers stood for a moment with heads bared and bowed. As we walked from the cemetery I heard the dull dropping of earth, growing fainter and fainter. Hansen had remained behind. Guns boomed. Bursting shells rolled their crashing thunders across the beautiful landscape. The top sergeant turned to me. Rage flashed from his eye.

"That boy wasn't twenty years old, either," said he. "I'd like to meet the man face to face who started this war!"

MEETS HIS SON IN DEATH HOUSE

Jacob Cohen, bent and gray, walked into the visitors' section of the death house at Sing Sing Prison and gazed through the wire netting that separated him from the slender young prisoner on the other side. He could not reach his hand through to touch the prisoner, even though the prisoner was his son, and he had not seen him in ten years.

But Jacob Cohen stood there and gazed for a long time at his son which is Meyer Cohen confined in the death house awaiting execution for the murder of a Brooklyn policeman and as Jacob looked he could see his son ten years back, a boy of seventeen years—bright, ambitious and hard working. Now he gazed upon a man—pale, weary, haunted-looking, waiting for grim death.

Only a few weeks ago the father learned of his son's being in the death house. Cohen had been arrested, convicted and sentenced to Sing Sing Prison and placed in the death house and still his mother and mother knew nothing of his trouble. Finally, Cohen who had steadfastly refused to tell who his parents were, wishing to save them disgrace, gave in and told the Rev. Jacob Katz, Jewish prison chaplain, who his parents were and where they lived.

The aged couple received the news with broken hearts and wounded pride. They refused to have anything to do with their son. At last Chaplain Katz prevailed upon the father to visit his son.

Famous Prophecies Have Come True

The Empress Euegnie probably often recalls in her sad and exiled old age the prophetic words of a dervish whom she visited veiled and disguised, more than half a century ago, when she was in the full bloom of her loveliness, the happiest and most enviable woman in Europe.

To her amazement the dervish greeted the veiled stranger with the words "Welcome to my humble dwelling, O Empress!" and after Eugenie had expressed her astonishment that he had so easily discovered her identity, he continued:

"At your birth the stars foretold for you great power and greater sorrow for your happiness will be only temporary, but your sorrow will last forever. You are doomed to lose your throne, your husband and your son and to wander alone through the world like a lost star. These events however will not happen at once, for the blow would kill you. To you as an Empress, it will not be permitted to enter the land of your husband and son except by permission. You will have to seek a home with strangers and the dress of woe will never leave your form; your jewels will be but tear-drops."

With what terrible accuracy every word of this prophecy has been fulfilled, the world knows.

When the beautiful young Princess Elizabeth of Bavaria visited a village fair some seventy years ago in disguise and in the company of her father a gipsy woman revealed her future to her.

"I do not know who you are, young lady," the gipsy said, "but you will one day, and before long wear the crown of an empress. You will be one of the greatest and most envied women in Europe, but your happiness will not last long. You will have many, many years during which you will walk alone in the shadows; one great trouble will follow another until—but no, I will say no more, except that you will wear a double crown, that of an empress and a martyr."

Within four years Elizabeth had married Franz Josef the young Emperor of Austria, and within another year, her young life was laid in ruins.

Her husband's unkindness and infidelity had driven her in despair from Vienna to begin the long period of exile and sorrow and pitiful loneliness to which death at last put a merciful end when the assassin, Luccheni stabbed her to the heart.

The ill-starred career of the late King Alexander of Serbia was foretold before his birth by an inspired peasant of Kremna.

"The child who is about to be born," the peasant declared, "will have a far more turbulent reign than his father will marry a woman from the people and in his tewnty-seventh year will cease to be king, his dynasty perishing with him."

How exactly this prophecy was fulfilled is known to the world. Alexander lost his head and heart to Draga Maschin the beautiful widow of a drunken engineer, and married her in spite of the strong opposition of his parents, ministers and people, and his foolish act was swiftly followed by that night of horror and tragedy in 1902 when a band of conspirators broke into the palace, slew both the King and his low-born wife, and flung their mutilated bodies out of a window.

Baby's Great Danger During Hot Weather

More little ones die during the hot weather than at any other time of the year. Diarrhoea, dysentry, cholera infantum and stomach troubles come without warning, and when a medicine is not at hand to give promptly the short delay too frequently means that the child has passed beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets should always be kept in homes where there are young children. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent stomach and bowel troubles, or if these troubles come suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will cure the baby. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

AUTOGRAPH LEG IS LATEST FAD

An autograph leg is the latest fad among the soldiers. According to Sergt. Bruce Davies, D.C.M., of Lethbridge, Alberta, now in Toronto, who is the proud possessor of 150 names on his wooden leg, it provides a lot of amusement for the boys.

Just as many another new idea has originated in the famous town of Hamilton, Sergt. Davies whispers the fact that three fair maidens from that city were responsible for this new and handy way of recording the addresses of his friends. "I have the name of all my girls from coast to coast" he declared with a laugh, as he exposed his artificial limb to view. "The only thing that worries me is they say at the hospital that my leg must be shaped up a bit more and polished; this would mean I would lose my interesting collection of autographs which would never do, so I have decided to do without the polish.'

JUST SUPPOSE

Suppose that everyone in your community should suddenly determine to send away to the metropolitan mail order concerns for every possible article of groceries, dry goods, notions, shoes, clothing, crockery, printing, hardware, machinery, harness, lumber, meats, etc., what do you imagine your home town would look like in six months' time?

All those attractive display windows along the main street would be boarded up, and the doors of practically all the business places would be locked.

Where would local real estate be?

Where would the taxes come from to keep the streets looking even decently respectable?

Who would supply the money to support the churches and schools and the other local institutions that are today the pride of the home town?

What would travellers or visitors think of our "flag-station village?

Where would farm values be in the neighborhood?

Who would want to cast his lot in such a crepe-hung locality?

You think the supposition overdrawn? Well, there are towns just like that—towns where the hum of industry is silent, where youth and energy have flown, where quiet and decay reign supreme.

Some people seem to think they are conferring a great favor upon the home merchants by buying in their home community—but, remember this, as soon as you put your home merchant out of business you put yourself out of business.

Would you invite commercial ruin to your home locality?

No man is wise who has a job in a town, who owns a piece of property, who has a farm in the neighborhood, or who has any interest whatever in the community, who makes a practice of patronizing the big city catalogue houses. He is running a losing race and the sooner he awakes to the fact the better for himself and for all concerned.

SIX COWS KILLED

During the recent electric storm which passed over the district lightning struck and killed six milch cows on the farm of Mr. Bryon Rose, Nappance Road. The loss will be about $700.

GARAGE WRECKED

An aeroplane landed on the top of Mr. George Robson's garage near Napanee. The building was completely wrecked and the under carriage of the plane "washed away."

HEAVILY FINED

"If we don't get protection for children from a man of your years, I do not know where we'll look for it," said Magistrate Dumble in Peterboro police court after fining a man over seventy years old for indecently assaulting two young girls. He was fined $50 on each two charges. The costs were $18.20.

LAMP POST SMASHED

The Deseronto Post says that a Ford truck owned and driven by Mr. B. Ives of Belleville, crashed into an iron lamp post at the corner of Main and Fourth Streets, in that town, severing the post from its base and breaking it in three pieces. The gas pipe was also broken and about 25,000 feet of gas escaped before it could be plugged up.

TAKEN TO SPECIALIST

Master Joe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bruyea was taken to Kingston Hospital where expert treatment is necessary to save the lad's right limb. A few weeks ago while riding on the handle-bars of Laverne Thompson's bicycle, he was thrown to the ground and suffering from a compound fracture above the knee. Hopes are held out for his speedy recovery.—Deseronto Post.

FELL OUT OF PLANE

Cadet F. R. Cook, Camp Mohawk, was killed on Wednesday morning last when he fell from his machine on the old Gunn farm near Napanee. Cadet Wood, it is said, objected to being strapped in his machine when flying and it is therefore supposed that in looping he must have fallen out, while the machine was on its back. The plane flew across the river and landed in a field near Mr. Fred Carscallen's house about five miles distant.—Deseronto Post.

CAPT. E. A. ADAMS WOUNDED

Mrs. Adams, wife of Lt.-Col. Adams of Picton, has received word that their son, Capt. Edwin Arnold Adams of the infantry, was admitted to the British Red Cross Hospital at Rouen, France, on August 8th, suffering from severe gunshot wound in the ankle Capt. Adams has served with distinction in the war. He is the only child of Lt.-Col. and Mrs. Adams and enlisted with the 39th Battalion. Since going overseas he has been on active service almost continuously. Some time ago he was wounded but returned to active service again after a short time. Col. Adams has also been in France for some time past.

WON A SCHOLARSHIP

In the list of scholarship awards recently announced, the name of Mr. Harvard B. Vincent, son of Mr. W. B. Vincent of Elmbrooke is included. Mr. Vincent was a student of Picton Collegiate and is the winner of the Ellen M. Nickle memorial scholarship given by Queen's University. This scholarship is worth $50 and also includes free tuition for four years at the University. It was awarded for highest standing in any four subjects in honor matriculation. Mr. Vincent secured first class honors in Mathematics and second in French. He is to be congratulated on his success, especially in view of the fact that he worked on a farm until November and therefore was only in attendance at the Picton Collegiate for part of the term during last year. He was also business manager of the Collegiate paper, and was one of those who during last year's term spent considerable time in preparing the copy and looking after the publication of the Collegiate Honor Roll of enlisted students.

MARTIAL LAW PREDICTED

SHANGHAI, Aug. 17.—Vladivostok workmen who have been agitating to secure the release of members of the Soviet who are being held as hostages by the Czecho-Slovaks, have decided to organize a great labor demonstration, according to advices from Vladivostok. It is expected that martial law will be proclaimed soon.

ON HARVEST LEAVE

NIAGARA CAMP Aug. 17—Two hundred men have gone from the various units in camp on harvest leave. The 1st Battalion 1st C.O.R. contributing the largest number of any unit sixty-one.

NEW WATERWORKS PUMPS

Superintendent of Waterworks Austin reports that good progress is being made with the installation of the new pumps. Two of the pumps will be ready to test next week.

ACTIVITY AT AVIATION CAMPS

The work of preparing winter quarters at Rathbun and Mohawk Aviation Camps is being rushed under direction of Mr. Westropp Armstrong of Toronto, engineer in charge of works. Sewers and waterworks systems are being installed as well as new buildings erected. On account of the scarcity of labor large wages are being paid to workingmen.

LIEUT. CYRIL HAMLY WOUNDED

Word was received that Lieut. Cyril Hamly, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hamly of Picton, had been wounded. The telegram states that Lieut. Hamly was admitted to No. 8 Hospital, Rouen, France, on August 9th, suffering from slight gunshot wound in left arm. Lieut. Hamly enlisted with the 155th Battalion and went overseas in 1916, and has been on active service in France for some months.

CAMP CLOSING SOON

Artillerymen on leave from Petawawa Camp say that it is the general opinion among the men that the camp will break up about the end of this month. The training has been continued intensively during the summer months and the artillery units are rapidly approaching a state of perfection. It is expected that some draft will be leaving for England very shortly to complete training for service at the front. It is also considered unlikely that the artillery will be converted into infantry as the training has been very complete and reinforcements for the artillery are said to be needed.

CHANCE FOR DESERTERS

It is hoped that all outstanding absentees and deserters in Military District No. 3 will take advantage of the opportunity given them to escape punishment by reporting for duty not later than the 24th instant. This chance is afforded them by the Governor-General's proclamation of August 1st. Those who report for duty up to 24th August will be free from punishment; and such of them as are entitled to it will be given harvest or other leave. Absentees and deserters failing to report during the period of amnesty must understand that they have no clemency to hope for. Instructions have already been received at District Headquarters to try by court martial and inflict severe penalties upon all outstanding absentees and deserters apprehended after 24th August, 1918.

SUCCESSFUL RED CROSS FUNCTION

Under the auspices of the ladies of Halston Women's Institute, there was held on Wednesday evening in the school grounds at Mount Pleasant Church, one of the most enjoyable and profitable garden parties of the season. The cash receipts were over $200. The Sulphide Band furnished excellent music and the general programme was of a high character. Those participating were Misses Lawrenson, Hamilton, Pitman and Messrs. Gowe and Parks. A very instructive address was delivered by Col. E. D. O'Flynn. Mr. John Elliott acted as Chairman. The meeting was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem and cheers for the ladies of the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society.

The marriage occurred at Toronto, of Manley MacDonald, of Point Anne, and Beverley, eldest daughter of W. G. A. Lambe, of that city.

A BIG CANDY BILL.

The people of the North American continent easily outstrip all other peoples in the world in their annual consumption of candy. It is estimated that in the United States alone half a billion dollars' worth of candy is eaten every year. Canada has the candy-eating habit in an equally pronounced degree.

A noted physician has declared that sweetness is to the taste what beauty is to the eye and music to the ear. He says that more than one-half of all the foods in the world have a sweet taste, while only one-third possess a salty taste and one-tenth a bitter or sour taste.

Despite a big cut already effected in the consumption of candy in the Dominion further economy must be exercised by private individuals, and children should be taught that in buying too much candy they are perhaps depriving hungry children of the bare necessities of life.

MAYOR'S WARNING

Mayor Platt states that he has been officially notified that the allotment of coal for the city of Belleville will fall far short of the usual amount this year, and he wishes to warn the citizens to lay in as large a supply of wood as they possibly can or there will be severe suffering in the city this winter.

STOLE AND SMASHED THE CAR

A young man, about twenty years of age, a stranger in the city, hired a Ford motor car from J. W. Small's livery on the night of the 14th inst., stating that he wished to use the car for a couple of hours. He failed to return and the police have been looking for him ever since. Last night the car was located in a ditch at Trenton, badly smashed up, but no trace of the young man who took it away from Belleville, was found.

TIDINGS OF GREAT JOY

Employees of the Canadian Northern Railway in Belleville and along the entire system were notified this morning that what is known as the "McAdoo Award" would be applied at once to the salary schedules. The announcement caused great joy to radiate in C.N.R. circles, for the increase in salary is very marked, in some instances amounting to an increase of forty dollars per month. One member of the C. N. R. staff in Belleville as a result of the adoption of the McAdoo Awarad will find an extra $32.50 in his pay envelope each month.

GOLD AS A SUBSTITUTE

The war has upset many old standards and set up new ones. One of the curious results of this upheaval is that gold has been reduced, in some cases, to the role of a cheap substitute for other metals. Hypodermic needles, for instance, were formerly made of plantinum or plantinum-iridium, two metals now practically unobtainable. The increased war demand for these needles led to many experiments with other metals and alloys in the hope of finding a good substitute. A manufacturing concern, making a speciality of tempering precious metals, has recently perfected a hypodermic needle of specially tempered 14-carat gold, which offers many advantages. The metal has almost the hardness and rigidity of steel, is not attacked by steam, boiling water or chemical solutions used for sterilizing and the needles are much cheaper than those of plantinum or plantinum-iridium.—Popular Science Monthly.

Astigmatism

This form of eye trouble is prevalent among young people and causes headaches, eye-strain and all sorts of trouble. Astigmatism is a malformation of the eye ball, and requires specially ground lenses, perfectly fitted and placed, to overcome the error.

Our special knowledge of this peculiar trouble enables us to prescribe the right glasses to correct this fault. We have had extraordinary success in fitting difficult cases.

BASEBALL

G. T. R. League

Offices 6 Shops 2

Last evening at Pine Street School Grounds the second game of the G.T.R. series was captured by the Office Staff team from the Shops by a score of 6 to 2. This gives the Offices a clear lead in the series having won the first game 3—0. Although both games have gone to the Offices each has been a real battle.

The Office Staff team did some fine fielding giving their pitcher grand support while the Shops did some sensational work but at times fell down behind their pitcher with runners on bases errors accounting for several of the runs. It must also not be overlooked that the Office Staff hit the pill hard at times. McKendry, who is just coming back into the game got a nice hit or two.

Fowell, the Shop's catcher, did some great fielding on foul-flies nailing several. Morden also handled the catching of his side to perfection. Young and Rainbird the respective first basemen were also good. Harry Pringle and Ross Yott of the Offices are sure doing the come-back stunt on the field. Pringle landed two or thre hot ones and Yott kept a going all the time, both in the field and on the bases.

"King" Brown on 3rd for the shops got some and missed others and his three base hit in the fifth gave them a tally as Ford, the pitcher, was ahead of him.

About one hundred and fifty fans were present doing some lively rooting. Newton Thompson being the chief agitator for the Office gang was on the job and has promised to be there each game to keep up the noise. It was like old times to see the G.T.R. rooters divided and backing their respective teams to the last minute.

Roy Stewart and Tommy Smith handled the game in a satisfactory maner.

NOTE—The Shops are determined to win and next week's game should be a battle as both teams are playing good ball and will not say die.

WHERE GROWS THE WHEAT

The vegetable kingdom has the greatest bounty of all to offer to mankind. Although "man shall not live by bread alone," it is an undoubted fact that western civilization would find it difficult to get along without wheat and its products.

The world's total production of wheat approximates 4,000,000,000 bushels a year. It would take 4,000,000 of the largest freight cars, making a train reaching more than one one-half times around the earth, to move this great annual yield. Moving at twenty miles an hour, this train would take thirty days to pass a given point.

Take Russia, for instance. She has 238,000,000 acres of excellent wheat land. She was the greatest exporter of grain in the world before the war. It is to a great extent because of her defalcation that wheat is so scarce today. It is estimated that only one-third of her crops have been put in this year, while hunger grows apace among her people.

MARRY, GOOD SIR; NOT I.

TORONTO, Aug. 17.—With a marriage license in his pocket and a 15-year-old girl under his arm Thomas Murphy walked into the Morality office the other day and wanted to be married. But the morality men modestly declined, and, strangely enough, there wasn't a clergyman could be found who would consent to perform the ceremony. The little homeless bride-expectant is now at the convent of the Good Shepherd, and Murphy stands remanded until the 23rd on a charge of vagrancy. He stated that he hailed from Wallaceburg.

SOLDIERS AT COLLEGE

CANADIANS RECEIVE SCHOLARSHIPS IN OLD LAND.

Partially Disabled Men Are Attending British Universities Where They Are Taking Up Special Course of Study Which Will Enable Them to Occupy Good Situations When Peace Comes Again.

THANKS to the scheme of granting scholarships to soldiers and sailors of the overseas dominions, some fifteen partially disable Canadians are now enjoying the benefits of courses in the best British universities and technical schools. So far 37 such scholarships have been granted, and Canadians hold almost half. The scheme is under the supervision of the Rhodes Scholarship Trust, of which Dr. Parkyn, late principal of Upper Canada College, is head.

But the twenty-three Rhodes scholarships so far allotted to soldiers are quite apart from the regular Oxford bursaries, which during the past few years have been awarded so many Canadian and other university post-graduates. In addition to the Rhodes scholarships are the Kitchener Memorial scholarships, and still others provided by Sir Alfred Beit, etc. In fact, no limit has been set to the number. As occasion arises the trust proposes to call upon wealthy Britishers who have amassed large fortunes from overseas interests to subscribe scholarships for soldiers and sailors of these dominions. The scholarships usually include a cash grant in addition to payment of the fees at the institution in question.

All branches of education — literary and scientific—are comprised in the scheme, and the fact that applicants may have had only a most elementary education prior to enlistment is not necessarily a bar.

Soldiers eligible must in the first place be men who have served at the front and no longer fitted for general service. Then they must be recommended by their commanding officers as men fitted to accept and benefit by the scholarship. Finally, the candidates thus recommended go before a special committee, who decide. The men selected are then given a year's leave, without pay or allowances, though those drawing allowances have this continued. The camps and convalescent homes have been well circularized for applicants.

Unlike the regular pre-war courses, the Soldiers' and Sailors' scholarships are only for one year, and consequently successful completion cannot lead to a degree, but they are very valuable to university men and of great benefit to any man. In recognition of the necessary shortness of the courses the work will be arranged so that the instruction shall be as comprehensive as possible, and the certificates granted will really be in the way of diplomas.

Among those to whom scholarships have been granted are the following:

Sergt. J. A. Church, of Smith's Falls, who had spent four months on his senior matriculation, is going to the Imperial College of Science and Technology to study civil engineering. As long service at the front had made him a bit rusty in his work the Trust has sent him to take a preparatory course at Birkbeck School.

Sergt. P. S. Warren, of Toronto University, formerly a teacher, goes to the I. C. of S. and T. for mineralogy and geology.

Corpl. P. H. Galloway, who before enlistment was in his second year at political science in Toronto University, leaves the 3rd Canadian Reserve Battalion to study economics at Brasenose College, Oxford.

Gunner J. H. Groves, educated at the Toronto Public Schools and a B.A. of Toronto University, also goes to Brasenose College, Oxford, to study law.

Corpl. H. W. Crosbie, 5th C.M.R., of Chatham, who had passed his senior matriculation, goes to Edinburgh University to study forestry.

Corpl. L. S. Cutler, Manitoba Regimental Depot, of Coldstream, Ont., and educated at Woodstock Collegiate, and B.A. of McMaster University, a law student ere he turned soldier, will study economics at St. John's College, Oxford.

Pte. H. H. Blanchard, of Baddeck, N.S., B.A. of Dalhousie University and a student for the Presbyterian ministry and a teacher, is going to Edinburgh to take a course in theology and philosophy.

Sergt. O. R. Ensor, an old 3rd Battalion man from Toronto, goes to study commerce at Birmingham University.

Pte. G. B. Monk, of Ottawa, who fought in the 73rd Battalion, went to school in Ottawa, Almonte and Cornwall, and was bookkeeper in a wholesale grocery warehouse before he enlisted, is off to Edinburgh University to take up mineralogy, forestry and foreign languages.

Lieut. F. G. Dashwood, of the R.F.C., goes to Oxford to study economics and education.

Lt.-Col. Lascelles, the officer in charge of the above scheme, is loud in his praise of the Canadian khaki college inaugurated by Prof. Tory, and doing such excellent work both in the field and in England. Col. Lascelles, who is an Imperial, hopes to see this Canadian system of education adopted by the British army.

Tommy Burns an Instructor.

Tommy Burns, ex-champion heavyweight pugilist of the world, arrived in Vancouver during the last week of May, passed his medical examination and joined the forces as physical instructor at Hastings Park Camp. Tommy Burns, whose real name is Noah Brusso, is a Hanover, Ont., boy. He was well known as an amateur lacrosse player in the province before he took to boxing. Many lacrosse enthusiasts have seen him perform in the national game.

HIS ADAM'S APPL EFREE

(New York Sun)

Man's starched white shirts and collars by some war conditions of supply and manufacture are doomed is the joyful news announced by unbelievable authority. War, even unwon, is not without its boons.

Patent search has failed to reward earnest seeking for the exact date and cause of the sartorial revolution which imposes upon civilized man the scarifying harness from which only the convulsions of a world war promise to liberate him. The starched white shirt with its accompanying zone of torture, the enchanting collar of cowardice, surrender and servitude, enslaved man the books say not when nor why.

The dismal date for portraiture may be relatively fixed as somewhere between Bunker Hill and Bull Run. He who had for generations soothed and adorned his unafraid front with fine lawn, with soft, caressing lace, abjectly accepted a monstrous imposition, field decreed; cravenly boarded up his once brave breast, and throttled his aching neck in a paste-stiffedend yoke. Shedding ish carapace, man's bosom, more gently draped, will swell in unfettered pride. His Adam's apple, again sovereign and independent, is free to viciferate its own liberation.

Chatham Dealers Must Pastuerize Milk

CHATHAM, Ont., Aug. 19.—As an additional precaution against the further spreading of typhoid fever in the city an order was issued Saturday by the local Board of Health and forwarded to milk dealers in the city, forbidding them to sell milk or cream that has not been pastuerized.

The sixth death from typhoid fever since the outbreak was recorded last night when Mrs. Rebecca McCubbin, wife of George A. McCubbin, Raleigh Street, died at St. Joseph's Hospital.

FRENCH TROOPS BREAK THROUGH HUN LINES DISTANCE OF OVER TWO MILES

1700 PRISONERS AND TWO BATTALION COMMANDERS

ANOTHER SMASHING BLOW DELIVERED BY FRENCH TROOPS — ENEMY LINE PENETRATED AND MANY PRISONERS TAKEN — ENEMY RESISTING DESPERATELY WITH MACHINE GUN UNITS, BUT FRENCH SWEEP FORWARD — BRITISH LINE IS CONSTANTLY ON MOVE AND STRONG PRESSURE MAINTAINED ON ENEMY EVERYWHERE.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The French Tenth Army which attacked German positions between the Oise and the Aisne Rivers last night has penetrated to an extreme depth of nearly two miles. Enemy machine gunners are resisting desperately and the German air service is also very active.

PUSHING HUNS BACK.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—(Official)—Near Merville, at the apex of the Lys salient, the British have made further progress. Fifty prisoners and a few machine guns were captured. A German counter attack between Outterstein and Meteren was broken up by the British artillery.

1700 PRISONERS TAKEN.

PARIS, Aug. 19.—(Official)—Between the Oise and the Aisne rivers French troops attacked at six o'clock last night over a front of 15 kilometres between Sarlepoint, about four miles east of Ribecourt, and Fontency, approximately six miles west of Soissons. They advanced an average distance of two kilometres over the whole front.

The French have occupied the plateau west of Nampoel, about seven miles northwest of Fontency, and the edge of a ravine south of Andignicourt, two and ahalf miles east of Nampoel.

Nouvron-Vingre was captured and seventeen hundred prisoners, including two battalion commanders were taken in the operation.

There were violent artillery actions north and south of the Arve River during the night.

CAPTURED BY FRENCH.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—St, Mard-les-Triot, one quarter of a mile southwest of Roye, was taken by French troops, according reports from the battlefront. The French also captured the town of Beuvraignes, two and one-quarter miles south of St. Mard.

FRENCH AGGRESSIVE.

LONDON, Aug. 19.—French troops penetrated into the village of Lesamel on the southwest of the Oise and northwest of Ribecourt, today, according to advices from the front. During the fighting today the French were aggressive, but made some slight headway against determined German resistance between Lassigny and the Oise.

SUNDAY WAR BULLETINS

Special to the Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited

French troops made further progress yesterday, captured one thousand prisoners and a number of machine guns, carrying by storm the village of Caan-sur-Matz, and sweeping enemy from positions on a front of nearly two miles, to a depth of one mile, occupying all enemy positions. In the region of Autroeses the French took 240 additional prisoners.

Early yesterday morning the Americans captured the village of Frapelle, taking a number of prisoners and inflicting very heavy casualties upon the enemy in killed and wounded.

British advanced slightly on Friday night and on Saturday, we made progress on a front of nearly one mile, north of Lihons. A few prisoners and machine guns were taken.

Sargent had been engaged in scouting and in a very dangerous position, it is understood.

Mexican Modifiers Oil Tax Decree

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—A threatened crisis in the relations of Mexico with the Entente Allies and the United States apparently has been averted by a modification of the new Mexican oil tax decree by President Carranza.

It was learned Saturday that on August 12 Carranza, in effect, cancelled provisions of the decree of July 31 under which undeveloped oil lands might be seized by the Mexican Government upon failure of their owners to make declarations and submit to what they regarded as excessive taxation.

Edmonton Chaplain Is Among the Slain

Toronto, Aug. 19.—Captain William H. Davis, a chaplain serving with the Canadian Mounted Rifles, is mentioned in Saturday night's casualty list as being killed in action. He is the first chaplain to make the supreme sacrifice among the members of this corps of the Canadian Expeditionary Force.

Captain Davis was an Anglican clergyman of the Diocese of Edmonton. His courage in attending to the sick and dying had already earned for him the Military Cross. His home is in Ireland.

Eastern Provinces Must Get in Coal

Mr. Magrath Warns them of Danger Of Shortage Later

OTTAWA, Aug. 19—On his return to Ottawa Friday for an official visit to Washington, C. A. Magrath, Dominion Fuel Controller, brought back a message to the people of the Maritime Provinces immediately to get in a supply of domestic coal in order to prevent suffering this winter. His warning took the line of that already made to Western consumers.

Mr. Magrath stated that the domestic coal situation in the New England and Atlantic States appears to be very acute and may partly account for the present difficulties in getting the allotted supplies of anthracite coal through to the Maritime Provinces. He expressed the opinion that the anthracite importers in Nova Brunswick and Nova Scotia should lend their energies to obtaining at the earliest moment the fullest possible supply of domestic coal. With the winter rapidly approaching, deliveries will be difficult, more especially if supplies to the Eastern States should be coming forward in diminished volume, which would probably result in the cutting off of water shipments to the Maritime Provinces entirely.

The anthracite situation is giving Mr. Magrath serious concern as far as these provinces are concerned. A shortage there will be inevitable unless the importers redouble their efforts to get their allotment of antrachite coal in early in the season, he declared.

Henry Ford to Erect Plants In Mexico

DETROIT, Aug. 19.—Plans for the erection of several large tractor plants in Mexico were made known Saturday by Henry Ford, the automobile manufacturer. Mr. Ford has notified the Mexican Government that he is prepared to spend $1,000,000 on the first of several such plants, and is awaiting only the selection of an official site.

"We will build tractors in as close co-operation with the Mexican Government as possible," said Mr. Ford today. "We will sell virtually at cost, and if profits accumulate we will put them right back into the business. Not a cent is to be taken out of Mexico."

Should the business grow to such proportions that it would be impossible to absorb the profits the Mexican Government will be given control of the plants, it was stated.

"The tractor will give the people an opportunity to realize some of the wealth of their country," Mr. Ford added.

German Intrigue In Mexico Cause of Oil Dispute

WASHINGTON, Aug. 19.—German intrigue is making its last stand in the Americas through the agency of the Mexican oil tax dispute with Great Britain and the United States in the opinion of the Latin American diplomats here. Aside from the Mexican difficulties, the relations of American republics are declared by representatives of South and Central American countries never to have been happier and the tendency toward the realization of a real Pan-Americanism never stronger.

Chile, long an ardent admirer of Germany for many natural reasons, of late has shown a desire to promote closer relations with the United States to the end of making permanent lines of trade down the South American West Coast that have been established in our heavy importations of nitrates and copper for munition manufacture.

PORT HOPE MAN KILLED.

Port Hope, Aug. 19.—Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Staples, Rochester, formerly of this place, have received word that their son, Pte. Charles H. Staples, was killed in action on July 26. He was 25 years of age and went across from here two years ago with the Canadian infantry. A brother, Corp. S. J. Staples, made the supreme sacrifice last November.

Some men would die young if they were compelled to make a living.

Belleville Coal Scow Turns Turtle on Lake Ontario

Consignment of Coal for Downey & Co., Local Dealers, Meets Disaster in Lake Ontario— Scow Sprang Leak Then Overturned— Tug Tows Capsized Scow to Kingston

Special Despatch to the Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

KINGSTON, Aug. 19.—A scow loaded with 282 gross tons of coal for Downey & Co., of Belleville, sprang a leak off nine-mile point yesterday morning while in tow of the Argyle, of Montreal, and after getting inside of the point it suddenly turned turtle. Fortunately the tug held on with one line and towed the upturned scow to port.

Manager D. W. Patterson was aboard the scow up untill an hour before the accident happened.

The loss is estimated at $2500.

FELL FROM BARN

A serious accident occurred to Mr. Thrasher, who lives at Thrasner's Corners, on Friday evening. Mr. Thrasher was making some repairs to the roof of a high barn and had placed a ladder in a waggon box in order to climb to the roof. To the waggon was attached a team of horses, and while Mr. Thrasher was descending the ladder the horses started, upsetting the ladder. He jumped for the hay mow but hit the window frame and fell to the waggon. Medical attention was secured as soon as possible, and it was found that Mr. Thrasher was suffering with concussion of the brain as the result of his fall. He is a brother of Mrs. H. J. Clarke, Belleville.

BOY DIED OF INJURIES

Cecil Eugeno Babcock, aged fifteen, died in Belleville Hospital last evening, about eight o'clock, as the result of injuries received in an accident yesterday afternoon near his home in Rednerville. The lad is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Wellington Babcock, of Rednerville, and was out on his bicycle yesterday afternoon with several companions, returning with severe wounds in his head, which were bleeding freely. His condition was such that he could give his parents no particulars of the accident. He was rushed to the hospital, where he died two hours later. The accident happened while the boy was descending a steep hill. Something went wrong with his wheel and he was thrown heavily to the ground, receiving injuries to his head and limbs.

FARMERETTES BUSY

Two camps of farmerettes have been established in Prince Edward County, one at Bloomfield, and one at Hillier. At Bloomfield a dozen or so jolly girls from Bishop Strachan College, Toronto, and other educational institutions at Ottawa and elsewhere, occupy the Can-Camp, Y. W. C. A., and the house mother is Miss Jack of Belleville. The official colors of the Can Camp girls are blue and gold, which is very effective in contrast with the beautiful coats of tan which the girls have acquired from National Service life in the open. They are busy now picking beans and will take a holiday on Thursday to attend the big farmers picnic at the Sand Banks, when they will dispute the athletic events with the boys of the Soldiers of the Soil who will compete for prizes.

SAILORS' WEEK

A meeting of the Navy League will be held in the Y. M. C. A. this evening at eight o'clock to arrange for sailor's week.

Miss Straith has been successful in establishing two camps of farmerettes in Prince great demand for girls to help in pick-Edward County, and says there is a ing apples and late fruit and also to work in the canneries. The farmerettes are giving excellent satisfaction everywhere and helping materially to save the abundant harvest and help win the war. Miss Straith is arranging to establish farmerette camps at Grafton, Port Dalhousie and West Lake in September for fruit picking.

Canadian Wounded Well Cared For

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The following is a message from E. Norman Smith, of the Ottawa Journal:

"The care of the wounded and sick in the Canadian army has been one of the many phases of war effort investigated very thoroughly by the newspaper editors. We have seen that phase in all its stages, from the front trenches through the divisional and main dressing station, casualty clearing station and base hospitals in France to the permanent and special hospitals in England.

"Today the tour of the Dominion newspaper men was brought to a natural close by a visit to the Dominion Government Military Convalescent Hospital at Epsom, where the men possibly available for further military service are afforded every opportunity and expert treatment for recovery, and the Ontario Government Hospital at Orpington. He who chose the sites for such hospitals seems to have been given a free hand to select outstanding spots of scenic beauty in a beauteous land, where murderous war has apparently engendered a loving spirit of sympathy and unselfishness, which, combined with practical efficiency, produces impressive results. The more than conscious devotion to duty, the glowing spirit of patriotic service, so palpably evident among the medical officers, nursing sisters and orderlies, whether in the main dressing stations at Arras, constantly shelled and daring such dreadful evidence of Boche brutality, the Convalescent Hospital at Epsom or the Discharge Depot at Buxton, is something that all of us editors must pay tribute to.

Train up a hired girl the way she should go and it will not be long before she is gone.

Push Foe Back To the Frontier

Not too Much to Hope for Before Winter Comes, Says Simonds

Frank H. Simonds thus sums up the war situation:

In sum, we have seen one of the great victories of the Western front, even if there be no considerable further retreat of the Germans. They have suffered their worst defeat of the war, not a defeat like the First or the Second Marne (both of these were defeats in battles of arrest, by which their own purpose was balked and they were compelled to readjust their lines) but a defeat and a paralyzing defeat, following an allied offensive. Their whole campaign is now in the discard; what remains to be established is the extent of their retreat. Nor is it likely that even a temporary halt at the Somme or even at the Hindenburg line will mark the end for the campaign of their withdrawal. Rather is it within reason now to hope that they may be pushed to the French frontier before snow flies. For Foch is only beginning, and his American reserves are accumulating in great numbers each week.

Sub Bases Receive Many Blows From Air

British Airmen Drop 60 Tons of Bombs on Enemy Coast Positions

LONDON ,Aug. 19—Concentrating their effoffrts on Zeebrugge, the German submarine base in Belgium, British aviators working with the navy dropped 60 tons of bombs on enemy positions during the period from August 8th to August 15th, British Air-Ministry reported. In addition to operations against Zeebrugges, bombs also were dropped on the Ostend docks and the airdrome at Varssenaero, where fires were observed.

The communique stated sixteen enemy machines and one captive balloon were destroped and fifteen machines driven down out of control. Three British machines are missing.

A Zeppelin also was bagged over the North Sea and a direct hit with a bomb obtained on a German destroyer.

Aiding Deserters Made Hazardous

Amendment to the Military Service Act Makes Law More Strict

OTTAWA, Aug. 19—Amendment has been made to the military service regulations by order-in-council. They now provide that any person who knowingly employs, harbors or conceals, or in any way assists a deserter or a man absent without leave from the C.E.F. is liable to imprsionment not exceeding six months or a fine of no less than $100 and not more than $500.

The shipment will include maskinonge, sturgeon, pickerel, trout, whitefish, and pike, and other varieties handled by the Ontario Government fisheries.

Whiskey Burned In Essex County

Comman Sight to See Farmers "Prospecting" For It

WINDSOR, Aug. 19—Cached away "somewhere" in Essex county are 65 more than $2,000 part of a consignment of liquor that was being shipped to Chicago for use in the United States military hospitals. They were stolen, it is alleged, by employees of the Michigan Central Railway Company, eight of whom are now under arrest here.

Details of the plot to steal the liquor have been revealed by James P. Peloquin, a switchman in the employ of the company, who confessed to Special Agent Atkinson and Detectives Reid and Broderick of the Windsor police force, it is said.

Peloquin, who first pleaded not guilty, has changed that plea to guilty, according to Atkinson. The only man under arrest who has not confessed is Joseph Hayes, conductor of the train to which the cars of whisky were attached.
the train to which cars of whiskey

According to Peloquins alleged statement to the police, Hayes gave orders for the cars to be backed to the "Hump,' where three automobiles were waiting. Fifteen miles from the railroad yards the 16 cases of liquor were buried on the roadside. A majority of these have been either recovered or disposed of, but the bulk of the cases of liquor are hidden in a dugout some 20 miles from Windsor.

That Peloquin has told the truth is indicated by statements made by Arthur Roy and Gordon Battersby, formers of Sandwich East, who told the police say they saw men bury the liquor.

Some of the cases were dug up by the farmers and sold, it is said. Windsor business men are said to be implicated in the illegal purchase of the liquor.

Since it became known that a half-carload of whiskey is hidden beneath the ground, it is no uncommon sight, according to the police to see gangs of farmers, armed with spades and other digging apparatus, "prospecting" for the whiskey.

"I Need Hardly Say

how thankful I was tuget out alive, and fully made up my mind that I would write and tell you how useful Dr. Chase's Ointment was," writes a survivor of the Gallipoli Peninsula campaign. Baby is Valued at $100,000

What is a baby worth? Marguerita Sylva, the famous prima donna, has the answer down pat in dollars, $100,000. For the most seductive and gypsyish of all the Carmens has cancelled contracts totalling at least $200,000 in the last three years in order to become the mother of two beautiful daughters.

Accepting this appraisal of the famous operatic star as correct, the Canadian National Exhibition will have $50,000,000.00 worth of Canadian babyhood competing for prizes in its far-famed Baby Show on Labor Day. The prospects are that one Toronto family alone will have $300,000 worth represented by bouncing triplets recently born. As usual, the Baby Show will be held in the Dairy Building and every precaution will be taken for the care and comfort of mothers and their dimpled, crowing offspring.

Germans No Longer Boast About Coming Offensive

Germans in Deadly Fear of Allied Attacks— Complain They are Starved in Food and Munitions So Crown Prince May Extricate Himself

OTTAWA, Aug. 19—Roland Hill, correspondent with the Canadians in France, writes:

According to prisoners which we took in one of our effective "big-little raids, there is no longer boastful talk in the Hun lines about their coming offensive. On the contrary although these German prisoners still claim to have something like thirty divisions in reserve from Amiens to the sea, they are in deadly fear of what they call the coming allied attack.

The prisoners which the Canadians took complain bitterly that they are being starved—in food, guns, and material—so that the Crown Prince may extricate himself on the Rhemis-Soissons sector. The full significance of the fighting in the south seems to have filtered through the Germans opposite us, and they say that from now until the end of the year they must act on the defensive.

HUN RAID NIPPED IN BUD

The raid, which was made by men from Saskatchewan battalions, was successfully carried out according to program. It also nipped in the bud a similar Hun project, which was to be made with the idea of seeing if there were American troops acting with the men from the Dominion. One party of our raiders drove in enemy posts back to his defence line and established a blockade across No Man's Land from the east. The main party had a ticklish job of combing out a series of strong points made up of outposts and trenches about three-quarters of a mile long and half a mile in depth. We expected serious fighting and went over in strength. Masked by darkness and heavy rain the Canadians surprised the German garrison, but the main body fled back to their strongest line of trenches, having to plunge through our barrage, which stretched back a quarter of a mile. Scores of corpses the next morning testified that all did not survive, although all night long the enemy stood to in battle positions, our artillery still punishing them, thinking that the dreaded attack had arrived.

ONLY SEVEN UNWOUNDED PRISONERS

In the outposts and trenches which we destroyed we were only able to get seven unwounded prisoners and several machine guns. It is hard to say how many were killed in the hand-to-hand fighting, but at least thirty dead were counted. Two large dugouts, which previous Canadian patrols had discovered, were wiped out by our guns with their occupants.

Our casualties were light, being mostly slight wounds from German shrapnel. The Huns opposite us are no match for the Canadians, and the close fighting was one-sided

Another raid was carried out by Ontario troops, and in this two prisoners were taken, of a new division hurried in to brace up the front, and about a dozen of the enemy were killed and other machine guns captured.

Called by Death

MR. WALTER ALFORD

Many hearts are sad in Belleville to-day because of the death of Walter Alford, a citizen held in the highest esteem for his many kindly qualities of head and heart, and for his splendid type of citizenship, which manifested itself in an active interest in every worthy movement for the betterment of Belleville, and all the many and varied municipal activities. He has been identified with the life of Belleville for the past forty-eight years, and despite an active business life found time to serve the city as Alderman for two terms, besides giving much time to other municipal movements and being active in church and fraternal society circles.

After a comparatively brief illness Mr. Alford died early this morning at his residence 211 George Street. He was born at Bridestone, Devonshire, England on March 5, 1854, and came to Belleville forty-eight years ago (1870.) He engaged in business as a contractor and builder and was very successful. Among his large undertakings was the erection of the Bay Bridge which connects the city of Belleville with Prince Edward County and he constructed many notable buildings in Belleville, Trenton and Calgary, including the two Robertson blocks, and Alberta blocks on Front Street, and the House of Refuge, Belleville; C.O.R'y Station, Trenton, Pickering College, Newmarket Metropolitan Bank, Oddfellows Building, Picton, and others.

Mr. Alford was a prominent member of Christ Church and served at various times as People's and Rector's Warden. He was Past Master of The Belleville Lodge, No. 123, A.F.&A.M. Knight Templar, No. 6, G.R.C., also a member of the Sons of England and A.O.U.W.

Mr. Alford was twice married, the survivors of the first family being two daughters, Mrs. James Goodrich, of Walkerworth, Ont., and Mrs. Wm. Epps, of Deseronto. His second wife was Miss Susan F. Sanderson, who died on October 9th, 1908, the children of this union being Miss Fanny E., at home; Newton, overseas on active service; Harry, recently invalided home from military service overseas; Ernest, Montreal; and Robert Alford, Detroit. He is also survived by one brother, Mr. Wm. Alford, of Church Street, Belleville, and one sister, Miss Susan Alford, Devonshire England.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon under Masonic auspices with services in Christ Church.

Death Notice

ALFORD—At his residence, 211 George Street, Belleville, Monday, August 19, 1918, Walter Alford in his 65th year.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday, August 20, 1918, under Masonic auspices, leaving the residence, 211 George Street at 2 p.m. services in Christ Church beginning at 2.30 p.m.

LANDS IN THE WAR

The declaration of war by the republic of Haiti on Germany brings the number of powers arrayed against that country, if Roumania and Russia be counted, up to twenty-five. As for the populations in a state of war it is estimated they number 1,200,000,000, which means that far more than half of the world's population—1,600,000,000— is involved in the struggle. Of the land area of the globe 30,000,000 square miles out of a total of 55,500,000 square miles is involved, though only 1,000,000 square miles is actually in the fighting zones, and the greater part of this battle area lies in the Near East and Turkish territories of the Ottoman Empire. As far as can be ascertained, five per cent of the people at war are under arms. It is an interesting fact that the percentage in Germany is higher than that of any of the other belligerents and amounts to ten per cent.

MILITARY MEDAL FOR SIR DOUGLAS HAIG

PARIS, Aug. 19—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig was decorated by Premier Clemenceau with the French Military Medal at Headquarters in the field yesterday. The award was made on the recommendation of Marshal Foch.

Marshal Joffre and Gen. Petain are holders of the Military Medal, a distinction rarely given to officers, the practise being to award it to enlisted men who have distinguished themselves.

Letters from Overseas

FROM SERGT. BURFORD OF TRENTON

Sgt. Burford went over with the 109th Victoria and Haliburton Battalion at the age of 18 years' was made a sergeant while on active service in France was gassed at Vimy Ridge and now stationed in England. He is known in Trenton I undersand he is a clever boy; you may use copy

St. Martin's Plains,
Shorncliffe

My dear sister:—

So glad to just receive your most welcome letter and very glad to hear you are getting along alright as this leaves me very good, also this Canadian mail I received a parcel from mother and although it took it two months to come. In it was most everything one could think of, including mince pies, peanut butter, lowing England's example on cookies, etc.

I see that Canada is practically following England's example on conscription. From the different accounts I get they are right after them now. I understand they send out registered letters so as to be sure the fellows get their cards, some stunt, eh! Well I am glad the government did not have to waste a registered letter on me, and the boys who came over with me. I sure admit it is a toughe life but when they get here and understand they will know it is worth it all, don't you think so, if not for us it will be for others.

I see the Huns are still making a great effort to reach Paris, which I figure they will never get. It is heart rending to see the men they have ruthlessly sacrificed for what they have gained, we have lost ground alright, but they have lost the men. It is easier to gain ground than it is to get man power. This struggle now seems a time for clever manouvers and brain work, and I think we have a man here who understands the situation, and he is Gen. Foch, the great French leader.

Well its just about two years since I left the old town of Trenton, on July 12.

Don't think I am trying to write short hand, but I cannot steady my pen. I get that weary some days, my nerves are still shakey I close with love and kindest regards to any of the old friends.

Yours,
ALBERT BURFORD

AIDED DRAFTEES TO EVADE SERVICE ACT

NAMAIMO, B.C,,Aug .17—At court proceedings yesterday afternoon Jos. Naylor, former president of the British Columbia Federation of Labor and David Aitken were committed for trial on a charge laid under Military Service Act of assisting Albert Goodwin who was killed by Constable Campbell while resisting arrest about two weeks ago.

At the preliminary hearing yesterday, evidence was given by a member of the military police force, that he saw Naylor at the rendevous of the draft evaders.

Evidence also was given that when Naylor's effects were searched a quantity of revolutionary literature was found by the police.

MUST DELETE KAISER FROM DRAFTEE'S CHEST

NEW YORK, Aug. 19—The Kaiser must be deleted from Arthur Martin's chest before he enlists in the marines. Martin, former circus tatooed man, said to-day he would submit to an operation to have the totooed likeness of Wilhelm taken from his chest, as he does not want to join the marines wearing such a decoration. He will have the skin taken off and new skin grafted.

AN AMERICAN CONVOY SINKS SUBMARINES

PARIS, Aug. 19—President Pioncare, after witnessing the debarkation from an American convoy at a French port Saturday was told that two German submarines had just been sunk. One was sunk by a French vessel and the other by the American. After the debarkation Pioncare visited American debarkation camps.

When Khaki Calls

By M. E. Stanton

It was evening and the big office buildings were discharging their quota of humanity, who, though still in workaday garb, stepped forth briskly into the crisp autumn air, conscious that the chains of toil were loosened for a few brief hours and that they were free to play, relax and to take their little parts in the comedies and tragedies of social life.

Ann Donovan was one of a group of animated, chattering girls that emerged from one of these immense beehives of industry. They lingered for a moment on the sidewalk, laughing and talking, then scattered on their various homeward ways.

Ann started off, but had only gone a few feet when a quick step sounded behind her and a pleasant masculine voice said:

"Hullo, Ann! What's your hurry?"

It was annoying. Why would Tommy insist on waiting for her every evening? Of course he was pleasant company, and all that, but—well, a girl likes to dream sometimes, and that walk home in the evening, along the quiet, shaded streets, was the only bit of time out of the whole busy day she might have for herself.

"Good evening, Mister Regan," Ann managed to respond, taking a certain satisfaction in using her most formal prunes-and-prisms tone, usually reserved for impertinent salesmen or persistent book agents who invaded the office.

"Why so distant, Acushla? Doesn't Tommy sound good to you any more? That mister stuff doesn't listen natural comin' from you to me." And the cheerful Tommy softly hummed:

"Pack up your troubles in your old kit bag.
And smile, smile, smile!"

"Them's my sentiments every time. Fellow that wrote that song must have been a real fellow. One who knows that a smile makes the digging easier, whether you're digging with a shovel, or a pen or a—a sword."

Tommy's voice faltered a little on the last word, and he gazed a trifle anxiously and uncertainly at his silent companion.

"Er—Ann, there's something I've been wanting to tell you, and I don't see why I mightn't as well tell you now."

Ann was panic-stricken. Why could not Tommy be satisfied with things as they were and not begin treading on dangerous ground. Besides—and this was the real reason—a certain resentment had been lurking in the background of Ann's mind for some time with reference to this same Tommy Regan. How could he sit tamely behind a desk and watch other fellows, dozens of them, marching away to "Carry the starry banner over seas?"

Tommy was a strapping, stalwart youth, clean-cut and pleasing to the eye. Aggressive and intelligent, he had in him the making of a splendid American soldier.

But he had not enlisted when the nation-wide call for volunteers went forth, nor had the long arm of conscription as yet reached out for him. He and Ann had never directly discussed the subject. It was constantly in Ann's thoughts, but a certain hesitancy had prevented her from introducing the topic, and though she had skated dangerously close at times, for all of Tommy's unfailing cheerfulness and apparent willingness to chat on anything and everything under the sun, somehow he had never given her a clue as to his real reason for putting himself in the slacker class.

Ann herself was an ardent patriot. Fifteen dollars a week is not a munificent sum, but when a girl lives at home the stretching qualities of even a meager fifteen dollars are remarkable. So by dint of wearing her last season's suit, by studiously keeping her head turned the other way when passing an ice-cream parlor, by sundry small economies and self-denials constantly practiced the world over by thousands of working girls, she was able to buy a Liberty bond, to join the Red Cross and to contribute her mite to various special funds for the benefit of "Our Boys." She was even now learning to knit in the "From Pothooks to Knitting Needles" class recently launched at the office.

So when Tommy announced in that serious tone that he had something to tell her, she mentally besought her patron saint to ward off the imminent proposal without hurting the lad's feelings or destroying their friendship. For, after all, thought Ann, they had grown up together as neighbors, and there had always been a friendly feeling between the two families, though of late years the social intercourse had been confined chiefly to the young people save for an occasional 'cross-the-fence chat between Mrs. Regan and Ann's mother.

They were on a quiet side street now and her prayer seemed hopeless when, just as Tommy started to resume his confidence, the heaven-sent interruption occurred. The interruption was just a pair of lovers strolling along arm in arm—a scene old as the ages, yet ever interestingly new to observed as well as to observers. The youth was clad in khaki and he carried himself with a jaunty, conscious air of pride that found eager reflection in the admiring maid at his side.

Ann and Tommy turned to look after them. Who can resist a backward glance at a pair of lovers?

"Oh!" sighed Ann, "doesn't he look splendid?"

And then valor tweaked discretion's ears and rushed into the fray.

"How can you stay at home and let folks call you a slacker, when all these brave fellows are giving up their homes, their work—yes, even their lives, to make our homes, our work and our lives safe? You've told me before that you loved me, but I don't want to hear you say it again, for I'll never marry a slacker. Never! Oh, how I wish I had been a man!"

And to Tommy's consternation Ann started to cry. He waited until her sobs had ceased, then said:

"But look here, Ann, I want to tell you—"

"Oh, what's the use of arguing about it now?" queried Ann wearily. "There's only one way for a man—a strong, healthy young fellow like you—to prove his patriotism. If you won't do it, your friends can't force you to."

This was the proper cue for a dignified exit, and as at this precise moment they reached the front gate of Ann's home she murmured a brief "good night" and left him abruptly.

Tommy's voice, still maddeningly cheerful, called after her: "If you happen to feel like the movies tonight, darlint, don't forget my 'phone number."

And Ann could hear him tramping up his own front steps whistling:—

"Keep the home fires burning."

"Yes, you'll keep them burning all right," she spitefully apostrophized him, as she entered the house and slammed the door with a vigorous bang that brought her mother hurrying from the dining room, where supper was just sending forth its savory invitation.

"Why, dearie, you came in like a cyclone. No villain pursuing you, is there?" And Mrs. Donovan laughed expectantly, for she and this only daughter of hers were chums and shared a sense of rich Irish humor.

"Nothing, mother. I'm just a little tired and hungry, I guess, and supper smells so good. I'm ready, if it is."

"All right. But, Ann, did you hear about Tommy Regan? His mother was over this afternoon and told me about it. She cried and cried, but she's so proud of him, and she says he's so anxious to go, and—"

"What, mother? Tommy hasn't—"

"Enlisted! Yes, he has," exclaimed Mrs. Donovan, dabbing at a furtive tear with the corner of her apron. "That's just what Tommy has gone and done. She told me all about how he's felt ever since this war started; how it hurt him to see the other fellows marching off when he had to stay at home."

"Well, why did he have to stay at home?" interrupted Ann. "Of course I know it would leave his mother alone, but Mr. Regan must have left quite a lot of money when he died."

"But he didn't," exclaimed her mother. "Everyone thought so, but it appears that he speculated heavily, not only with his own money, but with some that had been intrusted to his care. His sudden death was a result of the shock of losing everything, and Tommy, who was just starting out to make his way in the world, promised his father that he would see that the funds which had been misused were replaced, though it took years of self-denial on his part. His mother says he has stuck manfully to his promise and has done everything possible to restore his father's honor, but it seemed such a hopeless task."

Mrs. Donovan paused for breath.

"Go on, mother," prompted Ann.

"Well, what do you think? Some of that mining stock has turned out to be valuable after all. There wasn't any gold in the mines, but they have found something else—tungsten, I believe it is called—that is worth nearly as much. Anyway, they can pay off all their debts and Tommy will know that his mother is well taken care of, even if he's away off in France. She said after he made sure he didn't waste a minute getting down to the recruiting headquarters."

Ann started for the telephone.

"Where are you going?" asked her mother, with the kindly inquisitiveness of those near and dear.

Ann looked around the cozy living room with a speculative eye.

"Tommy wanted me to call him up. But I wonder if we wouldn't rather stay at home than go downtown tonight? I'm kind of tired of the movies myself."

Honesty and Carelessness.

There are so many ways in which to be careless with the things that belong to others. Most of us seldom think of these small sins of commission and omission. We would not, for anything in the world, knowingly trespass on the rights of others. Yet, day after day, because we do not think, we do things that are really destructive, and verge very closely upon dishonesty of act, if not intention. Dishonesty is an ugly word. But it is better to face the fact that the careless person is really the dishonest person, for only by admitting a fault can it be cured. Are you careless? If so, look to it that your carelessness does not work harm to yourself and to those about you.

The Eye for an Eye.

Ethel (overhearing)—I do, mummy.

Curate—And what do you say in your prayer, my child?

Ethel—I pray that they may be beaten.—Punch.

SUGAR FOR CANNING SEASON.

Sufficient Supply Will Be Available If Economies Are Exercised.

The sugar situation so far as Canada is concerned is largely in the hands of the public itself. Transportation conditions have been bad, but with the restrictions which have been imposed by the Canada Food Board on bakers, confectioners, eating places, candy manufacturers and on private households, so far as the use of cane sugar in icings on cakes and the making of candy for private consumption is concerned, a very large saving will be effected. If this saving be increased by all possible economies in private households and by curtailed consumption of candy, it is certain that there will be a sufficient supply of sugar for the canning and preserving season. The Food Board has been successful recently in securing ships to carry raw sugar to Canada and these supplies have definitely improved the situation. With continued care, there is now no danger of anything in the nature of a sugar famine and, if the public will do its share, there will be no shortage for the canning and preserving season. Continued economies are necessary, however, and the Food Board's regulations must be strictly observed.

The International Sugar Commission of New York and the Royal Commission of London, working in co-operation, virtually control the raw sugar of the world. The International Sugar Commission allocated to Canada this year 320,000 tons, as against 400,000 tons last year. Our exports of refined sugar last year amounted to about 55,000, so that the net shortage for Canadian consumption amounted to about 25,000 tons, or approximately six per cent. The International Sugar Commission, however, expected to be able to allocate an additional 70,000 tons to Canada, which would have given us a net surplus over last year of 45,000 tons.

Transportation difficulties became unexpectedly acute and sugar receipts in Canada fell far below schedule. Arrangements were almost completed for ships to bring raw sugar direct to Canada, but these had to be dropped. This combination of transportation difficulties made necessary the restrictions imposed during recent weeks by the Canada Food Board. They will have the effect of building up a reserve stock for the canning and preserving period. To accomplish this to the extent that is desired, so that no part of our fruit or vegetable crop this year may be lost on account of shortage of sugar, requires the intelligent co-operation of the public, especially of private homes.

Goes Back to Orient.

With the close of its last session the Toronto University loses one of the picturesque figures among its under-graduates, Miss Hanayo Sakamoto, of Tomioka, Japan, who for two years has been a student in Household Science. She has just completed the one-year's teachers' training course, which includes dietetics, chemistry, methods of teaching and so forth. Miss Sakamoto intends teaching household science to her own countrywomen when she returns home, and will be the pioneer in this work in Japan. It is quite probable, however, that she will spend this winter in New York taking a course in the Y.W.C.A. Secretaries' Training School there.

During her student days in Toronto Miss Sakamoto has become very popular with her class mates and taken part in the social and athletic activities at Annesley Hall, where she has been in residence.

An Act of Love.

The editor of American Magazine asked Private Peat one day to tell him the most tender, gentle thing he ever knew a soldier to do. He answered: "After the first gas attack at Ypres, in April, 1915, I was knocked out for a while and was in the clearing station at Merville. One day when I was lying there on a stretcher a poor, miserable soldier came in. He was covered with mud and blood. He was minus his overcoat and his tunic was torn by shrapnel. He was soaked to the bone, for it was raining, and he was shivering with cold and pain. The nurse hurried to him and asked him what had become of his overcoat. 'Oh,' he said, his teeth chattering, 'my pal was killed back there, and he looked so cold, lying there in the rain, I took off my coat and put it over him'."

Our War Orders.

According to figures compiled by the Monetary Times, Canada's war orders from the outbreak of war to the end of 1917 totalled $1,812,000,000, and during 1917 the value of munition orders totaled $338,000,000. The volume of munition orders placed up to September 30 was $262,000,000, of shipbuilding orders, $46,730,000, and of all orders since the outbreak of the war, including shipbuilding, $972,000,000. The number of people engaged in the munitions industry in Canada was approximately 225,000.

A Story of Crucifixion.

Corpl. James Irving Parker, of Chicago, who recently returned from the western front, where he drove an ammunition truck for the French army, but who now is an enlisted man in the U. S. Signal Corps, relates a story of German atrocities culminating in the crucifixion of fifteen Canadian soldiers.

"We were moving forward in the Chemin des Dames drive last October on the heels of the fleeing Huns," says Corpl. Parker. "A crowd of truck drivers was billeted for a few hours' sleep in one of the French chateaus which the Huns, in their flight, had failed to destroy.

"We were congratulating ourselves on the excellence of our quarters when a poilu appeared and said in broken English, 'Americans, come with me.' We followed him up a broad, winding staircase and entered a room that must have been thirty feet square. On the walls of that room hung fifteen crucified Canadian soldiers. Five hung on each of three of the walls.

"Four spikes to a man were used in the crucifixion, one through each wrist and one through each ankle. The victims were thirteen privates and two officers, all in full uniform. There were no wounds on the bodies of the men other than those made by the spikes."

A Canadian regiment had been placed at this point of the Chemin des Dames sector about two weeks before to relieve the war-worn poilus, Corpl. Parker explained, and a few days before the drive thirty of them had mysteriously disappeared.

Parker, who is home on two months' leave after being gassed, is the son of James J. Parker, a real estate broker at 69 West Washington street, Chicago.

No Cause for Alarm.

An unfortunate impression has got abroad, according to Mr. Fred Abraham, Chairman of the Garden Section of the Food Board, that home canning is dangerous on account of boltuism, a form of ptomaine poisoning. This has been given currency through some remarks made at the recent medical congress held in Hamilton. "Boltuism is not a new disease, nor can it occur if vegetables are thoroughly sterilized," said Mr. Abraham. "If all home canned fruits and vegetables are cooked poisoning cannot occur. This point has been missed by a good many readers and has caused anxiety in the minds of amateur gardeners whose fears are naturally easily aroused in the absence of knowledge. It is especially unfortunate that any misapprehension should exist at a time when every ounce of food that can be produced will be required. I, therefore, strongly urge everyone who can produce garden truck to do so on the widest possible scale. Women and children can especially help in this branch of production."

English Slang Has a Come-Back.

Investigation of the origin of certain slang terms necessitated in the elucidation of a Thames police court case in London recently disclosed that the English of two centuries ago used to speak of "roasting" a person just as Canadians have used the term in recent years.

THE GRACE OF EXTRAVAGANCE.

In an ocean of Thrift and Economy Language it is refreshing to hear a few words of commendation for the free spender, miscalled often the Extravagant one. The following sounds more like Arthur Brisbane, the noted New York editor, than the editor of the Methodist Christian Guardian, but it sounds just twice as pleasant coming from the organ of the Methodists, who are sometimes looked upon as being "tight-wads" as a rule:

> We would hesitate at placing extravagance among the virtues only that we find many evidences that Jesus Himself actually placed it there. And any one who may not be convinced that He did, let him read over again some passages in the New Testament, and notably the story of the anointing at Bethany. Jesus had a great deal to say about the use of money, but it is never once recorded that he had anything to say about a wise economy in its use, or that He extolled at any time the virtue of carefulness or caution in the handling of it. Perhaps that was because He felt that there was no need for laying emphasis there. We do find, however, that time and again He placed the spendthrift impulses and instincts high among the Christian graces, and gloried in the deeds of men whose spirit of enthusiasm and extravagance led them to do gloriously uncalculating things. But there is this to be remembered, the extravagance that Jesus rejoiced in was never an extravagance of self-indulgence but always of devotion and love and service to others.

UNITED STATES APPRECIATION OF BRITAIN.

Since the United States lined up with the Allies against Germany the bond of blood-brotherhood has caused many old prejudices to be cast off forever and the unselfish sacrifices and unconquerable spirit of Britain is now appreciated and acknowledged by Americans. The following editorial from the New York Times illustrates the change of sentiment which the war has inspired:

> It is four years ago since England cast her fate with France against the Germans. We Americans have learned much since that day of confusion and tumbling faiths. We have learned, for one thing, how difficult it is to educate a people to a new world, the world that was then revealed. We had lived and thought peace, as had England. And in a twinkling a monster was revealed striking at the heart of civlization. England, like ourselves, was called upon to readjust her whole philosophy, to remake her whole national mind. And she was required to do it overnight. For us there was time, as events proved, time to waste in vanity and sloth. For England there was no time.
> What England then did on that 4th day of August, 1914, will always stand as one of the clearest acts of courage and decision that a great nation has ever committed. There was a confusion of voices in England, naturally. Germany sought by every wile to keep England out of the war. There was endless opportunity for debate and sophistry. And England did not debate. Is there such a thing as national instinct, national intuition, in such an hour? Whatever the source, the finest and truest of England took command. Face to face with a deadly monster, wantonly over-running innocent Belgium and striking for peaceful France, England drew her sword with splendor and with righteousness. The words of Mr. Asquith in the House of Commons cannot be reread too often:
> "We are fighting, firstly, to fulfil international obligations which, if entered into by private individuals, no self-specting man could have repudiated; and secondly, to vindicate the principle that small nations are not be crushed in defiance of international good faith at the arbitrary will of a strong and over-mastering power. No nation ever entered into a great contest with a cleaner conscience or a stronger conviction. It is striking for the defence of a principle, the maintenance of which is the vital civlization of the world."
> Four years of Allied discussion have not added materially to these clear words of right and justice with which England made her swift decision.
> What she declared, that she did. The whole army of England was flung forthwith to the support of France without thought of what might come after. The cool gallantry of that wonderful little force was not more superb than the calm courage of the government and the nation which thus habardd is last fighting man in support of its honor.
> The years since have been solemn and dark for England. It is not in the Englishman to do his labor romantically. It is in the English character to do much doggedly and unintelligently. 'Dogged does it.' There have been ups and downs in the English heart and will, as in every other nation at war; but the will to win has never faltered and her men and women have fought the fight against odds with true British determination. At each wound and rebuff the old lion has shaken his mane and returned to the fight harder than ever.
> We are fighting side by side with our British allies as with our French allies. Our cause is as unified as our command. Old hostilities seem a world away. Not only admiration for all that England has done, but understanding has entered our hearts. The Tricolor, the Union Jack and the Stars and Stripes are bound on the same errand, and please God they shall never part.- That is the message of good will and heartfelt greeting we woul dsend across to old England on this her proudest day.

The fate of the Kaiser as demonstrated by Alderman Hanna at the civic joy celebration fits in perfectly with the feelings of many Belleville citizens According to Alderman Hanna's demonstration Kaiser Bill's end should be slow and lingering, and his last end should be worst than his first. Horrible thought! but we just can't help thinking that the Alderman's object lesson sort of filled the bill as a popular suggestion of one method of execution deserved by the Butcher of Berlin. Of course there are several thousand other methods by which the Kaiser could be bumped off quite acceptably, but publication should be delayed pending his capture.

Belleville Boosters will Boost a Free Bay Bridge as the one thing needful to free intercourse with Prince Edward County. Property increases in value in progressive communities but decreases and is a drug on the market in communities where the spirit of progress is dead.

OTHER VIEWS

Moving the American Troops.

New York Times

Hitherto Great Britain has been able to take more American troops to France than we have moved. In the months of April, May and June 638,000 men were transported, according to Sir Joseph Maclay, Great Britain taking over 331,000. The proportion has been maintained during the whole period. The United States, however, seems to work more quickly with its available ships, an advantage due to the excellent organization at the French port taken over. As the British Controller recently arranged for a larger contribution of tonnage, it may presently appear that Great Britain is carrying more American troops than ever.

Nothing is said about the co-operation of the two navies in convoy work. That is another story and will be almost as wonderful. The British Controller sounds the warning that supplying the millions of American soldiers destined for France is going to strain the common resources. "The military problem in the last analysis," he says, "is a tonnage problem. The war for the Allies is first, last and all the time a question of ships, and yet more ships."

A Case of Shell Shock.

Bruce Herald.

On visiting his hen coop on Thursday last, Bill Lumly was startled to find an egg lying in the nest that looked more like the product of an ostrich than the output of an ordinary unsophisticated town hen. On picking it up it rattled like a Ford car, and his curiosity becoming piqued he decided to open it, and, as it were, peek into the big tent. What he saw when he got his peepers working was none other than a second egg resting as comfortably as Jonah in the whale. As both eggs had well developed shells, it was something of a "shell-shock" that Bill got.

Banquetting a Crook.

Brantford Expositor.

Admiral von Hintze, German Minister of Foreign Affairs, has given a banquet to the exiled Abbas Hilmi II. of Egypt, whom he describes as the "rightful ruler of Egypt, to whom that country owes its prosperity." Yet Abbas was deposed for his dishonesty, not by the English, but by a native tribunal, and he became the representative of the enemies of British occupation, a prop of the Egyptian Nationalists and the forces of foreign intrigue. Egypt owes its prosperity as much to such a rogue as it does to Lenine and Trotsky, Russia's Mutt and Jeff.

What Ailed Willie.

There was a sound of revelry by night. Mr. Bloggs was singing "'Tis Love that Makes the World go Round" and Master Bloggs seized the opportunity to slip into the other room with his father's pipe.

Shortly afterward it was apparent that Willie wasn't well.

"Goodness, child!" cried his mother; "have you been smoking?"

"'Tain't that, ma," said Willie feebly; "if it's true what pa's been singing about I—I must be in love."

GOTHAM'S HEART OPENED

New York Herald.

It has remained for a little gold bar containing five stars to unlock the cold heart of New York. Mrs. J. H. Barnes, of Crown City, Ohio, declared at the Majestic Hotel, where she is stopping, that "she feared she was being spoiled."

Three of her sons and two grandsons are fighting for Uncle Sam, and she said the people of New York had treated her very much like a queen since she had been here visiting one of her sons at Camp Upton.

"In stores I am waited on first," she said. "In all public conveyances men jump up and give me a seat as if I were some young and beautiful girl. The other night I could even buy two seats for the theatre. The box office man gave me the seats when he saw my service bar and even paid the war tax. In restaurants the waiters are solicitous. In fact, I do not deserve so much."

Mrs. Barnes said she had received particular attention from the soldiers she met on the streets and in the hotels here. They seem to realize more fully than any one else, she said, that she had made a very large sacrifice, and they always bowed, tipped their hats and smiled at her.

"No one will ever be able to tell me again that New York hasn't a big heart," she said, "for it has shown it to me in the last few days."

G.W. Miller Has Gained 32 Pounds

Improvement of Former Postmaster Surprises All of His Friends

Remarkable, indeed, was the statement made by G. W. Miller of 232 McNab Street, Hamilton, who recently declared that he has only gotten complete relief from rheumatism and stomach trouble by taking Tanlac, but that he has actually gained thirty-two pounds in weight besides. Mr. Miller was for twelve years Postmaster and merchant at 69 Corners, Brant County, and is well-known and respected throughout Southern Ontario. Mr. Miller's complete statement follows:

"As a result of rheumatism and stomach trouble I had fallen off to one hundred and fifteen pounds. I now weigh one hundred and forty-seven pounds, which puts me even beyond my normal weight, and I don't think have ever felt better in my life. I was so sick and crippled up that I had to sell out my business and get a man to take charge of the Post Office. My legs had perished away until they were no larger than my arms—I couldn't bend them—the leaders seemed to be tied in knots and hurt me so I could hardly bear anything to touch me. I just could manage to hobble around by the use of a walking stick. My stomach was so upset that I could hardly eat anything.

My improvement on a few bottles of Tanlac has astonished me and all who knew of my awful condition. My appetite is so big now I can hardly eat enough to satisfy me, and I can eat anything—meats and all kinds of vegetables—and nothing hurts me. The rheumatism is all gone out of my legs—I don't have to use a cane any more—and I can walk any place I want to go.

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lattimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

NO MORE TROPHIES FROM THE BATTLEFIELD

No longer are the British soldiers on leave seen streaming out of the big railroad stations with trophies of the great war in the form of a German helmet, rifle bayonet or a few odd bombs and shells to decorate the walls of their home. An army order long since issued, but only very recently put rigidly into effect forbids the carrying off of these trophies from the battle-field, and now the hawk-eyed military police watch the leave boats.

But all the orders in the world and all the precautions ever invented will not stop souvenir hunters. And the Tommies have the craze worse than the nimble-fingered gentry who used to specialize in railway straps, hotel soap and towels and chips of granite from old castles.

To carry the stuff home the soldier will try all sorts of subterfuge. They will carry their souvenirs about with them from rest billets to the trenches, sometimes even refusing to dump it when going into action. They guard their treasures like a diamond for months, and will sacrifice little comforts that means so much in the line in order to stow a harmless German bomb or the fuse-cap of a shell in their sack.

Men have left their own rifle with the quartermaster or in some unauthorized quarter and carried off a German one in a waterproof case past the picket at the boat. Pieces of bombs and shell have been bound in putees because haversacks are liable to be searched and extra pockets have been sewn into tails of overcoats to hide forbidden souvenirs.

To work for four years with greater speed, cheaper, and with only brief and local interruptions compared to the choked transportation of neighboring countries, to be cited in those foreign countries as an example of competent long-distance operation—and then to be blocked or hampered by labor trouble! This was the anti-climax which the Canadian Railway War Board, under which all Canadian Railways are operated nowadays, strove to avoid and finally did overcome by creating, with the assistance of the Government and the labor unions, the Railway Labor Board of Canada. The accompanying photograph was taken after the meeting between railway labor leaders and the railway managers, at which the new Board was finally formed and commissioned to adjust the application in Canada of the McAdoo Scale of Wages, as well as any other controversies that may arise between the workers and their officers.

In the picture there are shown not only the senior executives of some of the most powerful labor organizations in the world, but an equal number of great railroad managers, including Sir George Bury, the expert operating Vice-President of the C. P. R., whose report on the railroads of Russia brought him knighthood. The picture was taken in the Canadian Railway War Board offices after this group had formed the Railway Labor Board of Canada, which will handle in future all railway labor troubles and will adjust the McAdoo scale of wages to Canada's 147,000 railway employees.

"Give it to me," said Lizzie calmly, though her face was deathly white, but not so white as that of Maraquita's infant, which lay calm and peaceful in the sleep of death, with a discolored bruise upon its little forehead, where the cruel stone had struck it.

"She is dead:" said Lizzie solemnly, as she placed the body on the table. She did not shed a tear as she did so, but Hugh Norris, looking up at her, marked the deep lines which surpressed emotion had drawn upon her forehead, and thought he had never seen her look so stern before.

"My poor little Mary," she said, in a low voice, as she gazed upon the infant's dead form. "This is the first-fruits of the Beauregard rebellion, Hugh! They have risen at last, and they will not stop here! What will become of them at the White House."

"We must give the alarm at once," said Captain Norris. "They may not be prepared for the outbreak. But Lizzie, I will not go and leave you here! If you wish your friends to be put on their guard, you must come with me."

"It is too late," she answered. "they are already upon us! We should only walk into their midst. Listen to that—"

She held up her finger, and Captain Norris could distinctly hear the yelling of a mob of coolies advancing on the plantation, and see the flaming torches which they carried in their hands, whilst in another moment two or three random shots proved that they were carrying firearms, and prepared to use them.

"The devils!" cried Norris. "Is it possible that they have the heart to injure you, after all you have done for them?"

"No, no, massa!" exclaimed the yellow girl; "coolies never hurting Missy Liz; they love her too much for dat. Only dey want revenge on Massa Courtney and de Governor and Missy Quita. Missy Liz, dey will fire de white House for sure, and kill de Governor! Hark! they hab passed oder side of plantation. Dey go by Oleander Bungalow to de big house, and nebber come near Missy Liz at all.'

"They have come near enough, in killing my poor baby!" exclaimed Lizzie, weeping, as she kissed the dead child. "If they love me, why couldn't they have spared her?"

"'Cause she belong to dat De Courcelles, and grow up bad like him and Missy Quita. Dat what dem trashy niggers says," replied Rosa, joining her sobs to those of her mistress.

"Is it possible this child belongs to Lady Johnstone?" demanded Norris.

"Oh, hush, Hugh! don't mention it, even here!" said Lizzie. "I have kept the secret for her sake—not his."

"Oh, my brave girl, your love has indeed earned a martyr's crown!" he answered, looking at her with the deepest admiration and respect. "But hark, Lizzie! Surely the mob have turned this way."

At that moment a kind of sudden rush through the darkness outside was followed by the entrance of Mr. and Mrs. Courtney, with Maraquita and Sir Russell Johnstone! The women were in their evening dresses—half fainting with fear, and their protectors were almost as agitated as themselves.

"Lizzie," cried Mr. Courtney, "give us shelter, for God's sake Hide us in your rooms, and this murderous crew will not dare to follow us there. They are fond of you, Lizzie, and they will believe what you say. Make them hear reason, in Heaven's name! or we shall be slaughtered before your very eyes!"

'Quick! quick! in here!" she exclaimed, as she thrust the whole party into her own bedroom, and closed the door. "Go with them, Hugh," she said, when they had concealed themselves, "and let me bring these mutineers to reason."

"And leave you to fall a prey to their baffled wrath, or become a billet for the first bullet that strays this way, Lizzie," he answered tenderly. "No, my dear. You have said you love me; and if we have to die, we will die together.

Before she could answer him, a crew or dusky faces were surrounding the bungalow, blocking up the verandah, pressing into the doors and filling up the framework of the windows.

"Whar's de Gubnor and de planter? Is dem in hiding here?" they shouted. "Gib dem up, Missy Liz, or we must enter the bungalow, and we doesn't want to do that. Gib dem up, missy, and don't you be skered—no nigger hurting one hair ob your head."

'I'm not afarid of you for myself, my friends," she exclaimed, standing out boldly to the front, and facing the crowd of rebels, "for you have always been good and kind to me; but if you love me, you will go away to your own quarters, and leave my house alone!"

"D'rectly we finds re Gubnor and de planter, Missy Liz. But we'se sworn to ruin dem, and we must do it—dat's so!"

'And de Gubnor's wife!" shrieked a female voice that might be heard all over the bungalow. "Dat gal what pretends to be so good, and dat is de moder of that baby you keep, Missy Liz. She and Massa Courcelles know all about dat chile; and I wish dey could swing together!"

"Hush, Jerusha, hush! Go away, and keep your evel tongue to yourself!" cried Lizzie.

"Dat's true, and you know it, Missy Liz. And de Governor shall know it, too, and Massa Courtney, and all de world, dat she am no better than de poor coolie gals what go all wrong.

"Jerusha, I implore you for God's sake!" commenced Lizzie again.

But before she could finish her entreaty, Maraquita had pushed opened the bedroom door, and stood beside her, pale and trembling, not courageous, except with the courage born of despair.

"It is true!" she gasped, rather than said, "and I am ready to confess it. No, Lizzie, don't try to prevent my speaking. Everybody may hear me now. I can suffer in secret no longer. Father, I am not what you thought me! I am a sinful girl, and I have let the burden of my shameful secret rest on Lizzie's shoulders. These people only say what is true. They hate me for what I have done, and want to revenge themselves on us all, for my sake. Perhaps, now that I have confessed my sin, they will pity and forgive me."

She sunk exhausted with fear and shame and fear on Lizzie's shoulder as she finished her recital. Sir Russell Johnstone and her parents were standing by, horror-struck by what they had heard, and forgetful of their own safety in the agony of witnessing her humiliation. But Lizzie was the only person who addressed her.

THE WAR-WEARY HUN.

Poem Distributed to Men in the German Trenches.

An interesting letter has been received by Mrs. H. J. Johnson, of Toronto, from her husband, Lance-Corporal H. J. Johnson, now with a machine gun section of the 102nd Battalion in France. The letter is in German and is one of many, which were dropped from allied airplanes while flying over the German lines. The idea is said to have been conceived by Lord Northcliffe, and is designed to give the Huns a true insight into conditions as they actually exist.

The letter, translated into English, follows:

"A Voice From the Grave."

(Poem from the diary of a German soldier, who fell a victim to the proud lust for power.)

"A Soldier's Fate:

"I was a soldier, but I was so reluctantly. They did not ask me to enlist but dragged me away to the barracks. I became a prisoner, hunted down like a wild beast. I had to go from my home, from the heart of my beloved, and from the circle of my friends. When I think of this I am filled with yearning and my heart burns with indignation.

"I was a soldier, but only against my will. I did not like the gaudy uniform. I did not like the hard military life. A stick would suffice to defend me, and if I am to go into the field, then I am to kill my brothers, not one of whom has done me any harm. For this, a cripple, reap care and humiliation, and starving, I would then cry—'I was a soldier!'

"I was a soldier! Day and night I had to march instead of attending to my business. I had to be on guard instead of being free. I had to salute and behold the arrogance of many a knave.

"Oh, tell me, why are there soldiers at all? Every nation loves rest and peace alone, but only for the lust of power and to cause injury and to cause the gold fields to be trampled down.

"Therefore, up Brothers! Germans, French, Hungarians, Danes or Flemish—whether your trousers be white, black, red or blue. Extend a brother's hand instead of a leaden greeting. Up! Let us advance to a struggle for peace and free our nation from its oppressors! Let those who wish wage war. I, fain, would be a soldier of liberty."

$500 for Pair of Pyjamas.

The New York Sun tells of a subscription "bee" for the Sun's fund to buy tobacco for soldiers, held at the Hotel Shelburne, Brighton Beach. Pte. Peat made two speeches and did some of the auctioning of articles contributed for the fund. The Sun proceeds:

And, besides several others, there was Alfred Rogers, merchant, of Toronto, Canada, present, with his wallet, a generous heart and an abundance of patriotism.

The first article offered for sale at auction was a pair of Billy Burke pyjamas, wonderfully dainty and pretty.

"What am I bid for this adorable garment?" called Miss Tucker.

"Five hundred dollars," shouted Mr. Rogers.

The first bid was the winner.

"Thanks a thousand times," said Miss Tucker in delivering the purchase.

"No thanks are due me," Mr. Rogers protested. "I'm a Canadian and I was moved by that speech of Pte. Peat's. Peat's one of us, you know. And, besides, I lost a brother in France. If I can help any of the fellows over there I'm doing only my little bit. And I don't know of any better way of helping than through the tobacco fund."

Halibut Catch Dwindles.

The Vancouver Province publishes the following news item: There is no doubt that the halibut are vanishing from the known banks up north and are seeking new grounds, for the halibut fishing fleet is having very bad luck. Steamer after steamer arrives and hails small catches, although the weather has been good. In many cases, the fish brought in do not pay the expense of the voyage. The steamer Kingsway has come in with 20,000 lbs. of halibut and 15,000 lbs. of cod after a trip of three weeks. This is very expensive fishing. Not so many years ago the steamers used to bring in from 200,000 lbs. to 300,000 lbs. and sometimes 400,000 lbs. a trip, and were only out a week or ten days.

The declining supply of halibut has placed this fish in the luxury class, and people who wish to provide cheap substitutes for meat must turn to other varieties of fish. There is a large number of edible fish which are available at low cost. We have no right to complain that the cost of fish is high if we limit our demand to halibut and a few such luxury varieties.

Gets Order of British Empire.

Mrs. Watt, of Victoria, B.C., whose name is among those honored by inclusion in the Order of the British Empire, is one of the Canadian women who has done good work on this side of the water. She has organized successfully Women's Institutes in the United Kingdom, and has been active about food production. Mrs. Watt, who was Miss Madge Robertson, an M.A. of Toronto University, has a young son in the army. After being wounded twice fighting with an old country regiment, he is now on Gen. Currie's staff.

LORD OF LUMBERJACKS.

Gen. Alexander McDougall Is an Astonishing Man.

Famous in Canada, from one end of that great Dominion to the other as a masterman, a man of imagination and audacity, Gen. Alexander McDougall, who at forty years of age is Director-General of the Canadian Forestry Corps, has made a like impression upon those Englishmen who have encountered him on this side of the Atlantic.

He is not so much a remarkable as an astonishing man, a man who takes your breath away and scatters to the wind a number of your prejudgments concerning the proper behaviour of civilized men. "Most people are other people"; but here is a fresh-minted soul stamped with no image now in currency. The life force within his sturdy body is of so driving and fierce an energy that it could no more stop to copy other people than it could spend ten minutes before a looking-glass in search of its reflection. This life-force has one passion, and that is work; it is in his work, and the bigger and the harder that work the more he is pleased, that the spirit of Alec McDougall, quite unconsciously, affirms its own essence. He lives in achievement.

"Say," he cries, "I'll tell you something that will make you laugh. Listen now. When our fellows got over here they thought they'd come to cut faggots. They thought that was all the timber they'd find in the little island. But when the train was running out of Liverpool one of 'em, with his eyes starting out of his head, calls out, 'Why, dam it, there's a big tree!" and then jumping up and looking out of the window he exclaims, 'Why, dam it, there's two or three trees.' Since then they've cut down a tree in Windsor Park seventeen feet in diameter, and looked at one still living that's mentioned in Domesday Book." Here the general flung back his head and laughed till the room seemed to shake.

Consider these figures. The Canadian Forestry Corps, the whole expenses of which are defrayed by the Canadian Government, have provided us here in England with 300,000 tons of sawn timber a year, exclusive of 5,000,000 tons of mining timber cut in 12 months.

"The boys are splendid," says the general. "There's not a man among them who isn't in this war up to the neck. The Germans can't beat them. They've made big sacrifices to come over here, and but for them the war would have been lost a year ago, that's a fact. Timber essential. Lucky for us you've got it here—thanks to your sporting landlords of a hundred years ago. Wonderful timber! But England's wonderful altogether. After the German offensive in March the army sent out a sudden demand for 40,000 tons of timber, wanted at once. Our boys were so keen they worked all hours God ever made (because it was for the men at the front), and they provided 30,000 of the 40,000 tons ten days before the date fixed for delivery. 'They can hustle, I tell you, when they've got a reason. One of our sawmills over here was designed to cut 20,000 feet of timber in ten hours; the actual performance in that time was 155,366 feet. Some output, what? Ah, I tell you, they're fine."—From the London Chronicle.

New Canadian Section.

An important development in the administrative organization of the Canadian overseas military forces has recently taken place. It consists in the formation of a Canadian section at the British General Headquarters in France. The section is a branch of, and responsible to, the Ministry of Overseas Forces in London.

This new department is an outcome of the desire on the part of Canada to maintain as complete control as possible of her own forces. Sir Edward Kemp has, for some time past, been negotiating with the Imperial authorities, and has been successful in establishing the principle that the Canadian authorities should have complete control of all matters relating to organization and administration of the Canadian overseas forces, with the exception of those which directly affect military operations.

This section at General Headquarters will be a direct and convenient channel whereby the Canadian viewpoint may be presented in those matters which require reference to General Headquarters, and through it documents and communications relating to such matters will be forwarded direct to the Canadian Overseas Ministry in London, and vice versa, for consideration, instead of going through channels which in the past have caused more or less delay. It is understood that the head of the new section will be Brigadier-General J. F. L. Embury, C.M.G.

War Prices.

An Indian in one of the Western reservation was in the habit of bringing to Mrs. Gray each spring several baskets of wild berries for which, from time immemorial, he had always charged fifty cents a basket. A few days ago he paid his annual visit to Mrs. Gray's back door. The maid took the berries and tendered the usual payment. The Indian shook his head. "One dollar a basket now," he said. The maid called her mistress and explained the difficulty. Much surprised, Mrs. Gray again offered the money to the Indian, who once more refused to accept it. "The baskets are the same size as usual, are they not?" "Yes." "Well, then, why isn't fifty cents a basket enough?" The Indian shifted from one foot to another quite calmly. "Hell big dam war somewhere," he announced. "Berries $1 a basket now."

Woman Wrote the King.

Sent home from the army by the King's personal command, issued through his mother's entreaty, Gilbert Steward is now in Sault Ste. Marie. As Steward was but 16 when he enlisted with the 227th Battalion, and as he had two brothers overseas the mother persistently tried with the Canadian authorities to secure his release without avail. Undaunted she wrote to King George and waited. Her first letter miscarried and she wrote again. His Majesty heard the appeal and gave orders that the boy be returned. The 227th was then in England. Steward was ready to embark for France when he received the order, but did not know how his discharge came about until he returned home.

A Home-like Legislature.

Mrs. Ralph Smith, M.P.P., of Vancouver, devoted herself to her knitting almost constantly during the last session of the British Columbia Parliament, the while Premier John Oliver munched his favorite peppermints.

"Vaudevillians" Are Idlers.

An agitation has been initiated at Ottawa to force the drafting of all fit vaudeville performers under the classification of idlers.

Found Old Sword.

While ploughing at Little Bras d'Or, Cape Breton, a few days ago, Henry King turned up an old cutlass that must have been buried more than two centuries, another relic of the days of French possession under Gen. Boularderie.

A Loss of Beauty.

"I suppose the young men do not regard Miss Barrowcliff as so handsome now that her father has lost his money."

"Well, they don't think she has such a fine figure as she once had."

A Soldier's Idyl

By JESSE ETHEL SHERWIN

Every mother was in tears, ever sister looked sad. Only the thoughtless sweethearts and those who had no relative going to the front seemed indifferent to the occasion.

It was a pathetic picture, for all the brave or mock-buoyant bearing of the boys in khaki. In the minds of all was the sorrowful knowledge that many among the odd five hundred recruits leaving the training camp for an eastern shipping point, were viewing friends and home for the last time.

As to the soldiers, every man was erect, bright-eyed, laughing, joking and singing. One fair-haired fellow seemed to be the prime favorite of the group with whom he marched.

"All got your troubles, fellows!" he jollied. "Free from care I—tra-la-la! Not a living relative in the world, so no weepers, and if I 'get it' on some lone hill, why, no mourners."

There was a tug at his arm as he ranged up with the others on the depot platform to await the backing in of the train. He turned, off came his hat, a gratified flush crossed his face.

"If you please, Mr. Wilbur," spoke a shy, lovely, dimpled girl, scarcely his own age. "Could mamma say good-by to you?"

Roy Wilbur had said he had no relatives or friends in particular. He recognized his mistake. Was not Eva Burt here at his side? And her mother had sent for him! And because he had been poor and obscure he had never dared to raise his eyes with the fervor he inwardly experienced, but now a sudden hope inspired him.

"You have neglected us of late, Mr. Wilbur," spoke Mrs. Burt, but her tones were indulgent, almost caressing. No one could resist the appeal of that boyish, ingenious face and the pathos of his environment.

"Training camp—getting ready to leave," and like fragments of explanation tided Roy through a confused apology.

"We shall think of you wearing this in the trenches," continued Mrs. Burt, handing Roy a parcel containing a sweater. "Home-made, and especially for you, and Eva—"

The young girl fluttered like a timid bird. "It is only a little comfort kit, Mr. Wilbur," she said.

Their eyes met as he accepted the little package. Then Eva Burt burst into tears and hid her face against her mother's arm.

"Poor boy!" said Mrs. Burt, herself deeply affected, and her hand rested upon the uncovered head with a gentleness of a blessing. "I know you will make us all proud of you."

A quick order came from an officer, and, waving his hand in adieu, Roy hastened back into the ranks, a new ideal come into his life at that moment.

"Strike her up!" hailed a comrade, and the unslung ukelele twanged out a melody he could now inspire with genuine appropriation and fervor, "The Girl I Left Behind Me."

At the open window of the passenger coach he was going over the sprightly air to the accompaniment of the voices of his comrades, when the train started up. In the near distance Mrs. Burt was waving her handkerchief in adieu. Eva, standing just behind her, kissed her hand to him. He thrilled. He was no longer friendless nor lonely.

"You're putting the right punch into that song," enthused a fellow soldier, and every note brought new life and courage to dashing, reckless, single-hearted Roy Wilbur.

In the trenches the whimsical little instrument did its cheering duty, and its lovable owner was the soul of that jollity which makes hardship endurable. One night Roy was returning from a visit to a near camp, when a portion of the brigade to which he belonged swept by him, bent on capturing a redoubt somewhat ahead. As he drew aside to let them pass a shell burst directly over his head. He was thrown prostrate, with a dozen ugly wounds.

Roy lay there awaiting the coming of an ambulance following the troop. He was faint, in pain and dangerously hurt, but he unslung the ukelele with which he had been entertaining the camp he had visited. Out upon the clear air rang the notes of his favorite air, encouraging those on the march, and they broke out into resounding cheers.

Roy Wilbur was taken to the hospital, to collapse. Then there was fever, delirium, two months' convalescence, and one fair, sunny morning the chief surgeon pronounced him on the way to recovery.

"Where's my ukelele? I want to celebrate!" were almost the first words Roy spoke, all his old sprightliness coming back to him.

"What do you want with it?" questioned his attendant.

"Want to play, 'The Girl I Left Behind Me!'"

"I'll send it in."

"Wonder if she ever thought of me?" ruminated Roy. "Wonder if—"

"They sent this in," spoke shy, but tender tones, and a girl in the garb of a Red Cross nurse entered the room, the cherished ukelele in hand.

Roy looked up, wondering, then radiant. The girl looked down, delightfully, blushing and quivering with emotion.

At the side of Roy Wilbur stood "the girl he had left behind him!"

The allies are gradually enclosing Roye and the fall of that town is hourly expected. The Germans made several attacks since Thursday, but all are growing weaker.

WHAT CAME OF A LARK

By OSCAR COX

"If I were to lose my fortune," said Frank Atwood to his friend, Ned Colby, at the Athenaeum club, "do you know what I'd do?"

"What?"

"I'd hire out for a coachman."

"You'd have to make it a chauffeur. There are no coachmen any more."

"There are a few. I have no fancy for a machine, but I love a horse."

"If there were any young women in the family there'd be one of these secret marriages that we see so often mentioned in the newspapers, followed by the customary annulment or divorce."

"Oh, no, there wouldn't!"

"I'll bet you there would."

"How could we settle such a bet?"

"By putting the matter to practice. Advertise for a position and when you find one with a pretty girl in the family take it. I'll bet you a hundred that within three months you marry the girl."

"That would be interesting, wouldn't it?" said Atwood thoughtfully.

The upshot of this bit of dialogue was that Atwood advertised as suggested and, after answering several invitations to call and present credentials, at last found a place where there was the required pretty girl. His credentials were wanting, but fortunately he was able to imitate the Irish brogue and claimed to have just come over from the green isle, where he had been chief hostler for Sir Charles O'Malley. Since his employer was not versed in literature he did not appreciate the absurdity.

The bet stood $700 even that within three months Atwood would be at least engaged to Miss Bertha Fosdick, daughter of his employer; $500 more that he would marry her, and $500 more that he would run away with her.

It would seem that Colby should have received odds on such a wager, and if he had been a real coachman twenty to one would not have been enough. But Frank Atwood was a very attractive young fellow and had a smile that no girl could resist. Miss Fosdick was but seventeen, and it was predicted that when the next year her introduction to society should take place she would prove a heart smasher.

Why parents will allow their daughters to pass under the influence of their drivers is a mystery. From fifteen to twenty is an irresponsible age for a girl, and in nine cases out of ten where the sexes are thrown together without restraint, especially where they are young, a match will be the result. At any rate, Miss Fosdick, being permitted to go out alone driven by the handsome coachman, at once fell under her influence. Atwood, being full of the Old Nick, told her that he was a younger son of an Irish baronet; that the family had been impoverished by the loss of a suit in court and he had been obliged to shift for himself. He had come to America, got stranded and, having always been used to horses, had taken up their handling as a vocation.

Quite likely some of the low born drivers who steal the daughters of their employers tell some such yarn as this. Atwood's conscience did not trouble him because he was an American gentleman with a future, and in his own propria persona an excellent match for the young lady. But it served to enlist her sympathies for him, and sympathy is akin to love. She wished to inform her father of what the cabman had told her, but Colby, knowing that such a story going to his employer would result in his being immediately fired, refused permission.

And so the game went on, the handsome coachman driving the pretty Miss Fosdick every pleasant afternoon, and since it was not as pleasant for her to have him perched on the box so far above her she soon came to select a cart to ride in, so that he might sit beside her. Occasionally they would meet some of Atwood's friends, who would stare at him, wondering how any two men could so closely resemble each other as the handsome clubman and this liveried coachman. But Frank would keep his eyes on his horses and brazen it out. On one occasion they met Colby driving with a party of friends, and although Ned, according to agreement, did not give the coachman away, the ordeal was trying.

The outcome of the wager was a compromise. One day Frank Atwood appeared at the club (not in livery) and sat down to lunch with his friend Colby.

"Ned," he said, "what was intended for a lark has turned out seriously. I am going to propose for the hand of Miss Bertha Fosdick and I don't wish the girl I love to be the subject of a bet. I propose that we call the wager off."

Atwood never went back to the Fosdicks in livery. He wrote a long letter to Mr. Fosdick in which he told as much of the truth as it would do to tell, gave him references and asked permission to apply to his daughter for her hand.

It required some time for Mr. Fosdick to be convinced that there was not something wrong about the applicant, but after diligent inquiry he became satisfied that Frank Atwood's social position was excellent and his income ample to support Miss Bertha in the style to which she had been accustomed.

Ned Colby was best man at the wedding.

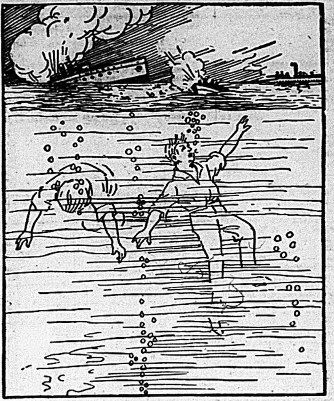
A Spanish ultimatum to Germany says that Spain will take one German vessel found in any Spanish port for every Spanish vessel sunk by German submarine.

REMEMBER
BY GIVING



AT any other time than this, the heroism of the men of the Merchant Marine would fill the newspapers. As it is, you simply read of so many tons of shipping sunk by submarines.

Yet from the few words you read, you must picture scores of scenes like the illustration. 15,000 men of this service, not officially recognized by the governments, have suffered death in order that soldiers, munitions and food may cross the ocean. Remember their widows and orphans, dependent for life itself on your generosity.

Let Your Donation Be An Appreciation of This Sacrifice!

As each day sees new victims of the U-Boat, more and more mouths wait to be fed—widows and orphans, who cannot look to governments for relief.

"They shall not want!" Say this in the only way that counts—by your contribution.

WE MUST listen to the call that comes from the deep—"Remember the Lusitania! Remember Captain Fryatt! Remember the 176 vessels lost, together with all trace of crew and cargo! Remember the 15,000 men of the Merchant Marine, who have already made the supreme sacrifice! Remember the widows and orphans!"

A Canadian Homestead

THE typical homestead of the Canadian prairie is open to the four winds of heaven. It is possible there is a road leading to it, but one should not rely upon that. The ocular evidences of a thoroughfare are not everything in this great, level land. It would be safer to accept the friendly guide of a compass than to be deluded by the path which, now beaten, now dim, here wide and there merging into the ploughed furrows of the "fields," may bob up again by a swamp, or else disappear altogether in the tender haze of the horizon line. The homestead can be seen miles away, a fixed though minute point; the "road," on the other hand, makes no pretense to constancy or permanency.

The homesteader who built the house on the treeless, virgin prairie, or who intends to build one, usually hires himself out to an established farmer in a kind of preliminary apprenticeship. This hiring is one of the essential steps in developing his qualifications. He has to get his hand in, to increase his wherewithal, to acquire the practical knowledge requisite for working his land. As a "homesteader," he has secured a tract of unappropriated land not exceeding 160 acres, on condition of settlement, cultivation and continuous occupancy as a home by him for a definite period, and the payment of certain sums. His initial task is to "break" the prairie, so that the soil can be penetrated alike by sun and frost and transformed into a light, friable mold. So one day, fortified by the hard experience which has helped him to adapt himself to his primitive environment, he gathers to himself some household goods, and probably accompanied and assisted by a wife, treks for the one spot on the lonely prairie which henceforth, for some years, is destined to be his promised land. His other possessions of the portable kind, have the same practical character, to say the least. He must have a waggon, and a pair of oxen or horses, and on to the waggon he loads the greater part of his future home and what is to go therewith. A more incongruous "load" could hardly be imagined. Stovepipes may protrude from the midst of bedding, baskets and lanterns cling like barnacles to the strange-looking "craft." The walls and roof of the new house may be slung, by means of lashings, to the sides just above the springs, while the lowly domestic broom probably sticks up at a rakish angle above the litter at the rear, as if symbolical of that temper which has made a clean and triumphant sweep of all the social encumbrances of the past. For a number of years the homesteader will be called upon to make a sacrifice of almost everything he holds dear, for the sake of this great adventure. The teeming world, the humble fireside, kith and kin, known and loved ways, have been left behind, that he may win his birthright to the soil and gain what, after all, must at times seem to him like a phantom freedom.

A few weeks later his first crude home has arisen on the prairie. There is no architecture to speak of. The shelter is little more than a door and a window with some clapboards arranged rectangularly around them. Owing to the race with time and the hurry to conquer the earth, the ends of the clapboards are not sawed off. The stovepipe now stands like a flagless pole above the humble wooden roof. Water barrels and sacks are littered about. There is a grinding wheel, and a bench. Probably there is a tent to relieve the solitude of the shack. There may be a hencoop and a woodpile. A trail, newly-made, may run left and right from the lowly threshold and lose itself in the field. But ploughed furrows are sure to be everywhere, to come up to the door and almost touch it, for nothing must run to waste. Where everything, the man, his cattle, his wife, must yield of their utmost, there is no room for such frivolities as yards and gardens, or hedges or flowers, or lanes and trees. Is not the railroad only two hours' ride away, the schoolhouse a short twenty miles distant, the big town of the prairies a scant day's journey?

It will, of course, be two years before the first crop is garnered, another year, perhaps, before the first rude shanty, with some improvements, will give place to the comfortable farmhouse with its barn, machine shed, granaries, pig pens, and, luxury of luxuries, the telephone! And another five years after that? The homesteader rests for a moment over his plough as he pictures in his mind's eye the coming town, with stores and churches, the paved roads and the political caucus, his election to a seat in the local Legislature and, it may be, his final return to the beloved beaten ways of life which he left when he set out in search of the heritage of the prairies.

Sunk Submarine.

A cablegram has been received stating that Percy Innis, an old Havelock boy, now of his Majesty's navy, distinguished himself by sinking a Hun submarine at a distance of 500 yards it is stated, and has been recalled to London to be decorated. The submarine was totally destroyed.

Crazed Cow Causes Panic.

While a herd of cattle was being unloaded at Orangeville recently one of the cows apparently went mad, stampeding through the village streets, attacking everyone encountered. Miss Street and Mrs. John Richardson were gored and seriously injured while Miss Eleanor Williams and Mr. J. B. Irwin had narrow escapes.

Sad Ending for Hero.

Lieut. Alex. McClintock, of Lexington, Ky., who went out with the 87th Canadian Battalion, won the D.C.M., and later wrote "Best o' Luck," has committed suicide at New York.

Straw Hats for Firemen.

St. Thomas' firemen have petitioned for straw hats for the summer and the council is thinking over the request, some of the aldermen fearing that the hats might catch fire.

APPRECIATION

is a term we feel permitted to use, as being descriptive of the state of mind of many of our CUSTOMERS who have taken advantage of OUR SUMMER FUR PRICES. The response to our offer of these special PRICES for summer work, has been gratifying to us, and no doubt means some lightening of our HEAVY FALL burden. By no means are we deploring our HEAVY FALL TRADE, far from it; but it is with a view to educating the PUBLIC to the MUTUAL advantages of preparing well ahead of winter to make void its many terrors, by having your FURS attended to NOW. LOW PRICES, FREE STORAGE FURS ALL READY WHEN NEEDED, are to your advantage. It will be easily seen that IF our customers do this, we shall be relieved of many an all-night session in the fall. Thus, by equalizing our working days it would be to our advantage; hence these offers of LOW PRICES

PECULIAR ACCIDENT

A few days ago a peculiar accident occurred at Oshawa. A number of boys were playing and while doing so put some carbite in a can of water and lit it. The explosion which followed was heard for blocks around and resulted in a lad named Harry Witterick having his face cut from his forehead to his chin and severing his nose.

KINGSTON SOLDIER DECORATED

Major Wm. B. Mackie, a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston, who has been at the front with the British artillery since the war began, has been invested with the Military Cross by the King. He is the only son of Rev. John Mackie, D.D., formerly minister of St. Andrew's Church, Kingston.

PRESENTATION TO RITCHIE EMPLOYEE

On Saturday evening at the closing hour The Ritchie Co. Staff met in an informal manner to bid farewell to one of their fellow employees, Mr. Basil Taugher, who is leaving this week for Western Canada. Mr. Taugher has been an employee of The Ritchie store for eleven years and it was quite fitting that his fellow colleagues should express regreat at having to part with him. Mr. F. P. Thompson on behalf of the staff presented Mr. Taugher with a handsome signet ring as a slight token of the esteem in which he was held by all.

PTE. BUNTON WOUNDED

Mr. B. C. Bunton, Pine Street, has received the following message from the Director of Records, Ottawa:

"Sincerely regret to inform you that 636622 Pte. William Thomas Bunton, infantry, officially reported admitted to the 10th General Hospital, Rouen, August 9th, 1918. Gunshot wound left arm." Pte. Bunton enlisted in February 1916 and went overseas with the signallers of the 155th Battalion in October of the same year, and went to France in February 1918; and in June of this year met his brother Ben, who has been in France over three years, who has also been wounded twice and gassed twice.

PRIZE FIELD CROPS

In the standing field crop competition for 1918, the prize winners of Stirling Society, were as follows. S. H. Treverton, Belleville, acted as Judge. Thos. Montgomery, Stirling, Banner Oats, 95½ points; David Fargey, West Huntingdon, Banner Oats, 89½ points; Jas. Bailey, Harold, Banner Oats, 87; Michael Shea, Stirling, Banner Oats, 86½ points; C. M. Sine, Stirling, Censation, 86 points; Arthur Wilson, West Huntingdon, O.A.C. 72, 85 points; T. J. Thompson, Stirling, O. A. C. 72, 84 points. The first five are eligible to exhibit at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto and the Central Canada, Ottawa.

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE

Toronto World: After attempting to end her life twice yesterday morning by shutting herself in a room and turning on the gas, Mrs. Bertie Samuels of Belleville was arrested yesterday evening by Acting Detective Carter of Claremont street station on a charge of attempting suicide. According to the authorities, the woman is visiting Mrs. Glass, 110 Grange avenue for a week, and it is said that at seven o'clock yesterday morning she declared her intention of ending her life. She shut herself in her room and turned on the gas, but her attempt was frustrated by people in the house. A further attempt was made at 10 o'clock, and this time she succeeded in inhaling enough gas to make her condition serious. She was rushed to the General Hospital, where, after receiving medical attention, she was discharged late last night. She was promptly arrested by the police officer on the above charge. Mrs. Samuels has a husband and seven children in Belleville.

IS KINGSTON MAN

Rev. John G. Dunlop, D.D., a leading Presbyterian missionary in Japan, has reached France with a regiment of Chinese workmen for work behind the lines. Dr. Dunlop was born and educated in Kingston, being a graduate of Queen's University. His knowledge of the Orient makes him of great value with Chinese soldiers.

CHURCH PEOPLE PLEASED

The Rev. A. Mansell Irwin, of the Bay of Quinte Conference, instead of removing to Bellecille West, as given in the lists of stations recently published, is remaining for a fifth year at Norwood. The board at its recent meeting increased the salary by $200 and the board have given other substantial evidences of their pleasure in the fact that the term of their pastor has been extended.

JILTED AND ROBBED

Malk Pariskiwa, whose financee, Pauline Gaucil, is aleiged to have stolen $600 from him on the eve of their marriage, has returned to Kingston from Hamilton, and is determined to locate the girl. He believes that she is somewhere in the vicinity, and that she merely sought to make a fool of him. He also thinks that she is married. Photographs of her are being sent through the district.

DISTRICT MEETING SCHEDULE

RUNAWAY HORSE CROSSES LAWN.

A horse attached to an express delivery wagon took fright on Hillcrest avenue this morning and made a sensational runaway, dashing down to Victoria avenue through the hedge to the lawn of Col. Lazier's residence, circling about the lawn but fortunately missing most of the flowers, and then made off up the avenue.

EXPRESS SMASHED AUTOMOBILE

Capt. Coats, of the aviation camp, and a companion, had an experience Saturday night which they will not soon forget. They were motoring in the well-known white car belonging to Capt. Coates and when crossing the C.P.R. at Brighton about midnight the automobile suddenly stalled and would neither go ahead or reverse. The rapid approach of the C.P.R. fast express No. 12 compelled Capt. Coates to abandon the car which was struck by the locomotive and smashed to pieces, being thrown many yards. The express stopped and Capt. Coates and his companion boarded it and returned to Belleville. The car is a total loss. It is said that the cause of the accident was an angle bar dropped from a passing freight train. This iron bar stuck in the crossing in a nearly upright position and penetrated the underbody of the automobile, causing it to stall on the crossing. In the darkness the motorists could not see the obstruction.

LAND FOR SOLDIERS.

Important Order-In-Council Affecting Returned Men.

By the order-in-council making reservations of Dominion lands for returned soldiers under the soldier settlement act it is provided that all vacant and available Dominion lands within approximately fifteen miles on either side of railways in the districts where there are sufficient available lands to warrant reservation shall be reserved for the purpose of the soldier settlement act. A line is drawn along the township lines approximately fifteen miles from the railway on each side, making a belt of thirty miles in width within which all remaining vacant lands are held for returned soldiers.

The reservation is effective against all applications for entries on Dominion lands, except returned soldiers who have their ordinary homestead right and except as to existing rights prior to the reservation. A returned soldier who has not exhausted his homestead right may make ordinary homestead entry in the reserved areas as if the reservation had not been made. Soldier entries under the soldier settlement act will be allowed as soon as the regulations under that act have been completed and passed by council.

All entries throughout the Western provinces which in the past few months have been cancelled or abandoned as homesteads or cancelled grazing leases or lands coming out of reserve, except where rights had been previously acquired, have been reserved for selection by the Soldier Settlement Board, and this process will be continued.

It is further provided that along any of the railway lines throughout Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta and the railway belt of British Columbia, where lands are held under entry and the duties are not being subject to cancellation proceedings for the benefit of the soldier settlement act.

Any returned soldier who produces a letter from the Soldier Settlement Board certifying to his right under the act to entry is given the privilege of applying for the cancellation of any existing entry in default, with a view, if cancelled, to re-entry by himself under soldier entry.

Any returned soldier having his right under the Soldier Settlement Act will have the privilege of applying for a quarter section of any vacant and available Dominion lands, whether it be in a reserved area or not.

Butch In Church.

It was one big surprise for everyone in the machine gun company when the chaplain at last got Butch into the church for Sunday services. Butch is rated as pretty hard hombre—honest, efficient, and faithful as they make them, but not very careful about his language and more than willing to scrap most anyone any time. The chaplain got him one day as Butch was splicing some harness for one of the mules. His line was about like this: "Now, Butch, I'm going to ask you to come to church Sunday morning. I know you don't want to, but I want you to come as a favor to me. If you were out selling lightning rods you'd at least expect a farmer to let you put one on his house for a trial, if it wasn't going to cost him anything. Now, we've been good friends ever since I came to the regiment, haven't we?" Butch admitted they had been.

"Good," he said. "Now, I'm dealing in an article which I claim will cure a lot of troubles. I'm only asking you to try one sample—just one."

Well, Butch was in church Sunday.

The chaplain had been called away just before services, and a visiting chaplain occupied the pulpit. The rest of the fellows, seeing Butch up in front, were glad to have him with them.

The visiting chaplain looked out over the congregation of freshly-shaved, khaki-clad gunners for some one to lead in prayer.

Somehow his eyes fastened on red-haired Butch sitting only a few feet away.

The little congregation of soldiers grew tense as they waited for the chaplain to speak. You could just feel he was going to call on Butch.

He did.

"Will this young man kindly lead us in prayer?" he asked.

Butch got up. Every eye was on him. Everyone wondered how he'd make out, being called on like that the first time he had been to church in years.

But Butch was equal to the emergency.

"Let us have five minutes of silent meditation," said Butch.

Graft In Army.

Capt. Harold Eric Thomas, Canadian Army Service Corps, was court-matrialled in London on June 17. The charges alleged that he had while controlling a workshop at Shorncliffe, employed soldiers in repairing private motor cars and had supplied tires and other military material for the purpose. He was also accused of having built a motorcycle in the same way and of selling it afterward for $150. The cycle was said to have been built secretly and placed in a pit by day. There were also several charges of obtaining money improperly.

It was alleged that while he was acting for Gen. Odlum he bought a car for $625, but charged the general $750. In another case he was charged with selling a car for Major Ewing and returning the price as $375, instead of $500.

Lieut. A. B. Anderson, Army Service, pleaded guilty at the court-martial in London to applying 50 gallons of army petrol to his own use, and confessed that he sold the petrol because he was penniless owing to the expenses of his wife's illness.

Shot a Trespasser.

When Pte. Esther M. Ellis, of the 41st U.S.I., went on sentry go at Sault Ste. Marie locks his orders were to shoot any trespasser. He obeyed orders, and the result is a dead black bear, weighing 175 pounds, which failed to advance and give the password.

Odessa Banker's Fatal Mistake

Took Carbolic Acid Instead of Asthma Cure and Died Few Hours Later

KINGSTON, Aug. 20—Coroner Dr. Northmore, of Bath, held an inquiry into the circumstances of the death of E. P. Wood, manager of the Northern Crown bank of Odessa, which event occurred shortly after midnight on Friday last under sad circumstances. Following the inquiry Coroner Northmore announced that the unfortunate man had taken a dose of carbolic acid in mistake for a preparation which he had been using to relieve a bad attack of asthma from which he was suffering.

It appears that late on Friday night he was feeling unwell, and he went to the office of one of the village doctors to get some of his favorite medicine As the doctor was very busy at the time Mr. Wood reached up on the shelf and helped himself from a bottle from which he had seen the doctor fortunately, he selected the wrong bottle, and it was not a moment until both he and the doctor realized the mistake which had been made. An antidote was immediately used and other doctors were summoned, but despite their greatest efforts the unfortunate man was beyond aid and passed away.

Mr. Wood had been in charge of the Odessa bank for about four years and was everywhere regarded as a splendid character. He has won the highest regard of the villagers and the residents in the surrounding district and his unfortunate passing is everywhere regretted. A pathetic feature is that his young wife and child were summering in the Muskoka district at the time and only arrived in Odessa Sunday. The late Mr. Wood is a nephew of Archdeacon MacKenzie, of Brantford. The funeral took place at Odessa this afternoon and interment was made at Bath.

British Repulse Vicious Attacks On New Positions

With the British Army in France, Aug. 20.—British troops, after capturing Outtersteen ridge, in front of the town of Merris, have beaten off a vicious counter attack and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. More than 500 Germans were captured by the British. The ridge was captured by the British Sunday and the Germans counter attacked last night and this morning. The position, which overlooks considerable ground held by the enemy in the direction of Bailleul, is now in British hands.

On the new Somme front local fighting continues, the entente allied forces biting off pieces here and there all along the line.

Patrol fighting has continued, and there are some indications that the enemy has made up his mind to withdraw from the present front, but would rather go back in contact with the British so as to inflict all the casualties possible by the free use of machine guns and without himself risking many of his own men.

Intense shelling and bombing of enemy rear areas continues. At no point has the enemy organized attacks even against the new outposts of the British.

THREE CHILDREN DROWNED

MONTREAL, Aug. 20—Three children were drowned in full sight of thousands of people at St. Vincent de Paul near here, on Saturday afternoon, when a motor boat travelling at high speed crashed into a row boat in which were Mr. and Mrs. Vaillancourt, their three children and the child of a friend. Only one of the children, that of the friend, was saved together with Mr. and Mrs. Vaillancourt.

Favors Self Govt For United Ireland

Declaration of Lord Chancellor of Ireland Causes Political Sensation

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Political circles have been given quite a sensation by a declaration by Sir James H. M. Campbell, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, that he is in favor of "self-government or a united Ireland." This statement was made by him at a luncheon in Dublin Saturday.

When Sir James was appointed Lord Chancellor in succession to Sir Ignatius John O'Brien, in June, it was believed that the action of the Government meant complete reversal of its Irish policy. His speech, however, proves that he is a convert to Home Rule, according to Liberal commentators, Sir James is quoted as follows:

"From the day the war broke out I determined, regardless of my commitments in the past, and the views of my old political colleagues, that I should endeavor to the best of my ability to bring about a solution, by consent, of the Irish problem on the only lines which it seemed to me held any promise of success—I mean self-government for united Ireland."

Hun Agents Fomenting Japanese Rice Riots?

WASHINGTON, August 20—Food rioting in Japan threatens to develop steps are taken by the Tokio Government to provide rice for the population, according gto the unofficial view here yesterday.

German agent may be working among the masses to stir up disorder by taking advantage of the profiteering situation, which is rapidly becoming acute there, it is believed. Anti annexationists who are strenuously opposing Japanese plans for intervention in Siberia, are also believed to be spurring the people on to bold steps which might unseat the present Ministry.

Allied Eyes In Air Too Keen For Foe

Italian Army Headquarters, Aug. 20—Two captured Austrian documents show the extraordinary mastery the allies have obtained over the enemy in aerial warfare. The first enjoins better protection for the dumps and emplacements against aerial observation by better camouflaging and less military orderliness. The second, which is from a colonel commanding an artillery unit, seeks to explain the impossibility of systematic and effective destruction of allied artillery. This indicates that the allied guns, as well as observation, are superior.

The writer complains of the inferiority of his batteries in number and power, and says the restriction in the supply of amunition has rendered it impossible to comply with the infantry's request for better artillery protection.

SOVIET WILL DECLARE WAR.

Amsterdam, Aug. 20.—Telegraphing from Petrograd the correspondent of the Dusseldorf Nachrichten quotes the Russian newspaper Pravda as saying:

"The Soviet Government will declare war on the entente allied countries. Soviet officials have issued an appeal stating that Russia's position is alarming.

"Russia's intervention in the war is necessary. The removal of the Government to a safe place, consequently, has been decided upon and Kronstadt (the fortress of Petrograd) has been chosen as the seat of authority. All preparations have been made to move the Government offices there."

FRENCH TROOPS KEEP HUNS ON MOVE WITH SLEDGE-HAMMER BLOWS

SMASH GERMAN LINES TO-DAY ON 10-MILE FRONT

NO REST GIVEN ENEMY OR TIME TO RECONSTRUCT SHATTERED FORCES — FOCH IS HAMMERING INCESSANTLY ENEMY AND BREAKING THROUGH DEFENCE LINES BEFORE THEY ARE STRENGTHENED — ANOTHER BIG DRIVE STARTED TODAY ON WIDE FRONT AND FRENCH TROOPS HAD GATHERED 500 PRISONERS BEFORE NINE A.M. — ENTIRE GERMAN LINE IS NOW IN DANGER AND FOE MAY HAVE TO RETIRE TO CHEMIN DES DAMES.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The French Tenth Army this morning attacked on a front of ten miles between the Oise and Aisne rivers and penetrated the enemy's lines for an average depth of two miles, according to despatches received this afternoon.

ENTIRE GERMAN LINE IN DANGER.

This advance of French troops endangers the entire German positions at Soissons and on the River Aisne. It is possible that the Germans will withdraw to Chemin des Dames.

500 PRISONERS BEFORE BREAKFAST.

Before nine o'clock this morning the French had captured 500 Germans in the sector attacked.

FRENCH IRRESISTIBLE ADVANCE.

North of Roye the French have taken Bracquemont and Fendu Woods and have occupied the greater part of Beuvraignes, according to advices. It is also reported that they have made progress to the southeast of Beuvraignes.

ATTACK BRITISH POSITIONS

Four German attacks against British positions at Chilly, about six miles north of Roye, were repulsed during the night. British lines were advanced in the neighborhood of Vieux Berquin and Outtersteen, in the Lys salient, and 182 of the enemy were made prisoners.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—(Official)—French troops during the past night occupied the village of Vassens, northwest of Morsain, between the Oise and the Aisne. There was reciprocal artillery fire in the region of Lassigny and Breslincourt, west of the Oise, the statement says.

NANCY BOMBARDED BY HUNS.

A German aerial bombardment of Nancy was carried out. Six of the civilian population were killed and a score injured.

Live in the Woods By Robbing Stores?

BURK'S FALLS, Aug. 20.—Burglars entered the store and postoffice at Katrine, a small village about five miles south of Burk's Fall's, Sunday morning about three o'clock, and succeeded in getting away with goods and valuables to the amount of one hundred dollars. It is believed that the burglars are part of a gang operating in various parts of the eastern section of the District of Parry Sound. Only a few nights ago Troyer's store at Magnetawan village was entered and some thirty dollars in cash and a quantity of hams, bacon, canned goods and other articles were taken.

The latter were traced some distance in the direction of Sequin Falls by district constable Stewart, but the trail was lost before locating the thieves. At Maple Lake station several shots were exchanged between the storekeeper and the burglars. As the marauders seem to take more food than anything else, it is generously believed that most of them are deserters, who have taken to the woods to evade the Dominion Military Police officers.

TOPPLED OVER BRIDGE

Motor Car Fell 18 Feet Near Perth

Occupants Injured

PERTH, Aug. 20.—Their motor car getting out of control when ascending the steep curving hill at Flower Station yesterday, Mr. A. Gilmore and party of Ottawa, toppled over a bridge at the ravine, a distance of eighteen feet to the ground below. The car turned over, two of the occupants were precipitated into the mud. Mr. Gilmore, the third man in the car, received serious injuries, but will recover. The car was but little damaged and after being drawn back to the roadway by a team was driven home under its own power.

Brighton Youth Was Drowned Trying to Save An Aeroplane

Flier From Deseronto Landed on Beach and Machine Blew Into Lake-- Aviator Exhausted When Saved

BRIGHTON, Aug. 20—A novel and sad drowning accident occurred here yesterday morning when Charles Austin, one of Brightons most respected young men, lost his life. An aviator from Deseronto Camp, landing on the beach here, made the sandy beach alright, but a sudden gust of wind took him into the water, and though he walked ashore himself his airplane was being blown out into the lake. Mr. Austin went with the aviator in a row boat in an effort to get the airplane ashore, but in some way the boat upset and before assistance could get to them in this unfrequented part of the lake, Austin went down. The aviator was picked up later in an exhausted condition.

Up to the time of writing the body has not been recovered though dragging is being done. The airplane was completely submerged, but was towed ashore so that a portion of it is now above water.

A Former Governor Is Killed In Quebec

C.H. Prouty of Vermont Lost Life in an Accident Near Quebec

SHERBROOKE, Que., Aug. 20—G. H. Prouty, former Governor of Vermont, was killed when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by a Grand Trunk train near Waterville yesterday morning.

Mr. Prouty was on his way from Newport, Vt., to take a train at Lennoxville for Jackman, Maine, when the chauffeur failed to observe the approaching engine owing to a dense fog. Mr. Prouty was instantly killed. The chauffeur, J. W. Blay is in the Sherbrooke Hospital, suffering from concussion of the brain.

TRAM STRIKERS NOW 14,000.

London, Aug. 20.—Estimates placed the number of omnibus and street car operators out on strike yesterday in London at 14,000. No omnibuses were operating in the metropolitan area. Several privately owned street car services and a number of suburban municipal services were suspended.

Although the strike order affected a large number of motormen and conductors of the London County Council street car service, which covers the principal industrial districts, reports indicated that many of the men responded to the request of the executive committee nt t strike and that service was said to have not been affected.

The public was greatly inconvenienced by the strike. Taxicabs were unable to supply the demand. The employees of several munition factories because of the absence of omnibuses were late in reporting for work. Hundreds of bicycles were put into use.

Although the Transport Workers' Federation has not declared a national strike, reprts were received this afternoon by the local union of this, indicating that the street car and omnibus employees at Bristol, Brighton, Folkestone and other towns had stopped work.

Caught in Binder Child Mangled

BRANTFORD, Aug. 20—A very sad accident occurred on the farm of Mr. Elgin Patrick, who lives on the homestead between Sheffield and Troy, nine miles from Galt, when his three-year-old son, James, wandered out into the field, evidently in search of his father, who was cutting the crop. He was caught in the binder, with the result that the right leg of the little lad was cut about four or five inches below the knee, cutting through the bone of the leg.

The father was not aware of the childs presence in the field until he heard his screams and he was shocked to find the boy so badly injured. However he probably saved the child's life by his quick action in tying binder twine around the child's leg above the cut, thus preventing bleeding to death The father carried the little fellow from the field and then rushed him to St. George and then to the Brantford Hospital. It is not known yet whether the child's leg can be saved.

To-Day's Casualty List 680

OTTAWA, Aug. 2—Long casualty lists this morning publishes the names of nearly seven men of the Canadian forces. Of these only two killed in action, 16 died of wounds, six hundred and sixty-one are wounded and only one taken prisoner.

To End War In 1919 Is American Plan

United States War Department Would Havn 3,600,000 Men in France By Then

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20—"Eighty American divisions of 45,000 men each," Gen. March told the committee yesterday " should be able to bring the war to a successful conclusion in 1919." That is the number the War Department plans to have in France by next June 30.

He read an official statement showing that on August 1st the American army numbered 3,012,112 men, divided as follows: American expeditionary force and enroute overseas 1,301,742, in the United States and insular possessions, 1,432,706; called in the August draft 277,664

In addition there are about 15,000 marines serving with the expeditionary force. For the present it is planned to send 25,000 men monthly to France, General March stated, adding:

"But we hope to increase that in the spring."

British And French Troops Drive Huns Out of Roye

PARIS, Aug. 19—4 p.m.—The French are in the suburbs of Roye. The British are carrying out a flanking movement north of the town.

Extraordinary artillery fighting is under way in the whole eye sector. The Germans, in a desperate effort to hold the town, are pouring in fresh divisions, which have been withdrawn from other parts of the front within the past past twenty-four hours.

The Germans, though exhausted, are desperately resisting at eye, preparatory to the supreme effort necessary to extricate themselves from their dangerous position. Meanwhile, the enemy is constructing an unusually powerful defensive line to protect Nesle, six miles north-east of oye.

Down With The Germans Yell Food Rioters in Petrograd

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 20.—Hundreds of people were killed and wounded in a regular battle between the Lettish Guards and rioters during food disorders in Petrograd, according to an Amsterdam despatch. The despatch, which quotes Petrograd advices by way of Berlin, says that after the city had been without food for two days a procession of workmen marched through the streets shouting "Down with the Germans!" "Down with the Kremlin!" The battle between the rioters and Lettish Guards occurred before the Smolny Institute. Martial law was proclaimed in Petrograd the same evening.

German Press Says big Retreat Necessary to Give Armies Room

PARIS, Aug. 20—The German press is attempting to reassure its public that a general retreat is necessary on the western front to allow Gen. Lundendorff room to manoeuvre and to assume the initiative on a vast scale, the newspapers report. L'Homme Libre says a German retreat, the newspapers say would be a direct result of the recent allied successes. The newspapers assert that even if the Germans receive reinforcements from Austria they had lost the power to command events, as Marshal Foch has the initiative and will keep it.

German propaganda insists that the German general staff will retain the initiative by forcing premature engagements on the American army and defeating it out before it is fully prepared. L'Homme Libre says that the American forces taking part in the Picardy offensive could not be compared in size with those of the French and British. It says that America will soon have a first class army in France and that it will have airplanes which the German aviators will have reason to fear.

Illicit Liquor Business On Large Scale

TORONTO Aug. 20—Is there a well organized system of illicit liquor trafficking with headquarters in Montreal and financed by men of means who see in the trade chances for big profits? From disclosures made during the last few days it would seem so. It is believed that there has been formed an orgaization whose object is to flood Ontario with cheap liquor which can readily find a market at from $8 to $10 a bottle, and whose ramifications are almost provincewide. The fact that a $10,000 shipment has been seized makes it plain that an ordinary bootlegger is not the man responsible for the big illicit importations—there is somebody higher up. And both the local and provincial police are trying to discover their identity.

It is already known that thousands of dollars worth of liquer is being shipped into Ontario disguised as hardware, electrical fixtures, and merchandise generally. The full extent of the traffic can only be guessed at. The seizures made, however, give an indication of its extent.

In connection with the latest seizure nine arrests have been made, more are expected to follow.

It seems, as far as Toronto is concerned, that the method of smuggling is simplicity itself. A shipment is made at Montreal for some point near Toronto, where it is claimed by expressmen and by them turned over to parties who motor from Toronto. The police have known this for months, but, so far, have been unable, except in a few cases to stop it. With the information they now have however, it is thought they will be in a position to at least materially reduce the traffic which is daily becoming more risky.

The carload of whiskey seized at Pickering on Friday is thought to be one of many shiped to that place, and what has been going on at Pickering is duplicated in other nearby town. In this case provincial and city offiffcers co-operated in making the seizure. They will probably continue to work together at other points until the business is stopped.

License Inspector Ayearst told a reporter for The Sunday World on Saturday that he had not seen the men of his department who were on the job, they had been too busy storing the seized liquor away to report at the office. He also declined to say anything about those "higher up" engaged in the trade.

The Dominion Alliance explained on Saturday that it had adopted the policy of informing the authorities of any cases of illegal liquor selling that came to their notice; they did not prosecute themselves.

SEPTEMBER IN ALGONQUIN PARK

September is one of the most delightful months of the year in the "Highlands of Ontario" and Algonquin Park offers attractions that are not found in other districts. It is situated at an altitude of 2,000 feet above the level of the seas, assuring visitors of pure bracing air that rejuvenates body and mind. A few days here is better than ounces of tonics and saves doctors bills. The territory is also easy of access via the Grand Trunk, 200 miles north of Toronto and 170 miles west of Ottawa. The "Highland Inn," a charming caravansera affords most comfortable accommodation at reasonable rates. Descriptive literature telling you all about it from any Grand Trunk Agent or write Miss Jean Lindsay, Manager Highland Inn, Algonquin Park, Ontario.

Honored Daughter of Canada's First Postmaster-General

Letter From Present Postmaster-General by Aerial Mail to Daughter of Late Hon James Morris

TORONTO Aug. 20—The second aerial mail test between Toronto and Ottawa has produced very satisfactory results, the return trip from Ottawa to Toronto having been made by Lt. Tremper Longman on Saturday in five hours and 35 minutes. Lt. Longman left the capital at 6.50 in the morning and arrived in the city with his mail bag at 12.25 thus rounding out the complete trip from Toronto to Ottawa and return, and showing that the airplane is much faster than the regular train service. Lt. Longman went somewhat out of his way to land at Deseronto extending his stretching out the time of his flight by over an hour. The mailbag included a number of letters which were specially prepared as greeting from Ottawa to Toronto business men. Among the letters was one received by Mr. A. F. Penton secretary of the Aero Club, from the Deputy Postmaster, which letter was delivered to him at 1.25 which cuts off several hours from the regular delivery of Ottawa mail.

Among the letters which came by the aerial post there was one from the Postmaster-General, which paid a nice compliment to a well-known Toronto lady. The wife of Dr. E. W. Spragge is a daughter of the Hon. James Morris of Brockville, the first Canadian Postmaster-General, and Mr. Blondin wrote her as follows

Postmaster-General to take advantage of the first aerial service between our capital city and Toronto to send greetings to the daughter of the first Canadian Postmaster-General, a man who rendered most distinguished service to his country.

"Between your fathers time and the present, great strides have been made in postal affairs, but none so great as the present experiment, which may result in a permanent aerial service, of which we may be proud, as we are now, so proud of the wonderful feats accomplished by our young Canadians overseas.

"Please accept this letter as a link in the chain of progress, in the postal affairs of our country, and believe me, Madam, to be

"Sincerely yours
"P. E. BLONDIN"

Neutral Buying of Allied War Bonds Said to be in the German Interests

Moneyed Huns Said to be Alarmed over Allied Victory, and Buying Bonds as a Hedge Against Hun Defeat— Safety First

NEW YORK, Aug. 20—More and more interest is being aroused in the foreign Government issues, which during the last three weeks have enjoyed very substantial advances. The Anglo-French 5's are now selling at but slightly below the figure at which the public, as participants in the underwriting syndicates, secured these bonds.

Reports have been current that the neutral buying of foreign bonds which has recently been noted in the market has been for the account of German interests who have become alarmed over the turn in the tide of battle against the central empires and are buying the foreign issues as a hedge against the defeat of Germany.

The question of the retirement of a part of the funded debt of the United States Steel Corporation is again being discussed in the street. There are about $75,000,000 par value of steel bonds, of which over $38,000,000 are callable at 110 and the rest at 105. It has been urged from time to time that the Steel Corporation ought to apply some of its extraordinary profits to this purpose, as many of the independent steel companies have been doing.

The foreign exchange market has remained without much feature, with the exception of a substantial advance in Paris exchange. Another $200,000 loan to France on Thursday brings the amount of credit due her from the United States to over $2,050,000,000.

THE CZAR'S END

(New York Times)

"Spare my wife and my innocent unhappy children. May my blood preserve Russia from ruin."

As reported by the Moscow correspondent of the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger the last words of Nicholas, once Tzar and Little Father, show that he died—if not a hero at least a gentleman. To the woman for whom he was so solicitous in his last hour he owed the loss of his throne as Russia owes to her so great a portion of its present troubles. But she was his wife, the mother of his children, and she had shared with him the exile forced by agents of the Germany which she had served.

When the rancors of revolution subside and Russia's history is dispassionately written the chapter devoted to Nicholas will show how unkind was fate to a weak man in decreeing that he should become ruler over his fellowmen and will picture his life a failure—except that to the last he was a gentleman. It is something to have been that.

French troops north of the Oise River, reached the western outskirts of Lassigny captured the village of Pimpre and Zalso, also village of Morsain, northwest of Soissons, together with two thousand two hundred prisoners.

Strict Watch on Motor Cars

Military Authorities Keep Tab on Auto Trips— Left-hand Salute Abolished

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—Henceforth, according to orders from Military Headquarters, all salutes will be given with the right hand. The left hand salute of warrant officers, non-commissioned officers and men is abolished. The exception is the case of physical incapacity, when the salute may be given with the left hand.

A general court-martial to sit at a date to be fixed by Major N. M. Young, the President, is announced to try Ptes. Johnston Marks and Herbert N. Day, and "such other persons as may be brought before the court." The other members of the court will be Majors G. E. B. Begy, and F. P. Myles, and Captains M. W. Wallace and A. B. Lindsay.

It is made clear by orders that railway transport warrants will be issued only to those proceeding on duty, the application to the Administrative Staff Officer stating the nature of the duty and other particulars.

Equally definite is the instruction regarding the use of motor vehicles in the mechanical transport service. These vehicles, officers are informed, are for use only in the immediate vicinity of their posts. To travel ten miles from headquarters in any vehicle, it will be necessary to obtain a special permit from the Director of Transport.

Must Not Speed.

Officers are warned that while travelling in army automobiles no infringments of the civic traffic regulations are permitted, and that each officer will be held personally responsible for any penalty imposed.

The regulations respecting the use of vehicles of the medical transport section, which includes many touring automobiles and motor cycles, are due, in a measure, to the number of men who have been appearing before magistrates for infractions of motor regulations.

Military Headquarters, Ottawa, has noticed that advertisements frequently appear in the newspapers and in journals, asking soldiers to correspond with strangers. It is admitted that many of these are interested with the best of intentions. However, in view of the possibility that news of military value might escape into the hands of the enemy, officers and men are warned that they must not answer these advertisements. The advertisements are usually from some individual who desires to correspond with some lonely soldier.

Wearing War Orders.

The manner in which war ribbons are to be worn is set forth in orders. The Victoria Cross precedes all, including the Orders of the Garter, Thistle, St. Patrick, Bath, Star of India, St. Michael and St. George. Next for merit is the Distinguished Service Order, which is followed by the Royal Red Cross, Military Cross, the Distinguished Flying Cross, Air Force Cross, Distinguished Conduct Medal, Military Medal, Distinguished Flying Medal, Air Force Medal and foreign orders in the date of their award.

Under a new ruling made on Saturday, men who have become residents of Canada since the Military Service Act came into effect are placed in the same class as they would have been if they had resided in Canada when the proclamation was issued. All who come into Canada as residents in future must report to the local Registrar within ten days.

CAPT. A. F. McKINLAY KILLED

Mrs. M. McKinlay, of 16 Brunswick avenue, Toronto, has received word that her son, Capt. A. Frank McKinlay was killed in action on August 8th. Capt. McKinlay enlisted with the 81st Battalion, and for a year before going overseas he was paymaster of the Welland Canal forces. He had held his captain's certificate for five years prior to enlisting, but reverted in England so that he might reach France quickly. Capt. McKinlay resided in St. Catharines before enlisting.

Class Distinction In Canada in Future

The feelings of a returned soldier are described in the following interesting article by a prominent officer who after years' service in France has returned to his civilian occupation in Toronto:

In a paper the other day I saw the sentence, "It seems to be taken for granted that there will be hereafter two classes—those who have seen active service and those who have not." In my opinion this is absolutely correct.

When I first went down town in Toronto after my return from France, and saw great numbers of civilians passing to and fro, with apparently no thought or interest in the war—the only thing I had been able to think of for three years—I wanted to go in and buy a baseball bat and knock down every able-bodied man passing the corner of Queen and Yonge streets.

That is a very common feeling of the returned man who went away in the beginning to fight for conscience sake. For years I had been living at the heart of the great war. Our Canadian soldiers had taken part in many gallant affairs and had made a name for Canada. We had thought fondly of our country back home straining every energy to keep the enemy at bay and help the allied cause. Do you wonder why on our return to cities where everything seemed to be going as it did before the war, where people seemed to be just as intent as ever in making money and interested in all sorts of things that did not count; where the same fighting in newspapers, in the council chamber and on the floor of the House, about things that were really immaterial to the great issue,—that were quite irrelevant to the one problem of efficiently carrying on the war,—do you wonder, I say, that we were filled with amazement, disgust and anger?

Everyone Seemed Prosperous.

Were these the people that we had so fondly hoped were backing up the army with all their resources? Was this the country for which we had been sacrificing ourselves? There was no superficial evidence of suffering or sacrifice anywhere. Everybody seemed to be prosperous and contented. There were no shattered buildings; no lurking fear of air raids; no roll of distant cannon fire, and little evidence of wounded men. It gave one the impression that the war was somehow a myth, a figment of the imagination. But there we were on a busy corner in Toronto in uniform; other wounded men in uniform occasionally drifted by on crutches and we knew that war was no dream.

Made No Sacrifice.

A great hate seized hold upon me; a hatred of these apparently fit men who lacked the essential things that really make a man. Why should they stay at home and live comfortably, snug and safe and warm? Why should we have spent years of misery and danger fighting that such poltroons should live? Why should many of our comrades have died and been buried in the fields of Flanders while such men as these shared none of the burden; played no part in the defence of the Empire; made no sacrifice of life or limb, or even comfort? We recognized many of these civilians. We knew what their business and domestic arrangements were; we knew that some of them were physically as sound as a bell. They had not the look of the returned soldier in their eye,—the look that men wear who have faced eternity and all that it may imply; the look that men wear who have pondered over problems, detached from those things that men strive for where competition and rivalry in material things is keen.

The Great Difference.

"How do you do; I am glad to see you back. I hope you are feeling fit," said one old gentleman, rushing up to me and beaming all over. I assured him that I was and he repeated that he was glad to see me, pumping my hand vigorously all the while. I was a complete stranger to him, but he said he knew my brother. I felt quite cordial to him.

Shortly afterwards a young lawyer I had known for many years came up and shook my hand, while he used almost the same words. He looked so sleek, wellfed and satisfied that I froze inwardly. I thought of the men who had passed through college with him. I knew that some of his greatest friends had since passed the greater test examination and had graduated with honors. I happened to know that he had no obligations whatever in Canada except that the firm who employed him naturally wanted to retain him. And last of all I knew that he had gotten married three years after the war started. Try as I might the inward freezing made itself felt and after a commonplace or two he hurried on.

Go Into Oblivion.

They don't care much about meeting returned men who have played the game, these fellows who stay at home in comfort, wear tortoise shell glasses and hair brushed back like a Hun—both for effect. They have saved their lives but have lost their souls. They have missed the greatest experience that could ever have come to a man. They think they have lived but they are so badly mistaken; they do not know what living is; they know nothing of the spirit of sacrifice, of endurance, of suffering. And later on when the men come back these men of weak fibre will go where they belong—into oblivion; into the heap of discards which are of no further use to man or beast—failures morally and spiritually and therefore of no use in a partially at least regenerated world.

What were all these people doing? I thought to myself as the stream of humanity surged by. How can they be interested in things that don't count? How can they bother with anything that does not bear on the prosecution of the war? What good is it all if we fail to destroy the dreadful beast that has even now its claws in our very vitals?

It looked to me as though a city on fire with the flames slowly but steadily sweeping onward and inevitably bound to destruction was carrying on business while business was good, making all the profit it could be fore the shops and warehouses would be destroyed and the citizens would be left without the means of making money.

A Puzzling Situation.

Why did not the people all get together and put out the fire that was bearing down upon them? Why did they not destroy the agent that would ultimately destroy them by every means in their power? It all seemed so stupid, so futile, so childish.

In the seething crowds I noticed what seemed to me a great increase in the proportion of foreigners. Every nationality in Europe seemed represented and a fair number of square-headed Huns were included in the mixture. Later on I found that some of these enemy aliens were getting up to $10.00 a day—the pay of a colonel at the front. For work requiring little brain they earned as much in one hour as a Tommy in the trenches earned in a whole day. It gave one cause for reflection. Life in a democracy was certainly puzzling.

As I wandered homeward it was with a mind full of bitterness at the inequalities and unfairness in life. I passed men with one leg, one arm, shattered frames, torn and paralyzed bodies, hobbling along the streets and I knew what they thought. I knew after the kindness they had received in English hospitals how they felt at Canada's treatment of returned soldiers. I knew how Canada, the land of romance to the Canadian soldier in France, was now to the returned man a land of dollars and cents, of selfish citizens, of unpatriotic farmers — a land where the criterion of success was still wealth, not character; money, not service; what one had, not what one was.

Store up for Future.

Can you wonder, you who read, that the returned man says little but is storing up many things for the future, and has decided that when the boys all come home the influence of the returned soldier will be no uncertain factor in the life of the community?

He knows that in the future there is going to be class distinction in Canada, more sharply defined than any we have ever had. The distinction will be marked and will be handed down to succeeding generations and it will be based on service. There will be the aristocracy of those who have served and there will be the other who have not.

OTTAWA CRUISERS

The motor boat cruiser, Corona, from Ottawa with Messrs. A. J. Fraser and A. H. Smith on board, was in port over night, returning from a pleasant trip up the Trent to Orillia. The voyagers state that the lockkeepers require the services of two men from each boat passing through to help work the locks. This makes it rather hard on a limited boat crew where only one man can be spared, and he tries to do the work of two—result, blisters, profanity and prayers for an application of Adam Becks white coal to the machinery of the locks. Another Ottawa craft now in Trent waters after calling at this port a few days ago, is the Evelyn, with Controller Muir, a newspaper man of Ottawa, his daughter; Mr. and Mrs. Stewart and daughter, and Mr. Lang, on board.

How Canadians Held Damery

Their Part in One of the Most Terrible Slaughters of the War

With the Canadians in the Field, Aug. 20.—So far from being the exception, the story of the fight for Damery that follows is essentially typical of the work of the incomparable Canadian infantry during the past ten days, and here it may be remarked that throughout these operations the weather has been perfect, with good visibility and not a drop of rain. The road that leads into Damery from the west, off the main Roye highway, gently climbs into the village, here silhouetted amidst its woods against the eastern sky-line. Five hundred yards due south lies the Wood of Damery on an elevation. Superior to the village and to the southwest again is the commanding eminence of "Z" Wood. During the fight of last Thursday both these were in th ehands of the enemy completely flanking the village, for it was not until the close of the afternoon that the French dashed in and stormed them. On the north the position was no better, his outposts holding the middle wood, about a mile a little west of north of Damery.

Big Majorities For Ministers

TORONTO, Aug. 20—Hon. Dr. Cody Minister of Education, and Hon. Geo. S Henry, Minister of Agriculture, were elected to the Legislature in yesterday's by-elections by immense majorities. The electors of North-East Toronto gave Dr. Cody a majority in the neighborhood of five thousand votes, while in East York Hon. Mr. Henry came back with a margin of about three thousand votes. Complete returns were not received last night, but in the Toronto riding with seven polls out, Dr. Cody, had 4,863 of a majority, while Mr. Henry with nine Markham township polls out, had 2,631. The missing polls will give both Ministers good majorities, most of these in Toronto being subdivisions in Rosedale, where Dr. Cody polled his biggest vote. Markham undoubtedly gave Mr. Henry a good margin, the one poll reported showing a vote of 27 to 3.

VARLEY'S SHOWING

The results showed that forecasts were not far astray. As was expected the voters of East York stayed at home, scarcely more than ten per cent. of the electorate casting their ballots, and the fact that Mr. Henry was able to get such a large majority under the circumstances shows that his opponent was never a serious contender. The verdict in North-East Toronto was a emphatic one, but Wm. Varley, the soldier-labor candidate did remarkable well. He had to contend with sentiment against unnecessary election strife during the war, with a strong personal regard for Dr. Cody throughout the riding and with a measure of opposition from Liberal voters who stood by the pact to avoid elections, made by Sir. Wm. Hearst and Mr. Proudfoot, Liberal leader.

CHINA DEPORTS GERMANS

(From The Westminster Gazette)

Tokio—It is announced that the Chinese Government has decided to deport all Germans. This decision affects between seven thousand and ten thousand persons; the deportees are to be interned in Australia until the end of the war, and transportation is to begin at the earliest possible moment.

The Daily Express's Tokio correspondent states that this is the severest blow ever dealt at German commerce. The bulk of the deportees are business men. Many of them are influential merchants who for years past, with the aid of subsidized steamship lies and state banks, have frequently deprived British merchants of contracts which should have been their on the merits of the case.

The present complete expulsion reduces the German organization in China to ruins, and, in the only possible way, put an end to the German propaganda, which since 1914, has never ceased to poison the Orient against the allies.

MAKING GERMAN-LOVERS.

When the gentle German sets out to make friends with his neighbor, his object of course is to win an exuberant affection, but he really has the oddest way of doing it. This is the method he adopted in Rumania, as described in the Journal de Geneve by an eminent Rumanian, now resident in Switzerland:

> "Roumania is reduced to a state of real slavery. German agents have the right to enter private houses at any hour and to requisition anything they consider useful. They have taken everything down to objects indispensable to the humblest household. The distress is daily becoming more and more grievous. To the spectre of famine, epidemics are now being added. The population is decimated. Rumania has only one hope—the victory of those she continues to consider her Allies. There used to be pro-Germans in Rumania—there are none today."

THE CALL FROM THE DEEP.

We are prone to talk about the sacrifices of war and the many calls for financial support to patriotic funds of varied nature—complaint is even voiced at times as if the war burdens of stay-at-home folks were becoming heavy. In a land where the fields are heavy with a bountiful harvest, where the factories are busy night and day and where the chief feature of the national life is centred in an abundant prosperity, who has a right to speak of the burdens of war except those to whom war has become a ghastly reality in the death or mutilation of loved ones. We have only to turn our thoughts in sympathetic tenderness and national pride to the sacrifices and hardships of our brave boys "over there" in the mud and misery of Flanders, fighting for our freedom and prosperity; to the gallant sailor lads who day and night in storm or calm, in cold or heat, keep ceaseless vigil and prevent enemy ships from laying waste with shot and shell our coast cities, and who brave every danger to combat the submarine menace and make safe the aisles of the sea for our argosies of food and munitions—to realize that if we give up every dollar we possess our sacrifice will still be small in comparison. And we must not forget the brave sailor lads of the Merchant Marine who sail our ships, laden with the products of farm, dairy and factory, through submarine-infested seas, thus aiding materially to maintain prosperity at home and keep up the constant stream of supplies so necessary for the success of the armies in the field.

Canada has responded nobly to the call for funds for the soldiers and their dependents, now comes the call for the sailors whose needs have hitherto received little attention in a financial way. It is proposed to observe the week of September 1st to 7th as Sailors' Week in which to raise a large fund for the protection of the widows and orphans of sailors from want. Ontario's objective is placed at one million dollars, which should be easily reached and far exceeded.

Listen to the call that comes from the deep!

Remember the Lusitania!

Remember Capt. Fryatt, murdered by the Huns for daring to defend his ship against an attack by submarine!

Remember the 176 vessels "sunk without trace" of crew or cargo!

Remember the 15,000 men of the Merchant Marine who have already made the supreme sacrifice!

Remember the widows and orphans!

Isn't the call so strong and insistent that we should deem it a duty and pleasure to give as large a contribution as possible to the fund for the sailors and thus show appreciation of the sacrifices of those brave lads who are contributing their health and even lives to the continuance of Canada's prosperity and the freedom of the world.

Complaints of war burdens by stay-at-homes should be lost in a joyful chorus at the blessed privilege of sharing our prosperity with the heroes who are making that prosperity possible and by our contributions help to make life easier for the sailors and their dependents.

Whoever is responsible for the city clock striking the hours is having a long vacation. Surprising how many women divide their household tasks into spaces directed by the deep tones of Big Ben far up in the City Hall tower. In the morning when the big clock clangs out E-L-E-V-E-N the housewives mechanically begin preparations for the mid-day meal. Since the clock has lost its power to articulate many a late meal has resulted with domestic friction as a side-line. Horrible things may yet happen if Big Ben's strike isn't settled soon.

In England, as elsewhere, labor is overwhelmingly loyal and patriotic. If this were not so England would have failed in the war long ago. If it were not so France could not have saved the world from democracy. If it were no so in this country we should not now be in the thick of the work at Armageddon. England's rebellious labor minority is more articulate and political and troublesome than the corresponding element in this country. That is owing partly to circumstances, partly to the fact that volunteering in the beginning diluted the spirit, and largely besides, to the fact that in Great Britain there was no Samuel Gompers.

WHEN THE BABY LIONS COME

(Tune—John Brown's Body.

All the lion whelps are coming from their homes across the sea
To a party at the Kaiser's, to a picnic
on the Spree;
They are coming uninvited—how delighted he will be
When the baby lions come!

Chorus.
Growling, growling, grim and growling,
The baby lions come.

Half the pages of the atlas see them
trooping on their way,
Just to call on Kaiser Wilhelm—for it's Kaiser Wilhelm's Day!
He is sure to preach a sermon, and will very likely pray
When the baby lions come.

They have left their dear equator and their precious polar ice,
They have left their maple sugar,
kangaroos and carried rice.
Sugar's up; but German Kaisers will,
I fancy, fall in price
When the baby lions come!

They are looking very tawny, very brawny, very fit,
As they sail from Mustn't-Mention
and entrain for Wait-a-Bit.
Shining armor, Kaiser Wilhelm, will be quite a useful kit
When the baby lions come.

Yes, the lion whelps are coming, with the Island Lioness,
To the rescue of a little Flemish damsel in distress,
And if I were Kaiser Wilhelm I would censor my address
When the lion household comes.
—E.M.F., in Edinburgh Scotsman

"Canadians Plunge Ahead at Roye" says the headline across the top of the first page of Friday's New York World. "French and Canadians Advance on Eight-mile Front" is the corresponding line in Saturday's New York Times. "Canadians Take Two Towns in Advance on Chaulnes" shouts the top line of Friday's New York Herald. The Canadian soldiers are giving Canada imperishable and world-wide fame.

Thunderbolt Blow Against Germans by Canadians

LONDON, Aug. 29.—"The last offensive proved to Fritz that he can't lick us. This offensive proves we can lick him," was the jubilant comment of the first wounded Canadian officer to reach London, after the movement of the Canadian corps from the reserve north of Arras, to a position for the thunderbolt blow southeast of Amiens. He described one of the greatest features of the first night when the whole corps moved 30 kilos by motor lorries, fifty to a battalion, arriving at billets at daybreak. Not fifteen men from every battalion stirred from billets all day.

The next night they marched 12 miles, spent a day in billets, and then the next night did a thing the Canadians had not done before—marched 24 miles with one ten minute halt, not one man having to fall out of the battalion. Next night another march of twelve miles was made and the troops bivouacked in a wood.

Regimental officers did not know the plans till the afternoon before the big show, when they were presented with maps and instructions and co-operation signals. Maps and instructions were perfect, reflecting the highest staff work and the show started at 4.20 a.m.

Barrage Was Wonderful

The barrage was wonderful. Waves of infantry were just as wonderful. When they came to a machine gun nest the men opened up and closed on it from two flanks, as if on manoeuvres, bombed it, chucked prisoners out, passed them back and went on.

Owing to direction of the French attack, the Canadian right was in the air for an hour and a half after the first wave. It was open warfare, with the infantry against machine gun nests. The Amiens roads streamed with cavalry with lances. In the pageant were mobile machine guns and field ambulances. Following were supports marching in fours.

Twice shells burst on the column killing 14 men. The ranks closed up and marched on without pause. Four guns taken at Jean Wood were in action against the enemy half an hour afterwards.

Germans Shelled Ambulance

Later, German machine guns turned on an ambulance taking the wounded from an advanced dressing station, putting a bullet in the driver's leg. The ambulance was ditched. A whole detachment of the C. A. M. C. left the cover of a dressing station, under the hail of machine gunfire which lifted the lorrie bodily from the road.

Canadians in the advance found that the Germans had cleared up the harvest. The men who had advanced to their position had to wait an hour for a neighboring unit to reach its objective.

STOCK MARKET AT LOW EBB

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The New York Evening Sun's financial review says:

Yesterday's stock market was at a low ebb of vitality, scarcely more than 100,000 shares changing hands in the first three hours. The features were Mercantile Marine common and preferred, in which there appeared to be a considerable short interest.

Most of the streets attention was attracted to the active trading in liberty loan 3½ per cent bonds, which opened $50,000 at 101, half a point above Saturday, a ndwhich later advanced to 101.06.

The list held firm in the last hour and in numerous cases advanced slightly. The rails were perhaps in better form than the industrials, although they did not respond to a probable early adjustment of the railroad contracts question. Business remained light in volume to the end. Aside from the liberty issues bonds were quiet.

Sporting Notes

TORONTO LOST LEAD

Binghampton took the lead from League race over the week-end by winning five straight games from Newark on the latter's grounds, while the Leafs were winning four out of five at Rochester. The Bingoes played very clever ball throughout the series, being some splendid fielding behind high-class pitching. The Bingoes appear to have picked up a good twiler in Champion; while Beckvermit and Higgins are very hard to beat any time they start. Baltimore lost ground by losing one of the four games to Jersey City. The Leafs are now at home to finish the season, and will need every game to land the championship, judging by the way the Bingoes are going along.

Called By Death

Many hearts are sad in Belleville to-day because of the death of Walter Alford, a citizen held in the highest esteem for his many kindly qualities of head and heart, and for his splendid type of citizenship, which manifested itself in an active interest in every worthy movement for the betterment of Belleville, and all the many and varied municipal activities. He has been identified with the life of Belleville for the past forty-eight years, and despite an active business life found time to serve the city as Alderman for two terms, besides giving much time to other municipal movements and being active in church and fraternal society circles.

After a comparatively brief illness Mr. Alford died Monday morning at his residence 211 George Street. He was born in Bridestone, Devonshire, England on March 5, 1844, and came to Belleville forty-eight years ago (1870). He engaged in business as a contractor and builder and was very successful. Among his large undertakings was the erection of the Bay Bridge which connects the city of Belleville with Prince Edward County and he constructed many notable buildings in Belleville, Trenton and Calgary, including the two Robertson blocks, and Alberta blocks on Front Street, and the House of Refuge, Belleville; C.O.R'y Station, Trenton; Pickering College, Newmarket Metropolitan Bank, Oddfellows Building, Picton, and others.

Mr. Alford was a prominent member of Christ Church and served at various times as People's and Rector's Warden. He was Past Master of The Belleville Lodge, No. 123, A.F.&A.M., Knight Templar, No. 6, G.R.C., also a member of the Sons of England and A.O.U.W.

Mr. Alford was twice married, the survivors of the first family being two daughters, Mrs. Jas. Goodrich, of Walkerworth, Ont., and Mrs. Wm. Epps, of Deseronto. His second wife was Miss Susan F. Sanderson, who died on October 9th, 1908, the children of this union being Miss Fanny E., at home; Newton, overseas on active service; Harry, recently invalided home from military service overseas; Ernest, Montreal; and Robert Alford, Detroit. He is also survived by two brothers, Mr. Wm. Alford, of Church Street, Belleville and Mr. Robt. Alford of Australia and two sisters, Miss Susan Alford, Devonshire England, and Mrs. Reed, of Southampton.

Easiest Way to Remove Ugly Hairy Growths

(Beauty Culture)

Here is a method for removing hair or fuzz that is unfailing and is quite inexpensive: Mix a thick paste with some powdered delatone and water and spread on hairy surface. After 2 or 3 minutes, rub it off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has vanished. No harm or inconvenience results from this treatment, but be careful to get genuine delatone.

MUST CLEAN GLASSES

(New York World)

The Health Department reported that its crusade against lack of cleanliness in soda water glasses and other "soft" drink utensils had resulted during July in ninety-eight proprietors being found guilty. Eight were fined a total of $152. Visits were made by the inspectors to 1° places and 203 summonses were issued.

This crusade conducted at the request of the Surgeon-General's office and largely as a war measure aims to insure cleanliness at soda fountains that soldiers and sailors may not contract diseases.

HAVE MARVELOUS ESCAPE

PERTH, Ont, Aug. 20—Their motor car getting out of control when ascending the steep curving hill at Flower Station yesterday, Mr. A. Gilmore and party of Ottawa, toppled over a bridge at the ravine, a distance of eighteen feet to the ground. The car turned over, two of the occupants were thrown into the mud. Mr. Gilmore, the third man in the car received a number of serious injuries, but will recover. The car was but little damaged, and after drawn back to the roadway by a team was driven homewards.

"A CROWN OF SHAME"

By FLORENCE MARRYAT

Author of "The Poison of Asps," A Star and a Heart," "Written in Fire," etc.

CHAPTER XXIV.—Continued

"Hush, Quita, you have said enough; and surely all will think you have suffered sufficiently, and need no further punishment."

But the continual groaning and muttering of the crowd outside did not seem as though their anger was appeased; and Quita shuddered as she heard it.

"Give he my child!" she exclaimed wildly. "Everything is slipping from me. My father and mother stand by in silence, my husband will drive me from his house. Give me something that I can call my own! Lizzie, I want my child!"

"There is your child, Quita," replied her adopted sister, sadly, as she led her to the table. "God has already called it through their hands to Himself. They would not leave you even that poor consolation, my unhappy Quita."

"Dead!" cried the unfortunate Lady Russell, as she gazed upon her infant's breathless form, "dead! Oh, Henri, Henri, whwy was I ever untrue to you and to myself? My punishment is harder than I can bear."

As she sunk upon her knees, and her pitiful cry of "Henri" sounded on the air, De Courcelles, unable to restrain his feelings longer, burst open his prison door and rushed in upon them.

"Yes," he exclaimed triumphantly, as he glared round upon the parents and husband of Maraquita, "she speaks the truth at last. I had sworn to have her life, in exchange for that of which she has robbed me; but she has avenged herself. Take me prisoner again, as soon as you like. I shall die contented, to know what her future must be."

"Dey nebber take you!" cried a shrill voice at the open casement, which was immediately followed by a shot, which brought Henri de Courcelles to the ground.

"Jersaha!" he muttered between his teeth as he fell, with the dark blood and froth bubbling from his lips.

Lizzie was at his side in a moment tearing away his shirt, and striving to stem the current of his life. But it was in vain. The overseer had met his fate at last and was rapidly bleeding to death.

"Henri," she cried, in voice of distress, "I can do nothing for you! You are going to God! May He bless and forgive you."

"As—you—have—done," he gasped out, as his lifeless head fell from her arm.

Sir Russell Johnstone had stood by stern and miserable, watching the pitiable sight, and listening to the confession which dashed all the brightness from his marired life, but Maraquita and her parents had hidden themselves away, unable to bear such a strain upon their nervouh systems. Hugh Norris seeing that all was over came forward to take Lizzie in his arms; but she turned from him, and walked bravely into the midst of the mutineers. Their flaring torches fell full on her ashen face, and lighted up the large tears standing in her eyes; but she stood before them without one sign of fear, and her voice was loud and determined.

"Are you satisfied now?" she demanded boldly, "or are not two lives sufficient to gorge your lust for blood? Do you know what you have done? You say you love me, and would not harm a hair of my head, yet you have killed the man you knew was dear to me! You have made me risk my life in vain. Two days ago I walked into the Alligator Swamp alone, to find Henri de Courcelles, and save him from the gallows, and I brought him here, only to fall a victim to your barbarity. Was that love for me? And the poor baby too—the little innocent child that I was bringing up as my own, and that had never done you any harm, you must needs take that from me too. Now, what more do you want? Is it my own life? You may as well kill me as the rest. Perhaps I am not more worthy to live, in your estimation, than they were."

At this harangue the ringleaders drew back abashed. They had not calculated that in taking their revenge on Henri de Courcelles they would injure their "Missy Liz."

"Missy Liz, no talking like dat," said an aged negro, speaking for the rest. "Missy know we lub her, and call her de Good Angel ob Beauregard."

"Then if you love me, coolies, prove it by what you do. Give up this hateful mutiny against those who only desire your good, and let the Governor, and Mr. and Mrs. Courtney return to the White House in peace. If you don't, I warn you my life will be the sacrifice, for you shall trample over my body before you enter the bungalow in search of them."

She placed her two hands on the lintels of the door posts as she spoke to bar the way, and the negroes saw she was in earnest.

"Go back to your quarters, my friends," she continued in a softer voice. "In my name, and the name of all whom I love, I beg of you to return quietly to your homes and relinquish your murderous design."

"For your sake, den Missy Liz, for your sake," replied the coolies, as, startled, and somewhat ashamed of themselves, for they had no real cause of complaint, and had only been incited on by the example of others, the crowd broke up into groups, and commenced to walk back slowly to their homes. And then Lizzie turned round and threw herself weeping into Hugh Norris' arms.

Coal Shortage is on Either Coast

Central Portion of Continent Appears to Be Pretty Well Provided

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—In its weekly review of the coal situation the Coal Age says:—

The intense heat of the past week has exerted an influence more or less potent upon coal production and distribution. So great was the heat that it was difficult to keep men on the tipples or in the washeries and breakers. Many retail teamsters and car unloaders either worked only part time or refused to work at all. This naturally did much to retard both production and distribution. With all the heat, however, which in many localities made a high record, the output of the country only fell off about 3 per cent.

Reports received from all over the country fail to reveal any shortage in present needs. Some regions have ben able to accumulate surplus stocks in fair volume; others have not been able to build up any reserves whatever.

Coal For North West

The portion of the country lying roughly between the Rocky and Alleghany Mountains appears to be fairly well supplied with fuel. True, coal is being pushed to the North West via the Great Lakes with all possible dispatch, and some complaint is heard of a fuel shortage (especially in domestic coal) in Michigan; the greater part of this region is nevertheless well supplied.

War Worry For Quebec M.P's

QUEBEC, Aug. 20.—Following the statement made in Newcastle, Ont., by the Hon. N. W. Rowell, where he was quoted as stating that he would help send reinforcements to the Canadians overseas, both Messrs. Lucien Cannon, M.P. for Derchester, and Capt. C. G. Power, M.P. for Quebec South, a returned officer with the Military Cross, has written to Mr. Rowell. The letter says Mr. Rowell's statements infer that Canada is to levy another class of men for overseas service, and asks whether the statement is a mere personal opinion of Mr. Rowell. The letter then quotes the Montreal Gazette of August 15, when that paper said:

'Due to the powerful reserves, the Canadian corps, notwithstanding twelve days of severe fighting, still have all its divisions in full."

The letter also quotes Lord Milner's recent statement:

'I believe Great Britain is making probably an excessive military effort considering all her other efforts."

The letter closes by inferring that if the Government has another call for men under consideration it would be illegal to do so without the assent of Parliament.

Government to Make a Big Display

The Canadian National Exhibition has joined in the war on non-essentials, has reconstructed its classifications on war-time basis and has striven in every way to reflect the spirit and interest of the times. It has offered every facility to the governments, Federal and Provincial, for displays to illustrate the achievements of the various national departments, engaged in war work and has freely given space for this purpose. The governments apparently have come to realize the importance of the Exhibition as a point of contract with a million people each year and have responded generously with displays of a most educational and interesting character. In fact, in no other year did the governments co-operate so readily and completely and the result will be an array of exhibits demonstrating how the experts at Ottawa, Guelph, Toronto, and the West are striving to give the people the very best scientific service along production, conservation and kindred lines. These demonstrations will cover every branch of the food problem, both from the standpoint of the city man and the country resident.

HALIFAX CALLS FOR HELP

HALIFAX, Aug. 19—An urgent appeal from the City Council to the Dominion Government to take whatever action is within its power to facilitate shipments of anthracite and bituminous coal to Halifax, so as to avert the shortage in supply which is feared for the coming winter was telegraphed to Ottawa to-day by City Clerk Managhan. The message which was addressed to Sir Robert Borden, also refers to "an unnecessary increase in the cost of coal, due partly to manipulation and profiteering in respect to carrying charges." The suggestion is made that shipping necessary for conveying coal to this city be taken over by the Government so that the citizens of Halifax will not "be placed at the mercy of those in control of the mines or carriers."

Dr. H. Spencer of Sherbrooke, Que. formerly of Belleville, is a guest at the Hotel Quinte and renewing old acquaintances.

MILITARY INDECISION

(Harper's Magazine.)

A sergeant was trying to drill a lot of raw recruits, and, after working hard for three hours, he thought they seemed to be getting into some sort of shape, so decided to test them.

"Right turn!" he cried. Then, before they had ceased to move, came another order, "Left turn!"

One hoodlum left the ranks and started off toward the barracks room.

"Here, you!" yelled the angry sergeant. "Where are you going?"

"I've had enough," replied the recruit in a disgusted tone. "You don't know your own mind for two minutes runnin'!"

Army Dentists Are Efficient

THE work of the Canadian Army Dental Corps overseas is making quite a stir in army circles in England and France. A recent letter to Sir Auckland Geddes, Minister of National Service, from the British Dental Association contained the following:

"In numbers alone, the fact that the whole of the British forces have only a little more than twice the number of dentists belonging to the Canadian Army Dental Corps is surely very significant, and as regards organization and administration, the inferiority, as compared with the Dominion forces, is equally manifest to those who are familiar with the details.

"At a time when the last reserves of the country are being drawn upon, and the raising of the age limit is, we believe, being considered, it does seem to us very remarkable that so much man-power in the army among munition workers and the rest of the civil population should be wasted from lack of dental attention. The dental service in the army is both insufficient in personnel and inefficient in organization. We are aware of the seriousness of this statement, but we are prepared to support it."

In suggesting the remedy the letter, which is signed by the president, the chairman of the Representative Board, the hon. treasurer and the secretary, among other things, expresses the opinion that the organization should be similar to, but not necessarily the same as, the Dental Service of the Dominion.

In the department of mouth hygiene our dental services have done particularly important work. Infectious stomatitis, a very common and most baffling mouth infection, has been brought under control in the Canadian forces to an extent quite unknown in the other armies. This is the disease to which the misnomer "trench mouth" has been applied. It is not in any way confined to men in the trenches, since thousands of cases appear among those who have never seen the trenches, neither can its origin in any way be traced to the trenches.

As its name (infectious stomatitis) implies, it is infectious—exceedingly so. It is no respecter of rank or sex. Generals and soldiers and their children of both sexes have been treated by the C.A.D.C.

In battalions it can be spread by the use of dishes. In canteens and in some areas it has been prevented from spreading by keeping the dishes of those already infected separate. Children have contracted it, presumably by kissing their soldier father. In one case where five or six men lived in the same house and worked in the Pay Corps, shortly after it appeared in the mouth of one it was necessary to treat all in the house for the disease. The slightest carelessness in disinfecting the mouthpiece of a gas mask in a school where courses in gas measures are taught might cause an infection to spread widely. An instance of this kind occurred in one of the areas where a great many men were using the same mask. Moistening the finger in dealing cards has also been suspected of causing it in one case in particular.

The importance of controlling and eliminating this trouble will be immediately appreciated when it is said that in many cases when they first apply for treatment, the person infected simply cannot bite or chew food. The prevalence of the trouble will alike be appreciated when one learns that in the six months from July, 1917, to December, 1917, 5,397 patients were treated in Shorncliffe, Bramshot, Witley, Stafford and London alone, and that about fifty per cent. were cured. In attaining this end it was necessary to administer 31,802 treatments.

In the treatment of infectious stomatitis not the least important part of the treatment is to bring about a cleanly condition of the mouth. The men of the C.E.F. are each issued with a kit containing a tooth brush, but until recently, no dentifrice. There was a time when a goodly number of tooth brushes found their way to the buttons on the tunic rather than the tooth in the mouth. The importance of cleansing the teeth has been strongly impressed by the Dental Services on the soldiers, and as a result in this respect conditions have greatly improved. The introduction of 10,000 tins of special dentifrice, invented by the Canadian Army Dental Corps' experts, for use of the oral pathology department, will produce inestimable results both in assisting the dental officers in their efforts against infectious stomatitis and as a preventive against occurrence of the trouble.

Recently a patient after unsuccessful treatment in a London hospital, was informed that he must have his teeth extracted. To make a long story short, he is now under treatment in the Canadian Army Dental Corps' oral pathology department, and will probably not have to lose his teeth; nor will the Government be placed under the expense of supplying plates for him with which to masticate.

One of the features of the Canadian Army Dental Corps' treatment of "trench mouth" is rapidity and accuracy in diagnosis. With the use of a microscope the specialists can tell the patient positively, and in a very few minutes, whether he has or has not the disease. The New Zealand forces, whose Dental Corps is particularly efficient, requested that their officers be allowed to study the Canadian system, and two officers have already been returned to New Zealand for the purpose of introducing the Canadian method of treatment there.

GETTING THEIR MAN.

Some Anecdotes of the Riders of the Plains.

In peace, as well as in war, the Mounted Police have served Canada well. They have given the Northern reaches of the Dominion world pre-eminence for efficient and thorough administration of law, protection of life and property, compelled respect for the machinery and the agents of British justice. They have convoyed and protected settlement—broken up smuggling and illicit whiskey running — established and maintained postal communications—safeguarded railroading and surveys—performed a thousand and one onerous yet humble services, and each of these efficiently and well. They have fought prairie fires for the settlers on the plains parched by the summer sun. They have, with equal readiness and with parallel courage, battled against blizzards and the winter perils of the desolate mountains, to preserve the lives of foolhardy and ever-venturesome argonauts following the lure of the Golden Rainbow to its foot in the Klondike snows.

It was Sergt. Fitzgerald who first visited Herschel Island and had the honor of establishing the detachment at that far distant point in the ice-bound Arctic, the most northerly station of the world, to which twice yearly the police dog-teams made their scheduled pilgrimages. It was Fitzgerald, too, who silently trailed Labele, the triple murderer of the Klondike, around the earth, and ultimately brought him back to the scene of his crimes, to pay the penalty and demonstrate again the force's working motto

"We always get our man."

Constable (later Corporal) Conradi it was who, while patrolling a fire-swept district, heard of a rancher with ten children cut off by the wind-swept flame. They could not be reached or saved, opinions agreed. They must be, said Conradi. He fought his way through the fire—at times all but suffocated. His hat was burned on his head. His hair, moustache and eyebrows were singed. His clothing time and again was afire. But he won through and saved the settler and his family.

"We always get our man."

Sometimes the tale is tragic.

There is the story of that splendid hero of the force, who alone, sleepless and vigilant throughout twelve dreadful days and night brought into Fort Resolution a prospector whom loneliness had transformed into a dangerous madman—only himself to lose his mind a few weeks later, a consequence of the terrific mental and physical strain to which he had been subjected.

There is another story of a young constable, a man of good family and university education, who did his best—and failed.

Despatches had to be sent to a far distant post under weather conditions of extreme severity. The constable pocketed them and set out. Soon after, a stinging blizzard set in and his trail was obliterated, with all records of man and mission.

Days slid into weeks bringing no news of either.

The following spring a red-coated rider on out-line patrol duty, accidentally entering a secluded coulee, found shreds of a storm-worn uniform of the force, still clothing the bones of the lost courier. His last moments, as plainly shown by the circumstantial evidence, had been haunted rather by the dread that he should fail in his duty than by any concern for his personal safety. For in the sodden mass of his long-forgotten orders he had painfully scrawled his last message to his superior officer and the world:

"Lost—horse dead—am trying to push ahead—have done my best."

Noted Canadian.

Dr. James Douglas, philanthropist, mining engineer, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Phelps, Dodge corporation, died at his home in New York on June 26th, in his 81st year. Dr. Douglas gave away large sums of money for educational and charitable purposes, but his greatest gift was probably made to the General Memorial Hospital of New York of three and three-quarter grammes of radium, valued at about $375,000, to be used for all time in that hospital in cancer and other work. This radium represented the work of the National Radium Institute for years in the west on carnatite ores.

Dr. Douglas was born in Quebec, Nov. 4, 1837. His father, Dr. James Douglas, was a surgeon of repute, and the first to introduce modern treatment of insanity into Lower Canada, as the founder of the Quebec Lunatic Asylum, in the management of which for some time his son, James, participated.

He left Canada in 1875 to take charge of the metallurgical operations of the Chemical Copper Co., a concern operating at Phoenixville, Pa., where he was first to separate, on a commercial scale, the precious metals from the copper by the electrolytic method of refining.

A Slight Error.

Sergt. R. Douglas Pinkerton, author of "Ladies From Hell," war experiences of the famous London Scottish regiment so-called by the Germans, tells of a friend of his a lady, who was asked to go into a certain New York store to get a copy of the book. When she got to the store she found she had forgotten the title, and all she could remember was that it had "hell" and "ladies" in it. So she asked for "To Hell With the Ladies." And she got the right book!

Costly Gallantry.

In the course of a celebration at Fort William a young lady realistically "fainted" at Current Park and a chivalrous youth at once went to the rescue. Later he discovered he was short his stickpin, watch and wallet.

Corporal Killed Whole Gun Crew

Victoria Cross Given to Australian For Extraordinary Pluck and Daring

LONDON, Aug. 20—The London Official Gazette records stories of extraordinary heroism and daring in announcing the awards of Victoria Crosses to three non-commissioned officers and one private all Australians, chiefly for clearing machine guns positions.

The following is typical:

Corporal Davey, finding the work of consolidating the position assumed by his platoon after an advance hampered by machine gun fire, moved forward alone and faced the fierce point-blank volleys. He attacked the gun with hand grenades, put half the crew out of action and then returned for a fresh supply of grenades. He reattacked the gun crew, which in the meantime has been reinforced. He killed the whole crew of eight and captured the gun, and with it repelled a determined counter-attack, during which he was wounded.

"Corporal Davey saved his platoon from annihilation and enabled it to hold the position which was vitally important to the success of the whole operation.

Vladivostok Fell Through Late Order

TOKIO, Aug. 20—Vladivostock fell into the hands of the Czecho-Slovaks because a Lenine order went astray. The order provided that the Czechs in Vladivostock were to be disarmed by the Bolsheviki on Sunday, June 30 The Chezchs learned of the order on Friday, June 28—They spent a busy Saturday, and by nightfall, June 29, they were incommand of Siberia's great Pacific port.

Saturday morning a Czech ultimatum was presented to the local Soviet to disarm their Red Guards, and to hand over to the Czechs all their weapons. Half an hour was given to complete the disarmament. The Soviet refused. Thereupon the Soviet was declared to be dissolved, and orders were given to arrest its delegate and all the prominent Bolsheviki in town.

Meantime in the harbor, the Soviet torpedo boats Bravery, Tvady, Tochny and Malaieff loosed their anchors and attempted to put out to sea. The British cruiser Suffolk silently turned her broadside on the approaching craft, and cleared her guns for action. The Japanese cruiser Asahi signalled the Bolsheviki boats t ohalt. They obeyed, a British and Japanese officer boarded each vessel, and the crews surrendered without resistence.

Ashore, the Czechs, strengthened by marines from the British and Japanese cruisers, quickly occupied all strategic points, powder magazines railway stations, and public buildings.

At 3 p.m. a Czech guard approached the Bolsheviki fortress and demanded its surrended. He was shot down. For two hours machine guns poured a never-ending stream of bullets into the fortress. The Red Guards garrison was unable to approach the windows to return the fire. Crowds watched the fight in silence from every point of vantage.

Suddenly there was a terrific explosion. A Czech had crawled near the fortress under the machine gun barrage and had thrown a mine into the building. Fire started and a white flag was run up. The fight was over.

Czech casualties were four killed and fifteen wounded. The Soviet lost 41 killed and 108 wounded.

Music and Drama

H. B. WARNER AT GRIFFIN'S

Very few actors can lay claim to being proficient on the stage and also on the screen, but H. B. Warner is an exception. Having won a placen in the theatrical profession which is second to none, he has now won a place on the screen that is se ocdnto none. In his picture "God's Man" Warner has the best cast of players ever assembled under him on the stage or screen. The story is a strong one, and the scenes and costumes never have been excelled in any of the Warner pictures that have gone before.

Along with this good picture a new chapter of the serial of wonders, "The Eagle's Eye," showing the many schemes that German spies hatched to get control of the cotton in the States will be shown. Evidence of this great plot is being uncovered to-day, the papers showing how Germany is planning to buy up American bonds thereby getting a hold on American made goods, cotton being her chief necessity at the present time. A News Film will show the latest happenings of the day.

A CAST OF 40,000

For the last half of the week an event of unusual importance is the presentation of the picture "Civilization," which is said to be even better than the "Birth of a Nation." This picture took one whole year to produce and is said to contain 40,000 people and 10,000 horses. The picture is owned and controlled by the Griffin Amusement Corporation of Toronto, which spent a large fortune in order to give the Canadian public a chance to witness this wonderful spectacular production. The first chapter of the new serial story in fifteen parts called "A Fight For Millions" will commence. The story has for its leading characters all the cast that made "The Fighting Trail" and "Vengeance and the Woman" so popular. There will be no change in the admission for this special program.

GOOD PALACE PROGRAM

At the Palace the chief photoplay was "God of Little Children" and it was well received. A new chapter of the serial "The Woman in the Web" and a good comedy completed the usual good program of photoplays seen at the Palace.

For the last half of the week the big picture "Civilization" will be shown and also the first chapter of the new serial "A Fight For Millions" will start, making the program just about the best ever seen here.

At the end of the month by special request a return showing of the big picture "The Lone Wolf" will be offered.

PAMPHLETS EXCITE MASSES

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 26—Count Ernest von Reventlow, chief editorial writer of the Tages Zeitung of Berlin, recommends an "effective counter-offensive" against the extension of the propaganda contained in "masses of pamphlets spread over Germany, aiming at the confusion, excitement and incitement of the incompetent masses."

Count von Reventlow mentions a pomphlet entitled, "The Happiness of the Future—a peace league of nations," and another containing articles one of which praises the revelations of Prince Lichnowsky, while a third reproduces the letter from Dr. Wilhelm Muehlon, former director of Krupps, to former Chancellor Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg.

FOUR FISHERMEN MISSING

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 26.—A cyclone gale on Lake Erie, is believed to have brought death to Capt. William Young and three fishermen in the small gasoline fish launch, Crescent, which left Erie Sunday morning.

Nothing has been heard of them, although the United States coast guard and four other fishing steamers have searched since Sunday afternoon.

APPRECIATION

is a term we feel permitted to use, as being descriptive of the state of mind of many of our CUSTOMERS who have taken advantage of OUR SUMMER FUR PRICES. The response to our offer of these special PRICES for summer work, has been gratifying to us, and no doubt means some lightening of our HEAVY FALL burden. By no means are we deploring our HEAVY FALL TRADE, far from it; but it is with a view to educating the PUBLIC to the MUTUAL advantages of preparing well ahead of winter to make void its many terrors, by having your FURS attended to NOW. LOW PRICES, FREE STORAGE, FURS ALL READY WHEN NEEDED, are to your advantage. It will be easily seen that IF our customers do this, we shall be relieved of many an all-night session in the fall. Thus, by equalizing our working days it would be to our advantage; hence these offers of LOW PRICES

FIRE SCARE ON FRONT STREET

About 7.30 last evening the fire brigade answered a call to the Union Bank, where smoke was issuing from the cellar. It proved to be a false alarm, as the furnace was being used to burn up an accumulation of waste paper and the smoke refused to go up the chimney.

PROMOTED.

Mr. E. V. FIRE AT REDNERVILLE

Yesterday morning at the hour of 6 a.m. the beautiful home of the late Hamilton Wellbanks, near Rednerville, Ameliasburg Township, was destroyed by fire. His son occupied the house at the time. In a few minutes a large number were on the scene and the contents of the house removed. The building was insured, and the loss will be about $2,000.

WRITS AGAINST G.T.R.

As the result of an accident which occurred near Bowmanville in August of last year five writs have been issued at Osgoode Hall against the Grand Trunk Railway Co. for damages for the deaths of different people, alleged to be due to the negligence of the company's servants Stella Connolly of Oshawa, asks for $10,000 for the death of her husband, James J. Connolly; Mary Johnson, of Oshawa, for $10,000 for the death of her son, Wm. Johnson; Ellen Normoyle, of Oshawa, for the death of her husband, J. P. Normoyle; Annie Fletcher, of Oshawa, for $10,000 for the death of her husband, J. F. Fletcher, and Frank Walker, of Toronto, for $12,000 for injuries to himself and for the death of his wife. Four people were killed in the accident, when an auto they were in was hit by the flyer.

Death Notice

ALFORD—At his residence, 211 day, August 19, 1918, Walter Alford in his 75th year.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday, August 20, 1918, under Masonic auspices, leaving the residence, 211 Christ Church beginning at 2.30 p.m.

The Farmerettes

Whether from city or country find themselves living under an unusual strain. The unusual work necessitates the use of different muscles and this development demands a good supply of pure, rich blood.

Because it goes directly to the formation of new blood, Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is of the greatest assistance in building up new cells and tissue and strengthening the muscles.

BORN IN 1844

The obituary notice of Mr. Walter Alford in yesterday's issue erroneously stated that he was born in 1854. Mr. Alford was born on March 5, 1844, consequently was in his seventy-fifth year.

O. C. SOLDIERS OF THE SOIL

Mr. P. F. Brockel, Y.M.C.A. Secretary, has returned from the Y. M. C. A. Summer School at Geneva Park, Lake Couchiching, and is again busily engaged looking after the interests of the Soldiers of the Soil, the lads who are helping to make increased food production a splendid reality.

PTE. BELLOW WOUNDED

Miss Edith Asselstine, 78 Mill street, has received the following telegram from the Director of Records at Ottawa: "Sincerely regret to inform you that Pte. Edward Bellow, infantry, is officially reported admitted to 12 General Hospital, Rouen on August 12th, gunshot wound in finger." This is the second time Pte. Bellow has been wounded.

LOST IN THE CLOUDS

A squadron of four Flight Cadets left Mohawk Camp yesterday afternoon for manoeuvering practice. One was obliged to make a forced landing near Mud Lake, and soon two others had to take chances with the volplane, making very successful landings. The fourth remained in the air and as in duty bound started to return to camp with a report of the whereabout of the three planes. The cadet, however, had lost his way in the air lanes and found himself peering about in the gathering darkness for familiar landmarks, flying over Belleville, which he mistook for Kingston, finally coming to earth near Ross' Corners, Thurlow township, making a beautiful landing in a farmer's field in the moonlight. First aid to the birdman was rendered by Max Herity, Jack Marshall and another lad, all soldiers of the soil, who secured blankets for the cadet so that he could pass a comfortable night beside his machine before resuming his search for Mohawk in the morning.

LAST DAY OF GRACE

Official notices again published that August 24 is the last day upon which pardon is granted to those who are deserters or who have failed to report to the military authorities. "The extreme penalty of the law," the notice adds, "will be visited upon defaulters after that date."

DROWNED WHILE HELPING

Charles Austin, drowned in Lake Ontario yesterday near Presqu'Ile, while assisting an aviator to save his plane, which had fallen into the lake, was a relative of Mrs. F. C. Clarke, City. The young man was barely seventeen years of age, and was the son of Mrs. Lew Austin of Brighton. His father, a former well known druggist of Brighton, died some time ago.

SERGT. WHITE KILLED

Mrs. Ellen White, 78 Gordon street, has received a telegram from the Director of Records at Ottawa, conveying the sad intelligence that Sergt. Chas. White, infantry, was killed in action, August 8. Sergt. White had recently been awarded the Military Medal for acts of gallantry and devotion to duty. He served two years in France before making the supreme sacrifice and was a patriot and a hero in every sense of the word. Previous to enlistment he was engaged at the Anglo-American Hotel here as chef. He was 29 years of age, born in England, and leaves a wife and child who reside at 78 Gordon street. A sister, Miss White, of Toronto, is with the bereaved family just now. A memorial service will be held for Sergt. Charles Lewis White, M. M., Sunday evening at St. Thomas Church.

NO GAME TONIGHT

There will be no Twilight League ball game this evening, and from on the schedule will be completed by playing double headers on Wednesday afternoons. Tomorrow afternoon Vimy's and Athletics will play a scheduled game at St. Michael's picnic. Both teams have been strengthened by drawing four players from the other teams for the special game, the Vimy's getting Green, Joe Keeleher, and the Athletics "Babe" Cassey and "Scotty" Knott.

A FLOOD OF LITIGATION

Probably the largest number of "appearances" entered in one day were filed to-day with Mr. W. John Williams, the Clerk of the County Court, for Messrs. Northrup, Ponton and Ponton for the solicitors for the C. P. R. and C. N. R. The 33 writs were issued by Messrs. Porter, Butler and Payne, and all have reference to the floods of the River Moira last spring.

Father and Son Fell Fighting For King, Canada and Freedom

Two Gallant Belleville Soldiers With Splendid Service Records— Father, an Original First, Passed Through Famous Battles-- Severely Wounded and Invalided Home-- Son Wounded for Second Time

Miss Florence Belton, 219 Front street, received a telegram from the Director of Records, Ottawa, apprizing her that Corporal Frederick Belton was admitted to the First Birmingham War Hospital at Birmingham, England, on August 11, suffering with a gunshot wound in his arm.

Corporal Fred Belton, went overseas with the 39th Battalion, in 1915. He was twice wounded at the Battle of the Somme, Sept. 20th, 1916. He returned to the front in February, 1917. Was at Vimy Ridge, wounded again on the Somme, gunshot in the arm, 9th of August, 1918. He is a son of Sergt. Alfred Belton, one of the "Originals", who was Provost-Sergt. of Belleville in the 34th Battery, and went overseas with the First Contingent, going to France February 7th, 1915. He was in France two years, wounded at Fleur Baiux, but was able to remain with the guns. He went through the Battle of Langemarck, April 22, 1915; Juen, Festubert; July, Givincy; Aug. La Bassee and Armentieres; again going into action at Ploegstreete; returned to Ypres salient February 1917; Dickibush and Hill 60 till July 1917, and then went to the Battle of the Somme, where he met his son Fred, not knowing that he was in France. A week after this meeting father and son were both wounded and on their way to Blighty. Sergt. Belton, the father, was invalided home after being ten months in the Hospital, November, 1917; discharged January 31, 1918. A gallant father of a gallant son in Sergt. Alfred Belton, late 1st Battery, 1st Brigade, C. F. A., late of all the glorious battlefields of France where he "done his bit" all the way, now residing at 145 Foster Avenue, Belleville.

Further Details of Wreck of Barge With Coal For City

Further details of the peculiar accident which happened a scow laden with coal for the Downey Coal Co. of Belleville, was given in yesterday's Kingston Standard as follows:

Shortly after nine-thirty Sunday morning a scow carrying 282 gross tons of coal consigned to Downey and Co., Belleville, turned turtle just inside Nine Mile Point, and but for the fact that Capt. Patterson of the tug Argyle saw the accident coming and ordered the tug's crew to hold on with one line, the scow and her cargo might now be on the bottom instead of riding quietly alongside the Long Pier at Portsmouth. There was no one on the scow when the accident happened, though Manager D. H. Patterson was aboard all night and left the scow only a short time before the craft turned over. The scow will be righted and it is thought that the damage will amount to about $2,500.

There was a stiff breeze blowing from the northeast all night, but the scow was weathering it well till along about daybreak a hatch shifted slightly allowing considerable water to enter the hold. This was not thought of much importance, but the scow must have continued leaking, for it gradually settled. Manager D. H. Patterson remained aboard till about seven-thirty, satisfied that all was well with the scow and its cargo. He ordered the tug to come alongside the scow, and then went to his quarters on the tug to sleep.

It was not long till he was summoned on deck, and had just reached the deck of the tug as it let go one line, Capt. Patterson having decided that the scow was about to turn over. The tug got away from the scow just as the latter took a roll and careened over. The one line held and the tug was able to hold her course. The scow was berthed alongside the long pier at Portsmouth about noon yesterday. The scow is owned in Montreal.

DRIVER PALMER WOUNDED

Mrs. Frances Palmer, 25½ Campbell street, received the following telegram from the Director of Records at Ottawa: "Sincerely regret to inform you that Driver Percy Grant Palmer, artillery, is officially reported admitted to No. 3 Australian Hospital, Abbeville, August 10th, with gunshot wound in the side."

HOW BIG BEN LOST HIS VOICE

The reason Big Ben in the City Hall tower is silent is because the chain connected with the striking apparatus began to show signs of weakness after forty years continuous service and the caretaker would not take chances on an accident. It will take some little time to replace the chain, it is said as that kind of a clock is not being manufactured now.

Called by Death

MR. ARTHUR TERRILL

The death occurred yesterday at his residence, 95 Dundas street, of Arthur Terrill, aged 66, third son of the late Simon T. Terrill.

Arthur Terrill was born in Wooler Township, in 1852, and resided there until five years ago when he moved to this city, taking a position in the Rolling Mills. On Saturday he was taken suddenly ill and gradually sank into death. He is survived by his widow, thre daughters, Mrs. Bernard Sharpe of Wooler, Misses Helen and Edith of this city; also two brothers, James and John of this city; and one sister, Mrs. John Macoun of Merriton.

Mr. Terrill was a member of the Society of Friends and was a Mason and a Forester. The funeral services will be held at the Friends Church at Frankford, with interment in the Friends' Cemetery.

Hun Pirates Were No Friends of His

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20— The Navy Department announced to-day that the captain of an American steamer had reported that his vessel ramed and probably sank a submarine about 9.30 p.m. on August 17th near Winter Quarter Shoal off the Northern Virginia Coast. The captain stated that the submarine was struck on her port bow bringing her alongside. The submarine crew hailed in strong German accents saying they were friends of his. He kept on his course. The steamer is now in port with a badly damaged bow and a quantity of water in her hold. The captain thinks he sank the submarine.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. Robinson and two daughters, Norma and Gladys of Montreal are visiting relatives and friends of this city.

Messrs Fraser and Smith, who came by canoe from Ottawa, made a trip to Orrillia by the Trent Valley Canal, were in the city last night by their return voyage east.

Mrs. James Pope, who has been visiting in Parry Sound since last winter came home on Saturday.

Mrs. H. W. Bell, of Montreal, is visiting her father, Mr. C. F. Draycott, also her sister, Mrs. Bell, 3 Harvey street.

Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Barns, and Master Harold, have returned from a two weeks motor trip through New York State. They crossed by way of Brockville and returned by Niagara Falls. They report having a delightful time.

THIRTY-THREE ACTIONS FOR DAMAGES FROM SPRING FLOODS ON MOIRA

Belleville Residents Whose Property Suffered Injury During the Ice Shoves and High Water of Last Spring Sue Railways for Damages

Thirty-three actions have been entered in the County Court by Porter, Butler and Payne, acting for clients who suffered damages to property during the disastrous floods last spring when the Moira River was on the rampage and the ice shoves swept the banks on either sides of barns, houses and everything movable, besides carrying away the footbridge and the bridge into Victoria Park. The defendants are the Canadian Pacific Railway and Canadian Northern Railway Companies, it being claimed that the approaches of the bridge used by these companies at the river mouth and the absence of a culvert prevents the water getting away fast enough to prevent severe flood conditions.

It will be remembered that the case of Sullivan vs. C.P.R. and C.N.R. hinged upon the same question, damages being asked for injury to boats anchored in Allan's Bay during the spring floods two years ago. Judgment was rendered in county court in favor of Sullivan for damages against the railway company. The company then took the case to the Court of Appeal where it was heard last March and the judgment of the County Court in favor of Sullivan was sustained. The plaintiff, Sullivan, was represented by Porter, Butler and Payne.

The claimants in the present actions entered by Porter, Butler and Payne are as follows: Harriet Andrews, Mary Allen, Charles Buker, Thomas Blaind, William Bird, Chas. M. Baker, Harry Baker, William Britton, Samuel H. Barnum, Howard W. Butterfield, Geo. H. Campbell, Frank O. Diamond, Edgar Deshane, Joseph Diament, Annie Fahey, Margaret Green, Mary Hunter, Jesse Harrie, Edward Kellaway, Chas. H. Lloyd, Lynch & Smith, Stephen H. Lounsberry, Ida Murphy, Thomas Soal, Julius Samuels, William H. Smith, Charles Taylor, Joel Thompson, the Misses White, Sarah Williams, Richard Waddell, Clara Peomans, Mary Yeomans.

Baseball

POINT ANN, 8; VIMYS, 4.

In one of the fastest games of ball ever played on Point Ann diamond, the pick of the City League fell before the masterly pitching of H. Crosby, 8 to 4, who had the Belleville boys swinging their heads off to try and hit his tantalizing slants. On the other hand the Point Ann boys found H Smith, the pride of the Vimy ball club, for five runs and broke his heart in the first innings. The support given to Crosby was gilt-edged while the picked team seemed to be blind at times at fielding the ball. Joe Goyer, manager of the visiting team, missed a fly ball in centre field in the third innings which started the fireworks and broke the heart of his team mates, which accounted for three runs. The line up for Belleville was as follows: H. Smith, p.; R. Arnott, c.; C. Young, 1st b.; C. Duesberry, 2nd b.; A. Meagher, s.s.; A. Atkins, 3rd b.; A. Duesberry, l.f.; J. Goyer, c.f.; D. Moore, r.f. Umpire, Ed. A. Thomas.

PLAYGROUND BASEBALL LEAGUE

Last Friday evening the championship was decided in the playground baseball league between the Canucks and Beavers. The Beavers were successful in winning the first game by a score of 13 to 12 and won the second game by a score of 18 t 6. Owing to a number of the Canucks' best men being away and their places being filled by weaker men made a big difference to their score. Although the score would indicate the game onesided, it was not, as only one bad innings was played, and right up to the last every bod played well.

The line up:—

Beavers—N. Symon, Doolittle, G. Ashley, Symons, F. Woodley, T. Ashley, Hunter, Mixon, Harden, Clark.

Canucks—Scott, James, Ketcheson, Hurley, Marshall, McKalpine, Wims, Emmerson, Bongard, Hurley.

Score:—

Beavers . . . . 0 8 5 4 0 0 1—18
Canucks . . . . 1 3 0 0 2 0 0— 6

Raise Wages Of Postmen

Those East of Soo Get $100 More Than Parliamint Voted

OTTAWA, Aug. 20.—The sub-committee of the Privy Council which recently heard the representations of the letter carriers, railway mail clerks and postal clerks of the Postal Service of Canada for increases in salary, has made its report, which was yesterday adopted by the Government and consequently goes into effect at once.

The principal recommendation in the report is that in addition to all salaries and allowances voted by Parliament, and now payable, there shall be paid a further provisional allowance for the current fiscal year, and as from April 1, 1918, of $100 to employees east of Sault Ste. Marie, and $50 to those at and west of Sault Ste. Marie. For many years Western employees have received a special living allowance of $180 over those of the East, and this has been taken into consideration by the committee. At the hearings the view was strongly expressed to the committee that this differential was not justified under present conditions. The present salaries of those affected by the increases and the salaries which they will now receive are shown in the following schedule:—

Burning Liquid Entered His Eye

Accidents at Trenton— Recent Happenings and Local News of Trenton Town

(From Our Own Correspondent)

TRENTON, Aug. 21—Mr. Wm. W. Weaver, of Trenton, sustained a painful injury to his right eye recently by being hit with some burning liquid with which he was working, it is, however, expected that the sight can be saved

Mr. Edward Hamel, whose home it at 57 Pine Street, Ottawa, but who has been employed for some time as a boiler-maker in Trenton, sustained a painful injurey to right foot by a piece of iron falling, thereby piercing the boot and cutting a nasty triangular gash in the foot. Medical attention was quickly summoned and it is expected he will not suffer permanent injury.

Miss K. A. Wood, of the B. C Co. Staff, Trenton, has returned to town after spending a few days with her friends, Miss Erma Masters at "The Globe," Picton.

Miss Ida May Braniff returned to Trenton on the 19th after spending a pleasant holiday with her friends and relatives in Brockville. She was accompanied by Miss Nora McLellan.

Mrs. David Alexander and her two sons, Keith and Harold, are spending the holiday season at the home of her father, Mr. Jos. Gibson, Stoney Point Beach.

"MALE" THIEF TURNED OUT TO BE WOMAN

MONTREAL, Aug. 21.—Bending over a machine in the Acme Glove Works, Ltd., Craig street east, stood a well-built mechanic yesterday. The mechanic did not wait for twelve o'clock to knock off.

About eleven-thirty two detectives called at the factory and were admitted. The foreman pointed out a "mechanic" bearing a name similar to the one wanted by the sleuths. The two men aproached the mechanic, asked a few questions, received answers and the machine was stopped. They left the factory, the mechanic accompanying them to headquarters. Once at headquarters everything changed for the prisoner. The first thing was the name. Instead of being Joseph Taguay tht prisoner gave the name of Jeanne Dementeur, a young woman, 22 years of age, dressed in male attire and who had been masquerading as a man ever since she came to Montreal from St. Boniface, two months ago.

She proved herself able to handle the work at the glove factory where her strength disarmed any suspicion of her sex.

She is held at detective headquarters on a charge of theft committed at 327 St. Paul street, where Adelard Broulet claims to have been robbed. The girl lived at 16 St. Elizabeth street.

MADOC SOLDIER WOUNDED

TORONTO, Aug. 21.—Rev. Dr. MacTavish, Madoc, has received word that his youngest son, Pte. W. Gordon MacTavish, has been admitted to a hospital in France, having been wounded in the ankle, thigh and shoulder. This is the fourth time that this young soldier has been wounded. Since going overseas he has spent more than twelve months in hospital. He was in the employ of The Toronto Daily Star when he enlisted in the 84th Battalion, but when that was broken up he was placed in another Toronto unit.

Enemy Gives up Hope of Drive For Calais

Withdrawal From Merville Sector Marks Failure of Germany's Vaunted Scheme

With the British Army in France, Aug. 21—By withdrawing their forces in the Merville sector of the Lys salient the Germans definitely have given up one of the points from which a drive for Calias logically would be launched. This is taken to indicate that the German high command has, at least for the time being, abandoned hope of reaching the coast, and now, perhaps, is chiefly concerned with getting the German lines back to a place of greater security.

The withdrawal here has been expected for some time, and it continued last night and to-day even on a slightly broader front than that of yesterday. The retirement marked the conclusion and failure of the effort which Germany launched in the spring to "finish off" the British army by driving through to the sea.

Other withdrawals continue and the British, taking advantage of the opportunity, have at various places pushed forward where the enemy has left small garrisons. The British also have battered in the Boche at places where be was not quite ready to retire, such as between Vieux Berquin and the Hazebrouck-Bailleul railway. Here a local operation gained all the objectives, the British advancing their positions some distance and capturing one officer and 181 of other ranks.

South of the Scarpe River, the British still further advanced their line. River Somme were improved by local actions. An enemy attack which here yesterday was a complete failure in every respect, the Germans suffering heavy casualties. While the Germans managed to penetrate the British positions at two points, they were quickly hurled out and the line this Not a single foot of ground was gained by the enemy.

British Pursue Fleeing Germans Four Miles Back

With the British Army in France, Aug. 21—Field Marshal Haigs forces continued to advance throughout the day in the Merville sector of the Lys salient. They were closely following the retiring Germans, who yesterday afternoon seemed to have gone back to an extreme depth of between three and four miles, and are still showing no inclination to come to a halt.

Especially to the south of this sector the Germans have left behind them numerous lines of retarding wire entanglements.

ETHERINGTON TO RETURN

The transfer of Lieut.-Col. W. T. Connell, formerly in Queen's Stationary Hospital, at Cairo, Egypt, and now in command of Queen's Military Hospital in France, has been approved by the Militia eDpartment at Ottawa. Several members of the staff will also be transferred to the overseas hospital, and Lieut.-Col Etherington will be released to take charge of the Queen's Military Hospital, in Kingston.

DRAFT FROM PETAWAWA

KINGSTON, Aug. 21.—From Petawawa military camp a complete battery and ammunition column will go with the Canadian expeditionary force to Siberia. This will mean a total of about 400 men. Those who join this force will go as volunteers, and the camp authorities are now making up the unit.

Huns Regard The United States As an Obstacle to Peace

LONDON, Aug. 21— Undoubtedly inspired by the Berlin Foreign Office the German newspapers are now busily propagating the suggestion that the United States is faking the place of Great Britain as the chief obstacle to peace and is ousting the Central Powers from their place in the world's trade. With high approval, Nordeutsche Allegemine Zeitung quotes the Viena press, describing America's economic war as a campaign against Teutonic powers and neutrals as well. This semi-official organ prints an article, entitled "Americen Militarism and an American Peace." Ti Frankfurter Zeitung, in a series of articles, appeals to England in her own supposed self-interest not to wait until America has robbed the European allies of all power to influence decision for peace. The paper quotes more than a column of extracts on the theme of America's growing influence in the war. It continues: "If Central Powers and Entente had now to make a decision themselevs both groups would be guided by consideration that it was time to let diplomacy say the word, but the English and French are no longer independent of Czar Wilson, who is feeding them, clothing them, and sending them money. Wilson is the real obstacle to peace."

NEW BRITISH OFFENSIVE STARTS SWEEPING HUNS BACK ON WIDE FRONT

MANY ENEMY POSITIONS TAKEN THIS MORNING

BRITISH DRIVE STARTED AT 4.45 THIS MORNING — GERMAN FIELD GUNS CAPTURED AND MANY PRISONERS — ATTACK PROGRESSING SATISFACTORILY ON WIDE FRONT —BYNG'S BOYS OF BRITISH THIRD ARMY MADE ATTACK WHICH WAS NOT PRECEDED BY ARTILLERY PREPARATION.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(9 a.m.—British troops at 4.45 this morning (Wednesday) opened an attack on a wide front north of the Ancre River. Satisfactory progress is being made, says an official statement.

Tuesday afternoon the British threw back strong German forces which attempted to counter-attack and recapture positions north and south of the Scarpe River.

BRITISH CAPTURE COURCELLES.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—(Noon)—British forces have captured Courcelles and Achiet-le-Petit and have reached Moyenville and Beaumont-Hamel in their drive which began this morning north of the Ancre River. According to advices from the front the British attack this morning was over a front of about 8½ miles. It is reported that the British have advanced about two or three miles along this front. The high contour between Adinfer and Moyenville was the northern scene of the attack and Puisieux-au-Mont the southern landmark of the front. The enemy here has been withdrawing lately in order to increase the depth of his defensive zone.

GERMAN FIELD GUNS CAPTURED.

Some German field guns and two hundred prisoners had been taken in the British drive at an early hour. The attack of the British this morning was made without artillery preparation. It was completely successful and was made by the British Third Army under General Byng.

FOCH'S SMASHING STRATEGY.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The whole of the attacking front is not clearly defined, but the wide front would probably include a line from the Ancre to the Scrape rivers. There has not been any heavy fighting recently on the line north of the Ancre, although the Germans some days ago retired slightly on a front between Beaumont-Hamel and Bucquoy. There has been more or less raiding activity, however. The battlefront from north of the Ancre River has not seen as many changes as either of the sectors between Ypres and Rheims since the beginning of the German offensive on March 21.

In making an attack it would appear that Marshal Foch is striving to break the old German line in the Arras area. Any considerable forward movement here would menace the German positions north and south for many miles. Strategically the blow would seem to be an accompanying one to the French offensive south of the Oise in a strong attempt to force the Germans to retire all along the line.

FRENCH ADVANCE CONTINUED.

PARIS, Aug. 21.—French troops continued their advance along the whole front between the Oise and the Aisne this morning. Carlepont and Cuts have been captured by the French. After sharp fighting ground has been taken west of Lassigny by the French, the statement says. ....

FRENCH CAPTURE 8,000 PRISONERS.

Marshal Foch, believing that the Germans are trying to retreat once more to the Hindenburg line occupied by them after the great retreat of the spring of 1917, gives them no rest by night or day. General Mangin's army attacked von Hutier's badly mauled troops again yesterday morning along a fifteen-mile front between the Oise and the Aisne. The Germans offered a desperate resistance, and despatches from the front state that the ground occupied by the French is thickly strewn with the enemy dead. Everywhere the attack went well, despite the resistance of the foe, and two hours after it was launched all the German first positions had been captured, and their lines had been penetrated to an average depth of two and a half miles. During the day Paris reports the capture of over eight thousand prisoners, which, added to the two thousand reported on Monday and Tuesday, makes a total of over ten thousand between the Oise and Aisne since the battle began.

Karl, of Austria, Promised to Lend "Cannon Fodder"

PARIS Aug. 21—The serious inroads the allies' persistent hammering is making into the German reserves which Lundendorff was hoarding for a supreme effort are shown by two significant facts—appearance of several Austrian divisions on the west front, and a number of boys of the 1916 class among the latest prisoners.

The proportion of boys taken in recent hauls indicate that practically all of the class of 1919 have been sent to the front.

Reliable reports from Switzerland assert that the recent conference at main headquarters in which the Kaiser and Emperor Karl participated was concerned chiefly with the crisis in man-power, resulting from the turn of events on the west front. It is reported that Karl reluctantly agreed to lend Ludendorff "cannon fodder if public opinion would stand the strain. The Germans pointed out that the war would be won or lost on the west front, and that Austria would be beaten there simultaneously with Germany, in case the latter was defeated.

Government organs in Austria already are preparing the public for the shock, and are explaining that closer military union with Germany was necessitated by the events at the front.

WOE UNTO HIM

The National Zeitung warns the Emperor against allowing the Germans to use the Austrian army.

"Woe unto Karl if he allows himself to be bullied into sending Austrians in the shambles," the newspaper declare. "It will chain his destiny to Von Lundendorff and will seal the fate of himself and the people forever."

From Vienna it is reported that Karl is worried and doubtful whether the people and the army will submit tamely to the German demands.

The Germans are now scraping up every man possible in the back areas for fighting, replacing hitherto unfit men in auxiliary work by girls.

Arrangements to Have Wood Hauled

G.T.R. to Transport Fuel from Algonquin Park to Old Ontario

TORONTO, Aug. 21—Negotiations have been completed by Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, with the G.T.R., whereby arrangements will be made to haul wood from Algonquin Park which has been cut by the Government and municipalities. The railway companies will take immediate steps to put in the sidings at the park.

It is estimated that it will require 3,500 cars to haul the wood. It is expected that t f erhsshah,-Se edto expected that the first shipments, which will be for Government order, will reach public institutions of the Province about the middle of September.

Canada's Allotement For Coal Year 1918-19

3,602,000 Tons of Domestic Size-- 274,977 For the West

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21—The Antracite Committee of the United States Fuel Administration announced that 3,602,000 grass tons of domestic size anthracite had been alloted to Canada for the coal year 1918-19. Of this allotment the Canadian Fuel Controller the announcement stated, had assigned 217,977 gross tons to northwestern Canada, 20,500 tons of which are to be reserved for railroad requirement.

The Anthracite Committee prohibits the shipment of hard coal into northwestern Canada by any producer or distributor other than those designated by the committee.

Hun Undersea Pirates Capture Large Canadian Fishing Trawler

Armed With Two Guns and Manned By Sixteen Germans--- Captured Trawler is Raiding Canadian Fishing Banks and Sinking Boats

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 21.—A German submarine late yesterday seized the big Canadian fishing trawler Triumph. The crew, who reached shore safely, said they believed that the German intended to use the trawler as a raider. An armed guard of Germans had been placed aboard and no preparation made to sink the ship, the men said.

SINKING FISHING SMACKS.

A Canadian Atlantic Port, Aug. 21.—The trawler Triumph, with two guns and wireless, and manned by sixteen Germans from a U-boat which captured her yesterday, is raiding the fishing banks off the coast of Nova Scotia and the crews of schooners sunk by the Triumph have arrived here. The vessels known to be sunk are the Una P. Saunders of Lunenburg; E. Pyatt Andrews, of Gloucester, Mass.; and the Francis J. O'Hara, of Boston.

Capt. Wallace Bruce, master of the Gloucester schooner, told the Canadian Press today that his vessel was held up by the Triumph yesterday afternoon and that he and his crew were given ten minutes to leave the ship. The Germans then sank her with bombs. The Triumph then moved over to the Boston and Lunenburg vessels, sinking them in turn.

The dories from the three vessels reached here at 10 o'clock this morning. The fisherman say that while making for this port they heard shots and they believe that a number of other fishing vessels have been sunk.

Captain M. Yrre, master of the Triumph, who landed here with his men this morning, told the Canadian Press that the captain of the submarine said that his was only one of six U-boats operating on this coast. "We intend to destroy the fishing fleets," the German captain said to Captain M. Yrre.

Belleville Depot for Returned Canadian Soldiers Pending Discharge

City Armouries Have Been Fitted up to Accommodate Large Number of Soldiers Who Will Make Head-Quarters Here And Medical Boards Will Be Established

Belleville will be a military demobilization centre with headquarters where returned soldiers will have living accommodation and receive Medical Boards. The Armouries have been fitted up for this purpose and over three hundred soldiers can be cared for there.

It is the intention to send to Belleville returned soldiers who are not hospital cases, walking wounded, who will be cared for here and ultimately receive their discharge here.

Medical Boards will be stationed here and the necessary staff.

Hospital cases will be kept in Kingston for treatment.

The old cannery has at last been abandoned by the authorities and dismantled.

Considerable new plumbing and steam heating has been installed in the Armouries to furnish comfort and convenience for the invalided soldiers. Smith & Co. have the plumbing and heating contract, which is quite extensive and includes shower baths, large lavatories, wash rooms, kitchen, etc.

The practice of sending all the wounded soldiers to Kingston and Toronto has been very unsatisfactory and it is planned to make discharge depots in various centres, including Belleville, which will be able to accommodate up to five hundred soldiers at one time.

G.T.R. EMPLOYES AROUSED.

Toronto, Aug. 21.—"Not paid according to the McAdoo award." This was the cry of every employe in the G.T.R. passenger department and other departments yesterday when they received their pay cheques for the past month. Immediately after the Railway Board of Canada accepted the McAdoo award for a basis of a settlement of railway employes' wages in Canada, President Kelly, of the G.T.R. is said to have agreed to the proposition, and the heads of the various departments were instructed to send in their pay sheets based on the McAdoo rate. This was done. When the pay cheques arrived the men received an increase in wages, but it was from $5 to $15 short of what they should have received. A meeting of protest will be held and the matter will be taken to the Railway Board for adjustment.

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless-, and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

Letters From Overseas

FROM PTE. J. W. HOLDEN

Miss Bessie Brown, 161 Albion street, city, has received the following letter from her cousin, Pte. J. W. Holden, at Seaford Camp, England:

Seaford, July 25, 1918.

Dear Cousin:—I think I have received three letters now since I wrote you. I should have written before but I just neglected it.

Well, I just came back off leave Sunday, from London. We all got a six-day leave for our draft-leave. Although we are not on draft yet there were a few called out for draft last Monday, but it was cancelled, so it may be quite a while yet. I went to London Tuesday of last week, and chumed with a couple of lads from Kingston. One of them belongs to the Free Methodist church, but he is good company. We had a good tour through London, and saw many sights of interest. One day we took a trip up the Thames river, a distance of twelve miles and took us about an hour and a half, and passed under twenty large bridges. The Thames river is not extra wide, but there are lots of boats on it. On account of it being a tidal river, navigation can be practiced without any means of power. They just fasten a large buoy on the front of a large boat and the current will take them the way the tide is going, and so on it goes.

We used to stroll in the Hyde Park for the evening. The first time we went in we saw a large crowd gathered in groups The first place we stopped they were talking on politics, the next was on the old-time religion. and you may be sure I didn't leave there until they stopped. My chum and I were singing long too; it was out of the Alexander hymn book, so we were singing away and looked quite happy and listened to all the preaching and testimonies. After awhile one of the leaders stepped up to us and said, "Say you boys are Christians, aren't you? Will you step out in the ring and witness for Christ?" We just smiled and went back until they got finished singing, then he said, "We will hear from two of our soldiers from Canada." I, being the longest on the Royal road, he wented me to speak first; so I stepped out and by the help of God I told some of the old story. I told them it was possible to live a Christian life in the army, and that I was not ashamed of Jesus, and I talked quite a while and the Lord certainly blessed me. I love the old way better every day. I was pleased to get your letters and to hear how God's cause is prospering. I think I have heard Mr. Mayhew. Didn't he marry one of the Rollins girls. You were saying you were glad you learned to put your trust in Him. So am I, because I am getting more watchful all the time. No, I didn't hear about Mr. Horper organizing in the States. I hope God will bless him and make him a blessing, and continue to win souls for His kingdom.

I got the little ping-pong safely. I was glad to get. I send photos home but I don't expect people to send me anything of much size because they are too hard to carry around and keep.

You spoke of mosquitoes. They are very scarce over here in comparison to Canada. I think I have only seen a couple as yet. I will be pleased to get the Standards if you have time to go to the trouble to send them each month, just the four, that would keep me in reading pretty good besides my Bible and other good literature I get. I have read the New Testament through since I left Canada, and I am at the Prophesy of Isaiah. Of course I read the Psalms and others between times. This chum of mine is not in that picture of the group, as he is in another hut now.

Yes, Bessie, I often think of that night when I and the other four were converted; but it is a wonderful thing to say that I love Him more and far better now than I did then. Because I have proved Him faithful, and intend to continue by His grace. Your last letter did me much good because you were blessed when you wrote it. I say,

Could my tears for ever flow,
Could my zeal no danger know!

I know God has a work for us all to do, but we are not all talented alike. May God make us zealous workers, and as I said in my testimony in London in the open air meeting, where there were hundreds listen. I know not how soon God will bid me to come, but I'll try to be ready to go, and share in the glory that waits me at home. This letter is much like yours. What is in the heart must come out. Your letter did me much good. I must close for now. Remember me to all your family, I am,

Your Cousin,
PTE. J. W. HOLDEN.

Worth More Than Gold, She Declares

Mrs Trimble Was Nearly Helpless Before She Took Tanlac

"If I could talk personally with everybody who has rheumatism I would certainly tell them to take Tanlac, for I have tried it and it was worth more than gold to me," said Mrs Rebecca Trimble of 53 Victoria Ave., Eastview, Ottawa, recently. Mrs. Trimble has been a resident of Ottawa for the past twenty-four years and is highly esteemed by all who know her.

'Only those afflicted the same way," Mrs. Trimble continued, "can understand the torture I have suffered for the past two years with rheumatism. My hips and legs troubled me most, but sometimes the pain would extend around to the small of my back. It was just a constant terrible aching that semed to go clean to the bone, and was so severe at times it would sicken me. At times my limbs would swell up twice their natural size, and the muscles would draw up until they felt like they were tied in knots. I couldn't stoop over at all and if I dropped anything I had to get someone to pick it up for me. From last February until May I was so crippled up that I could not get out out of the house and could just barely hobble around. Sometimes I suffered so I would go several nights without getting a wink of sleep. Nothing relieved me and I sometimes felt that I would never recover.

"I had gotten to where I had little fatih in anything to help me, and I din't believe much of what I read about Tanlac, but I was in so much misery I finally made up my mind to try it. Well, that was one of the best things I ever did. I am on my fourth bottle now, and am truly grateful for the way I have improved. The swelling is almost gone out of my limbs and the pain is so much less that I hardly notice it any more. My appetite is much better and I don't feel tired out all the time. I am now able to do my housework, and was out yesterday working in the garden. I have never taken a medicine that can compare with Tanlac and anyone suffering as I did will do wel lto try it."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

Kingston Party Nearly Drowned

KINGSTON, Aug. 21—Four local young people had a miraculous escape from drowning on Sunday afternoon between Milton Island and the mainland when their skiff overturned in the choppy sea. Those in the boat were Miss Carmel Norriss, Miss Ahearn, Wilfred Spencer and Joseph Ahearn, son of Joseph Ahearn, Montreal street. They had started out across the little strip of water, and were about half way when a heavy wave swept upon the bow, which was overloaded, and capsized the boat.

The occupants were thrown into the water, and but for the fact that two men who were fishing in the vicinity saw the accident, they might have drowned. The men rowed immediately to the place and rescued the nearly exhausted persons. A motorboat also arrived on the scene and the group were taken to the shore. capsizing of the boat and their rescue the ladies became very fatigued, and although one of them was able to climb upon the upturned skiff, so much excitement prevailed that it was overturned once more. When the fishermen arrived all but Mr. Ahearn were nearly exhausted, and it was with difficulty that they were taken to shore, and to the home of Mrs. Comeau, where their clothes were dried.

Toronto Leads Way In Caring For The Blind

Formal Opening of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind

[illegible]

TORONTO, Aug. 21—"If the blindness that came to us will only result in the awakening of Canada to her obligations and opportunities toward her civilian blind, our blindness will be well worth while."

Thus spoke a returned soldier, who lost his sight in his country's service on the fields of France. The awakening he referred to has come. It found practical expression to-day in the formal opening of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind with head offices at 36 King street east. It will find further expression on September 1st in the opening of an Industrial Training School for the Blind at 455 King Street west. Toronto is now the only city of its size in the world which has facilities for the training employment and after care of those among Canada's adult citizens whether soldier or civilian, who have lost their sight.

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind has been incorporated under the laws of the Dominion of Canada. Its great and primary function is to take up the graduates of the juvenile schools, of which there are four in Canada; train them, find them suitable employment, market their products, and care for the workers throughout life. Its director is Mr. C. W. Holmes, a graduate of the Perkins' Institute for the Blind in the United States, and for many years in charge of the industrial training for adult blind under the Massachusetts Commission. He lost his sight at the age of ten. Associated with him will be three other blind officials: Capt. E. A. Baker, Dr. Dickson, and A. G. Viets, the latter of the P.P.C.L.I. In the office at King street east will be a blind stenographer taking dictation from a dictaphone.

HOW BLIND ARE TRAINED

In the new training school 25 to 30 adults, soldier and civilian will prepare under the tuterage of Mr. Henry Wills, himself a blind man, to become self sustaining. As one class graduates, it will be sent on to another establishment yet to be organized and a new lot of pupils will take its place. They will commence with broom making already orders have been received for several score of brooms before a wheel has been turned. It is anticipated that the demand for all products of this school will far exceed the supply. Later other subjects to the probable number of 25 or more will be added to the course.

In all school and offices there will be only two or three sighted employes, principally messenger boys and two private secretaries. In all cases their wages be only 50 per cent of the wages paid the blind on the staff.

MOW MOVEMENT STARTED

This new movement on behalf of the blind of Canada been brought to a head largely through returned blinded soldiers. In two ways; their condition excites pity, and it has led them to plead for civilian blind. "If the Government is going to do something for us," they have said, "then the public should do something for blind civilians." The Government is expected to do a very great deal for those blinded heroes, to the extent of liberally supporting the new institute. Private funds, from any wealthy supporters will do the rest. The Provincial Government has already intimated its deep sympathy with the movement.

Up to date 35 blinded soldiers have returned to Canada. Four of these have been trained at St. Dunstans. Forty-five others are still at St. Dunstan's and in English hospitals. Most of them will eventually come home. In all, there are about 7,000 adult blind persons in Canada. Some of these have had no attention since they left the juvenile training schools. Many others have become blind since reaching the age of 21. For such among them as desire training in their home localities, the Institute will arrange to have suitable provisions made. Meanwhile, until it outgrows its initial capacity, the Toronto Industrial School is open to pupils from all parts of Canada. There are nine applications already on hand. When the work is properly organized a visiting field secretary will go from place to place in Toronto inquiring and making arrangements for the care of any needy persons found.

"My message to the public?" said Mr. Holmes when asked by The Star for a personal word or two about his work. "Simply this: the need is great: the means are now at hand; let everyone in Canada take up the word and pass it along how that need can now be filled."

Music and Drama

CANADA'S WOUNDED HEROES ON SCREEN

The work that Canada has done and is doing for her wounded soldiers in the way of hospital treatment and re-education is fully set forth in "Canada's Work for Wounded Soldiers," a five reel serial produced by the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment and shortly to be exhibited in theatres throughout Canada.

It is little realized by the Canadian public that Canada leads the world in this work, her system having have copied by Australia, and more recently by the United States.

The film shows every phase of the work, from the deck of a hospital ship in a Canadian port to the shop, office, or farm where the returned soldier is working, after having been educated at government expense. Any man whose war wounds prevent him from resuming his prewar occupation is entitled to such education, and is trained in a suitable trade or profession.

Some of the most interesting scenes in the film are those illustrating occupational therapy—where men are encouraged to use injured muscles or members by being given some simple and useful work such as carpentry and woodcarving, which are found to be particularly beneficial. Of special interest, not only to the general public, but to medical men are the scenes showing the use of the apparatus at Hart House, Toronto, and other places, for restoring flexibility and power to arms, legs and fingers made impotent by war wounds.

The film took eight months to complete, and the camera man travelled from coast to coast to photograph it.

"CIVILIZATION" COMING TO GRIFFIN'S

For the last half of the week the biggest production ever staged in the way of motion pictures will be shown at Griffin's and as Thomas H. Ince is noted as the peer of all spectacular cinema producers his work in this newest production of his called "Civilization" should just about pack the theatre for the three days that it will be here. Another added attraction that will be of interest to the theatre going public of Belleville is the first chapter of the new serial, "A Fight for Millions." The story is a logical one dealing with an event that happened a good many years ago in the States in which a great fight was waged for the millions left by an eccentric old man that had one daughter. How this case was finally won and the young woman came into her own is told in a very clever manner. The same cast of talented players that made "The Fighting Trail," and Vengeance and the Woman," serial so famous, will also be seen in this new serial. The price of admission for this great photoplay program is the same that has always prevailed.

Mr. W. Howe of Plainfield spent Sunday at the home of A. Sheffield.

Wedding Bells

WRIGHT—CLOSE

(Brockville Recorder)

A quiet wedding was performed by Rev. W. A. Hamilton, pastor of George Street Methodist church, Monday morning at eight o'clock, in the parsonage, when Mr. Alfred W. Wright, son of Mr. and Mrs. Randall Wright, of Belleville, was united in marriage to Miss Vera Victoria Close, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Close, 30 Jessie Street. The bride, who has been employed as cashier in the William Davies Co. store, was charmingly attired in a navy blue broadcloth suit. She wore a black fox stole, a black hat and carried pink roses. She was assisted by her sister, Miss Violet Close, of Ottawa, who was gowned in brown Georgette crepe with a black hat. She also wore black furs and carried a bouquet of sweet peas. Mr. Frank Rainbird, nephew of the groom, acted as best man. The groom is an employee of the Grand Trunk Railway with headquarters at Brockville, and, as with his bride, is deservedly popular among a wide circle of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Wright left on the 8.35 a.m. train for Toronto to spend their honeymoon, and on returning will reside in the Devonshire apartments.

The popularity of the bride and groom was attested by the many handsome and serviceable wedding gifts received. On Friday evening last, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A McLean, John street, a miscellaneous shower was tendered the bride, over fifty being present.

Thrice Wounded Gassed Twice

Gunner Benjamin Bunton of Belleville Again a Casualty

Ottawa, Aug. 20, 1918.
Mr. B. C. Bunton,
41 Pine Street,
Belleville, Ont.

Sincerely regret to inform you that 113117 Gunner Benjamin Charles Bunton officially reported admitted to Australian General Hospital, Abbeville on August 9. Gunshot wound in left leg.

Director of Records

Such was the telegram Mr. Bunton received yesterday from Ottawa informing him of the wounding of his son Ben, who joined the 8th C.M.R. in August 1915 and left for England in September of the same year, going to France early in the next year. This is the third time he has been wounded and also gassed twice. A similar telegram was received by Mr. Bunton on Sunday informing him that William Thomas had been wounded. The brothers were both wounded on the same day. Ben was a gunner in the 1st Canadian Motor Machine Gun Company and has served with that unit ever since he went to France. Before joining the soldiers he was employed in The Intelligencer Office.

CANADIAN PRISONER ESCAPED TO RUSSIA

LONDON, Aug. 20.—The Canadian Press encountered the first Canadian prisoner of war to escape via Russia Private 475283 H. E. Drope, who reached London, was formerly an insurance agent at Regina. He was captured and wounded at Sanctuary Wood in June, 1916, and sent to East Prussia. The following August he was employed in reconstruction work and sent to Hellsberg, one of the worst camps in Germany, where he spent 18 months. He escaped with a couple of Russians across Poland, the journey taking 35 days. He eventually reached Gradno, where the Bolsheviki gave him fre transportation to Moscow. There he fell in with the British Economic Mission and returned with them to England.

WALTER ALFORD

The funeral of the late Walter Alford took place yesterday afternoon under Masonic auspices from the family residence George Street to Christ Church and thence to Belleville cemetery, where interment took place in the family plot. Masonic services were conducted at the home under the direction of Worshipful Master Roy Stafford, of The Belleville Lodge No. 123, A.F.&A.M., and also at the grave At Christ Church services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Ratcliffe, of Deseronto and Ven. Archdeacon Beamish.

Rev. Mr. Ratcliffe spoke very feelingly of the life of Mr. Alford and his Christian spirit and many deeds of kindness which endeared him to so many. The example of such a life said the speaker, was of great value.

Miss Anna Ponton sang "Crossing the Bar" very sweetly and in keeping with the occasion. Appropriate music was rendered by the choir.

The bearers were Messrs John Newton, John McKeown, Arthur McGie, Lt.-Col. Barragar, James Peck and J. S. McKeown.

The floral tributes were many and very beautiful including a number of handsome designs.

EUGENE BABCOCK

The funeral of Eugene Babcock, who died following injuries received by falling from a bicycle, was held from the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Babcock, Ameliasburg, yesterday. Services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Sharpe, assisted by Rev. Mr. Nixon, and interment was made in the family plot at Picton cemetery. The funeral was very largely attended and the floral tributes were many and beautiful in design. The bearers were Melville Pulver Archie Catheral, Roy Pope, Peter Badgley, Thomas Wannamaker and Earl Storms.

British Tanker Crew Sinks 400-Foot Sub

And U.S. Steamer Captain Reports Still Another Hun Victim

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 21—A 400-foot enemy submarine was sunk by the gun crew of a British tanker according to an officer of the tanker. The tale of the battle between the tanker and the U-boat was told yesterday by John Crosby, chief mate of the former, from his bed in a hospital where he is being treated.

Crosby is said to be in a serious condition. A remarkable feature of the case is that he felt no ill effects during the engagement, which took place last Friday, and was in good health until yesterday morning. Then, safely in port, and beyond the reach of the underseas pirate, he collpsed.

"The second mate was on the bridge about three o'clock in the afternoon," Crosby said. "There was never a sign of any craft around, but he caught the wake made by a torpedo coming toward the tanker. He yelled and the ship was thrown out of her course. The torpedo missed by a few feet. Everyone was on deck at that time but we saw nothing of the U-boat that started the thing toward us.

"What we did see was another torpedo We zig-zagged, dodging the missle just as prettily as could be It went by us. Then the submarine came out of the water with her guns ready. She was all of 100 feet long, and could make 17 knots an hour. Our boat was good for 11 1-2 knots, but we began to go with the U-boat coming behind. She opened up with her guns and the fight started.

"I was acting as spotter for the gunner, calling the shells as they kicked up the water about the U-boat. Our twenty-sixth shot took the submarine right. She did not go up with a bang. What she did was to swing around slowly and drift broadside on. We did not slow down, but made for port as swiftly as we could travel. I am sure our shot destroyed the enemy craft."

CHALLENGE

The old Belleville Baseball Team composed of Smith, Gerow, Brown, Shamrock, Thomas, etc., challenge any ball team in the city to a game. Now you young ball artists buckle on your armour and see if you can down these old fellows who have brought fame to this city in olden days. We bar none except professionals. To make arrangements for game see Walter Gerow at once.

Delora baseball team, a fast bunch of ball tossers, will come to Belleville next Wednesday afternoon and play the Ontarios. The visitors defeated the Ontarios at Delora recently 5-2 and the locals are determined to even things up.

Toronto letter-carriers decide to leave the acceptance or rejection of the Government increase to the Ontario convention, but sent a protest to Ottawa.

Remember by Giving

300,000 Men
Brave the U-Boats for Us

¶ The men of the Merchant Marine have given loyal service—yes, and their lives—ungrudgingly and unflinchingly. They deserve the utmost we can do for them!

¶ The tragedy is that this splendid body of men is not recognized by governments, no provision is made for the relief of dependents—no separation allowance—no pension!

¶ It is left to public subscription to care for the widows and orphans, It is vital work our seamen are doing—for without the supplies and munitions carried by the Merchant Marine it would be impossible to keep our armies in the field.

No Government Allowance for their Dependents!

¶ 300,000 seamen of the Merchant Marine "carry on" in spite of the U-Boat and the floating mine. 15,000 have made their last voyage.

¶ One hundred and seventy-six merchant ships have been sunk since the war began, without leaving trace of ship, cargo or crew.

¶ All this is in the Allies' cause—it is for us! Isn't it the very least we can do, to take care of the widows and orphans, who otherwise will nurse their grief in poverty? Sooner or later, governments may make provision for this vital service, but until such time comes we have an unquestionable duty.

Give! Give liberally!
$1,000,000 is Ontario's objective!
Ontario has never failed!

Foch Plays Cat. Hindy the Mouse On West Front

NEW YORK Aug. 21—The essential instability of the German front in the west is again demonstrated by Marshal Foch's sudden thrust between the Lassigny and Soissons battlefronts.

This is one of the most important sectors to which Von Hindenburg must cling if he is resolved upon preserving his present position in Picardy and along the Vesle. Meanwhile Marshal Foch's easily accomplished lunge means that Von Hindenberg cannot count on holding any single area in the west and, in fact, has entered strategically well into the grip of the allies' relentless initiative.

The new advance made by the French is highly dangerous for Von Hindenburg, be cause it marks the beginning of a wedge which threatens to make a new pocket in Picardy and at the same time create another salient north of Soissons on top of the old Marne pocket. Von Hindenbug must desperately resist the continuance of this manoeuvre or admit his intention to retire still farther toward Belgium and Germany. If he devides on resistence more troops must be found for first-line operations, which means a further depletion of Germanys sadly-wilted reserves.

U. S. DRIVE COMING SOON

Marshal Foch has Von Hindenburg backing into an increasingly hopeless position. It is impossible for Von Hindenburg to retain possession of his present trench mileage while Marshal Foch continues his incessant local drives, and at the same time accumulate reserves to use against America's forthcoming drive.

Marshal Foch is now seeking to harass Von Hindenburg at constantly new points, so that the maximum number of German troops possible shall be kept in the front lines and away from the reserves. By this means Von Hindenburg will eventually be forced back, because when the final decision is made the German reserves must be built up or the war will be lost to the Kaiser by default. Von Hindenburg is already beginning to feel that Marshal Foch is playing with him like a cat with a mouse.

THE PRICE OF FREEDOM.

Ten thousand eight hundred and forty-two, killed, wounded and missing, Canadians is the price paid on the altar of sacrifice for the glorious victories in the present offensive which is bringing measurably closer the dawn of peace when the shadows which have darkened the face of world liberty will be swept away by the splendid sunlight of permanent peace and the horrible Kultur of military-mad Germany will be nothing but a foul memory.

Many homes in Canada will be sad because of messages from across the sea that loved ones have made the supreme sacrifice for God and Home and Native Land, and great and widespread will be the anxiety for the safety of loved ones lest they be among that long list of killed, wounded and missing.

To those of us not directly represented upon the world's battle-fields with our own flesh and blood there should come the message "CARRY ON!" "Do your bit" wherever opportunity permits—farm work, increased contributions, sending of parcels and letters to soldiers, speeding up the knitting circles, Red Cross, War Contingent, Women's Patriotic Associations, and every line of war effort. And don't forget smokes for the boys who are causing the Kaiser's dream of world domination to fade away behind the silent grim grey heaps of his deluded soldiers who fought and died for the realization of one man's selfish ambition.

We can only be worthy in the least degree of the magnificent sacrifices of our soldiers if we speed up our war effort to the highest notch and in giving to the cause GIVE UNTIL IT HURTS.

HAVE YOU MET THIS KAISERITE?

You find him in hotel lobbies, smoking compartments, clubs, offices and even in homes. He thinks it's clever to repeat "inside facts" about the war. He is a scandalmonger of the most dangerous type.

He repeats all the rumors, criticisms and lies he hears about our country's part in the war. He gives you names, places, dates. He is very plausible.

But if you pin him down, if you ask him what he really knows at first-hand, he becomes vague, non-committal, slippery. He tries to make you think that the Government can fool you, if you are willing to let it —but can't fool him. No, siree! He's too smart.

People like that are hurting your country every day. They are playing the Kaiser's game. They are fighting against this country. They are making it harder to win the war.

Through their vanity or curiosity or treason they are helping German propagandists to sow the seeds of discontent.

For every lie that has been traced originated with a German spy. Don't forget that.

There was the one about President Wilson's Secretary. It was said and said again, and spread broadcast, that Mr. Tumulty was convicted of treason and shot at Fort Leavenworth. That lie was easily scotched by a public statement from Mr. Tumulty himself.

But other lies are more insidious—harder to down. In another paragraph some of them are told; but they are only a few of many.

They are taken from a publication, issued by the Committee on Public Information, called: "The Kaiserite in America"—101 German lies. This little book describes the methods of Germans here and quotes 101 lies that have been nailed by a newspaper which took the trouble to run them down.

Get in the fight to stamp out this malicious slander. As you travel about the country, or even in your social life at home, run down these lies. Call the bluff of anyone who says he has "inside information." Tell him that it's his patriotic duty to help you find the source of what he's saying.

If you find a disloyal person in your search give his name to the Department of Justice and tell them where to find him. It is your plain and solemn duty to fight the enemy at home by stamping out these lies.

The above is from the Committee on Public Information at Washington. It applies to Canada as it does to the United States.

Nail lies like these:

That Red Cross supplies are being sold to shopkeepers by dishonest Red Cross officials.

That the Masonic orders have protested against allowing the Knights of Columbus to build recreation huts for soldiers.

That interned German prisoners are being fed five meals a day.

That this is "a rich man's war or a "business man's war.

That farmers are profiteering.

That nine American warships were sunk in a disastrous engagement in the North Sea.

That Canadian soldiers are being needlessly sacrificed.

That Canadian transports have been wrecked with great loss of life.

That the Prime Minister and members of the Cabinet are joy-riding in England and neglecting Canada's business.

That Germany, undefeated, would respect the terms of any peace treaty.

And many other lies and misrepresentations, malicious, cunning and more deadly than poisoned arrows, Hun secret propaganda, seeking to weaken the determination of free nations to force militant Germany to her knees.

∴ CRISP COMMENT ∴

The Kaiser's armies are fighting to make the world safe for his sons, remarks the Montgomery, Alabama, Advertiser.

Getting hot under the collar qualifies anyone for membership in the anti-collar league which has sworn off the abomination of starched collars and disappearing collar buttons. That's a society to tie up to.

Watchman, what of the night? City Fathers, what of the winter and the poor people, and the scarcity of fuel. Of course something is being done, but the public would like to know just what the prospects are for freezing, or otherwise.

With all the warnings to put in a good fuel supply now casting a winter's chill upon our summer happiness we would appreciate a bulletin from the Civic Fuel Committee that a bountiful supply of emergency coal and wood has been provided for. Wood can not be so very scarce when a Bancroft party is able to advertise several hundred cords for sale.

These be moving days for the Brockville Recorder-Times, the new newspaper home of Hon. Geo. P. Graham being finished and ready for the Grit bridegroom and the Tory bride. Geo. P.'s sanctum, it is said, is a dream of the interior decorator's art with all the latest fandangles, including a disappearing bathtub, a view of the grand old St. Lawrence, and a distant glimpse of Ogdensburg, where the Wurtzburger still flows. It is suspected that George Perry Graham prefers the editorial chair to the Seats of the Mighty at Ottawa.

OTHER VIEWS

Justification for Food Board.

Winnipeg Free Press

The report of the Canadian Food Board gives triumphant justification to the position often challenged that Canada is not allowing all the battles to be won overseas and all the awards to be collected there. It also must silence some of the shallow criticism directed against the efforts of the Food Board, criticism which for the most part found its genesis in chagrin at the rulings of the Board. Results talk these days, and the results proclaim a story of exports to the Allied countries and armies running into the thousands of percentages over the exports of the years immediately preceding the war; they proclaim Canada self-supporting along lines for which before the war she partially at least depended upon other countries; they proclaim a nation successfully graduated from the primary class of thrift and that without any sacrifice, which can be dignified with that name, of accustomed comforts.

The Bully of the Nations.

From Life.

Germany leaped into the war secure in the knowledge that her man-power, armament and general preparedness were superior to that of all the rest of Europe combined. Had she lacked that knowledge she would have stayed out of the war with great determination and zeal. Events have justified her policy; for wherever she has been met, man for man and gun for gun, she has met nothing but defeat in nearly four years of fighting. Germany is a professional, congenial, traditional, typical bully. She never has been, is not, and never will be capable of tackling anybody her own size without getting the worst of the argument. She hasn't the moral fibre, the breeding or the spiritual resources to be capable of overcoming an opponent whose physical strength is equal to her own.

A Common Expression.

Vancouver Sun.

From a book on Gautemala we learn that if one wishes to call a newsboy there one has but to murmur: "Amatlacuilotlitcatlaxlahuille." We think the book has made a mistake. That is simply the world-wide cry of a newsboy with an extra with the Gautemalan accent added.

The Poet's Corner

1916 — AUGUST 21 — 1918

Be still, my soul! Another year has gone'
Fret not thyself, nor weep today;
Our loved one waiteth at the goal;
We'll mark another mile and go our way.

Though the path be long and often rough,
By night, by day, we travel on;
Daily nearer cometh the end,
Our earthly journey will soon be done.

To quicken memory or deepen thought
At this green mound we linger not;
Hither we came in sacred love
To plant a flower on the hallowed spot.

We, who live and love beyond the world,
Are severed not by clods of clay;
Death cannot kill what never dies
Nor divide our spirits night or day.

Enriched with memory of the past,
Toward a truer life above,
Proceed, my soul, in faith and hope,
To know forever a diviner love.

THE DEBT.

For every inch of Sussex Down, and every English flower;
For every spot where beauty lives to light this darkened hour;
For every winding English lane; for every woodland glade—
Some English lad for England the price in blood has paid.

For every inch of England, and all her treasure, too;
For men who yawn in West-end clubs, and know not what they do;
For every Matinee and Show where pleasure-seekers throng—
Some English lad has locked with Death, and flung his Soul along.

For every hope of England; for Liberty and Peace;
For dreams of fairer England, when War's Red Hell shall cease;
For those who greedily exploit the merchandise of hate—
Some English lad for England has passed the Awful Gate.

For every child of England who died in flood of youth;
For every broken heart that seeks the everlasting Truth;
For every hour of anguish that tears the baffled soul—
Let dreams of fairer England lift eyes toward the Goal!

—Arthur F. Thorn, Corporal.

Canada's Ace.

One of the books receiving widespread notice at the moment is Major Bishop's work on his exploits as a famous flying man. Not that the young Canadian soldier, V.C., D.S.O., and M.C., refers to himself in such flattering terms. He merely tells with breezy enthusiasm and cheerfulness what his experiences have been, and incidentally one learns how he received them.

Farewell to Historic Home.

Sarnia urgently needs a society to inculcate appreciation of the value of historic landmarks, as evidenced by the fact that the old Mackenzie home is now being torn down. It has been inseparably identified with the early history of Lambton County since the days of Hon. Alexander Mackenzie's premiership.

During July and August he business office of The Intelligencer will close at five o'clock on Saturdays.

The paper will be published at one o'clock. Subscribers will please govern themselves accordingly.

A Laugh or Two

A Near Employe.

"Ever been on Government work before?" asked the manager of the job-seeker.

"Very nearly, sir," was the reply.

"What do you mean by very nearly?"

"Well, you see, sir, there wasn't quite enough evidence to convict me."

The Upper Class.

"So you wish to marry my daughter," said the proud parent.

"Yes, sir," replied the young man.

"How much money are you making?" asked the governor.

"Forty dollars a week," was the reply.

"Forty dollars a week! Why, my daughter can make that in a munitions plant and not work overtime."

Far As They Go.

"Every man is the architect of his own fortune."

"Yes, but most of them rest after planning the wine cellar and kitchen."

Hinc Illæ Lacrymae.

"Doesn't peeling onions make you weep?"

"No, but paying twenty cents a pound for 'em does."

With a Double Half Hitch.

"They sent the marine reporter in the absence of the society editor to write up the wedding of the heiress to a foreign nobleman, and how do you suppose he headed it?"

"How?"

"Tied Up to a Peer!"

A Regular One.

"Did your new dressmaker give you a fit in that gown?"

"I should say so. They had to call in two doctors when I saw myself in it."

A Public Blessing.

It's strange that no inventor
Has thought of this before—
A folding-bed that closes up
Should its incumbent snore.

How Labor Unions Grow.

The seventh annual report of the labor organizations of Canada shows that where as in 1911 the total of trades unionists in Canada was 133,132, in 1917 it had grown to 204,630. There are now 1,974 unions in the Dominion, of whose members 27,130 are overseas—26,438 as volunteers and 692 as reservists.

Called by Death

MR. ARTHUR TERRILL

The death occurred Monday at his residence, 95 Dundas street, of Arthur Terrill, aged 66, third son of the late Simon T. Terrill.

Arthur Terrill was born in Brighton Township, in 1852, and resided there until five years ago when he moved to this city, taking a position in the Rolling Mills. On Saturday he was taken suddenly ill and gradually sank into death. He is survived by his widow, thre daughters, Mrs. Bernard Sharpe of Wooler, Misses Helen and Edith of this city; also two brothers, James and John of this city; and one sister, Mrs. John Macoun of Merriton.

Mr. Terrill was a member of the Society of Friends and was a Mason and a Forester. The funeral services will be held at the Friends Church at Wooler, with interment in the Friends' Cemetery.

MARRIED MEN NOT EXEMPT

WASHINGTON, Aug 21—Consideration of the new man-power bill extending the draft ages will begin in the Senate next Thursday. With a quorum present yesterday, the Senate set aside the agree for vacation recesses until August 24th and cleared the way for taking up the draft measure without further delay.

No general exemption of married men simply because of their married status is contemplated by the War Department in preparing for the proposed extension of draft ages. Secretary Baker declared yesterday. "There are many married men in the country who ought to go and fight as well as single men, he added.

Catch Fish; Win the War

THERE is no reason to doubt that Omar had a fishing excursion in mind when he said, "O, wilderness were Paradise enow." Likely he was on his way to a favorite nook for bass. Coming back, pessimism might have crept into the verse as into most of the quatrains. Moreover, all that we know about Paradise we imagine. There is no experience, since from that bourne no traveller has returned. When one does make his way back we shall be in a position to give a proper definition of Paradise. Until then it must remain something to which one looks forward with keen pleasure. In this sense there need be no hesitation in saying that the ideal combination of wilderness and Paradise is just about a hundred miles north of Toronto. The jumping-off place is Penetang; the Open Sesame is "bait," the treasure to be unlocked is fish. The final result is a chastening and strengthening of character.

From Penetang north and west through the Georgian Bay and its 80,000 islands — count them — 80,000 — The Voice of the Red Gods wails and roars, and it is there that the young men's feet are turning to tramp on the tail of the black bass, the green bass, and the more tenor pickerel and pike and the baritone lunge. All these fish taste much alike, but they are valued by anglers in proportion to their reluctance to be dragged into the boat and submit to a bump on the bean. Thus the black bass, though smaller than the green, is more highly esteemed, for when a black bass swallows the bait the impression of the person on the other end of the line is that a bull terrier has suddenly taken hold, and fears for his own life mingle with hope that he may survive to leave a record of the encounter and show up Homer. The pike, too, is larger than either of the bass, but is of a more pessimistic disposition, being inclined to murmur "kismet" when he is hooked, instead of upsetting the boat and swallowing the occupants as seems to be the ambition of the maskinonge.

North of Penetang the waters swarm with fish, not only the varieties mentioned, but with perch, sunfish, rock bass, minnows and other members of what a poetical writer might call the "finny tribe." They would constitute a satisfactory solution of our food problem if they could be freely translated from the water to the frying-pan or the air-proof tin. They are, however, mysterious and irregular in their habits, and only long and patient study will enable the fisherman to so win their confidence that he can count on being able to sit down at the end of the day and eat a satisfying meal of them. Their office hours are not to be found even in the guide books, nor can their haunts be tabulated as was the case of human beings in the mediaeval ages before the Committee of One Hundred rolled the Stream and converted patrons of the back room into patrons of the back lane and adjacent purlieus.

The general principle adopted by fishermen is that the further away you get from camp, and the more trouble you have in getting there, the better is the fishing. What foundation in fact there is for this belief is not easy to say. Sometimes it seems to be invalidated, for it has been known that a party camping five miles from civilization paddled ten miles further into the wilderness and got back with not more than a few dozen fish, none of them more than five or six pounds, while another party lodged on the brink of civilization, paddled five miles up to the wharf of the campers first mentioned and took fish of a number and size that caused bad blood between the two parties of fishermen. The same principle may be observed locally, for one can get more fish on King street east in half an hour than he can get in Lake Ontario in half a year.

But an injustice would be done to fishermen if the impression were conveyed that what they desired was merely to eat a lot of fish. It is the sport of catching them that makes the appeal. Hence the thread-like lines, the willowy rods, the dainty little hooks. Hence also the sportsmanlike practice of throwing back every fish not more than one and three-quarter inches long that accidentally impales itself upon the barb. If one merely wanted to glut a carnal appetite upon fish he would buy a can of salmon. Instead of which the true fisherman does not eat the canned salmon until all his other supplies of bacon and eggs and beef have run short. In fact, the true fisherman does not repine if he fails to catch any fish at all. He realizes that his apparent failure is not due to any negligence on his own part at all, but rather to the fish who fail to keep the rendezvous, and to the rather low order of intelligence that prevails among them. He establishes himself in a shady place and submits his worm, wriggling with anticipatory rapture, to the inspection of the underworld. If the real fish do not bite, there are others that will. The little chaps will obligingly eat the worm and make hail fellows of themselves. At any rate there is a likelier spot farther up."—J. V. McAree, in the Mail and Empire.

"Keeping Canada British."

Bishops and members of Parliament were present at the annual meeting held in London of the Maple Leaf Fellowship for Supplying British Teachers to Western Canada. Bishop Colchester said the work done was of enormous importance in keeping Canada British and Christian, but they must have more schools and teachers. Bishop Norwich suggested the best way of honoring the memory of dead Canadian heroes was by making provision for their children. Joynson Hicks, member of Parliament, urged the necessity in reconstruction after the war of directing emigration to the Dominions to the greatest possible extent. Teachers were especially necessary to educate aliens in our ideals.

U-Boat Officer In N.Y. Saloon

Hun was Confronted by Captain Whose Ship He Had Sunk

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20—From an authoritative naval source it was learned last night that German submarines have twice cut cables along the coast of the United States and also taht officers and men of German U-boats have had the boldness to land at night on the shores of this country. Information has been given to the Navy Department that an under-officer of one of the submarines recently operating off the Virginia coast is believed to have gone unnoticed to New York city and mingled with crowds in saloons and other places in that city.

The information submitted to the Navy Department regarding the alleged trip of this under-officer of the department credit it as being true. The statement that ane German officer had the hardihood to land on the coast and to make a journey was made to a high official of the American Naval Administration by the Captain of a merchant vessel which was recently sunk offf the southern coast.

The merchant Captain's name has been withheld, but it was authoritatively learned to-day that he came to Washington and personally submitted his facts to high naval officials in so straightforward and circumstantial manner that the latter have no reason to believe he is mistaken.

Real Help For Tired Feet

A busy day and on your feet most of the time—a long, tiresome trip or a hike in the country—new shoes to break in—all these mean tired feet. Soothe and rest them by applying a few drops of Absorbine, Jr. Or, if you are very tired and your feet burn, ache or swell, soak them in a solution of Absorbine Jr., and water. Relief will be prompt and lasting.

You will like the "feel" of this clean, fragrant and antiseptic liniment. It penetrates quickly, leaves no greasy residue, and is intensely refreshing. Only a few drops needed to do the work as Absorbine, Jr., is highly concentrated.

You will find dozens of uses for Absorbine, Jr., as a dependable first-aid remedy and regular toilet adjunct; to reduce inflammatory conditions—sprains, wrenches, painful, swollen veins. To allay pain anywhere, To spray the throat if sore or infected. To heal cuts, bruises, lacerations and sores.

Industry Fails.

A new Montreal industry, started with every promise of success, is about to expire. When the Ontario License Board gets through with its investigations the making of plaster pedestals of a certain type wil no longer be popular. There is, of course, no inherent evil in a plaster pedestal. As a pedestal it is dry enough to satisfy even the commissioners. The trouble lies in the fact that sometimes, through no fault of their own, plaster pedestals get damp, and give forth an odor that is no longer respectable in the province.

It was such a mishap to a plaster pedestal in the railway station at Timmins, Temiskaming, that put a damper upon the new industry. An official of the board was wandering about the station, his nose slightly thrust forward, as is the habit of liquor inspectors hunting for odors, when he noticed moisture coming from a carefully wrapped up pedestal. The phenomena aroused his curiosity, which was not satisfied until he had broken open the bottom of the ornament and extracted a five-gallon tin of high wines. A further search revealed another five gallons similarly camouflaged. Both parcels were consigned under a fictitious name and were not claimed. The board, however, is tracing the shipment back to Montreal.

Wheat In Canada.

There were 20,500,000 bushels of wheat in Canada on May 31 last, a census made by the Board of Grain Supervisors has shown. There were, moreover, products equivalent to an additional 14,150,000 bushels of wheat. There were in the farmers' hands in the West 5,000,000 bushels; in Western elevators and flour mills, about 6,750,000 bushels; in Eastern elevators, 6,625,885 bushels, and in transit about 2,000,000 bushels. It is estimated that there are around 6,750,000 bushels in Eastern Canada, and 7,400,000 in Western. Adding these products to the actual wheat in store, there were the equivalent of 34,650,000 bushels in the country on May 31. In the month of April the British Wheat Export Co. exported 11,000,000 bushels.

Govt. Attacked For Not Giving Figures

"Cress Stupidity Not to Give Provincial Returns of M.S.A." Says Ottawa Journal

OTTAWA, Aug. 21—The Ottawa Journal Press had the following editorial comment yesterday morning: "Some one in authority in the Government should quietly snub the pompous officials who are seeking to suppress publication of the number of men raised by Provinces under the Military Service Act. The argument that publication of such figures imparts valuable military information to the enemy is too childish to be seriously considered. If that argument possesses any merit, then our military leaders have been guilty of supplying useful information to the enemy for more than four years, because ever since August 1914, statements have been issued every fortnight showing the number of men recruited in the various military districts. But as is perfectly obvious the argument has no merit. It seems to be nothing more than one of those exhibitions of crass stupidity with which a certain type of military official every now and then seeks to promote a policy of war secrecy.

"And to the Government the Journal newspaper would respectfully submit that if there exists any orders or regulations prohibiting publication of reasonable information respecting operation of the Military Service Act the sooner they are repealed the better. The cornerstone of the Ministry's policy last December was that the Military Service Act would be applied fairly and impartially in (to quote the Prime Minister every town and city and Province in this country). The people are interested in knowing whether or not that promise is being fulfilled. They are not likely to be satisfeid by a cry of "Hush, baby," that silly twilight policy which has wrought such incalculable harm to allied effort throughout the war."

ONTARIO'S GROWTH.

War Has Had Marked Effect on the Province.

Since the year before the beginning of the war, the increase of the population of Toronto, up to the year 1916, has been 99,285. The figures of the Registrar-General's Department show an increase for the Province of Ontario, but that of 1914 was away bigger than the other years.

The population figures, as given by the Registrar-General's report, are:

1913	2,677,600
1914	2,749,840
1915	2,757,350
1916	2,776,885

The figures for 1917 are not yet available, but are expected in a short time, and it is thought these will show a slight increase over 1916.

During the years recorded the birth figures have shown an increase till 1916, and then a decided decrease is notable. The figures are:

1913	64,516
1914	66,225
1915	67,032
1916	62,264

Whether there is any truth in the old story that during war time male births outnumber female births is hard to say, but since the war started the fact is apparent. But in 1914 (the war broke out in August) the reports show that the male births in the earlier months were just as much in advance of the female births as during the latter months.

The number of births by sex during the last three years are:

	Male.	Female.
1914	34,031	32,194
1915	34,701	32,331
1916	33,663	31,601

Since 1913 there has been a large decrease in the number of marriages in the province. In 1913 there were 3,697 more marriages than in 1916. In 1913 there were 26,998 couples united (while in 1914 the figures had dropped to 24,245, in 1915 to 23,506, and in 1916 to 23,401.

Since the beginning of 1913 135,631 people have died in the province, 1916 having the largest record, followed by 1913. The figures for deaths are:

1913	34,317
1914	32,440
1915	33,294
1916	35,580

The statistics show that the cities have the smaller increases in births, while the places other than cities and towns have the larger figures.

Another thing that the report brings out is the fact that illegitimate births have not increased since the war. The figures, as quoted show that there has been a decrease since 1913:

1913	26.6
1914	22.1
1915	21.9
1916	20.9

The Largest Drydock.

More particulars of the contract which the St. John Drydock & Shipbuilding Co. has secured from the Department of Public Works for the construction of a drydock and ship repairing plant at Courteney Bay, St. John, are available. The contract calls for the construction of a drydock which will be of the first class and the largest on this side of the Atlantic. It will, when completed, be capable of accommodating the greatest ships of any navy in the world or the largest mercantile vessels now built or contemplated.

The length of the new dock will be 1,150 feet, and its width at the bottom 125 feet, with 40 feet of water over the sills. The control of the enterprise is in the hands of the Canadian Dredging Co., Ltd., of Midland, Ont., a strong and wealthy corporation which has acquired control of the stock of the St. John Drydock & Shipbuilding Co. It is expected that steel shipbuilding will form an important part of the enterprise, provided arrangements now in contemplation are consummated, and that keels for two 10,000-ton vessels will be laid within the next year or year and a half.

The work on the new drydock and certain dredging operations in the harbor of St. John which the company has contracted for will, it is expected, be started within sixty days, and both should be completed within three years. The contracts call for an expenditure of close upon ten million dollars.

Sudden Thunder Works a Wonder.

A sharp peal of thunder during a severe electrical storm at Ormskirk is credited with restoring his sight to a blind soldier. The veteran, who had been sightless for a year as a result of shell-shock and gassing, was asleep at the time. The shock awakened him suddenly and he immediately fainted. When he recovered consciousness he discovered to his amazement and delight that his sight had been completely restored.

An Extensive Yawn.

Hatchery Provides Many Fish.

The Dominion Fish Hatchery at Belleville has in the past four years provided for distribution in restocking provincial lakes and streams no fewer than 21,539,000 salmon trout fry, the total being made up: 1915, 1,500,000; 1916, 6,900,000; 1917, 6,089,000; and 1918, 7,050,000.

STRATEGIC RAILWAYS.

Work Done By the Canadians Behind British Lines.

Behind the new fighting line since the Germans' advance in April there has grown up a network of strategic railways making a formidable system, which more than compensates us for the loss of those lines we had to abandon and destroy in our retirement. Almost from the day the enemy crossed the Nord Canal practically every battalion of Canadian railways troops has been working unceasingly at the task, some units acting as pioneers in the construction of the great defence line that causes the Germans to hesitate on this sector.

Little French villages that never hoped for steel links with the larger cities have now become, as if by the rubbing of some magic Aladdin's lamp, great junctions where trainloads of supplies come and go every part of an hour. The new lines run through the fertile fields of growing crops, but careful building has saved the Frenchman his harvest, but for the necessary strip of permanent way. There are alternate routes around towns, which the Boche might shell, and day by day stores of carefully-concealed ammunition dumps grow up which are fed by the strips of steel.

"Speaking from a strategical point of view," said a railway staff officer, "we are in a better position to-day than we were on the Somme. The hundreds of miles of new track have been built especially for military use and conform with the fighting front. All possibilities have been considered. Where, previously, we had to rely on civilian-built lines which wound tediously round the country by indirect routes, we now have a military system which takes out supplies in the quickest and most direct way to where they are needed. The latest German thrust gave us the first test of the system, and divisions were shifted with a speed that must have surprised the enemy."

In the same way some of the Canadian auxiliary troops have been working untiringly in the gun spurs behind the new front, from which the big howitzers pound the enemy positions. One battery from the Middle West has the record of construction, 12 of these in a week, and each one was cleverly camouflaged from the prying eyes of German airmen.

From the new railheads, many of which have been christened with Canadian names, here start freshly-constructed light railway systems that wind their way through little valleys still screened from the enemy to the fine, new reserve trenches which have not yet had to be used, and perhaps never will be. You cannot run trains over a line drawn in blue pencil on an ordnance map, and the railway engineers have to build scores of miles that might not be used. They must be there for an emergency.

The construction of the new British defences—railways play a prominent part — have been marvelously complete and have been so rapid that before the Germans could take breath for another stage of the attacks on this northern section, the fabric of a fortress faced them and grew into such menacing shape that they hesitated. Now, if he takes another fling at the middle road to the coast he will have to pay the same great price in blood. The "army behind the army" has done its duty, and built well—even better than it destroyed in the sombre days at the end of March.

Hunnish Heartlessness.

An incident related in a letter received by Norman G. Heyd, of Toronto, from his brother, Major C. G. Heyd, in charge of an American Base Hospital, throws an interesting sidelight on the relations which exist between the officers of the German army and the men under their command.

A German private and a captain were brought into the hospital and placed in cots quite close together. In a short time it was seen that the private's wounds would prove fotal, and, as there was no one else in the ward who could speak German, a nurse approached the officer and asked if he would speak to the dying man, and take any message he might have for his friends.

"In our country officers do not speak to privates unless it is to give commands," was the heartless answer, and the privato soon passed away.

THAT CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Mrs. Godden Tells How It May be Passed in Safety and Comfort.

Fremont, O.—"I was passing through the critical period of life, being forty-six years of age and had all the symptoms incident to that change—heat flashes, nervousness, and was in a general run down condition, so it was hard for me to do my work. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended to me as the best remedy for my troubles, which it surely proved to be. I feel better and stronger in every way since taking it, and the annoying symptoms have disappeared."—Mrs. M. Godden, 925 Napoleon St., Fremont, Ohio.

Such annoying symptoms as heat flashes, nervousness, backache, headache, irritability and "the blues," may be speedily overcome and the system restored to normal conditions by this famous root and herb remedy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complications present themselves write the Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions how to overcome them. The result of forty years experience is at your service and your letter held in strict confidence.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Aug. 20. — With receipts of 3856 cattle on the Union Stock Yards Exchange yesterday there was a good demand for all heavy steers with weights and quality. Choice butcher heifers were steady, but all classes of butcher cows were lower, selling off from 25c to 50c per cwt. Canners sold lower by 25c per cwt., ranging from $5.50 to $6.25. There was a fair enquiry for breedy stockers and feeders, and good milch cows and springers selling at satisfactory prices. The prospects for the balance of the week are good for steers with weight, fat and quality.

The run of hogs was 1045 and the price held steady at 20¼c fed and watered, 20½c weighed off cars, and 19¼c f.o.b. The packers have officially intimated that the price will be to-day cut 75c per cwt., making the rate 19½c fed and watered, and this price seems likely to obtain for the balance of the week.

TO PROTECT THE BIRDS

TREATY MADE BETWEEN UNITED STATES AND CANADA.

The People In the Dominion Were Anxious to Have the Law Established, But Technicalities Raised Under the American Constitution Caused Delays — Everything Has Now Been Satisfactorily Arranged.

THE executive branch of the United States Government is empowered to enter into treaties with foreign nations, but the judicial branch may, in certain cases, render such treaties invalid, while, if the agreements are not satisfactory to Congress, and involve any action by that body, the legislative branch may render them nugatory. Thus, to give real strength and movement to international conventions, the three branches of the Federal Government must be in accord. An interesting illustration is afforded by the Migratory Bird Treaty recently signed by President Wilson. The treaty was agreed to long ago, but questions arose as to the power of the Washington Government to dispose of a subject over which the states had, in the past, generally asserted and exercised jurisdiction. Canada being the first nation on the North American Continent to become involved in the present war, and realizing the vital necessity of protecting its crops, sought to enter into a treaty with the United States which would guarantee the protection of useful birds flying at intervals hither and thither between the two countries.

The Dominion Government found no difficulty in arousing interest in its purpose across the border, and it required no time for the proper authorities in these neighboring nations to agree upon the terms of a measure designed to protect birds now regarded by instructed agriculturists as of inestimable value in crop production. The treaty framed sought to shield from destruction, and perhaps from annihilation, various game birds, including water fowl, migratory insectivorous birds, including bobolinks, catbirds, chickadees, meadow larks, thrushes, wrens, and many others more or less familiar on the farms of the United States and Canada. Among the game birds, those specifically named were the auk, the grebe, the gull, the heron, the petrel, and the tern.

There already existed in the United States a migratory bird law, and several of the individual states had sought, through legislation, to safeguard certain of the feathered species. On the other hand, antipathy to certain birds, elsewhere believed to be useful, existed in some of the sovereign commonwealths. An Arkansas court, following agreement on the treaty, decided that bird control belonged to the state and not to the nation, and the point was taken to the United States Supreme Court. Interjected into the controversy also was the question whether the executive branch of the Government could make treaties of this kind without the concurrence of the Legislative branch. As an interesting example of the lengths of which contention over a matter of this kind may be carried, it is worth while to point out that there were some persons who insisted that if the executive branch could make and enforce a treaty of this character, overriding the authority of an individual state, it could also, for instance, impose a Japanese immigration treaty upon California.

It speaks eloquently for the neighborly feeling existing between the United States and Canada that the disposition on the southern side of the line, from the beginning, was to comply with the wishes of the Dominion, and to make this compliance effective, regardless of minor issues. In due course, Congress enacted laws essential to the enforcement in the United States of every provision in the convention, and the President's signature has now made the treaty wholly effective. Action might well have been more expeditious, but as a matter of fact, in the absence of a treaty, the provincial and Dominion authorities in Canada and the federal and state authorities in the United States have, especially during the last two years, been enforcing existing bird protection laws within their respective jurisdictions with intelligence and fidelity, and in the spirit behind the treaty. As a result, birds have multiplied in both countries, and, while it is not possible to give figures showing the gain, it is possible to point to harvest yields without precedent in both the Dominion and the republic.

Nurses.

First Soldier—I wonder if the nurse you had was the same one I had.

Second Soldier—I don't know, but she was wonderful! Beautiful as an angel, with a smile that would melt a statue and a hand as soft as velvet! Was yours like that?"

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

By Rev. A. M. Hubly.

THE CHRIST-TAUGHT CREED.

Article V.—"God Our Loving Father" I John iv:8.

We have come to the inner shrine of all truth. By the doctrine of Jesus we have been led to believe that God is our Father—great, good, and ever near to us, and that we may enter into His very heart of love. Through the new and living way we may enter into the Holy of Holies and hold audience with the King, majestic and great, and know Him to be our Father, loving and tender.

Jesus, full of grace and truth, did not only teach, but exemplified this creed of Christian faith. Only in Him can we find its true interpretation.

There are mysterious heights and depths, unscalable and unsoundable by the most intellectual of men unaided by the Holy Spirit, and yet its inestimable value may be comprehended by a little child. "I thank thee, O Father," said Jesus, "that thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent and hast revealed them unto babes." I have laid hold of these words of the Christ, and am trying to interpret the truth He taught by the heart and mind of children. Let me remind you again of a proposition presented before in this series of sermons—"What an earthly father, unimpaired by sin, is to his child, God is to us."

Our text says: "God is love."

These three short words contain far more than the fact that "God loves." The idea expressed is that the very essence of the being of the eternal, infinite father, is "love." We say the sun is light, but such an assertion comes very short of the real truth. Not only is the sun light, but its shining is a going out of itself producing all the light there is in the universe.

The great orb of day imparts his light—buries it in the depths of the earth in black coal for the use of man—stores it in the black storm clouds, and in the fire-fly's wing—in the moon and stars to brighten the heavens above our heads, and in the glow worm that sparkles in the grass beneath our feet.

So God imparts Himself, producing all the pure unselfish love that operates through the hearts and lives of men and women throughout the world. There is no special need of being conversant with all these mysteries of light and love in order to be benefitted by them. If I walk in the sunshine I know that the sun lights my way. The plain teaching of our Lord was: "Therefore doth my Father love me." And also "He that loveth me shall be loved of my Father." And again "If a man love me he will keep my words and my Father will love him."

This is the language of childhood—"My father loves me." In hours of play the fact may be forgotten, but in accident or trouble, or any time of need it looms large as a valuable asset."

"It snows'" shouts the school boy, and gathers the feathery flakes and presses them into solid balls, and the fun begins, as the boys with shouts and laughter pelt one another, when lo! a crash and falling glass—a snowball has shattered the schoolhouse window.

The rollicking, gleeful noise is hushed. The boy that made the break stands as the culprit conscious of wrongdoing. The lad is sorry for the mishap, tears fill his eyes, as the rest of the boys break the silence by questioning "What will you do?" The downcast face is lifted and the grieved boy says "I will tell my father, he will make it right." But, says his friends "your father will punish you."

The lad, with brightening countenance, says: "I am not afraid to tel my father when I do wrong, for my father loves me." The children of God will confess their sin unto Him for His love for them is perfect, and casteth out all fear, as the sunlight casteth out the darkness.

A little girl is called to bear a terrible loss; the doll she loved has been broken by a mischievous boy. Her heart is breaking with sorrow.

We who are larger grown see great hopes tumble and perish. We meet with loss and bereavement. We have the strength of men and women to bear these trials, yet we droop and faint and murmur. Our Father will make us strong by His great love to bear not only our own crosses but also the burdens of the weak. The little girl with broken doll knows where to find the good physician, the sympathetic surgeon for both her broken plaything and her troubled heart.

She seeks her mother, climbs upon her lap, and pillows her head and buries her face in the slope of a woman's bosom, which God made for just such need.

The little one does not stammer out her complaint, but just sobs bitterly for a moment or two, and the sweet gentle mother lets her weep till sorrow does its work. Now, the little face is lifted up with the radiance of trust shining through tears, and the woman hears from her own darling precious words responsive to the claims of love: "Mamma, you love me, don't you?" The mother replies: "Yes, dear, of course I love my darling." Then the child makes her prayer—"Mamma, mend my doll and make it right again."

Beloved, is not this the kind of theology we need? How true'—"A little child shall lead them."

Shall we not let this "Christ-taught Creed," simple enough for the heart and mind of children, lead us into deeper knowledge of our Heavenly Father's heart and will than all the theologians of the world's courts of learning can do? We get wrong by neglecting the means of grace which are divinely appointed for soul enlightenment and spiritual strength, and we question the sincerity of our fellow Christians.

We find ourselves in trouble and complain and stammer out our story of hardship and grief, hoping for relief, whereas, we only want to know that our Heavenly Father loves His children and will mend their broken toys and "make all things right."

"God our Loving Father"—I wish I could write this "Christ-taught Creed" in living letters upon every heart. Our Father loves His children in spite of their mistakes, wilful neglect of duty, broken pledges, violated vows and waywardness. In all their wanderings in the far country, wasting their substance in riotous living, or engaging in business repugnant to Him, and to all that is fine and good and true in themselves, He has not withdrawn His love, but waits to be gracious. The mighty energy of divine love makes life light and beautiful. Love has a law of gravity which holds in an orderly system the universe. Think of what its universal sway would mean to the social, moral and religious life of the world.

How sweet and tenderly some of us can speak of home—the holiest place on earth when normal, a very foretaste of heaven. But grieve the angel of love till he spreads his wings and takes his flight and how dreary and desolate is home!

Think of what the community would be if love reigned socially and economically. Our prisons would be closed, there would be no necessity for a police force, our courts for adjudication between man and man, and for trying criminals would virtually cease, quarrels and disputes would give place to brotherly kindness and forbearance. If love ruled in the church, how sweet the associations of the house of God wuld be.

The supreme motive of each one seeking the happiness and spiritual good of others would be established the centre and reality of practical Christianity and the golden rule would no longer be obsolete but workable—"Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them."

"God, my Father, loves me." Make this not only an article of faith, but a key to every treasure huse in the kingdom of grace. Say it over when you are discouraged; make it your shield in the battle of life, when the enemy seems to prevail; make it your refuge from the storm and your covert from the tempest, when the rain of sorrow pours down amain, and the lightning of heaven's wrath flashes upon the scene; when the clouds overhead are heavy and loaded with mischief, and thunder rolling with pent-up bolts of destruction then find safety under the banner of your Heavenly Father's shielding love! But don't forget your God and Father when you are glad. Remember His love when your sky is cloudless and the sunshine gilds your way; declare it when all about you are the rejoicings of triumph and success, lest, perchance you stumble into the snare of the wicked always spread for feet unguided by the Father's word of love.

"God, my Father, loves me."

Say it in the morning. Repeat it at noon. Let it be the sweet psalm of your evening hour, and when you seek your couch, pillow your head upon it.

"O Father, take my hand:
Then safe and blest,
Lead up to rest Thy child."

Are You Deceived?

Have you been led to believe that the knife is the only cure for piles?

If so, it is unfortunate, for many thousands are being cured by the use of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Sometimes after operations have failed and often when doctors have said that an operation was the only hope.

It won't cost you much to try this treatment in your own home. It is sure to relieve and usually effects complete cure.

PTE. MORGAN WOUNDED

Mrs. Mary Morgan, 13 Geddes St., city, received this official telegram from the Director of Records at Ottawa: "Sincerely regret to inform you, Pte. German Morgan, mounted services, is officially reported admitted to No. 15 General Hospital, Rouen, August 12, gunshot wounds both extremities." Pte. Morgan was a Hastings County boy and enlisted with the 210th Battalion at Moose Jaw. While in Belleville he was employed as brakeman on the G.T.R.

58 WRITS IN 24 HOURS

Yesterday 33 writs and defences wer recorded, issued and entered in the County Court. To-day can be chronicled twenty-five Supreme Court actions brought for clients by Messrs. Porter, Butler and Payne against the British Chemical Company; Messrs. Ponton, Northrup and Ponton for the Imperial Munitions Board, solicitors. The writs claim damages for the emission of alleged noxious gases, causing it is said, destruction to vegetation. The defences will, it is said, deny this, repudiate responsibility, and will raise other legal objections. Fifty-eight writs and appearances by the same two firms in twenty-four hours is a record for this legal arena. Men may come and men may go, but law goes on forever.

Two Quebeckers Penetrated Into Foe's Gun Line and Get Souvenirs

Bring Back Commander's Shoulder Straps and Badge After Becoming Separated From Patrol Detachment

With the Canadian Forces, Aug. 21 (Via London, Aug. 20)—We are now fighting on the old battlefield of the Somme of 1916, a difficult country net-worked with abandoned trenches and wire left by the Boche when he fell back to the Hindenburg line in the spring of 1917. Whether he intends to make a determined stand this side of the Somme remains to be seen. His losses, not only of men but of guns and all kinds of material, in the battle of the Marne and the second battle of Amiens, have been so enormous that it is doubtful whether he can undertake anywhere a strong offensive, and he has had recently a too ruinous experience of the passive defensive.

Captured official documents give an idea of his confusion of mind and proof of his low morale. How different is the spirit of the Canadian force, fully up to strength after ten days of hard fighting with splendid reserves to draw upon, enriched by many batteries of enemy guns, both heavy and light and above all convinced of its invincibility.

Here is a story told of a Quebec battalion that won imperishable fame at Courcelette. It was directed to throw out a strong patrol. The officer was wounded and the patrol returned with nine men missing. On the evening of the following day two came in.

"Where have you garcons been?" was the enquiry.

"We did not understand the patrol was to retire," came the reply.

"We understood we were to penetrate behind the enemy's lines to his artillery position and here you are," throwing down the shoulder strap and cap badge of the artillery commandant. Other of the party trickled in during the night.

Eighty Italian Airplanes Bomb Austrian Base At Polo

Bombing Lasted all Night and Then Real Attack Commenced at Daybreak— Numerous Fires Were Caused— Enemy's Planes Couldn't Rise

ROME, Aug. 21—An interesting example of the untiring activity of the Italian naval aviators is given to the Tribuna by the naval correspondent, Polo Giordani. During the night of August 16 the Austrian city of Pola was bombarded for a long time. Italian aviators remained over the city dropping bombs and keeping the enemy alert until dawn of the 17th, when the real attack began. Several squadrons of airplanes both land and sea types, including that commanded by D'Annunzio, in all some eighty planes flew over the city.

The groups first reached Pola at seven o'clock in the morning in full daylight. The first squadron of hydroplanes bombed the hostile hangars and prevented the enemy's planes from rising and drew the fire while the other squadrons composed largely of Carponi machines, bombarded the naval base, causing numerous fires. The raid was completely successful. When the Austrians tried to bombard Ancona the following day with four planes only two of them returned.

Giordani says that from the beginning of the war the number of Austrian planes lost owing to the Italian skill is over seventy, or double those lost by the Italians.

Poilus Push Joyfully on in Great Two-Day Success

"Good Progress Has been Made Everywhere," Is the Latest News From old London Town— British Gain all Their Objectives-- German Dead and Captives Total 3,000,000

LONDON, Aug. 20—(5 p.m.)—According to the latest advices reaching London, the front of this morning's attack by the French extended over fifteen miles. Good progress has been made everywhere, according to reports, and the advance on this front since Saturday is now over four miles at its maximum depth.

The present line follows: From Plessy-le-Val to Le Four-a-Verre to Belfontaine and to Blerancourt, two and a half miles north of Morsain. From there it runs south to Osly-Courtil and reaches the Aisne at Courtil. The attack to-day extended to a point within three miles from Soissons.

Farther to the north the French are also doing well in their gradual advance down the wooded slopes of Lassigny Masiff. They have reached a point five miles from Noyon. This is a very difficult country, but the French are successfully pushing ahead toward Noyon from both the north and the south.

British Punish the Foe

British Army Headquarters in France Aug. 20.—Our patrols have maintained a steady pressure on the withdrawing enemy, and have inflicted considerable casualties. The enemy manifestly continues in a jumpy condition. Early this morning he furiously barraged the Laclyette-Schoenberg road, apparently as a protective movement, as no infantry movement followed.

In our advance near Vieux Berquin all our objectives were gained. The enemy troops now falling back belong to the Sixth German Army, commanded by Gen. Von Quast, while Von Bernhardi is the corps commander directly concerned. As the latter's writings embrace tactical theories to fit every conceivable situation, it remains to be seen how far these can be vindicated in practice.

Much rain has fallen during the night, but the ground is still good going.

Field Marshal Haig has telegraphed to General Rawlinson:

"Warmest congratulations and thanks to yourself and staff and all ranks on the magnificent success recently gained by the Fourth Army for the brilliant manner in which the operation was prepared and successfully carried out at comparatively small loss by the Third Australian and Canadian Corps, in conjunction with the cavalry, air force and tank corps, a striking tribute to the skill of the leaders and the bravery of the individual soldier, as well as to the high state of efficiency of the staffs and departmental services concerned. The gallant and skilful co-operation of the armored cars and motor machine gun batteries is worthy of the highest praise."

German Dead Now 3,000,000

LONDON, Aug. 21.—German dead and prisoners since the beginning of the war are roughly estimated at not very far short of three million, it was learned to-day.

Triumph This Year Thinks Clemenceau

PARIS, Aug. 21.—It is the belief of Georges Clemenceau, the French Premier, that a complete triumph will be won during the present year by the arms of the Entente Allies, and that the war will have ended before another year has passed, according to the understanding reached by United States Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, of remarks of the Premier during a long conversation with him. The gist of the conversation, with the consent of M. Clemenceau, has been given to the Associated Press by Senator Lewis.

Premier Clemenceau paid high tribute to President Wilson as a constructive leader, and said he was impressed with Newton D. Baker, the American Secretary of War, as a man of great resource. The Premier declared that when the American troops arrived, uncertainty existed as to whether they could bring their undoubted courage into immediate action after having been trained to a life of peace. The first showing of the American troops had amazed France with their bravery and soldierly perfection. He said France had every confidence now that this war was on the way to immediate victory.

Canadians Suffer 10,484 Casualties In Recent Offensive In France

Those Killed in Action Total 130 Officers, & 1,474 Men --Canadians Captured iu Three weeks Operations 10,000 Prisoners, 150 Field Guns and Thousands of Machine Guns

OTTAWA, Aug. 21—Hon. Martin Burrell, Acting Minister of Militia, in a statement to the Canadian Press tonight referred to the recent Canadian offensive and expressed in no uncertain tones the Governments views in regard to the amnesty for deserters, which expires at the end of this week.

"Since the first of August," said the Minister, "the Canadians have marked their entry into the fifth year of the war by achievements which have confirmed the reputation of the Canadian corps as the most formidable fighting force of its size on the Western battlefront. The recent advance made by our men has been important in its results and brilliant in execution. In the past three weeks they have captured 10,000 prisoners, 150 guns, and thousands of machine guns. During this brief period they have suffered 10,482 casualties in killed, wounded and missing, 130 officers and 1,474 men having been killed in action.

"No comment can be so strong as this simple statement of facts. The figures carry their own story, both of valor and grief. They are at once an evidence of the unshaken resolve of our countrymen to crush the foes of our common liberty, and a challenge to ourselves. We dare not and we will not fail to support them in their great task.

AMERICAN NAVAL AIRMEN BOMB OSTEND U-BOAT BASE

Enemy Even Weaker Than Allies Claim

LONDON, Aug. 21—It is believed in Cologne that the Germans are weakening on the western front than even the allies claim, says the Daily Mail's correspondent at the Hague. He does not vouch for other sections of Germany, but gives this resume of conditions in the Cologne district:

All leaves from the front have been reduced one-half.

Men are sent to the front from the hospitals before completely fit.

Letters from the front have been discontinued.

Deserters are being sent to the front from punishment camps.

Wounded horses are hurried west with bandages still in place.

The correspondent adds that it is reported the Germans have stolen food parcels sent to French prisoners in order to feed neutral laborers who are on strike because of inadequate food.

SPEED COAL SHIPMENTS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21—With a comparatively short period remaining of the Great Lakes navigation season, movement of bitumiaous coal is 8.8 per cent behind schedule, the Fuel Administration yesterday announced. KILLED IN ACTION

Official notice was received this morning that James Banville, a Belleville soldier, had been killed in action on August 11th. He was an adopted son of Capt. Fagan, and had many friends who deeply regret his death.

MAJOR RINGWOOD KILLED IN ACTION

Word was received in Kingston yesterday that Major T. D. J. Ringwood, R. C. H. A., had been killed in action. No particulars as to how Major Ringwood was killed were received. Major Ringwood was born in the west in 1886. He attended the Royal Military College, graduating in 1909. He later received an appointment as O. C. of the Royal School of Artillery, Kingston, and was one of the most efficient officers ever connected with the school. It was said he turned out more fully qualified officers than any other O. C. He was succeeded by Capt. W. Steacy about a year ago, when he went overseas with a draft from "C" Battery. His excellent work at the front during the past six months resulted in his being given his full majority.

BRITISH TOOK 3,000 PRISONERS AND ARE STILL SMASHING THROUGH

FOCH LAUNCHES NEW DRIVES

BRITISH AND FRENCH FORCES STRIKING TELLING BLOWS ALL ALONG THE WESTERN FRONT — BRITISH TROOPS LAUNCHED NEW DRIVE THIS MORNING ON SOMME-ANCRE FRONT WITH GOOD PROGRESS REPORTED AND ARRAS-BAPAUME RAILWAY CROSSED IN SPITE OF STRONG ENEMY RESISTANCE — HUNS FORCED BACK BY FRENCH TROOPS ON 20-MILE FRONT — GENERAL HUMBERT MAKES ANOTHER SENSATIONAL ADVANCE AND CAPTURES IMPORTANT POSITIONS.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—British forces attacked this morning between the Somme and Ancre rivers.

Between two and three thousand prisoners were captured by the British in yesterday's operations.

North of the Ancre river, the statement says, the Arras-Bapaume railway has been crossed in spite of strong enemy resistance.

HUNS FORCED BACK ON 20-MILE FRONT.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—(Official)—German troops were forced back over a twenty-mile front to a depth of from one to two miles from Lassigny to the Ailette river during the night. The enemy is retreating between the Matz and the Oise and east of the Oise. We have occupied Le Plemont, Thiescourt, Cannei, Ancourt and Ville, and have reached the Divette river, and have reached the Oise to the east of Noyon from Sempigny to Bretigny. The outskirts of Pommiers, west of Soissons, also were taken.

ENEMY ARTILLERY ACTIVE.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Fresh German counter attacks are reported to have developed east of Miraumont and Irles. The hostile artillery is said to have been very active during the night and to be continuing its heavy fire this morning.

GREAT ADVANCE BY HUMBERT.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—General Humbert's army has made a great advance between the Matz and Oiso rivers and have reached the Ailette river. French military men say this makes the early fall of the town of Noyon inevitable.

BYNG BOYS MEET STRONG RESISTANCE.

PARIS, Aug. 22.—(2 p.m.)—General Byng's army is encountering desperate resistance in the region of Bapaume. Achiet-le-Grand changed hands several times late yesterday afternoon and last night. The British now hold that position. French troops have reached the Ailette river at several points. It is not expected that the Germans will try to hold the Ailette line, but may retreat to the Oise.

Prevent Women Wearing Badges

Illegal For Them to Use Buttons Of Soldiers as Brooches

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—Women who are in tne habit of wearing badges given to soldiers discharged from service in the army will require to be careful in the future regarding the use of these buttons, as the military officials of the Department of Militia and Defence state that the badges are being used extensively as brooches, and orders were received at military headquarters in Toronto yesterday authorizing steps to be taken to put a stop to the practice. From now on any person other than the person entitled, who is found wearing any of the service buttons will be liable to prosecution.

The authorities point out that the badges are given to the soldiers to represent the nature of their service with the Canadian forces, and that it is entirely illegal for anyone who has not seen service to wear them. It has been found that the badges in most favor with the women are those presented to men who have been discharged in England, because of their ornamental design and because they are more fitted for use as brooches. In the case of the smaller buttons it has been found that they have been made ornamental by having them mounted in gold and silver.

It was never the intention that the badges should be transferred to relatives or friends of the soldiers, said a military official last evening, and he hoped that when the matter was drawn to the attention of those violating the regulation the practice of wearing them would be discontinued. He desired to state, however, that the censure of the department at Ottawa did not in any way apply to the relatives of soldiers who had received posthumous decorations, as in such cases those persons were legally entitled to wear them.

Hun Raider Still Loose

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer

Canadian Atlantic Port, Aug. 22—The American schooner Sylvania, Capt Jeff Thomas, was sunk yesterday on the fishing banks by an armed trawler presumably the Triumph, owned here, which was captured by a German sub on this coast on Tuesday and converted into an enemy raider. The crew of Sylvania arrived at a fishing port a considerable distance east of here this morning.

ANOTHER VICTIM

The crew of the Nova Scotia fishing schooner Pasadena has arrived at a port east of here and reports that their ship was sunk by a trawler ,the Triumph, on Tuesday at midnight.

HAIR CUT, $1; SHAVE 50c.

These Prices Suggested by Barber Supply Dealers' Association.

Chicago, Aug. 22.—One dollar for a hair cut and fifty cents for a shave will be the standard price, if barbars accept the suggestion of the Barber Supply Dealers' Association, a national organization, which is holding its annual meeting here. A statement made public in relation to the suggested advance in rates said:

Hair-cutting has always been done at too cheap a price, and most people feel that this is one branch of the work that should be paid for at a decent, respectable rate."

Dr. Beland Refuses to Enter Politics

Will Give Government Full Support on all War Measures

OTTAWA, Aug. 22 — Intimate friends here of Hon. Dr. Beland state that the ex-Postmaster General has for the present at least no intention of actively entering political life either as a member of the Government or as an Opposition member behind Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Dr. Beland, it is understood was sought by the Prime Minister as a Cabinet colleague to give the French-speaking population of Canada representation in the Cabinet ranks in the Commons. Similarly his prestige and popularity throughout Canada were sought to be secured for the Opposition following in Parliament. It is now stated, however, that Dr. Beland is averse to aligning himself actively with either party in the Commons or to assuming the responsibilities of political leadership. The effects of his long imprisonment in Germany under distressing conditions incline him towards some months of restful recuperation before resuming any official public work of special responsibility or worry. He will probably take his place in Parliament next session as a private member behind Sir Wilfrid Laurier and with his old friends of the pre-war days, giving the Government full support on its war measures.

British Sub. Met U-Boat

Enemy Vessel waiting to pounce On Prey Was Blown to Bits

LONDON, Aug. 22—Recently a British and a German submarine met. The enemy had crossed the North Sea and penetrated British waters and was lurking to pounce upon any ship that might cross its track. The British boat was returning to its base after an arduous cruise.

Both boats were on the surface, but the British boat picked up the enemy and dived before she herself was sighted. She fired two torpedoes and through her periscope the resulting explosion was observed. Coming to the surface five minutes later the British crew found one survivor swimming among the wreckage. He was the captain of the German submarine. The other officers and the crew had gone in their boat.

More Than 100,000 Prisoners Taken By Allies Since July 18

Hun Armies Captured and Six German Armies Severely Smashed in Recent Offensive— No Wonder Kaiser's Military Machine is Cracking

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer,
Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, August 22.—The allied armies have taken more than one hundred thousand prisoners since July 18, says Marcel Hutin in the Echo de Paris, and the Allies have severely smashed six German armies since July.

Hundred Killed in Tornado Express Train Blown From Track

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 22.—The town of Tyler, Minnesota, was half destroyed by a tornado last night with deaths estimated at more than one hundred. Many bodies have already been recovered. A Chicago & Northwestern express train was blown from the track and twelve passengers were killed and many hurt.

WHAT IT MEANS

The harrying of the Huns continues along a front of almost a hundred miles.

In the region between the Oise and the Aisne General Mangin's army in the fourth day of its attack liberated twenty villages, captured several thousand additional prisoners, crossed the Oise to the southeast of Noyon, and menaces that important road and rail centre from points less than two miles south of the town.

Humbert's army has captured Lassigny after sharp fighting, and this victory will have a marked effect on the situation to the north at Roye.

The British Third Army, under General Sir Julian Byng, which has not been much in evidence since its heroic defence against the German onslaught of March 21, and the subsequent defeat of the enemy's attack upon Arras, has begun a drive toward Bapaume against von Buelow's army. The opening attack was made in a dense mist yesterday along a ten-mile front about mid-way between Arras and Albert, and good progress was made in smashing in the north side of the Albert-Roye salient. The extreme depth of the advance was three and a half miles, and the British lines at Achiet-le-Grand are now but a little over three miles from Bapaume. Tanks were used with marked success in the battle.

In the Lys Valley the Germans give ground under pressure. Southeast of Locre the British yesterday pressed the enemy back toward Mount Kemmel on a front of over a mile to a depth of half a mile.

GERMAN LINE IS SERIOUSLY MENACED FROM YPRES TO BEYOND SOISSONS

ALLIES FORCE THE FIGHTING EVERYWHERE

FRENCH TROOPS MATERIALLY PUSH FORWARD THEIR FRONTS, WHILE BRITISH MAKE SPLENDID GAINS ON TEN-MILE FRONT BETWEEN ARRAS AND ALBERT—HUNS WANT TIME TO RECUPERATE BUT FOCH KEEPS THEM GOING BACK TOWARD THE RHINE—OUTGENERALED, OUTFOUGHT AND DEMORALIZED, HUN GENERALS HAVE BIG JOB TO PREVENT A SPEEDY DEBACLE.

LONDON, Aug. 22—The tide of defeat still surges heavily against the German armies in France and Flanders. On four important sectors French and British arms again have been served, and the entire German front from Ypres, in Belgium to Soissons, on the Aisne, now is more seriously menaced than before.

French troops of General Mangin, operating from the region two miles northwest of Soissons to the Oise River, and those of General Humbert, fighting between the Oise and the Matz, have materially pushed forward their front, bringing them to positions which threaten to compel the immediate evacuation of the entire Somme-Oise salient from Braye to Noyon.

Farther to the north, between Arras and Albert, Field Marshal Haig has followed up his successes of previous days by a new offensive over a front of about ten miles and driven forward his troops for splendid gains over the entire line, capturing a number of villages, taking prisoners and guns, and inflicting heavy casualties on the enemy.

Still farther north, in the famous Lys sector, a general eastward advance on a front of more than four miles has been made by the British, who have brought their positions appreciably nearer the old 1916 battleline, running east of Armentieres.

NOYON IS NOW OUTFLANKED

Numerous additional villages have been liberated by the French northwest of Soissons and positions have been captured on both sides of the Oise River, which seemingly make untenable for occupation by the enemy the important town of Noyon, which is now outflanked on the southeast, and dominated by the French guns from the south and west. On the south the French are standing in Sempigny, a mile and a half distant, while on the west they have captured the important pivotal town of Lassigny, the key position to Noyon and the plains to the north.

With the latest advances by the French east of the Oise there has come under the range of General Mangin's guns the broad-guage railway line leading from Noyon eastward to La Fere—the sole remaining line except for two narrow-guage roads, over which the enemy may transport his men and supplies beyond the range of the French artillery.

At last accounts Haig was still pressing forward on the heels of the Germans between Albert and Arras, with tanks innumerable, clearing the way for the infantry and machine guns and the field artillery which was keeping close up to the advance. The Arras-Albert railway already has been crossed by the British east of Boisleux-St. Marc and Mercatel and south of these towns the new line has been pressed eastward in conformity.

On the Lys salient the Germans have delivered a violent counter-attack in an endeavor to recoup in part the losses they have sustained.

Their efforts, however, were fruitless, for the British everywhere withstood their assaults and pushed back the enemy beyond the points of his departure.

What is to be the effect of the allied drives along the 120-mile battleline from Ypres to Soissons cannot be foretold at present, but it seems highly probable that this entire front soon must be realigned.

The particular menace to the Germans ,aside from that in the territory between the Somme and the Oise, appears to be on the sector along the Vesle River from Soissons to Rhemis, which from the war maps, looks to be untenable. Even the Aisne and the Chemin des Dames do not look to be any too safe for a defence line if Gen. Mangin presses much farther northwest of Soissons.

Tried to Hide Under Register

Parents Didn't Know He Was There, and Were Acquitted .

OTTAWA, Aug. 22—George Barclay 191 James street, his wife Anna Barclay and his daughter Stella Barclay were all acquitted by Magistrate Askwith in police court on the charge of attempting to impede the Military Service Act, which was laid against them by Deputy Inspector A. H. Holden of the civil section of the military service police.

The charge was laid as the result of some difficulty which the military service police had in apprehending Gordon Barclay, aged 21, son of George and Anna Barclay and brother of Stella Barclay.

Gordon Barclay was ordered to report for military service in May last. He failed to do so, and the military service police took action to apprehend him. On June 11 Constable William McQuarry and Weddington went to Barclay's residence on James street in search of the defaulter, Gordon Barclay. Mrs. Barclay and the daughter were in the house at the time and informed the officers that Gordon was not there, but that they believed he was in Hull.

Kept Up Search

The following day, between 11 and 12 o'clock at night, the officer returned to Mr. Barclay's residence and searched it, but failed to find the man they sought. They left the house without their man, but from information they had, the officers still believed that the defaulter was secreted in his parents' house. The officers returned to 191 James street in about an hour and set about making another thorough search of the house.

In the dining-room Constable Engram, who accompanied Weddington on this search, lifted a small rug off the dining room floor and noticed a hot air register in the floor beneath the rug. The officers lifted up the grate and Constable Engram got down into the hole in the floor, and there he found the wanted man, Gordon Barclay, hiding between the floors.

The defaulter was taken from his hiding place and marched to the headquarters of the military service police, and in a few days was put into uniform, and went overseas with the first draft that sailed after he was arested.

Canadian Forces Put Over Biggest Surprise Packet

Keep Up Old Practice of Taking All Objectives On Time and in Attack Bigger Then Vimy Inflict Tremendous Casualties

With the Canadian Army in the Field, via London, Aug. 22—Speaking on yesterday victory, Sir Arthur Currie, comander of the Canadian forces, said to the Canadian Press:

"The Canadian kept up yesterday our old practice of taking all our objectives, and taking them on time. When the full reports for the day come in, we expect to have penetrated the Boche defences 14,000 yards. We attacked on just as wide a front as at Vimy Ridge, and we have come three times as far with the whole division as any single division was able to penetrate, while we have taken more guns and more prisoners than at Vimy. Our whole attack came as a surprise for the Boche," Sir Arthur Currie continued.

"Altogether, it was the biggest surprise packet the Canadian forces ever put over. Many of the Boches threw up their hands as soon as they realized they were up against the Canadians. As our men leaped down into their trenches, they carried with them the slogan, 'Remember the Llandovery Castle,' and with that on their lips they were not to be denied. The Boche dead were never so thick of any of our battlefields as there but, our own casualties were very light. All the Boche guns captured were turned round and promptly manend by our gunners, and now are shooting happy. The force has never been in such good shape for a fight. It is well trained, well organized, and, thanks to the measures taken by the Ottawa Government, it is up to strength, with sufficient reinforcements on the ground to replace all casualties. Tell the Canadian people we got the Boche to-day where we want him, and intend keeping him there."

Young Poet Dies Fighting Hun

Joyce Kilmer, Newspaperman and Writer of Graceful Verse, is Killed

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Sergt. Joyce Kilmer, of the 165th Infantry of the Rainbow Division, has been killed in France. He was 31 years old.

Sergeant Kilmer was for many years a well-known newspaper man and writer of verse, his poem on the sinking of the Luzitania, which was published immediately following the torpedoing, having been copied in all parts of the United States, Great Britain, and the British colonies. That poem, a close friend of the dead soldier said, expressed the deep-seated conviction of Sergeant Kilmer regarding the great war, a conviction on which he acted when, seventeen days after Congress declared war, he enlisted as a private in the 7th Infantry from which in the August following he was transferred to the Headquarters Company of the 165th Infantry.

Mr. Kilmer was born in New Brunswick, N.J., where his parents still live, Dec. 6, 1886. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Kilmer and was a graduate of Rutgers College, 1904, and of Columbia University 1908. His wife, who, with four little children survive him, was Miss Aline Murray, of Norfolk, Va., a step-daughter of Henry Mills Arden, the editor of Harper's Weekly.

Sergeant Kilmer joined the staff of the Sunday Magazine of The New York Times in May, 1913. Prior to that time he had been Latin Master of the Morristown High School and a member of the editorial staff of the Standard Dictionary.

His Lusitania Poem.

"The White Ships and the Red," the poem which Sergeant Kilmer wrote following the destruction of the Lusitania, appeared in The Times of May 16, 1915. The last three verses read:

I went not forth to battle
  I carried friendly men,
The children played about my decks,
  The women sang—and then—
And then—the sun blushed scarlet,
  And heaven hid its face
The world that God created
  Became a shameful place.

My wrong cries out for vengeance—
  The blow that sent me here
Was aimed in Hell. My dying scream
  Has reached Jehovah's ear.
Not all the seven oceans
  Shall wash away the stain:
Upon a brow that wears a crown
  I am the brand of Cain.

When God's great voice assembles
  The fleet on Judgment Day.
The ghosts of ruined ships will rise
  In sea and strait and bay.
Though they have lain for ages
  Beneath the changeless flood,
They shall be white as silver,
  But one—shall be like blood.

In his last year with The Times Sergeant Kilmer was lecturer on the technique of verse in the department of journalism at New York University. His published works included "Trees and Other Poems," "Literature in the Making," "Main Street and Other Poems," "Summer of Love," and "The Circus and Other Essays."

Sergeant Kilmer was transferred from the 107th Infantry at Camp Wadsworth, S.C., to the 165th Infantry a short time before the Rainbow Division sailed for France. He was in the thick of the Marne fighting from the day the great allied offensive began until he was mortally wounded on August 1. In The Evening Sun of Aug. 8 a correspondent mentioned Kilmer.

Fought on the Marne.

"During the fighting on the edge of Coles Wood," the story read, "someone wearing an American uniform appeared shouting 'withdraw.' A party composed of Major Donovan, Joyce Kilmer, John Kayes, the Major's "Admirable Crichton," and an orderly reconnoitered and found out that he was a boche dressed in captured clothing."

Sergeant Kilmer was a member of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity, the Poetry Society of America, the Dickens Fellowship, the Columbia University Club, the Authors' Club, and the Vagabonds. His home when he entered the service was at Larchmont. His wife and children are with his parents in New Brunswick.

$10,000 From Ontario To Italy's Red Cross

Italian Flag to be Hoisted on City Hall Staff for Tag Day—Many Features

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—The Province of Ontario will donate $10,000 for the work of the Italian Red Cross, under whose auspices a tag-day was held throughout the city to-day. Premier Sir William Hearst made the announcement yesterday to a delegation composed of Messrs. George Gooderham, president of the Italian Red Cross; Dr. George Glionna, acting Italian Vice-Consul; Victor E. Gianelli and H. Corti.

Many features have been arranged for to-day's tag day. At noon the Italian flag was hoisted to the top of the giant flagstaff at the City Hall, with elaborate ceremony. Speeches were made by Mayor Church, George Gooderham, Dr. Glionna and others. During the ceremony, the band of the 71st New York Regiment played "God Save The King," the "Royal Italian March," and "The Maple Leaf Forever."

During the day concerts were given at many of the important buildings and intersections in the down-town district, by a stringed orchestra of Italian children. The girls were garbed in picturesque Neapolitan costumes and several boys wore Italian uniforms. The party was taken through the streets in an elaborately decorated automobile.

Medicals Went Over With the Infantry

Canadians Gave Germans No Chance ro Use Their Gas

LONDON, Aug. 22—A Canadian ambulance man's experience in the great fight are graphically described by Pte. A. Hope in a letter received by his father in Exeter.

"The fighting," he says, "was all in the open, so Fritz could not use the gas. I was glad of that, as I hate to wear a gas mask. We had waited at one point while Fritz evacuated the village, and so close were the stretcher bearers on our heels in this open warfare that they go over the top with the infantry.

"The prisoners are a fine lot of men physically, and we give them plenty of work carrying stretchers. I am writing this in a German officer's dug-out which he inhabited yesterday. He left at home souvenirs in the bed which I found in my clothes to-day. Everyone here to-day has a glad smile, for this was the finest achievement of the Canadians. The sight of thousands of cavalry in the charge was magnificent. The tanks which go about ten miles an hour are bewildering."

Flour Consumption Steadily Increasing

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.—In spite of restrictions imposed by the Canada Food Board, in spite of the compulsory use of substitutes, the consumption of flour in Canada for purely domestic purposes has been steadily increasing, as indicated by figures prepared by the Labor Department.

For instance, it is stated that in May some 7,000 more barrels of flour were consumed than in April.

One of the reasons advanced by students of the situation here is the fact that the wrapping of bread has for a considerable time past been prohibited by the Food Board. The wrapping of bread, it is held, not only protected the loaf from insanitary contamination, but served to preserve it for a much longer period than the unwrapped loaf. This it is contended would be especially true of the loaf made from standard flour, which in the first place has not the keeping qualities of the old pure flour loaf.

Sink Relief Ship And Fire on Boats

CHRISTIANA, Aug. 22—The plainly marked Belgian relief steamship Gascoiner, of Dutch registry, was sunk by a submarine Tuesday off Haugesund. The ship was bound from Brooklyn with a cargo of grain.

After forcing the crew into the boats the submarine's guns were turned on these little craft and one boat was destroyed, six of the occupants perishing in the water.

A number of the crew were wounded.

Twenty-one survivors have been landed, several of them wounded. They were sent to hospitals. They declared the submarine disappeared after its shots, without making any attempt at a rescue.

They will help you to keep well and active and to do your best work.

TO GO AFTER RAIDER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—Strong forces of swift naval patrol boats and destroyers sped to the North Atlantic fishing banks, where the trawler Triumph, captured by a German submarine, which is armed and manned, is reported raiding fishing fleets. Naval officers here think recapture of the trawler on her enforced destruction by the German crew is a certainty.

Mangin's Army Encompasses Noyon

LONDON, Aug. 22—French troops advanced three miles yesterday along the Oise and reached Sempigny, a mile from the outskirts of Noyon, according to reports form the battlefront. The line occupied by General Mangin's army at two o'clock yesterday afternoon ran from Sempign to Pontoise, and thence to Lapommeraie, Montchoisy, Cuts, Cmeline, Bleran-court, St. Austin, La Tour Farm, Mont Du Crocq Farm, Vesponian, Bieuxy, Laval and reached the Aisne at Courtil.

OURSCAMP WOOD OUTFLANKED outflanking Ourscamp Forest yesterday reached a point near Pontoise, less than 4,000 yeards (slightly more than two miles) south-east of Noyon.

Pressure is being methodically exerted toward Lassigny and Noyon. The latter is now more threatened from the southeast than from the south west.

Camelin (seven miles southeast of Noyon) and Bleranecourt (a mile southeast of Camelin) have been passed. (This latter progress represents a total advance of six miles by Mangin's army.)

General Byng's army has begun a drive toward Bapaume against Von Buelow's army. The opening advance was made in a heavy mist this morning on a ten-mile front. The extreme depth of the advance was three and one-half miles, and the British are now less than three miles from Bapaume.

Two Boys on Long Hike

Pleasures of Farm Life Palled So They Gathered Up Their Goods and Treked to the City

An eighteen-mile hike, handicapped with heavy baggage, and a night spent in a farmer's field, was the experience of two Belleville youths recently. The boys were Ernest Granville Fradette and his brother Walter Melville Fradette. The latter, who is fourteen years of age, was working for a farmer somewhere in the general direction of Tweed, but after three months service at fifteen dollars per month and keep, be became dissatisfied with his treatment and communicated with his older brother, Ernest, who decided to pay him a visit. The result of Ernest's visit was a resolve to hike for home and their departure was accomplished without being noticed by the farmer. A phonograph, bundle of records, horn and a valise full of clothes was includin the personal property of Walter and these were packed along.

As the boys proceeded along the highway they kept close watch for any pursuing automobile, fearing that the farmer, upon discovering the absence of the "junior hired man" would crank up the Lizzie and come a-humming down the road after them. Whenever they sighted a motor car coming along the back track they took cover at once in the nearest field until the car passed.

The boys left the farm about three o'clock in the afternoon and reached Foxboro about nine o'clock at night. Here they made camp in a field and slept until daylight, waking with limbs cold and stiff and teeth chattering. However, a brisk walk toward Belleville soon started the circulation going and the prospects of soon reaching home cheered them up.

About eight o'clock in the morning Belleville was reached and two tired boys were glad to rest their weary legs.

Ernest says that the trip seemed to be forty miles instead of eighteen, while Walter says that the last five miles seemed fifty. They think they would not have minded the hike were it not for the necessity of toting the phonograph, the horn and the records, and the valise full of clothes.

Walter after getting rested up hustled out and joined the mechanical staff of a munition factory.

Ernest is one of the small amry of hustlers, who distribute copies of The Intelligencer every day to city subscribers. He also does a big business handling Toronto papers, and has the exclusive privilege of selling newspapers in the lobby of Griffin's Theatre. Ernest is some business man and has a considerable stake invested in Victory Bonds.

Sun Burned Skin

You want a healthy summer tan. But sometimes you get it too quickly and then there is a few days of suffering.

The application of Dr. Chase's Ointment takes out the stinging and burning and leaves the skin delightfully soft and smooth.

Because it is equally effective in relieving stings of insects and ivy poisoning as well as chafing and skin irritations it is invaluable in the summer camp.

Music and Drama

"CIVILIZATION"

Tonight will witness the first presentation of the wonderful cinema spectacle "Civilization" which was brought into Canada by John and Peter Griffin, after having outbidden all other film exchanges and paying an enormous sum of money for this great picture, and are now giving the Canadian people a chance of seeing the picture at popular prices. With 10,000 horses and 40,000 people in its make-up and some of the most novel affects ever used in motion picture work, the story is wonderful, human, and as the title suggests is written around civilization as we understand it to-day.

Another novelty will be the showing of the first chapter of the serial photoplay, "A Fight for Millions." A story of the bitter struggle of a young girl to get control of an estate that is being squandered by a set of crooks, the estate rightfully belonging to her. The actor and actresses are very nearly the same as those that appeared in the two serials "The Fighting Trail", and "Vengeance and the Woman."

There will be a matinee on Saturday at 2.30, when the same program will be shown as seen at night.

WATCH FOR THE OPENING CHAPTER OF OUR NEW SERIAL STORY, "THE TEMPTING OF PAUL CHESTER", IN FRIDAY'S ISSUE OF THE INTELLIGENCER.

British Down Twenty Planes Start Fires in Enemy Airdrome

Airmen Drop 15 1-2 Tons of Bombs in One Day's Raids—Bruges Docks and Railway at Roisel Attacked By Bombing Squadrons

LONDON, Aug. 22.—The official statement on aerial operations says:

"Early in the morning of August 18 some of our squadrons combined in a very successful attack on the Phalempin airdrome, south of Lille. Many bombs were dropped from a low altitude, and machine guns were used with good effect on ground targets. Several airplane sheds were hit and big fires started.

"Some enemy machines which attempted to interfere with our airplanes were prevented from attacking by our escorting squadrons. All the machines engaged in this raid returned safely.

"The Bruges docks and the railway at Roisel and a number of enemy dumps were heavily bombed by us.

"The total weight of bombs dropped during the day amounted to 15¼ tons. A good deal of reconnaissance, photography and observation work was also carried out by our airmen.

"In air fighting 13 enemy machines were destroyed and six driven down out of control. In addition one hostile airplane was shot down and another brought down out of control by fire from the ground. Four German balloons in the Merville sector were set on fire by one of our airmen.

"Seven of our machines are missing. Unfavorable weather prevented any flying at night."

The official statement of the Air Ministry on raiding and bombing operations says:

"On the night of August 19-20 our squadrons again attacked hostile airdromes and railways. Hangars, trains and various ground targets were bombed and subjected to machine-gun fire. All our machines returned safely."

German Soldiers Talk Revolution

General Ludendorff Urges Officers to Stamp Out the "Glowing Spark"

British Headquarters in France, Aug. 22.—Germany's military leaders now have become distinctly worried over the prospects of a revolution in Germany. General Ludendorff, in a captured secret order, has taken steps to employ the assitance of his commanding officers and various Governmental agencies to help him stamp out the growing spark which has been seen. The order, which is more illuminating than anything which has come out of Germany in many months, follows:

"It has come to my knowledge through a letter addressed to the Royal Prussian Ministry of War that men on leave have spoken publicly of a revolution which is to break out after the war.

Men Carry Weapons

"A soldier said to have come from the industrial region of Rheinish Westphalia, declared in a train that in his home district men were going on leave, taking weapons with them for the aforesaid object and that it was easy to take home German or captured revolvers as well as hand grenades separated into two parts.

"I desire that the clothing of men, going on leave be searched as test cases before their departure. It will be possible to carry this out at the baths and dressing stations. I wish to impress upon all superior officers who happen to hear of it through others, that they must deal with it at once, and without hesitation. The home authorities and the director of military railways have been directed to take corresponding measures."

"Enforce Obedience."

Another order just captured, bearing the signature of the Chief of Staff of the Forty-first Infantry Division, recites that courts-martial have held various sitting and an increasing number of cases where subordinates emphatically refused to accompany their units into the line and where the "superior officers have neglected to enforce obedience by failing to compel the cowards to go into the front line. Obedience in this respect," the order said, 'must be enforced, even though it may be necessary to resort to force and the use of arms."

German Soldiers Are Downhearted

LONDON, Aug. 22—Reuters correspondent at British headquarters cables under the date of this evening.

If the German retirement is proceeding according to the present plan they are now confronted with a situation which must complicate their calculations. The hasty abandonment of Merville on Sunday was doubtless due to our unexpectedly obtaining possession of the dominating contour east of Merris. Hitherto we followed the Germans. Since the beginning of their withdrawal prisoners to the number of six thousand have been captured.

An order signed Schieschith, Von Hutier's chief of staff states that outgoing mails of the Second Army have been subjected to an examination, disclosing of wholesale disregard for the regulations. Officers and men have been writing exaggerated accounts of the enemy's success false statements regarding casualties, food and clothing shortage, etc."

He points out that the writing of pessimistic letters is a punishable offence.

It is definitely stated that the 418th an order to attack at Puisieux recently. A written protest has been sent to the regimental commander.

Nineteen officers and 813 men have been captured in Flanders up to last night. The enemy's losses were heavier.

NAVAL AIR SERVICE WANTS NO MORE MEN

OTTAWA, Aug. 21—No more applications from candidates for the Canadian Naval Air Service can be entertained after August 22, and any received after that date will not be replied to, but will be filed for future reference according to a statement issued to-day. Already for 100 vacancies which exist several hundred requests for entry have been received. Expansion of the service later on may necessitate further appointments when announcement will be made in the press.

MAKING AUSTRIA THE GOAT.

The Kaiser has demanded the sacrifice of Austrian divisions on the Western front, and Emperor Karl is too weak to refuse, but the folks back home in Austria do not take kindly to the thought of the further weakening of their defensive forces against the victorious Italians and strenuous opposition has developed to the Kaiser's proposal. Austria is showing pronounced symptoms of being heartily sick of German selfishness and may yet tell his Hohenzollern Highness to go plump to Heligoland and further.

THE DECLINE AND FALL OF KULTUR.

Generalissimo Foch has laid down the principle that the only way to win the war is by offensive tactics, and he is proving conclusively the soundness of that principle by striking the enemy so hard and often that the backward movement of the armies of the Kaiser prevents them from organizing any serious counter operations. The greatest achievement of the Foch strategy has been the demoralization of the enemy morale and the shattering of the German faith in the invincibility of the German military machine.

There may be many hard battle still to be fought before the military power of Germany is decisively crushed, but the allied nations have supreme confidence in the valor of their armies directed by the genius of Foch, which will in due time rid the world forever of that fearful menace of Hun Kultur conjured out of the lowest depths of hell and deified by a mad monarch to the destruction of his nation.

NATURAL GAS FOR BELLEVILLE.

The high price of gas for domestice purposes has directed renewed attention to the possibilities of natural gas for Belleville. Nearly two years ago natural gas was found in the suburbs of Belleville and pipes put down then have furnished a steady flow of gas which has been continuously used since then for domestic purposes on one of the properties where the gas was found. Gas was found on two properties and used for domestic purposes and the flow still continues although the supply from the limted development thus far made does not appear to be very large. However, the fact that continuous flow of gas has been obtained for two years with meagre development seems to indicate that there is a large reservoir of gas waiting to be tapped.

The situation at least warrants more attention being paid to a systematic development than has been the case. If there is a natural gas supply waiting to be developed in the vicinity of Belleville, and citizens who have investigated the circumstances believe that there is, an effort should be made to ascertain the possibilities. Faced with the menace of a fuel famine and with civic gas advancing, it would seem to be good business to make a thorough investigation of the natural gas supply in this district, especially in view of the fact that with only a small effort a continuous flow has been secured for two years.

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

The Kaiser's armies are fighting to make the world safe for his sons says the Montgomery Advertiser.

The Emperor Karl has no doubt sent word already to Emperor Wilhelm that he knows how it feels, remarks the Charleston Mail.

Apropos of the rain-coat frauds, it will always be found that a slick slacker makes a slack slicker, chirrups the Washington Post.

In the meantime, Germany needn't take the trouble to proceed with any more peace terms. We'll attend to that, too, says the Kansas City Star.

One of the sad things about this war is the fact that after it is over all Americans will be called Yankees, mourns the Jacksonville, Florida, Times-Union.

Austria has long sinde realized that her relations with the Hohenzollerns involve numerous assessments and no dividends, saya the Washington Star.

The French say the only trouble they have with Americans is to hold them back. Odd. That's the same trouble the Huns are complaining of, says the Detroit News.

The rubber-necks refuse to join the anti-collar league, not because they love the celluloid more but because they love the mosquito less.

The Hun baby-killers are finding congenial employment destroying fishing smacks off the Atlantic coast and casting the fishermen adrift on the Atlantic in small boats. The "brave" undersea pirates spend the most of their time looking for something easy and are artful dodgers of any ship with the appearance of a gun on it.

The Huns thought the Americans were all "hot air and bombast," but they are discovering a punch propelled by a brand of hot air which rings the bell every time on the Hohenzollern solar plexus. The Yanks can blow all they like as long as they continue blowing Huns over and under.

In Brockville during the summer-time the Town Council arranges with the 41st Regimental Band, a fine organization by the way, for a weekly open air concert. This is very much enjoyed by the citizens and brings out thousands of people who exchange neighborly greetings and shake off any grouchiness which the "petty round of irritating concerns and duties" fastens to most everyone occasionally or oftener. Capt. John Stenson, the veteran leader of the band, is such a firm believer in the power of music to promote sociability and all other graces and virtues that he contributes an extra concert in the park frequently on Sunday afternoons. Is the soul of music dead in Belleville? or is the composite soul of the City Fathers so shrivelled that it refuses to longer vibrate to the strains of music? There is yet time to arrange for a series of open air concerts in the finest season of the year—late summer and early autumn. Oblige the people and encourage the band.

CHINESE SLAYER SAVED FROM DEATH

OTTAWA, Aug. 22—Clemency has been extended by the Governor-General on the report of the Minister of Justice to Jung Sam, a Chinese sentenced to death for killing a compatriot, Chong Tow, at Parry Sound. Jung Sam was to have been hanged on Friday next. His sentence has been commuted to one of imprisonment for life. A plea of insanity was advanced at his trial, but the jury found a verdict of guilty of murder.

OTHER VIEWS

Hurrah for Canada.

Rochester Democrat-Chronicle.

We all know that Canada has done nobly on the battle front in France, but it is doubtful if we realize just how heavy a price she has paid that freedom might not perish from the earth. Some figures recently made public give eloquent testimony in this respect. Starting with a regular army of only 3,000 men, Canada has raised and trained an army of more than 450,000. Of this number 43,000 have given their lives for the cause and 113,007 have appeared on the casualty lists as wounded or sick. About 50,000 have been returned as unfit for further service, 2,224 are still in German or neutral military prisons, and 884 are set down as missing. The quality of service rendered by the Canadian soldiers and nursing sisters is indicated by the fact that some 10,000 of them have been decorated or have received distinctions of one kind or another. And this is but a part of the great work done by our loyal sister nation to the north. The least we can say in the light of this record is "Hurrah for Canada!"

A Progressive Step.

Brockville Recorder.

The agreement recently made between the Canadian Railway War Board and the railway brotherhoods is a progressive step. It is one in the right direction. It emphasizes the spirit contained in the provisions of the Lemieux Act. The basis of the new agreement is conciliation. The organized railway workers have shown that they possess the right conception of things when they have joined in an arrangement for the settling of all railway labor disputes between the men and the management of separate roads, whether in regard to wages or working conditions to the labor board.

Are Worth Watching.

Guelph Mercury.

Lenine and Trotzky have beat it, but not before they had shipped to a safe and neutral country more than a million dollars in gold, the price of their treachery to the trusting Russians. And with this shining example there are men in Canada who think that the Bolsheviki would be a good thing. None take up the doctrine but should be suspected of purchase by German gold.

Taxing Heels Down.

New York Tribune.

A subscriber respectfully suggests a tax on all boot and shoe heels over three-fourths of an inch high, the tax to be in proportion to the height of the heels. Leather is still going up. Why not bring heels down by a method which will benefit every one concerned? The only ones who will suffer are the orthopedists—and they can afford it.

The Poet's Corner

CROSSING THE BAR.

Sunset and evening star,
And one clear call for me,
And may there be no moaning of the bar,
When I put out to sea.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep,
Too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep
Turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark,
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark.

For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crost the bar.

—Tennyson.

Young Volunteers Are Not Released

Only Men Called Undea Draft Act While 19 Are Freed

OTTAWA, Aug. 22.—Although it has been decided by the Militia Department that young men of the 20 to 22 class under the Military Service Act who were really only 19 years of age at the time the proclamation calling them out was issued are not liable for service and should be released, this decision does not affect volunteers. Men between 19 and 20 may still volunteer for service, and those who have volunteered in the past will still be expected to fulfil the terms of their engagement by serving as long as they are required.

Some unfortunate misunderstandings have been caused by the publication in the press of a notice dealing with the recent order providing for the release of the 19-year-old men called in the 20-year class, a number of people thinking that the order applied equally to volunteers.

A Laugh or Two

Safe

The Slicker—Calling on the Smith girl?

The Slacker—Yes, their dog has enlisted

Needs it Badly.

"So your are having trouble deciding where to go on your vacation. What sort of a place are you looking for?"

"A place where my pocketbook can enjoy a rest as well as its owner."

Fort Collins News—"The owners of dogs are keeping their dogs tied up to avoid the animals being bitten or shot by the police."

Those Mad Wags.

From a report: "The grounds were beautifully lit up; otherwise it was a temperance party."

Paid in Full.

Caddie—I got the ball we lost this morning, sir—got it from a small boy.

Golfer—Good! What did you give him for it?

Caddie—A biff on the jaw.

Driven to It.

Myer—Young Dr. Newcome seems to have a passion for poker.

Gyer—He says if he didn't play the game occasionally he would never get a call.

Va. and Geo.

Young Miss Va. Smith rec'd
Attention to a marked deg.
From a young gent. named Geo.,
As by these vs. you will see.

He sought her Co. one kt.
Determined he'd no longer wt.
"Behold, I w'p at yr. ft.—
This inst. let me know my fate!"

Va. hung her pretty head;
If Hon. yr. purpose be,
And if you'll be ob-d-t,
There's no obj. I can see.

"But 1st, you must consult with Pa,"
She softly lisped her blushes thru.
"I've Sr. Gov." he cried,
"& i.e. why I come to you."

He took that gal. to his lap,
A M times or more he kissed her;
The brave deserve the fair—if he
Had feared to woo, he'd sure have Mr.!

LIQUOR SENT AS GROCERIES

BRANTFORD, Aug. 21—Under the label of groceries alcohol is being shipped to Brantford from Montreal for consignment to local foreigners. Four cases were seized here by License Inspector Facrett, which contained alcohol in tins incased in sawdust. This beverage is being diluted by local foreigners and retailed at exorbitant prices.

Ashamed of Corns

As People Should Be—They Are So Unnecessary

The instinct is to hide a corn. And to cover the pain with a smile. For people nowadays know that a corn is passé. And that naught but neglect can account for it.

It is like a torn gown which you fail to repair. Or a spot which you fail to remove. The fault lies in neglecting a few-minute duty—just as with a corn.

Any corn pain can be stopped in a moment and stopped for good. Any corn can be ended quickly and completely.

All that is necessary is to apply a little Blue-jay plaster. It is done in a jiffy. It means no inconvenience.

Then a bit of scientific wax begins its gentle action. In two days, usually, the whole corn disappears. Some old, tough corns require a second application, but not often.

Can you think of a reason for paring corns and letting them continue? Or for using harsh or mussy applications? Or of clinging to any old-time method which is now taboo?

Or for suffering corns—for spoiling hours—when millions of others escape?

Can you think of a reason for not trying Blue-jay? It is a modern scientific treatment, invented by a famous chemist. It is made by a house of world-wide fame in the making of surgical dressings.

It has ended corns by the tens of millions—corns which are just like yours. It is easy and gentle and sure, as you can prove for yourself tonight.

Try Blue-jay on one corn. If it does as we say, keep it by you. On future corns apply it the moment they appear. That will mean perpetual freedom. A corn ache, after that, will be unknown to you.

COUNTED CHICKENS TOO SOON

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The Germans when they started their last offensive operation, were prepared for a siege of Paris from a range of 35 miles, the Petit Paris declared yesterday.

A number of sixty-foot guns, firing shells weighing three quarters of a ton each, were ready on railway trains to be pushed forward behind the advancing armies, the newspaper said.

APPRECIATION

is a term we feel permitted to use, as being descriptive of the state of mind of many of our CUSTOMERS who have taken advantage of OUR SUMMER FUR PRICES. The response to our offer of these special PRICES for summer work, has been gratifying to us, and no doubt means some lightening of our HEAVY FALL burden. By no means are we deploring our HEAVY FALL TRADE, far from it; but it is with a view to educating the PUBLIC to the MUTUAL advantages of preparing well ahead of winter to make void its many terrors, by having your FURS attended to NOW. LOW PRICES, FREE STORAGE, FURS ALL READY WHEN NEEDED, are to your advantage. It will be easily seen that IF our customers do this, we shall be relieved of many an all-night session in the fall. Thus, by equalizing our working days it would be to our advantage; hence these offers of LOW PRICES

MORE TROUBLE FOR MIKE

Mike Marasco, Greek restaurant keeper, was arrested last night on warant, charged with attempting to bribe a peace officer. Marasco is out on bail on a charge of keeping liquor for the purpose of sale and Sergeant of Police Harman charges him with offering him fifty dollars to prevent prosecution. Several bottles of whiskey were found in Marasco's apartments following a previous conviction for selling liquor. The accused was locked up overnight, and this morning released on bail of $500.

FARMERS' PICNIC

A number of Belleville citizens are attending the annual Farmers' Picnic at the Sand Banks to-day. Several speakers are expected from Toronto and a splendid program has been arranged. Mr. P .F. Brockel, Y. M. C. A. Secretary, and Officer Commanding Soldiers of the Soil in this district, is in charge of the sports, in which a large number of the boys and girls engaged in farm work are taking part. The Ontario baseball team left at noon to play with the Picton team at the picnic.

PRINCESS INTERCEDED

Capt. Thos. Rich, father of Mr. T. Rich of this city, has been released from Sattzerbad, Austria, where for 16 months he has been held a prisoner-of-war. Capt. Rich commanded H. M. S. 55, a transport taken over from the Mercantile Marine in the early days of the war. His ship was sunk in the Indian Ocean early in 1917, and he taken prisoner. A letter received from him a week ago, stated that the Crown Princess of Sweden, had interested herself and had written Vienna pleading for the Captain's release, urging his extreme age, seventy years last July. Success has crowned her efforts, and the family appreciate to the full the kindness of heart that prompted the princess and rejoice with her in her success. Capt. Rich is on his way to England where his wife and daughters await him.

Sporting Notes

Joe Goyer has accepted the challenge published in a recent issue of The Intelligencer from Old-Timers to play baseball, and a game will result.

G. T. R. LEAGUE

To-night the G. T. R. office staff and the shops will play at Pine Street School grounds at 6.45 sharp. A good game is expected. The office team have won both games 3—0 and 6—2, but the shops are out to win and as the office will not have their strongest outfit out to-night they expect to do the trick.

ALBERT COLLEGE NOTES

The results of the examinations in music held by the Toronto Conservatory of Music at the College, are highly gratifying to the Faculty of Music and pupils of the college. The following list of successful candidates for 1918 are pupils of Mr. V. P. Hunt and Miss Eva LaVoie:

Senior piano and A. T. C. M. Diploma—Louise Osborne.

Junior Piano—Gertie Staples and Mildred Clare.

Primary Piano—Florence Owers, honors; Marjory Bird, honors; Bernice Webster.

Introductory Piano—Ella Earl, honors.

Intermediate Theory, Musical Form—Louise Osborne, honors; Winnifred Pearce, honors.

Junior Theory, History of Music—Winnifred Pearce, honors.

Primary Theory, Harmony—Miss Battisby, 1st class honors.

Primary Theory, Rudiments—Miss Battisby 1st class honors; Mildred Mackie 1st class honors.

Elementary Theory—Hazel Madden, 1st class honors; Augusta Hill, 1st class honors.

The musical faculty will be greatly strengthened this year by the coming of Mr. Sam M. Anglin, B.A., teacher of singing, as an accomplished vocalist and experienced teacher. Mr. Anglin, who is also a graduate of Queen's University, and of the celebrated American Boston Master, Arthur Hubbard comes to Belleville as a great acquisition to the musical circle of the city. The prospects of the college for the coming year are increasingly bright.

LOOTED A HOUSE

A camp in the wilderness was evidently the ideal of several young men, resident of Madoc Township, inspired by a companion, who is said to be eligible for military service. To furnish the camp a house was looted of utensils and some grain. County Constable Soules investigated the robbery and located the stolen goods cached in various places from one to eight miles from the house broken into. He arrested Murney Wannamaker, aged 21, and George Reid aged 18, and is looking for Serene Parks, still at large, and alleged to be one of the trio, which ransacked the house of James Hunt, in Madoc Township, in the latter's absence, on the night of August 19, and left the place almost unfit for habitation. The case came up to-day before Magistrate Masson with Crown Attorney Carnew prosecuting. Wannamaker and Reid pleaded guilty. Sentence being deferred.

Kingston's Allotment Is 46,100 Tons Coal

KINGSTON, Aug. 22—Kingston's allotment of anthracite coal for the year will be 46,1000 tons, according to Provincial Fuel Controller R. C. Harris. The city actual hard coal requirement are 65,000 tons, but the balance will be made up by other fuel and coal dealers do not anticipate that Kingston will be in any danger of a fuel shortage. Mayor Hughes has been asked by the Fuel Controller to see that a local Controller is appointed, but it is not likely that will be appointed till October at the earliest, as the City Council thinks coal dealers are capable of taking charge of the situation for the time being. So far this season about 30,000 tons of hard coal have arrived here by the water route.

CHEESE FACTORY BURNED.

The Island City cheese factory, in Wolford township, Leeds county, owned by Charles Maitland, was destroyed by fire on Monday. Insurance, $1500.

BODY RECOVERED

The body of Gerald Healey, who was accidentally drowned at Peterboro in the river, just north of Smith street bridge, was recovered one hour and fifteen minutes after the fatality occurred.

A FASCINATING STORY

A new serial story of compelling interest will begin in The Intelligencer with Friday's issue. "The Tempting of Paul Chester" is one of those absorbing tales of ideal life, full of human interest, lovely and loveable women, adventure and mystery, which helps to tint the most prosaic life with a glow of romance and a vision of high ideals. Begin at the beginning and you will not be able to resist following closely the troubles, trials and triumphs of Paul Chester.

CADETS AND MECHANICS WANTED

The Royal Air Force has recruited 1,000 mechanics since recruiting was opened on May 20 of this year. A further 1,000 are to be recruited in the next two months, and excellent opportunities are presented for Category "B" men at the present time in all branches. There is an urgent call for cooks, medical orderlies, shoemakers and clerks, and a few barbers are also required, in addition to men of mechanical trades. All applicants must apply to the officer in charge of Trade Test at the Royal Air Force Recruiting Office at George and Duke streets, Toronto. Cadet recruiting is proceeding apace and an excellent class of men are still coming forward. One thousand women are now employed in the air force in Canada, and this number will increase also. All indications point to the air force in Canada being numerically much stronger at the end of this year than at any previous time. It is not generally known that the air force has over one thousand civilian Canadians engaged in recruiting throughout the Dominion. It is hoped at some future date to bring all these recruiters to Toronto for a conference, when the magnitude of the Royal Air Force effort, and the support and assitance which has been so loyally given to it by representative Canadians, will be realized more fully than now.

MOB ATTACKED JAIL AND FREED VETERAN

Carleton Place, Ont., Aug. 22.—Several unknown persons attacked the local jail at an early hour Tuesday morning and, after having smashed the lock on the cell door, freed Russel Perrin, a veteran with only one leg who was charged with having stolen an automobile in St. Catharines.

Perrin was charged with stealing an Overland car from Taylor Brothers' garage in St. Catharines.

A Single Application Will Banish Objectionable Hairs

(Aids to Beauty)

Here is a home treatment for removing hairs that is quick, painless and inexpensive: With some powdered delatone and water make enough paste to thickly cover the objectionable hairs, apply and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and it will be left soft, clear and hairless. This treatment will not mar the skin, but to avoid disappointment, be careful to get real delatone.

St. Michael's Ninth Annual Picnic Was a Great Success

The ninth annual picnic of St. Michael's Church was held yesterday at Holton's Grove. There was a large crowd on the grounds and everyone had a good time, the day passing without any accidents except to one of the ball players who was struck on the wrist with the ball.

There were two baseball games. The city league game between the Vimys and Athletics resulted in a victory for the Athletics by a score of 10 to 9. The line-up:

Athletics—Atkins, c.; Meagher, p.; McKenna, 1b.; Stewart, 2b.; Duesberry, s.s.; Mills, 3b.; Cummins, r.f.; Young, c.f.; Lynch, l.f.

Vimys—Brant, c.; Duesberry, p.; Green, 1b.; Moore, 2b.; Weir, s.s.; Coon, 3b.; Bryant, r.f.; Goyer, c.f.; Wims, l.f.

The second game between the T. N. T. and Pryon teams for the championship of Trenton, was a good game, the Pryons being victorious by a score of 12 to 7. The line-up:

Pryons—Black, s.s.; Jones, l.f.; McLaughlin, 2b.; Tire, 1b.; Mayes, 3b.; McGinty, c.; Larney, r.f.; Whittier, c.f.; Johns, p.

T. N. T.—Nolan, c.; Hayes, 2b.; Cummins, c.f.; Gerow, 1b.; Butler, c.f.; Weir, s.s.

The open air dining room was kept filled and the waitresses were quick and active. A number of races were held, but as they had to be put off until after the ball games there were only a few competitors. The races were run under the supervision of Mr. Geo. Lee and Mr. John Fahey.

There were a number of drawing contests, one being for a McLaughlin five-passenger car. The lucky number was 101, held by Mr. B. Stone of Trenton.

An orchestra was on the grounds and furnished many selections, but dancing was not indulged in to any great extent as the rain came in the evening just when everyone was eager to trip the light fantastic.

ONLY MEDICINE MADE FROM FRUIT

Extraordinary Success which "Fruit-a-tives" Has Achieved

One reason why "Fruit-a-tives" is so extraordinarily successful in giving relief to those suffering with Constipation, Torpid Liver, Indigestion, Chronic Headaches, Neuralgia, Kidney and Bladder Troubles, Rheumatism, Pain in the Back, Eczema and other Skin Affections, is, because it is the only medicine in the world made from fruit juices.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Canada Controls Troops Overseas

In Full Charge Except for Military Operations and Discipline

OTTAWA, Aug. 21.—Except in matters of discipline and military operations, Canada now has complete control over all her troops overseas. Recent Imperial developments which have brought the change about are regarded here as the most momentous since Confederation.

"They indicate," remarked one Cabinet Minister today who attended the Imperial Conference, "that recognition is now given to Canada's status as a nation."

The change in control over Canadian troops comes after continued negotiations with the Imperial Government. From the outbreak of war, Canada has controlled her troops toll they were despatched overseas. On arrival in Great Britain, they were taken over by the War Office. Now, except as regards military operations and discipline, the Dominion Government retains control.

Here, the change also made in regard to what is officially termed "channels of communication" is regarded as being of vital importance Direct communication between the Prime Minister of Canada and the Prime Minister of Great Britain, it is felt, will do away with delays incidental to the old method of communication via the Governor-General and the Colonial Office.

In regard to communications between Canada and the United States, it is pointed out, further development has been made. In matters of commerce, Canada now communicates directly with Washington through the War Mission there, instead of by way of the Colonial Office and the British Embassy.

Summarized, the most important developments in Imperial relations are given as:

Direct communication with the British Prime Minister.

Control over Canadian troops.

Permanent Canadian representation on the Imperial War Cabinet.

In regard to the last-named, it is announced, the Canadian representative has not yet been chosen and is not likely to be chosen till after the return of Sir Robert Borden from overseas.

1,000 WOMEN JOIN AIR FORCE

TORONTO, Aug. 22—Cadet recruiting is proceeding apace and an excellent class of man is still coming forward. One thousand women are now employed in the Air Force of Canada and this number will increase also. All indications point to the Air Force of Canada being numerically much stronger at the end of this year than at any previous time. It is not generally known that the Air Force has over 1,000 civilian Canadians engaged in recruiting throughout the Dominion. It is hoped at some future date to bring all these recruiters to Toronto for a conference, when the magnitude of the Royal Air Force effort, and the support and assistance which has been so loyally given to it by representative Canadians, will be realized more fully.

Borden Makes Hit In the Old Country

LONDON, Aug. 22—The London Times referring to the criticisms in Canada of Sir Robert Borden Canadian Prime Minister says:

"Sir Robert Borden will certainly go back with a great reputation decidedly enhanced. His influence at the Imperial War Cabinet has been strong. He exercised it always with discretion and self-restraint and succeeded in treading with dignity, yet without undue self-abnegation, the difficult public path of a Dominion Prime Minister here now. There is little that is showy or dashing about Sir Robert Borden. He is not quick to speak his mind perhaps because he is not quick to make it up, but when it is made up, he chooses the occasion to speak it and can be trusted not to change it lightly or because opposition gathers. This sturdy, deliberate will is what the British look for in statesmen and even critics concede it to Sir Robert. The great majority of Canadians trust the Prime Minister to know what he is doing at the Imperial War Cabinet. The public here instinctively takes his presence as an excellent evidence of the reality and value of his work."

Earl F McCabe Killed in Action

The sad news reached Belleville yesterday of the death of Earl Franklin McCabe, who was killed in action in France, on August 8th, while engaged in the great Canadian drive, which was so successful in advancing the cause of the allies. Gunner McCabe was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCabe, Bleecker Avenue, and only nineteen years of age. In March, 1917, while a student at the Ontario Business College he enlisted in the Cobourg Heavy Battery, and went overseas. He was a member of the Baptist Church and Sabbath School and a splendid young Canadian of many admirable qualities promising a successful career in life. The sympathy of the entire community goes out to the bereaved family.

CONSTABLE IS CHARGED WITH VIOLATING O. T. A.

Ingersoll, Aug. 22.—The finding, it is alleged of a partly filled bottle of whiskey in his car has resulted in a charge of having liquor in a place other than a private dwelling, being laid against County Constable John Haycock, who is also bailiff. The information was sworn out by Chief of Police Holmes, who in company with Constable Gould visited the plant of the Gas Company Monday night where Haycock is employed as night watchman. The chief carried a search warrant, and it is claimed that his investigation resulted in the finding of the partly filled whiskey bottle. The hearing will take place on Tuesday, August 27, adjournment having been made until that date.

VOL. 54 BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 23, 1918. NO. 273

No Need Now For Session This Autumn

Parliament Does Not Have to Sanction Further Enlistments

OTTAWA, Aug. 23—The Government statement declaring that the powers of the Military Service Act will not be exhausted until one hundred thousand men have actually left, or are ready to leave, the shores of Canada, has created considerable interest in military and political circles.

It had been generally supposed, even critics concede it to Sir Robert, that the powers conferred by the Act would be exhausted as soon as one hundred thousand men were called to the colors, that the limit of 100,000 men applied to the number enlisted or recruited. The text of the order-in-Council just issued, however, expressly declares that "the number of these reinforcements should be computed by reference only to the men ultimately selected and actually despatched for overseas service."

In other words, only those who have actually gone, or who have been ordered to go overseas, shall be counted as reinforcements.

Upon the number of men to be called out, there is absolutely no limit. The authorities, if they deem it necessary, can call out 150,000 or 200,000 men, but they would not be "reinforcements" until shipped or immediately ready to be shipped overseas. One of the expected results of this interpretation is that Parliament, which it was thought would have to be called this autumn to authorize further reinforcements, will not now need to assemble before the New Year; at least not so far as the need of military reinforcements is concerned.

Many Chaplains Methodist Pastors

Each Church Also Asked to Form Committee to Help Soldiers

TORONTO, Aug. 23.—The following official annnouncement has been issued by Rev. Dr. T. Albert Moore, secretary of the Methodist Army and Navy Board: Rev. A. E. Runnells has received appointment as chaplain and gone overseas. Major (Rev.) G. I. Campbell and Capt. (Rev.) Fred Williams have been appointed for overseas service.

Lieut.-Col. (Rev.) W. H. Emsley has been stationed at London, Ont., as senior chaplain. Other recent appointments of Methodists for service in Canada are: Capt. (Rev.) J. F. G. Morris, Winnipeg; Capt. S. E. Lambert, Whitby; Capt. (Rev.) G. A. Gassmore, Petawawa, and Capt. J. F. Reycraft, Deseronto; Capt. (Rev.) Frank Bushfield, Capt. Rev. H. T. Cornall, Capt. Rev. S. W. Haim, and Capt. Rev. F. W. F. G. Andrews have been appointed chaplains for various other military points in Canada.

The Methodist Army and Navy Board has issued a call to the congre- London, Paris, Berlin, and to some the Dominion to form a local military co-operation committee to tender any service to soldiers or sailors and their families; that this Methodist local committee unite with similar committees in other denominations to form a local inter-denomination soldiers and sailors' aid committee.

Mighty Battle in Progress To-day Between British And German Armies

Covers Front of Twenty-Five Miles

BRITISH AGGRESSORS AND MAKING PROGRESS IN ONE OF THE GREATEST BATTLES OF PRESENT PICARDY OFFENSIVE — FRENCH TROOPS CONTINUE ADVANCE — GEN. MANGIN'S ARMY CAPTURED 5,000 PRISONERS ON WEDNESDAY AND THURSDAY.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

NEW YORK, August 23.—The Associated Press today issues the following:—

British and Germany armies are locked in a mighty battle today over a twenty-five mile front from Lihons, six miles south of the Somme river, to Coljeul river, south-west of Arras. his combat, which began with the British attack against the enemy positions east of the Ancre river on Wednesday, has now spread into one of the greatest battles of the offensive in Picardy.

It is officially reported from London that the British are making progress at some points and that German attacks east of Beucourt, at about the middle of the battlefront, were repulsed.

The British are apparently still on the aggressive along the whole line.

French troops have occupied the southern bank of the Oise and the Ailette between Sempigny, south of Noyon, to the railroad bridge west of Coucy le Chateau.

BRITISH TROOPS MAKING PROGRESS.

LONDON, August 23.—(Official)—The battle is being fought on a line between Lihons, south of the Somme, to the Coljeul River, southwest of Arras, on a front of more than 25 miles. British troops are making progress at a number of points. Two enemy attacks east of Beaucourt were repulsed during the night. On the Lys front the British line was slightly advanced east of Le Touret, northwest of Neuf-Berquin and east Outtersteen.

FRENCH LINE ADVANCED.

PARIS, August 23.—(Official)—Between the Oise and the Aisne rivers French troops advanced their lines during the night to Guny and Pont St. Mard, just south of the Ailette river. They hold the right bank of the Oise and the Ailette from Sampigny to the railroad west of Coucy le Chateau.

FIVE THOUSAND PRISONERS.

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Between the Oise and the Aisne during the advance of Wednesday and Thursday General Mangin's army took five thousand prisoners.

South of Coucy le Chateau they have reached the outskirts of Guny and Pont St. Mard. This progress brings them still further toward the rear of the German forces hold the hills north of Soissons, and within three miles of the German positions north of Chemin des Dames as they stood before the offensive of May 27.

Albert Recaptured.

London, Aug. 23.—The town of Albert, eighteen miles northeast of Amiens, on the Ancre River, has been recaptured by the British, who also have obtained all their objectives in the fighting today, following a new attack at dawn between Bray-sur-Somme and Albert, according to the official communication from Field Marshal Haig. Over the six-mile front the British advanced to a depth of two miles, capturing all their objectives.

In two days the British have captured over five-thousand prisoners. In Albert itself 1,400 Germans and a few guns were taken. British troops are holding virtually all the Arras-Albert railroad, and have established their posts well east of that line.

In the Lys sector further progress is recorded in Sir Douglas Haig's despatches, and the repulse of a number of strong counter-attacks is also announced.

The "Leaning Virgin"

The capture of Albert is particularly gratifying news. It is situated on the Ancre River, and is a railroad centre. Before the war it had a population of more than seven thousand.

It was at Albert that for more than three years the famous "Leaning Virgin" hung from the top of the cathedral. The base of the statue of the Virgin, which was surmounted by the spire, was hit by a German shell while the town was under a heavy bombardment in August, 1914, and the image toppled over. It did not fall from its pedestal, however, but hung in a horizontal position until April of the present year, when a German shell again struck the statue and sent it crashing to the ground. There was a legend in France that when the statue fell the war would end.

Foe Retreating in Disorder.

To the south the French armies continue to make rapid progress. One report from French headquarters reads: "The retreat of Germans before both the Third and Tenth French armies continues today, with increasing speed, over a large part of the battlefront, and in some cases in disorder."

French Forces Press Onward.

Numerous villages running northwest of Soissons have been taken by the French, whose drive along the whole front continues, according to the War Office announcement tonight. The most important of the places captured is Pommiers. The Germans are abandoning great quantities of material. Since Tuesday the French have captured 200 guns. Unofficial reports say the French have taken 15,000 prisoners in two days.

General Humbert's army made a great advance between the Matz and the Oise, and has reached the Divette river on the Lssigny sector. General Mangin has crossed the Ailette, and is headed for the lower Forest of Coucy, with the manifest purpose of turning the line of the Ailette river and thrusting a wedge between the armies of the Crown Prince on the Aisne and those of Generel von Boehm north of La Fere.

KARL LOSES 20,000, AND BRITISH 2,500.

London, Aug. 23.—Austrian losses on the British front in Italy between June 15 and August 15 were 20,000, according to advices received here. British casualties in the same period totalled 2,500, it is said.

Never Was War Situation So Serious For The Enemy

PARIS, Aug. 23.—Never has the situation of the Germans been so serious as at present, which augurs well for the future, says L'Homme Libre, in discussing the results of Wednesday's fighting.

The Germans have been deprived of all hopes of making a lasting stand on their present front and the allied offensive is costing him dearly, the Figaro says. The battle is no longer a German battle, declared Le Matin, but the battle of Marshal Foch, to whose will all events appear to be subject.

French Have Driven Wedge Between Huns

London, Aug. 23.—The French army under command of Gen. Mangin, in its attack on the Oise front yesterday, reached the lines of the Ailette river, according to reports reaching London.

The possession by the French of the whole line of the Ailette, according to London military experts, means that Marshal Foch's design to drive a big wedge between General Von Boehm's army and the forces of the German Crown Prince has been successfully accomplished. Also, that the Germans have been placed in a position of the utmost difficulty, both north and south of the new French salient.

British Capture Three German Battalion Headquarters To-Day

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Special

With British Army, ug. 23—(3 p. m)—The town of Meaulte, southeast of Albert fell early in the British drive. British troops pressing on here are crossing the Bray-Albert road. Happy Valley, to the north of Bray, was taken by Field Marshal Haig's troops after hard fighting. Three German battalion headquarters have been taken in the locality of Happy Valley.

Disaster Threatens Huns

Several new fresh German divisions have been identified. They were rushed up in hope of saving something from the disaster which threatens the whole German army on this front.

British victorious advance continued this afternoon with the capture of the towns of Gregnolles, Meels Ville Gommecourt, which is the key to the German positions, and other points with more than one thousand prisoners and guns.

Belleville Children Make Merry At Play Grounds Festival

Laughter and song in merry peals coming from the East Belleville supervised Playgrounds yesterday, betokened that something special was in progress. The annual festival was being held and the children who enjoy and benefit by the games and instructions at the supervised playgrounds of East and West Belleville were showing how nicely they could sing the choruses, Folk songs and pretty dances as well as make fancy work and excel in athletics.

Beamsville Cadet Drowned In Lake

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

BEAMSVILLE, Ont., Aug. 23—Cadet S. Frizzelle, of the Aerial School of Gunnery here, was drowned yesterday afternoon when his aeroplane dived into Lake Ontario. His mother, Mrs. A. B. Frizzelle lives at 13 Havelock Street, Toronto.

Five Days' Incessant Battle For Lassigny

With the French Army on the Oise, Aug. 23—The fall of Lassigny at noon Wednesday followed five days of incessant fighting in the trenches of the old positions that were abandoned by the Germans in Marnh 1917.

Grenades, mine throwers and all other means of trench warfare came again ito play and hand-to-hand fighting took place frequently.

The Germans made a stout stand in Deville Wood, which bristled with machine guns, and made an almost impregnable position. A battalion of the famous Chasseurs, however, stormed the wood and took it yesterday morning, thereby sealing the fate of Lassigny.

While the officer commanding the Chasseurs at the head of his men and with rifle in his hand led them to the summit of the height to the east of Lassigny and planted the French flag there, an infantry regiment advancing from Plessier-de-Roye, turned the famous Plemont Height to the north.

Thus, Lasigny not only had fallen, but its possession by the French was made secure by the encircling of a strong position from which the German might have delivered counterattacks.

In the fighting at close quarters, and while the Germans were pressing hard at one point in superior numbers, a French lieutenant fell while directing his men. The men were determined not to allow the body of the lieutenant to fall into the hands of the enemy. They had exhausted their rifle and machine-gun ammunition and grenades.

With nothing else to fight with, they grabbed picks used for digging trenches and drove back the Germans until the body of the lieutenant could be recovered.

Most of the fighting around Lassigny was in stifling weather, and men in the trenches striped to the waist throwing hand grenades and working the machine guns.

FOURTEEN PEOPLE MISSING

NEW YORK, Aug. 23—Fourteen persons are missing following the upsetting last night of a fleet of canoes in tow of a motor boat off Rockaway Point, on the Long Island shore. Vincent Russo who was rescued from a buoy said that he had been on the buoy for ten hours. He said that five others persons on the buoy with him had become exhausted and fell into the water. Four airplanes from Fort Tilton were sent out to-day to scout the water for survivors and boats while submarine chasers also combed the waters for any survivors.

Late telegraphic brief.

ANOTHER SUB VICTIM.

A Canadian Atlantic Port, Aug. 23.—Sixteen of the crew of the fishing schooner Dela Garde have landed at Gabarus, Cape Breton, reporting that their vessel was sunk on the bank by a submarine. One of the men was injured. A dory containing three men is missing.

Prince Edward Farmers' Picnic

Fcur Thousand at Sandbanks Hear Speeches on War Work

PICTON, Aug. 23—Yesterday was Farmers' Day in Prince Edward County. All roads led to the Sandbanks, and all the motors in the county, and there are seemingly many hundreds, made an unbroken procession over the excellent roads to the second annual farmers' picnic organized by the County Board of Agriculture and the thirteen local Women's Institutes.

Fully 4,000 enjoyed the ideal day, which was marked by several features, including a truck load of farmerettes from Bloomfield; the presentation of badges to over a hundred boys who, as Soldiers of the Soil, had done their bit as farm helpers. A long programme of sports added further to a most successful occasion.

An hour's speaking program was another feature, under the Chairmanship of Mr. C. Mallory of Bloomfield, President of the local Board of Agriculture. Mr. Phil. Brockel of the Y.M.C.A. told of the success of the S.O.S. movement in Canada, in which 25,000 boys took part, besides thousands of girls. Mr. Frank Yeigh, Secretary of the War Lecture Bureau, described its scope and work, as operated under the Director of Public Information, as a successful method of mobilizing public opinion for the maximum prosecution of the war, and for combating the false rumors of pro-German propaganda. Miss Sutherland of the Department of Agriculture spoke of the activities of the Women's Institutes, and of the by their 40,000 members under their motto of "For home and country," while Mrs. W. K. Browne, President of the County Women's Institutes, told of the excellent work for Red Cross and other purposes done by their members.

Dr. W. A. Riddell, of the Trades Government gave a very interesting account of the development of the National Service through the Organisation of Resources Committee and other ways.

A large sum was raised for the Red Cross as a result of the picnic.

Military Ordered to Produce Draftee

QUEBEC, Aug. 23.—Colonel Machin did not appear Wednesday in the Practice Court, as requested by a ruling of the Court, in connection with Habeas Corpus proceedings. The case was adjourned until Wednesday next, when he will be ordered to appear with General Fiset, and Adjutant General, Major Ashton, Ottawa. Justice Letellier presided and he issued a writ against Major, Rodgers, O.C., Valcartier, to force him to produce a draftee named Carufel, of St. Maurice, whose appearance had been ordered by the Court last week.

A case entirely new to Quebec courts came up today, when application was made for a writ of habeas corpus on behalf of James Cullen, of Skowhegan, Me., who was arrested at Levis some time ago by the military police of Canada and drafted. Cullen was in class five in the United States, and came here confident of encountering no trouble. Class 5 in the States is equivalent to Class E in Canada. Cullen, being exempt from military service in the States, came to Canada on a tour and was arrested here. The writ was granted.

The appointment of a Government Board is announced in conection with the development of the western lignite coal areas.

Allies Have Damaged Six Hun Armies, Are Now at the Seventh

PARIS, Aug. 23—The allies have damaged sixe German armies since July 15, and the British are now eating into the seventh, with the spread of the battle northward, and over a front of seventy miles. Whether the enemy is prepared or unprepared allied efforts have had the same results and the Germans have been outgeneralled and outfought. The armies attacked and damaged in the past six weeks have been those of Generals Von Einem, Von Mudra, Von Boehm, Von Eben, Von Hutier and Von der Marwitz.

The full designs of Marshal Foch are known only to himself and perhaps one or two others, but it is believed generally that his aim is not, as the German's claim, to pierce their line, but to strike a succession of blows to cause the enemy irreplaceble losses in men and material and to force him to make more or less disastrous retreats. If that be the Marshal's plan, he is pursuing it with skill and unvarying success. General Lundendorff is being forced to expend his effectives out of all proportion to his resources on a given sector of the front, after which another blow is struck home on another sector. At no place have the Germans apparently been strong enough to check the attack entirely.

Cavalry Surrounded Sleeping Germans

LONDON, Aug. 23—A Canadian officer in a letter which graphically describes the fighting in the Amiens battle says: "We caught the Huns in the middle of relief, ur cavalry and tanks actually surrounded and awakened three Hun Battalions which were asleep. These were marched off intact without a stroke. Whole battalions were captured before they fired a shot.

One among all the other Canadian battalions marched forty-five miles in three days, then on the morning of attack we marched eight miles more and went at the Huns with the bayonets.

It was a wonderful thing the night before the attack to realize that we lay within two miles of the front line. Thousands, and hundreds of thousands of men, guns, horses and motor lorries had moved up, and to think that the Hun knew nothing of the hell that was to break on him in a few hours. The staff work was wonderful, and provisions were delivered to the men almost an hour before the assault.

In capturing Albert the British took fourteen thousand prisoners and a few guns. The British have also taken five thousand prisoners in the last two days. The Germans are retreating between Albert and Bray-sur-Somme and British troops are pursuing them hard. British troops have made a gain of two miles on a six-mile front.

Thirty-Two Complete American Divisions Are Now In France

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23—Thirty-two completely organized American divisions (around 1,400,000 men) are now in France, the U. S. Chief of Staff, Gen. arch, announced Wednesday.

Gen March pointed out that to accomplish this remarkable task it had been necessary to scour the world for ships; while to maintain the present progress and achieve the projected four million plan would require gathering still more shipping.

The Emergency Fleet Corporation is doing "splendidly" to catch up Gen. March said, but the hiring and chartering of other ships will be necessary to meet the increased effort He pointed to the significant fact that the general effect of the blows recently dealt the Germans has been to shorten the whole line from the North Sea to Rhemis so that to-day it stands at less than 200 miles—a reduction of fifty miles through the past week's operations.

Reviewing events of the last few days, Gen. March pointed out that the Allies have continued their attacks at widely separated points. In Flanders, the flanks have been bent in by the attacks southwest of Meteren and near Merville. This rendered the new apex untenable for the German, and he fell back to two miles on a 14 mile front.

British advanced in sharp fighting taking Eampoux. On the plains near Roye, continued pressure by the French and British carried them well back of the old 1916-17 line. Between the Oise and Aisne, the French began attacks Sunday night on a 15-mile front, gaining about 4 miles and placing them only four miles away from Noyon.

In the Vosges, the Americans took Frapelle, straightening out a salient there.

Discussing the ship situation, the Chief of Staff showed that the success of present plans depends on the ships. America had none when the accelerated troop movement program started. Hence it was necessary to use the German interned vessels, to requisition Dutch ships, and to charter and hire all that could be obtained from other nations. That has taken a large portion of money, for with one single exception—a Brazilian ship was given free for two trips—these vessels have proven expensive.

General March said in order to carry on the work as now contemplated, additional hiring and chartering must be done until such a time as the American transport fleet reaches the peak.

The Head of a Hospital In France Writes Home

From Montmirail, near Chateau-Thierry, the scene of hard fighting, has come the graphic letter printed below.

It was written while the Germans were driving toward Paris in the great June offensive that resulted in their capturing Chateau-Thierry, from which they have been driven out.

The writer is Mrs. Herbert G. Squiers of New York, and the letter was written to her sister, Mrs. Frank H. Potter. The nursing work of Mrs. Squiers has been a constant source of comment among her friends, who have marvelled over her ability to endure the physical strain after spending seventeen peaceful years as a diplomat's wife and rearing a family of seven children.

Hospice de St. Vincent de Paul,

Montmirail, Marne, June 10, 1918

Dearest Flora: This is the first day I have found to write to you of all we have passed through in the battle of Chateau-Thierry. As I wrote you, every one was waiting breathlessly for the offensive, and when and where. I felt positively certain it would be here, for in history all Generals try to recover lost ground, and in this case, especially, the Marne and Paris, which was the bitterest pill for the Germans.

As I wrote you, we had evacuated all our convalescents, and were painting our hospital and getting ready for the offensive.

Sunday night the General invited us to a dinner in the park of the chateau, and, oh, such a glorious night! Monday we invited them to dine here, also Captain Maurice, whom I knew at the siege of Peking, but—no dinner. For Maurice rushed in, saying the offensive had begun. The Huns had taken Chemin des Dames and were pouring down in streams, and that every one was leaving Montmirail at once.

I immediately began to get the hospital ready, and 5 on Tuesday we began to receive the wounded.

Wednesday and Thursday I served at two operating tables from early morning till midnight. Bombs were bursting in the distance, and news came that the Huns were nearing Chateau-Thierry, only a few miles from us.

Everyone here worked like dogs. Thursday night the medecin chef, the infirmiers, all left. They said they had orders to go. My maid fled with the rest.

I was left alone with Hoytie Wiborg, Lady Abinger, my English friend, and the two little Miles. Gobinot, all of whom did the most glorious work.

The hospital was a slaughter house. . . . I finally went to a wounded Captain, who, seeing the chaos, sent for surgeons and men to come in at once. Then the Red Cross came and a rolling canteen. One English nurse arrived; she had lost her formation and had walked miles to get here. It seemed as if God had sent them all from Heaven!

We took all cases we could save to the operating room; the others we had to leave in the courtyard to die like heroes, alone.

We had many English and Americans among them, and they are buried here in the garden. I have put the Stars and Stripes over our American dead. The Red Cross was splendid. They went to Paris and brought out in trucks everything we needed.

Hoytie Wyborg did such splendid work. She never had her clothes off for night, and you will probably see her in a moving picture taken at the station here, where she and Mary Peyton and Mrs. Hammond were cheering and caring for 600 wounded. I could not be there, for as infirmiere Major I had to be here as head of everything.

I had in between times to see that the surgeons had everything they needed, and from every side every one calling for help. Through it all, I was up every morning at 4 and never got to bed till midnight. All this, while cannon was roaring, star shells exploding, bombs dropping around us—but nothing touching us, thank God!

For eight days we were in a seething hell. Oh, how gloriously our men fought! The 7th Machine Gun men were a marvel, and such a surprise to the Huns. Now they know what they have to face. The French and English are all enthusiasm over our men.

Oh, how proud I am of them! They will help to have dear France.

The spirit of our men is glorious. Two of the 7th Machine Gun men had their legs cut off, and of course, we did not tell them at first about it. When they found out one turned to the other and said: "Well, your pin has gone, too, old boy." One of their comrades came to see them, and as he left the legless men said, with tears in their eyes:

"By Gad, we're sorry we can't go back with you to fight those damn Fritzies!"

"Never mind, boys, just to look at you lying there will make us kill as many as we can."

I can tell you they are doing it.

YOUR DEVOTED HATTIE.

Spies Believed Operating With Subs off U.S.

AUGUSTA, Me. Aug. 23—The opinion that enemy spies are operating in this State in connection with German submarine activities was expressed by the Maine Committee on public safety. Information received by the committee is said to have disclosed many suspicious circumstances along the coast, and evidence of this nature has been presented to the Federal authorities.

The committee urges every member of its organization throughtout the State to keep a vigilant lookout for strangers, who may be suspected of giving information to the enemy. It is said to have been well established that the time of sailings of vessels must be known to the enemy.

THE WAR IN ALLEGORY

Last night Griffin Pictures, Limited, of Toronto, gave local citizens an opportunity of seeing Thomas H. Ince's sensational allegorical photoplay at popular prices. From the way the theatre filled rapidly when the doors opened no doubt the people were expecting to see an extraordinary picture and that they were not disappointed goes without saying. The wonderful affects used in this spectacular production are the sole property of Thomas H. Ince, and his genius for doing things big in motion picture work was never more strikingly shown than in this wonderful picture. Affect and affect was worked into the picture with the result that the onlookers were spell-bound until the close. The story is well written by Gardner Sullivan and he very easily demonstrated that he was a writer of no mean ability.

The program also contained a two-part comedy that was a novelty in itself and the very fast work of the comedians and the constant use of gun powder on the bad man caused ripples and waves of laughter.

The first chapter of the new serial "A Fight for Millions" was very interesting, and the old players from "The Fighting Trail" and "Vengeance and The Woman" serials are in the new one ,and the same action and dash as was used in the other serials are used in this new one. The opening chapter augurs well for the future followers of the serial and no doubt interest will be kept at a fever pitch. A genuine novelty was a head on collision between two trains staged for this story only.

MABEL NORMAND AT THE PALACE

At the Palace beautiful Mabel Normand is shown in a bathing suit story called "The Velus Model," which was very interesting. Other good photoplays make up a good program of pictures.

There will be a matinee at Griffin's on Saturday afternoon at two-thirty, when the same program as used at night will be shown in the afternoon.

"MY IRISH CINDERELLA"

For Wednesday of next week the opening play of the season will be "My Irish Cinderella," which is said to be more interesting than ever. Seats will be on sale at Doyle's on Monday.

Berney Hepburn and Canada's Fighting Foresters Overseas

(Canadian Lumberman)

From all sources there come to the Canadian Press glowing tributes, not only to the dauntless courage and fighting strength of Canadas "Tommies" in the front-line trenches, but also with respect to the industry, patience and resources of the Canadian Forestry Corps. In the last issue of the "Canada Lumberman" there appeared from the pen of Harold Begbie an article in which particular reference was made in the London Daily Mail to the energy, driving force and organizating ability of Brig.-Gen. Alex MacDougall, who is at the head of the Canadian Forestry Division. Since then appreciative reports have arrived, from Edward Price Bell, who has been sending special despatches to the Canadian and American press in regard to the activities and hustling qualities of the lumberjacks and woodsmen who constitute a very important unit in our national defence schemes. Mr. Bell quotes Sir James Ball, Controller of Imperial Timber Supplies, who is an Englishman and not a Canadian, and this leading authority not only praises Gen. MacDougall but also Col. W. B. R. Hepburn, C.M.G., M.P., assistant director, Overseas Forestry Corps. Col. Hepbur was born in Picton, Ont., in 1870, and after spending several years with navigation companies and holding several responsible positions, he was elected to the House of Commons, representing Prince Edward County in 1911. He was returned during his absence in England in December last by a large majority. Col. Hepburn joined the 224th Battalion—the First Forestry Battalion—as major in the spring of 1916, and later was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, and afterwards became Colonel. As further Forestry Battalions were recruited, his duties were enlarged, and he has practically been in charge of the detail work of the division, his services taking him frequently to France and different parts of England and Scotland. On New Year's Day, 1918, Col. Hepburn was given the distinguished honor of being made Comander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

COL. W. B. R. HEPBURN, M.P.,
Picton, Ont.

Speaking of the Canadian Forestry Corps, Edward Price Bell says: In this corps—this bit of Carada abroad,—economical, efficient and important in respect of the quantity of its production? It is a question, I think, with a bearing, not only for Canada, but for all the nations struggling for permanent peace and liberty. And why? Because in this war the interests of the democracies are identical; weakness anywhere among them is weakness everywhere among them; strength everywhere among them.

By courtesy of Gen. Alexander MacDougall., chief of the Canadian forestry corps, and the officers of his staff, I have had an opportunity to inspect in detail a number of the Canadian forestry camps in England, I have inspected their hutments, their gardens, poultry houses, piggeries, I have seen them building light railways, stacking timber, loading timber, and doing all the diversified tasks attaching to stirring lumber camps. To my mind, untrained, I admit, in such things, it seemed that everything moved in response to perfect knowledge and resolute will.

COST OF PRODUCTION COMPARED

But I can quote an authority on the methods and the achievements of the Canadian Forestry Corps. I can quote Sir James Ball, controller of Imperial timber supplies—not a Canadian, but an Englishman.

"What do you think of the Canadians in the timber" I asked of Sir James.

"They are my sheet anchor," said he.

"What is your opinion of the staff?"

"Remarkably conscientious and competent."

SENT TO FOREST NEAR SWISS BORDER

In May it was decided to enlarge the operations and co-operations, and three companies were sent to the forest near the Swiss border. The personnel of these companies were French speaking Canadian from Nova Scotia direct descendants of the old Acadians.

Three other companies followed and started operations in another forest. In this case water had to be pumped from a village at the foot of the mountain a mile away. The Canadian enlarged the water supply of the village and not only supplies their mills, but also furnished water for a narrow-guage railway.

Three mills, begun as an experiment, have shipped a total of eighty thousand feet of sawn lumber. Motor tractors and light railways, some of which run by cable over the mountains at a grade of forty-five degrees, have taken the place of the old ox teams which used to laboriously haul the big logs to the little water-power mills in the valleys.

CANADIAN OPERATION IN THE VOSGES

In July of last year, at the request of the French Ministry of War., it was decided to start another Canadian operation of the same kind in the Vosges Mountains. Two new mills were set up. It was a lumber operation which the French had declared impracticable, but they gave the Canadians every assistance. Owing to the steep mountain grades engineers decided to put their mills in the valleys and to lower the big logs—they rival in size the best British Columbia can produce—by cable railway. These railroads have been a tremendous success and French engineers compare them to the wonderful system which the Italians use in their mountain warfare.

Two Canadian mills are sawing from this forest.

Last April another Canadian mill was put into operation, tapping a further big forest. A bandsaw mill was added to this plant and now all kinds of thin lumber needed for the construction of huts are made.

The year's operation, for the French Government, shows approximately twenty-five million feet of lumber manufactured and delivered to our allies, and all of it has been done by Canadians whose medical rating either because of age, disability, or wounds in active service, prevents their being used in the front line. They are part of Canadas army behind the army.

A BELLEVILLE OFFICER

Capt. Schuster, of Belleville, served in the Canadian Forestry Corps overseas and helped materially to bring this important department of war effort up to its present high state of efficiency.

It's Easy Enough to keep the liver right if you use Dr Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills occasionally.

The liver gets lazy at times and when it does digestion is interfered with and the kidneys fail to act.

You soon know it when the liver is awakened by this treatment, for headache, biliousness and stomach troubles disappear and you feel fine. This is an easy prescription for health and happiness.

Letters From Overseas

FROM PTE. STAPLEY

Misses Minnie and Gertrude Stapley have received letters from their brother, Pte. Edward Givens Stapley, recently wounded in action, written before he fell. The following extracts from the letters will be of general interest:

It is raining again, I don't like that but I am in a good place and don't mind it. We think the large guns cause most of the rain in some way. We were down in a dugout and the concussion shell knocked the lad who was on guard down, and shook me and the rest of the boys who were asleep like being in a canoe on the water, something terrific.

You said you were up to Toronto, gee I can picture that dear old Queen City and especially Hanlan's Point and Scarboro Beach. I used to go there when I went to York on the way freight and short hauls.

I was hit on the leg and back by a little piece of shrapnel a few days ago, when I was in the line but lucky it did not penetrate through my clothing.

There is water and mud to our knees and the rats and mice fall off the parapet into the water and are drowned. I saw one as big as our cat get hit with a bullet, he squeeled and fell into the trench, dead.

I got the box, papers and Jack Canucks, and I gave the papers to Belleville fellows after I read them and the sugar also came in fine.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily, and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Railway Shopmen Ask Higher Wages

Representatives of All Trades Meet Railway Leaders

MONTREAL, Aug. 23—Representatives of all the trades of the railway shops of Canada have arrived in the city and again are in conference with representatives of the railways in regard to in creases of wages, shorter hours and a reduced time rate in the working agreement.

Some time ago the delegates of the workers met a delegation of the Railway War Board, and after several days' conference, negotiations were broken off, when the railway representatives intimated that the McAdoo award and its amendments was as far as they could go in meeting the demands of the railway employees.

The Federated Shop Trade delegates returned to their particular headquarters and put matters fully unions affected, and they were instructed to come back to Montreal and enter again into negotiations with the representatives of the railway companies.

The conference was arranged, and to-day the former sub-committee of the War Board, consisting of Geo. Hodge of the C.P.R.; Robert Patterson of the Grand Trunk; S. J. Hungerford of the C.N.R., while the men are represented by R. J. Talton of Calgary, President of the Federation, Frank McKenna of Vancouver, Vice-President; Charles Dickie of Winnipeg, Secretary; J. H. Roberts, A. Grimwood and R. Maxwell of Winnipeg, Tom Broad of Ottawa, and J. A. Blackwood of Moncton.

Quebec Bridge Stands Test

Two Heavy Trains, Loaded to Capacity on Central Span

QUEBEC, Aug. 23—Under ideal weather conditions, and in the sight of thousands of spectators, the Quebec bridge, one of the world's greatest engineering feats, withstood the supreme test to which it was put on Wednesday afternoon, when two huge trains loaded to capacity, and weighing approximately fourteen million pounds, steamed out over the central span and their weight was allowed to rest on the span simultaneously.

Although no special trains were run to the site of the bridge, thousands of persons from this city and the surrounding districts motored to witness the trial, and as it was seen that the enormous weight of the two trains had no effect on the huge structure a mighty cheer rose from the assembled throng which almost drowned the piercing whistles of the locomotives on the bridge.

Among the officials and others present were :Mr. Montserrat, Chairman, and Mr. Borden C. E., of the Government Comission; Judge E. H. Gary, President of the United States Steel Corporation, officials of the St. Lawrence Bridge Company, contractors who built the bridge, Mr. Gordon Grant, C.E., Chief Engineer of the Transcontinental Railway, Mr. Porter, C.E., Resident Engineer, and Messrs Colclough, Morazain and Atkinson, officials of the Government Railways.

Railway Corps Do Good Work

OTTAWA, Aug. 23—Senator Clive Pringle, who has arrived from England, while absent from here spent some time in France with the Canadian army and Canadian railway troops. He expressed his pride in the position attained by the Canadian army, acknowledged to be unsurpassed as a fighting force on the western front.

"The Canadian army," he said, "is a most wonderful fighting machine, and has a reputation for resourcefulness, discipline and tenacity that makes every Canadian in Europe proud of his nationality."

There are in the Canadian Railway Corps sixteen thousand men. The field of their operation is along two-thirds of the western front. They not only build railways, but have dug hundreds of miles of trenches, put out thousands of yards of wire, salvaged much valuable property, and when occassion required, held the line against the Germans with the same courage as the battalions of the regular army.

The railway troops are just proud of their fighting record. Although they are non-combatant troops, yet in actual fighting they have won two C. M. G.'s, 17 D.S.O.'s, 46 Military Crosses, 15 Distinguished Conduct Medals, 183 Military Medals, and 50 others have been mentioned in despatches. The dangerous character of the work is seen in the casualties, of which there have been 1,381 caused by enemy weapons.

"Their work in construction, repairing and maintaining the broat guage narrow guage and light railways has been marvellous. During the past fourteen months they have of broad guage railways located 297 miles, graded 320, repaired 77, track laid 300, ballasted 295, surfaced 228, and maintained 915, while of narrow guage they have located 1,750, graded 916, repaired 238, track laid 934, ballasted 913, surfaced 673 and maintained 6,934. In addition, they have built miles of trenches, many bridges salvaged much property and prepared safe shelters for the nurses and doctors in the bombed areas. Much of this work has been done under fire, and the casualty list but partially indicates the dangers to which the Canadian railway troops are subjected."

KIPLING ON COMPROMISE.

"When Germany begins to realize her defeat is certain, we shall be urged in the name of mercy, toleration, loving-kindness, for the sake of the future of mankind, or by similar appeals to the inextinguishable vanity of man who delights in thinking himself holy and righteous when he is really only lazy or tired—I say we shall be urged on these high grounds to make a sort of compromise with or to extend some recognition to the power which has for its one object the destruction of man, body and soul. Yet if you accept these pleas we shall betray mankind as effectively as though we had turned our backs upon the battle from the first. Your own President has said that there is no conceivable halfway house in dealing with the world's enemy."

At the opening of an inn for officers at Winchester, England, Rudyard Kipling addressed the soldiers of the United States, now in England. He alluded to the probable move by Germany for peace in the words of the above paragraph.

The speech was a tremendous indictment of Germany and made a profound impression, especially when he spoke of Britain's sacrifice of "the life-blood of a generation."

Germany in defeat can be depended upon to work every wire of its cunningly devised and widespread spy system and subsidized propagandists in the press, and elsewhere, to escape the punishment which is so richly deserved. Indeed there is a possibility that Germany may take advantage of Great Britain's customary magnanimity to secure peace terms which will be a victory for Germany.

There can be no peace terms with a mad dog except that which eradicates forever the danger of hydrophobia.

KILLING THE GERMAN MAD DOG.

Coming right down to bare facts, stripped of all confusing language dictated by sentiment or military science, the real job of the Allied armies is to kill German soldiers, to kill as many as possible in order to hasten the end of the war. The Montreal Star ably sums up this fight against the Butcher of Berlin, as follows:

> In another column today is printed a message from General Sir Arthur Currie, given in London on the eve of the Canadian Army Corps' entry into the Allied counter-offensive. The Germans, now in red retreat, were still advancing. The situation was critical. He knew that Canada's turn to face the surging flood of shells and bayonets was near.
> Through his message the grim fighting spirit of his army in that emergency finds voice in words that thrill and uplift Canadian hearts. There men knew they were going to die and were ready to die rather than yield a yard of their line or fail to take any positon they were asked to take, because "We stand in a great cause—We have to preserve the British Empire."
> We are also indebted to General Currie for stripping the common camouflage from this war business and showing it in its stark reality. We hear too much of "defeating the enemy," "strategic retirements," and "important gains." The real job of the British fighting man is killing Germans. "Germany is simply a mad dog which must be killed. . . . We will kill a sufficient number to make him silly. . . . Remembering the crimes they have committed, we shall never take such delight in killing them as when we next meet them. . . . It is simply a question of who can stand killing the longer!"
>
> There is no flutter of flags or blare of bugles or ruffle of drums in this vision of war; but this is real war—not the glittering sham of the story books. It is a cruel and ugly business, but a terrible necessity just now and so long as a world power remains which worships war and holds it as a glorious and justifiable means of national advancement.
> German Kultur is a disease which threatens our world. Each individual armed German is a germ of infection which will spread the disease unless it is killed. This is the truth of this war and that is the spirit of Canada's General and Canada's Army.

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

How the mighty have fallen! The Kaiser's sun is setting, and the Allies are setting his sons; the glory of Von Tirpitz, the ruthless terror of the sea, has departed, and the great War God Hindenburg has fallen to such low degree that he craftily transferred his address from the city directory to the Morgue. The next move of the Kaiser will no doubt be the greatest peace offensive the world has even seen.

The Kaiser has received authentic information that every forty minutes a vessel leaves the North American continent laden with soldiers or munitions or food for the Allies. And with very few exceptions every one of these vessels reaches an Allied port. The Kaiser begins to realize, perhaps, that submarine warfare on hospital ships, empty returning transports and fishing smacks will not win the war.

Germans boasted in the early days of the war that Count Zeppelin's airships would wipe out London and greatly assist Germany in winning a rapid and signal victory. The Zeppelins have little military value. "No booze," replied Mason. "That's the secret."

About the Lady Bug.

Rochester Democrat-Chronicle.

Amateur potato growers are warned by experts against mistaking the harmless lady bug, now in evidence in many city gardens, for the destructive Colorado beetle, and attacking it with paris green and other pest destroyers. It is one of the beneficent plant parasites, and it has an appetite for the aphis, a plant louse which injures and ultimately destroys the foliage of the potato vine. The lady bug was imported into this country as a remedy for the aphis, but it did not propigate with sufficient rapidity to exterminate the potato louse. A few minutes observation of the operations of the lady bug will, though, demonstrate the beneficint character of its activities at meal-time. Parasites which do not ultimately themselves become pests are rare; but the lady bug, so far as has been known, has not yet developed any vicious or plant-destroying characteristics.

The Poet's Corner

"YOU DID"

It's good to wander back again
  Among the old home folks;
It rather satisfies a man
  To hear the same old jokes,
To hear somebody say "I knew
  You when you were a kid."
But someone always tells you of
  The foolish things you did.

Your heart beats lighter, as it did
  In long forgotten days,
When at some well remembered spot
  Reflectively you gaze;
But it seems queer that all your good
  And noble deeds are hid,
And people only call in mind
  The foolish things you did.

They talk of others who've gone out
  Into some foreign land;
They tell of things these other folks
  Have done—and they seem grand.
But when it comes to talk to you,
  Their minds cannot be rid
Of the belief you'd like to hear
  The foolish things you did.

You know you've done a thing or two
  Which show you've got some sense,
But every time they talk of you
  They're certain to commence
With tales of "What a fool you were
  When you lived here—a kid."
They have forgotten all except
  The foolish things you did.

  You say to Mothers of Men!
But they made that Flag and they love
  it best,
  For it means the most to them.
Their life blood is dyed in the flag's bright red,
  The white is their purity,
The blue is the heaven of the home
  they make,
  And theirs are the stars we see.
Bright stars that mean sons who have gone abroad
  To fight for our liberty;
And they cry aloud to Fathers of Men,
  "Hats off, Mother! to thee!"

Stand and salute when you see a bright star
  Pinned on a brave mother's breast,
For her's the honor, yet sacrifice,
  And she is the one we should bless.
She gave up her son, the life of her life,
  And sent him across the sea,
To fight for the flag and hasten the

  When freedom for all shall be.
Ah' here is a gift to all mankind,
  With her love for Liberty;

"Oh, I haven't saved anything, but I believe in it."

Corrected.

"Mamma, in sending out my birthday invitations shall I say, 'Your presence is requested'?"

"Of course not, my dear; you should say 'Your presents are requested'."

Thoughtful Office Boy.

The office boy looked at the persistent lady with the manuscript who calls times a week and said: "The editor is still engaged."

"Tell him it doesn't matter," she said. "I don't want to marry him."

"I haven't the heart to tell him, miss," said the boy. "He's had several disappointments today."

Undressed Fowl.

Mary, from the city, watched the farmer's wife plucking the duck for the morrow's dinner. Mary was interested in farm life. "Please, ma'am," she asked, "do you take off their clothes every night?"

Getting There.

A very small but live boy applied to a great merchant for a job.

The great man sized him up with twinkling eyes, for the one situation open needed a bigger parcel of human experience, and asked what position he wanted.

"A chance to grow up in the business, mister."

"Well, we are more or less being depopulated by the drafts. What is your motto, my son?"

"The same as yours," was the ready answer.

"What do you mean?" asked the puzzled merchant.

"Why on the door there—"Push!"

He got the job of keeper of that very door.

Her Comeback.

He (savagely)—Bah! It's no use arguing with a fool.

She (sweetly)—But I wasn't arguing with you, dear.

Turn About.

Office Boy—Can I get off to go to the ball game?

Boss—No, you can't. Furthermore, you will have to work this evening; the office is scheduled for a double-header.

Sugar Cards For Families Are Not Required in Canada

TORONTO, Aug. 23— Rumors to the contrary, the Canada Food Board has not given orders for an issue of sugar-cards to go into effect on September 1. Toronto housewives, therefore, who have anticipated having to carry around a sugar-card, along with their registration forms, and of having it scrutinized by the corner grocer every time they wanted a pound of sugar, may quiet their fears—for the present at least.

For some time past all sorts of rumors have been in circulation in the city regarding the sugar situation, one of the most persistent being that by the first of the month dealers would be forbidden to sell any sugar unless a sugar-card was to be carefully examined to see whether or not the would-be purchaser had exceeded his or her monthly allotment of a pound and a half. If there was still a balance to the good a sale might be effected, provided of course, the dealer had sugar to sell. The card would then have to be punched, to prevent anyone with a sweet tooth overdrawing his account.

"No instructions to that effect have been issued," said an official of the Canada Food Board, when seen today.

WHOM ORDER EFFECTS

"Has any order been issued covering the use of sugar-cards at all?" was asked.

"After September 1st ,all manufactureres using sugar for the production of such commodities as soft drinks, must secure sugar-cards, and must furnish a statement showing what amount of sugar they used last year," was the reply. "The cards will be used to regulate purchases so as not to exceed the amount used in 1917."

"How about boarding houses and restaurants?"

"Restaurants must have food-cards are served in a boarding house the sugar must be purchased with a card. The fourteen meals do not include meals served to members of the family."

"Then there is no order covering the issuing of cards to private families?"

"Nothing as far as we have been instructed from Ottawa."

This statement regarding the situation was borne out by a number of retail dealers who were asked as to the instructions they had recently received from Ottawa.

DEALERS' INTERPRETATION

"My understanding of the order is that after the first of September I must not sell sugar to manufactuers or to boarding house keepers who serve more than 14 meals per day, apart from those consumed by members of the family," said a North Toronto dealer. "There is nothing in the order, as far as I can see, to prevent me selling any amount of sugar to my ordinary customers. Of course no one knows when another order will be issued."

Other dealers are of the same opinion, and are selling sugar as usual. They expect to continue to sell it after the first of the month, with the exceptions mentioned.

Many of the dealers are refusing to sell granulated sugar to their customers unless a certain amount of "yellow" sugar is also purchased. Some require a "fifty-fifty" order, while others only require one-third of "yellow" with every pound of granulated ordered.

The requirements originated with the Food Board, which instructed the refiners to turn out more "yellow" sugar, as it could be done at a greater advantage than producing the granulated. The refiners therefore insisted on the retail dealers and "jobbers" ted.

"POUND FOR POUND"

Many retilers have been required to purchase in like proportions, but some have not been pressing the sale of the "yellow," with the result that houses. Some have, therefore, been compelled to insist that their customers relieve them of a pound of "yellow" sugar for every pound of granulated purchased, while others, who exercised fore-thought, only require one-

THE TEMPTING OF PAUL CHESTER.

BY

ALICE AND CLAUDE ASKEW

AUTHORS OF "THE SHULAMITE"

CHAPTER I.

Paul Chester At Home.

"We are asked to meet the Berkshires next week. They are to stay at the Riddells', it appears, for a couple of nights, just from Saturday to Monday."

Lady Susan Chester glanced up from her writing-table as her husband entered the room, and addressed him over her shoulder. She was a slim and exceedingly pretty woman, with a quantity of fair, soft hair, clear, bright blue eyes, and a charming voice.

"That's good!" exclaimed Paul Chester; and the man's whole face lit up with a satisfied smile. "That's exceedingly good! Of course you will write and accept, Susan?"

He was a tall, dominant-looking young man of about thirty, with keen, clear-cut features, and dark hair. His eyes were piercingly bright, hawk's eyes, and his chin stuck out prominently He was quite good-looking, and there was something in the face which set Paul Chester apart from his fellows, an expression of invincible determination and iron resolve. He was unnaturally pale for a man who spent the most of his time in the open air and was the owner of miles of soil; his was more the type bred in cities than in fields.

"We have friends coming here ourselves next Saturday," said Lady Susan, in calm, cold tones; but a faint touch of color rost to her cheeks.

"Put them off—put the whole party off," commanded her husband. "Don't you realise the extreme importance of this visit? You know perfectly well that if a man is to get on in politics nowadays he must stand in with the Berkshires. Why, her influence——" He paused and did not finish the sentence, startled for the second by the look of intense contempt which had come into his wife's eyes, transforming a merely pretty woman into a creature he failed to understand.

"Yes, we all know what the Duchess is. How she can set a man up and take a man down," said Lady Susan, smiling frostily. Then she raised her head and looked her husband straight in the face. "If I were a man," she said, "a clever and ambitious man, a man with all the world in front of me, I wouldn't be helped on by any one. I'd just help myself."

"Nonsense, nonsense!" interrupted Chester, with a shrug of his shoulders. "People don't get on by themselves. They have to be helped on. Influence means everything nowadays, and you know what the Duchess can do." He stroked his clean-shaven face—a trick of his when excited over anything. "Her husband will be a Prime Minister before the year's out—that's pretty certain, and then," he laughed, "well, we all know who manages the Berkshires. If ever one wants an example of a man who has been made by his wife, one has only to point at the Duke."

"And such a wife!" exclaimed Lady Susan, as she turned her flashing eyes upon her husband. "Henrietta is a wicked woman, an unprincipled Delilah. She robs men of their secrets by breaking their hearts. I don't say she is untrue to her husband—she is too cold-blooded, too sublimely selfish—but she tricks men all the same of everything she can get from them, and gives them nothing in exchange—nothing!"

"Say what you like about the Duchess," retorted Paul Chester coolly. "Women, I know, have a way of running her down, but she plays a prominent part in the history of our time, and has been the mainstay of her husband Posterity will remember her as a great woman."

"Very well," said Lady Susan, and shut her lips with some determination. "I must write and accept the Riddells and put off our other friends. I hope we shan't be called tuft-hunters when the truth comes out."

"When a man is going to stand for his country," Chester retorted, "he has to do a great many things which he wouldn't do at other times. But the end justifies the means." He put his hand upon his wife's shoulder. "You think me a snob, Susan," he went on, in a voice that was wonderfully quiet and measured. "It is quite true, I am a snob! Son of a snob, and the grandson of a factory hand—but Brutus has ambitions. I intend to be some thing more than the mere rich man whom the county families patronize. I am going to be great—one day." His grip on her shoulder became tighter, heavier. "I am nobody now, a rich nobody, merely the master of Ampalett Court, but wait awhile—wait."

"Yes," she sighed, a strange expression coming over her face. "But, Paul, do make your own fortune—don't owe it to a woman."

He shook his head, then pushed her gently away from him. "Write to Mrs. Riddell at once, Susan," was all he said.

She made no further protest, and her face went back to its impassive calm again. A second later, her gold pen was scratching across a sheet of pale mauve paper. She had a jerky, scratchy way of writing.

Paul Chester settled himself down comfortably in a big chintz-covered arm-chair and fixed his eyes upon his wife, the slim, gracious creature who obeyed him so implicitly, and whose loyalty and honor he could always rely on There was the width of the whole world between himself and Lady Susan. They had lived the life of civil strangers for the last three years—ever since their honeymoon, in fact.

Yet of their friends no one guessed, no one suspected this. They were quoted as a model couple and praised for their perfect manners to each other.

"Do I feel bitter towards Susan, or have I merely become indifferent—wrapped up in greater interests, bigger dreams?"

Tha was the question Chester asked himself as he stared at the girl he adored with all a young man's passion during the brief days of their engagement—the wife he had worshipped up to the fatal moment when he had discovered a fact he had never before suspected, that Lady Susan had married him simply and solely for his money, married him because she was the eldest daughter of a large family of sisters and knew her duty to her family.

The truth had come out by accident, by means of a letter which Chester had come upon during the first weeks of their honeymoon. It was a letter Lady Susan had written to her favorite sister and then carelessly left half-finished in the blotting-book.

Chester remembered the casual way he had strolled across the room and opened the blotting-book, and had read, without wishing to, certain lines of Lady Susan's open letter—lines impossible to forgive or to forget.

"Don't let father frighten you into marrying a man for money as he frightened me, for I tell you my position is unendurable. Every kiss is a degredation. I feel burnt up with shame—a creature bought and sold."

He read no more, but turned the letter deliberately on to the unwirtten side and closed the blotting-book. From that hour on she was not troubled with his kisses.

The warm relationship of husband and wife ceased to exist between the couple, and no explanation passed on either side. They drifted into the new order of things quietly.

He bent his brows now as her pen went scratching on over the mauve paper, and his thoughts flew back to other days—to the days long before his marriage, and he felt, as he had often felt, that fate, destiny, or Providence had not been over kind to him. For all his wealth he was not a happy man. Had he not missed Life's greatest thing—Love?

He remembered his youth, his miserable chilhood He was the offspring of a second marriage, for his father, a big manufacturer in the Midlands, had taken for his second wife a mill-hand, a pretty, helpless slip of a girl, whom Luke Chester brought home to his big Nottingham mansion

Poor, pretty Annie! It was doubtful if her marriage to her rich master contributed very much to her happiness; anyway, if it did, her time of enjoyment was brief, for before she had been married a year the girl had drawn her last breath, and a baby's cry had once more rung through the large over-decorated house.

All this was before Luke Chester had made a big corner in cotton, retired from active business, and bought Amorett Court, one of the largest places in Sussex.

When Snake Joined Coney Throng

(New York Herald)

Where he came from or where he was going, nobody has yet found out. He was sauntering along Seaside Walk at Coney Island yesterday with a few thousand other resort patrons. But he happened to be a snake, and that made him conspicuous, even on a street that is used to seeing all sorts of odd things go by.

None of the crowd on the walk had anything to fear from snakes. It wasn't that. As one stout gentleman explained afterwards, when they found him dangling like a ripe bunch of bananas from a fruiterer's awning, he seemed such a moody snake, and apparently wanted to take in the sights on his own. So people scrambled on to tables and shinned up lamp posts and let him have his way.

In a few minutes the snake had cornered the freedom of the island and could have hunted hot dogs or ridden on a scenic road, or had his wide smile done on a tintype, or visited the snake show on the Bowery and viewed friends from the outside looking in. But as he wiggled his lively eight feet of coils along the deserted pavement along came Patrolman John Toffey, of the Coney Island force.

Toffey and the snake both stopped, looked each other in the eyes and began to circle warily. Presently Toffey cut an awning rope and made a noose of it. "Stick up your head, buddy, and look what you're going to get," he invited earnestly.

Will Rogers could have done no better. The cast missed by a margin of feet, but the snake saw the noose fall and dived for it. The officer jerked suddenly and discovered that he had a particularly husky, able-bodied snake attached to six feet of lead rope.

Toffey turned and started to drag his captive to the station, blushing before the plaudits of an admiring crowd. Then, suddenly, he turned very pale. The snake had decided not to wait to be dragged. He was ready to go to the police station, or any other place, as long as Officer Toffey led the way. And he went in a hurry.

From the point where the reptile was apprehended to the police station it was a full third of a mile. Toffey beat the snake to the captain's desk by a scant margin of inches, and he declared afterward that he felt needle-like teeth nipping at his heel all of the way. The snake was travelling so fast that he ran into an open locker, just as the breathless officer jumped aside. Somebody slammed the door, and a few minutes later Toffey was searching the island for the proprietor of the energetic serpent. At a late hour the snake was still the officer's property.

"Almost everybody thought he was a 'rattler,'" said the policeman. "But he wasn't. He was a whip snake." Toffey last night was trying to devise a way to get the snake out of his locker.

160,000 YORKSHIRE MINERS QUIT WORK

LONDON, Aug. 23—One hundred and sixty thousand Yorkshire miners are out, it is estimated yesterday.

Practically all the pits in west Yorkshire are reported to be idle.

French Standing Before Key City of Somme Front

NEW YORK, Aug. 23—The Associated Press yesterday issued the following:

Fighting their way forward along the southern reaches of the Picardy battlefront, French troops to-day stand before Noyon. This city has been referred to as the key to the whole German line west of the Somme. During the past night, Gen. Humbert's men reached the Divette River for a long distance west of its confluence with the Oise. South of Noyon, the army commanded by General Mangin holds the south bank of the Oise from Sempigny to Bretigny a distance of over six miles. At Sempigny, they are but a little more than a mile from Noyon.

The line turns to the south at Bretigny and runs to Bourguignon where it again curves to the east and reaches the Ailette River at La Quincy-Basse. It then extends southward and it is officially reported that the French have captured the outskirts of Pommiers, a village on the Aisne less than two miles west of Soissons.

FRENCH MAINTAIN CONTACT

German forces in the sector south of Noyon and along the Oise are said by the French official report to be retreating; which may account for the rapid progress of Gen. Mangin's army. It is said, however, that the contact with the enemy is being maintained by the French.

British troops attacked the Germans along the line between the Somme and the Ancre River at 4.45 o'clock this morning. This may be considered a continuation of the attack north of the Ancre at dawn yesterday. The front of the latest attack is about five miles long.

North of the Ancre, the British have advanced in spite of enemy resistance and have crossed the Arras-Bapaume railway line. This railway embankment was a serious obstacle to the British advance yesterday.

In the Flanders area the British are closely following the retiring Germans and have reached Neuf Berquin, a village two miles within the the last definite reports were received.

On the north side of the Lys salient, in Flanders, the Germans have been forced out of a strong position north of Baileul. The Germans launched a heavy counter-attack against the British positions at Locre Hospice, but were repulsed. Heavy fighting is reported in this area.

Strong German counter-attacks are developing near Miramount and Irles which are near the southern end of the line over which the British attacked yesterday.

In this region the determined re- have slowed up the British, if it has not checked the momentum of the blow launched by General Byng. The same may be said to be the situation on the hills north of Soissons. Little progress has been reported in this sector for the past few days. Last night's German oifficial report, however, told of the French reaching the plateau north of Juvigny, but said they were driven back.

Noyon, it would appear, is almost untenable. It would seem that a retreat by the enemy toward Chauny further east is almost impossible. The railroad leading east of Noyon is now under direct fire from the French guns. The only remaining avenue for a German retreat appears to be the northeast toward Ham. Mount Renaud, a height which stands as a sentinel to the southwest of Noyon now appears to be outflanked and, therefore, useless as a defensive position.

Bolsheviki At War With U.S.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 23—The Russian Bolsheviki having declared a state of war to exist between the United States and Russia. Vice-Consul Imbrie at Petrograd lowered the American flag on the consulate and turned the archives over to the Norwegian representative, according to State Department cablegrams dated August 2.

This is the first specific reference to a 'state of war' existing between the United States and the Bolsheviki the previous report, affecting "the allies" and the Bolsheviki

Imbrie will remain in Petrograd until he receives instruction from the Department. His action apparently was taken to protect the records in his possession and to guard against any contingencies.

Twenty Americans are still in Petrograd, one of whom is hiding and another of whom is under arrest.

Treatment of Americans for some days previous to August 2 was reported as growing rather more seriously.

Tired, Nervous Mothers

Should Profit by the Experience of These Two Women

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I am the mother of four children, and for nearly three years I suffered from a female trouble with pains in my back and side, and a general weakness. I had professional attendance most of that time but did not seem to get well. As a last resort I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which I had seen advertised in the newspapers, and in two weeks noticed a marked improvement. I continued its use and am now free from pain and able to do all my housework."—Mrs. B. B. Zielinska, 202 Weiss Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

Portland, Ind.—"I had a displacement and suffered so badly from it at times I could not be on my feet at all. I was all run down and so weak I could not do my housework, was nervous and could not lie down at night. I took treatments from a physician but they did not help me. My Aunt recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I tried it and now I am strong and well again and do my own work and I give Lydia E. Two Big Railroad Men

Lord Shaughnessy, President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, has issued the following circular, dated August 14th:—

"Mr. Geo. M. Bosworth, Vice-President of the Company, will retire Sept. 1st, proximo, to become Chairman of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services, Limited, and the Directors have appointed Mr. William R. MacInnes, Vice-President, to succeed him.

"Mr. MacInnes will have charge of all matters connected with the Company's Traffic Department, and will perform such other duties as may be assigned to him."

(Signed) SHAUGHNESSY,
President and Chairman.

The new position occupied by Mr. George M. Bosworth is a natural result of the growth of the shipping interests of the Canadian Pacific System, which has now in its owned and chartered ships one of the largest mercantile fleets operated by any single corporation, a fleet which is actually greater to-day than it was at the outbreak of the war. So great indeed have these shipping interests become that they could no longer be considered a side issue, and Mr. Bosworth, according to an announcement of the Directors of the C. P. R., will henceforth devote the whole of his time to this important branch of this great transportation system.

Top picture—G. M. Bosworth.
Bottom picture—W. R. MacInnes.

William R. MacInnes, who has been appointed Vice-President of the Canadian Pacific Railway, in charge of Traffic, is a son of the late Senator Donald MacInnes, and Mary Amelia, daughter of Sir John Beverly Robinson, Bart., C.B., and was born in Hamilton, Ont., on June 7th, 1867. Senator MacInnes was for many years a Director of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and was closely identified with its inception and growth. Educated at private schools and at Marlborough College, one of the leading public schools in England. Mr. W. R. MacInnes returned to Canada to enter the service of the Canadian Pacific Railway as a clerk in the Purchasing Department. Since that time he was consecutively appointed; solicitor's office, 1885-1886; general traffic manager's office, 1886-1887; chief clerk to general traffic manager, 1887-1896; general agent, freight department, Canadian Pacific Railway, and agent, Canadian Pacific despatch, Chicago, Ill., 1896 to 1899; during same period he also represented Minneapolis, St. Paul and Sault Ste. Marie Railway and Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Railway; general freight agent lines west of Lake Superior, 1899-1901; assistant freight traffic manager western lines, 1901-1903. On January 1st, 1903, he was appointed freight traffic manager of the C. P. R. His election as President of the Canadian Freight Association followed two years later, and in all matters pertaining to traffic on the North American Continent his high ability has been widely recognized.

He is a member of the Mount Royal, St. James', Forest and Stream, Montreal Hunt, Back River Polo, Montreal Jockey, Montreal Racquet, Royal Montreal Golf, Winter, Toronto (Toronto, Ont.), and the Manitoba (of Winnipeg) Clubs, and is also a member of the Art Association Society of Montreal.

In October, 1916, the Bank of British North America created a Canadian Advisory Committee, consisting of three members, one of whom is Mr. MacInnes, the other two members being Sir Herbert B. Ames and W. R. Miller.

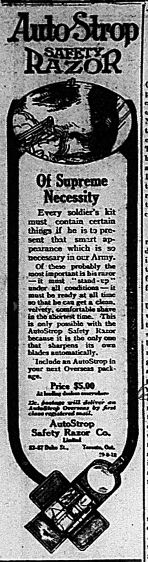
Mr. MacInnes was married on January 7th, 1895, to Margaret Fisher Cross, daughter of the late Hon. Alexander Cross, Judge of the Court of Queen's Bench in Montreal, and they are the parents of one son, Donald Alexander, and three daughters, Julia Mary, Evelyn Margaret Robinson, and Emma Strachan MacInnes.

Mr. Geo. M. Bosworth was born at Ogdensburg on Jan. 27th, 1858, and he was educated there. He entered the railway in 1875, becoming General Freight Agent of that road in 1881. In 1882 he joined the Canadian Pacific Railway as Assistant General Freight Agent of the Ontario and Quebec Lines. After various promotions he became Freight Traffic Manager of the entire system, and in December, 1901, was appointed 4th Vice-President in charge of Traffic. Since 1910 he has been Vice-President of the Company.

He took a particularly active part in the building up of the shipping interests of the Company, and on the formation of the Canadian Pacific Services, Limited, took charge of that subsidiary company, of which he is now appointed Chairman. Mr. Bosworth is a Director of La Banque Provinciale, the Dominion Dry Dock Company, and the Crown Trust Company.

He is also a member of St. James' Club, the Canada Club, the Montreal Hunt Club, the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, the Lachine Boating Club, the Canadian Camp Club, N.Y., and the Century Club, Ogdensburg, N.Y.

Mrs. Bosworth is a daughter of W. D. Birchall, of



AutoStrop SAFETY RAZOR

Of Supreme Necessity

Every soldier's kit must contain certain things if he is to present that smart appearance which is so necessary in our Army.

Of these probably the most important is his razor—it must "stand-up" under all conditions—it must be ready at all time so that he can get a clean, velvety, comfortable shave in the shortest time. This is only possible with the AutoStrop Safety Razor because it is the only one that sharpens its own blades automatically.

"AIRPLANE" OR "AEROPLANE"

Either form is correct, but "airplane" is fast supplanting the older form. "Airplane" was chosen for the sake of uniformity. We speak of "aircraft" and "airmen"; why not of "airplanes"? We say "seaplanes," not "marine planes." The British War Office did not style its aeronautic branch "the Royal Aviation Corps," "the Royal Flying Corps," which is simpler and free from the clumsiness of the other form. Nor did the British Navy style its flying branch "the Royal Naval Aviation Service," but "the Royal Naval Air Service." The two branches now combined in one force do not bear the name "Royal Aero Force," but "Royal Air Force." If we have an air force and airmen, why not have airplanes and airdromes? There is nothing particularly sacred about the term "aeroplane." It is less than twenty years since it was coined by Orville Wright, of Dayton, Ohio, inventor of the first successful airplane. Why he chose the Latin form instead of the English we do not know, but it will interest those who sneer at "airplane" because it is probably an American-coined word to be told that it was chosen to take the place of another American word that has only been in the dictionaries for ten or twelve years.

Western Cavalry Squadron Copies Balaclava Ride

With the Canadian Forces, Aug. 20 (Via London, Aug. 22—It is now possible to record some the exploits of the Canadian cavalry on the three opening days of the Somme battle. None is more tragic and wonderful than the ride to death of some men of a well-known Western regiment. To the cavalry was set the task of breaking through the enemy lines and destroying his back organization. It undertook some desperate adventures in this quest over a country serrated with trenches and wire, and taining hidden nests of enemy machine guns.

ERROR HAS FATAL RESULTS

On the right of our line lay the open results might be gained by a sudden dash down towards Roye, but it was impossible to get off the road owing to the wire and deep trenches. Information was to hand that our infantry had captured Demery and that the French had occupied Andechy. Unfortunately it developed that this was erroneous. The enemy held on to both these strong points on either side of the road, as well as the woods between, while the trenches along the road itself were lined with machine guns. Under this misrepresentation a small body of cavalry attempted to gallop through the wood down the road, a stronghold that did not fall into the hands of the French until nearly a week later. Straight down the road they rode through the ranks of the advancing infantry, but they were wiped out long before they reached their objective. One trooper alone got within a hundred yards of it. Some empty saddles returned, and at night half a dozen wounded men crawled back into our lines.

ANOTHER SQUADRON TAKES ANDECHY

More success came to another squadron of the same regiment, whose captain holds both the V.C. and M.C. Advancing along this fatal road the squadron met very heavy machine gun fire west of Le Quesney, coming from the direction of Damery. It swung south off the road and crossed the French infantry line, and then galloping over the trenches and wire captured the village of Andechy, and with it a very large enemy supply depot and a considerable number of prisoners. The squadron held the village in face of enemy attacks until it was taken over by the French infantry.

Another famous cavalry regiment, whose deeds in the South African war are a matter of Canadian history, made, on the opening day, an attack on Quesnel, but the charge was stopped by the enemy's machine guns in a sunken road. The squadron swung to the right and the left, and here the major leading it got in advance of his men, and, with one corporal, defended himself in a scrub for eleven hours against the attacking Boche, finally rejoining his command under cover of night.

In the meantime one troop galloped into Fresnoy, on the right, surprising the garrison and rounding up 150 prisoners. The enemy came back in force, and the troop was obliged to withdraw, rejoining the regiment with all their prisoners.

In this village was witnessed the remarkable spectacle of a trooper galloping with his reins over his arm and emptying his carbine at the enemy.

These are but a few incident out of many in which the Canadian cavalry has distinguished itself, dashing in and rounding up prisoners before the enemy was aware they were on him. Fine work did much to complete his demoralization during the first days of the battle.

"Y.M.C.A. IS GOD-SEND"

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—A striking testimonial for the work of the Y.M.C.A. is furnished in a letter from Signaller W. Goldwin Britt, now in France, to his father, William Britt, 28 Starr avenue, South Parkdale. Recently, when the Y.M.C.A. was severely criticized at the Provincial convention of the Great War Veterans' Association, the elder Britt wrote to his son, asking him what the "men in the line" thought of the organization and of the criticisms.

"Don't believe anyone," answered his son, "who runs down the Y. M. C. A. Believe me when I tell you they are a perfect God-send—a sort of port in a storm. When you're nearly crazed from walking and your grub is on the bum and probably you haven't slept for ages, then you know the joyous feling of a Y.M.C.A. canteen. They are everywhere, even in the line, and not only are their things cheap, but you can get things from them that you can't get elsewhere in France. Oh, they mean everything to us out here and all but the grouse—s will agree with me."

The man who takes up a lot of your valuable time is seldom able to take a hint.

Some men are pleasant enough to talk to, but rather disagreeable to listen to.

Belgium Looking to Canada For Help

Seeking Horses and Cattle for Rehabilitation After German Plundering

OTTAWA, Aug. 21.—That Belgium is looking to Canada to further assist her in the effort to rehabilitate herself after the plundering Germans are driven from her soil is indicated by Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Agriculture, who stated:

"A few days ago I met two Belgian gentlemen who are now in Canada on a mission for their Government. Their object is to find out where in Canada and the United States they could secure pure-bred Belgian horses and Holstein cattle, in order that when the war is over they may be taken back to Belgium to lay the foundation for again building up the country's stock. Prior to the war Belgium was justly proud of her magnificent horses. I am told that practically none are left. Their horses have all been taken to Germany. The same applies to their cattle.

Ability of Defence

"What has happened to Belgium happened to northern France, to Serbia, and is now being carried out in Russia," declared Hon. Mr. Crerar, "such is the spirit of the military autocracy that controls the destinies of Germany. The only thing that saves Canada from the fate of Belgium, Serbia and Russia is our ability, along with our allies, to defend ourselves. If Germany could send her troops up the St. Lawrence the same fate would be ours."

Want 100,000 Fighting Men

OTTAWA, Aug. 21.—In an official statement issued last night it was stated that a misunderstanding of the terms of the Military Service Act has given rise to the impression in certain quarters that the limit of 100,000 men applies to the number enlisted or recruited under the act. It is difficult to understand upon what ground this interpretation is based. The language and meaning of the act are clear. The restriction does not apply to the number of men enlisted or enrolled, but to the number provided as reinforcements to the army overseas. Subsection four of the preamble provides that "unless further authorized by Parliament, the reinforcements provided under this act shall not exceed 100,000 men." From this it is quite clear that the ultimate purpose of the enactment was to provide reinforcements for the Canadian Expeditionary Forces on active service overseas, and it is upon the reinforcements so to be provided that paragraph four, section thirteen, imposes the limitation. The section empowering the Governor in Council to call out the different classes covered the act imposes no restrictions upon the number.

Purpose of Selective Draft.

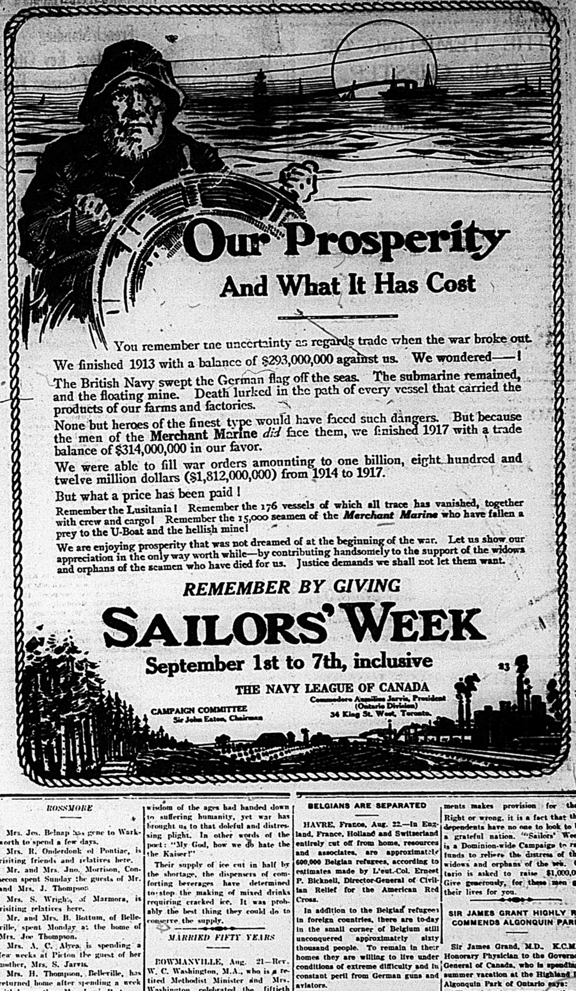
The reason is obvious. There are many causes which may, even after the men are called up, prevent their being provided as reinforcements to the troops overseas. The purpose of the selective draft is to obtain physically fit men who can best be spared from civil life. It is often necessary in the process of selection to suspend decision or to require certain probationary service, seeing that the class called is productive of more men who are available for service than will supply the limited number of reinforcements. Not only questions of fitness for military service have to be considered, but also questions of the usefulness of the men in their ordinary occupations. Questions of individual hardship also arise. Some men become physically unfit after being enrolled. Many of the men who have reported for duty are therefore required to stand by pending final selection. This has been accomplished by means of conditional discharge, granting of leave of absence, or the treating of the period of training in Canada as a period of probation, during which a man, although conditionally embodied in the forces, may eventually not be accepted for service overseas.

Order in Council Passed.

In short, the Military Service Act in respect to the number of men to be obtained under its terms makes limitations only as to the number of men actually provided for as reinforcements to the army overseas, and not to the number that may be enrolled. While the act does not lend itself to any other interpretation, the Government, in order to remove all doubts and for the purpose of determining the action to be taken by its officers has, under the powers conferred on it by the War Measures Act, passed an order in Council which makes a finality of the matter.

A man may be able to fool himself as to his importance, but the neighbors are different.

In the game of life the one armed man plays a lone hand



Our Prosperity

And What It Has Cost

You remember the uncertainty as regards trade when the war broke out.

We finished 1913 with a balance of $293,000,000 against us. We wondered——!

The British Navy swept the German flag off the seas. The submarine remained, and the floating mine. Death lurked in the path of every vessel that carried the products of our farms and factories.

None but heroes of the finest type would have faced such dangers. But because the men of the Merchant Marine did face them, we finished 1917 with a trade balance of $314,000,000 in our favor.

We were able to fill war orders amounting to one billion, eight hundred and twelve million dollars ($1,812,000,000) from 1914 to 1917.

But what a price has been paid!

Remember the Lusitania! Remember the 176 vessels of which all trace has vanished, together with crew and cargo! Remember the 15,000 seamen of the Merchant Marine who have fallen a prey to the U-Boat and the hellish mine!

We are enjoying prosperity that was not dreamed of at the beginning of the war. Let us show our appreciation in the only way worth while—by contributing handsomely to the support of the widows and orphans of the seamen who have died for us. Justice demands we shall not let them want.

AU REVOIR MIXED DRINKS

(Baltimore Sun)

Oh, Sherman was absolutely right in that war stuff of his, and he was never driven to the dregs of deprivation which Baltimoreans face today either. He never had to give up the seductive gin rickey, the luscious highball, the sweetly perfumed julep and all the other soothing and delectable concoctions which the wisdom of the ages had handed down to suffering humanity, yet war has brought us to that doleful and distressing plight. In other words of the poet: "My God, how we do hate the the Kaiser!"

Their supply of ice cut in half by the shortage, the dispensers of comforting beverages have determined to stop the making of mixed drinks requiring cracked ice. It was probably the best thing they could do to conserve the supply.

MARRIED FIFTY YEARS

BOWMANVILLE, Aug. 21—Rev. W. C. Washington, M.A., who is a retired Methodist Minister and Mrs. Washington, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage at their home here Monday evening. The only representatives of the family present were their youngest daughter, Mrs. B. M. Warnica; their yongest son, Rev. C. C. Washington, B.A., Roseneath, and their youngest grandchild, little Miss Joyce Washington. A number of the neighbors and friends and representatives of the Official Board of the Methodist Church called and offered congratulations and gifts to the worthy couple, the Official Board's gift being a purse of gold. Many letters and messages were received from friends in New York California and Western points.

Rev. W. C. Washington and Miss Catherine Day, sixth daughter of the late Calvin Day, were married in Kingston township on August 1, 18[illegible] by Rev. Geo. T. Case. They have a family of five children and fifteen grandchildren. The family are: Mrs. (Rev.) Herman McConnell of Shaunavon, Sask.; Mrs. J. R. Standen, Penticton, B.C.; Mrs. B. M. Warnica, at home; Dr. E. Day Washington, Wolseley, Sask.; and Rev. C. C. Washington, B.A., Roseneath. Three grandsons, Lieut. R. W. Warnica and Signalled D. C. Warnica are serving their King and Country in France, and Pte C. W. Standen in England.

Put your best foot upward as well as forward to reach the top of the ladder.

BELGIANS ARE SEPARATED

HAVRE, France, Aug. 22.—In England, France, Holland and Switzerland entirely cut off from home, resources and associates, are approximately 600,000 Belgian refugees, according to estimates made by Lieut.-Col. Ernest P. Bicknell, Director-General of Civilian Relief for the American Red Cross.

In addition to the Belgian refugees in foreign countries, there are to-day in the small corner of Belgium still unconquered approximately sixty thousand people. To remain in their homes they are willing to live under conditions of extreme difficulty and in constant peril from German guns and aviators.

While the Belgians to-day are widely scattered, it is estimated that at present there are 70,000 of them in Paris, 70,000 in London and about 30,000 in Havre. The Belgian Government is co-operating with the American Red Cross in extending assistance in all centres where the refugees have congregated in any number.

HEROIC FAMILIES ARE IN WANT

Dependents of Merchant Sailors Appeal to Canada for Aid

When the history of the war comes pages will be found recording the deeds of the Merchant Seamen. Day by day and week by week in spite of the submarine the floating mine and the most destructive devices known to maritime warfare, the merchant men ply the ocean and carry munition supplies and food "over there." Regardless of every peril 300,00 merchant seamen still "carry on"; fifteen thousand of them have already paid the price of their bravery. As members of an official service, governments makes provision for them. Right or wrong, it is a fact that their dependents have no one to look to but a grateful nation. "Sailors' Week" is a Dominion-wide Campaign to raise funds to relieve the distress of these widows and orphans of the sea. Ontario is asked to raise $1,000,000. Give generously, for these men give their lives for you.

CHARGED WITH ROBBERY

At Trenton last evening before Magistrate O'Rourke, three young men named Cox, Wardell and Malcolm were charged with assaulting and robbing a Chinaman named Lum Gong of $124 at 12.30 on the night of August 21. They were remanded one week for trial. Crown Attorney Carnew appeared for the prosecution.

LIABLE TO CIVIC MAGISTRATES ONLY

The 19-year-old class of men who have not registered under the proclamation published last May are not liable for reason of their default in registration to be placed on active service with the Canadian expeditionary forces, according to an official announcement from militia headquarters, Ottawa, received at district military headquarters. They will be punished by proceedings before a civil magistrate.

FINED $200

Mike Marakas, charged with keeping liquor for sale, was found guilty and fined $200 with costs of $25.75 by Magistrate Masson this morning. The charge of attempting to bribe a peace officer was dismissed upon the plea of Mr. E. J. Butler, counsel for accused, that Maraksa was a foreigner and not understanding the language of the country, made a remark which was misunderstood, when he really meant to say that he would give anything if the thing had not happened. Crown Attorney Carnew appeared for the prosecution.

WANT ROAD TAKEN OVER

A deputation from Northumberland headed by Sam Nesbitt, M.P.P., waited on W. A. They also discussed the improvement of the Provincial County road from Trenton to Brighton north of Campbellford as a branch line of the Provincial highway. Mr. McLean said that at an early date he would make a careful examination of the roads and also investigate the financial condition of the toll companies to determine what action could be taken. He also promised an early answer with reference to the other parts of the highway ouptside the toll roads.

DRUGGISTS AND DOCTORS

It looks like war to the knife between the druggists and doctors of Ontario The trouble started over the avowed purpose of the latter to prevent the sale of patent medicines by the druggists and to make it illegal for any newspaper to carry the advertisement of the manufacturers or of dealers to such preparations. It is expected that at the next meeting of the Legislature an attempt will be made to enact such laws, and the doctors, who have many members of their profession among the lawmakers of the province, with the assistance they are sure to receive from the members of the legal fraternity, are confident that they will be able to carry their point. A call has been issued for a meeting of druggists in Toronto on some day this month. To this gathering newspaper publishers, manufacturers of patent medicines and of bottles will be invited. The position taken by the doctors will be discussed, and, it is said, it has been designed to prevent the election of so many lawyers and doctors to the Provincial Legislature.

The sample shows a large amount of infection with intestinal organisms. Many citizens use this water which is piped form a spring, but the water is unfit for drinking purposes unless boiled.

A REAL SCOTCH NIGHT

A pleasing event took place last night at Willow Camp, Jones Creek, when Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lazier gave a corn roast to the campers and their friends. During the evening they burned the effigy of the Kaiser, and all indulged in a torch-light parade to the tune of the bag-pipes played by Mr. William McIntosh. Miss Anderson and Mrs. W. McIntosh delighted the campers with a Scotch reel and sword dance. Notable among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. McIntosh and family, Mr. and Mrs. Stallworthy and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hall, Bayside, Miss Florence Gilbert, Miss Parke, Mr. and Mrs. Potter and family, Madeline Bell, Brice Burnham, Helen and Georgina Ruttan, Belleville. By the happy smiles on all their faces mingled with the black of the corn, everybody had an enjoyable time, and voted the host and hostess both jolly good fellows. It was a real Scotch night and as the pipers skirled out the spirit of victory which never plays retreats, the thoughts of many present went back over the glorious pages of world history, illuminated with stories of Scottish bravery and the spirit which never gives in—remindful also of those stirring lines of the poet Whittier: "Not the braes of broom and heather, nor the mountains dark with rain, nor maiden bower, nor border tower, have heard your sweetest strain. Dear to the cornland reaper, and the plaided mountaineer, the cottage and the castle, the Scottish pipes are dear, sweet sounds the Gallic pibroch o'er mountain, hill and glade, but the sweetest of all music, the pipes of Lucknow played."

Getting An Introduction and a Start in Business

In the want columns of the Montreal Star of August 21st there are 65 advertisements for stenographers, bookkeepers and general office assistants. The demand now for those possessing thorough business training is usually great not only in Montreal and Toronto but throughout Canada.

THE ONTARIO BUSINESS COLLEGE has an arrangement with the United Typewriter Company Canadian agents for the Underwood Typewriter Co.) both in Montreal and Toronto for aiding graduates of O. B. C. to find positions and secure promotions. This arrangement has been in existence for many years and has proved of much service to the graduates who desired to go to Toronto or Montreal.

Mr. Johnson or Mr. Moore gives a personal introduction and recommendation, immediately on presentation of which the Company's staff starts its interest in the candidate, and a suitable place is found without, often, a single day's delay.

The O. B. C. graduates are in great favor with the Company owing to the thorough equipment they bring with them.

PTE. ACKERMAN WOUNDED

Mrs. Robert Roe, 30 Chatham street, has been officially notified that Pte. Morley Louis Ackerman, infantry, was admitted to No. 6 General Hospital, Rouen, August 4th, with gunshot wound in his side. Pte. Ackerman was a nephew of Mrs. Roe and enlisted with the 39th Battalion.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

G. G. Brown, charged with the theft of an automobile on August 2nd pleaded guilty before Magistrate Masson this morning and was released on a previous good character and the fact that he has already spent twenty days in gaol pending final disposal of his case. Brown paid all costs and compensation for damage to car. Crown Attorney Carnew appeared for the prosecution.

VINCENT WHITTIE KILLED

Many friends will mourn the death of Pte. Vincent Whittie of Stirling, who has ben reported killed in battle. He was a native of this place and played hockey in the Trent Valley League, and later with Belleville, in the O.H.A. for several seasons. He was a son of Mr. George Whittie, of Stirling, and was a splendid type of young Canadian manhood, an athlete of considerable prominence, and a star hockey player. Vincent Whittie was one of those who "played up and played the game" square and fair.

WHISKEY AT THE SPRING

Imperial whiskey flowed freely by the wayside Tuesday afternoon when a generous motorist travelling from Montreal to Toronto brought some of the Lower Canada booze with him. On the Napanee road near the Five Mile House he broke the front spring from his car, and a hurried call was sent to one of the Kingston garages for repair men. They drove to the spot and while one was jacking up the car the other imbibed freely of the delicious liquid. Five drinks he claimed to have taken before he passed the fire water to his companion. Between them they drank the bottle dry, and as the story of the hour's delight was told to the crowded police court at Kingston on Wednesday morning, many heads were seen to wag and a sort of far-away look came into yearning eyes. The motorist knew what he was doing, for he paid no money for the work, and one of the tipplers made the startling statement that he did consider that a bottle of whiskey was worth a new spring. For their little escapade Walter McBundle and Gordon Macdonald contributed $10 and costs apiece, and the former paid an additional $10 and costs for recklessly driving the car back to Kingston, so hilarious did the forbidden tastes make him.

The Norwegian sailing vessel Nordhad was also torpedo in the Atlantic. The fate of her crew in unknown.

Hull Woman Has Gained 28 Pounds

Improvement of Mrs McCann Is Talk of Entire Neighborhood

"My wife has actually gained twenty-eight pounds by taking Tanlac and her wonderful improvement is the talk of all the neighborhood," was the remarkable statement made by John McCann of 197 Laval Street, Hull, recently. Mr. McCann has lived in Hull all his life and is well known.

"Yes, sir, I can say for a fact," he continued, "my wife hasn't been in such good health before in seven years. She had been in a badly rundown condition for about that long and gradually got worse in spite of all she could do. She had no appetite, seldom ate any breakfast, and very little at any time. She was so nervous she couldn't sleep well, and so weak she could hardly get about the house, much less do any of her work. It seemed like she would almost die at times with sick headache. She often had dizzy spells and would get so sick and weak she would just have to give up and go to bed She looked pale and sallow and had fallen off in weight from one hundred and twenty-eight pounds to one hundred and ten.

"I had seen Tanlac so highly recommended that I finally got a bottle for her and I have never seen such a wonderful improvement in anyone Soon after she commenced taking it she began to pick up and look better. She has taken five bottles now, and she has not only gotten back to her old weight of one hundred and twenty-eight pounds, but she has actually gone ten pounds above that, as she now weighs one hundred and thirty-eight. Her appetite is splendid and she's never bothered with nervous headaches or dizziness any more. She does all her housework besides taking care of five children and never complains of feeling tired. We are both simply delighted over the way Tanlac has built her up and we never miss a chance to boost it. Our neighbors have been astonished over the results and they all tell her she looks like a different person."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

Types of Planes Used by R.A.F.

TORONTO, Aug. 22.—The airplanes which are doing so much to help win the war are of many types. Each variety of aviation exploits at thee front requires its own machine, and as many different tasks are performed by the allied aces, the types of plane in use are numerous.

Here is a description of the five airplanes most commonly used by the allied air forces:

1. Combat machines: Small, fast, single-seater fighters, used for scouting purposes. They usually have a wing spread of from 20 to 25 feet, a speed of from 125 to 135 miles per hour; carrying capacity 450 pounds and a climbing speed of 10,000 feet in from 8 to 12 minutes.

2. Reconnaissance and photograph: Slower machines, used for artillery spotting, map making and general reconnoitering. The wing spread is usually from 40 to 60 feet; speed from 80 to 100 miles per hour, carrying capacity from 800 to 900 pounds. They are two or three seaters and have a climbing speed of 10,000 feet in 12 to 25 minutes.

3. Bombers: Similar to the reconnaissance machine, but larger. They vary from 45 to 90 feet in wing spread and carry from two to twelve persons in addition to their bombs and fuel. Their speed is from 75 to 100 miles per hour; their radius of operations from 500 to 1,000 miles and their climbing speed 7,000 feet in 30 minutes.

4. Battleplane: A two or three passenger plane driven by one or two engines and equipped with machine guns and sometimes cannon. It makes from 75 to 85 miles per hour.

5. For naval work, flying boats and hydroaroplanes of various sizes are used. On account of the weight of their hulls, or pontoons, these compare favorably with the reconnaissance machine, traveling 90 to 100 miles per hour. They are used for coast patrol work and naval observation purposes, and can carry 2,000 pounds.

LOOPING THE LOOP IN A TIN LIZZIE

KINGSTON, Aug. 23—Pride in his auto and in his prowess as a driver got a local autoist in trouble on Monday night, and landed him in his room where he will remain for several days as a result of injuries received when his auto got into trouble.

The citizen in question made a bet with a friend who owns a larger and more expensive car, that his little one of a popular make could outrun the larger one to a village about thirty miles away, and the venturesome autoists started on their trip.

Everything went well with the driver of the smaller car until a village a short distance away was reached, when a calf got in front of the speeding auto and in a moment the auto had careened through a barbed wire fence, across a ditch, turning over in a complete loop-the-loop and landing upright. The engine continued to run, but the autoist was badly shaken up in his experience and was unable to proceed on the race.

He was taken to his home in another auto, and now he believes that though he did not win the wager, he accomplished a thrilling feat, and is certain that the other auto cannot accomplish as many turns and twists and loop-the-loops as he did in a few seconds.

Desperate Hun Efforts Are Futile North of the Ancre

British Holding Virtually All of Arras-Albert Railroad Embankment and More Advanced Points Despite Furious Attempts by Germans to Dislodge Them

With the British Armies in France, Thursday night—The battle north of the Ancre River raged furiously during the night and morning, and the British troops, after overcoming the most desperate enemy resistance, are holding virtually all the Arras-Albert railroad embankment on the northern half of the battlefront, and even have established posts well to the east.

To the southward, especially in the neighborhood of Achiet-le-Grand. The tide of battle seems to have swung over this village several times. Yesterday there was continuous fighting all day at this place, and it seems to be still going on.

The German, by flinging in large number of troops at last reports had come back to the western part of the village, but this appears to have been done a number of times. The British are determined to get on here and the Germans are equally determined to prevent it if possible, despite terrific losses.

There has been the same sort of desperate fighting in front of Miraumont, where the Germans for a time have managed to withstand assault after assault, but here also they have suffered great losses.

Beauregard and Dorecote apparently are now held by the British. South of here the British also hald a section of the railway. Every inch of the railway embankment in the north has been fought for, the German regarding this as the most important position of the battlefront.

The Germans were strongly entrenched on a line running through Hamelincourt just east of the railway embankment and they had to be reckoned with while the Germans holding out on the embankment itself, from dugouts and deep ground positions had to be bombed before they were silenced.

Baseball

G. T. R. LEAGUE.

Shops, 13; Offices, 12.

The third game of the G. T. R. series was played at Pine Street School grounds last evening before a crowd of about one hundred and fifty people, and resulted in a win for the Shops team by a score of 13-12.

Although the score was large, the game was a good one to watch, the hitting on both sides being terrific and the closeness of score giving each teams' supporters a chance to test their lungs.

In the first innings the Offices scored three runs and the game looked to be cinched, but the boys who take care of the locomotives were not to be outdone and in their first scored two, evening things up somewhat. After this the bases served as a merry-go-round for both teams and were loaded nearly all the time. Morden cleared the sacks once when he drove a pretty three-bagger over centre-fielder's head. Brown of the Shops also had some lovely wallops at the pill and got to third once or twice on his hits, sending men in ahead of him. Outside of these two men, it would be hard to pick out the best hitters on either side, as nearly everybody was soaking the horse-hide for fair, irrespective of how much it was breaking the pitcher's heart. Pringle started to pitch for the Office team, and did well, but his support was poor at times and put him in the hole. Meagher relieved him near the last of the game and he also got "his." Ford of the Shops was no exception and was lucky to bring home the bacon.

Messrs. "Stub" Barrett and "Billy" Pepper umpired the game.

Shops—Rainbird, 1st; Shane, r.f.; Miles, 2nd; Brown, 3rd; McKinnon, l.f.; Taylor, c.f.; Follwell, c.; Ford, p.; Schrieder, s.s.

Offices—Morden, c.; Young, 2nd; Andrews, 3rd; Meagher, s.s. and p.; Pringle, p and l.f.; Barrett, 1st; Cummins, l.f. and s.s.; Belsey, c.f.; Jose, r.f.

League Standing.

	Won	Lost
Offices	2	1
Shops	1	2

The next game will be played Monday or Tuesday night. The Offices will have their regular line-up and as they are feeling a little peeved over the sting of last night's defeat they will try to give the Shops, who are filled with pep and confidence now, a real lacing.

STEAMER OUTWITS SUB.

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 23.—A British freight steamship which arrived here from European waters yesterday, was attacked by a submarine when near Nantucket. One torpedo was fired by the U-boat which missed the freighter by about 20 yards, members of the crew said.

Members of the submarine's crew then began shelling the ship, and the fire was returned by the Britisher. A running fight, lasting more than an hour, followed, the freighter finally outdistancing the submarine. None of the shots fired by the U-boat took effect.

Government Will Take Up Housing

Likely to Undertake Plan of Assistance Similar to Great Britain's

OTTAWA, Aug. 24—It is practically certain that some attention will shortly be given by the Reconstruction Committee of the Dominion Cabinet to the housing problem of Canada. The continuous growth in the cost of building materials and labor has to a large extent stopped the construction of dwelling by private owners, and in the cities and communities where large number of people are em shortage of houses is becoming a serious matter.

In considering this question, attention is also likely to be given to the problem as it effects agricultural production. The inability of farmers to secure labor if often due to the lack of housing facilities for laboring men and their families. In Great Britain a Government organization provided plans of standard types of houses for dwelers both in the cities and the country, and it is altogether likely that some plan of this kind will have to be undertaken in Canada.

Some time ago the Commission of Conservation recommended co-operation between the Federal and Provincial Governments and the municipalities in dealing with the housing problem. More recently the Ontario Government has announced its intention of lending $2,000,00 through the municipalities, to people who desire to construct small dwellings, and the plan has been well received. It is believed here that the other provinces are likely to take similar action and that the Dominion Government will in some way lend its assistance.

Lieut. Morrison Killed Overseas

Word has been received by Mrs. Stanley Teskey, Wellington ,that her brother, Flight-Lieut. C. O. Morrison, R.A.F., was killed August 12th.

Lieut. Morrison, whose home was in Newmarket, was but twenty years of age. He joined the Flying Corps a little over a year ago and trained at Deseronto also in Texas last winter, going overseas in the spring. His friends have not heard whether he met death in England or in France. He was for some time with the T. Eaton Co., of Toronto, and later in the employ of the Civil Service at Ottawa, but returned to Toronto where he enlisted.

The following letter was received by his parents on the same day as the telegram announcing his death:

LONDON, Eng., July 23rd, 1918

Dear Mother and Dad:

Am anxiously awaiting a letter from you. At present we are having a lecture on bombs and some day I hope to drop a 520-lb bomb on Berlin. To-morrow I go to one of the naval bases to take a trip in a submarine, as we have to know all details concerning same. Just imagine lying on the bottom of the sea, for of course they submerge with us and we have a real joy ride. Then we get in a motor launch, the sub fires a torpedo and we have to chase it, and after its force is spent haul it on board. Then we have a trip on a British destroyer which we have to become thoroughly acquainted with, and from this we drop depth bombs which prove so deadly to the submarine. Our training is a thorough one and requires lots of study. We have been having awful weather over here and have done very little flying. I think you will find from now on that the tide of battle will turn in favor of the Allies, for, if you were here you could realize the gigantic efforts being put forth to crush the Hun. He will receive a great surprise when the newest type of bombing plane, which has just been turned out and is being shipped to the front in great numbers, start to carry out raids over German towns and cities. Well, I hope everyone is well at home. Don't worry about me as I am real well. During the day I am too busy to realize the distace that separates me from home, but at night as I lie in bed waiting for sleep to overcome me, it all comes home to me with great force, and I grow mighty lonesome, and breathe a word of prayer for a speedy re-uniting.

Your loving son,
CECIL

British Have Plunged Deep Into Very Vitals of German Line

Capture Chuignolles, Herleville, Meaulte, Happy Valley, and Reach Gomiecourt in the Greatest Battle of the War—Three Battalion Headquarters Captured

NEW YORK, Aug. 24—The Associated Press issued the following last evening.

News from the scene of the great struggle raging from the Cojeul River south along 50 miles, would seem to indicate that the British have plunged deep into the vital positions held by the Germans as a protection to their right flank.

The exact line as it now stands cannot be given, but some of the towns taken by the British are almost a mile outside the positions where the Germans are believed to have stood yesterday and the greatest advance is said to be two miles.

When it is realized the fighting on this front is along theline s which were strongly entrenched by the Germans and held by them until the great British offensive before Albert in 1916, the importance of the advance made to-day appears to be augmented.

French Salute Their Dead Then Advance

PARIS, Aug. 24—General Debeney, in command of the French forces in the Picardy battle, has issued the following address to his troops.

"Soldiers of the First French Army—By the side of our British allies you have broken the enemy's attack, liberated Amiens, captured Montdidier, occupied fortified positions overlooking Roye, and cleared the sacred soil of France to a depth of twenty-five kilometres.

"Sixteen German divisions in the battle have lost to us 10,000 prisoners, 220 cannon and enormous quantities of material.

"On leaving the banks of the Avre for our advance let us salute with pious emotion our brave comrades who have fallen during the past five months on the Hangard-Grivesnes line. They stopped the invader, they prepared for the revengeful offensive and have by their blood given the command to which we must remain faithful: We must conquer."

Germans Organizing New Defensive Line

PARIS, Aug. 24.—General Von Boehm is organizing new defensive lines far in the rear of the present German positions in Picardy, according to information received from the front early yesterday.

Marcel Hutin, military expert of the Echo De Paris, believes that the evacuation of Noyon already is under way. The French pushed on at various points around the town yesterday. Meanwhile the enemy is preparing to make a stand at Hill 164, Porquescourt and Mont Renaud.

Between the Aisne and the Vesle German aviators are making desperate efforts to keep off allied observation planes, and a big retirement there is expected hourly.

A total of more than fifty villages have been reoccupied by the French. Arrival of a Hungarian division on the west front is reported.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE

LONDON, Aug. 24—Trading on the Stock Exchange was firm yesterday with a meagre supply of high class securities. Foreign stocks were steady but railroads were irregular. Mexican issued reacted in sympathy with a sharp fall by Mexican northwestern on an unsatisfactory statement of the company's affairs. Shipping securities were good, industrials were firm and the cement securities active. African land stocks were a feature of the market, being in good denamd. Money was quiet.

CONDUCTORETTES AT CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Aug. 24.—The Cleveland Railway Co., began yesterday to hire conductorettes for Cleveland street cars. They will be paid the same wages that car men receive.

MANY REQUESTS FOR LOAN

"Municipal Housing" will be Encouraged

TORONTO, Aug. 24—Arrangements are being made by the Ontario Government and the Provincial Housing Committee to give immediate financial assistance to municipalities wishing to take part in the $2,000,000 scheme. Before all this mney can be made available, however, special legislation will have to be passed.

Since the announcement of plan a month ago, the Government and Housing Committee have been swamped with requests from private building firms and individuals for a portion of the loan to erect houses. But the Government will only make the loan to the municipalities, and the latter may enter into negotiations with private individuals if they wish.

The majority of the municipal applicants so far are from small towns and cities in the province. When the programme is further advanced the Government may find necessary to limit the date of receiving applications so that an equitable apportionment of the loan may be made and the necessary legislation framed in readiness for the next session of the Legislature.

STOCK MARKET SPRUCES UP

NEW YORK, Aug. 24—The Evening Sun's financial review this afternoon says:

There was a distinctly better tone in yesterday's stock market, and there were intervals of fairly animated trading.

The opening was quiet and firm, but after the first fifteen minutes there was a fair amount of buying, which carried forward prices substantially. This movement was more or less confined to the Industrials until toward the end of the first hour, when the rails also attracted attention. By mid-day several of them had established new high levels for the year, notably St. Paul and Canadian Pacific. Gains of a substantial fraction to a point of more were common in that department. Steel ran up over a point through 112. American Hide and Leather common and preferred were again spectacular, both issues selling higher than ever before.

The late trading was quiet, but prices in general were maintained. Bonds were inactive.

For the First time this week Liberty Bonds 3 1-2's failed to achieve a new high record price, although they moved closely around that level at 102 1-2 established yesterday.

GANANOQUE SOLDIER FALLS

GANANOQUE, Aug. 24—Donald Eric, youngest son of Mr. J. B. Turner, has been killed in action, according to official notice received by his father Thursday morning. The deceased has two other brothers serving at the front.

Disaster is Now Threatening Entire German Army in Picardy

NEW YOK, Aug. 24—The Associated Press this afternoon issued the following:

Along the front in Northern Picardy a battle which seems to be one of the greatest of the war has developed.

Disaster is reported to be threatening the whole German army on this front and the Germans are throwing great masses of men into the struggle in the hope of checking the tide of the battle, which, despatches from British hadquarters say, is setting against them.

Fourteen Thousand Hun Prisoners Taken by British in Three Days

French Also Take Many Prisoners

BRITISH DRIVE MAKES RAPID PROGRESS AND REACHED OUTSKIRTS OF BAPAUME EARLY THIS MORNING—LARGE NUMBER OF CANNON CAPTURED INCLUDING COMPLETE BATTERIES OF HOWITZERS AND TRENCH MORTARS — GERMANS DRIVEN OUT OF MANY VILLAGES AND TOWNS — ERVILLERS CAPTURED AND COURCELLES INVESTED — FRENCH MAKE RAID IN LORRAINE AND BRING BACK PRISONERS.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

With the British Army in France, Aug. 24.—(Associated Press)—A large number of cannon, including complete batteries of howitzers and trench mortars, have been captured by the British north of the Somme. Immediately south of the river the British have taken twelve cannons. The village of Behagnies, two miles and a half north of Bapaume on the Bapaume-Arras highway, has been reached by British troops. British forces are operating east of Bihucourt within two miles and a half of Bapaume on the west.

14,000 PRISONERS IN THREE DAYS.

LONDON, Aug. 24.—(Official)—British attacks in the Albert sector were resumed this morning. Fourteen thousand prisoners were taken by the British in the last three days.

BRITISH MAKE RAPID PROGRESS.

British Army in France, Aug. 24.—British forces are reported to have reached points east of Henin, on the Coljeul River, five miles southeast of Arras. They are in the outskirts of St. Leger, further south and have captured Ervillers, two miles east of Courcelles. They are still advancing.

RAIDING IN LORRAINE.

PARIS, Aug. 24.—(Official)—Vigorous artillery actions in the region of Lassigny and between the Oise and the Aisne rivers are reported today. Raiding operations in Lorraine also are reported with the capture of many German prisoners.

BRITISH SMASHING THROUGH.

With the British Army in France, Aug. 24.—The British were smashing through the German positions all along the battle line this morning. Recordel and Fricourt have been captured with many prisoners and guns, so far uncounted. It is reported that Bray has also been captured. Noyon is expected to be taken any minute.

Latest Telegraph Briefs

French armies are rapidly completing the surrounding of Noyon, which cannot hold out much longer. Thousands of prisoners, many guns and vast quantities of material have been taken.

The British are advancing on a front of over thirty miles in length and are rapidly nearing Bapaume. Achiet Le Grand has been taken. The enemy vainly tries to stem the victorious rush of the British troops.

South of the Somme the Australians have taken fifteen hundred prisoners among whom are thirty-three officers.

Ten Years Sentence For Sinn Fiener

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Special

NIAGARA CAMP, Aug. 24—Ten years sentences in the penitentiary were promulgated this morning in the case of Private Joseph Torrish and Private Sherman Babcock, who refused to don the King's uniform when drafted under the M.S.A. Torrish is the Sinn Feiner from Strabane, Ireland, who refused to fight for the British because his sweetheart was killed in a Dublin riot during the week of September 1916. Babcock is a conscientious objector. Pte. Wm. Sfionberg, who refused to be inoculated was sentenced to two years. Thirteen have now been sent to the penitentiary from this camp for ten year terms.

ALBERT CATHEDRAL RAZED TO GROUND

With the British Armies in France, Aug. 24—Albert is merely a battered heap of ruins which can no longer be called a city. The famous church from which the figures of the Madonna and child hung suspended for so long, did not greet the Tommies when they entered the city. The church had been levelled to the height of the ruins.

LORD READING DENIES REPORT

LNDON, ug. 24—Lord Reading, the British Ambassador to the United States speaking at the American Luncheon Club yesterday, denied reports that have been circulated that he had returned home to draft the terms of an offensive and defensive alliance between Great Britain and the United States.

"There is not a word of truth in the report," he said.

CADET HACKER KILLED

Cadet J. M. Hacker, of the Royal Air Force was instantly killed as the result of an airplane crash near Camp Rathbun at 8.05 last night. His next of kin is a sister, Louise Hacker, who resides at 609 West 127th street, New York City.

Allied Offensive At Greatest Height

With the American Armies in France, Aug. 24.—The allied offensive is now at its greatest height since July 18, not only in accomplishment, but in possibilities. The rapid advance of the Frenhc between the Oise and the Aisne, reaching within four or five miles of the original line, is fast creating a salient in the Boche positions and increasing the necessity for an early withdrawal from the Vesle to the old Aisne line.

Prisoners confirm the report that the Fourth Prussian Guards had been withdrawn from the Vesle.

In the face of the constant allied advance at one point or another during the last month the Boches are showing greater nervousness in all sectors where they have not yet been attacked. This is clearly indicated in the raids by Americans in the Vosges region. The enemy is particularly jumpy along the Vesle, putting down numerous unnecessary barrages, apparently in response to calls from infantry units fearing an attack.

SUGAR CERTIFICATE IS REQUIRED

OTTAWA, Aug. 23—Proprietors of public eating places have been notified that they must obtain a sugar certificate from the Canada Food Board by September 1st. A sworn statement must be filed with aplications for certificates, stating the amount of sugar used between Jan. 31, 1917, and Dec. 31 1917, or for that part of the year during which the applicant was in business. If the applicant has comenced business since the beginning of 1918 he must file a sworn statement covering the period of the present year in which he has been so engaged. A large number of proprietors of public eating places have sent in their applications for sugar certificates, but many have not yet done so, and these are warned that after Sept. 1 it will be both illegal and impossible to secure sugar without presenting a certificate from the Canada Food Board to the sugar dealers from whom the purchase is made.

Red Guard Leader Handed to Allies

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 24—General Petapoff, commander-in-chief of the Red Guard army in the Murmansk region, is in the hands of the allies, says a Petrograd despatch to the Weser Zeitung of Bremen. He was caught by peasants while attempting to flee southward and handed over to the British.

Amsterdam, Aug. 23—Russian Red Guards, after the capture of Simbirsk, on the olga, acording to a Moscow despatch to the Hamburg Nachrichten, publicly hanged in the market-placed 300 Cecho-Slovak prisoners. The hangings, it is declared, was a reprisal for "atrocities committed in the town during its occupation by the Czechs.

ALLIES WITHDRAW

London, Aug. 23—Allied troops on the Ussuri River front north of Vladivostock, outnumbered by the enemy, have been forced to withdraw after heavy fighting, says a despatch to the Daily Mail from Harbin dated Wednesday.

British and French troops were engaged in the battle, but the brunt of the fighting fell on the Cossack and Czecho-Slovak troops. Japanese units assisted in the retirement.

Bolsheviki monitors, operating on Lake Hangka, are harassing the allied left and have detained additional Czech forces. Commands are being given the Bolsheviki in German.

French Push Foe To Within Three Miles of Chauny

PARIS Aug. 24—The French advance has swept the Germans back to within three miles of Chauny the highly important railway and highway centre between Noyon and La Fere.

Gen. Mangin's men are reported to have reached the borders of Coucy-le-Chateau only three miles from the old Hindenburg line. They are pressing eastward along the roads leading into the town from the Ailette River, and have launched a heavy attack against Coucy Grove, south of the village

Noyon is being attacked from the north-west, south-east and north-east The French are across the Oise and Manicamp canal and have reached the edge of Morlincourt, 2,000 yards (slightly more than a mile) from the Noyon railway station.

The road from Noyon to Laon soon will be penetrated from another direction. (This road passes Chauny a mile and a half to the southward.) The Boches, clinging to the hills north of the Oise, already are under the heaviest fire from the French artillery.

Another Squeal From the Huns

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 24—Germany has energetically protested against intentions of Spain to replace sunken Spanish tonnage by interned German ships, according to an official statement issued in Berlin. The Spanish ambassador at Berlin had been instructed to inform the German Government that Spain will utilise German vesels now in Spanish ports in place of Spanish ships sunk by German submarines.

PUTMAN GETS 11TH PLANE

With the American Armies in France, Aug. 24—Lieut. Putman of the American air force has downed his eleventh German airplane. The pilot and the observer were killed. The machine, a Rumpler, fell within the allied lines in flames.

Lieut. Blair Thaw brother of Major Thaw, was killed in an airplane accident Sunday, when his machine side-slipped and fell. He was buried beside Major Raoul Lufberry, with his mother and sister present at the burial services.

FLIGHT LIEUT. SAVES LIVES OF TWO

TORONTO, Aug. 24.—When the cadet whom he was instructing in advanced stunt flying lost control of his air plane, at the dizzy height of more than two thousand feet at the Beamsville Camp yesterday afternoon, Lieut. Jas. Morgan, R.A.F., 263 Carlton street, managed to save the lives of both in an almost miraculous manner. Cadet McGee, the pupil, was making his initial endeavor to loop the loop. The machine developed a spinning nose dive and would have crashed to earth, instantly killing both, but for the presence of mind of the young officer. Within a hundred feet of the ground, by means of the dual control, he managed to flatten the machine, thus considerably lessening the force of the impact. The cadet sustained a broken leg, and was picked up in an unconscious condition. Lieut. Morgan escaped with minor body injuries.

Music and Drama

A NATURAL PLAY

Many plays are impossible, viewed from a realistic standpoint, but once in a while a play comes along that is so natural that one finds himself saying, "I believe that really happened." Such a play is "My Irish Cinderella," which comes to Griffin's Theatre next Wednesday night. Whether or not it did really happen cannot be said, but certain it is that the story is very plausible and that the characters are very real. Peggy McNeil, a poor house drudge, is taken from New York City to London, as the heir to the Earl of Lonsdale, and while there she meets Clifford Morgan, a young American aviator, who has been serving in the cause of the Allies and who is the guest of the Earl of Lonsdale while recovering from a wound received at the front. The first time that Peggy sees him she thinks that he is the greatest hero that ever lived and every day after that her admiration grows and is finally succeeded by love. Stage love stories are often trash, but this love story is too genuine to be so regarded. It has a good clean interesting story and it sparkles with true Celtic wit, and there is no caricature of the Irish race as is so often seen in so-called Irish plays.

A CIRCUS ROMANCE.

A real circus romance comes to Griffin's for the first three days of next week with Enid Bennett in the leading female role in this interesting story of circus life. In this picture she has the part of a young girl who is performing for her father in his circus. She is sent to school to be educated and falls in love with a young man of aristocratic family whom she learns to love. One day she saves the circus from wreck at the hands of rioters. Miss Bennett has a very interesting time of it and is finally able to put the show on the road through the organizng ability of her aristocratic fiancee. It is a very logical story and interesting from start to finish, filmed right on the lot with one of the leading American circuses as the back ground to the story.

BILL HART IN "SHARK MUNRO"

On the same program William S. Hart will be here in a new kind of a role called "Shark Munro." This time he has the part of a sailor of the angry seas and as usual shows himself a past-master in the art of make-up, donning the make-up of an old salt equally as well as he does western characters.

A new chapter of the Eagle's Eye and News film will complete another good quality program of photoplays.

Under Sea Pirates Murder Experts

LONDON, Aug. 24—Nine sailors, four of whom were dying of wounds, left by a German submarine commander to perish on a ramshackle raft in the North Sea, where eight of them died, is the story of Hun barbarity told by Haakon Ohlson the sole survivor of the Norwegian barque Eglinton, now recovering in a British naval hospital. When near death, Ohlson was rescued by a British motor boat patrolling in Heligoland Bight.

The Eglinton was carrying coal to Norway when attacked by the submarin firing shrapnel. The captain's right arm was shattered, the steward was badly wounded in the leg, a seaman was shot through the body and the second mate's arm was torn by splinters.

The ship filled rapidly, but the crew put out a raft made of five planks and supported by barrels. One barrel of water and a case of biscuits were placed on the raft. The submarine came up, fired into the sinking barque and passed within twenty feet of the unfortunates as it circled about the raft.

"Not a word did the Huns say to us," said Ohlson, "although they could see our wounded and the plight we were in. There was a stiff breeze blowing, and I expected the raft to break up. The submarine steamed away.

The wounded seaman died soon afterward and we threw his body overboard. The next morning, after a sleepless night for all, the steward died and then the second mate. We shoved their bodies into the water also. On the third day the captain died. Then I must have lost count of them, for on the afternoon of the fourth day I found myself alone with the chief mate.

"I did my best to cheer him up, but he only said, 'I am going down to the cabin to get my pipe, and I knew his mind was going. He died that afternoon, and I managed to get the body clear of the raft."

One of the barrel buoys leaked and that end of the raft settled low in the water. Brine got into the biscuits and into the barrel of fresh water.

"I was alone on the raft for five days," Ohlson went on. "I didn't see a single ship all that time. I must have been a little delirious, because I'd lost count of the hours. I was wet through. At night I'd hear the water swishing around me and then I would sleep."

On the ninth day he heard distant firing. He managed to get to his knees to look about him. There was a British patrol boat. When Ohlson was taken aboard he collapsed.

After A Hard Day's Work

Rub the tired muscles with a few drops of the soothing, refreshing, antiseptic liniment, Absorbine, Jr. You will find it pleasant and convenient to use and remarkably efficacious. This liniment invigorates jaded muscles, limbers the joints and prevents second day soreness and lameness after a strenuous, tiresome day of sport or work.

America's best athletes and trainers use Absorbine, Jr. to relieve strains and wrenches and also as a rub-down before vigorous exercise to prevent such conditions.

Absorbine, Jr., is concentrated and therefore economical—only a few drops are required at an application. One ounce Absorbine, Jr., to a quart of water or witch hazel makes an invigorating rub-down and general purpose liniment.

Germans Do Not Expect To Win

With the Canadian Army in the Field, Aug. 24—It is proper to make a brief record of the remarkable work being done by the intelligence branch of the Canadian force. Unremitting and unflagging, this great military detective force does its work silently and without any sort of public recognition; but through its exertions the Canadians have the infinite advantage that instead of fumbling in the dark, they can walk straightly in the light of day.

Since August 8 the exact number of enemy divisions identified by the allied armies on the Amiens-Montdidier front approaches 40, with the addition of "milked" battalions from another division.

Of these divisions some 18 have been drawn from the German reserves. The Fourth Army, with which the Canadian corps is incorporated, alone has captured prisoners from 26 divisions.

While there is no doubt that the enemy resists our advance in some parts of the field with great bravery, there is yet a marked depreciation of his morale as compared with that of prisoners captured earlier in the year. The belief seems prevalent both among his officers and men that Germany cannot win the war.

Since the French offensive of the Marne it has been brought home to them that American troops in large numbers have given a very good account of themselves on the battlefront and that thus the U-boat campaign has failed. Nevertheless, the physique of prisoners is extraordinarily good. It is their moral resistance that is sapped.

Sporting Notes

TORONTO LEADING.

The Leafs are again on top of the International League heap today, thanks to the upsetting of Arthur Irwin's strategy in passing Anderson to "get" Fisher in the wonderful eighth inning yesterday at the Island. Anderson was burning up with a desire to hit the ball, and was very much peeved when Mr. Irwin ordered Vance to pass him. But Anderson's indignation was but a mild flame compared to the injured feelings of Fisher. The big backstop strode up to the plate with fire in his eye and malice in his heart—and what he did to the offensive little ball is now a matter of baseball history.

It takes a wise young man to write a love letter.

A lunatic train of thought is usually on the side track.

Toronto Boy Tells What It Felt Like

When King George Pinned Military Cross on Capt. Sorsoleil

COBOURG, Aug. 24—Eighteen-year-old Capt. Jack Sorsoliel, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Sorsoliel, of Toronto, who are spending the summer here, took with boyish dislike of display the honors conferred upon him, as this description of his investiture of the Military Cross will show. He says: "I went to Buckingham Palace in proper style, having hired a taxi for the occasion, and was admitted to the inner courtyard. All investitures in summer are held outside. We were taken into the Palace and put our walking sticks in the cloakroom. Thre were 50 of us altogether. From here we went into a large reception chamber and were lined up according to rank. This took about half an hour. We marched out in single file and found about 1,000 people present, and yours truly began to feel quite nervous and uncomfortable. Slowly we took our turn. The King was seated on a large platform and we marched up to him.

"Well, I walked up to him like an old pal, saluted and took a step towards him. He pinned the cross below my wings. His Majesty asked me how many Huns I had, and how long I had been in France. These I answered without a falter, but when he asked me my age and wanted to know how long I had been a Captain I nearly died a natural death. I told him all and he was quite surprised that I had been a Captain at eighteen. His Majesty graciously congratulated me upon my work, and, according to the suctom, shook hands with me, I saluted again and beat it. The King is much younger than he looks in his picture, and is pleasant in manner. His voice is low and soft, and he puts you at ease as soon as he speaks. I was too excited to see the Palace."

GOODS ARE GETTING SCARCE.

We recently wrote a manufacturer urging the delivery of a line of goods long since due us and the following was his reply:

Keep your temper, gentle sir,
Writes the Manufacturer;
Though your goods are overdue
For a month, or maybe two,
Labor's scarce and looms are rare.
Can't get yarn, can't get dyes,
These are facts—we tell no lies.

Harry's drafted, so is Bill!
All our work is now up hill;
So your order, we're afraid,
May be still a bit delayed.
Still, you'll get it—don't be vexed!

Costs a Young Woman $725 to Live In Peterborough

That is the Schedule for One year's Expenses As Submitted to the Board of Conciliation-- New Departure in Such Deliberation

One of the disputes between the C. G. E. company and its employes is the rate of wages paid the two hundred or more girls who are employed in the plant. One feature of the proceedings before the board of conciliation was the presentation by the employes of a schedule showing what it costs a young woman to live in Peterborough one year.

Two young women drew up separate schedules and they arrived at totals which varied less than $20. One total arrived at was $709.90 and the other $725.90 for a year. Boards of Conciliation have been used to statements on the cost of living based upon a man, his wife and three children's requirements. The following document is perhaps the first of its kind officially presented in a dispute in Canada. The statement follows:

Cost of Living for a Young Woman— A Wage Earner.

Board, ($6 per week)	$312.00
Laundry (averaging all, $1.75 per week	91.90
Suit at $75 to last two years, $5 for alterations, cleaning, etc.	20.00
Winter coat to last two years, at $35	17.50
Sweater coat to last two years	5.00
One serge skirt to last two years, $10	5.00
One white skirt	3.00
Summer dress at $30, to last two years	15.00
Three waists to last with suit at $3.50 each	10.50
Four working waists at $2 each	8.00
Three working aprons at $1 each	3.00
Boots	27.00
Rubbers, and repairs to boots, rubber heels, etc.	8.00
Hats (summer and winter) ..	38.00
Underwear, underskirts, nightgowns, etc.	29.00
Corsets	15.00
Hosiery and gloves..	10.00
Collars, etc.	5.00
Handkerchiefs, (20c. each) ..	2.40
Thread and mending wool ..	1.00
Umbrella	2.00
Toilet Accessories, such as hair pins, combs, tooth paste, etc.	14.00
Church expenses (25c. a week)	13.00
Sick benefits (40c. a month)	4.80
Car fare (to work only)	20.00
Furs to last five years at $65..	13.00
Raincoat to last three years at $15	5.00
Total	$709.90

The average weekly wages of the women employed in the C. G. E. is $8.50, or $4.29 a year, not much more than half of the schedule shown above.

GERMANY AND AN INDEMNITY

(Albany Knickerbocker Press)

It is possibly too early to begin to collect the indemnity which Germany must pay over to civilization. Yet nothing is more certain than that the German Empire, or whatever remains of it when the war has been won, will have to make such amends as money can give for its madness, folly and savagery.

Those who say that Germany will be so impoverished that nothing can be squeezed out of it are ignoring the facts. Germany's colossal debt is urged as one reason why it would be futile to expect an indemnity. Well, so far as we are concerned, what do we care how enormous Germany's debt may be? Why should a penny of it ever be paid? We are not going to spend millions of lives and billions of dollars for the privilege of reimbursing those who have financed the German army. If they can win, they may collect what is owing them—but they cannot win, and so that huge German debt will have to vanish like the seeds of a dandelion in the breeze.

But there are German resources—coal, iron ore and potash, for instance—worth, at the least figure, twice as much as the total cost of the war of the Allies to date. Germany will have to have something to do when it is forced to stop trying to kill the rest of the world. A good job for the Germans would be to get to work at the development of their natural resources. Let the rest of the world deduct from the proceeds of that development whatever it needs to square Germany's obligations, and leave the balance for the Germans to live on.

The "war lord's" empire under such an arrangement would at least be no worse off than the Southern States of America were when the Civil War ended. Their debts and all their obligations were all repudiated. Their lands had been impoverished to the point of hopelessness; their capital had been annihilated, and all their slaves set free. They had scarcely any live stock remaining, and in the fifteen years following the war they lost millions of their population to the new regions to the west and southwest. Yet they stuck to it, and within a generation had reached a point of prosperity and of agricultural and industrial development not only far beyond that which the North had possessed in the period when it subdued the South.

In the years after the present war we shall have to teach the Germans what we thought they had learned long ago—that world domination by force of arms is the delusion of a madman, and that the rewards of peace far outweigh anything that conquest can produce. While they are learning this lesson, we shall collect what it has cost us to give them the instruction.

TRADE REPORTS COMBINED

OTTAWA, Aug. 24—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has effected an economy by amalgamating the monthly trade report of the Department of Trade and Commerce with similar report of the Department of Customs, thereby eliminating duplication of effort by the two department. The new report to be issued by the Bureau will be known as the "Monthly report of the Trade of Canada."

GRAND TURNK AT TORONTO EXHIBITION

This year the Grand Trunk System is installing in its own building at the Canadian National Exhibition, at Toronto, a very interesting and comprehensive exhibit covering the natural resources of the country contiguous to its lines and depicting the many attractions offered in the tourist districts of Eastern and Western Canada. The exhibit contains large pictures of typical scenes in these summer playgrounds and in addition there are handsomely mounted specimens of fish and game taken from the waters and forests of these territorities. Western Canada is represented by an exhibit of grains and grasses from Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia. There are also samples of the dairy products of the west. The territory served by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway offers to homeseekers some of the most attractive lands in the west. There will be in attendance at this exhibit representatives thoroughly conversant with the western country who can give first hand information to inquirers. Do not fail to see the Grand Trunk exhibit in the Railways Building situated on the Exhibition Grounds.

He was with the Battery for two years and recently completed his course in aviation and was gazetted as a flight-lieutenant. He has been singularly fortunate while he has

STRAFING GERMANS IN FRONT TRENCH

London Daily Mail

We paraded at sundown to march to the trenches, and started off, first through a wood and then over open ground. I saw many shell holes, and thrilled as I realized that each step took me farther into the land of adventure.

A rising mist shrouded the fields, and darkness came as we passed another wood containing many dugouts and thickly planted with artillery. Then we came upon a village full of ghosts of houses.

We turned to the right and followed a road. On the left a trench extended parallel with the road, and in the fields—astonishingly near they seemed. Verey lights rose and fell.

Suddenly a stone cracked with a flash of sparks almost at my feet, and something whined shrilly between the man in front and me.

"What's that?" I cried.

"A stray bullet looking for a billet," an "old hand" answered.

The road was crowded with ammunition and food limbers going forward and an occasional quietly moving ambulance returning. At last we came to a dump and here entered a communication trench.

I was sweating profusely; my pack straps galled my shoulders, and I had hard work to keep Harry, who was in front of me, in view. The trench was narrow, and a soldier in full pack pretty well filled it. The sides were strewn with telephone wires which in many cases had become detached and drooped—ready traps for the unwary—or zigzagged across so that our rifles and impediments became entangled and each man had to disentangle his comrade.

The trench was floored with duckboards. These were excellent in themselves, but there were always gaps where shells had fallen, missing boards, or others placed see-saw-wise on a bump so that on placing one foot on, the duck board rose up and smote the unwary with surprising suddenness.

Messages were continually passing from front to rear of the procession—"'Ware hole," "Step up," "Step down," "Mind the wire." While from the rear came appeals to "Halt in front," "We're losing touch."

I became wedged in a broken part of the trench and had to wait until Bill, who was behind, caught up and unwedged me, during which process I shed some skin. I retaliated by dragging Bill clear in his turn.

On we went through trenches occupied by men so weary that they neither waked nor protested when we trod on their sleeping bodies.

At last we halted. A Verey light sailed overhead and I saw we were relieving men who were preparing to depart.

"Don't take your packs off yet," ordered our corporal.

"Are we here at last?" I asked.

"Yes."

"Is it the front line?" I whispered to a soldier about to leave.

"Yes, mate, you've got it," he said as he departed. "The very front line—the one next the Germans. You just strafe them as we have and you'll do all right. Good-bye."

Uncle Sam Tided India Over Crisis

Shipments of Silver Relieved Serious Currency Situation

LONDON, Aug. 24—That the United States helped India this year over one of the most serious financial currency crises in the history of the British Empire was the statement made today to the Associated Press by Sir Jas. Meston, financial member of the Viceroy's Council.

"Probably few people in America," he said, "realize how vitally important to India and to India's share in the war was the legislation passed in Washington, releasing large quantities of silver for use in alleviating the currency situation there. For this action, India, as well as the British Empire and the allies, owe a debt of gratitude to the United States which it is hard to overstate.

The first cargo of American silver arrived in July, and more is on the way. This act of the United States had stabilized the whole currency situation in India, and came just in the nick of time when things looked very critical.

"India has been doing well in the war for the past four years but the crisis which we faced a year ago owing to the silver situation was actute, and for a time the future looked dark, with a possibility of serious unrest, difficulty in recruiting, the shut down of war work and the cutting off of those highly valuable raw material exports for which the allies are so largely dependent on India.

"At the height of the crisis came the United States and helped us. Now we shall be able to get on better than ever. Thanks to the United States India to-day is ready to fulfil

Davies Company Suffers Penalty

It and Mathews-Blackwell Forbidden to Deal in Eggs for 30 Days

OTTAWA, Aug. 24—For violating the provisions in the regulations applying to produce dealers, which limits the allowance to be made for bad eggs by dealers to one per cent. of the total of each transaction, the Matthrews-Blackwell Company, Limited, of Montreal, and the Wm. Davies Company, Limited, of Montreal, have been forbidden to buy or sell or otherwise deal in eggs for a period of 30 days. Eggs in transit to-day must be disposed of to other dealers.

TRAFFIC PROSPECTS

That the next few weeks will be the busiest period for local railway traffic in the Provinces of Quebec and Ontario is the expectation of railway officials here, who state that the numerous fairs and exhibitions all over the two provinces will draw thousands to the various exposition centres. The first of the larger exhibitions ,the Great Eastern, will open next Saturday in Sherbrooke, and a Grand Trunk official who has just returned from arranging that lines exhibit, states that the exhibitors expect a larger attendance than ever before. Following the opening, the Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto will open on an even larger scale, on August 26th. Reports from that city say that tickets for the annual fair have been sold almost instantly upon issue, and the usual large attendance is expected to be outdone.

On September 6th at London, Ont. the Western Fair will be opened, continuing for nine days, and on the following day, the Central Canada Exhibition at Ottawa will commence, to last for a similar period.

Besides there, more than fifty other smaller agricultural and general exhibitions are to be held all over the two provinces during the next three weeks, and both the Grand Trunk and C.P.R. state that special preparations are being made to handle the great bulk of passenger traffic which it is expected, will pass over the lines during that period.

An Age of Weak Nerves

"No heart for anything" is the cry of thousands of men and women who might be made well by the new, red blood Dr. Williams Pink Pills actually make.

Misery day and night is the lot of hosts of men and women who are today the victims of weak nerves. Their pale, drawn faces and dejected attitude tell a sad tale, for nervous weakness means being tortured by morbid thoughts and unaccountable fits of depression. These sufferers are painfully sensitive and easily agitated by some chance remark. Sleeplessness robs them of energy and strength, their eyes are sunken, their limbs tremble, appetite is poor and memory often fails. This nervous exhaustion is one of the most serious evils affecting men and women of to-day. The only way to bring back sound, vigorous health is to feed the starved nerves which are clamoring for new, rich, red blood. This new, good blood can be had through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which fact accounts for the thousands of cures of nervous diseases brought about by this powerful blood builder and nerve restorer. Through the fair use of this medicine thousands of despondent people have been made bright, active and strong.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all dealers in medicine, or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WHITBY COAL SUPPLY CUT

WHITBY, Aug. 24—There will be a serious shortage of coal in Whitby this year, if the allotment of the Fuel Administrator is any indication. He has notified Mayor Harper that the town is only to receive 4,600 tons. The normal need is for over 6,000 tons. A meeting of the Fuel Committee of the Town Council and the local coal dealers is being called to consider the situation, and action will be taken as deemed most desirable.

CHATHAM DEALERS REFUSE TO PASTEURIZE

LARGEST CANAL LOCK FINISHED

Will Lift Two Vessels at Once Over Soo Falls

Sault Ste. Marie, Aug. 24.—The last bucket of cement has been poured into the last mould of the longest canal lock in the world.

The new fourth lock of the American ship canal beside St. Mary's Falls is almost completed and men are tearing down stone crushers, cement sheds and concrete forms, and plans are being rushed to lock the first cargo of iron through the $3,500,000 structure to be made into cannon.

For more than two years shipload after shipload of cement has been poured into the forms between the cofferdams that keep out the waters of Lake Superior and Lake Huron.

The fourth lock, lying just north of its three companion locks and nearest St. Mary's Falls, is 1,700 feet long. Between the gates of the lock-chamber the distance is 1,350 feet, in comparison with the 1000-feet chambers of the Panama Canal locks. Two of the largest vessels standing end to end may be lifted to a height of 20 feet at one time in this lock.

The width of the lock chamber is 80 feet. The walls are of solid concrete and 75 feet high. At the bottom they are 26 feet thick, tapering to eight feet at the top.

By means of the fourth lock only one lift is necessary to change the level of a vessel from the lower and upper lakes. Six culverts, six by nine feet in dimension, run the length of the lock chamber, just underneath its floor.

Fignite Coal For The West

Appointment of a Board is Announced by the Government

OTTAWA, Aug. 24 Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Mines, has announced the appointment of the Ligni[illegible]tiliation Board, which will deal the further development and use of deposits of lignite coal in the west, said Mr. Burrell, is the result of negotiations which took place some time ago between the Government of Saskatchewan and Manitoba and the Federal authorities. The Council for Scientific Research and Industrial Research and the department of Mines have for a long time past been closely investigating the possibilities of carboning and briqueting lignite coal to make it most suitable for household use, as well as the question of producing by-products such as oil, pitch, ammonia, sulphate and gas. A solution of these problems which would be a commercial success is most desirable. An order in council was passed some time ago authorizing the Minister of Mines to enter into an agreement with the Government of Saskatchewan and Manitoba which should provide that they would contribute one hundred thousand dollars each and this Government two hundred thousand for the purpose of establishing and experimental work whether before or after the establishment of the said plant, as might be deemed necessary or advisable.

LAST DAY OF AMNESTY.

This is the last day of amnesty granted by the Government to defaulters under the Military Service Act, and young men eligible for military service who have failed to report when notified, or who have neglected the military regulations in toto, will be sought out by the military authorities and when apprehended will be liable to the most severe punishment. The Government has been very lenient, but the day of leniency has passed and defaulters who fail to take advantage of the amnesty and report for service today will be making a very serious mistake and one which they will regret the longest day they live.

TWO RED LETTER DAYS.

The management of Belleville Fair is making special efforts to have a splendid exhibition this year, one worthy of the thriving city of Belleville and the magnificent country round about. Special prizes, well worth strivng for, are offered and special attractions of an entertaining and educational nature have been arranged for. It only remains for the citizens of Belleville and vicinity to give the Fair their loyal and hearty support to make this year's exhibition one long to be remembered with pleasure and pride as the beginning of a series of annual exhibitions which will make the city of Belleville famous. Cut out the knocking and boost the Fair and the result will be surprising. Every citizen of Belleville should be an advertising agent for the Fair and spread the news far and wide that this year's exhibition is going to be worth coming a long distance to attend.

FOR THE SAILORS.

The week of September 1-7 has been set apart in Canada as Sailors' Week in which to raise a fund for the benefit of the widows and orphans of the sailors of the Merchant Marine, the brave men who have given their lives in trying to keep the tide of commerce moving and give the lie to the Kaiser's oft-repeated boasts that his U-boats would close the aisles of the sea to British shipping. Ontario's objective is one million dollars for the sailors' fund. Belleville's proportion of that million dollars is a mere bagatelle, but it looks as if no action would be taken here, that the plight of the widows and orphans of the sailors of the Merchant Marine, often penniless and certainly pensionless, finds no answering throb of pity here. A meeting of the local Naval League Monday evening to arrange for the campaign was so slimly attended that it was decided to take no action in regard to Sailors' Week. The least that could be done would be to put on a two-day tag campaign during Belleville Fair. It would be a disgrace not to do something for the sailors.

THE PADRE AND THE FAG.

The red pathway of war has changed the viewpoints and set principles of many a man and woman and the great levelling spirit of the democracy of the trenches has reawakened the spirit of helpfulness and unselfishness in many breasts where it has long lain dormant. The army chaplains, or padres, as they are affectionately termed by the soldiers, have been quick to adapt themselves to the changed conditions occasioned by war, and have become broadened in the true Christian spirit of ministering to the needs of the mental, physical and spiritual well-being of the soldier. Mr. Fred B. Shipp, the Treasurer and Grand Field Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. War Work Council in France, who has just returned after a year spent on the battlefields of Europe, tells the following interesting story of a Padre whose viewpoint was altered by war conditions:

> "I remember particularly one preacher who came to France with the belief that he would save a lot of soldiers from the tobacco evil. His personal feelings against tobacco were so strong that he felt himself unable to sell the weed in one of our canteens. This was not discovered until the clergyman had been put in charge of a hut immediately behind the lines.
> "One night there was considerable infantry activity in this sector. At dawn the walking cases among the wounded began returning to a rest-station far behind the 'Y' hut. A party of twelve or thirteen under a sergeant stopped at the hut.
> "The secretary-clergymen saw wounded men returning from the trenches for the first time. They said they were 'broke' and asked for chocolate. He gave it to them and asked the men if they wanted anything else.
> "The sergeant told him that the only other thing they needed was cigarettes. They needed them badly. There was a supply in the hut. The anti-tobacco clergyman hesitated about one-half second. Then his program for saving men from nicotine went by the board. He passed cigarettes around to each of the wounded men. They departed for the rear.
> "In a few minutes another group came along. They, too, needed something to smoke. Once more he abandoned his principles. A third group appeared. Again the cigarettes wre distributed.
>
> "By this time the clergyman discoverd that his supply of matches was practically exhausted. The fourth batch of visitors completely consumed it.
> "For the rest of the day this crusader against tobacco found himself doing the only thing that would enable him to look his wounded countrymen in the eye as they stopped at his hut for rest. He kept a cigarette glowing in his own lips all day long so that each boy would be able to get a light."

Two hundred of Germany's "tin boats" have been destroyed and the Kaiser will experience quite a shock in counting up the remnants of his U-boat squadron which he proudly boasted would astonish the world. In the meantime the allied armies are being supplied regularly with reinforcements and munitions while the rag-tag and bobtail of the Kaiser's "wonderful" undersea super-sharks are seeking easy marks in fishing boats.

A motor-car trip along the banks of the Moira these days is not the most pleasant experience, for the smell of new-mown hay is strangely flavored with an aroma which suggests less of rural cleanliness and more of a battlefield in France which the Huns have left for the Allies to clean up. A Belleville citizen who entertained a party of friends to an automobile ride one evening recently up the river has been busy ever since inoculating himself with limburger cheese to counteract the gas poisoning from the river Moira.

"Red Hearts" for automobile owners willing to give returned soldiers a lift in their cars are being distributed by the Toronto News. The "Red Hearts" are placards bearing the design of a heart with the inscription "Glad to Give Soldiers a Lift," and when placed on a car signifies a standing invitation to returned soldiers to occupy any vacant seat in the car if going in the desired direction. This plan has proved very popular in the United States and will no doubt be taken up generally in Canada as another tangible evidence of appreciation of the sacrifices of Canada's soldier heroes. The News is to be congratulated upon its enterprise.

Trenton folks have started a big publicty drive to make Sailors' Week in their community one long to be remembered for generous giving. In addition to the newspaper and poster advertising arranged from provincial headquarters the Trenton citizens have organized an aggressive supplementary campaign using special page advertisments in the local newspapers and are using every effort to apprise the people of the privilege of contributing to the worthy cause of providing funds for the care of the widows and orphans of the sailors of the Merchant Marine whose lives have been sacrificed by the ruthless U-boat war of frightfulness of the malignant Hun.

OTHER VIEWS

Lenine and His Policy.

Chicago Daily News.

Lenine would have nothing to do with the Czar, with any semi-liberal or liberal minister, with the duma or the most democratic of suffrage systems. He had no faith in the non-socialist parties, however radical they might be. Revolutionary propaganda was the only weapon he trusted and he quarreled with every party or faction that favored co-operation with liberals and moderates. When the war came he determined to use it for his own purposes. Russia, he held, should be defeated in order that Czarism and the middle class power might be overthrown. In Belgium, Serbia and France he took no interest whatever. He had one goal before him—the dictatorship of the socialistic proletariat. He talked to the peasants and workmen, to the soldiers and sailors, in the only language they knew. He promised them land, bread, power and peace. On this sweeping platform he became the master of Russia. He will fail, and must fail. He admits that the situation is critical and that antibolshevik movements are springing up everywhere, but his remedy is more force, more terror.

Banned From the Library.

New York Times.

George Sylvester Viereck's volumes of verse, free and other, no longer will enjoy the hospitality of the fourscore and four circulation libraries of the City of New York. Orders were issued some time ago, so it was said in the office of the director of the New York Public Library, Fifth avenue and Forty-second street, to withdraw from circulation every printed word of which Mr. Viereck is author. The order does not affect the reference library, which, it was pointed out, "strives to gather opinions on both sides of every question."

All Look Alike.

It is said that the German high command has already selected 500,000 of the best troops to guard the Rhine, but to the allied armies the Kaiser's warriors are like the famed conditions "somewhere east of Suez"—the best are like the worst!

GROWING OLD.

A little more grey in the lessening hair
  Each day as the years go by;
A little more stooping of the form,
  A little more dim the eye.

A little more faltering of the step
  As we tread life's pathway o'er,
But a little nearer every day
  To the ones who have gone before.

A little more halting of the gait,
  And a dullness of the ear;
A growing weariness of the frame
  With each swift passing year.

A fading of hopes, and ambition, too,
  A faltering in life's quest,
But a little nearer every day
  To a sweet and peaceful rest.

A little more loneliness in life
  As the dear ones pass away:
A little further from toil and care,
  A little less way to roam;
A drawing nearer to a peaceful voyage
  And a happy welcome home.

THE TEMPTING OF PAUL CHESTER.

BY

ALICE AND CLAUDE ASKEW

AUTHORS OF "THE SHULAMITE"

CHAPTER I.

Paul Chester At Home.

"We are asked to meet the Berkshires next week. They are to stay at the Riddells', it appears, for a couple of nights, just from Saturday to Monday."

Lady Susan Chester glanced up from her writing-table as her husband entered the room, and addressed him over her shoulder. She was a slim and exceedingly pretty woman, with a quantity of fair, soft hair, clear, bright blue eyes, and a charming voice.

"That's good!" exclaimed Paul Chester; and the man's whole face lit up with a satisfied smile. "That's exceedingly good! Of course you will write and accept, Susan?"

He was a tall, dominant-looking young man of about thirty, with keen, clear-cut features, and dark hair. His eyes were piercingly bright, hawk's eyes, and his chin stuck out prominently He was quite good-looking, and there was something in the face which set Paul Chester apart from his fellows, an expression of invincible determination and iron resolve. He was unnaturally pale for a man who spent the most of his time in the open air and was the owner of miles of soil; his was more the type bred in cities than in fields.

"We have friends coming here ourselves next Saturday," said Lady Susan, in calm, cold tones; but a faint touch of color rost to her cheeks.

"Put them off—put the whole party off," commanded her husband. "Don't you realise the extreme importance of this visit? You know perfectly well that if a man is to get on in politics nowadays he must stand in with the Berkshires. Why, her influence——" He paused and did not finish the sentence, startled for the second by the look of intense contempt which had come into his wife's eyes, transforming a merely pretty woman into a creature he failed to understand.

"Yes, we all know what the Duchess is. How she can set a man up and take a man down," said Lady Susan, smiling frostily. Then she raised her head and looked her husband straight in the face. "If I were a man," she said, "a clever and ambitious man, a man with all the world in front of me, I wouldn't be helped on by any one. I'd just help myself."

"Nonsense, nonsense!" interrupted Chester, with a shrug of his shoulders. "People don't get on by themselves. They have to be helped on. Influence means everything nowadays, and you know what the Duchess can do." He stroked his clean-shaven face—a trick of his when excited over anything. "Her husband will be a Prime Minister before the year's out—that's pretty certain, and then," he laughed, "well, we all know who manages the Berkshires. If ever one wants an example of a man who has been made by his wife, one has only to point at the Duke."

"And such a wife!" exclaimed Lady Susan, as she turned her flashing eyes upon her husband. "Henrietta is a wicked woman, an unprincipled Delilah. She robs men of their secrets by breaking their hearts. I don't say she is untrue to her husband—she is too cold-blooded, too sublimely selfish—but she tricks men all the same of everything she can get from them, and gives them nothing in exchange—nothing!"

"Say what you like about the Duchess," retorted Paul Chester coolly. "Women, I know, have a way of running her down, but she plays a prominent part in the history of our time, and has been the mainstay of her husband Posterity will remember her as a great woman."

"Very well," said Lady Susan, and shut her lips with some determination. "I must write and accept the Riddells and put off our other friends. I hope we shan't be called tuft-hunters when the truth comes out."

"When a man is going to stand for his country," Chester retorted, "he has to do a great many things which he wouldn't do at other times. But the end justifies the means." He put his hand upon his wife's shoulder. "You think me a snob, Susan," he went on, in a voice that was wonderfully quiet and measured. "It is quite true, I am a snob! Son of a snob, and the grandson of a factory hand—but Brutus has ambitions. I intend to be something more than the mere rich man whom the county families patronise. I am going to be great—one day." His grip on her shoulder became tighter, heavier. "I am nobody now, a rich nobody, merely the master of Amphlett Court, but wait awhile—wait."

He shook his head, then pushed her gently away from him. "Write to Mrs. Riddell at once, Susan," was all he said.

She made no further protest, and her face went back to its impassive calm again. A second later, her gold pen was scratching across a sheet of pale mauve paper. She had a jerky, scratchy way of writing.

Paul Chester settled himself down comfortably in a big chintz-covered arm-chair and fixed his eyes upon his wife, the slim, gracious creature who obeyed him so implicitly, and whose loyalty and honor he could always rely on There was the width of the whole world between himself and Lady Susan. They had lived the life of civil strangers for the last three years—ever since their honeymoon, in fact.

Yet of their friends no one guessed, no one suspected this. They were quoted as a model couple and praised for their perfect manners to each other.

"Do I feel bitter towards Susan, or have I merely become indifferent—wrapped up in greater interests, bigger dreams?"

Tha was the question Chester asked himself as he stared at the girl he adored with all a young man's passion during the brief days of their engagement—the wife he had worshipped up to the fatal moment when he had discovered a fact he had never before suspected, that Lady Susan had married him simply and solely for his money, married him because she was the eldest daughter of a large family of sisters and knew her duty to her family.

The truth had come out by accident, by means of a letter which Chester had come upon during the first weeks of their honeymoon. It was a letter Lady Susan had written to her favorite sister and then carelessly left half-finished in the blotting-book.

Chester remembered the casual way he had strolled across the room and opened the blotting-book, and had read, without wishing to, certain lines of Lady Susan's open letter—lines impossible to forgive or to forget.

"Don't let father frighten you into marrying a man for money as he frightened me, for I tell you my position is unendurable. Every kiss is a degredation. I feel burnt up with shame—a creature bought and sold."

He read no more, but turned the letter deliberately on to the unwirtten side and closed the blotting-book. From that hour on she was not troubled with his kisses.

The warm relationship of husband and wife ceased to exist between the couple, and no explanation passed on either side. They drifted into the new order of things quietly.

He bent his brows now as her pen went scratching on over the mauve paper, and his thoughts flew back to other days—to the days long before his marriage, and he felt, as he had often felt, that fate, destiny, or Providence had not been over kind to him. For all his wealth he was not a happy man. Had he not missed Life's greatest thing—Love?

He remembered his youth, his miserable chilhood He was the offspring of a second marriage, for his father, a big manufacturer in the Midlands, had taken for his second wife a mill-hand, a pretty, helpless slip of a girl, whom Luke Chester brought home to his big Nottingham mansion

Poor, pretty Annie! It was doubtful if her marriage to her rich master contributed very much to her happiness; anyway, if it did, her time of enjoyment was brief, for before she had been married a year the girl had drawn her last breath, and a baby's cry had once more rung through the large over-decorated house.

All this was before Luke Chester had made a big corner in cotton, retired from active business, and bought Amphlett Court, one of the largest places in Sussex.

His father hated Paul. For one thing, the child had cost the life of pretty yellow-haired Annie; and, for another, to the day of the old man's death he regretted his rash second marriage. And so it came to pass that Paul was treated as a sort of Ishmael detested by his half-brothers, made of no account in his father's house, regarded as a blot on the family escutcheon, the aggravating witness to a big scandal.

He was sent to a cheap school, not to Elton as his brothers had been, and bundled out of England at the age of nineteen to Florida, to break his heart amidst the orange and lemon trees, for the boy had his own dreams of greatness, and yearned for a political career. He loathed the sight of the fruit trees; to this day the smell of an orange made him feel sick.

Paul was no fool. He knew that, having been made a partner in the orange farm, he must stick to his work—at least for a time—for no man can succeed without money. Later on—ah! later on——

He was wonderfully and incredibly patient, and then quite suddenly came deliverance—deliverance dramatic and immediate.

Old Luke Chester, at the ripe age of seventy, might have known better than to trust himself in a motor-car driven by his son, heavy, uncouth George. The other son was there too, Robert.

It was not by any means the first motor-car drive the trio had taken together, but it chanced to be the last. There was a grand smash-up at the end of a steep hill, and the total extinction—or so the county fancied—of the house of Chester. But the good gossips were wrong. There was another Chester who was to make his appearance in Sussex and take possession of Amphlett Court, a son of whom they had not even heard.

"So we haven't seen the end of the money-bags lot yet!" a blatant young squire remarked on the day Paul Chester appeared for the first time in the hunting-field, where everybody cold-shouldered him. He was an outsider, and made to realize this by his neighbors; by all, that is to say, except the bankrupt Lord Amphlett, who having sold his house and lands to Paul's father now saw fit to try and sell his eldest daughter to the son.

He introduced Paul to Lady Susan before the whole field, and made much of the young man himself, and from that hour things worked on towards the inevitable end.

In three moths' time Lord Amphlett had captured a rich son-in-law, and Paul had taken a wife.

"There, the letter's finished," said Lady Susan, as she folded her note, put it in an envelope, and handed it to her husband. "I doubt if much good will come of this visit to the Riddells'," she added. "Still, you wish to go, so of course we are going."

"You are a very obedient wife," he said mockingly, for a sudden desire had come upon him to sting this quiet woman—this woman he had once loved so dearly and so madly.

"I try to do my duty," she answered. Her voice had all at once become as cold as ice; her blue eyes glittered. "You see I recognize our marriage to help you. And I—well, of course a woman wants money, and you are a rich man; but I think we both realize the fact that we must pull together for our mutual well-being." Her lips trembled a little, and her breast heaved slightly under the loose folds of her silk-wrapper.

Paul Chester did not notice these signs of agitation. He had turned on his heel and was walking towards the door. He paused with his hand on the knob, his head turned from her.

"You have a clear and concise way of expressing yourself, Susan, but—my God! what a farce our life is—what a farce!"

The words burst from him suddenly and unexpectedly ;then he laughed bitterly and opened the door.

"Paul!" She stretched out her hands as she pronounced his name, but it was doubtful if he heard her faint cry, for he walked quietly out of the room, closing the door carefully behind him.

She sprang from her chair. Her face had grown very pale, her mouth was trembling pitifully; then she suddenly flung herself down on a small chintz-covered sofa and buried her head amidst a pile of cushions.

"I love him!" she muttered, trembling convulsively; "I love him—and he hates me!"

CHAPTER II.

The White Motor

Paul Chester had made his decision, and his word was law. The invitation of the Riddells was duly accepted, and Lady Susan protested no further against the necessary abandonment of her own plans. They saw little of each other in the days that ensued, though when they happened to meet Paul treated his wife with studied politeness, the attitude to which she had become accustomed and which she had learnt to imitate.

To Paul himself, the prospective meeting with the Duchess of Berkshire was of the first importance. Ambition had taken the place of love in the man's heart; his own political progress was paramount. He knew his own powers, the vital force within him that had not yet, for lack of opportunity, came to the surface; but, backed by such influence as might be his, to what height was it not possible for him to attain?

He was reflecting thus as he strode along the highway a mile or two from Amphlett Court. He was never averse to walking, and the whim had taken him to visit one of his tenants with whom there was some business to be transacted. This completed, he was making his way home, his mind so occupied with his own affairs that he hardly noticed those who passed him on the road, or if he returned a salutation the gesutre was mechanical and given with but a curt bend of the head.

Suddenly, however, his attention was aroused by the pitiful howl of a dog. He was fond of animals and the sound was disturbing to his train of thought. He raiser his eyes, and as he came to a turn in the road an unusual sight presented itself to his gaze.

A small motorcar was drawn up alongside the hedge, and a woman stood beside the car whipping a small toy Pomeranian with all her might—sharp, merciless blows.

"What a devil of a woman!" thought Chester; "but what a beautiful woman!"

He caught his breath as he drew closer, for he was a man who had a curious appreciation of the beautiful, and he had never in all his life come across such a woman as the tall, imperious-looking creature who mercilessly whipped the whining lapdog—such a woman of flame and passion.

She was tall, almost as tall as himself, and slender for her height. He particularly noticed the curious slimness of her figure and the copperbrown hair and shining eyes—strange eyes, full of red fire.

She was evidently driving the car herself, for there was no sign of a chauffeur or any other occupant. The car was a white one. He noticed all this in a flash even as the litte dog went on piteously howling under her shower of blows.

"She'll kill the poor little brute if she goes on like that," he commented to himself, then ran forward and laid an authoritative hand upon the woman's arm.

"Stop!" he cried imperatively. "Aren't you ashamed of yourself? You will kill the poor little brute if you go on like this. Has the dog bitten you, or anything?"

The woman stared at Chester in bank astonishment.

"How dare you speak to me? What possible business is it of yours?" she demanded. "The dog is mine—mine to do what I like with—to kill if I choose." She had a curious voice, full of deep, rich notes, and for all her rage a certain seductiveness ran through it, a drowsy sweetness.

"The dog may be yours," remarked Chester, "but, all the same, if you think I am going to allow you to go on thrashing it, you are wrong. Put the animal down at once!" He squared his shoulders and stared the woman steadily in the eyes, unappalled by the

"I don't want to talk politics. The only politics for all civilization till the war is won is the winning of it." This was the commendable declaration of Hon Dr. Beland upon his return to Canada.

Holding those views one wonders what Dr. Beland thought of the speeches made by his old leader, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his chief Quebec lieutenants at the demonstration at Three Rivers in honor of the ex-Postmaster-General.

Dr. Beland made a fervent patriotic speech in which he pleaded for national unity, but his parliamentary colleagues seized the opportunity to capitalize his home-coming by indulging in all the old political patter and by making orations designed to appeal to the prejudice of their fellow-countrymen.

Sir Wilfrid harked back to the ancient naval controversy and reiterated the old claim that French-Canadians had not recruited in large numbers voluntarily because wrong methods had been adopted by Ottawa. Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux talked about reciprocity and declared that Sir Wilfrid would have been premier but for a "dishonest

31,000 Poles Have Been Murdered

NEW YORK, Aug. 23.—Thirty-one thousand young Poles have been hanged and crucified in their home country, before the eyes of their own mothers and fathers, because they would not serve in the German army. The battle cry of the Poles yet living and fighting under the flags of the Allies is: "A Polish republic like America, and a Polish president like Wilson."

Captain Paul Kleczkowski, of the Polish army in France, who is in the United States to enlist men of Polish birth in the army of the Allies and to obtain the release of these Poles held in internment camps as alien enemies, so that they may fight for Poland's freedom, said at the Plaza Hotel yesterday that by March of 1919 he believed Belgium would be freed of the Huns, and that by the winter of 1919 Poland wiuld realize its dream of a decade and set up an honorable and lasting government as a republic.

"The people of Poland," the captain said, "want no kings, no kaisers. They know the form of government kings demand. They have suffered under the iron grip of the Austrians and Germans long enough, and those who are yet able to express their desires are quick to declare thaey want a government like that of the United States, with a president as nearly like Mr. Wilson as they can get.

"There are 28,000,000 persons in Poland. The Germans have succeeded in getting less than one thousand into the Teuton army. Those who would not go were crucified and hanged. Thirty-one thousand of them paid the awful price for resistance by hanging in the streets of their little villages, riddled with bullets and torn by swords.

"Women have gone through all the terrors of barbarism at the hands of crazed German officers. Little babies have cried and died for lack of food. But Poland's spirit has not been broken. Like Belgium, we believed over there that the principle at stake was worth more than the lives of our sons, and we did not submit.

Can Send Million to Fight.

"Poland is capable of sending into the battle-front in France one million first-class fighting men. They will be sent here just as quickly as we can break the German hold in our country.

"Fifty thousand Poles in the United States can be sent to the Allies' colors. Every week more than 2,000 Poles are going from the ports of the United States to enlist in the army fighting against the Germans."

Capt. Kleczkowski said that as soon as the United States had two or two and one-half millions of soldiers on the fighting line in France, the end of the war would be near.

Poles, he said had learned not to be too confident, but they all realized now that as soon as the United States sends a sufficiently large force across the ocean, liberty for Poland and the world would be at our finger-tips.

"In Poland they are eager for the addresses of President Wilson," the captain said. "He has spoken many words of friendship of the Poles. He surely is a great man. He has the welfare of all free peoples at heart. He knows, as we know, that an autocratic government is the invention of the Germans, and that kings have no place in the life of peaceful men and women."

Captain Kleczkowski wears the olive drab uniform of the French army, with the Polish white eagle insignia on his shoulders and the four-cornered Polish cap. He was born in France of parents who were immigrants from Poland. He served in the French army prior to the present war.

IMPORTANT EVENTS ARE EXPECTED SOON

PARIS, Aug. 24—The Franco-British successes Thursday increased the menace to Roye and Noyon and rendered their fall near, says the Echo de Paris. It adds that Paris has made safer by the operations of the army of General Humbert and that Soissons has been made more secure by the capture of Pommiers and Vauxrezis. L'Homme Libre says there is reason to hope for important events in the next few days in the region of Noyon.

The Standing of War Bonds

(The Outlook)

The newspapers report that German capitalists have recently been buying through neutral sources war loans of the Entente nations. Whether this is true or not, it is a practical certainty that neutral interests have been buying in the American market the bonds of the various loans which America has made to England, France and Italy.

While the war has enlarged the vision and the opportunity of the American investor and while we have begun to realize that all the good things in the investment field are not limited to the United States, we have since our entrance into the war been afforded opportunities which have to some extent curtailed our interest in foreign government securities. The attention of the American investor has been in recent months directed in large part to the purchase of Liberty Bonds and of such domestic securities as American Telephone and Telegraph 6s, Bethlehem Steel 7s, Armour 6s, Procter and Gamble 7s, Federal Land Bank 5s, West Penn Power 6s, to mention only a few unparalleled investment opportunities

Travelers abroad, especially those who have visited neutral nations—Denmark, Norway, Holland and Sweden—say that even the German sympathizers in these countries recognize the highly speculative features of the German internal loans. As a hard and practical business propositions, capitalists in those countries are buying the bonds of the Allied Governments, regardless of their sympathies. Japan has not only been a heavy lender to Great Britain and France, but has also been a substantial buyer of the external loans of the Allied Governments, not to speak of her own sterling 4½ per cent. loan placed in London, Paris, Berlin, and to some extent in the United States during the Russo-Japanese War.

In the last analysis, the real security behind a Government bond is the taxing power of the issuing government. This is limited by the national wealth and the financial responsibility of its people. With the growth of world trade and consequent interweaving interests, the necessity for maintaining a nation's credit has been strongly driven home. England and France have for centuries held their national integrity so high that their obligations have become the criterion for all such securities.

Women Saved The Day For Allied Nations

PARIS, Aug. 24.—The power and strength of women's votes and opinions never was better exemplified than it was, when a large gathering of people from Paris and the provinces assembled in the Champs Ellyses Theatre at the concluding session of the Inter-Allied Women's congress.

The Earl of Derby, the British Ambassador, in an address, related what women had done for England. After his speech he read a letter from David Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, paying tribute to the work of women in the war.

The letter was greeted with tremendous enthusiasm, being considered a guarantee of women suffrage in the future.

The British Prime Minister, David Lloyd George, wrote as follows:

"I am anxious to bear testimony to the tremnedous part played by the women of England in this vital epoch of human history," writes the Premier. "They have not only borne their burden of sorrow and separation with unflinching fortitude and patience, but they have assumed an enormous share of the burdens necessary to the practical conduct of the war.

Women Saved The Day

"If it had not been for the splendid manner in which the women came forward to work in the hospitals and munition factories, in administrative offices of all kinds, and in war work behind the lines, ooften in daily danger of their lives, Great Britain, and I believe, all the Allies would have been unable to withstand the enemy attacks of the past few months. For this service to our common cause, humanity owes them unbounded gratitude.

BERNHARDI'S CORPS BADLY SMASHED

LONDON, Aug. 24.—The present series of eGrman defeats have involved a German officer who is perhaps better known to the reading public of the Allied nations than almost any of the German generals. He commands the Fifty-Fifth Corps of the Sixth Army, which had been steadily driven back by the British across the plain of the Lys toward Armentieres

The corps has been badly hit in endeavoring to hold the Merville salient. It lost many positions, and was badly shaken by the enfilading fire of

BARRACKS AT BARRIEFIELD

It is rumored in Kingston that the contract for the new barracks on Barriefield Commons has been left to an Ottawa firm. The construction of the buildings cals for an expenditure of $300,000, and the work is to be completed in 80 days. The plans call for the erection of 24 frame buildings on mud sills. Eleven of them are 200 feet long and 40 fet wide. The yare to be so arranged as to provide for a parade ground in the centre of the group.

DROPPED 4,500 POUNDS ON HIM

Robert Lundy, aged thirty-eight, received fatal injuries at Ogdensburg at the New York Central dock, while he was assisting to unload baled pulp from the steamer Samuel Marshall. The hoisting engine dropped eight bales, each weighing about 500 pounds, him. His legs and body were badly crushed. Lundy was bending over and did not see the load as it swung over the side of the ship to the dock. The engineer on the hoisting engine could not see Lundy, and he allowed the bales to drop.

CHILD STRANGLED

A very sad accident occurred a few days ago when the young daughter of Mr. Ben. Payne, living just north of Bloomfield, was strangled in a swing and afterwards died of convulsion. The child, who was only a little over two years old, was playing around the swing which had only been erected that morning, when in some way it formed a noose around her neck. When found she was black in the face and died shortly after her rescue.—Trenton Courier.

THE SONG OF THE LAZY FARMER

My neighbor never minds the clock when he is pulling weeds and dock; he goes through every field of his and just tends strictly to his biz, a pullin' out each velvet weed, he never lets ons go to seed. He's getting all tired out and thin—for all the trouble that he's in, a hoein' round each corn and bean so that his crops will all be clean—would bring grey hairs to any man who won't rest easy when he can.

Now I've found out what burs are for, I've got a plan to win the war. We'll ship a vessel load or two—our boys will know just what to do; they'll sneak across and watch their chance, and stick them on the boche's pants. It surely would be lots of fun to see the duggone Germans run. My bumper crop of burs, by heck, will make the Huns a nervous wreck; when Currie's back across the sea, he'll pin a medal onto me!—Bancroft Times.

LT.-COL. ADAMS HOME

After two ytars' absence overseas, Lt.-Col. Milton K. Adams reached Picton on Tuesday afternoon of this week looking well after his extended work in military service in England and France. Col. Adams is certainly entitled to a well earntd rest. He is one of those who has done his bit from the first and his record is one of which the old county is proud. At the begining of the war the Colonel was in charge of the 16th Prince Edward Regiment and at once threw himself into the work of military organization. After a few months he was given a commission as Commanding Officer of the 155th Battalion which was recruited from Hastings and Prince Edward. This battalion went into camp at Kingston in the spring of 1916, going overseas in October. The battalion was broken up and sent to France in drafts, and for some time Col. Adams was in charge of reserve depots in England, going to France in the summer of 1917 where he was area commandant until returning to Canada.

RETURN OF MAJOR WATSON

Major R. M. Watson returned from overseas, has arrived in Kingston. He was accompanied by Col. F. J. Adams, O. C. of the 155th Battalion, and Major Kenney, C. M. G. of a forestry battalion. Major Kenney has two months' furlough. Major Watson was manager of the Bank of Commerce at Smith's Falls, and went overseas as second in command of the 80th Battalion. He was A. P. M. at Whitley and Bramshott camps and was also with the second division for a year. He saw Col. Dawson, formerly O. C. of the 59th Battalion, two months ago. Col. Dawson is doing good work, and is now O. C. of the 46th Battalion. Col. Adams belongs to Picton, and proceeded to his home. Major Kenney was in command of a forestry battalion in England. He was formerly superintendent of agencies of the New York Life Insurance Company at Ottawa. Major Watson's home is in Belleville, but his wife is at present in Montreal visiting relatives. Major Watson is well and favorably known here for his splendid work in connection with the organization of the 80th Battalion His genius for organization was such that overseas he was rated as one of the best officers Imperial or Colonial in this branch of military service.

DISCIPLINING OFFICER.

Major South is taking over duties at the Mowat Hospital, Kingston, as disciplining officer.

GUNNER HOGG KILLED

Another Picton boy has paid the supreme sacrifice and the name of Gunner Lawrence Walter Hogg has been added to the rol' of honor. The message was received that Gunner Hogg had been killed in action in France on August 8th. He enlisted with the Cobourg Heavy Battery early in 1917, going overseas during the summer and reaching France at Christmas time. Since that time he has been on active service and in severe fighting now in progress has given up his life. Gunner Hogg was the only son of Mr. G. H. Hogg, of the Hogg and Lytle Company, Picton, who for the past few years has been managing a branch in this town. His mother and sister, Miss Florence Hogg reside in Toronto, his father being in the city when the message arrived. Gunner Hogg was a young man of ability and his death is deeply deplored by his many friends that he had gained during his stay in Picton.

EXCITING TIME AT MELVILLE

Great excitement prevailed in the vicinity of Consecon Lake last Thursday when wild cries of Fire! Fire! rang over the line. (How all the community heard the news at the one moment can only be understood by rural telephone subscribers.) The neighborhood responded nobly to the call, and the bucket brigade was soon on the scene. All stood aside, however, when they heard of the wheels of what they thought was the Belleville Fire Department, but which on drawing nearer proved to be our noble knight Sir Lancelot, with his crew General French, Lord Hubert and the other brave sons of soil, who dashed up on the erstwhile fire-reels. After valiant efforts on the part of the crew and our esteemed friend Wellington, widly waving his swab on the end of a pitch-fork, in an effort to extinguish the imaginary flames, the amateur firemen discovered that the fire was merely a hallucination caused by Old Sol executing a barn dance on the shingles. Opinion differed as to why "W. H." thought he had seen fire, but the popular idea if that numerous sparks in evidence at the dancing pavilion down the road recently caused him to think that flames certainly were due.

PROUD BOYS

As reported in yesterday's Intelligencer, Russel Clarke of West Belleville, was the successful competitor in the Athletics which took place on East Belleville Playgrounds Thursday afternoon, and carried off Dr. Yeoman's silver medal for boys 13 to 15, scoring the greatest number of points in the various events. D. Ketchesen won the championship for boys 10 to 12 and Miss Boyes medal.

ON THE "ALL STARS"

Pte. G. V. Whitty, of Stirling, Ont., former star hockey player, is reported killed in action on Aug. 9. He was on the all-star junior O.H.A. team of 1913 and 1914 and in 1916 was a member of the Belleville team, runners up for the intermediate O.H.A. championship which was won by Sarnia. Pte. Whitty was then in uniform and went overseas, being wounded at Passchendaele Ridge Nov. 7, 1917. He went back into the trenches in March of this year and was killed in the present offensive.

PTE. M. E. WEESE KILLED.

"I can hardly realize it; I had such a lovely letter from him and when I was reading it, he was dead," said Mrs. M. E. Weese, 124 Atlas avenue, Toronto, speaking of the death of her husband, who was killed in action on August 6th. Pte. Weese enlisted in the 155th Battalion in December, 1915, and went overseas in October, 1916. He was a cook and was stationed at Vitley Camp. Pte. Weese had a son at the front, who returned wounded in April, 1917. Pte. Weese was 36 years old. Before enlisting he was a talcum miner at Madoc, Ont.

BARRACKS AT BARRIEFIELD

It is rumored that the contract for the new barracks on Barriefield common has been let to an Ottawa firm, but the Kingston representative of the Department of Public Works is unable to confirm the statement. If it were true he would know of it. The construction of these buildings calls for an expenditure of $300,000 and the work is to be completed in eighty days and the opinion has been expressed that no local contractor is in a position to fill such a contract, and it is doubtful if any tendered on the whole job. The plans call for the erection of twenty-four frame buildings on mud sills. Eleven of them are two hundred feet long and forty feet wide. are to be so arranged as to provide for a parade ground in the centre of the group.—Kingston Whig.

LAST DAY OF GRACE

To-day is the last day of the amnesty granted defaulters under the Military Service Act. All absentees who present themselves for service before tonight will be given a clean rating. Those who do not report under the terms of this amnesty will be proceeded against and the severe penalties of the law enforced.

OVERSTAYED LEAVE

Gunner Gordon Gilroy from Petawawa artillery camp, who is charged with having overstayed his leave, was arrested last evening and headquarters notified.

CHARGED WITH ARSON

Charged with setting fire to the dwelling house of George Rogers, Lot 8, 9 Con. Elzevir Township, Hannah Sedore, was arrested by County Constable Lew Soules and brought to Belleville. The house was burned in the month of June, 1917.

OPERATED UPON

Lieut. David V. Ketcheson, M. C., son of ex-Mayor Ketcheson, was operated on at Kingston hospital and is making favorable progress. Lieut. Ketcheson was severely wounded while on active service and the operation was necessary as the result of his wounds.

AT WILLOW CAMP

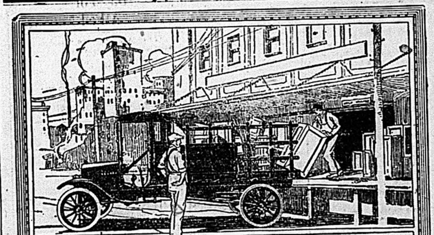
Las night Ernest Potter treated the campers at Jones Creek to a hay-rack ride three miles up the road to a box social held at the Bayside school house. All had an enjoyable time. One feature that will remain long in memory was the beautiful ride home in the moonlight, singing patriotic and other popular songs accompanied by George Wardle on the cornet. Mr. and Mrs. George Jennie spent the half holiday with Mrs. A. Kerr at Willow Cottage.

PTE. MORRIS WOUNDED

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Morris, 94 Station street, city, have been officially notified that their son, Walter Morris, infantry, was admitted to Fifth General Hospital at Rouen, France, on August 11th, with gunshot wound in left leg.

WOUNDED AND MISSING

Sergt. J. M. McGlashan at the Belleville Armories has been notified that Pte. David James McGlashan, infantry, is officially reported wounded and missing August 11. Pte. McGlashan went overseas with the 155th Battalion, and was transferred to another battalion for active service in France. His many friends trust that better news will soon be received from this gallant soldier.



"When Can You Deliver?"

THAT'S the customer's first question, usually. How do you answer him?

Your goods may be superior, your clerks may be courteous, your store attractive, but, after all, unless your deliveries are prompt and dependable, your customers will be disappointed and trade elsewhere next time. Do you realize how many people judge a store by its deliveries?

Is your delivery system on a par with the rest of your business? Does it draw new trade or lose customers for you? Are your horses as suitable for you as they were at one time? If not, why do you persist in being a little behind the times, when a Ford One Ton Truck would be more in line with your other business standards?

Perhaps your deliveries cost you too much. If you are using motor trucks, they may be too heavy for your line of business and therefore too expensive. The Ford Truck uses less fuel when handling a full load than some trucks use running empty.

The Ford One Ton Truck is a money saver, so why not modernize this department of your business at once?

ARTHUR TERRILL

The funeral of Arthur Terrill was held yesterday morning from his late residence in this city, where a brief service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Ramsey, Presbyterian Pastor. The funeral which was largely attended then proceeded to the Friends' church at Wooler, where services were conducted by Rev. Mr. Ramsey. Interment was made in the Friends' burying ground. Many beautiful floral tributes testified to the esteem in which Mr. Terrill was held. The funeral cortege was met at Wooler by a large number of old friends and neighbors, and the following officiated as pall bearers: Messrs L. M. Easterly, P. J. Wessels, D. C. Jones, L. C. McColl, G. R. Hennessey, and W. E. Scott.

ENEMY RESISTANCE CRUMBLES BEFORE VICTORIOUS SWEEP OF ALLIED ARMIES

20,000 PRISONERS TAKEN BY BRITISH SINCE AUG. 21

"STAGGERING FACT," SAYS LONDON DESPATCH, "THAT SINCE YESTERDAY MORNING THE ENEMY HAS SIMPLY DISINTEGRATED OVER A CONSIDERABLE SECTOR"—BRITISH START NEW OFFENSIVE THIS MORNING WITH GOOD RESULTS—SWARMS OF PRISONERS COMING IN, INDICATING THAT MORALE OF GERMAN ARMY IS BADLY SHAKEN—AMAZING SUCCESS OF ALLIED ARMS CONTINUES WITHOUT CHECK, SMASHING THROUGH STRONGEST RESISTANCE OFFERED BY ENEMY — OLD HINDENBURG LINE REACHED.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press Limited.

LONDON, August 26.—We have entered the most dramatic era of the war with such strange suddenness that it is difficult to realize the full extent of its possibilities, says the Reuter correspondent at British headquarters. It is a staggering fact that since yesterday morning the enemy has simply disintegrated over a considerable sector. It is five months ago this very day that the German legions were swarming across the region over which they are now retreating before British forces which probably do not number one-quarter of the horde which opened the "Kaiser's battle." Indeed, when the inner history of these operations can be written the economy of man-power by which such great results have been accomplished will reveal one of the most wonderful features of brilliant generalship.

OLD HINDENBURG LINE REACHED.

LONDON, August 26.—Monchy, Le Prux, Guemappe and Wancourt, a little less than five miles south-west of Arras, have been taken in today's attack. Further south the British have taken Mory and made prisoners. The towns of Monchy, Le Prux Guemappe and Wancourt were on the Hindenburg line as it was prior to the German drive beginning March 21. In this sector the Germans drove the apex of their drive but were held up after the second day of fighting.

This morning's attack was apparently between the Cojeul river and the Scarpe and adds about four miles to the length of the battle front.

FRENCH ARMIES ADVANCE.

In the battle area south of the Somme General Debeney's French army has captured Fresnoy and Le Roye, about three miles north of Roye, according to today's despatch. General Mangin's army has also made a slight advance between the Ailette and the Aisne. Four hundred prisoners were taken by this army yesterday.

BRITISH DRIVE TODAY.

LONDON, August 26.—This morning's attack was launched before the Scarpe river at Fampoux and the heights before Neuville-Vitasse. In a few places the British made an advance of two miles on a front of four miles, according to advices received here from the battle front.

PARIS, Aug. 26.—Heavy bombardments in the region of Roye and between the Oise and Ailette rivers are reported in the official statement today.

ADVANCED FOUR MILES.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—The British lines have been advanced in the direction of Maricourt, four miles northeast of Bray.

With the British Army in France, August 26.—(By Associated Press)—British troops are reported to have reached the outskirts of Suzanne two miles east of Bray-sur-Somme, and Toby, near Cappy, slightly less than two miles southwest of Bray on the south bank of the Somme river. A heavy rain fell last evening. The number of prisoners taken since August 21 has reached twenty thousand.

BRITISH ATTACK THIS MORNING.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(10.00 a.m.)—British troops attacked this morning in the Scarpe sector east of Arras and good progress is being made. The British positions southeast of Mory and west of Groisille have been improved in spite of heavy rain which is falling on the battlefield. Strong German counter-attacks north and south of Bapaume have been repulsed by the British.

FAVREUIL CAPTURED.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Favoreuil, one mile and a half northeast of Bapaume, has been captured and the British have advanced beyond the village, the statement says.

At British Army Headquarters, Aug 25— We have reached the most dramatic area of the war so far, and despite successes, we ought at the present time to temper optimism with caution. Since yesterday morning the enemy has disintegrated over a considerable zone of Somme battlefield. In some places groups of Germans are wandering about, seeking an opportunity to surrender, and at the present the degree of enemy demoralization in certain places is the greatest factor of the situation.

Yesterday the enemy cracked up in the neighborhood of Thiepral Ridge, but we must prepare for his recovery on a strong lineof resistance. The battlefield scene was amazing. Interspersed among such fierce combats as the fight for the famous Laboiselle crater, where the Boches held out the whole day long, but were finally rushed, a bag of two hundred prisoners being secured, were stray vedettes, tired of pointing the way out for straggling Germans to the nearest prisoners' cages. A number of our units abandoned their pre-arranged plans because contact patrols reported their objectives were not being held. In consequence units were ordered to advance without restrictions.

BAPAUME ENTERED

In the early morning we were entering Avesnes-les-Bapaume and airmen reported that our cavalry reconnoitering patrols were entering Bapaume and also Thilloy.

The Australians and the British resumed the advance this morning and reach the Poiserers-Contalmaison line. The inner history of these operations will reveal economy of man-power as one of the most striking features of the present brilliant generalship. The degree of confusion behind the retreating enemy is incredible reinforcements hurrying up, on the stop-gap principle, indicating how desperately the Germans are being pressed, or they would not thus break up their reserves.

To-day's advance has been in the nature of a great sweep from Bray to north of Bapaume. It is estimated that since the 21st of August 20,000 prisoners have been taken by the British. Since the 15th of July, the total of prisoners taken by the allies has reached one hundred thousand. It is reported that guard outposts have reached the fringe of Bullecourt and that we captured Highwood, Eaucourt and L'Abbaye, advancing upon Longueral.

The New Zealanders, with the tanks helping, had a stiff fight clearing out the enemy from Louquart Wood, which dominates Bapaume, but eventually reached the crest, taking over 100 prisoners.

The most significant fact of the present disorganization of the enemy is that there is practically no counter-attacking. To-day there was stubborn resistance, which occurred at various points but when this was broken it nowhere recurred with increased strength.

40,000 Prisoners Taken In Present British Drive

British Front in France, Aug. 25.—Forty-two German divisions have suffered considerable losses in the present British drive, losing 40,000 soldiers, including several hundred officers, in prisoners alone. The capture of one officer and four gunners of an Austrian battery confirms the presence of Austro-Hungarian artillery on the Western front.

C.P.R. Operators Vote To Strike

MONTREAL, Aug. 26—The call for a vote of the proposed strike among commercial telegraphers in the employ of the C. P. R. has resulted in a vote of 98 per cent in favor of this form of protest against the recent award of the conciliation board. Operators in Montreal and Toronto voted en bloc for a strike. The call was sent on telegraphed instructions on Friday evening, and the results came in by wire to-night.

No date for the strike has been mentioned so far, but it was intimated that it would not be long delayed.

Council Meets On Arrival of Borden

Premier presides at Session Within 30 Minutes After and Party Reach Ottawa

OTTAWA Aug. 26—Sir Robert Borden arrived back in Ottawa shortly after noon Saturday. He was met at the station by Lady Borden Hon. Frank Cochrane, Hon. Martin Burrell Hon. Arthur Meighen, Speaker Rhodes, Major-General Biggar and Capt. Ellis of the Militia Department.

The boat on which Sir Robert crossed made her record trip since the war. From port to port she made the trip in the remarkable time of five days and nineteen hours. At one point the lifeboats of a torpedoed steamer were sighted just prior to rescue by patrol boats. Otherwise the crossing was without incident.

Within thirty minutes of his arrival here Sir Robert presided over a meeting of the Cabinet Council. Immediately on leaving the railway station the Prime Minister and party proceeded to the post office, where all registered under the National Registration Act. Sir Robert then went directly to his offices in the East Block and to the Council Chamber.

Major-General Mewburn and Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, who accompanied Sir Robert across the Atlantic did not come directly to Ottawa. Major-General Mewburn left "an Atlantic port" for his home in Hamilton; Mr. Ballantyne proceeded to Montreal. He will later take a brief holiday in St. Andrews.

Army of 4 Million Will be Realized

Gen. March Reports Further Improvements in The Shipping Situation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26—The total number of American soldiers embarked has now passed the 1,500,000 mark, General March, Chief of Staff announced to-day.

Further improvements in the shipping situation was noted, and he said the program of transporting troops to France was going ahead without change.

Gen. Barch said statements he made recently in hearings before the Military Affairs Committee were those of the people. He apparently referred were not intended to raise the hopes of the people. He apparently referred to his testimony that an army of 4,000,000 Americans could win the war next year.

He assured members of the Senate Military Committee at their weekly conference today that stories of great unpublished American casualties overseas are wholly false and that all casualties among the expeditionary forces are given to the public as promptly as cables can transmit them.

This would be a dreary old world if there were no fools in it to make it lively.

COUNTER-OFFENSIVE ON LARGE SCALE SMASHED TO BITS BY MANGIN'S ARMY

ATTACKERS FLUNG BACK BEYOND STARTING POINT

ANOTHER BIG BATCH OF GERMAN PRISONERS TAKEN BY BRITISH FORCES YESTERDAY WITH BIG COLLECTION OF FIELD GUNS — HAIG'S ARMY SWINGS FORWARD TO LONGUEVAL, NORTH OF THE SOMME — NEW BATTLE LINE — GERMAN MILITARY MACHINE BADLY CRACKED AND CONTINUOUS SLEDGE-HAMMER BLOWS OF ALLIED ARMIES DIRECTED BY GENERALISSIMO FOCH GIVES NO TIME FOR RE-ORGANIZATION OF SHATTERED ENEMY FORCES.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

British Headquarters in France, August 26.—Reuter's Limited)—British troops yesterday took another 1,500 prisoners and made a further collection of guns, trench mortars and machine guns. Field Marshal Haig's forces swung forward as far as Longueval in their advance north of the Somme and have captured Orainville.

COUNTER OFFENSIVE SMASHED.

PARIS, August 26.—The Germans today attempted a counter offensive on a large scale against the right wing of General Mangin's army in the region between Vailly and Soissons. The attack utterly failed. General Mangin's army repulsed the German onslaughts everywhere and in some instances gained ground. The French flung back the attacking troops even beyond their starting point.

NEW BATTLE FRONT.

LONDON, August 26.—Fighting is reported proceeding at Heninel. The line of battle, starting with Fampoux on the Scarpe river, follows Monchy, LePrux, Guemappe, Wancourt, Heninel, Croiselles, east of Mory, Favoreuil, Avecnes, Eaucourt, L'Abbe, Martinpuiche, west of Bazentin, LePetit, Mametz, and Gatinoy, and then proceeds to the Somme river just to the west of Maricourt. There is little change south of the Somme except that the British line has been improved to the east of Chuignes.

Fortunes of War Definitely Decided

PARIS, Aug. 26—Premier Clemenceau yesterday telegraphed the Presidents of the General Councils that they could rely upon the Government and Marshal Foch and his magnificent Staff and the allied military Comanders to turn the present success of the allied arms into a decisive and complete collapse for the enemy.

"The splendid victories of recent weeks," said M. Clemenceau, "in which the spirit of our allies has so magnificently rivalled ours, has definitely settled the fortune of war. The enemy, bewildered, deceived himself as to his own strength and now is finding out that he underestimated us.

"The results achieved are the first fruits of our harvest of rewards, the highest of which will be having delivered the world from ruthless oppression and brutality."

The body of Lottie Devins, Woodbridge, who was drowned August 10, was found at the foot of Dowling ave., Toronto.

Soldiers are put to work loading vessels at Montevideo. They take the place of strikers who refused to obey a Government order to go back to their jobs.

How Czar's Son Was Murdered

LONDON, Aug. 26—The Daily Mail Prince who recently arrived in Eng- Czar was killed by the Bolsherikis they assassinated his son, who would Russia, but the Prince gives the first trustworthy details. He says the murderers of the Czar went to his he and said, "We have killed your father, a dog's death for a dog." The Czarevitch burst into tears, whereupon one of the band shot the boy dead with his revolver.

Returned Soldier in Hospital Wife's Body in the Morgue

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

HAMILTON, August 26.—Mrs. John Miller, of Waterdown, Ont., lies dead in the morgue, having drowned herself in the town mill-pond, and her husband, who is a returned soldier, is in the hospital with a bullet through his temple. He may recover but will lose his sight. The shooting occurred at four o'clock this morning, and the woman told her mother, who was in another room, that John shot himself. Shortly afterwards her body was found in the pond. The couple apparently lived happily together.

Called By Death

AGNES DONOVAN

At Hotel Dieu, Kingston, yesterday, Miss Agnes Donovan, of this city, passed away after being ill for some time from lung trouble. Deceased was 24 years of age and was a daughter of the late Mr. John Donovan of Belleville. She was a member of St. Michael's Church. Three weeks ago, Mrs. Garrison, a sister of the deceased died here.

GEORGE HAYNES

Word was received in the city today announcing the death of Mr. Geo. Haynes a former well-known Bellevillian, which occurred yesterday at Midland, Ontario. Deceased, who was 52 years of age, was a son of the late Mr. Emmanuel Haynes. He was a G. T. R. Engineer having been such for a number of years. A few years ago he removed from Belleville to Midland where he had since resided. Mr. Haynes was a member of Midland Lodge A.F.&A.M. and Belleville Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 81. He was a member of the Anglican Church and highly respected by all who knew him. A widow, one son, Russell, who is overseas with a battery, and one daughter, Miss Grace survives. The body will will be brought to this city and taken to the residence of his brother-in-law, Mr. D. Watkins, who resides on 17 Queen Street.

Heroic Families Are In Want

Dependents of Merchant Sailors Appeal to Canada For Aid

When the history of the war comes to be written some of the brightest pages will be found recording the deeds of the Merchant Seamen. Day by day and week by week, in spite of the submarine, the floating mine, and the most destructive devices known to maritime warfare, the merchant men ply the ocean and carry munition supplies and food "over there." Regardless of every peril 300,000 merchant seamen still "carry on"; fifteen thousand of them have already paid the price of their bravery. As members of an unofficial service, governments make provisions for them. Right or wrong, it is a fact that their dependents have no one to look to but a grateful nation. "Sailors' Week" is a Dominion-wide campaign to raise funds to relieve the distress of these widows and orphans of the sea. Ontario is asked to raise $1,000,000. Give generously, for these men gave their lives for you.

A COURT FOR A COLONEL

MONTREAL, Aug. 26—A general court-martial has been ordered to inquire into certain charges against Lt.-Col. Daly Gingras D.S.O. Officer Commanding the 2nd Depot Battalion 2nd Quebec regiment in reference to financial affairs.

Lt.-Col. Gingras was a captain of the 61st Montmagny Regiment and qualified as a staff officer at the outset of the war. He went overseas with the 22nd French-Canadian Battalion was promoted major on the field and later won the D. S. O. for gallant conduct in action. He was wounded severely and was invalided home about a year ago. After recovery he was promoted lieutenant-Colonel and appointed to the 2nd Battalion of the 2nd Quebec Regiment.

MONTREAL DEFAULTERS FILL WHOLE BATTALION

MONTREAL, Aug. 24.—Today is the last day of grace for men who have omitted to enlist under the Military Service Act, and a feature of the situation here was the rush of men to join the colors, both at the 1st Depot Battalion, at the Guy Street Barracks, and at the 2nd Depot Battalion at the Peel Street Barracks. It was stated that well over a thousand defaulters had taken advantage of the amnesty during Thursday and Friday, and the number of men reporting shows no signs of letting up.

HUN PROPAGANDA IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK, Aug. 26—Six men and one woman were arrested by federal authorities in a raid on what is believed to be the headquarters of distributors of seditious propaganda literature.

The prisoners were held in connection with the circulation of pamphlets entitled, "Hypocrisy of the United States and the Allies," which were thrown from house tops on the lower east side last night, and distributed at a big Socialistic gathering in Harlem. A large quantity of the circulars were seized. According to the police the defendants are associated with the Russian Bolsheviki.

MAROONED ON ISLAND.

Terrible Experiences of Two Settlers In Northern Ontario.

Marooned on an islet in Lake Rimy, without food, without the means of catching a fish, or shooting a passing bird, even without matches, Joe Pelletier and George Imbau suffered the agony of slow starvation for thirteen days. When rescued by a search party they were in a state of collapse and unable at first to tell their story, but the state of the shrubbery on the island was an eloquent testimony to their sufferings. The leaves were plucked off, the twigs broken, even the grass on the shallow soil had been torn up for food. A few days' care partially restored the men, and Pelletier is now on the way to complete recovery. Imbau, unfortunately, ate a big meal of moose meat before he was able to endure such heavy diet, and died from the effects.

Lake Rimy is situated about three miles from Moonbeam, a station on the National Transcontinental Railway, some 50 miles west of Cochrane. The lake is about 15 miles long and seven or eight miles wide. It teems with fish, and plenty of big game is found along its shores. About a mile from the shore is an unnamed islet scarcely larger than the backyard of a city home. A great rock rises in the middle of it, and there is a growth of small shrubs, but no trees upon it. This was the scene of an adventure, which, for unmixed horror, could scarcely be surpassed, and experience endured within four miles of a railway station.

Pelletier and Imbau, who were bachelors living near Moonbeam, French settlers from the Lake St. John country, determined to celebrate Dominion Day by a three days' hunting and fishing trip. They made no secret of their intentions and the inhabitants of the village knew that they intended to cross the lake and go up one of the streams entering it.

They loaded fishing tackle, guns, ammunition, three days' food, and ordinary hunting supplies in a canoe and set out in reasonably good weather. Little was thought about the fact that they did not return within the time they had set. But when four, five, and, at last, six days had passed the men's friends grew anxious and organized a search party. The whole district was combed, without result. The island was passed on the way out, but no one dreamed of landing on it. On the thirteenth day the dejected and returning party called at the island, more by impulse than design, and the lost men were found.

When Pelletier recovered he said that he and his partner, while passing the island, resolved to go ashore for no particular reason. One of them got out of the canoe without trouble, but the other, in stepping upon the rock, slipped. The canoe was kicked away and before it could be secured was caught by the wind and blown out of reach. Little is said by Pelletier of his experiences. They were not such as could be easily described, but the imagination is staggered by contemplation of them. The weather for the most part was bad. There the men were—helpless, raging, despairing, without shelter and without food, for thirteen weary days. It is a miracle that they survived the experience. Men less inured to the wilderness and to its hardships would have succumbed long before the search party arrived.

Catching Up to Us.

The New York Commercial states that the United States is second to Canada in supplying farm machinery to Australia and its position in the trade is steadily improving. Eleven million dollars' worth of such machinery is required annually by Australian farmers, of which seven million dollars' worth is manufactured at home and four million dollars' worth imported.

While the present demand for farm machinery is substantial the fact is that in the normal course of events Australia is destined to become a much more attractive market for such articles. The increasing efficiency of farm tractors should eventually prove a most important factor in developing the agricultural resources of the country. In spite of the present difficulties in the path of the average American manufacturer, the market deserves the utmost attention, especially on the part of those who produce a fair number of the machines most favored by the Australian farmer.

The home manufacturers are favored by the fact that much of the land is not cleared of stumps, so that a stump-jump feature is a necessity in most implements. Canadian and American manufacturers have never been obliged to specialize on such a feature, whereas the Australian manufacturer has given it attention for years. This and other disadvantages and advantages are discussed at length in an American Government report for the benefit of manufacturers and exporters who are planning to extend their Australian and New Zealand trade as soon as normal conditions are restored.

Facing Vast Army.

Few Canadians are alive to the fact that we are menaced by an army greater than that which is menacing Europe at present, writes a Judge contributor. All over the country it is springing up, in the fields, in the cities, at the seashore. Its members require no training, they are perfect in their art from birth. They have no flag and no leader. They are encumbered with no baggage trains and have no lines of communication to keep open. Being ignorant of death, they do not fear it and the most frightful slaughter does not dismay them. With lightning rapidity, they move from place to place, so that they seem to be everywhere. There are no slackers in this army. Each member is firmly alive to the necessity of doing his bit. Like the leaves of the tree, of the stars of the milky way, they are innumerable. Swiftly, silently they have arrived at our very gates. The mosquito is here.

A busy person isn't necessarily industrious. Gossips are always busy.

Neighborly sympathy often turns out to be about nine-tenths curiosity.

Expect Invasion Of The Rhine Provinces

Dutch Woman Says Impression Gathered in Germany One of Real Despair

LONDON, Aug. 26—The German population along the Rhine expects an allied invasion in the opinion of a Dutch woman of German descent who has just returned to Amsterdam from visiting relatives in a small village near Bonn on the Rhine. In a statement to the Amsterdam correspondent of the Daily Express she said:

"The impression gathered from what I saw and heard in Germany was one of real despair. In spite of what the newspapers say or do not say, the German retirement in the west is making the worst possible impression, especially along the Rhine. The people there will be the first to be hit if the allies ever come.

"The idea that German soil is to remain inviolate to the last has disappeared completely and on the Rhine everbody expects a foreign invasion sooner or later. Many families are preparing to leave for Central Germany.

The ravages of allied aircraft are simply terrific. When you read: "There was some material damage,' it means that whole streets were torn up with a heavy casualty list to complete the picture.

GOODS ARE GETTING SCARCE.

We recently wrote a manufacturer urging the delivery of a line of goods long since due us and the following was his reply:

Keep your temper, gentle sir,
Writes the Manufacturer;
Though your goods are overdue
For a month, or maybe two,
Labor's scarce and looms are rare.
Can't get yarn, can't get dyes,
These are facts—we tell no lies.

"MY IRISH CINDERELLA"

A good wholesome play with plenty of action, comedy and romance, is "My Irish Cinderella" which comes to Griffin's Theatre next Wednesday night.

It tells the story of the adventures in this country and abroad of Peggy McNeil, a little Irish girl, who has been raised in the poor house. She, of course, is not well versed in the ways of the world, but her brain is keen and her heart is true and she cleverly distinguishes between the real and artificial things of life.

She has been taken to London by the nephew of the Earl of Lonsdale, who is plotting to get control of the estates of the Earl, and there are scenes which are almost melodramatic in their intensity and which lead to a big climax. Every audience which sees "My Irish Cinderella" follows with closest attention the plot against the Earl and the efforts of the plotters to fasten a crime on Peggy.

Miss Daisy Carleton, as Peggy has been surrounded with an excellent company of players, and a big scenic production is carried.

CIRCUS STORY AT GRIFFIN'S

For the first two days of this week Enid Bennett, who has become quite a favorite with local audiences, will be seen in a story that she has never before attempted to work in, a circus story. Everyone likes the circus so the author in writing this story took this into consideration and wrote a story that everyone could understand. Miss Bennett plays the part of a young girl, the daughter of a circus owner, who is sending her to college. During her attendance at the college she meets an aristocratic young fellow who unlike the usual aristocratic time waster, is a practical young fellow with a business turn of mind. They just naturally have to fall in love with one another and from this point on they have all kinds of joys and sorrows in their courtship. The girl saves the circus from rioters, which every circus man is used to, especially in the Southern States, and the young fellow through his organizing ability manages to put the show on the road after it has gone through many disappointments, through bad weather and other troubles so well known to all circus men. The story is a logical one and a great American Circus is used as the background of the story.

DOCTOR COULD NOT HELP HER

But Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her from a Serious Operation.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I suffered something dreadful from a displacement and two very bad attacks of inflammation. My doctor said he could do nothing more for me and I would have to go to the hospital for an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have entirely cured me of my troubles and I am now in good health. I am willing you should use my testimonial and hope to benefit other suffering women by so doing."—Mrs. F. Platt, 9 Woodbine St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Operations upon women in our hospitals are constantly on the increase, but before submitting to an operation for ailments peculiar to their sex every woman owes it to herself to give that famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial. If complications exist write Lydia E.

AVENGED HIS BROTHER.

Sequel to Famous Story of German Brutality.

The sergeant of the Canadians whose reported crucifixion after the second battle of Ypres in 1915 aroused such interest, has been amply avenged. His brother joined the Newfoundland regiment where he is now sergeant-major. He received what he considers ample confirmation of the crucifixion, which actually took place, having seen the man who took the bayonets from the body which was fastened against a door.

This brother has shown the most extraordinary daring in winning decorations and promotion by his passionate offensives at every opportunity against the Germans. During a period of trench war he went out night after night, crawling up to the German lines, bombing and sniping. During the Somme fighting he received the D.C.M. and Croix de Guerre for his conspicuous gallantry and resource.

On October, 1916, near Guedecourt, when reaching the enemy's parapet, he saw a hostile machine gun coming into action and threw a bomb which killed three of the crew. Then he jumped upon the machine gun crew, bayoneting the remaining six despite serious wounds, and finally bayoneting one giant German before he himself, blinded and almost helpless from loss of blood, fell to the ground. He received thirteen wounds before the fighting finished.

"Whenever he sees Germans he sees red. The vision of his crucified brother is ever in his mind," said one of his officers.

Not Accident, But Plot.

Having mastered the secret of vicious psychological suggestion, the Germans made such headway in Russia as to pave the way for the conquest of the world. It is possible that they have even discovered climatic secrets of meteorology hidden from free nations. Battle weather has been on the side of our enemy. Having adroitly arranged the downfall of Russia the Italians were betrayed. Wherever the Italian and Austrian armies met our ally's army showed the better men. But the Papist clericals planted the seed that enabled the socialistic pacifists of Upper Italy and the simple soldiers of certain regiments, wearied with the war, to betray Gen. Cadorna. Self-interest and sensuality were the lures provided by Germany for the corruption and destruction of Russia and part of Cadorna's army. As it was in 1588 so it is now. Not by accident but by design the Province of Quebec fought like a wild cat to avoid conscription at the very moment when the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Melbourne attempted to play the same game. Sinn Fein and Nationalist Ireland threatens rebellion if conscription comes to pass. All part of the same plan. The Irishmen claim to be left with the women and children while the English and Scots are sent to the front. This is a war of purification. It is futile to shut our eyes to the fact that our thirty thousand uninterned sensual civilian Germans are at large to form the business garrison of a conquered England. — "Vanoc" in London Referee.

Another 100,000 Men?

The character and extent of Canada's continued participation in the war will be one of the subjects to be considered by the Government when the Prime Minister and his colleagues come home with first-hand information from the Inner Councils as to the need of the situation.

The Military Service Act limits to one hundred thousand men the number of men which can be raised from its operation. With upwards of seventy thousand already secured it is expected, and also apparent, that by fall the full quota will have been obtained.

The question then will arise as to whether the limit is to be raised. If it is not, the specific limitation to one hundred thousand will probably be removed.

In some quarters the proposal has been advanced that another hundred thousand should be authorized, but the matter has never been officially considered. In the natural course of events all will depend upon how the military situation develops in the coming months and the extent to which reinforcements are needed. The Premier, as a member of the War Cabinet, will be fully advised as to what is called for overseas, while the man power essential to domestic requirements will be a big consideration in any further policy to be determined.

Canadian and American Soldiers.

"Man for man our soldiers have a higher moral standard than the men of any army of any other nation engaged in the war; and when in this connection I speak of our soldiers of Canada as well as the sodiers of the United States. Any man who tells you the contrary is a liar, and the truth is not in him. This is not an offhand alibi; statistics compelled by our own surgeons form the truth of it; and any man who stands up anywhere on our continent and says that the soldiers who have come from our side of the Atlantic to help lick Germany are contracting habits of drunkenness or that they are being ruined by the spreading of sexual diseases among them utters a deliberate and a cruel slander against North American manhood which should entitle him to a suit of tar and feather underwear and a free ride on a rail out of any community." —I. S. Cobb, in Saturday Evening Post.

Ready for Emergency.

"An optimist looks on the bright side of things."

"Yes, and if he is a real optimist he tries to carry a little mental polish and shine up the dark side now and then."

A GREAT FIGHTER.

Sergt.-Major Robinson Has Seen Forty Years' Service.

Sergt.-Major "Jimmie" Robinson enjoys the distinction of being the first Canadian to win the D.C.M. in the Great War. He is a veteran of veterans, for despite the fact that his abundance of black hair, his ruddy health-betokening face and his alertness and vigor, mark him as a sturdy man in the early forties at most, he is in reality considerably older, with a service record covering just about forty years and including no fewer than five foreign campaigns with the colors.

He was through the Zulu War of 1879 with Lord Chelmsford's 94th Regiment, now the 2nd Connaught Rangers. He fought also in the Seckakunia campaign of the same year under Sir Garnet, afterwards Lord Wolsley. He went through the first Boer War of 1881, including the siege of Pretoria, with Gen. Bellair. He was in the South African war of 1899-1902 with a Natal Indian regiment, with the Imperial Light Infantry and with the Prince of Wales' Light Horse. His peacetime service includes soldiering with the 2nd Royal Dublin Fusiliers in India, from 1884 to 1889; in the Rocky Mountain Rangers at Nelson, B.C.; with the 104th New Westminster Fusiliers; and with the Hart-McHarg Company of the 6th Duke of Connaught's Own Rifles at Vancouver.

He went out for the first time in the present war with the 7th Battalion of the 1st British Columbia Regiment, 1st Canadian Expeditionary Force, under Hart-McHarg, succeeded by Brig.-Gen. Odlum. He was also with George McSpadden, 11th Irish Fusiliers of Canada, being twice in France and in the thick of events. His D.C.M. was won at Ypres in April, 1915, two months prior to which he was mentioned in despatches, Feb. 15, for conspicuous daring and gallantry.

"The Old War Horse," as Sergt.-Major "Jimmie" is affectionately christened in the West, was born on Oct. 31, 1857, at Port a'Down, in the County Armagh, being the oldest son of the late John Robinson, and, like his father before him, he has been prominent in Orange circles all his life. He was first a member of No. 417, Lord Ranfurley's Purple Banner Lodge, and latterly with Britannia L.O.L., Vancouver, for which he was the principal speaker at this year's 12th of July gathering, the associated guest of honor being Gen. John Hughes.

Captured an Aviator.

How a captain of the Canadian Forestry Corps captured an aviator and plane is told me by his comrades. He was awakened at midnight by the hum of a machine over the clearing where his hut was, and rushing out into the moonlight, clad in brilliant hued pyjamas, topboots and armed with revolver, he saw a large plane evidently in difficulties. The machine just managed to dodge the tops of the trees and circled round looking for a better landing. The Forestry officer followed through the woods until it came to earth half a mile away.

He arrived as the pilot was extricating himself, and in fluent German, backed by the point of the revolver, called on the aviator to hold up his hands, and with visions of honors and awards marched his prisoner back, plying him with questions in German, to which he could only get staccato replies of Ya, Nein. They arrived at the mess, where other officers in uniform were, and the captive looked in surprise and asked in English:

"Are you British?" On the affirmative answer, he delightfully declared:

"Well, I'm French," and to prove it he pulled off his leather flying overalls, and showed a light blue uniform.

"I thought he was German," he exclaimed, pointing to the pyjama-clad captor. The mistake was soon forgotten in the hospitality of the camp, and next day the Forestry Corps salved the machine.

"The Only Way" or "C'est la guerre."

A Canadian soldier stood moodily on the banks of an icy stream, somewhere in what has been called "Sunny" France. Its black water lapped the steep clay banks with weird, whispering noises. Despair was written deeply on the man's face. Hope had fled from his soul! So has many an unfortunate lingered one final moment on the tragic banks of the Seine.

But this river—how cold! Wrung with indecision, the man shivered as he contemplated the light flickering across the ripples. How wretched to be found so! If Madame had only been kind, instead of refusing him so coldly. Now nothing remained, but the river. Well, thank God, the dregs of his once strong courage would suffice for this deed. He would show them all.

"If the old lady won't heat any water, I'll simply have to wash here," he exclaimed, as he took the plunge. "Ugh! B-r-r-r!"

Checkmated.

The workers at Henry Ford's Canadian plant determined recently to strike for higher wages, contradicting the well advertised idea that to be a Ford employe is to attain the millennium. Before the plan could be carried out, the works were closed and the prospective strikers summarily discharged.

So Near and Yet—

A tree not fifty feet from the clubhouse of the Sandwich Golf and Country Club was split in twain by lightning a few nights ago, a party of golfers sheltering from the rain experiencing "a tingling sensation" but suffering no injury.

Farmers Ruined.

Many farmers of the Fraser Valley report themselves virtually ruined by the late street car strike which prevented the marketing of their fruit crops while they were in condition to be sold.

TRIBUTE TO OUR MEN.

Behaviour While Overseas Has Been Highly Praised.

The following has been received by the Militia Department at Ottawa from Sir Edward Kemp, Minister of Overseas Military Forces of Canada:

"The finest behaved soldiers that we have to deal with." This is the reply of an Imperial authority responsible for the conduct of all soldiers in London to the question, "How do the Canadian soldiers conduct themselves in London?"

From time to time statements are circulated in Canada which tend to give the impression that all is not well with our troops overseas. One time it takes the form of criticizing the Pay Corps; another time it is Argyll House; still another time it involves the behaviour of the troops at the front, or in London or elsewhere. They are always at variance with the fact. It is a coincidence that those who start such tales are usually men who have failed to make good, and who desire to pull the rest of the world down to their level.

The Imperial authorities are not only unanimous about the splendid conduct of the Canadian men, but pay equal homage to the administration of the Canadian overseas forces. "We could not ask for better, abler, and straighter men to work with. The Canadian headquarters do everything possible to assist us, and, of course, we reciprocate, the results of cooperation working out most successfully."

Regarding the conduct of the Canadian troops in both England and France, it will be reassuring to know that the percentage of crime is less than it is in the army in Canada, and than it was in towns in the Dominion before the war.

A very senior British officer just returned from long service in France and now connected with the Provost Marshal's staff in London, in reply to a question regarding the conduct of troops, said: "I don't know much about your men here, but they are without doubt the best troops we have in France—best behaved, smartest and keenest."

The Canadian Provost Marshal and his staff have the reputation for being an exceedingly able and efficient force. They work on the basis that a man is innocent until the evidence proves him guilty. An old offender fares hard with them, but a boy gone wrong is given a sharp jerk up. He is shown the error of his ways and the right course is pointed out to him.

But the number of criminals and wrong-doers in the Canadian force is remarkably small—smaller according to the Imperial authorities than in any other force—even the Guards. This, it is said, is largely due to the splendid moral standard pertaining in our army, but the work done by the provost marshal's department is also an important factor.

The Canadian Provost Marshal's staff in London, England, is composed as follows:

Major G. S. Clifford, of Calgary, Alta., A.P.M.; Capt. R. Corbett, of Victoria, B.C.; Capt. J. F. Wandless, of Toronto, Ont., and Major F. C. Turner (temporary attached), of British Columbia.

All members of the staff (with the exception of two clerks), who are not physically fit, had overseas service. Some of them have as many as four "wound" stripes.

Canadian Nurses Two First Citizens.

The first women to win American citizenship under the new law granting immediate naturalization to army nurses are two Canadians, Miss Laura Master, a native of New Hamburg, Ont., and Miss Leola Colquhoun, of Morrisburg, Ont. They received their citizenship papers at Camp Dix along with a class of almost 1,000 foreigners called into the American nation at the close of the ceremony conducted in the Liberty Theatre by Federal Judge J. Warren Davis.

"The Government is granting you this honor because Americans believe there is no more noble work than that in which you and your associates are engaged. We are glad that you are going to do this work under the Stars and Stripes and as Americans," Judge Davis told the nurses.

The young women while training at Chicago Hospital enlisted as American nurses and were assigned to the base hospital here. Miss Master decided to become a nurse after seeing every able-bodied man among her relatives, to the number of fifty, enlist in Canadian or American forces.

Use Canadian Coal.

Up until a few months ago Japan supplied the islands of Hawaii with most of their supplies of coal. During the year 1916 Hawaii imported 87,939 tons of coal, exclusive of the requirements of the army and navy. The bulk of this came from Japan, no shipments having been made from Canada, and only one or two from Australia. In 1917 Japan and Australia failed to maintain their coal trade with the islands on account of shortage of cargo space. The United States, for the same reason, was unable to ship to this field. As a result of this famine the Hawaiian Islands turned to Canada for a supply of coal, and were able to buy about 50,000 tons from the Pacific coast coal companies at high prices. It is reported that nearly all the coal used on the islands now is of Canadian origin. It is to be hoped that Canadian merchants will take advantage of present conditions to retain this new business.

The New Licensing System.

Canada's new system of license control over dealers involves more than 23,500 wholesalers and 80,000 retailers, the latter including 30,000 grocers, 16,000 butchers, 50,000 restauranteurs, 5,000 bakers, 4,500 fruiterers, 2,000 fishmongers and 4,000 produce merchants.

HAVE YOU Thought About It?

If you buy from a mail-order house, who will take an interest in setting up your stove properly?
If you buy from a mail-order house, how can you tell whether the stove will look as good to you as the picture of it did?
A stove calls for special knowledge in making—sometimes a poor stove looks well—so beware of the department store mail-offer.
Buy from stove specialists.
Beware of the dealer who juggles his price. It will pay you to be sure you get the Gurney-Oxford—the only stove sold with the maker's unqualified money-back guarantee.
Our way is the only fair way—and it is the short cut to stove satisfaction.

Our Guarantee

If your stove for any reason fails to give satisfactory results we agree to refund the price paid us on this stove, any time within 100 days of the time of purchasing.

WELL KNOWN HORSEMAN PASSES AWAY AT GALT.

Galt, Aug 23.—Geo. F. Stevens, one of the best-known horsemen in the province, died suddenly during the night from heart trouble, from which he had been suffering for years. The late Mr. Stevens was born in Galt about 50 years ago and had lived here all his life. His hobby was the horse and horse racing, with which he had been identified since a boy, driving in races at the age of sixteen. He campaigned such well-known horses as George S., Berlin and Glen Grit down the Grand Circuit, and was always the possessor of a fast trotter. He was well-known in horse show circles, having driven the entries of Miss K. L. Wilkes for years. It was largely due to his efforts that Galt obtained Manchester track, one of the best dirt tracks in Canada.

EAT HORSE MEAT!

CALGARY, August 26—After a thorough discussion of the question utilizing the horse, especially those of the scrub variety, and those, who through lameness were unfit for work, for human food, a joint meeting of the Alberta Horse, Cattle, Sheep and Swine Breeders' Association passed a unanimous resolution calling the attention of the Dominion Government to the advisability of removing these horses from the range in order to permit the better class of horses, cattle, sheep and swine, to have the feed now being consumed by them, and at the same time, to supply food to a large number of the allied netural countries who are accustomed to eat

STRONG N.Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK Aug. 24—The Evening Sun's financial review to-day says:

Considerable buying power manifested itself in to-day's short session of the stock market which was unwontedly strong and animated for a Saturday. The upward movement was in evidence at the outset but it did not attain its full development until the end of the first hour when Steel crossed 114 a new high for this year in the van of the rest of the industrial list which was not backward. The market for rails was narrow but three or four of the most active issues made very good gains, several achieving new high record prices for the year, notably St. Paul at above fifty. Union Pacific at above 127, and Canadian Pacific at 167. Reading also made a good showing, crossing 91. The leather group, Marine pref. and others were strong.

The feature of the later trading was heavy buying of Steel in large blocks at a price close to 114. This movement carried the entire list forward, in most cases to the highest levels of the session. Union Pacific touched 128, and St. Paul pref. went through 80, Canadian Pacific leaped to 170.

ANZACS CAPTURE BIG GERMAN GUN

PARIS, Aug. 26—Australian troops during the recent fighting have captured a heavy German 280-millimetre (11.02 inch) gun. From a captured document it appears that this gun, which is of recent model, and with a range of 18 miles, had been intended for use in the bombardment of Amiens. It was mounted on a railway train and with it was captured its complete ammunition supply. It has been brought to Paris where the public will be allowed to inspect it.

KAISER THANKS BISHOPS

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 26—Replying to a letter of homage from the conference of bishops, at Fulda, a town in Hesse-Nassau, the German Emperor is quoted by the German newspapers as saying:

"It fills me with satisfaction and confidence that I can always rely on the assistance and co-operation of the bishops.

"Let us strengthen in our people a recognition of the dangers threatening from our enemies; a firm determination to overcome all that is burdensome and a strong faith in the Lord's help and in our strength. Then, I am convinced, Germany will be invincible and the future will be ours."

The true secret of physical beauty is to be born pretty.

EDUCATING THE EDITORS.

The serene and methodical plodders of staid old English officialdom must be shocked beyond measure at the introduction of Yankee "git-up-and-git" and modern progressiveness which is shaking the dust from centuries of slow and tedious precedent. "Kitchener's Mob" was raised by modern advertising methods, until the war, unknown in England; now the British Government is educating the press of the Dominions overseas by taking parties of representative editors to the war zone, showing them every department of war effort from the Grand Fleet in its ceaseless vigil of keeping the Geman fleet bottled up and the submarine menace from becoming effective, to the trenches of France. On land and sea and air the strength of the Allies is shown to the editors from the various Dominions overseas and the wonderful awakening of Britain to the peril of the hour is shown in vivid "close-ups" which no amount of reading would disclose.

These trips to the British Isles, France and Belgium can not fail to be of great benefit to the cause of Empire in laying bare the stupendous war problems and magnificent achievements made possible by the unity of purpose and sympathetic assistance of the Dominions beyond the seas with its great motherland in the day of trial.

If some method could now be devised to educate some stay-at-home editors in the virtue of charity and truthfulness, to the eradication of petty jealous bickering and back-biting, the combined results would be most beneficial. The querulous comments of some Canadian newspapers upon the overseas trip of representative journalists of Canada is unedifying, to say the least.

RAIDERS OFF NOVA SCOTIA.

The German submarines are bringing the war close to Canada by their attacks on the fishing fleet off Nova Scotia. It is reported that the Maritime Fish Corporation, which is one of the largest companies operating in Nova Scotia, has lost its whole fleet, consisting of some ten steam trawlers and tenders. It will be hailed in Berlin as another great and glorious German victory, says the Toronto News. Despite the presence of the Grand Fleet and myriads of submarine chasers and patrol boats Great Britain has never been able to prevent the attacks on the fishing fleets in the North Sea. It is not then to be wondered at that the Hun raiders have been able to evade so far the fast boats which are hunting them along the thousands of miles of coast of the Maritime Provinces. The Canadian fishermen can be depended upon to show the same indomitable courage in the face of danger as the fishermen of Scotland and England. No military advantage can be gained by this raid on the Canadian coast, although there will be temporary embarrassment to a profitable and necessary industry. The submarines will be caught; it will be but a matter of time.

PREVENTING BARN FIRES.

This is the season when the list of farmers' barns destroyed by fire becomes unusually heavy. From January 1 to September 30, 1917, there were 788 barn fires in Ontario, entailing a loss of $791,247.00. The question again arises, "Do lightning rods protect from fire by lightning?" a question upon which opinion is sharply divided. In this connection the following comment upon barn fires in a report of the Provincial Fire Marshal's department should prove of value to farmers and others who have valuable barns, with contents of even greater value at this season of the year:

> Between June 1st, 1917, and the day on which this is written (October 22nd, 1917) we have investigated or have had special reports made upon no less than 211 barn fires, and we can therefore speak with some degree of authority on some phases of the cause of such fires.
>
> Of the total of 211 investigated fires, 13 of the barns affected were equipped with lightning rods, but only two of the fires in such barns were caused by lightning. We gave particular care to a full examination of these two cases because of the apparent failure of the rods, and we have determined that in one case the whole equipment was out of order and it was well known to the farmer that two of the conductors had been completely severed where they entered the ground; the equipment in the case was therfore not only completely useless but it would have been better had it been altogether removed.
> In the second case which occurred in Hastings County on the 19th September, 1917, we have a much more interesting case. Prof. W. H. Day, our recognized lightning rod authority, who had all the reports sent to him, sums up this case in the following words:
> "It brings out very forcibly the value of our instructions that the ground rods should not run from the peak but from the eaves. It appears that this stroke hit the building part way down between the peak and the eaves, and in such cases there is absolutely no chance of the current going upward to the peak to get on the ground rod. Rodding men who have been adhering to the old method of ground from the peak have argued with us time and again that there was no possibility of a stroke occuring part way down the roof as we claim. This example is a concrete answer, and is another case that demonstrates very clearly the importance of our recommendation that buildings should be grounded from the eaves and all water spouts grounded."
> The answer to the question "Do lightning rods protect from fires by lightning?" is unmistakably answered in the affirmative by our records and investigations of this year as also in the work we commenced last year.
> The question now is what is to be done to profit by the conclusion we must reach? Much could be accomplished by differential rating of farm properties when STANDARD lightning rods are erected and maintained.

We print the reports of the German War Office on the front page because we have no comic supplement, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

The Germans have again withdrawn their lines according to prearranged plans—of Foch, remarks the New York World.

Those who do not believe that we should invade Germany should remember, says the New York Morning Telegraph, that the only way the Hun will know it is time to stop fighting is by his watch on the Rhine.

Our calm and conservative students of the situation who keep warning us in their solemn way not to expect too much don't seem to realize how much fun expecting it, says the Columbus Journal.

White rats, pigeons, puppy dogs, little pigs and big pigs, were included among the offerings noticed on Belleville market one morning recently. No one can complain of lack of variety on the home market, but while there is variety in offerings there is a remarkable uniformity in prices.

School days will soon be here as a reminder that another summer is rapidly drawing to a close. New books and new clothes will now add to the domestic financial complications caused by the problem of paying for the winter's fuel supply. One thing we have to be thankful for we don't have to

"Some" Drive.

Cobalt Nugget.

It is all in the way one looks at things. Yesterday the Nugget displayed in its window a war bulletin announcing that the total German casualties were now over six millions.

"By gosh," said one man, who was studiously reading the bulletins over audibly, "that sure was some drive."

Veterans as Fishermen.

Vancouver World.

The plan submitted to the Burrard Unionist meeting for reserving certain fisheries for returned soldiers will evoke enthusiasm from all who have given thought to the perlpexing problem of caring for the returned fighting man.

Unlike land settlement schemes, with their problems of long preparation, slow returns, hard toil and problematical results, the plan outlined permits of the instant enlisting of the soldier in the commercial army, of a ready harvest for his gleaning, of a sure market for his product, of a convalescence, and of a home under conditions and near to centres with which he is familiar.

From the standpoint of the province it heralds little groups of fishing and gardening settlements, where every man may, in addition to a lucrative calling, carried out in safe and sheltered waters, have as well his home with its plot of well-tilled garden. It provides the nucleus of that seafaring race upon which we will have to call for the Canadian marine of the future, both naval and mercantile.

The Future Will Show.

Toronto Telegram.

Eight and ten years after the date of the Northeast Toronto bye-election the business men of this city may be able to hire an office boy who can write a decent hand and spell with reasonable accuracy. The Hearst-Cody revolution in Ontario's educational system will be praised by its fruits. The administrative career of Hon. H. J. Cody will be as the dawning light if the work of Dr. Cody proves to be as right in practice as the choice of a clergyman of any denomination to serve as Minister of the Crown was, and is, wrong in principle.

Saving the Ham.

Vancouver Province.

Sandwiches in which gold coins were concealed are being smuggled into Germany from Holland. In point of value there is little difference between them and the regular ham variety.

Our Educational System

Toronto Globe.

The Honorable Dr. Cody has a mandate now for the reform of Ontario's educational system in the direction of simplicity. The attempt to give a little superficial knowledge of many things instead of a thorough grounding in essentials during the public school course has failed.

The Poet's Corner

"CARRY ON!"

(With Apologies to Robert Service)

It is easy to pick when the berries are thick
And you're mad with the thrill and the glory.
It is easy to cheer when a basketful's near,
For then that would finish your story.
It's a different song when the spaces are long
Between berry and berry you find;
When it's ten against one that the berries are done,
Buck up, little soldier, don't mind!
Carry on, carry on!
There isn't much pep to your pick,
You're dusty and roasting and just about blind,
You're thirsty and starving, but never you mind,
Carry on, carry on!
Berries never were meant to be thick!
Things look pretty slow, but while you have go
Carry on, old chap, carry on!

And so in the field when the basket you wield,
It is easy to pick when you're winning,
It is easy to slave and starve and be brave
When the dinner-bell call is beginning.
But the one who can meet a spilt-basket defeat
With a cheer—that's the one worth while,
The one who can work though fain would he shirk
Is the one who works with a smile.
Carry on, carry on!
Britain never for workers shall lack.
But show that you haven't a cowardly streak,
And though you are tired you never are weak.
Carry on, carry on!
Brace up for another attack,
And when you are aching, and your back's about breaking,
Carry on, farmerette, carry on!

There are some who would grumble and grouch when they tumble,
And some who would quit the first night.
There are others, I know, who in bravery go
Like a hero and work with their might.
So to labor with zest and give of your best
For the sweetness and joy of the giving,
Help others along with a hand and a song,
Why, there's the real sunshine of living.
Carry on, carry on!
Our picking is now nearly o'er.
Just three or four baskets will fill up this crate,
That's a big work to do, but just you wait.
Carry on, carry on!
Here we are and we're ready for more.
And when evening is here we will swim with a cheer.
Carry on, old chap, carry on!

THE HILLS OF GOD.

Last Sabbath nicht I went tae hear
A modern Apollos;
A man frae Scotland's heathered hills,
The Reverend Harris Wallace.
'Twas nice tae hear th' Scotch accent—
Ye canna hear a richer—
It weel became th' cultured voice
O' this strang Baptist preacher.

He read th' sermon on th' mount,
An' discoorsed verra finely
Upo' th' mountains o' th' buik
That has been sent divinely.
"Th' rugged rocks produces fowk,
Perhaps, wi' rough exterior,
But, for guid character an' brains,
Ye canna find superior.

The' rocky land o' wee bit Wales,
Wi' many a mountain gorge,
Gave tae th' warld, as gift frae God,
Th' matchless man Lloyd-George.
Auld Scotland gaed us Livingstone,
Th' greatest o' explorers."
An' mony ither men o' note
The' preacher brought before us.

Not level plains, but Judah's hills,
Saw Abram's best behaviour,
An' Galilee, wi' barren rocks,
Gave tae th' warld our Saviour.
Elijah won on Carmel's top,
On Sinia law was given,
An' when th' Prince o' Glory died
'Twas mighty rocks were riven.

Oft on a mountain Jesus prayed,
Ane knew His fierce temptation,
Ane saw Him bow His heid in death,
Ane witnessed His translation.
He has ben ca'd by mony names,
Ane is The Rock o' Ages,
An' that He waul come back again
We learn frae sacred pages."

CHAPTER I.

Paul Chester At Home.

"We are asked to meet the Berkshires next week. They are to stay at the Riddells', it appears, for a couple of nights, just from Saturday to Monday."

Lady Susan Chester glanced up from her writing-table as her husband entered the room, and addressed him over her shoulder. She was a slim and exceedingly pretty woman, with a quantity of fair, soft hair, clear, bright blue eyes, and a charming voice.

"That's good!" exclaimed Paul Chester; and the man's whole face lit up with a satisfied smile. "That's exceedingly good! Of course you will write and accept, Susan?"

He was a tall, dominant-looking young man of about thirty, with keen, clear-cut features, and dark hair. His eyes were piercingly bright, hawk's eyes, and his chin stuck out prominently. He was quite good-looking, and there was something in the face which set Paul Chester apart from his fellows, an expression of invincible determination and iron resolve. He was unnaturally pale for a man who spent the most of his time in the open air and was the owner of miles of soil; his was more the type bred in cities than in fields.

"We have friends coming here ourselves next Saturday," said Lady Susan, in calm, cold tones; but a faint touch of color rost to her cheeks.

"Put them off—put the whole party off," commanded her husband. 'Don't you realize the extreme importance of this visit? You know perfectly well that if a man is to get on in politics nowadays he must stand in with the Berkshires. Why, her influence——" He paused and did not finish the sentence, startled for the second by the look of intense contempt which had come into his wife's eyes, transforming a merely pretty woman into a creature he failed to understand.

"Yes, we all know what the Duchess is. How she can set a man up and take a man down," said Lady Susan, smiling frostily. Then she raised her head and looked her husband straight in the face. "If I were a man," she said, "a clever and ambitious man, a man with all the world in front of me, I wouldn't be helped on by any one. I'd just help myself."

"Nonsense, nonsense!" interrupted Chester, with a shrug of his shoulders. "People don't get on by themselves. They have to be helped on. Influence means everything nowadays, and you know what the Duchess can do." He stroked his clean-shaven face—a trick of his when excited over anything. "Her husband will be a Prime Minister before the year's out—that's pretty certain, and then," he laughed, "well, we all know who manages the Berkshires. If ever one wants an example of a man who has been made by his wife, one has only to point at the Duke."

"And such a wife!" exclaimed Lady Susan, as she turned her flashing eyes upon her husband. "Henrietta is a wicked woman, an unprincipled Delilah. She robs men of their secrets by breaking their hearts. I don't say she is untrue to her husband—she is too cold-blooded, too sublimely selfish—but she tricks men all the same of everything she can get from them, and gives them nothing in exchange—nothing!"

"Say what you like about the Duchess," retorted Paul Chester coolly. "Women, I know, have a way of running her down, but she plays a prominent part in the history of our time, and has been the mainstay of her husband Posterity will remember her as a great woman."

"Very well," said Lady Susan, and shut her lips with some determination. "I must write and accept the Riddells and put off our other friends. I hope we shan't be called tuft-hunters when the truth comes out."

"When a man is going to stand for his country," Chester retorted, "he has to do a great many things which he wouldn't do at other times. But the end justifies the means." He put his hand upon his wife's shoulder. "You think me a snob, Susan," he went on, in a voice that was wonderfully quiet and measured. "It is quite true, I am a snob! Son of a snob, and the grandson of a factory hand—but Brutus has ambitions. I intend to be some thing more than the mere rich man whom the county families patronise. I am going to be great—one day." His grip on her shoulder became tighter, heavier. "I am nobody now, a rich nobody, merely the master of Amphlett Court, but wait awhile—wait."

"Yes," she sighed, a strange expres-

He shook his head, then pushed her gently away from him. "Write to Mrs. Riddell at once, Susan," was all he said.

She made no further protest, and her face went back to its impassive calm again. A second later, her gold pen was scratching across a sheet of pale mauve paper. She had a jerky, scratchy way of writing.

Paul Chester settled himself down comfortably in a big chintz-covered arm-chair and fixed his eyes upon his wife, the slim, gracious creature who obeyed him so implicitly, and whose loyalty and honor he could always rely on There was the width of the whole world between himself and Lady Susan. They had lived the life of civil strangers for the last three years—ever since their honeymoon, in fact.

Yet of their friends no one guessed, no one suspected this. They were quoted as a model couple and praised for their perfect manners to each other.

"Do I feel bitter towards Susan, or have I merely become indifferent—wrapped up in greater interests, bigger dreams?"

Tha was the question Chester asked himself as he stared at the girl he adored with all a young man's passion during the brief days of their engagement—the wife he had worshipped up to the fatal moment when he had discovered a fact he had never before suspected, that Lady Susan had married him simply and solely for his money, married him because she was the eldest daughter of a large family of sisters and knew her duty to her family.

The truth had come out by accident, by means of a letter which Chester had come upon during the first weeks of their honeymoon. It was a letter Lady Susan had written to her favorite sister and then carelessly left half-finished in the blotting-book.

Chester remembered the casual way he had strolled across the room and opened the blotting-book, and had read, without wishing to, certain lines of Lady Susan's open letter—lines impossible to forgive or to forget.

"Don't let father frighten you into marrying a man for money as he frightened me, for I tell you my position is unendurable. Every kiss is a degradation. I feel burnt up with shame—a creature bought and sold."

He read no more, but turned the letter deliberately on to the unwirtten side and closed the blotting-book. From that hour on she was not troubled with his kisses.

The warm relationship of husband and wife ceased to exist between the couple, and no explanation passed on either side. They drifted into the new order of things quietly.

He bent his brows now as her pen went scratching on over the mauve paper, and his thoughts flew back to other days—to the days long before his marriage, and he felt, as he had often felt, that fate, destiny, or Providence had not been over kind to him. For all his wealth he was not a happy man. Had he not missed Life's greatest thing—Love?

He remembered his youth, his miserable chilhood He was the offspring of a second marriage, for his father, a big manufacturer in the Midlands, had taken for his second wife a mill-hand, a pretty, helpless slip of a girl, whom Luke Chester brought home to his big Nottingham mansion

Poor, pretty Annie! It was doubtful if her marriage to her rich master contributed very much to her happiness; anyway, if it did, her time of enjoyment was brief, for before she had been married a year the girl had drawn her last breath, and a baby's cry had once more rung through the large over-decorated house.

All this was before Luke Chester had made a big corner in cotton, retired from active business, and bought Amphlett Court, one of the largest places in Sussex.

His father hated Paul. For one thing, the child had cost the life of pretty yellow-haired Annie; and, for another, to the day of the old man's death he regretted his rash second marriage. And so it came to pass that Paul was treated as a sort of Ishmael detested by his half-brothers, made of no account in his father's house, regarded as a blot on the family escutcheon, the aggravating witness to a big scandal.

He was sent to a cheap school, not to Elton as his brothers had been, and bundled out of England at the age of nineteen to Florida, to break his heart amidst the orange and lemon trees, for the boy had his own dreams of greatness, and yearned for

Paul was no fool. He knew that, having been made a partner in the orange farm, he must stick to his work—at least for a time—for no man can succeed without money. Later on—ah! later on——

He was wonderfully and incredibly patient, and then quite suddenly came deliverance —deliverance dramatic and immediate.

Old Luke Chester, at the ripe age of seventy, might have known better than to trust himself in a motor-car driven by his son, heavy, uncouth George. The other son was there too, Robert.

It was not by any means the first motor-car drive the trio had taken together, but it chanced to be the last. There was a grand smash-up at the end of a steep hill, and the total extinction—or so the county fancied—of the house of Chester. But the good gossips were wrong. There was another Chester who was to make his appearance in Sussex and take possession of Amphlett Court, a son of whom they had not even heard.

"So we haven't seen the end of the money-bags lot yet!" a blatant young squire remarked on the day Paul Chester appeared for the first time in the hunting-field, where everybody cold-shouldered him. He was an outsider, and made to realize this by his neighbors; by all, that is to say, except the bankrupt Lord Amphlett, who having sold his house and lands to Paul's father now saw fit to try and sell his eldest daughter to the son.

He introduced Paul to Lady Susan before the whole field, and made much of the young man himself, and from that hour things worked on towards the inevitable end.

In three moths' time Lord Amphlett had captured a rich son-in-law, and Paul had taken a wife.

"There, the letter's finished," said Lady Susan, as she folded her note, put it in an envelope, and handed it to her husband. "I doubt if much good will come of this visit to the Riddells'," she added. "Still, you wish to go, so of course we are going."

"You are a very obedient wife," he said mockingly, for a sudden desire had come upon him to sting this quiet woman—this woman he had once loved so dearly and so madly.

"I try to do my duty," she answered. Her voice had all at once become as cold as ice; her blue eyes glittered. "You see I recognize our marriage to be a curious partnership of interests," she went on slowly. 'You married me because I happened to—well, because you felt my family connections would help you. And I—well, of course a woman wants money, and you are a rich man; but I think we both realize the fact that we must pull together for our mutual well-being." Her lips trembled a little, and her breast heaved slightly under the loose folds of her silk wrapper.

Paul Chester did not notice these signs of agitation. He had turned on his heel and was walking towards the door. He paused with his hand on the knob, his head turned from her.

"You have a clear and concise way of expressing yourself, Susan, but—my God! what a farce our life is—what a farce!"

The words burst from him suddenly and unexpectedly ;then he laughed bitterly and opened the door.

"Paul!" She stretched out her hands as she pronounced his name, but it was doubtful if he heard her faint cry, for he walked quietly out of the room, closing the door carefully behind him.

She sprang from her chair. Her face had grown very pale, her mouth was trembling pitifully; then she suddenly flung herself down on a small chintz-covered sofa and buried her head amidst a pile of cushions.

"I love him!" she muttered, trembling convulsively; "I love him—and he hates me!"

CHAPTER II.

The White Motor

Paul Chester had made his decision, and his word was law. The invitation of the Riddells was duly accepted; and each other in the days that ensued, though when they happened to meet Paul treated his wife with studied politeness, the attitude to which she had become accustomed and which she had learnt to imitate.

To Paul himself the prospective meeting with the Duchess of Berkshire was of the first importance. Ambition had taken the place of love in the man's heart; his own political progress was paramount. He knew his own powers, the vital force within him that had not yet, for lack of opportunity, came to the surface; but, backed by such influence as might be his, to what height was it not possible for him to attain?

He was reflecting thus as he strode along the highway a mile or two from Amphlett Court. He was never averse to walking, and the whim had taken him to visit one of his tenants with whom there was some business to be transacted. This completed, he was making his way home, his mind so occupied with his own affairs that he hardly noticed those who passed him on the road, or if he returned a salutation the gesutre was mechanical and given with but a curt bend of the head.

Suddenly, however, his attention was aroused by the pitiful howl of a dog. He was fond of animals and the sound was disturbing to his train of thought. He raiser his eyes, and as he came to a turn in the road an unusual sight presented itself to his gaze.

A small motorcar was drawn up alongside the hedge, and a woman stood beside the car whipping a small toy Pomeranian with all her might—sharp, merciless blows.

"What a devil of a woman!" thought Chester; "but what a beautiful woman!"

He caught his breath as he drew closer, for he was a man who had a curious appreciation of the beautiful, and he had never in all his life come across such a woman as the tall, imperious-looking creature who mercilessly whipped the whining lapdog—such a woman of flame and passion.

She was tall, almost as tall as himself, and slender for her height. He particularly noticed the curious slimness of her figure and the copperbrown hair and shining eyes—strange eyes, full of red fire.

She was evidently driving the car herself, for there was no sign of a chauffeur or any other occupant, The car was a white one. He noticed all this in a flash even as the lilte dog went on piteously howling under her shower of blows.

"She'll kill the poor little brute if she goes on like that," he commented to himself, then ran forward and laid an authoritative hand upon the woman's arm.

"Stop!" he cried imperatively. "Aren't you ashamed of yourself? You will kill the poor little brute if you go on like this. Has the dog bitten you, or anything?"

The woman stared at Chester in bank astonishment.

'How dare you speak to me? What possible business is it of yours?" she demanded. "The dog is mine—mine to do what I like with—to kill if I choose." She had a curious voice, full of deep, rich notes, and for all her rage a certain seductiveness ran through it, a drowsy sweetness.

"The dog may be yours," remarked Chester, 'but, all the same, if you think I am going to allow you to go on thrashing it, you are wrong. Put the animal down at once!" He squared his shoulders and stared the woman steadily in the eyes, unappalled by the devilish expression which had suddenly come into her face and the sinister and menacing way she looked at him.

"Do you know who I am?" she exclaimed.

'I neither know nor care who you are," retorted Chester, "except that you happen to be rather a disgrace to your sex."

"How dare you!" She raised her voice. She looked magnificent in her wrath and fury. "Oh, you shall suffer for this—you shall suffer!" she went on quickly. "You don't know me, but I will find out who you are—you who have dared to insult a woman—to insult me!"

A sob broke in her throat, and her eyes filled with scalding tears—tears of pure rage.

'You nearly killed him," observed Chester bluntly. His blood was boiling; he could have shaken the tall, beautiful woman.

"I will kill him, too!" The woman raised her hand. Her expression was a terrible one at the moment, full of blind passion. "Racket is mine," she muttered, "and no one on earth shall defy me!"

"You—you devil!" The words broke from Chester's dry lips; then, before the woman's hand could descend upon her unfortunate dog, he had snatched the animal from this white, shining woman, this beautiful piece of cruelty.

She reeled back against the hedge, and for a second appeared too utterly dumbfounded and amazed to speak. Her bosom heaved passionately, and she had grown white even to her lips.

Suddenly tears began to course down her cheeks, but Chester hardly noticed her. He was too occupied

The man noticed with horror the limp way in which one of the paws hung, also the red stains on the animal's fur. And he was curiously touched when a small pink tongue came out and he felt his hands being gratefully licked.

"Poor little brute—poor little beastie!" he muttered then fell to stroking the shivering animal.

"Give me back my dog,—at once, do you hear—at once!"

She advanced as she spoke, her hands extended.

"Don't be afraid, I won't hurt Racket again," she went on. "I lost my temper a few moments ago, but he deserved it."

She tried to make her manner soft and ingratiating, but her eyes belied her.

Chester shok his head.

"Racket goes with me," he said, 'to have his paw bandaged—your whip is rather a heavy one." He pointed as he spoke to a broken whip which lay by the side of the ditch.

"This is nonsense—absolute nonsense!" she protested. "The dog belongs to me. Give him back at once—at once, I say, or I shall have you arrested for stealing him."

Chester laughed.

"I might reply, madam," he said cooly, "that you stand just as good a chance of being arested for gross cruelty to animals—no, Racket goes with me."

She clenched her hands and came close up. The little dog shivered as she drew near, and shrang closer to his new-found protector.

"Give me my dog! Here, Racket—Racket!!" She made a movement as if to snatch the dog away, but Chester eluded her.

'Come, don't let us have a struggle,' he exclaimed; "for I warn you, I am not going to give the dog up."

'I am pretty strong——for a woman!" Her eyes glittered and gleamed.

"Possibly, but you see a man's strength——" He paused, he didn't care how much he infuriated her—goaded her. He was beside himself with pity for the animal and wrath against the woman.

"You wretch—you wretch!—but you shall suffer!" she cried.

He laughed at her threats. She was furious with him—well, let her be, what did it matter? An unknown woman, in white, a woman driving a white car down a long white road—a woman he would never see again.

'I am dangerous when I hate?" She showed her gleaming teeth, cruel teeth, then realizing that all she could do or say would be useless and that she could not alter the man's resolve to withhold her dog from her, she jumped into her motor and began adjusting her long streaming veil, then she glanced at him over her shoulder.

"You'll be sorry for this—one day!" She said the words slowly and deliberately, fixing her amber eyes upon him.

He nodded cheerfully. How could this woman harm him—how could she?

She started the motor-car, and a second later it was on its way down the road—a— flash of white light—carrying the woman from him—the white woman.

CHAPTER III.

The Advent of Henrietta

"It is utterly hopeless, I suppose, to expect the Duchess to be punctual."

Laura Riddell bent her brows as she whispered into Lady Susan Chester's ear. The two women were friends of long standing; indeed it was only because she was so fond of Lady Susan that Mrs. Riddell had asked the Chesters to the smartest house-party she was giving that year, for she was not interested in Paul, and she hated his plebeian origin; still she knew how much he desired to meet the Duke and Duchess of Berkshire, so she had asked him for his wife's sake, though she detested his old father, and cut his brothers

"It's late," returned Susan, "nearly half-past eight."

She glanced at a clock on the mantlepiece as she spoke, then swept her eyes round the crowded drawing-room of Oakleigh Court. The whole of the smart crowd seemed to be talking at once, and the hum of voices was deafening; but anxious eyes watched the door, for most of the guests were hungry and wanted their dinner badly; also they disliked awaiting the Duchess of Berkshire's pleasure.

Lady Susan noticed her husband. He was standing by himself, taken little heed of by the other guests, who were all people of great social consequence and had never heard of plain Paul Chester. Everybody appeared to know everybody else and to have plenty of interests in common. Every one except Chester; he was out of the whole thing and nobody spoke to him, nobody bothered about him. He might have been a chair or a footstool.

"Does he mind it, I wonder?" his wife thought to herself, feeling an odd rush of sympathy.'" I knew this would happen."

She bit lip, bitterly mortified on Paul's account, little realizing that he was far too interested in the men and women around him to mind being forgotten and ignored.

He felt that it was a wonderful have been presented to the Russian Ambassador. The Bishop of Chelsea was talking within a yard of him; also the brilliant and audacious Miss Gladys Hamilton—the smartest and most-talked-of girl in England—laughed by his side.

He was not amazed because no one troubled about him. Why should they? he asked himself. He must wait; everything worth having must be waited for.

"Ah, at last!" Laura Riddell drew a deep breath of relief as she heard the sound of footsteps outside the door, then she glanced across the room at her husband who stood by the fireplace listening to the slow, pompous excuses that the Duke kept on making for his wife, for the Duke had appeared long ago—sleepy and indolent as ever—yet a man whom it was not safe to offend.

The whole room started and smiled, then turned to watch the door—Chester amongst the rest. Somewhat to his surprise, he found his heart was beating very quickly.

She came into the room, laughing in her own inimitable way, making a thousand excuses for keeping every one waiting for their dinner—blaming her maid, pleading a headache, a dozen headaches.

She was dressed in white, and her neck was covered with a lace scarf—a scarf which she plucked off with a smile and hung on her arm. Her hair was waved to each side of her brow, soft marvellous hair. She looked like a lovely wicked child yet the whole room knew her to be past thirty. She wore no jewels except two big emerald earrings.

Beautiful things are everyday things now—

Look around you. See the large number of dainty silk blouses in beautiful tints that are being worn. And the quantities of dainty underwear the stores are showing—sheerest, most beautiful things you have ever seen. It was not so a few years ago. What has caused the difference?

Certainly and surely—one big factor has been Lux. Women would not buy these things right along unless there was a gentle, sure way of washing them—without discoloring, warping or fading.

There is—it's the Lux way. Won't turn silks yellow—won't hurt chiffons—won't shrink woollens. Lux won't hurt anything that pure water itself may touch.

MYSTERIOUS SUBTERRANEAN CHAMBERS

THE Nakimu Caves at Glacier, B.C., whose mysterious subterranean chambers, washed out of the marble heart of a Canadian Rocky Mountain by a glacial river, are reached in summer from an Alpine meadow six thousand feet high, surrounded by beautiful snow-clad peaks, though the meadow itself is gay with flowers. In winter, however, the snow falls deep, and in early spring Mr. Deutschman, who originally discovered these caves, and who is employed by the Canadian Government to show them to passing tourists, has to prospect for the entrance, which may lie ten feet under a snow drift. All around are the tracks of wild animals, which pass this way in winter over the Baloo Pass to the heights where only the keenest hunter is likely to follow them—grizzly bear, mountain lion, wolf, caribou, goat and mountain sheep. In summer, of course, the fiercer animals are but rarely seen, but the whistling marmots come and play around the cabin door, cheekily begging bread from the luncheon sandwiches, while overhead the eagle flies in tireless watch for his own prey. The caves themselves are entirely uninhabited, and so far no fish have been discovered in the waters of the river. Under the blaze of a magnesium ribbon, however, there is scenery enough, and to spare—the marble flowered walls contrasting strangely with the water torn floor. Up to the present no one has discovered what becomes of the torrent which rages through the caves—it does not find any exit in the [illegible]waet Valley below, but there are strange springs on the mountain side forty miles away, which Mr. Deutschman suspects to be connected with this subterranean river.

CHEESE FACTORY DAMAGED

The Reaboro cheese factory situated near Lindsay was on Friday night struck by lightning and considerable damage resulted. No person was in the factory at the time.

INSPECT ROADS

Col. Ponton has received letters from the Minister of Agriculture and from the Minister of Public Works, stating that they will be pleased to visit Belleville some time during the coming autumn, in order to inspect the main roads in this vicinity and to consider other matters of public importance, in suggestion of the Board of Trade. Belleville will give the Ministers an enthusiastic welcome.

PTE. ALLAN DUNLOP WOUNDED

Word has been received that Pte Allan Dunlop has been wounded in the legs. He went overseas with the Sportsman's Battalion in October, 1916, and before enlisting was employed in Toronto. He is 22 years old, was born in Belleville, but received his education in Toronto.

CANADIAN AIRMEN

The distinctive mark which Canadians in the R. A. F. overseas are to wear has been agreed upon. The new uniforms having no shoulder-strap, officers are to be allowed to wear the name "Canada" on their sleeve in gold; other ranks red on khaki and blue on blue.

JUDGE DEROCHE GIVES DECISION

Judge Deroche has given his decision re the appeal against the assessment of the property formerly known as the Queen's Hotel but now owned by the Roman Catholic Diocese of Kingston and used for religious and school purposes, exempting the same from taxation with the exception of that part occupied by Mrs. Deltor as a store. The assessment on this latter portion is fixed at $1200 —Tweed News.

DRUGGIST ELECT OFFICERS

The members of District No. 2 of the Ontario College of Pharmacy met at Kingston, when matters of interest to the trade were discussed. The question of female employment was referred to and met with favor. This is suggested to meet the labor deficiency. Among the speakers were: E. W. Case, Picton; W. H. Graham, Toronto, and N. C. Polson, Kingston. The officers elected were: E. W. Case Picton, president; W. J. Malley, Deseronto, vice-president; and F. J. Hoag, Kingston, secretary-treasurer.

LOCAL TRAINS RESTORED

Reeve Rollins of Tweed, has been instructed by the Secretary of the Railway Commission that the C.P.R. has been ordered to restore the local train service between Tweed and Toronto as previous to Dec. 1918 with this exception; that it shall be in effect from April 15th to Dec. 1st in each and every year. This order leaves the Company free to operate the service from Dec. 1st to April 15th at its option. Reeve Rollins is to be congratulated upon the success of his activities in seeking the restoration of this service. He was ably assisted by Sandy Grant, M.P. and T. H. Thompson M. P. and the representatives of other communities, viz, Madoc and Marmora, who are also vitally concerned. It is expected that this service will be re-established in a very few days.

RETURNED TO CALGARY

Major Fitz Horrigan, superintendent of the Royal North West Mounted Police, who has been visiting friends in Picton and Belleville, has returned to Calgary. The major, who has been connected for a number of years with the force, the story of which is one of the romances of the world, has been busy during his eastern visit—the first for thirteen years—with details regarding the sending of members of the force to Siberia.

PTE. A. E. FLINN WOUNDED

Pte. A. E. Flinn, wounded, enlisted in January, 1915, and went overseas in April of the same year. He is a native of England, and came to Canada six years ago. He has seen much active fighting, having been wounded in the present war in November 1917. Pte. Flinn was formerly a farmer at Belleville. His sister, Miss Mabel Flinn, resides at 639 Euclid Avenue, Toronto.

CAR KILLED POODLE

An auto was this morning at 1.30 proceeding eastward on Bridge street, when it ran over a beautiful white poodle dog the property of Police Sergt. A. Harman. The injuries the canine sustained were of such a nature as to cause its death. The dog was a valuable one and was much prized by its owners.

"FED UP" WITH KINGSTON

Two more conscientious objectors, who arrived at Kingston from London, Ont., for Portsmouth Penitentiary, bring the number of this class of individual in confinement up to twelve. A couple of the Toronto objectors, it is reported, want to get out, and declare that they would gladly serve in the army if the opportunity were again offered them. They do not take kindly to penitentiary life.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

very impressive memorial service was held in St. Thomas' church last evening for the late Sergt. Char. Lewis White, killed in action. After the processional hymn "How bright these glorious Spirits shine," the burial office was solemnly and earnestly recited by the rector, choir and people. The Nunc Dimittis was sung and the Archdeacon delivered a short address, his subject being "Human sympathy." He asked the question "Do we rightly honor our heroes?" and pleaded persuasively for greater thoughtfulness and sympathy for our broken soldiers returning and for the families bereaved. "Nearer My God to Thee," and "Abide With Me," were sung, as favorite hymns of the late soldier, and were rendered with much feeling by the choir and congregation. At the conclusion of the service the congregation stood reverently while the Dead March in Chopin was beautifully rendered by Mr. Charles Skelcher, the assistant organist of St. Thomas Church. Sergt. White was born in England 29 years ago, and has been a resident of Belleville ten years. He was a member of St. Thomas church and a good citizen, respected by all. The widow and two little children are left. Sergt. White spent two years on active service in France, was wounded at the battle of Passchendaele by a bursting shell, but continued to "carry on," and won the Military Medal for exceptional acts of bravery while himself suffering from wounds.

SUNDAY WAR BULLETINS

Special to the Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited

British Headquarters in France, Aug. 25.—The town of Thiepval, northeast of the Ancre on the Albert front, was entered by the British yesterday.

London, Aug. 25.—Field Marshal Haig continued his attack north of the river Somme yesterday and now holds the road from Albert to Bapaume as far as LeSars. The British have captured several towns three and three-quarters miles northeast of Albert.

Since August 21 the British have taken 17,000 prisoners. A number of enemy counter attacks were repulsed.

Paris, August 25.—French troops last night increased their progress on the battlefield between the Aisne and Ailette rivers.

Austro-Hungarian troops have arrived on the western front.

London, August 25.—LaBoiselle, Ovillers, Mouquet Farm and Grandcourt have been captured with over two thousand prisoners.

Paris, August 25.—American troops have advanced as far north as the Soissons-Rheims road on a front of 800 yards. On Friday nine German planes were brought down and a captive balloon burned.

Vienna, August 25.—Thursday night the enemy dropped thirty bombs on Douzingries. Several inhabitants were killed and the hospital damaged.

London, August 25.—New Zealanders have captured Coljeul. Elsewhere there were successful local actions, today's statement says.

London, August 25.—Field Marshal Haig today is continuing his attacks against the Germans, north of the river Somme.

London, August 25.—Aerial activity on all fronts has become general. We have bombed railway stations and airdromes at various places with much success.

WATER RUNNING AWAY

At a late hour on Saturday night while a police officer was making his rounds of inspecting back yards on Front street, he detected a water tap running, and shut same off.

APPREHENDED HERE

Lottie Mitz, a young woman, was arrested here on Saturday night on a warrant charging her with neglecting to pay a board bill at a place she boarded at in Deseronto. She was taken back to that town for trial this morning.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

The Rev. Brothers Swayne and Geen have been requested to conduct a memorial service in Christ Church on Sunday evening next, 1st September at 7 o'clock, for members of the Orange Order who have given their lives for King and country, in the world war.

A SERIOUS CHARGE

Mrs. Hannah Sedore of Elzevir, was on Friday night last brought to this city by County Constable Soule, having been arrested on a warrant charging her that she did in the month of June, 1917, set fire to a dwelling the property of George Rogers of Elzevir Township. The accused was on Saturday morning brought up before Police Magistrate Masson and the case was enlarged until Friday next. In the meantime the woman is out on bail. It is stated that a year ago this case was investigated with the result that the accused was acquitted of the charge. It is alleged that new evidence has been secured.

HARD HIT BY WAR

Misfortunes often follow each other quickly in certain families and such is the case of Sergt. J. McGlashon, caretaker of the Armouries in this city. On August 19th, 1917, his son Sergt. A. E. McGlashon, No. 412076 who left here with the 39th Battalion, was severely wounded and is at present in Queen's Military Hospital, Kingston, where he is receiving medical attention. Saturday last Sergt. McGlashon received the following telegram, which refers to a younger son: "Ottawa, Aug. 23rd, 1918. Sgt. J. McGlashon, Armouries, Belleville. Sincerely regret to inform you 636413 Pte. David James McGlashon, infantry, officially reported wounded and missing, Aug. 11th. Director of Records." The Privat above referred to left Belleville with the 155th Battalion, and was transferred to another Battalion, being in the machine gun section of the battalion. In addition to the above distressing news Sergt. McGlashon and wife a few days ago had the misfortune to lose an infant son. To the sorely bereaved parents will be extended the sincere sympathy of all citizens.

PTE. PERCY SIMONS DIED

Mrs. Sarah Simons, 75 Perth street, Brockville received official word to-day that her youngest son, Pte. Percy A Simons of the Royal Ottawa Battalion, died of wounds at the 48th Canadian Casualty Clearing Station, on August 15, of gunshot injuries in the abdomen received in the recent severe fighting in which his and other Eastern Ontario units participated. Pte Simons was but 18 years of age and enlisted in the 240th Battalion here in 1916, and after training at Renfrew went overseas in the spring of 1917. After receiving further instruction in England he went to France last winter and was attached to the Royal Ottawa Battalion. He was known as a proficient athlete and was a member of the hockey team of the 240th when it was stationed in deceased young soldier is survived by four brothers and two sisters: Wallace Schreiber;; Miss Bernice Simons Schrieber; Mrs. Charles McDonald, Wilbert, Douglas and Morley, Brockville.

False Modesty

has led many a suffering person to neglect the treatment of piles. The itching, stinging sensations produce the keenest distress. The thought of a surgical operation brings mental anxiety which undermines the general health.

Relief can always be obtained by the aplication of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and in most cases persistent treatment brings complete cure. This ointment is worth trying when you think of the comfort to be obtained.

British continue smashing Germans toward the old Hindenburg line, which almost reaches present battle zone. Bapaume has been entered by strong British patrols and British forces have also entered the fringe of Bellecourt and captured the heights.

IN LONDON TOWN.

Some Activities In Which the Canadians Are Interested.

The Canadians in London are busy at the work which comes to hand and there seems an ever-increasing demand to minister to the needs of the troops.

The latest appeal comes from Lt.-Col. T. E. Perrett of Regina, whose sight has been impaired during this war, and who is an inmate of the St. Dunstan's Hostel for men blinded during the war.

There are a number of Canadians who have suffered this sad affliction and who are learning to do many things in this wonderful school founded by Sir Arthur Pearson to alleviate the sufferings of men who must live in total darkness, for King and Empire's sake. Col. Perrett says that the Canadians wish to keep in touch with all Canadian matters, with home folk and home news, and asks the Canadians in London to visit them regularly and by talking with them, keep them in touch with what is happening at home.

They miss the newspapers which, of course, they are unable to read. A number of people will take turns visiting them, and helping them to pass the time.

Some English ladies have organized themselves and have given little dances and musicals for the officers of St. Dunstan's and I am told they enjoy them very much.

One is filled with amazement to see the St. Dunstan men walking about in Regent's Park. They are taught to walk without fear and have very little of the appearance of being blind.

When Sir Arthur Pearson lost his sight the literary world was filled with sorrow that so brilliant a man had been laid by, but there has not been a greater work performed for the men who have suffered in this fight for freedom than that which he has done for the blind. It is worthy of the greatest support that can be given to it and the Canadians in London have from the first taken a keen interest in its working.

The Canadian nurses are very comfortable in the lovely nurses' club, which has been provided for them at Lancaster Gate through the I.O.D.E. It was formally opened by her Royal Highness, Princess Patricia, and in its well furnished and spacious rooms the women whose professional work has received so much favorable comment will find a beauty and quietude which will be so much needed after their trying work on active service and the exacting demands which hospitals filled to the utmost must make upon them. Lady Perley and Mrs. George McL. Brown looked very happy as they left the building after the opening. These untiring workers must share with the Countess of Minto and the National Chapter I.O.D.E. through Mrs. Albert Gooderham of Toronto, their regent, the credit for bringing such a splendid home into existence for the nurses of the Land of the Maple whose pretty uniforms add such a pleasing touch of color to the greyness of old London Town.

On Duty.

Abe, who was new to the army, was placed on guard. During the day all had gone smoothly, and he was gaining in self-assurance. Before he went out with his relief at 9 p.m., the corporal asked him if he knew his general orders and how to challenge anyone at night. "Sure," said Abe; "I'll tell him in a high-pitched voice that he should stop." "That's it. 'Halt! Who is there?' but suppose he doesn't stop?" "Vell, I'll tell him vonce, then I tell him again, then I'll shoot him in th' head." "Fine," grinned the corporal. "Look out for the officer of the day when he makes his tour of inspection. Halt him sharply. If you don't, woy! Pull in your neck!" "Ha, ha! Don't worry!" Abe had been walking his post for a little more than an hour. The night was clear, and there was a moon. He was getting lonesome, and was just a bit nervous. The trees and shadows made figures that moved with the leaves, and did not answer when challenged. It was disconcerting. A step sounded, and a form came out of the shade along the path. Abe stood with open mouth. The form came into the light of the moon, and Abe recognized the officer of the day. He heaved a great breath of relief and said: "Oh, it's you, is it? By golly, you scared me somethink awful."

Language on the Prairies.

In charging the twenty-eighth Synod of the Church of England in the diocese of Qu'Appelle, the Bishop of Qu'Appelle spoke strongly on the question of language and religious education in the public schools, as follows: "Canadians, we shall ever take a deep interest in our common school. What our schools are to-day our people will be to-morrow. The importance of insisting upon every child being taught to speak the English language cannot be exaggerated. In an immense country like ours, where it is so easy for a foreign community to preserve its identity and language and for children to grow up in ignorance of British institutions and customs, it is nothing less than criminal in the light of passing events to be indifferent to the education of the children of those who, of their own free will and accord, have sought and accepted the privileges and responsibilities of British citizenship, and to allow them to continue in ignorance of the English language. Without this knowledge it is quite possible for the children of foreigners to dwell in our midst and yet live through life in thought and allegiance to a foreign land."

His Discovery.

A professor of history met one of his class who had returned from fighting on the western front, and asked him if he had learned any particular lesson from the war.

"I have discovered," replied the young man, "that it is a great deal easier studying history than it is making it."

RITCHIE'S

CARRY ON

THE spirit that animates the boys in the trenches today is the spirit of "Carry On!" They realize that what was worth doing when they started is still worth doing, and despite their troubles and hardships they intend to see it through.

¶ That spirit which radiates from the battlefield should stimulate every business enterprise that is worth while and every individual who is worth while to "carry on" at home in a manner that will do themselves credit.

¶ We at home are urged to practice thrift and economy, and that is good sound advice, but there are other ways to practice thrift and economy besides curtailing expenditure. You can plan to purchase your necessary wearing apparel or commodities for the home in a store that puts quality first and yet always arranges to have its prices as low, if not lower, than you will find elsewhere.

¶ The Ritchie Store does that very thing—This Autumn season we are "carrying on" with a more vigorous and progressive store policy than ever before. Our buyers still go to the large centres, only more frequently. We are buying the staple lines of merchandise in much larger quantities than previously and the styles you see at Ritchie's are selected with infinite care by our buying experts so that they combine the very latest dictates of fashion and the finest qualities procurable.

¶ The stocks we have assembled and are assembling every day for the new season surpass any of our former attempts, and we are quite satisfied that in arranging to practice thrifht and economy in a practical way you could not do better than to arrange to do your Autumn shopping at Ritchie's.

Rain Saved Plant At Devonshire Park

WINDSOR, Aug. 26.—The heavy rains that came at midnight Friday saved the racing plant at Devonshire Park, two miles south of this city, from total destruction by fire. Two rows of horse stables, however, were burned before the outbreak was extinguished by stablemen, aided by "Jupiter Pluvius."

of a locomotive engine, it is thought. The long dry grass near the stables caught fie in this way, the flames spreading rapidly to the rows of frame buildings, which burned like tinder.

There was no fire-fighting apparatus available, the policy of the Windsor department being not to leave the city. The damage was estimated at $6,000.

Discarded Ore Is Now Being Treated

Oil Flotation Process Results in Recovery of Much Cobalt Silver

COBALT, Aug. 27—With silver selling in many instances at a few cents over the dollar mark, and production being maintained at a high pressure in the Cobalt camp, the year 1918 should prove a record one in point of revenue for the silver mining industry of Ontario.

A number of factors co-operate to add to the amount of production from the camp, which as recently as two years ago, where in experimental stage. Perhaps the most important of these is the adaption of the oil flotation process to the treatment of Cobalt ores, which has been made possible by the untiring efforts of the chemists at the different mines of the Cobalt camp. By this process it has become possible to treat ore that up to the inauguration of this equipment was being used for the building of roads and cement sidewalks, where the ground-up rock, which is now being treated by oil flotation for the recovery of its silver content, was used to mix with the cement, instead of sand.

The bodies of ore and huge sand dumps of previous operations made "profitable ore through the untiring efforts of the country's metallurgists will add apreciably to the earnings of nearly all Cobalt's largest producers and thus greatly lenthen the life of the Cobalt camp.

Two systems of treatment are in use to etract the silver from the ore by the oil flotation method. One, the first installed in the camp, is known as the Callow oil flotation, while the other is the product of the inventive genius of a Cobalt mining man, and is flotation machine. Both equipments have given highly successful results, when coupled with the experience of the different metallurgists at the many mines now using either style of machines.

Another feature which should not be overlooked by those interested in Cobalt mines is the fact that ore which two years ago could not be profitably handled by any method, at the present time, owing to the rise in the price of silver to the dollar mark, is now available for profitable treatment. While developing this ore in the mine the chances of encountering high grade ore bodies have been demonstrated a number of times recently to be not at all remote. As for the high grade veins yet unmined in the Cobalt district time alone will tell their value suffice it to say, large numbers of these will be producing rich ore for many years to come, while a number of aggressive mining companies are devoting their time to exploring heretofore unproductive ground, with the possibility of developing new and productive mines strongly in their favor.

While the year 1918 will likely be the record in point of dollars' worth of silver produced in the Cobalt district, the future may see even this high record broken.

A HAND BOOK FOR DAIRYMEN

Report No. 10 of the Canadian Record of Performance for Pure-bred Dairy Cattle constitutes a hand book that dairymen can hardly do without. It contains the rules and regulations governing the records of performance; the standards for registration; the records of performance of all pure-bred dairy cattle in the country, convenient summaries of reports, exact details of the records achieved and the addresses of the owners; a record of the cows that have produced sufficient milk and fat to qualify but have failed to freshen within fifteen months after the commencement of the test; a list of whole forms of valuable and concise book of dairy records that can be had free on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Huns Burning Ammunition Dumps

LONDON, August 27—The official correspondent with the Australian forces in France telegraphs:

"The Germans are retreating fighting rearguard actions. On Saturday night amunition dumps could be seen burning everywhere.

"About 12,000 Germans have been captured by the Australians alone since August 8, a much greater number than all the Australian casualties."

Big Oil Tanker Was Destroyed

The Lake Manitoba Burned in Montreal Harbor— Loss $1,500,000

MONTREAL, Aug. 26.—With a section of the Montreal fire brigade, the brigade of Montreal fighters from the Imperial Oil Company and two fire boats of the harbor throwing tons of water into the oil tanker Lake Manitoba of the Canadian Pacific Railway Ocean Services Line from noon until late to-night, thousands of tons of oil and other material were destroyed today by the fire that caused damage estimated at about $1,500,000 at the wharf of the Imperial Oil Company, Longue Point, Montreal.

The cause of the fire is said to be a leakage of crude oil into the boiler, where it caught fire, and in a short while the whole vessel was in flames.

The whole river was lit up for miles and the oil floated in flames on the river, making a curious spectacle. The flaming oil spouted from the burning vessel's sides in torrents. Immense quantities of chemi clerwsae intobata fighting the flames.

The ship carried 1,500 tons of crude oil, 500 tons of copper and 500 tons of coal and a quantity of other cargo. She had a capacity of 8,000, and was one of the biggest ships of the kind calling at this port. She was totally destroyed and sank at last in an upright position.

The Lake Manitoba was a steel steamship which had been in the combined passenger and freight service of the C.P.R. between Liverpool and Montreal for some years. Before the war she brought many immigrants, as well as cabin passengers, to Canada.

Mistake in Address Caused Annoyance

Samuel H. Wannamaker, a young man employed in this city, was recently apprehended as an alleged defaulter from military service. Mr. Wannamaker satisfied the military authorities that he did not receive notice to report on account of an error of a clerk at headquarters in placing the wrong address on the envelope. The following official letter clears Mr. Wannamaker of the charge:

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 26, 1918.

Samuel H. Wannamaker, P. C. 927094,
57 Albion Street,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir:—We regret very much that owing to a clerical error in addressing you in care of Albion Hotel instead of Albion street, was the cause of so much unpleasantness and inconvenience.

We will take the matter up with the 2nd Depot Battalion, and see if the adjustment of your pay cannot be arranged.

Yours truly,
H. P. COOKE,
Deputy Registrar.

CANADIANS WIN GLORIOUS VICTORIES SMASHING THROUGH ALL RESISTANCE

CANUCKS TAKE 2000 PRISONERS YESTERDAY

TWO GERMAN BATTALION COMMANDERS AND 1100 GERMAN SOLDIERS CAPTURED YESTERDAY BY FRENCH TROOPS IN ST. MARD SECTOR — CANADIANS CAPTURED RIDGE EAST OF WANCOURT — SCOTTISH TROOPS DRIVE GERMANS BACK — BRITISH ADVANCE CONTINUES WITH MORE THAN 21,000 PRISONERS AS BAG FOR THE WEEK'S DRIVE — HINDENBURG LINE PENETRATED BY BRITISH WEST OF HINENEL.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Aug. 27.—In the advance in the region of Monchy le Preux on Monday, British-Canadian troops captured more than two thousand prisoners.

BATTALION COMMANDERS CAPTURED.

French troops advanced in the region of St. Mard, southwest of Roye, after having repulsed a number of enemy counter attacks in that sector. They have captured 100 prisoners, including two battalion commanders, the statement says. East of Bagneux, north of the Aisne, French troops have advanced their lines about three-quarters of a mile. German counter attacks were repulsed in this region.

CANADIANS CAPTURED RIDGE

The British official statement says: On the left of the battlefront the Canadians yesterday captured the ridge to the east of Wancourt and established themselves to the east of Guemappe. North of the river Scarpe Scottish troops renewed their attacks last night and this morning and have made substantial progress towards Plouvain.

BRITISH SMASH AHEAD.

LONDON, Aug. 27.—British forces in the great battle in northern Picardy are making progress toward the village of Beugnatre, 2 miles northwest of Bapaume. There is hard fighting around Croisille, further north, the statement says. Since last week the British have taken 21,000 prisoners.

HINDENBURG LINE PENETRATED.

Advices from the front today indicate that the Hindenburg line has been penetrated by the British just west of Hinenel.

SCOTS ARE ADVANCING.

North of the Scarpe river Scottish troops renewed their attack against the Germans last night and have advanced toward Plouvain.

LONDON, Aug. 26—It was the Canadians who early Monday morning in the new offensive of the British southeast of Arras captured Wancourt and Monchy-le-Preux and pressed on beyond them, according to Field Marshal Haig's communication issued tonight:

The statement also records the capture by the British of Montauban and Basentin-le-Grand, respectively west and southwest of Longeuval.

"At 3 o'clock this morning Canadian, Scottish and London troops attacked on both sides of the Scarpe River from Croisilles to the neighborhood of Gavrelle. On the south bank of the river Canadian divisions, attacking with great gallantry, passed rapidly through the enemy's foremost defences and captured the high ground known as Orange Hill in the first rush of their assault.

"Despite heavy storms of rain the Canadian troops pressed on and at an early hour reached Wancourt and Monchy-le-Preux.

"During the morning the rain ceased. These troops completed the capture of both vilages and have made progress beyond them.

"Meanwhile, north of the Scarpe Scottish troops, advancing once more over the ground on which they fought in 1917, carried the German first defensive system south of Gavrelle, reaching the outskirts of Rouex. The chemical works north of Roeux are again in our possession.

"On the right of the Canadians the Scottish and London troops who during the preceding days had fought their way toward Croisilles and Heninel continued their attacks. Although they met with vigorous resistance from parties of German infantry and machine guners, they have completed the capture of the high ground between Croisilles and Heninel. In this new sector many prisoners have been taken by us during the day.

"On the southern section of the battlefront our advance has continued on both sides of the Somme. Australian troops have taken Cappy and have made progress east of the village. North of the Somme they have entered Suranne.

"On the remainder of the battlefront fighting has taken place at a number of points. Our pressure has everywhere been maintained, and our line has been advanced in certain sectors."

Passenger Air Line France to England

LONDON, Aug. 27.—A big British airplane, carrying its crew and nine passengers, has made the trip from France to England, it is announced here. The whole journey from an airdrome in the interior of France to one in the interior of England occupied a little over half an hour.

The test was made under routine conditions, with an ordinary service airplane of the largest type. The passengers carried the same amount of baggage as they had traveled by train and boat.

Submarine Sinks More Fishermen

ST. PIERRE, Miquelon, Aug. 26—The steamer Eric, of 600 tons, has been sunk by shell fire, presumably by the same submarine which sent four fishing schooners to the bottom on Sunday off this island. Four of the crew of the Eric, which, hailed from St. John's Newfoundland, were wounded.

Gloucester, Mass., Aug. 26— The sinking of four fishing schooners and the steamer Eric by a German submarine off Point Platte, Miquelon, apparently indicates that the U-boat is working east, marines here said tonight. The point where the vessels went down is the farthest east that the submarine has yet operated in its attacks on the fishing fleet. One of the schooners sunk was the American owned and American-named J. J. Flaherty. She was the largest vessel of the Gloucester fleet and was owned by the Gorton-Pew Vessels Company. With her cargo of 200,000 pounds of fish she was valued at about $50,000. The Flaherty was commanded by Captain Charles T. Gregory of this port and carried a crew of 21 men. She was of 162 gross tons and was built in 1899. The C. M. Walters and the E. B. Walters were owned in Lunenburg, Nova Scotia. The former was a 107 ton ship and the latter 162 tons. Mariners here did not know the Marice B. Adams.

Cross Hindenburg Line at Three Points

With the British Army in France, Aug. 27—The British infantry at three points has crossed the Hindenburg line. The extension of the battle line must increase the anxiety of Von Below, whose army, the Seventeenth, lies astride the Scarpe. Also it involves troops holding the original trench system, which becomes the front line across the plain, after our break of the upper Hindenburg fortress subsequent to the battle of Arras. Behind them is the so-called Drocourt Queant defence line, and both in front of and behind the latter are inhabited vilages, untouched fields and good roads. In the region in which our forces are at present we are on the farthest edge of the devastated country.

Aviator Dies Following Crash

TORONTO, Aug. 27—When their airplane dropped in a spin at the Royal Air Force training camp at Armour Heights yesterday, Lt. J. M. Cram, of Ottawa, was killed and Second Lt. H. G. Singleton of St. Louis, was slightly injured. Lt. Cram died on the way to the hospital.

A spinning "nose dive" was the evolution the aviators were going through when their machine dropped 700 feet. Both the officers were experienced aviators, and witnesses who saw the accident are unable to say just what caused it. The machine was wrecked.

Patrol Boat Sunk Mistaken For Sub

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Special

NEW YORK, Aug. 27—(Official)—Mistaken for a German submarine a United States patrol boat was fired upon and sunk by a merchant steamer 15 miles off Fire Island at 2 a.m. to-day. Eighteen of the crew are reported lost. Eight were brought here suffering from injuries. The patrol boat was a converted yacht of small tonnage. The injured survivors were transferred upon their arrival here to a hospital ship.

Harvesters at Toronto Station Themselves a Harvest For Wily Pickpocket

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—Pickpockets working among the crowds who were waiting at the Union Station for the departure of the harvesters' excursion are reported to have made quite a haul. One man complained to the C. P. R. police that he had been relieved of $100 in bills while sitting in the waiting room, and another reported the loss of $200. Others who were waiting claimed to have suffered to a smaller extent from the activities of the pickpockets, and altogether thefts aggegated several hundreds of dollars were reported.

ROBBED THE BARBER AND DRANK BAY RUM

Toronto, Aug. 27.—Edwin Guff and a friend repaired to the basement of Alphonse Wickett's barber shop, presumably to quench their thirst with bay rum. They discovered Wickett's $65 gold watch, which departed with them and was sold for $10. In the police court Guff, who was the only man caught, pleaded that the watch had been given to him by his missing friend. As he had three other convictions against him he was sentenced to four months hard labor at the Jail Farm. Wickett stated that he entered a strong protest against the men bringing bay rum into his shop to drink.

Thousands of Men Failed to Report

MONTREAL, Aug. 27—With the concluding day of the period of amnetsy granted deserters and defaulters which ended at midnight on Saturday, there was a rush of men to report for duty. It is stated that during the day over a thousand men reported for duty at the Peel Street and Guy St. Barracks. These with the thousand or more who reported Thursday and Friday make up a total during the last week, estimated by the commanding officers, at between 2,500 and 3,000 men who have come in.

It is however, stated that not 50 per cent. of the men in default and called out by the Registrar have reported for duty in this military district.

Wild Statements Made in Speeches

T.G. Matheson Charged Toronto Police With Killing Men in Riots

TORONTO, Aug. 27.—Two almost irreconcilable word pictures of T. G. Matheson, an employe of the Customs in the day time and an evangelist in his spare time, were drawn in the Police Court yesterday before Matheson was sentenced to the Ontario Reformatory for six months for having spread false reports calculated to prejudice recruiting and to incite a riot. On the one hand there was Matheson standing at street corners seeking to guide the erring back into the straight and narrow path, and on the other the same man telling six hundred excited people among other equally untrue things that the police had bludgeoned to death two men, one of them a returned soldier. There was also another side revealed by the police to the effect that Matheson had four previous convictions against him, all of them dating some years back. Matheson came into the hands of the police during the recent riots.

Matheson has appealed against the conviction and was released on bail.

Lusitania Claims Are All Dismissed

Court Declares German Government Responsible, Not Cunard Line

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—The Cunard Steamship Company cannot be held liable for loss of life and property in the torpedoing of the Lusitania by a German submarine, according to a decision handed down in the Admiralty branch of the United States District Court by Judge Julius M. Mayer and made public today.

"The cause of the sinking of the Lusitania was the illegal act of the Imperial German Government, acting through its instrument, the submarine commander," declared Judge Mayer, who held that "the fault, therefore, must be laid upon those who are responsible for the sinking of the vessel in the legal as well as the moral sense."

In dismissing suits against the Cunard Line aggregating $4,000,000, brought by heirs of persons who perished with the Lusitania on May 7, 1915, Judge Mayer asserted that "It is not to be doubted that the United States and her allies will remember the rights of those affected by the sinking of the Lusitania, and when the time shall come, will see to it that reparation shall be made for one of the most indefensible acts of modern times."

Judge Mayer went exhaustively into the claims that the Cunard Line was negligent and dismissed them with the conclusion that the captain and members of the crew took every precaution justified by the then known facts, both before and after the vessel was torpedoed.

Judge Mayer declared that proof brought out in his investigation which covered a year, is conclusive that the Lusitania was not and never had been armed, and that on the voyage on which she was sunk, did not carry explosives.

British Aviators Down 35 Germans

LONDON, Aug. 27—The following communication dealing with aviation was issued last evening:

"Throughout Aug. 25, our low-flying machines continued to harass the enemy by bombs and machine gun fire directed upon his infantry, guns, transports and trains. Other machines kept in contact with our troops and observed for our artillery. Photography and reconnaisance were carried out as usual.

"Thirty-two tons of bombs were dropped by us during the day on railway junctions such as Cambrai and Valenciennes, on enemy dumps and on the Bruges docks. A hostile airdrome was successfull bombed.

"Twenty-one German machines were brought down by us and one German balloon was destroyed. Thirteen hostile machines were driven down out of control. Five of our machines are mising.

"A heavy rain prevented night flying."

Further Imperial Decisions Coming

Other Important Conclusions This Year on War Effort Says Sir Robert

OTTAWA, Aug. 27.—"The Canadian representatives," declared Sir Robert Borden Saturday, referring in the course of an interview to the work of the Imperial War Conference, "carried out a difinite policy of preserving complete freedom of action to the Government and Parliament of Canada in the policy of methods to be adopted for co-operation with other parts of the Empire in any common purpose."

He referred to conclusions of great moment having been reached, adding that "before the close of the present year further important decisions must necessarily be taken."

All were impressed, the Prime Minister said, with the thoroughness of the Canadian military organization and with the earnestness and devotion of officers and men in the discharge of their duties.

"The magnificent spirit and efficiency of the Canadian Army Corps," he proceeded, "were never more manifest than in the signal victory which they recently won in the successful offensive of a few weeks ago. Striking on a wide front they penetrated the German lines during the first two days to a depth never equalled on either side in a like period."

"During our stay in England," Sir Robert said, "my colleagues and I were actively and exclusively occupied in public affairs. The work of the Imperial War Conference, a summar of which has already been made public covered a great variety of subjects, in some instances definite and final conclusions were reached; in another case committees representing Great Britain and the self-governing Dominions and India were set up with authority to investigate and report; in still another case, resolutions were passed recommending to the consideration of each Government reports from departments or from committees already established. With respect to the subjects embraced in these two classes, the Canadian representatives carried out a definite policy of conserving complete freedom of action to the Government and Parliament of Canada in the policy and methods to be adopted for co-operation with other parts of the Empire in any common purpose.

.. Conclusions of Great Moment.

Nearly all the conclusions reached in the Imperial War Cabinet were of a confidential or secret nature, and therefore cannot be made public. They had a very intimate relation to the conduct of the war in the various theatres. Unity of action, further preparation, co-operation in the utilization of resources, the most effective employment of striking power, whether on land, at sea or in the air; these and many other related subjects were under most close and prolonged consideration from first to last, with the assistance and advice of the highest experts. Conclusions of great moment were reached and before the close of the present year further important decesions must necessarily be taken. Several of these subjects were specially considered by a committee of the Imperial War Cabinet, consisting of the Prime Ministers of the United Kingdom and of the Dominions, together with Gen. Smuts, representing the Prime Minister South Africa. Lord Milner, as Secretary of State for War, was also a member. The deliberations of this committee continued up till the time of my departure, and then had not been absolutely concluded.

"From these labors one gathers a vivid realization of Britain's mighty effort in this war. Not only in the creation and organization of immense armies, but in financial aid to allied nations, in furnishing them with absolutely essential supplies and with the means of transportation, in providing equipment, munitions and implements of war, cannon, rifles, tanks, airplanes of a hundred different types, in the world-wide scope of naval operations covering the immensity of the oceans, in the successful fight against the submarine menace and in the construction of innumerable war craft and merchant ships, the effort has been stupendous. To give but one illustration: Sixty per cent. of the immense armies that have left the shores of the United States during the past five months have been transported in British ships, without which no such task could have been accomplished.

FINE PROGRAM AT GRIFFIN'S

Last night at Griffin's an excellent program of photoplays with two well known stars of unusual ability were seen. The first was Enid Bennett in "The Biggest Show on Earth," a circus story with a real circus flavoring all the way through. There is a very logical stroy running through the photoplay and many surprises which seemed to appeal to the people.

The second big picture was William S. Hart in a fine photoplay staged in the great outdoors, called "Shark Monroe," presented by an excellent cast of players with Hart in the lead. In all the characters that the big good natured Hart portrays, none ever suited him better than the part he has in "Shark Monroe." There was the usual good chapter of the photoplay serial, "The Eagle's Eye," and also a news film which gave some very striking scenes of what America is doing to defeat the schemes of the Hun to rule the world.

CIGARETTE BURN

Men who smoke know how painful a burn of this kind can be. Just smear on a little Zam-Buk and it will give you no more trouble. Even a little burn, if neglected, may develop into a very sore place, as Mr. J. A. Savard, of Doucet, Que., found. He says:

"I burned one of my fingers with a cigarette. I applied some ointment and thought it would be all right, but instead of getting better it got worse, until the sore covered the entire top of my hand. I suffered such pain that I could not sleep, and tried everything I could think of but could not cure it.

"Finally a friend recommended Zam-Buk, which gave me wonderful relief, and the continued use of it completely healed the sore."

For cuts, blisters, rash, eczema, ulcers, blood-poisoning and piles Zam-Buk is equally good. All dealers 50c box.

THE MAGIC SKIN

At the Palace a nice picture called "The Magic Skin", was the offering, along with a new chapter of "The Woman In The Web," and a good comedy.

PEGGY McNEIL'S ADVENTURES

Often one hears the expression, "It's not the world, but the people in it." Almost as truly it may be said in the case of many plays, "It isn't the play, but the people in it." There is no question but that the play "My Irish Cinderella," which comes to Griffin's Theatre next Wednesday, owes its success to the strong virile characters who move through the four stirring acts. They are real people and not automatons manufactured for stage purposes only.

Peggy McNeil is a pretty little Irish lass who is sent to England, needs plenty of adventure there and incidentally loses her heart to a young American aviator, Clifford Morgan, whom she meets at the home of Lord Lonsdale to whom she has been taken by a party of schemers who are plotting to get possession of a large estate Everyone is bound to like Peggy McNeil because Peggy and all her associates are human and doing those things which are logical and conclusive. A complete scenic production is carried and an excellent company of players is promised by the management.

Chaplau Soldier Welcomed by Duke

CHAPLEAU, Aug. 27.—It is not the good fortune of every Canadian soldier returning from the war to his old home town to be publicly welcomed at the station by the Governor-General of the Dominion, but as the C.P.R. train from Ottawa pulled into the depot here the other night it brought Lance-Corp. Charles Ryan back from service at Salonika, and attached to the train was his Excellency the Duke of Devonshire's private car, bound for Winnipeg.

His Excellency, learning from one of the train crew that Corp. Ryan was on board the train and nearing his home town, from which he was one of the first to enlist, invited Ryan into his car and, on the arrival of the train the town band, of which Ryan had been a member before his enlistment, was there to do joint honor to two of the King's representatives, the Duke and the soldier.

His Excellency gave a stirring address from the platform of his car, paying graceful tribute to the part in the Empire's struggle that has been played by the Canadian soldiers.

He spoke encouragingly of the progress of the last stage of the war under the splendid leaders, who are doing so much in these recent days to push back the foe and encourage us.

Upon concluding his speech, the Governor-General moved freely among the crowd, shaking hands and chatting pleasantly with the people.

American Embargo on U.S. Publications

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Aug. 27.—The Washington Government's action in putting an embargo on all American papers, magazines and periodicals coming into Canada is seriously felt here on Sundays by people unable to get their Sunday Buffalo papers. Yesterday all papers for Canada at this point were stopped by the American Customs officials, who acted upon telegraphed orders from Washington.

The embargo is placed in order to conserve paper in the United States, where there is a shortage. It is felt here that if the embargo remains in force it will be a good thing for Canadian papers and magazines and especially for the smaller Canadian dailies in larger cities like Niagara Falls, which have had the big American papers to contend against. Should Canada wish to use retaliatory methods, the big two-million-dollar Ontario paper mill at Thorold, owned by the Chicago Tribune, which newspaper uses all the mill's output itself, it is said might be seriously affelted.

GOODS ARE GETTING SCARCE.

We recently wrote a manufacturer urging the delivery of a line of goods long since due us and the following was his reply:

Keep your temper, gentle sir,
Writes the Manufacturer;
Though your goods are overdue
For a month, or maybe two,
Labor's scarce and looms are rare.
Can't get yarn, can't get dyes,
These are facts—we tell no lies.
Harry's drafted, so is Bill!
All our work is now up hill;
So your order, we're afraid,
May be still a bit delayed:
Still, you'll get it—don't be vexed!
Maybe this month, maybe next.
Keep on hoping, don't say die!
We'll fill your order bye-and-bye.

We reproduce these lines in order that our friends may understand some of the War Time Troubles of doing business and also why goods are getting scarce.

THE TEMPTING OF PAUL CHESTER.

BY

ALICE AND CLAUDE ASKEW

AUTHORS OF "THE SHULAMITE"

CHAPTER III.—Continued

She came boldly into the room.

Paul Chester flushed to his forehead, for he had recognized this woman in a flash, recognized her with a sinking of heart and stirring of soul to be the woman with the white motor-car—the woman who had promised him that he should suffer at her hands. He knew now she could fulfil her words.

As she passed him she looked him hard in the eyes.

"Haven't we met before?" She smiled as she spoke; her smile was inscrutable, baffling.

CHAPTER IV.

"Yes, I—I—think so." Chester repeated the Duchess's words blankly. He was still suffering from the violent shock of having so suddenly come face to face with the woman of the white motor-car, the woman whose dog he had stolen—little Racket, now quite at home at Amphlett Court.

He wondered in a dull sort of way what would happen. One thing was pretty certain, the Duchess of Berkshire would prove a cruel and dangerous enemy—the most dangerous enemy a man could have. He had ruined himself absolutely.

He squared his broad shoulders with a certain defiance. This white smiling creature should not smile over his discomfiture. This woman of scented hair, dressed in a foamy, illusive sort of dress, with the wonderful gleaming shoulders and copper hair—she should not see he was afraid of her.

Their eyes met boldly in a long steady stare. Hers, glowing ambre pools, were impossible to read; his gleamed defiance.

"We'll talk after dinner." Again a strange flickering smile, and she passed on, to take the arm of her host and be led in state to the great dining-hall. She chatter and laughed as she walked down the wide stairs—light, inconsequent chatter; but every one knew that they were following the cleverest woman in England—perhaps the cleverest woman in the world.

"So you know the Duchess?" Paul Chester's partner glanced sharply at him as soon as they had settled into their right places at the big dining-table, a table gleaming withh crystal and silver, and with a wonderful strip of priceless old lace running down the centre.

The man made no answer; he only pursed his lips and pushed a small silver dish full of assorted almonds half mechanically towards the speaker.

Mrs. Jack Seymour shook her head. She was an over-smart woman, and affected a bizarre style of her own. She had heavy black hair and immense dark eyes, and generally dressed in purple, making the color hers. Also, she affected strings of white coral, and to-night had on a long chain of the delicately-tinted opaque beads, which fell to her knees.

She had been a little cross earlier in the evening when she found she was to be taken in to dinner by Paul Chester, a man of whom nobody had heard; for, in her own way, Mrs. Jack Seymour was a person of importance.

'No, thanks," she drawled, pushing the dish away. "I don't begin on almonds with my soup." Then she opened her big eyes and stared hard.

Chester felt she was appraising him, physically and morally.

"You are going to stand at the next election, aren't you?" she asked. "Tell me all about yourself—you look as if you might prove interesting.

Chester smiled. This woman represented a type he had never come across before; a former age would have called Mrs. Jack brazen and gazed at her with horror, but she had her own niche in social life now, and as such must be respected and considered for she and her tribe were a power in the land.

Chester realized in a flash that she might prove a useful friend in the future, and he would need friends now; yes, he would need friends if ever a man did. For he felt morally certain that Henrietta Temple, whose clear laugh he could hear ringing down the length of the table, would try her best to humiliate him to the dust. He knew she could be cruel—she was the type of woman who was cruel by instinct to men as to animals.

He exerted himself to talk to Mrs. Jack and to fan the interest he had already aroused in her. He told her a little of his dreams and ambitions, recognizing that women love to be confided in; nor was he reticent about his parentage and the despised position he had formerly occupied in his father's house.

"I have been an Ishmael from the day of my birth," he said, and there was something impressive, something oddly fascinating, in his way of speaking. "I feel an Ishmael now," he added, with a low laugh. "Everybody in this big room can number friends and relations amongst the guests except myself. You have all intermarried with each other for generations; you can count a hundred connections in common. I am the only outsider."

Mrs Jack laughed. What a handsome man he was, she thought, when his face lit up and his eyes flashed.

"Nonsense! you belong to us through your wife," she replied. "Besides, you are rich; and, after all, it is money that counts nowadays."

"I dont' think so;" he shook his head. "Money lets you into big houses, just as it enables you to purchase a stall at the theatre; but the result is the same—you're merely a spectator. You look on."

"You won't look on, anyway," said Mrs. Jack approvingly. 'You are the sort of man who is bound to take the centre of the stage some time or the other. I foretell a brilliant future for you, Mr. Chester."

The man sipped soda-water slowly. He hardly ever touched wine. Meanwhile, the woman rattled on, taking up a half-flattering, half- patronizing tone.

He appeared to be hanging on her words, and Mrs. Jack was flattered by his evident attention; but his thought, if she had only known, were with the woman who sat at the end of the table, the beautiful, dazzling creature whom he knew to be his enemy, and against whom he felt it would be vain to struggle. But he had the soul of a fighter.

All the time, though he was unaware of it, Lady Susan watched him. She was looking very charming that evening, but the man who sat by her side, and who had known her since the days of her earliest childhood, thought she appeared very pale, and surely she was thinner than she ought to be.

He was a certain Lord Robert Aylmer, the second son of the Marquis of Hardwick, a man whom it was rumored might be offered a big place in the Cabinet when the Berkshire party came into power again.

He was a cousin of Lady Susan's, so they had plenty to talk about; but after awhile, he noticed that her replies were disconnected and disjointed, and that her eyes were fixed with anxious solicitude upon her husband.

'Considering that we have not met for six months, Susan," Lord Robert commented, with some irritability, "I think you might talk a little to me, and not gaze across the table."

Lady Susan flushed. In the past there had been love passages between herself and her cousin. The young man had even gone so far as to ask her to be his wife, but she had not cared sufficiently for him to incur the displeasure of her family; for Lord Robert at that time was to be numbered amongst the ranks of the detrimentals.

'I am sorry, Robert,' 'began Lady Susan, crumbling some breadcrumbs. "It is stupid of me to be so dull to-night, but I have a fearful headache."

Robert looked at her critically. He was a very small man, with a tiny, peaked face and a fair, pointed moustache.

"A headache?" he said slowly; "but you used not to have headaches in the old days. I suppose"—he leaned towards her and lowered his voice—"I suppose you are quite happy? Forgive the question if you think it an impertinent one. Sue."

The blood rose to her forehead. "Happy? Of course I am happy," she replied calmly, a little coldly. "Why should you think otherwise?" She looked at him steadily, but there was a wistful, pathetic expression in her eyes, and he noticed how her lips trembled.

"Forgive me, Sue!" he whispered.

The Duchess was laughing loudly, and there was something oddly unpleasant in such brilliant, shrieking laughter; it grated on the nerves like the cry of a painted-winged macaw.

"I can't bear that woman," said Lady Susan under her breath.

"Nor I," he retorted 'To my mind she is the personication of all that is cruel and unscrupulous and wicked, and yet she can drive men mad with love for her. She's like a siren; she casts her net—she fishes for the souls of men."

"She hasn't won your soul?" Lady Susan glanced up with a faint smile. "Or your heart?"

Robert shook his head. 'I am proof against all her spells," he answered. "I haven't a heart to lose."

He looked at his cousin as he spoke; but she was blind to what she might have read in his eyes, utterly unaware of the love he still gave her.

CHAPTER V.

"In The Conservatory"

The men trooped up into the large and lofty drawing-room, and Chester was the last to enter.

He had not had a particularly amusing time downstairs. The other guests had talked to him and gone out of their way to be fairly amiable, but it proved a little difficult to draw him into general conversation. He had never shot at the great houses where all the other men had just been shooting, or were going to shoot, so could take little interest in the bags which had been made or the personalities which were being discussed.

He had watched the Duke, the big, sleepy-looking man, who half closed his eyes as he smoked his cigarette, and who appeared so limp and apathetic. Yet Berkshire would be England's Premier after the general election, if all the tales were true, a personnage whose colossal power and influence could not be over-stated.

He was glad when a move was made for the drawing-room, for he wanted to see the Duchess again, study her at a distance. But when he entered the room there was such a ring round Henrietta's chair that it was impossible to catch even a glimpse of her.

He moved towards a conservatory at the far end of the room. A fountain could be heard tinkling there, and it was lit up by ruby lamps. He would go and sit there by himself, he thought nobody wanted him, nobody desired his company, and he did not care to be talked to out of pity, as he would be presently, he supposed; his pride was up in arms.

Giant Food Tins For U.S. Army in Trench

Supply Designed to Feed Soldiers When Caught in Tight Place

WASHINGTON, D.C., Aug. 27—For use in the trenches and under line conditions in France, a special reserve ration has been worked put by the quartermaster corps. The ration is packed in camouflaged galvanized iron tins, each container holding 25 pounds. The ration consists of hard beef, corned beef, hash, roast beef, salmon, sardines, soluble coffee, sugar, salt, and the necessary can opener.

The package is hermetically sealed to protect the food against poisoning of gas attacks. The reserve ration is to be used only in emergencies, as under normal conditions the men are served with hot, freshly cooked food.

15,000
Merchant Marine Men
Make the Supreme Sacrifice

Germany and her dastardly submarine campaign never have prevented, and never will prevent, our brave seamen from "carrying on." Transports sail the seas unceasingly; merchant vessels carry the food vital to the success of our cause.

Many of our seamen have been on torpedoed ships, not once only, but several times. Death lurks in the way of every ship. The submarine and loathsome mine have claimed over 15,000 men of our Merchant Marine. They died for us!

What of their dependents—the widows and orphans? Governments make no provision ior them because the Merchant Marine is not a recognized arm of the service, like the Army and Navy. That is why we hold

SAILORS' WEEK
SEPTEMBER 1st TO 7th INCLUSIVE

That is why you are asked to give—and give liberally. The soldier goes into battle knowing his dependents are provided for and will be cared for if anything happens. Our 300,000 merchant seamen face peril just as great, in a service just as vital. A grateful public must look after their families, and keep their dependents from want.

Think of the crime of the Lusitania! Shall the dependents of her lost crew live in poverty? Think of Captain Fryatt, "Murdered by Wilhelm the Damned," on July 30th, 1916! Think of the 176 merchant ships of which all trace has been lost, since war began!

Then—

MISTAKEN GENEROSITY.

The small boy loves the movies but loves not the law which says that he must not visit the Film Palace unless accompanied by parent or guardian who must not only accompany him, but must also occupy an adjoining seat.

The Tom Sawyers and the Huck Finns of these days of Arabian and other nights soon perfected a scheme to beat the law as applied to juveniles visiting motion picture theatres. They lay in wait for some good-natured looking indivdual who has all the landmarks, and possibly earmarks of having been a boy once himself and him they cajole to provide convoy to the darkened aisles of the palace of wonders, where they quickly disappear, sifting into favorite nooks "close up" to those two-gun heroes of the screen, Doug. Fairbanks, Bill Hart, Charles Ray and othes quick-firers. All this looks very harmless and praiseworthy in a way, but there is a sting in it, not apparent on the surface perhaps, but a sting nevertheless, and the theatre manager is the one who is stung, because the law holds him responsible for the kiddies present in his theatre unaccompanied by legal guardian or parent.

Chief of Police Newton has notified Manager Forhan of the local theatres that the law in regard to juvenile attenders at theatres will be strictly enforced and Manager Forhan is desirous that there should be no cause for complaint. Anyone becoming a party to a plot to enveigle some one else's youngsters into the theatre is doing the management an injury and may also get the child in serious trouble.

RETURN OF THE PREMIER

Sir Robert Borden, Premier of Canada, has returned to this country after spending some time overseas on Canada's business. Sir Robert visited the Canadian army in the war zone and was given a great reception by the soldiers from the land of the Maple Leaf. During all the time Premier Borden was absent from Canada he was busy every day promoting the interests of this country in the very place where the most vital of Canadian interests are centred just now—where all the big business of Empire is transacted and where our soldier boys are transferred from Canadian management and oversight to the Imperial ranks and become integral parts of the vast allied armies.

Since Sir Robert Borden's return the carping criticism of the purple press has ceased, for Sir Robert at home is a different propositon from Sir Robert overseas and well able to smash any unjust criticism with unassailable facts. The Premier is not the kind of a statesman who enjoys joy rides and international jaunts. He is noted as one of the hardest and most conscientious workers who has ever occupied the highest office in the gift of Canadians.

The Hamilton Spectator deals with the Premier's return as follows:

> The partisan Grit press should be happy today. Premier Borden is back again upon the soil of this continent, after his three months' visit to Europe. His return, however, removes a topic which has afforded certain newspapers plenty of scope for indulging their powers of Jejune criticism and vituperation, and it will be interesting to see what substitute they will now find.
> The Prime Minister brings back a very inspiring message, which rings with optimism and gratitude. Arriving in England at a time of depression due to the serious reverses sustained by British and French arms, Sir Robert has seen at close range the scene change—the collapse of the German effort and the swelling triumph of the allied armies in France and Italy. The effect of the coming of the American troops—about a million have crossed the Atlantic since Sir Robert left Ottawa—is enthusiastically described. "All Europe is impressed by their splendid physique, their resourcefulness and adaptability, the thoroughness with which they have acquired necessary training, and, finally, the magnificent fighting qualities which they have displayed in every battle in which they have been tested. It is beyond question that the victories of the past four weeks would not have been possible except for the American divisons which have taken their place in the battle line."
> The extraordinary successful victory of the Canadians is commented upon, the greatest victory of the Dominion troops since the beginning of the war, in which nearly 10,000 prisoners and more than 150 cannon were captured, and an advance of about fourteen miles made, the Canadian casualties being considerably less than the number of prisoners taken. Speaking of the future, the Prime Minister emphasizes the necessity of fighting on till the "devils by whom the German miltarists are possessed" have been cast out. The great part which air fighting is to take is hinted at, and the assurance is given of an "unsparing use of economic pressure until Germany has given convincing manifestation of sanity and a clean spirit."
> Sir Robert forecasts a closer union of the British Empire and the American republic for the greater protection of democracy and the peace and security of the world, which would "crown all our sacrifice and would give us much to hope from a wider league of nations."

A collie dog owned in West Belleville met up for the first time last Sunday with one of those deceiving critters called polecats and other names. Collie proceeded to get gay with the black and white pussy, with the usual result—his dogship is spending a few days in voluntary retirement in the bush "hatin' hisself," his departure being assisted by flying bricks and othe implements of pain and torture. Collie, after being copiously anointed, rashly invaded his master's kitchen just as breakfast was being served and rather disturbed the peaceful Sabbath serenity of that particular family, in fact family prayers were omitted on account of a sudden wild desire for fresh air on the part of all concerned, except the Collie, who went because—well, because he had to, and that quickly. Collie, during his retirement, is puzzling his canine brains as to what really happened and what kind of a kitty he ran up against. It surely wasn't a tame cat, and it acted like a combination of wildcat and chemical fire engine. No more cats for Collie!

Kansas City Star.

If the Kaiser would put some more of his sons in command of his armies it would make our task even easier.

As Bad as That.

London Daily Mail.

After the fight at Ville-sur-Ancre two Australians had been playing a piano in a cottage there for twenty minutes, when a cellar flap opened and a German sergeant-major surrendered with ten men.

Admirals in Thousands.

Nelson News.

Nelson City has been invaded by millions of red-admiral butterflies. The streets are literally alive with the black and red creatures flitting here and there and everywhere. The red-admirals make their appearance every year, but this year a larger number than usual are in evidence. Old timers will venture no reason.

A Tribute to Foch.

Morning Post.

Hour by hour, as the great Allied victory, between the Aisne and the Marne develops, France realizes more and more the genius of the man who has brought it about and how sound was the action of the Allies in deciding, in spite of their long hesitation, to place the fate of the whole of their armies and of their own priceless future in the hands of this one great soldier.

A Laugh or Two

All the world's a stage and all the supers imagine that they are stars.

Man proposes, woman disposes, and the rest of the world says "I told you so."

A Right to the Name

"You call that patch a war garden?"

"Hasn't it the appearance? Since the drought hit it, it looks like a section of No Man's Land."

Rhetorical Caution.

"Do you advise a man to strive for well rounded periods in writing a speech?"

"Emphatically," replied Senator Sorghum. "In fact, some of us could devote all our time to the punctuation marks and omit words entirely, everybody would feel safer."

Breaking it Gently.

Sandbody gazed on his young wife with shining eyes. "A penny for your thoughts, darling," he breathed.

"O, John," she replied, "they will cost you more than that!"

"Why, dear, what were you thinking about, then?"

"Oh, about a beautiful new gown that I ordered to be sent home yesterday!"

Unsafe Experiment

The party of tourists were watching Prof. X as he exhumed the wrapped body of an ancient Egyptian.

"Judging from the utensils about him," remarked the professor, "this mummy must have been an Egyptian plumber."

"Wouldn't it be interesting," said a romantic young lady, "if we could bring him to life?"

"Interesting, but a bit risky," replied the professor. "Somebody might have to pay for his time."

Tender Memeries.

"Shut that door!" yelled the rough man. "Where were you raised, in a barn?" The man addressed meekly and silently complied, but the speaker looking at him a moment later, observed that he was in tears. Going over to his victim he apologized. "Oh, come," he said soothingly, "you shouldn't take it to heart because I asked if you were raised in a barn."

"That's it, that's it," sobbed the other man. "I was raised in a barn and it makes me homesick every time I hear an ass bray!"

The Real Thing.

Elder Sister—Stoicism is the ability to congratulate the fiancee of the man you wanted to marry without showing any disappointment.

The Sweet Young Thing.

"Yes, madam. What can I do for you?"

"Have you any nice fowls today?"

"Yessum; would you wish a dressed chicken?"

"N—no; it's rather expensive dressed, I presume. Just send me one with a kimono on and I will have the cook dress it."

The Poet's Corner

GOD'S MESSENGER.

I sat by the open window
As the shadows began to fall,
Wondering if this world of ours
Was worth the living at all.

Trying to see if the pleasures
O'erbalanced in any way
The pain, the sorrow, and heartache
That comes to us every day.

I sat till the stars came peeping
From their hiding-place in the sky,
And I wished I had wings just then
To another world to fly.

And a bird sang out in the darkness,
So near that I felt afraid;
It seemed like a loud voice saying,
"All things by God were made."

If never a weed existed
Should we love so dearly the flowers?
And say, should we value the sunshine
Had we never been under the showers?

And so, if we had no sorrow,
Could we know when our joy to prize?
If we never had tasted the bitter,
The sweet could we recognize?

If there were no deeds of kindness,
If there were no acts of love,
Should we know what was meant by heaven
When we speak of the world above?

I was silent again in the darkness
And the bird had flown to its nest,
But another penitent heart was made
Before it had gone to rest.

—London (Eng.) Despatch.

OUR JIM.

The lean years pinched; the lean years went,
An' fat years come on laggard wing,
Misfortune saw their savin's spent,
Yet dad and mum knew how to sing
Of golden hopes that loomed ahead,
But now—but now . . . our Jim is dead!

Mum braves the shafts of Sorrow well,
But dad is droopin' like a flower,
Big Jim—his pride! Hot tears will well
Into his eyes . . . to see him cower
Makes cryin' catchin'. My! we dread
To talk aloud since Big Jim's dead.

When our Jim went, dad worked the farm,
Though he'd retired a goodly span.
"Hard graft," he said, "will never harm
A willin' and a healthy man."
Of course we humored this kind of whim—
For dad was doin' it for Jim.

Dad has lost heart—he's quite convinced
That all he's done is labor lost;
Though hard the graft, he never winced
About the worry or the cost,
'Cos Jim was fightin' o'er the foam,
An' he must see the harvest home!

Mum braves the shafts of Sorrow's bow,
But dad is wiltin' like a tree,
That's ringbarked. . . . Nearby days may show
That it's within Fate's grim decree
To send ol' dad—a whilom whim—
Out west, a wingin' after Jim!

is a term we feel permitted to use, as being descriptive of the state of mind of many of our CUSTOMERS who have taken advantage of OUR SUMMER FUR PRICES. The response to our offer of these special PRICES for summer work, has been gratifying to us, and no doubt means some lightening of our HEAVY FALL burden. By no means are we deploring our HEAVY FALL TRADE, far from it; but it is with a view to educating the PUBLIC to the MUTUAL advantages of preparing well ahead of winter to make void its many terrors, by having your FURS attended to NOW. LOW PRICES, FREE STORAGE, FURS ALL READY WHEN NEEDED, are to your advantage. It will be easily seen that IF our customers do this, we shall be relieved of many an all-night session in the fall. Thus, by equalizing our working days it would be to our advantage; hence these offers of LOW PRICES

Major Arthur K. Tylee, inspector of training in the R. A. F., has been appointed to the rank of lieutenant-colonel. Col. Tylee is a Canadian and before being attached to the headquarters staff was officer commanding the 42nd Wing at Camp Mohawk. His rise in the Royal Air Forces has been rapid, and his present post is one of the most important in the service, as he has charge of the training in the R. A. F. camps throughout Canada.

LOOTED A HOUSE

County Constable Soules last evening brought to the city a young man named Serene Parks, of Bannockburn, Madoc Township. The accused is charged with house breaking and robbery. A house belonging to Mr. James Hunt of Madoc Township was recently broken into and ransacked. Murney Wannamaker and George Reid wer arrested, charged with the ocence and they pleaded guilty before Magistrate Mason. Sentence in their case was deferred. When they were arrested Parks disappeared but yesterday was apprehended at his home and brought to the county jail here.

FORMER BELLEVILLIAN WOUNDED

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. J. McCarthy, 69 Dupont street, Toronto, will be sorry to hear that the following wire was received by them, "Sincerely regret to inform you No. 83783 Driver Charles McCarthy, artillery, officially reported admitted to 73 General Hospital, Trouville, August 14th, gunshot wound in face." Driver McCarthy enlisted in May, 1915, and has seen continual service in France since September, 1915. The family resided in Belleville, where they had many friends, who will hope for a speedy recovery of the young hero.

QUARRIES OPERATED AGAIN

The Bancroft marble quarries are being operated again. A company has been formed under the name of the Bancroft Marble Quarries, with Mr. J. R. Holdge as manager, and they are now busy on a contract for the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa. Part of the material will be finished on the ground, and a number of men are being brought from Toronto to do this work. The quarries are being operated under a lease from the liquidator of the old company. Mr. Holdge has taken up his residence at the quarries. —Bancroft Times.

Gas in the Stomach Is Dangerous

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

A FAMILY JAR

A case of assault preferred by a wife against her husband, was called in police court this morning, but was enlarged for a week with an object of having the parties effect a settlement of their difficulties. Mr. A. Abbot, private prosecutor, and Col. E. D. O'Flynn for the defendant.

CASE ENLARGED

Serene Parks, a young man charged with breaking into and stealing from the residence of James Hunter, Madoc Township, appeared this morning before Magistrate Masson. As the Crown was not prepared to proceed in the case an enlargement until Friday was granted. The accused was liberated on bail, himself in $1,000 and two securites of $500 each. Mr. Carnew for Crown and Mr. A. Abbott for the accused.

BELLEVILLE BOWLERS WIN

At the annual tournament of the Cobourg Bowling Club a rink of Bellevillian bowlers, skipped by Mr. R. J. Wray, won the finals. The prizes secured were electric grills. In the final game Belleville was pitted against Port Hope. The players and scores were as follows: Belleville, W. B. Riggs, Rev. C. G. Smith, Rev. A. S. Kerr, R. J. Wray, 23; Port Hope, H. Mitchell, H. Walker, W. D. Stephens, W. J. Oke, 9.

PTE. A. E. BALDWIN WOUNDED

Mrs. A. E. Baldwin, 22 Green St., this city, has received word that her husband, Pte. A. E. Baldwin, has been admitted to hospital suffering from gas poisoning. Mr. Baldwin's many friends will remember that prior to enlistment he was engaged as caretaker of the local Y.M.C.A. He went overseas over a year ago with the 254th Battalion. The following is the telegram sent: "Sincerely regret to inform you 1003398 Pte. Albert Edward Baldwin, infantry, officially reported admitted to Third West General Hospital, Cardiff, August 20th, gassed.—Director of Records.

PTE. E. R. DUNLOP WOUNDED

Two sons of Mrs. Elizabeth Dunlop, 156 Willow Avenue, Toronto, have gone overseas. Jas. S. Dunlop was killed in action June, 1917. Now Pte. J. E. R. Dunlop is reported shot in the thigh August 13. He went overseas in October, 1916, was for a time Sgt.-Instructor in England, and has been in France since March. He was born in County Fermanagh, Ireland, 24 years ago; came to Canada in 1910, and at the time of his enlistment was managing a branch store for the Wm. Davies Company at Belleville. His mother has had three nephews, all the sons of the same parents, killed in action.

Sporting Notes

Baseball

G. T. R. BASEBALL,

At Pine street School grounds last evening about one hundred fans who turned out witnessed a nice game of ball, the Office team defeating the Shops by the close score of 8-6 after an uphill battle in which the Shops led all the way and looked to have the game tucked away in the fifth innings when they were leading 6-4, but the ink-slingers came in in the 6th and punished the old onion terribly, scoring 4 runs, putting the game on ice, as the Shops were unable to get in their half of the sixth. At the completion of this innings the captains decided it was getting a little dark, and that it would be better not to try another innings, the game ending thusly. The game started about 7 o'clock and in future in the evenings these games will be called for 6.30 so that seven or nine innings may be completed.

"Shamrock" O'Neil, who hails from the C.N.R. shop team of Trenton, was used by the Office team last night. He played fine and looks as if he may be a star for the old timers when they meet Joe Goyer's team at the Fair Grounds Saturday afternoon.

Harry Pringle was unable to participate last night as he was handling out train orders at the station, and we think he was very much peeved on account of not being able to be on hand to help trim the Shops. Both teams played good ball in the field, also doing some nice hitting.

Just before the start of the game an unfortunate accident happened to Mr. A. Andrews, when he went after a batted ball which took a bad bound, hitting him in the mouth, breaking two teeth and cutting his upper lip badly. He pluckily stuck to the game however and played well.

Score by innings:

Offices . . . . . 1 0 1 1 1 4—8
Shops . . . . . 0 2 3 0 1 0—6

The line-up:

Shops—Rainbird, 1st; Brown, 3rd; Follwell, 2nd; Shane, r.f.; Foster, c.f.; Ford, p.; Schrieder, l.f.; Miles, c.; McKinnin, s.s.

Offices—Young, 1st; Andrews, s.s.; Morden, c.; Meagher, p.; Snell, 3rd; Ferguson, c.f.; Flagler, l.f.; Yott, 2nd; O'Neil, r.f.

Umpires—Pepper and Taylor.

Challenge.

The Office team challenge the Yardmen or Trainmen to a game. How about it? Reply here. A picked team from the G. T. R. would like to meet the Old Timers or some other organization. Games can be arranged by getting in touch with Harry Pringle, manager.

The Junior Ontario baseball team have an idea they can whale the daylights out of either the Old-Timers team or Joy Goyer's Pets and have challenged the winners of that much anticipated game.

At the Agricultural Park tomorrow afternoon a baseball match will take place between the Ontarios of the city and a team from Delora. A first clas game is anticipated.

Saskatchewan's Crop Damage Reports Greatly Magnified—Want 10,000 Harvesters At Once

Reports previously published regarding the damage by frost to the crops in Saskatchewan were unduly pessimistic. Frequent showers and favorable weather have changed the outlook and it is apparent that the great Province of Saskatchewan will have a normal crop. This is evidenced by the demand for Farm Laborers as not less than 10,000 are required there immediately for harvesting.

Final excursions are, By Canadian Northern regular Winnipeg train leaving Toronto 10.00 p.m. August 28th, and 30th. Harvesters from outside points to use connecting trains to Toronto.

RITCHIE'S

CARRY ON

THE spirit that animates the boys in the trenches today is the spirit of "Carry On!" They realize that what was worth doing when they started is still worth doing, and despite their troubles and hardships they intend to see it through.

¶ That spirit which radiates from the battlefield should stimulate every business enterprise that is worth while and every individual who is worth while to "carry on" at home in a manner that will do themselves credit.

¶ We at home are urged to practice thrift and economy, and that is good sound advice, but there are other ways to practice thrift and economy besides curtailing expenditure. You can plan to purchase your necessary wearing apparel or commodities for the home in a store that puts quality first and yet always arranges to have its prices as low, if not lower, than you will find elsewhere.

¶ The Ritchie Store does that very thing—This Autumn season we are "carrying on" with a more vigorous and progressive store policy than ever before. Our buyers still go to the large centres, only more frequently. We are buying the staple lines of merchandise in much larger quantities than previously and the styles you see at Ritchie's are selected with infinite care by our buying experts so that they combine the very latest dictates of fashion and the finest qualities procurable.

¶ The stocks we have assembled and are assembling every day for the new season surpass any of our former attempts, and we are quite satisfied that in arranging to practice thrift and economy in a practical way you could not do better than to arrange to do your Autumn shopping at Ritchie's.

J.R. Boyle Becomes Attorney-General—A.G. McKay to Go Into Cabinet

CALGARY, Alta., Aug. 28.—On Saturday the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council appointing C. W. Cross Attorney-General of the Province, and appointed John R. Boyle, for several years Minister of Education, to that position. On Tuesday next, or early in the week, A. G. Mackay, at one time member of the Ontario Cabinet and later leader of the Opposition in the Ontario Legislature, will be sworn in to the Government as Minister of Municipalities. His absence from the capital alone prevented such action being taken yesterday.

With this change, Premier Stewart has met his first big difficulty in this Province, and his action has cleared the atmosphere, and doubtless established peace in the Liberal party. Last week when the rumor was circulated that the change was to be made, the one newspaper which supported the late Attorney-General circulated a report that it was a plot by Premier Stewart to dispose of the five members of the Government who opposed Union Government in the last election. It is said that Mr. Cross at the same time sent out a summonds to the members of the Legislature unfriendly to Union Government to meet on emergent business in Edmonton, but did not state the reason for the meeting. Six members, it is said, responded to the invitation last Wednesday, but were loyal enough to the Premier to insist upon meting him before taking action.

Keep Federal Politics Oout

The Premier was very emphatic that Federal politics had not entered into his decision, and that he always had kept and always would continue to keep Federal politics out of the Provincial matters. With this assurance the members were satisfied, and they did not wait upon Mr. Cross.

The latter, it is reported, declined to resign, or even to respond to the Premier's request for his rsignation, and the Premier thereupon interviewed the Lieutenant-Governor, and the Cross appointment to the position of Attorney-General was rescinded.

Mr. Cross was formerly a resident of Madoc, where his brother still resides. The latter was the unsuccessful Laurierite candidate in the Dominion election against Mr. Thos. Thompson, Union candidate.

Reinstate History In Entrance 'Exams'

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—British and Canadian history is to again become an important subject in the Junior High School entrance examination. In referring to the intention of the department to reinstate the British and Canadian history in the examinations for 1919, Hon. Dr. Cody, Minister of Education, yesterday stated that arrangements had been made which it was believed would stimulate and direct the study of history in the schools.

"The value of the subject in promoting patriotism, in providing material for a clear grasp of Canadian civics and in expounding Canada's Imperial relations and her place in the Empire is generally recognized," said the Minister. "A circular will shortly be issued which will contain a definite outline of the course both in British and Canadian history with selected periods and topics, a minimum of chronology and a statement of the particular sections in the text-books dealing with the topics and sub-topics to be examined upon. The circular also contains a special list of books suitable for school libraries and for the teacher's use in preparing the lessons. In the introduction to the circular will be found a brief and instructive exposition of the method of teaching history. The course, as laid down, should prove to be easily within the compass of any teacher and fascinating to the pupils. As an illustration that the modified course is not too heavy, it may be noted that while the present text-books contain 587 pages of reading matter, a total of only 217 pages is assigned for study in Form IV."

The course in grammar for Form IV. of the Public and Separate Schools, added Dr. Cody, has been lightened and amended by omitting easy parsing and the paper set in the subject for the High School entrance examination will emphasize the application to composition of the principles of correct speech.

Indian Travels Over 3,000 Miles to Enlist

John Campbell Comes From Ft. Yukon by Trail, canoe, and Steamer

DAWSON, Y.T., August 28—John Campbell, a full-blooded MacKenzie Indian, traveling 3,000 miles by trail, canoe, and river steamer to Vancouver to enlist in the Canadian army. He started from the Arctic coast near Herchel Island, and walked across Porcupine River, thence to Fort Yukon, where he worked several months to get money to buy transportation to Vancouver.

Pte. John E Canniff Killed In Action

Another Belleville boy has made the supreme sacrifice for King and Country. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Lyle Canniff, residing at 121 Yeomans St., received the following telegram, which refers to his brother:

Ottawa, August 27th, 1918.

L. V. Canniff,
121 Yeomans Street,
Belleville.

Deeply regret to inform you that 1,093,324 Pte. John Edgar Canniff, officially reported killed in action on August 10th, 1918.

Director of Records.

Pte. Canniff enlisted and went overseas with the 155th Battalion in this city. For some time previous to enlistment he was engaged in railway work. He was about 28 years of age and was a son of the late Mr. John Canniff, preceded him to the tomb was unmarried. Jack, as he was familiarly called had many friends here who will regret to learn of his death. His mother, Mrs. Emma Jane Canniff, preceded hi mto the tomb some weeks ago. One brother, Lyle, survives, also three sisters, Mrs. Isaac Frost, of Edmonton, Mrs. H. Leavens, of Toronto, and Mrs. James Shertts of this city. To the bereaved will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of all citizens.

British Advance Over Litters of Hun Dead

British Army Headquarters, Aug. 28—The demeanor of hundreds of German officers taken prisoner recently is in striking contrast with the attitude of officers captured during the British retreat last spring. Then German officer prisoners were arrogant and meant to crush the British to earth, but now they are depressed and very anxious.

Forty-two German divisions have suffered considerable losses in the present British drive, losing 40,000 soldiers. The capture of one officer and four gunners of an Austrian battery confirms the presence of Austro-Hungarian artillery on the western front.

Field Marshal Haig's men have had to fight for every yard of ground. Considerable numbers of guns and prisoners have been captured all along the line, and the British have again inflicted the heaviest possible casualties on the enemy. The ground over which the battle has been fought was invariably littered with dead Germans.

The Germans exhibit signs of cracking at some places, but are offering desperate resistance. Many more guns, some of large calibre, have been taken. One British corps alone has captured eighty guns. There is evidence of confusion in the enemy rear. Units of the same divisions hurled into the battle have been taken at places separated by many miles. Quantities of material are falling into the British hands because the Boche had not troubled to apply the torch or explosives.

Prisoners taken when Miramont fell, after a brave resistance by its garrison, said they had been fighting for three days without food.

Many tanks have returned to their lines with all the paint shot off their steel sides by machine gun bullets. At some points the Germans approached the tanks as soon as they saw them, with hands high above their head, fearfully shouting "kamerad!"

CONSTANTINOPLE RAIDED.

Amsterdam, Aug. 28.—Two hostile air squadrons attacked Constantinople Wednesday night, says a Turkish official statement received here today.

THIRTY VILLAGES TAKEN IN ONE DAY: FROM GERMANS BY GALLANT FRENCH

CANADIANS CAPTURED 2,000 HUNS YESTERDAY

ALLIED ADVANCE CONTINUES ALL ALONG THE LINE DESPITE DESPERATE RESISTANCE OF ENEMY HASTILY REINFORCED — BRITISH LINE ON FLANDERS FRONT ADVANCED FOUR MILES SINCE YESTERDAY — CHAULNES OCCUPIED BY FRENCH TROOPS — FOUCAUCOURT CAPTURED BY BRITISH — ENEMY DRIVEN FROM TRONES WOOD — GERMAN FORCES EAST OF ROYE APPEAR TO BE PREPARING FOR RETIREMENT ON BROAD FRONT—FRENCH TROOPS CAPTURED ROYE YESTERDAY.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, August 28.—British forces fighting east of Arras have reached the outskirts of Haucourt, Remy and Boiry-Notre Dame, north of the Arras-Cambrai road. The British line in the Flanders battle area has been advanced on a front of four miles astride the Neuf Berquin-Estaires road.

BRITISH CAPTURE FOUCAUCOURT.

South of the Somme the British have taken Foucaucourt, while north of the Somme they have attacked and taken the greater part of Trones Wood.

30 VILLAGES CAPTURED IN ONE DAY.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—(Official)—Chaulnes has been occupied by French troops. Progress toward the Somme was continued this morning by the French. Since yesterday thirty villages have been taken by them.

CAPTURE TRONES WOOD.

With the British Forces in France, Aug. 28.—British troops today completed the capture of Trones Wood, north of the River Somme. Canadian troops in their advance astride the Somme yesterday captured more than two thousand Germans.

GENERAL RETIREMENT IMMINENT.

With the French Army, Aug. 28.—In the region east of Roye which was captured by the French yesterday the Germans today appear to be preparing for an eventual retirement on a broad front.

Canadian Victories.

The Canadian corps on Monday and Tuesday won a great victory. On a front of almost five miles south of the Scarpe the corps, in association with Scottish troops on its right, smashed its way clear through the outer Hindenburg defensive line, and now stands east of the enemy's main trench system from near Pelves, on the Scarpe, to the south of Cherisy. The corps in its two days' advance captured the villages, or, rather, the ruins of the former villages, of Monchy, Wancourt, Guemappe, Cherisy and Vis-en-Artois, together with the Bois du Sart, a wooded eminence east of Cherisy, which commands a wide view over the Sensee Brook, a tributary of the Scheldt. The Canadians today at Vis-en-Artois, on the Arras-Cambrai road, are farther east than any Allied troops have been on the Scarpe sector since the retreat from Mons in 1914.

Many Prisoners.

To their left, north of the Scarpe and at Fontaine-les-Croisilles on their right, Scottish troops also made excellent progress, capturing Roeux, the important high ground known as Greenland Hill and Gavrelle. English battalions on that part of the front east of Vimy Ridge took Arleux. These advances open the way for further progress toward Douai and Cambrai. It is announced that "many prisoners" were taken yesterday. Mr. Livesay, the Canadian Press correspondent, estimated the number taken on Monday by the corps at two thousand. Yesterday's attack may have yielded as many more.

Capture of Roye.

Roye was captured yesterday after the French, by an encircling movement, had almost cut off the retreat of its garrison. When the German defence gave way it gave way utterly, and an advance was made of over two and a half miles on a twelve-mile front. Press despatches state that strongly protected and heavily armed positions which included the first and second line systems of the defences constructed in 1914, and held continuously until the retreat of the Germans in 1917, were turned by the encircling movements of the French. Late yesterday afternoon the troops of General Debeny, advancing northeast of Roye, had reached a point less than four miles from Nesle, the only useful road and rail centre remaining to the enemy west of the bend of the Somme at Peronne. The retreating Germans are trying to hold back the pursuit by loosing airplanes in great numbers against the French infantry and aircraft

Farmers Asked For Accounting

Must Tell Ottawa Expenses and Sales, as Basis of War Income Tax

OTTAWA, Aug. 28.—Farmers throughout the country are being asked by the Finance Department to fill in forms which will give an accounting of their operations in 1917 for the purposes of the Income War Tax Act. The farmers are requested to state the quantity of their products in that year, the price at which those products were sold the quantity consumed at home or exchanged for goods at shops, income from other sources, the cost of feed, labor, machinery and an estimate of depreciation. Farmers are liable to taxation under the Income War Tax Act. Inasmuch, however, as many do not keep books, it has been difficult to ascertain the amount of their incomes. From the information disclosed by the forms now being sent out the Finance Department will determine what individuals are liable to taxation and the amount of their taxes.

Late Telegraph Briefs

Canadians in their operatios south of the Scarpe River yesterday took two thousand prisoners and captured the towns of Cherisy, Visen, Artois and the BoishDusart.

The Turkish Government has called to the colors all able-bodied men from 17 to 45.

Canadians Capture Cristy After A Fierce Battle

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

British Headquarters, August 28.—The advance of the Canadians yesterday was supported by tanks and was a most dashing performance. Cristy was entered amidst fierce fighting. Some of the ground gained by the British has been in German hands since September, 1914.

German Retreat on Somme Front Becomes Rout With Heavy Losses

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, August 28.—1.30 p.m.—The German retreat on the Somme battlefield has become precipitate. The French first and third armies are at no point losing contact with the enemy. The French are inflicting heavy losses on the retreating Germans.

Probable Double Drowning Tragedy

Cries of Man and Woman Heard on St. Lawrence Near Morristown

BROCKVILLE, Aug. 28.—Circumstances point to the loss of two lives in the waters of the St. Lawrence in the vicinity of Sister Island, near Morristown, at 10 o'clock Monday evening. At that hour many residents of Morristown and campers on the river near Terrace Park heard cries, apparently those of a man and a woman, coming from the river at the point mentioned. This morning a boat, right side up, was found on the American shore a mile above Morristown, which was later identified as the property of A. Delisle of this town, having been stolen from his boat-house yesterday morning.

Last night word was received here that the immigration officials at Ogdensburg and Morristown have been on the lookout for several days for a Lancaster couple, a man of sixty and a girl of sixteen, who, it was thought, would attempt to cross here en route from Lancaster to Watertown, N.Y. Their entrance has been forbidden. The name of the girl is given as Gladys Vincent, but the man's name could not be ascertained. Whether or not they were the couple in distress is a mystery here, but all circumstances point to a double drowning.

Amputation Cases To be Sent Home

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—Owing to the large number of amputation cases being handled by the military authorities in Toronto it has been considered necessary to make some slight alteration in the arrangements for the future. In the routine orders received from Ottawa yesterday it was stated that hereafter all men transferred from England to Canada will be sent to their respective districts from on to seven, and will be given an indefinite term of leave. Then when vacancies occur in one of the Toronto hospitals the cases will be accommodated in their order. Formerly all men who were listed for treatment were sent direct to Toronto, but owing to the limited accommodation at present this method cannot be continued. This rule will not apply to men belonging to Western districts.

PARIS, Aug. 28—French cavalry is harrassing the retreating Germans in the Chaulnes region, hampering the withdrawal of the enemy forces.

Druggists Meet Doctors' Attack

TORONTO, Aug. 28—With a view to conserving trade interests the retail druggists of Ontario yesterday at a meeting in the Ontario College of Pharmacy organized the Ontario Retail Druggists Association Officers were elected, a committee appointed to draft up by-laws, and all the preliminary organiation work cleared up.

In discussing the necessity of such an association the threatened attack upon patent medicines from a number of sources was considered, and the general feeling was that the interests of the patent medicine people should be protected. Although there were possibly some black sheep among them, it was not felt that the attack was justified.

The officers elected were: President, W. T. Strong, London; First Vice-President, A. H. Johnston, Collingwood; Second Vice-President, J. T. Hogg, Kingston; Secretary-Treasurer, F. A. Jacobs, Toronto.

The druggists expect in the future to co-operate with other lines of trade. Ontario is the last place to organize.

COL. GINGRAS ARRAIGNED BEFORE COURT-MARTIAL

MONTREAL, Aug. 28—Stripped of his belt and spurs, as a military prisoner, Lt.-Col. Oliver Jules Ludger Daly-Gringras, officer commanding the 2nd Depot Battalion, 2nd Quebec Regiment, apeared before a general court-martial at military headquarters, on Bishop Street on charges connected with the canteen fund of the battalion.

The charges include allegations that Col. Gingras accepted a discount of $186.80 on a purchase of instruments for the band. The accused pleaded not guilty.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

'MY IRISH CINDERELLA' TONIGHT

"My Irish Cinderella" is the title of the new four act comedy drama which will be seen at Griffin's Theatre tonight.

It is said to be entirely different from the Irish plays that have been seen in recent years. It tells the story of a little Irish girl, Peggy McNeil, and her adventures in this country and abroad. It has a good clean, interesting story and the characters are all human and real. It sparkles with true Celtic wit, and there is no caricature of the Irish race, as is so often seen in so-called Irish plays.

At the opening of the play, Peggy is found as a drudge in a poorhouse. She has been given a story book of Cinderella, and while she is reading it a strange train of circumstances begin, which finally lands Peggy in England, as the heiress of the Earl of Lonsdale.

Miss Daisy Carleton, in her action of the title role, presents a splendid character drawing. The beauty of the rich Irish dialect is carefully brought out, and Miss Carleton is a charming and delightful little coleen. She is a remarkably clever dancer and during the action of the play has several song hits.

A splendid supporting company adds to the interest of the play, and a beautiful scenic production is promised by the management.

Ottawa Man Has Gained 27 Pounds

Well Known Lumberman Is Surprised at Results From Tanlac

In speaking of the marvelous way in which Tanlac has relieved him of a long-standing case of stomach trouble, Allan Reaume, a well-known lumber expert who lives at 107 Echo Drive, Ottawa, said: "I was actually surprised at the way Tanlac took right hold of my trouble, for I gained twenty-seven pounds on it and am now in better health than I have been in years."

Mr. Reaume was for sixteen years employed as lumber buyer by W. & J. Sharples, lumber exporters of Quebec, and he has an extensive acquaintance throughout Ontario and Quebec. He is now employed as head checker for the Peter Lyall & Sons, Construction Company in the erection of the new Parliament buildings.

"I suffered terribly from stomach trouble and a general rundown condition of the system," continued Mr. Reaume, "which had been worrying me for about two years. I had no appetite, and what little I did eat always soured and made trouble for me. I would bloat up so with gas that I was constantly belching it up and my stomach was painful all the time. I would have a heavy mean feeling after meals, as if my food had formed a hard mass and I never seemed to get any nourishment from what I ate. My nerves were in such bad shape that I could not rest well at night, but would get up in the morning feeling just as miserable as when I went to bed. I felt tired and played out all the time, had no energy about me, I lost twenty-seven pounds and was feeling just about all in.

"I had read so much about Tanlac that at last I decided to try it. I have taken seven bottles so far and it has not only entirely relieved my stomach trouble, but since I started taking it I have regained all my lost weight; I have a hearty appetite now, can eat most anything and am never troubled with indigestion or gas on my stomach at all. My nerves are in fine shape now, I feel stronger and better in every way and it was nothing but Tanlac that put me on my feet again. Because of the good Tanlac has done me I have started my wife to taking it and I am sure it will fix her up like it has me."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. . McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

Letters From Overseas

APPRECIATES Y.M.C.A.

From a letter written by Corp. J. C. Horrie to his mother, Mrs. W. D. Horrie, 159 Anne street city.

France, July 25, 1918.

In both your letters you asked me what I think about the Y. M. C. A. out here. I cannot say a thing against them; they have their canteens right up the line in dugouts. They also sell at reasonable prices Canadian goods that otherwise we would not be able to get. In the hot weather you can drop into a Y. M. C. A. and get a fine drink of lime juice or lemonade and a package of biscuits for a couple of pennies. In the winter they always have hot tea and coffee ready for the boys coming out of the line and for my part I certainly do not know what we would do without the Canadian Y. M. C. A. in France.

Refering to the socks I can't remember ever seeing a pair for sale in a Y.M.C.A., but I must say that I have not had many pairs of Red Cross socks, issued, although I have had all kinds of others.

Well, mother, I think that at present we are in the most comfortable position we have ever been in. We are in a railway station in the cellar. Our telephone exchange is a little room and Sergt. Wibsdale and I have another little room to ourselves just big enough for two beds, and spring beds at that, and we are using oil lamps.

Don't Spoil Your Hair By Washing It

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

BOX SOCIAL AT BAYSIDE.

For four years a tremendous responsibility has been willingly shouldered and heroically carried on by women, old and young, in every station of life, no matter where they reside nor under what circumstances they live. Careful observation convinces one of open mind that as a whole women have thrown themselves into war tasks with even greater determination and sacrifice of time and convenience than the average man who remains in civil life.

It is needless to speak of the promptness and enthusiasm with which women everywhere took up the work of knitting socks, helmets, sweaters, etc., and making garments for the Red Cross, often financing their own expenditures.

This has been nobly demonstrated by the Red Cross branch at Bayside. For over three years the ladies have met fortnightly in the homes of the members and sewed all day on garments called for by the Canadian Red Cross. As a consequence considerable sums of money have been required and various have been the methods resorted to raise it. This has entailed a great deal of extra work on the part of the ladies, but never has a meeting been cancelled for lack of material.

Funds again running low and the need for the continuance of such work being greater than ever, a box social was held on Friday evening last on the school lawn. The night was ideal—warm and moonlight. After a program ably handled by R. J. Graham, the boxes were put up by Mr. Norman Montgomery, auctioneer, Brighton, who in his inimitable way added much to the amusement of the crowd and incidentally to the funds of the society. The fish pond was in great favor and the ice cream and candy booth was most liberally patronized. Perforce the crowd was in high humor and the opportunity for social intercourse was embraced by all. Former residents present were Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Graham, Hampton, Virginia; Prof. W. R. Graham and family, O.A.C., Guelph; Mr. and Mrs. Redner Finkle, Los Angeles; Misses Mary and Susie Brown, Toronto; Dr. Fred Wilson of Petawawa Camp, and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Finkle, Belleville. A jolly hayrack party from Willow Camp made their presence felt.

Mrs. Donald Gunn, Sr., and Mrs. Percy Boulton had previously each donated a centrepiece on which tickets had been sold by the members. The lucky numbers were drawn and it was found that Mr. R. J. Graham and Mrs. Coon were the winners. Great credit is due to the ladies in charge who in one short week and within a limited territory arranged the affair so successfully. The executive consists of Mrs. Chas. Hall, 1st vice-president; Mrs. Harvey Hogle, 2nd vice-president; and Mrs. Geo. Gunn, secretary-treasurer. Though returns are still somewhat incomplete the net proceeds are as far as ascertained $150.

The first hospital special train, conveying thirty-three invalided soldiers to their homes, is to leave Kingston tomorrow.

THE TEMPTING OF PAUL CHESTER.

BY

ALICE AND CLAUDE ASKEW

AUTHORS OF "THE SHULAMITE"

CHAPTER V.—Continued

It was pleasant enough in the conservatory. A delicious scent of lilies of the valley prevailed.

Chester was about to sit down in one of the large wicker chairs when he suddenly realized he was not alone. Crouching in a dark corner, behind a clump of tall palms, he discerned the kneeling figure of a child—a girl.

He moved cautiously forward, wondering who the girl might be. Was she a guest of the house? he thought, remembering that Mrs. Riddell had no daughters.

The child rose to her feet and faced him. She was a curious, elf-like little creature, with a small pinched face, and a mass of black, untidy hair, and was dressed very simply in a white frock, her age being about ten or eleven.

Lank, ugly, and unattractive, she interested Chester by reason of her gleaming eyes; also there was a look in her face he could not fathom—a look which hardly belonged to childhood.

"Please—please"—she held up a tiny shaking hand—don't tell any one I'm here. Don't say you've seen me."

The girl raised her big black eyes—eyes much too large for her face. "They think I'm in bed," she muttered. "At least, Fraulein does. I came here to stare at mother. It's my only chance of seeing her—to hide like this. Sometimes I watch a whole hour and don't even see her face."

"To stare at your mother?" repeated Chester in puzzled tones.

The child smiled whimsically—pitifully. "Mother doesn't love me," she murmured slowly. "I'm too ugly. But you see, I love her. I should like to spend my whole life watching her. She's the beautifullest thing in the world, but she never comes near me—not unless some one else reminds her to. I've been staying here with Fraulein for a week—Mrs. Riddell is my godmother,—but mother didn't ask to see me when she arrived todaay. I waited, and Fraulein waited too, but she never came near us. Was it wrong to creep down and hide here—just on the chance of seeing mother sitting in the drawing-room?"

"Poor, little girl!" he whispered. "I think some one else deserves a scolding—not you But run away now—that is, if you can get out of the conservatory unobserved."

The little creature nodded her head. "There's a door at the back," she whispered. Then she started. "Oh, she's coming here—she's coming here!" she muttered. "Can she have seen me?" The child crept trembling into the shadows as she spoke.

Chester turned and glanced into the drawing-room. Then he noticed, to his intense astonishment, that the Duchess had dismissed the circle about her and was making her slow way across the room in the direction of the conservatory. The Duchess, and this child knew her apparently—knew her and was afraid of her.

He heard the crash of a falling pot and realized with relief that the girl had stepped back into her hiding-place. He could hear her sharp, panting breathing, a low broken sob, then a curious silence. He was glad that the conservatory was in shadow and that it would have been impossible for anyone in the drawing room to have noticed the trembling child. Then intense astonishment Henrietta walked right up to the entrance of the conservatory and glanced in.

"I told you I would talk to you after dinner." She spoke in smooth, silky tones, lowering her voice so that no one in the drawing-room could overhear what she said.

"Yes," he returned slowly, then waited. He knew quite well what was about to happen. She was going to tell him that she intended to pit her influence against him—her mighty, overpowering influence, and to crush and ruin him, only she need not have taken the trouble to have come to the conservatory to tell him this. She might have given him credit for sufficient sense to realize it.

"Are you not afraid—just a little we bit?" She smiled delicately. Chester thought of the cruel grace a cat displays when playing with a mouse, then of the sharp claws of a tigress.

"No, I am not afraid." His answer was blunt and defiant.

She crushed her lace handkerchief into a tight ball, then walked in and sat down in one of the large wicker chairs.

"I found out all about you during dinner." She raised big shining eyes. "You hope to stand for your county at the next general election. You belong to our party, and are a man of ambitions, great ambitions, I believe."

"Indeed?" returned Chester quietly.

"I can ruin you, you know." She raised her right hand and examined

"Try!" He squared his shoulders as he spoke, and there was that in his voice which made her look up sharply. Then she laughed.

"I don't want to ruin you—that's the astonishing thing. I don't want even to punish you for your unpardonable rudeness to me. Instead—I want to help you."

He stared at her—stupefied, dumbfounded. What did she mean? What could she mean? Then all at once he grew conscious of an extraordinary look in her eyes, a look maddening and intoxicating to meet.

So an empress of Rome might have gazed at a gladiator in the arena who had suddenly taken her fancy, some bold, splendid fighter, firm of flesh and of a fine courage.

"You're a man—a real man—and I am tired of pasteboard puppets" She leaned back in her chair and smiled. Her smile was a wonderful smile. It hinted of strange deep passions—maddening kisses—and proved her a sensualist as well as a politician. It was a smile which promised much.

But the man of the people—honest, clean-living Paul Chester—had not met a woman like Henrietta before, nor did he understand her or her ways. All he could do was to gaze at her, dazzled and confounded.

"You must come and stay with us at Helmsworth. I wil talk to my husband about you. The Duke always takes great interests in ambitious young men—in— strong men."

She issued her invitation graciously.

Chester stared, then the blood rushed to his face and mounted to his forehead. What did the Duchess mean? She called him a strong man—strange for his limbs were trembling under him, and he felt faint and giddy in her presence. Besides, he knew her for his enemy; even though she might pose as his friend, he felt sure she had not forgiven him.

"Yes, you must come to Helmsworth," continued Henrietta. She spoke with authority. "I particularly wish it."

CHAPTER VI.

Circe

Chester drew a deep breath and stared at the wonderful woman facing him, and she returned his stare with a wonderful smile, then rose slowly to her feet, her foamy, chiffony frock falling about her limbs in soft, alluring folds, the whiteness of her breast and arms dazzling.

"I must go back to the drawing-room," she said slowly, and it was wonderful what a rich note she managed to put into her voice. "But I wish I could stay here, talking to you." She sighed, and her eyes for the second lost all their brilliant fire—they became misty and dreamy.

"You don't mean what you say—you know you don't," he muttered hoarsely. "What am I to you really but a man you dislike—a man you once swore to ruin?"

Henrietta laughed softly. "There are more ways than one of ruing a man," she murmured, but so low under her breath that he could not distinguish the words; then she threw back her proud, beautiful head. "I've changed my mind about you. You interest me immensely, Mr. Chester, and people don't often do that. I'm a little weary of everyday motrals; you are different." She looked at him with her great shining eyes, and his head swam. He had never imagined such loveliness as this, such marvellous exotic beauty And how close she was to him—so close that her breath came hot on his cheek He smelt the fragrance of her skin.

"There's one thing," she said, as she was leaving the conservatory. "I shan't ask your wife down to Helmsworth with you. I can't be bothered with clever men's wives."

He was a little staggered by her speech. In the world to which he had hitherto belonged—the world of his forebears—a husband did not go away and stay by himself. Husband and wife were asked out formally together. If not, the slight to the wife was obvious—a slight which a man calling himself a man was bound to resent. But in this new world—in this new life—everything was different and strange; and, after all, what did he owe Susan? Yet something loyal and fine in Chester's nature made him pause and hesitate, for Susan wore his ring upon her finger and bore his name.

Henrietta glanced up at him. "You must come without your wife," she murmured, then she moved out of the conservatory and made her way back to the drawing-room.

Chester followed her mechanically, like a man in a dream. There was a glamour about her impossible to describe and impossible to resist. He beautiful and fateful women. He had wondered hitherto in the ignorance of his honest heart, how they had been enabled to do so much harm and to hold such empire over the hearts of men. Now he understood.

She sat down on the sofa, and was the centre of a group at once. Chester stood humbly behind her, watching the superb pose of her head, and listening to her flashes of brilliant wit and repartee.

He was not aware that Mrs. Jack was smiling at him from her seat by the fireplace and inviting him by her eyes to cross over and talk to her, nor that the Duke himself was glancing at him in a puzzled, quiet sort of way; for Chester was in the coils of a strange, unreal dream.

Lady Susan, sitting on a lounge at the far end of the room, apparently deep in conversation with her cousin, glanced up restlessly at last, and fixed her eyes on her husband, kept dead silence for a moment, then turned a pale and troubled face to Lord Robert.

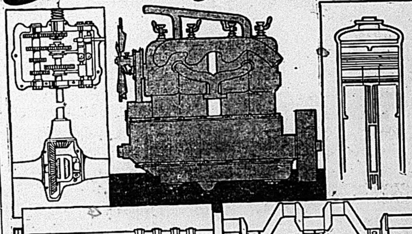
FRICTION REDUCING MOTOR OIL
"Makes a good car better"



What's the Exchange Value of Your Car?

ENGINE wear measures the worth of every car—determines its sale or exchange value. And lubrication largely governs wear.

Correct lubrication keeps a motor as good as new—cylinders smooth as glass, bearings in good condition, timing mechanism and valves working accurately, piston rings tight and compression good—every part of the motor running smoothly with the least possible wear.

Polarine

cushions every friction surface with a wear-resisting oil film that does not break down and run thin when the motor heats. It flows freely in low or high temperatures—maintains the piston ring seal—insures maximum power from every drop of gasoline. It keeps motors fit—as good as new.

Polarine is made in two grades—Polarine and Polarine Heavy. It is supplied in one-half, one and four gallon sealed cans, also in 12½ gallon steel kegs, barrels and half-barrels. There are also Polarine oils and greases for effective transmission and differential lubrication.

WE MUST NOT FAIL THEM.

The mission of the Navy League is one of national importance, and as such ought to make a direct appeal to every citizen of the British Empire. Since the outbreak of the world war the men of our fleets have played a brave part in the titanic struggle to preserve civilization. On the heaving wastes of the North Sea, on the broad expanses of the Atlantic, on the glittering waters of the Mediterranean; in Dreadnoughts, in destroyers, in hospital ships, in merchantmen, our sailors have acted the roles of true Britons and of heroes. On them has fallen the great responsibility of keeping our Empire intact, of keeping our gallant armies supplied with food and munitions, of protecting our shores from hostile raiders, of beating back the grim spectre of starvation, of transporting our courageous troops through perilous waters.

In our hour of national need our brave sailors failed us not; our trust was not placed in vain; every responsibility was met in a spirit of true seamanship; every danger was courageously faced and safely passed. Far away, out amid the rolling leagues of foam-tipped waves, they keep their ceaseless vigil—silent sentinels of the deep. As true Britons they fight our battles; as heroes they die. To these victorious and unconquerable mariners the Empire owes a debt of gratitude that can never be repaid; to those brave men of the merchant marine we owe even more, for they are cheerfully giving their all without hope of pension, or official provision for their loved ones. They have fought our battles and died in our service. Therefore, our generosity must be all the greater.

To the Navy Leagues of the Empire has fallen the privilege of aiding our sailors and their dependents the world over; and already the Leagues have done an important work in establishing a bond of sympathy between the people and the men of our fleets. The King is at the head of the movement and the members compose men of all shades of political thought, interested in sailors' welfare and united in the common conviction of the complete dependence of the Empire upon the fleet. By the aid of public subscriptions the Leagues have been able to carry into effect a consummate scheme of patriotic work, and this alone has been the means of not only alleviating the sufferings of our sailors' dependents, but has undoubtedly saved hundreds of our brave men of the Mercantile Marine from a torturous death of starvation in German prison camps.

To date thousands of dollars have been collected for this patriotic work by the Navy League of the Empire. The money has been forwarded to theNavy League in Great Britain, and there used to the very best advantage. Every Dominion, every colony, and every dependency within the Empire has contributed largely and generously. Canada has not been neglectful of her great debt; and her contributions have been such that the Navy League of Canada has been able to set aside and send monthly the sum of two thousand pounds to Britain for this relief work. But large as have been Canada's giving, they are not large enough.

Each day and each hour of war takes its grim toll, and each day and each hour the call upon our generosity grows greater. True money can never balance the debt we owe the men of the fleets; but it can in some small way express our appreciation of their devotion and bravery. Therefore every Canadian ought to give his whole-hearted support to the Navy League. In times of war no Canadian should act the part of a shirker while his countrymen are playing the roles of heroes. Each and all of us should cheerfully and willingly pay the price of our safety.

While the work alone ought to commend the Navy League of Canada to every true Canadian, yet it is but a single phase of the aims and objects of the League. In fine, the League has a three-fold mission which may be outlined as follows:

1. To make a thoroughly organized educational campaign to interest our population to the importance of maritime questions, and to the necessity of a national expansion upon the seas.

2. To raise funds for British and Canadian sailors, sailors' institutes, and for the welfare of seamen and their dependents.

3. To encourage naval brigades for young men and boys, so that they may be fitted to take their places as Canadian sailors upon Canadian ships.

It will, therefore, be seen at a glance that the aims and objects of the Navy League of Canada are not only national in scope, but are also Imperial.

CANADA'S GLORY.

The glorious deeds of Canadian soldiers, collectively and individually, in this war, has aroused the admiration of the world, and this admiration has found vigorous expression, more particularly in the United States, where the newspapers have not hesitated, even before the United States entered the war, to hail Canadians as blood brothers in whose gallant exploits they could share as well as glory in.

The Chicago Herald expresses the following appreciation of Canadian valor:

> Canada will always have a place in the affectionate regard of all the peoples of the world—for when the mother land was in trouble Jack Canuck, unasked and unafraid, sprang to the very front lines of her defenses.
>
> The soil of Flanders is drenched in Canadian blood. At Langemarck, St. Julien, Festubert, Givenchy and Sanctuary Wood the mettle of our neighbors was tested and there was no false ring to it.
> The way to Calais was blocked by a handful of Canadians, who beat back the flower of the German army. On the Somme, Canadian boys went unflinchingly to death and to glory. At Vimy Ridge they disregarded all orders and charged the enemy with an abandon that drove them from that suburb of hell.
> "Kamerad" is not in the Canadian lexicon and the Germans know it, and knowing it, fear them as they now do the brave boys of our own country.
> Only yesterday we read that five Canadians captured 100 Germans and that a boy from Manitoba rode a tank's top through an engagement and came through unscathed.
>
> Canada has every reason to be proud of the valor of her sons and we are proud to be neighbors of such a valiant people.

OTHER VIEWS

The Wonderful Northland.

United Empire.

When we are asked, "What is the Motherland doing?" surely we may reply "What is the Motherland not doing?" Her social life has been transformed. Restrictions have been imposed upon the consumption of alcoholic liquor, petrol, artificial light in shops and theatres, railway travelling, race meetings, and football matches. She has herself seen the horrors of war at first hand, for in the air raids upon her towns and countryside more than 4,500 men, women and children have been killed and wounded up to the end of June of this year. Her men have gone forth to fight, her women have taken upon themselves tasks which, four years ago, would have been considered entirely beyond their strength. She has indeed dedicated the whole of her national life to this one cause. Faced by the supreme test she has not faltered, or hesitated, or been dismayed. She has reckoned up the cost, and counts it not too great for the prize of her high calling. And as one attempts to gain some glimpse of the magnitude of her efforts and her sacrifice, Milton's prophetic words seem to echo across the centuries. "Methinks I see in my mind a noble and puissant nation rousing herself like a strong man after sleep, and shaking her invincible locks; methinks I seek her as an eagle, renewing her mighty youth, and kindling her undazzled eyes at the full noonday beam."

Movies and Religion.

London Daily Mail.

"Men in the armed service of the United States," said an American chaplain, "are keen to talk about religion. They want to hear about it. They may, and do, like to be entertained; but down in their hearts they crave the vital things of life and of eternity. If we don't give them the real thing they leave the hut in blocks. You can't fool the boys with pulpit-camouflage.

" 'We usually open with 15 minutes of movies. You don't mind waiting?' one preacher was told, at the beginning of a service. 'Is that sort of thing really necessary?' he asked. 'I don't believe it is. I should like to put it to the boys, if you don't mind.'

"The venerable preacher mounted the platform steps. 'Boys,' said he, 'I've come here to tell you something about religion. Would you like to begin right away or would you rather have a movie film first?'

"A tall, raw-boned soldier lad stood up in the audience. 'To hell with the movies!' he cried. 'Let's hear about religion.' "

Two Excellent Lies.

London Daily Chronicle.

The American soldier was telling his host about the size of some of the farms out west. "You might not believe it," he said, "but a friend of mine has a farm so large that he starts out with his ploughing in the spring. All that he can do is to plough and sow one straight furrow before autumn. Then he turns round and harvests it back." "Oh, yes, I believe that," said the host. "It is like my son-in-law's farm out there. Two weeks after they were married my daughter and her husband started for the pasture field to milk the cows, and their two children brought in the milk.

"Yes—she does her own washing"

Washerwomen are scarce and dear—so she just used her brains; she had heard about Sunlight—she bought it, read the directions carefully and now has a better, cleaner wash with far more satisfaction than ever before

Sunlight Soap

Rubbing the bar of Sunlight over the wet clothes—putting them to soak—rinsing them—and hanging out to dry doesn't sound very hard, does it? It's the Sunlight way. It's a perfect cleanser because it's perfectly pure.

The Poet's Corner

THE LITTLE GIRL WE DIDN'T WANT.

A little girl we didn't want
  Came unto us one day;
We'd prayed the Lord that He might send
  A little boy our way.
We thought we'd name him after me,
  Our plans were knocked awry
The day the girl we didn't want
  Came floating from the sky.

The little girl we didn't want
  Looked gravely up at me
When we had closed her mother's eyes
  And no one stayed to see—
Looked at me from upon my breast,
  And, trusting, nestled there,
Not knowing she had scattered dreams
  That we had thought so fair.

The little girl we didn't want
  Has often sat with me
Beside a grassy little mound
  No others stay to see.
And often in the glad old days
  With peaceful skies above,
We've played along in pleasant ways,
  Filled with each other's love.

The little girl we didn't want
  Forsook me yesterday;
Another came and won her love
  And carried her away.
A little girl we didn't want
  Came unto her and me,
And I've a broken heart and weep,
  Nor care who stops to see.

CRISP COMMENT

"Success is with us," shouts Hindenburg as he beats it back toward Berlin. Hindy has solved the problem of getting sunshine out of cucumbers, remarks the Kingston Whig.

"If the Government finally takes over the packing industry will this mean State ownership of the Toronto street cars?" asks the Peterborough Review

"If anybody has anything out on that Hindenburg line they better get it in," crows the Brockville Recorder and Times.

At last the Kaiser and his entire outfit may be said to be taking steps in the right direction, remarks the New York World.

Big Ben in the City Hall tower has recovered his voice and another excuse for late meals has been removed.

The work of cleaning out the weeds and rubbish in the rvier adjacent to the city is in progress and an improvement is noticeable already in the local atmosphere. The Board of Health is to be congratulated for their progressive move which is appreciated by the citizens. Frequenters of the waterside parks are able now to rest and enjoy the scenery without absorbing atmosphere highly tinted and deeply tainted.

The Hindenburg Line will soon be open for traffic again under Allied management and with Conductor Foch in charge of the fast Paris to Berlin express. When the Kaiser held a controlling interest in the Hindenburg line he started a Berlin to Paris war special, but couldn't make it go on account of obstructions on the Marne which ditched his train. Under allied management the Hindenburg Line will be made a part of a new system of highways and railways and byways, all leading to Berlin.

Military News

The Siberian Expeditionary Force is to be open to all who are liable for military service. under the Military Service Act. All men who have not yet been called to report at the depot battalions may volunteer for service in Siberia. Any man who has been notified to report by the registrar may volunteer and those now at the camps undergoing training may also volunteer. This privilege was not open to those called under the M. S. A. when the composition of this force was first announced, and it is expected that many will avail themselves of the opportunity presented in the new order.

Lieut. A. B. Earle, R.A.M.C., No. 12 Field Ambulance, France, was admitted to the hospital on July 12th as a result of shell shock. He is a Queen's College graduate. Dr. Earle practised in Napanee.

The time allowed defaulters and absentees under the M.S.A to report at the depot battalions and escape the penalties for desertion as provided in the Governor-General's proclamation, expired Saturday A considerable number of those listed in the Ottawa district took advantage of the privilege and many listed in Kingston did likewise. Quite a number, however, did not respond, and action on the part of the police will be necessary to secure their services.

LAST HALF HOLIDAY

This is the last Wednesday half-holiday this season and many picnics and fishing trips have been organized in consequence.

DOOR INSECURE

The only item on the police blotter recorded last night was the finding of a back door of a business place on Front street insecure.

BREAKING WINDOWS

Two lads of tender years were caught yesterday morning throwing stones and smashing windows in the Pringle factory. The boys' parents were notified and will have to foot the damage bill.

PONY RAN AT LARGE

A citizen to-day had to contribute $1 and cost to the city treasury for allowing a pony, he is the possessor of, to run at large. The animal wandered upon Victoria Park, which is contrary to rules governing the park.

BRAKEMAN INJURED

Mr. William Gillespie, brakeman on the Grand Trunk, met with a painful accident Saturday night as he was unloading a barrel of oil at Hoard's station, near Campbellford. In some manner the barrel rolled over on his foot, crushing one toe severely.

MAY BE DEDUCTED

R. W. Breadner, commissioner of taxation under the Income Tax Act of 1918, has advised the officials of the Navy League of Canada that contributions to the funds of the Navy League have been approved as proper deductions from incomes, in determining the amount taxable under the provisions of the act.

RETURNING TO KINGSTON

That section of C. Battery, R. C. H. A. which is not as yet going overseas from Petawawa, is expected to return to Tete du Pont barracks, Kingston, this week. Many boys in training at Petawawa have volunteered for service with the Canadian forces in Siberia. It is likely that some who have the necessary physical qualification will be accepted. Only twenty five will be taken from each battery. and many will be disappointed.

AERIAL POSTMAN HERE

Carrying a consignment of mail from Toronto to Ottawa, Lieut. Arthur Dunstan, of Leaside Camp, passed over here in a military airplane yesterday afternoon. He arrived at Rockcliffe Camp, Ottawaa, at 4.10 o'clock, being met by postal and military officials. Lieut. Dunstan followed the St. Lawrence to Prescott, and then turned north to the Capital.—Brockville Recorder.

TO ATTEND SERVICE

The Loyal Orange Sovereign Grand Lodge of British North America have called upon all primary lodges to set aside Sunday Sept. 1st, as Memorial Day," and to attend divine service in commemoration of members of the Loyal Orange Association who have made the supreme sacrifice in the present war.

SENTENCE CANCELLED

Allen H. Mitchell, alias Hubbs and Sisson, who was recently arrested near Belleville on a warrant for bigamy yesterday had his trial at Port Hope, and was found guilty. The magistrate sentenced him to three years in the Kingston Penitentary , but it was afterwards discoverd that this was beyond the jurisdiction of the Magistrate and as a consequence the prisoner was committed for trial and will come up before Judge Ward.

DELANEY'S FUR OPENING

Very extensive have been our preparations for this season, preparations that commenced as far back as last February. First, with an extended buying trip—and in the great variety of Finished Furs to be on exhibition, one will see how these preparations have progressed until now, and we decided to set aside three days for the sole purpose of demonstrating to the public what the result of our labors are. Note the days and decide to be there.

THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
THE 29TH 30TH AND 31ST OF AUGUST

We Are Showing A Wonderful Assortment of The Finest Grades of Furs?

We Mention a Few Below

LADIES' COATS in Persian Lamb, Hudson Seal, Muskrat, Marmot. Some of these coats are very prettily trimmed with Sable, Victoria Oppossum, etc.
CAPES, COATEES—Persian Lamb, Hudson Seal, Sable, Beaver.

MUFFS, STOLES, NECK PIECES in great profusion. Fox in Red, Black, Taupe and the beautiful Northern Cross Fox. Wolf, Lamb, Sable, Coon, Seal, Victoria Oppossum, Badger; in fact we have not the space to mention one-tenth of these goods.

We believe you like Beautiful Furs. We knew you like to see them; therefore we extend to you a hearty invitation to attend our opening demonstration. No obligation shall be incurred, for these are to be visitors' days, and we shall spare nothing to make your visit interesting and beneficial to all. Ask us anything you may care on your Fur problems, on style, where various furs come from—ask us anything at all you may be desirous of knowing, for we have determined to make these days truly beneficial to you, and will devote ourselves to this end.

MAY WE HAVE THE PLEASURE OF SHOWING YOU ONE OF THE FINEST ASSORTMENTS OF FURS IN THIS SECTION? WE SHALL BE DELIGHTED TO.

PORK DECLINING IN PRICE

A large number of live hogs were to-day shipped from here by Mr. D. Scott & Son. The price paid was $18.50 hundred weight, which is a slightly lower price than that of a week ago.

COAL FOR THE CITY

A car of nut coal arrived here today having been consigned to the Fuel Committee of the city Council. It was a good sample of coal. The members of the committee were unable to state what the fuel would be sold for as the bill of lading had not arrived.

BROCKVILLE'S OBJECTIVE

Brockville citizens in public meeting assembled decided that $5,000 was the objective which should be raised in that town during sailors' week for the fund to provide for the dependents of sailors of the mrechant marine who lose their lives in the service during the war. Representative business men will canvas the town for subscriptions.

REGARDING "E" MEN

It is understood that hereafter no draftee, who has reported for service and later found to be in category E will be discharged. It has been the practice to discharge men when found to be in E, but hereafter they will be granted leave of absence only, which will make them always subject to further medical examination.

ANOTHER SON WOUNDED

Mrs. Elizabeth Doyle, residing at 156 Front street, was yesterday in receipt of the following telegram:

Ottawaa, Aug. 26.

Sincerely regret to inform you 636827 Pte. Patrick Leo Doyle, Infantry, officially reported missing, believed wounded, August 9th.

Director of Records.

Pte. Doyle left Belleville with the 155th Battalion, and has two brothers in active service overseas, and both of them have been wounded. The many friends of Leo in this city will sincerely hope for the better in his case.

POCAHONTAS COUNCIL

Mrs. Hugh Heinrick of Spokane, W. T., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby Wilkins, Octavia street, city, has been honored by being elected to a high position in the Great Council of the Degree of Pocahontas. She is an officer of Che-ma-wa Council, No. 37, Degree of Pocahontas, Spokane, which won the grand prize, a silver tomahawk, for securing the largest number of new members in the term.

BELLEVILLE'S FAIR

On Monday next Labor Day Belleville fair will open and continue the following day. The management are making every effort to have the fair a success and indications are that their efforts will not be in vain. From Mr. R H Ketcheson, the Secretary, we learn that the entries in the various departments are good, and in some cases in excess of former years An entertaining feature will be the display exhibited by the Returned Soldiers War Display Company of Beaverton. This display consist of souvenirs collected on several important battlefields of the present campaign. A good programme of events has been arranged for. At 1.30 on Monday the fair will be formally declared opened by Mayor Platt, who will deliver an address. Two speeding events will be on the afternoon programme, namely the 2.30 and 2.18 class, for which there are a number of entries. There will be other special attractions. The 15th regimental band will furnish a programme of music each afternoon.

KINGSTONIAN KILLED IN ACTION

Joseph McDonald, once on the staff of the Kingston Post-Office, was killed in action in France. He went overseas with a Western battalion. His mother is in a Kingston hospital.

SALE OF WORK

Mrs. Major R. D. Ponton will open the sale of work at the S. A. Citadel this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The Women's Home League have been working very hard for this sale, which is in the interests of the soldiers overseas. A number of curios will be exhibited.

OLD PICTURE GAME

In the Kingston Police Court yesterday L. Rosenstein, a representative of the Acme Art Institute of Montreal, was committed for trial on a charge of theft preferred by E. J. Kelly, Barrie street. The case will rest till the Fall assizes. The defendant, it is alleged, refused to give up the enlarged pictures or the originals until he was paid $21 for frames. Mrs. Kelly refused payment, and the case was the result.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Before Magistrate Masson this morning James Pope of Thurlow Township, was charged with assaulting and causing bodily harm to Mrs. Anna Cleveland, also of Thurlow. The complainant in her evidence testified that on the morning of the 19th the defendant assaulted her by striking her on the head with his fist. She also testified that Pope wanted to fight her husband. Trouble is alleged to exist between parties owing to cows running at large. The result of the investigation was that Pope was committed for trial and released on bail.

Mr. Carnew for Crown, and Col. E. D. O'Flynn, for the accused.

Saskatchewan's Crop Damage Reports Greatly Magnified—Want 10,000 Harvesters At Once

Reports previously published regarding the damage by frost to the crops in Saskatchewan were unduly pessimistic. Frequent showers and favorable weather have changed the outlook and it is apparent that the great Province of Saskatchewan will have a normal crop. This is evidenced by the demand for Farm Laborers as not less than 10,000 are required there immediately for harvesting.

Final excursions are, By Canadian Northern regular Winnipeg train leaving Toronto 10.00 p.m. August 28th, and 30th. Harvesters from outside points to use connecting trains to Toronto.

An Important Discovery Swollen Veins Relieved

That Absorbine, Jr., would relieve varicose veins was discovered by an old gentleman who had suffered with swollen veins for nearly fifty years. He had made unsuccessful efforts to get relief and finally tried Absorbine, Jr. knowing its value in reducing swellings, aches, pains and soreness.

Absorbine, Jr., relieved him and after he had applied it regularly for a few weeks he told us that his legs were as smooth as when he was a boy and all the pain and soreness had ceased.

Thousands have since used this antiseptic liniment for this purpose with remarkably good results.

Absorbine, Jr., is made of oils and extracts from pure herbs and when rubbed upon the skin is quickly taken by the pores; the blood circulation in surrounding parts is thereby stimulated and healing helped. $1.25 a bottle at druggists or postpaid. A liberal Trial Bottle will be mailed your address for 10c in stamps. Booklet free. W. F. Young, P. D. F. 457 Lymans Bldg., Montreal, Can.

Lusitania Murderer Captured by French

Lieut. Schwieger Caught When U-Boat is Sunk by Patrol Boats

PARIS, Aug. 29—Lieut Schwieger, the man who sank the Lusitania, has been captured by a French patrol boat in the Mediterranean, according to Le Journal. A large submarine of which he was second in command had just torpedoed a British steamer between Malta and Sicily. The German was waiting to see the vessel sink when two French patrol boats emerged from the fog and sank the U-boat. Of the crew of 75 only one officer and four men were rescued by the patrol boats.

While being taken to Toulon, the officer appeared ill at ease. When he thought no one was looking he tried to throw some papers overboard but a sailor seized his arm. He refused to answer questions, but an examination of the papers explained his uneasiness.

Le Journal asks if the man who committed "the most vile, the most barbarous and the most cowardly act in the annals of war," is merely to be sent to a prison camp.

MONTREAL, Aug. 28.—Fire of unknown origin, the seventh big outbreak in twenty-four hours, yesterday afternoon caused damage estimated at $94,000 to the sash and door factory of H. Chagnon & Co., 37 Burnett lane. The blaze developed in the wood drying room of the factory, which, according to the proprietor, no employee had entered for nearly a month, but it was stated as possible that the outbreak may have been caused by children.

The factory is of wood construction, and the blaze spread quickly. The 135 employees all escaped, however.

A noteworthy feature is the number of names of Dutch South Africans

Canadian Gov't Objects to Dam

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

MONTEAL, Aug. 29—Before the International Joint Waterways Commission sitting in the Court House here to-day the Government of Canada, through Solicitor-General Hon. Hugh Guthrie and Frank H. Keefer, M. P., as Counsel, is sternly opposing approval of plans submitted by the St. Lawrence Power Co. to construct a submerged weir across the southern branch of the Long Sault near Massena, N.Y. The plans have been approved by the Government of the United States as a war measure but the Canadian authorities state that while in warmest sympathy with any measure aiming to increasing the production of war material they will not submit to a precedent that would be an invasion of treaty right as well as detrimental to Canadian interests.

Byng's Army Annihilates Two German Divisions

Ground Strewn With Thousands Upon Thousands of Dead Bodies — British Achieve More Than the Communiques Claim

LONDON, Aug. 28—Paris newspapers point out that the British position is even better than the communiques make out.

As an example of this it mentions that the British never claim to have captured a place until it has been consolidated.

French correspondents with General Byng's army describe an epic fight during the ~~night~~ tiem ,when there was a great clash between the Germans and the British with bayonets and hand grenades in the light of some flaming tanks, whose petrol was burning as a result of shell fire. Spurts of flame ninety feet high lit up hundreds of airmen, who, respite the torrential rain, poured a deadly machine gun fire into the enemy, while thousands of men engaged in a deadly and bloody grapple.

Two German divisions were positively annihilated. The ground was strewn with thousands upon thousands of bodies.

One paper says: "It was a gigantic tragedy, ending finally in the utter defeat of the enemy."

Youthful Aviator Fought 20 Fokers

With the British Army, Aug. 29—One of the amazing exploits reported Tuesday probably equals anything the well-worn Somme fields have yet seen. A youthful airman attacked twelve Fokker planes, which were not disposed to return his fire and fled. He then fought an inconclusive engagement with a Fokker triplane. To wind up he was in turn attacked by twenty Fokkers, twelve above and eight below. He fired into the nearest setting it aflame, and was himself hit. He turned his machine over to the observer who brought the machine safely to its hangar.

112,000 Prisoners and 1,300 Guns Since July 1

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—The number of prisoners taken by the allies since July 1 has passed the 112,000 mark, Gen. March, U.S. chief of staff, said yesterday. In the same time the allies have taken from the Germans 1,300 cannon of the field gun calibre and larger.

The French advance noted in this morning's official statement from Paris, the chief of staff pointed out, marks the creation of another deep salient in the enemy lines, which is now being put "between the pincers," The French have reached Nesle, and are within two miles of the Somme at this point.

Since last Saturday, the British as a result of the persistent advance, have overrun the Hindenburg line for a distance of one mile on a front of three miles. Latest despatches to the department, Gen. March said, do not indicate any cessation in the allied pressure. The British apparently are continuing their progress on the Flanders front.

Steps to End U-Boat Danger

MONTREAL, Aug. 29—Hon. C. C. Ballantyne, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, the only member of the Premier's party to pass through Montreal on the homeward trip from Great Britain, stated that the overseas visit of the Cabinet Ministers had been a strenuous time for all concerned, and very far from being a joy-ride. So far as he personally was concerned, the visit had been utilized to confer with the British Admiralty on points and policies of far-reaching effect. Hon. Mr. Ballantyne, in one statement, said that the Government have discussed and is nearer coming to a decision in regard to the permanent naval policy of the Dominion.

As to the U-boat peril to Canada, Mr. Ballantyne said:

"As far as any information goes, there are only one of the U-boats operating on this side of the Atlantic."

He stated that he had discussed the matter with the British Admiralty with the result that steps of which I am not at liberty to speak" were being taken to obviate all danger from this source.

Shipbuilding, the Minister said, could be done more cheaply in England than here. But with the high freight rates prevailing now and likely to pervail for some time after the war, together with careful management, the Government will be able to materially reduce the high cost of Canadian ships.

END DAYLIGHT PLAN OCT 31

TORONTO, Aug. 29.—Now that the days are getting shorter many good citizens are finding it hard to fulfil the old maxim of "early to bed and early to rise." Habits will tell and nature will help them to tell, and that's the principal reason why many people are wondering when the clock will be turned back, daylight saving cease, and the good old order of things continue as of yore.

All of which leads up to the fact that daylight saving comes to an end at two o'clock in the morning on Thursday, Oct. 31.

Canada, although extending further north than any other Anglo-Saxon country, is the last to forsake the economy of time, the closing limit in the United States being the last Sunday in October, which comes on Oct. 27th, and the time expiring in the United Kingdom being September 29.

FIND LIQUOR IN POTATO BARRELS

WELAND, Ont., Aug. 29—Officer W. W. Wilson, of the Customs staff. captured fourteen barrels of liquor, which was concealed by having a covering of potatoes over each barrel. They were shipped at Buffalo, and consigned to Filip Vallae, an Italian fruit merchant. There was 591 bottles of liquor in the lott, and the car contained onions, grapes and different kinds of fruit, the owner paying the duty and freight, and expecting to secure the whole lot without too close an examination. In the Police Court he was fined $400 and costs, and the liquor, which was valued at $1,500, was seized.

British Five Miles From Peronne Ginchy Town Captured by Haig

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

With the British Forces in France, August 29.—Ginchy, a town about two miles northwest of Combles, was captured by Field Marshal Haig's forces this morning. British troops also captured Belloy, Asheville, Herbecourt and Feuilleres. All these towns are within five miles of Peronne.

GEN. HUMBERT CAPTURES NOYON HUNS FORCED FROM STRONG POSITIONS

SWEEPING VICTORIES FOR ALLIES

VICTORIOUS SWEEP OF FRENCH ARMIES SMASHES FOE RESISTANCE AND NOYON, AN IMPORTANT GERMAN MILITARY BASE, IS CAPTURED BY GEN. HUMBERT'S ARMY—HUN PRISONERS TAKEN BY BRITISH SINCE AUGUST 21 NOW SWELLED TO 26,000, BESIDES 100 GUNS — GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACKS AND SURPRISE MOVEMENTS FAIL—GEN. MANGIN CROSSES OISE RIVER AND CAPTURES MORLANCOURT.

Special Despatches to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, August 29.—French troops today occupied Noyon.

26,000 PRISONERS, 100 GUNS SINCE AUGUST 21.

LONDON, August 29.—(Official)—German counter-attacks east and southwest of Vis-en-Artois, east of Boiry and in the vicinity of Gavrelle, villages to the east of Arras, have been repulsed. South of the Somme British troops are keeping up their pressure against the enemy and are advancing eastward.

Since August 21 the British have taken 26,000 prisoners and one hundred guns.

COUNTER-ATTACKS REPULSED.

The text of the official statement reads:

South of the Somme we maintained our pressure during the night and are advancing eastward. North of the Somme as far as the neighborhood of Fontainelle and Croisilles the night was quiet on the battlefront. In the British sector astride the Scarpe river the enemy delivered strong but unsuccessful counter-attacks during the night east and southeast of Vis-en-Artois, east of Boiry-Notre Dame, and in the vicinity of Gavrelle.

GERMAN SURPRISE ATTACKS FAIL.

PARIS, August 29.—(Official)—There were violent bombardments during the night along the Somme front. German forces made many surprise attacks in the Lorrain sector without obtaining any results. French troops made two incursions in to the enemy lines in Champagne and took prisoners. The night was calm on the rest of the front.

BRILLIANT FRENCH VICTORIES.

French Army Headquarters, August 29.—Noyon was captured this morning by troops of General Humbert.

General Mangin's men crossed the Oise river and took Morlancourt.

The French First Army took Quesnoy Wood, just to the west of Canal-du-Nord. The wood was a strongly fortified position and in it the Germans endeavored to check the French pursuit.

A GREAT DAY

In the north the Canadian troops, after "severe-fighting lasting throughout the day," have again driven back the Germans from strongly defended positions and important trench systems, and captured the villages of Pelves, on the Scarpe, and Boiry-Notre Dame, on the Arras-Cambrai road. Since Monday morning, in company with a famous Highland division on their right, they have advanced easterly over six miles from Neuville-Vitasse, their starting point, and have breached the Hindenburg line on a five-mile front.

British troops have had much hard fighting around Croisilles, to the northeast of Bapaume, but have now driven out the Germans, and are firmly established there. They continue to make progress on the old Somme battlefield in the direction of Peronne. South of the Somme the Australians also are approaching Peronne and Brie, where the Germans are retreating across the river, and are fighting fiercely to hold back the Australians untly their stores and artillery are safely over.

From Chaulnes southward to Noyon the French armies are sweeping eastward in hot pursuit of the retreating enemy. In yesterday's advance forty villages were recaptured, and not less than two hundred square miles of French soil redeemed. The French reached the Somme last night to the south of Brie, and are pressing toward Ham, the occupation of which would entirely disrupt the German system of communications. Already three trains laden with war material have fallen into the hands of Debeney's troops.

The Americans are co-operating in Mangin's operations north of Soissons, which have as their object the outflanking of the Chemin des Dames sector of the Hindenburg line. They "valiantly repulsed" several enemy counter-attacks yesterday.

TORRENTIAL RAINS

Torrential rains, which from time to time yesterday swept the battlefront in Artois and Picardy, failed to quench the ardor of the French and British armies that are driving the Germans back to the Hindenburg line. In that part of the front immediately south of the Scarpe, where the Canadians and Scottish troops are operating to-gether, the Hindenburg line itself has proved a poor defence for the enemy. The Canadians, in severe fighting, pressed forward well to the east of the Drocourt-Queant switch yesterday, completing the capture of the villages of Pelves and Boiry-Notre Dame. On that part of the front north of the Cambrai road they reached the outskirts of Remy and Haucourt. The latter village is six miles due east of Neuville-Vitasse, from which the Canadians started out on Monday morning. The Canadian patrols, from the points reached yesterday, command a wide view over the marshes of the Sensee.

DESPERATE FIGHTING

At Croisilles, midway between the Canadians and Bapaume, there has been desperate fighting for two days. It is offically reported to have been decided yesterday in favor of the dogged English troops, who stuck to the work in face of numerous machine-gun nests and the frequently reinforced defenders, evidently under instructions to hold Croisilles to the last extremity.Its capture wil enable Sir Douglas Haig to swing the troops investing Bapaume well to the east of that town without fear of a German attack from the direction of Croisilles.

Business Block Burned At Trenton To-day

At about 10 o'colck this morning fire broke out in a business block, situated on West Dundas Street, Trenton, across the road from the Gilbert House, destroying it and other adjoining property. At 2.30 this afternoon the fire was still burning but was evidently under control. The loss sustained will amount to several thousand dollars.

Military Medal Won By Ernie Moore

Gallant Young Belleville Bombadier Wins Royal Distinction

Another young Belleville soldier has brought honor to the city, and won glory for himself by exceptional bravery on the field of battle, Bombardier Ernie Moore, who has been awarded the Military Medal. This young artillery man is a son of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Moore, 188 Charles Street, Belleville, and enlisted with the 33rd Battary 1916.

With Characteristic modesty Bombardier Moore has kept his honors to himself not even informing his parents of his distinction. However, the news reached Belleville in a roundabout way, through a letter from Gunner Cliff Tait to his mother, Mrs. R. J. Tait, of Oakville, in which he refers to Bombardier Moore as follows:

"Ernie Moore has been decorated with the Military Medal for a wonderful bit of work in which all kinds of courage and devotion was required During an advance Ernie kept a whole group of artillery (a large number of batteries or brigades) in communication with the infantry. His telephone lines were constantly under heavy hostile shell fire, yet, in spite of that he kept up and down the lines repairing the breaks and laying new lines as our infantry advanced. These lines became very valuable when the enemy counter-attacked, for it enabled our artillery to place a barrage on their formations and so break up their attack. Needless to say this operation was very successful. You must write to Bdr. E. G. Moore, No. 304165 and congratulate him. Also phone Stan and Hazel I'm sure they will be glad to hear of Ernie's work.

Well mother, I must ring off here because we are still busy and having some really wonderful experiences—I met a Yank the other day, who in a quaint southern drawl said "Yo are the first civilized people we have seen for some time," I also saw some very fine Italian soldiers, who considered the Canadians as a very rare sight indeed and seemed to think we are "super-soldates."

PARIS, Aug. 29—4 p.m.—French troops are at the gates of Ham, according to despatches from the front.. The Germans lost three complete munition trains at Breuil, five miles west of Ham, in their precipitate retreat.

Don't Dam Long Sault Says M.P.P.

J. W. Johnson, M.P.P., Belleville, writes as follows in regard to the damning the Long Sault Channel: I have read with deep indignation of the renewed attempt to dam the St. Lawrence at the Long Sault Channel. I trust that such an unequivocal prompt and determined refusal will be given to the applicants as will put an end to such efforts at present and for all time to come.

My deep interest in this matter comes from knowledge of an association with lake, river, and canal navigation in my early life. I was purser of a passenger and freight steamer trading between Montreal and Chicago and intermediate ports in Canada, and the States for five years, 1867 to 1872 and have never ceased my concern in relation to all that pretains to the great national interest involved in our inland navigation.

There is but one way, that through the channel of the St. Lawrence and its subsidiary canals, for the waters of the great lakes, the unsalted seas, to reach the Atlantic Ocean. Every gallon of water that pours through the navigable channel from Kingston to the Gulf is needed for navigation. The water drawn from the river for the Cornwall Canal on the north side of the Long Sault rapids is not wasted, or lost to navigation, for after floating and turning the machinery floating the vessels passing east and west and turning the machinery of the great cotton mills situated along its banks the water, by the force of gravitation, tumbles back into the river at the east end of the canal.

The navigable channel at the Sault is narrow, tribulent and shallow any vessel drawing over 9 feet of water cannot use it; to deepen the channel of the river at this point is a pressing necessity too long delayed. The old Weland Canal (of my time) had a depth of 10 feet, the present canal has 14 feet and the new one, now under slow construction will have about 23 feet.

To permit the withdrawal or diversion of any portion of the water that is absolutely essential to the navigation of our great river would be folly so great that I cannot conceive it possible that any Canadian public man could be guilty of an act that would be a national crime.

In conclusion I would draw particular attention to the fact that Canada owns entirely the majestic St. Lawrence from Cornwall to the sea. It makes Ontario and Quebec each the complement of the other, and should be more in the future than it has proved in the past a factor in making for the closest and most friendly business and social relations between the old provinces.

LABELS WERE EXPENSIVE

TORONTO, Aug. 28.—Sixty bottles of liquor, a box of labels bearing the title "Country Club, V.O.S. Whisky, Lochwinnoch Distillery, Glasgow," and a box of bottle capsules were included in the haul made by Plainclothesmen Forbes and Dunn at Pasquale Disando's "private distillery" on Claremont street. The Italian had some sort of Montreal concoction he called Scotch whiskey which he bottled and sold at $7 per bottle. In the Police Court Disande was fined $500 and costs.

WESTERN CROP DAMAGE REPORTS GREATLY MAGNIFIED—WANT 10,000 HARVESTERS AT ONCE.

Reports previously published regarding the damage by frost to the crops in Saskatchewan were unduly pessimistic. Frequent showers and favorable weather have changed the outlook and it is apparent that the great province of Saskatchewan will have a normal crop. This is evidenced by Western demands for farm laborers, as not less than 10,000 are required immediately for harvesting.

Every young man and those more mature, in every community in Ontario, including our own, should get away and can make this a great opportunity to serve the country in a practical way, and at the same time be of invaluable benefit to himself. It means an interesting, long-distance journey at low fares, and a chance to see and study the immense new country served by the Canadian Northern—the People's Road.

FREE HAND TO WAR DEPT.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—There is now little doubt that Congress will give the War Department a free hand in calling into service the boys of 18 years and 19 under the new man-power bill. Convinced that these men are imperatively needed to win the war in the shortest possible time, Congress will refuse to hear those that insist that younger men be kept out of the fight until the last.

Reverses and Checks Admitted by Germans

"Cannot Risk Making New Enemies," Says one Hun Paper

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 29—German newspapers express belief and hope in friendly settlement of the submarine dispute with Spain. They also admit "recent reverses" and "checks" on the west front.

"We think the German-Spanish dispute will be settled in a friendly manner," the Franfurter Zeitung says.

"Spain's attitude is a surprise even to the Spainards themselves," says the Cologne Gazette. "Her interests should keep her far from the side of entent. We frankly admit recent reverses on the west front, but we have absolute confidence in our military position, which even a new enemy could not change. The Spaniards are gambling with the fate of their country."

"Our present military and political situation is such that we cannot risk making new enemies," the Schwaebische Tageacht says.

"Probably it is no accident that Spain has utilized the moment the German army has suffered checks," declares the Tages Zeitung.

"Bone Dry" Act To Cover U.S.

Nation-Wide Prohibition During War May be Effective July 1, 1919

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—Nation-wide "bone dry" prohibition, effective July 1, 1919, and continuing during the war at least looms as a strong probability through compromise negotiations in Congress.

An agreement for passage of legislation to stop sales of all intoxicating beverages on that date, leaders of both wet and dry factions in the Senate stated tonight, seemed to be in sight. President Wilson was represented as not opposing the legislation, and Senators believed the under negotiation. A definite "gentleman's agreement" in the Senate is expected within a few days.

FOUND GIRLS CHAINED TO HUN MACHINE GUNS

NEW YORK, Aug. 29—More stories are coming from France of German girls having been found by American troops in a condition of collapse chained to German machine guns.

Milton George Hess, a nineteen-year-old private in the trench mortar battery of the 3rd Artillery Brigade, 3rd division of regulars, has written his father, Emile Hess, of 511 Eighth avenue, Brooklyn, under date of Aug. 3rd, saying:

"When our men took prisoners the other day, they found about six girls chained to machine guns. They took the poor things prisoners, who claimed they were forced to fight."

Letters have been received from other men serving with the American forces in France to the same effect.

Capt. Franklin P. Haller, Jr., in command of Company D, 111th Infantry, wrote his parents in Philadelphia recently that his company had captured a German machine-gun nest manned by women. John Mack, of No 108 Munson street, Astoria, L.I., has received a letter from his son, Philip Mack, with the 165th Infantry, in which he said, "It is an absolutely true fact that our division has taken women prisoners who were chained to machine guns, and who were all in from fright and shock."

Defer Thanksgiving Day Until November

OTTAWA, Aug. 29—Thanksgiving may fall on a different date in Canada than usual this year. This has been a strong movement in favor of distributing the three holidays—Labor Day, Thanskgiving and Chirstmas Day with more even periods between. Hitherto Labor Day and Thanksgiving have fallen very close together with a long period till Christmas.

The Cabinet has the matter under consideration and it is probable that Thanksgiving may be deferred to the month of November on a parity with the American date.

GERMANY ACCEPTS SPAIN'S CONDITIONS

SANTANDER, Spain, Aug. 29—Germany has accepted all conditions contained in the Spanish note regarding the submarine situation, it was anounced.

German shipping interned in Spanish ports will be voluntarily turned over to Spain to replace any future losses from U-boats.

At the same time, Foreign Minister Dato, announced that the Government would requisition all Spannish ed according to vital necessities.

Germany is understood to have stated she will not torpedo these requisitioned vessels.

Ten Aircraft Lost In Manheim Raid

LONDON, Aug. 28—The British independent air force operating on the west front lost seven machines in the bombing of Mannheim last Thursday. The frank report of this loss has caught the public imagination here.

The outstanding feature of the exploit was the heroic determiation of the British squadrons. They were heavily attacked as they flew to their objective; they knew that equally stern fighting would await them on their way back but nothing daunted them. "It takes more than the risk of danger to halt British airmen when they have made up their minds to reach an objective" says one newspaper.

It is pointed out that the Germans were in largely superior numbers and had only to think of fighting, whereas the British had both fighting and bombing to attend to. The odds were all on the German side, but the British aviators reached Mannheim and did their job.

Newspapers editorials point out that the bombing was well worth the risk for Mannheim is the centre of the great chemical industry, and the raid is believed to have done damage which will compel the German armies, for a time at least, to do without supplies of war materials from that quarter.

The British aviators did not suffer without hitting back, the newspapers also point out, for three German fighting planes were beaten down.

Officially, it is noted, the Germans are now making most determined efforts to protect their towns by concentrating large numbers of fighting machines and antiaircraft guns. Commenting on the raid a British air officer today said: "We suffered losses but we won a splendid victory. We set out to bomb Mannheim and no German efforts could frustrate our intention."

CORNWALL MAN HAD PASSED 105TH YEAR

CORNWALL, Ont., Aug.—The oldest resident of Cornwall, if not of Ontario, has passed away in the person of Franklin Kirkey, who had attained the remarkable age of 105 years and ten months. Mr. Kirkey was born in Cornwall and spent his whole life here and but for some rheumatic trouble and a little suffering from his eyesight enjoyed remarkable health up to the last day, when he conversed freely with members of his family. His wife, who was Miss Rose Tyo, a daughter of the late Frank Tyo, of Indian Lands, died on June 4th, 1914 at the age of 101 years.

The late Mr. Kirkey, is survived by three sons and three daughters, Wm. Kirkey, and Simon Kirkey, of Cornwall; John Kirkey, of the toll gate a few miles north of the town; Miss Julia Kirkey, Mrs. Wm. Brebeau and Mrs. Napoleon Cartier, all of Cornwall. He also leaves a large number of grandchildren and great grandchildren.

JULES VERNE HERO RETURNS TO LONDON

LONDON, Aug. 29—Naval Wireless Operator Herbert Beswick who as a fifteen-year-old boy enlisted in the Royal Canadian Naval Volunteer Reserve three years ago, has returned to London after having endured more weird experiences than Jules Verne could have conceived. Ten times torpedoed in the open seas, blown up by mines and shaken by the fury of close engagements with the enemy when he was aboard the indictive at the bottling of Zeebrugge. Beswick has been sent home for convalescence. He has not been wounded, but his health is somewhat affected by his experiences, principally by exposure, and it is probable that he will be given a course of treatment in a sanatorium.

He is now a patient at the central military convalescent hospital here. His parents reside at 400 King street his father being one of the principals in the local organiation of the navy league.

He is believed to be the only Canadian boy who was aboard the Vindictive when she entered the harbor under the concentrated fire of the German batteries.

FIX THE DATE OF STRIKE

C. P. R. Commercial Telegraphers Now Await Any Offer at Conciliation.

MONTREAL, Aug. 27.—With the date on which they will strike definitely fixed and notification of their intentions sent to the Department of Labor, the C.P.R. commercial telegraph operators await any offer of concessions that may come from the company. Back to School Next Week

Summer is about over and the annual vacation of school children is rapidly drawing to a close. Soon the fishing and swimming spots will be deserted between the hours of 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. on school days, for the schools of Belleville will re-open on Tuesday, Sept. 3, at the usual morning hour.

The various school buildings have been prepared for the reopening of the teaching terms and the prospects are that there will be an additional number of scholars in some of the schools. There will be some changes in the teaching staff owing to the fact that a few of the old teachers did not make application for re-engagement.

New Teachers.

In the High School Mr. Cummings B.A. will be the new classic teacher.

At Queen Mary School Misses Effie Cassidy and Madie Post will be the new teachers. At Queen Victoria School Mrs. Helen Foster and Misses Kathleen Burns and Myrtle Peck will take the place of three of the old teachers, and at Queen Alexandra School three new teachers will appear, namely, Misses Bessie McConnell, Grace E. Laidley, and E. Sweatman.

Regarding the books needed by the pupils on opening day the following are all of the authorized text books, but the Principals of the schools have the privilege of naming what books they desire for literature:

Primary classes, slate, slate pencil, exercise book, lead pencil, primer; first book classes, first book, first Golden Rule book, exercise books, pencils, crayons, erasers, etc.; second book classes—second book, Ontario public school speller, second Golden Rule book, exercise books, crayons, pencils, erasers, Ontario blank writing book No. 1; junior third classes—third reader, third Golden Rule book, Ontario public school speller, Ontario blank writing book No. 2, Ontario writing course No. 2, blank drawing book, Ontario Public School arithmetic, the "Story of the Earth and its People," "the Story of the British People," hygiene for young people, water colors, (Artist Supply Co.), exercise books, pencils, etc.; senior third classes — third reader, third Golden Rule book, "Alice in Wonderland," Ontario Public School speller, Ontario blank writing book No. 2, Ontario writing course No. 2, blank drawing book, stories of "The Earth and its People" and "British People", water colors (Artist Supply Co.), exercise books, pencils, etc.; junior fourth classes—fourth book, fourth Golden Rule book, "Evangeline," "House of Seven Gables (MacMillan's pocket classics), Ontario Public School Arithmetic, geography, grammar, history of England, History of Canada, speller, hygiene, writing course, No. 2 blank writing book, water colors (Artist Supply Co.), exercise books, pencils, etc.; entrance classes—fourth book, fourth Golden Rule book, "Vicar of Wakefield," "House of Seven Gables," "Evangeline," (MacMillan's pocket classics), Ontario Public school arithmetic, geography, grammar, History of England, History of Canada, hygiene, speller, writing course No. 2, blank writing book No. 2, blank drawing book, water colors (Artist Supply Co.), exercise books, pencils, etc.

THE TEMPTING OF PAUL CHESTER.

BY
ALICE AND CLAUDE ASKEW
AUTHORS OF "THE SHULAMITE"

CHAPTER VI.—Continued

“Bob,” she whispered, “I can't possibly understand why the Duchess wanted to drag Paul off to the conservatory. I hope she doesn't intend to make a fool of him as she has made of so many men before.”

Robert stroked his fair moustache meditatively. “Put that idea out of your head,” he said quetly. “The man who has the honor and privilege of being your husband, Sue, isn't likely to be attracted by a woman like Henrietta.”

“How can you tell?” she sighed. “She's very beautiful——very clever—and they say she has a way with her that maddens men. She's just such another woman as Circe was of Tannhauser's Venus.”

“Tannhauser's Venus?” He repeated the words slowly, then glanced reflectively at his companion.

“Not a bad comparison, Sue,” he said quietly. “But I can tell you one thing, if the Duchess is Venus, you are Elizabeth.”

She shook her head; a sad and hopeless expression had come over her face, marring its delicate prettiness.

“Elizabeth was a saint,” she said. “I am only a failure!”

“A failure?” He glanced at her steadily, longing to tell this dear, pitiful woman that she sat enthroned for ever in his heart——queen of queens—the adored lady of his dreams. But he checked the words he wanted to say, for Susan was the wife of another man—the man who hung over Henrietta Temple, listening to her gay talk, drinking in her words.

“Yes, a failure,” Susan smiled bravely. “For I'm no real help to Paul,” she continued, “and I don't suppose I ever shall be. I've no taste for politics, no understanding of political situations. I shall never make a great hostess.”

“What's all that? That's nothing. If you love Paul, and he loves you—that's the one thing that matters.”

She made no answer for the moment. When she spoke at last her voice was a mere thread of sound.

“Love—yes, of course, that's the real thing. You're quite right, Bob; nothing else really matters.”

She leaned back against the lounge, and Robert noticed how blue the shadows were under her eyes, how inexpressibly frail she looked. A great fear took hold of him. Why had nobody noticed before that Susan was fading—fading as a beautiful flower fades? She had concealed her thinness so carefully, cloaking it in folds of chiffon and lace, wearing colors that suited her, trying her best to hide what he now saw plainly, the hint of disease and decay.

“Susan,you're ill. There's something wrong,” he muttered. “Does Chester realize how thin you've got?”

“Thank God, no!” There was a note in Susan's voice which cut the listener to the quick. “If you care for me, Robert, if you're my friend, don't worry me by talking about my health—don't ask me if I'm happy or unhappy, just let things be.”

He nodded his head, drawing a deep hard breath. Now as ever, Susan's wish must be his law. He must restrain the wild longing he felt to ask the girl what sort of a husband Chester made, for a sudden suspicion of the truth had come upon the young man.

“Very well,” he said grimly. “But remember, if the time ever comes when yup want to speak, or want help I'm ready—waiting”

She nodded her head, but made no other reply. Her eyes were fixed on Chester. The Duchess was addressing him over her bare shoulder, smiling up radiantly into his eyes, and Chester was smiling too and laughing.

“I think I shall steal quietly out of the room,” she murmured, “and go to bed. My head aches horribly.”

“I should”, he answered approvingly. “Go at once, Sue; bed is the best place for you.”

But she did not go after all. She sat for a long, weary hour watching Henrietta, and talking to Robert in broken disjointed fashion, pressing a cold hand every now and then to her hot forehead. But when the Duchess made a move to the billiardroom her headache conquered her, and she retreated to bed. Robert lit her candle pressed her fingers, then went for a solitary stroll on the terrace, and cursed Fate—and cursed Chester.

CHAPTER VII.

Man and Wife

Susan was crouching over her bedroom fire next morning, when her husband knocked at the door and came suddenly and unexpectedly into the room

She had breakfasted in bed, but it was quite early, and the great gong had not yet sounded through the house to announce that breakfast was ready in the dining-room for those who cared to descend to the meal.

Chester was wearing a dressing-gown, and he looked disturbed and pale; but he flushed a little as he noticed with what astonishment his wife surveyed him—this slim, pretty creature, dressed in a soft white negligee, and whose long fair hair flowed down her back, this girl who was his wife only in name.

“You are surprised to see me, Susan, and I don't wonder,” he murmured. “I've no business to come to your room and disturb you at this unearthly hour.” His smile was rather bitter. “But I've got a reason for foisting my presence upon you, and quite a good reason.”

“Yes, Paul.” She rose from her crouching position by the fire, into whose red heart she had been gazing so steadily for the last quarter of an hour, striving to read pictures in the flames; then she pushed a big arm chair forward.

“Won't you sit down?” she asked timidly. Her heart was fluttering wildly under the loose folds of her silk wrapper. She could hardly realize the astounding fact that Paul, her husband, had come to her. She wondered——she hoped——

“I won't sit down, thanks.” He leaned against the mantlepiece, and his big, dominant presence seemed to fill the room.

“I only came in because I thought I might not get the chance of speaking to you this morning—alone, that is to say—and there is something I want to tell you.”

He played with a button of his loose camel's-hair dressing-gown. He was the tall, lean sort of a man a dressing gown suits.

“Yes, Paul,” she said coming close up to him. Two red spots of color were burning in her cheeks, her eyes looked bright and shining.

“I wish you would sit down—I really wish you would,” she said quickly. “You look so big and formidable standing up.”

He looked at her steadily. She appeared so vapoury so unsubstantial, in her white wrapper. What a contrast she presented to the woman he had been talking to the night before! Henrietta, so full of vitality, passion, and fire.

He sat down, however, and Susan knelt in front of the fire, close to his knees, holding out her thin, pale hand to the blaze.

The man's brow darkened. He hated to feel so acutely conscious of his wife's presence. The intimacy of her attitude annoyed him, for what were they to each other, after all, but strangers?

“I've got something to tell you,” he began abruptly. “The Duchess, when we were talking together in the conservatory last night, suggested my paying a visit later on to Helmsworth. She is good enough to fancy I may have something of a career in front of me, and she wants to help me. I thought I had better speak to you on the subject, though.”

A look of puzzled bewilderment came over Susan's face, and she raised her startled eyes.

“What are you saying? What do you mean?” she asked incredulously. “The Duchess has actually spoken of asking us to stay at Helmsworth!” She paused, then laid a flickering hand upon his knee. He winced as if the light touch hurt him.

“She has asked me to Helmsworth,” he answered, shortly, “but by myself, Susan,—just as a bachelor man.”

“Oh!” She rose from the ground, a slight figure in her wrapper, then her cheeks suddenly flamed with color. “Are you going? But of course you are. Naturally you want to be on good terms with the woman. Didn't we come here to meet her?” She breathed scorn, and her voice was raised; but how was Paul to guess the intolerable agony the moment held for her—the death-blow he had dealt her pride?

“I'm not sure whether I intend to go or not,” he said. “But I know how much hang on it, for if the Duchess takes me up I should be a made man, my future assured. The trouble is, that I don't care to visit anywhere without you, least of all at a big place like Helmsworth. It may be the fashion amongst smart people for husband and wife to pay their visits apart. But I don't come of a smart stock. Thank God I'm not in any smart set. I come of a race of men and women who held, and still hold, very different opinions.” He paused and waited for her to reply; but she made no answer. “You wouldn't like me to go by myself, would you, Susan?” His voice softened, for he had loved this girl dearly enough in the past, even though she had gone far towards breaking his heart in the early days of their marriage, when he had made the hateful discovery that she had married him simply for his money and to please her parents.

“Why shouldn't you go to Helmsworth without me?” she asked coolly, as she drew herself up to her full height and faced him almost fiercely. “It's not as if our relationship was that of the ordinary married couple; besides, it is an admitted fact that the Duchess——” She paused and bit her lip. She was trembling all over.

In Old Age

Health and comfort in old age depends largely on keeping the liver and kidneys in healthful action.

Pains and aches, stiffness of the joints, lumbago and rheumatism tell of poisons left in the blood by sluggishness of the liver and kidneys.

People in advanced years hold Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in high esteem because of the promptness and certainty with which they awaken the action of kidneys, liver and bowels.

BISURATED MAGNESIA

For Dyspepsia, Indigestion

Heartburn, Belching, Sour Acid Stomach, Gas in Stomach, etc., take a teaspoonful of Bisurated Magnesia in a half glass of hot water after eating. Is safe, pleasant and harmless to use and gives almost instant relief. It neutralizes stomach acidity and sweetens the food contents so that digestion is easy and painless, Sold by druggists everywhere.

GERMANS LOSE FAITH IN KAISER.

Despite frantic efforts on the part of the German military press bureau to explain the recent reverses on the western front as strategical victories, the people of interior Germany are said to be rapidly reaching panic conditions as the black news of the real conditions filters through to them despite the vigilance of military censors. Residents of communities along the Rhine are reported to be particularly apprehensive and preparing to make hasty moves to interior Germany. Bad news travels quickly and the tremendous defeats of the "invincible" German armies cannot be longer concealed from the German people, with the inevitable result that the very apparent weakening of the morale of the German soldiers will react even more violently among the German non-combatants.

ADVERTISING CREATES AND HOLDS MARKETS.

"The problem of business today is the problem of markets, for if a manufacturer or merchant can find a market for that which he has for sale, his business problems are solved. Advertising creates and holds markets. Advertising, therefore, is the safeguard of business." In the preceding sentences, Merle Sidener, who is a prominent figure in the advertising club movement, sized up a great central thought that ran through the recent world advertising convention when he addressed the advertising club in San Fancisco.

But advertising is a safeguard in more ways than one. For instance a new angle is given to the public appreciation of it by the testimony of bankers attending the convention, to the effect that the factory or store which advertises is the safest credit risk, because the advertiser, knowing the power of advertising, can control his market. Through advertising, he can maintain his market while the non-advertiser, without such a business tool at hand, is helpless when the natural demand for his product diminishes or ceases.

War times are times when marketing conditions change rapidly, but the business man who has learned the power of advertising has learned that markets for goods are latent in human minds, and that to create markets, it is only necessary, through advertising, to arouse an interest in the minds of the people.

DIED BY HUNDREDS, VICTIMS OF U-BOATS.

But little is known of the Empire's Mercantile Marine. The importance of the merchant sailors has not been fully appreciated. Yet it is these men who fearlessly sail the seas in defiance of the submarine and the floating mine, to carry the precious cargoes of foodstuffs, munitions and reinforcements to our gallant armies. Without them the Allies could not make war for a week. Curious as it may seem, no provision is made by governments for them in case of disablement or death. Their dependents enjoy no pension, or other official remuneration. They can but look to the gratitude of the nation. Already fifteen thousand merchant sailors have made the supreme sacrifice. Of their dependents many families are in dire want. "Sailors' Week" is being held from September 1st to 7th to raise funds to help the sorrowing widows and orphans of our Mercantile Marine. Ontario aims to contribute $1,000,000. The cause is a worthy one, and Ontario has never failed to answer the appeal of the distressed. Let our donations be liberal. Let our slogan be "They shall not want."

All the maskinonge in the border waters seem to give themselves up in Brockville vicinity or the crop of fish liars there is larger than at most river towns. Nearly every day catches of the big game fish are recorded, the latest one weighing thirty-six pounds on the Recorder-Times fish scales.

The excitement of Toronto's Fall Fair has not diverted the attention of Toronto politicians from the annual indoor and outdoor sport of municipal elections and mayoralty candidates are already declaring themselves. Tommy Church "ain't sayin' much"—that is along mayoralty lines, but he can be depended upon to line up as usual in his favorite role of permanent mayoralty candidate.

The Kaiser is no longer an interested spectator of the movement of his armies in the field as his favorite observation towers are now in the possession of the Allies and his armies are occupied principally in walking backward. An American writer pictures Bill the Butcher as receiving the disturbing news from the battlefields with impotent rage and demanding that Hindenburg be killed once more, already yet.

A gypsy outfit travelling in a Cadillac automobile shows the trend of modern progress which even throws its blighting influence into the old-time romantic gypsy camp with its fortune-tellers, horse traders and mysterious dark-eyed sons and daughters of Romany. The Cadillac car gypsies are well equipped for their peculiar style of behaviour, for, according to reports, after they have been a few hours in a town it is necessary for them to disappear pronto, behind a smoke screen of country dust. The motor car nomads when last seen were heading Belleville way, so be careful who tells your fortune lest you lose your visible assets.

OTHER VIEWS

The Sole Surviver.

Kansas City Star.

An Eldorado Springs man last week came into possession of a dollar bill across which was written "The last of 3000, and it goes for a drink, a cursed drink, the ruination of man. God grant that men may be smarter than I, a worthless piece of humanity." It was signed E. C. E.

The Lord of the Prairies.

Calgary Herald.

From a herd of 750 buffalo in 1909, the Canadian government now has a total of 3,500 in the Wainwright park, all due to natural increase. This is good business. At that rate all fear that the ancient monarch of the western plains will become an extinct species is groundless.

Employers not Blameless.

London Daily Express.

It is for masters as well as men to think of their country first. Fair play, tact, and readiness to see other points of view are necessary if labor troubles are to be avoided. At heart every worker in the land wants to win the war. It is for him to refuse to nurse small grievances. It is for employers and officials to avoid small irritations.

Which Things are an Allegory.

London Daily News.

They came to him bearing in their hands an Order of the British Empire. But the busy man said: "Take it out of my sight; I would not touch the thing. Now, what I do need is thirty gallons of petrol." They besought him earnestly and said: "For goodness' sake, do not turn down this thing, and we will see what can be done about the thirty gallons of petrol. . . ."

A Sweeter Name.

Hamilton Herald.

In England the servant girl question is not less serious than it is here. Such is the difficulty of inducing girls to enter domestic service that a new name has been invented for such service in the hope of making it more acceptable to young women. Domestic servants are now call "household orderlies." The name has a military flavor, in keeping with the times.

A Time for Thought.

Boston Globe.

We hear it said that this is a time for action, not words. It is a time for action, but it is equally a time for thought. For, after all, this material apparatus assembled for war is only a vassal in the empire of thought; and, unless it is directed to the high ends of libertarian ideals, it is useless. The great service that civilian non-combatants can do in the midst of the battle is to keep clear and firm the political ideals for which we are fighting—that the splendid visions of the 19th century thinkers may yet become a 20th century reality.

A Laugh or Two

Not a Judge.

"Would you advise me to marry for money?"

"I am not here to interpret the 'work or fight' order for you."

A Neat Man.

"How do you like your daughter's husband?"

"Very much. They've been married a year now and he hasn't once asked me to find a good job for him."

The First Sign.

"I think he wants to marry me."

"Has he said so?"

"Not in so many words. But he's begun agreeing with father's political views."

How it Happened.

"What became of your prisoner?"

"He stopped, sir, and as I had received no command to halt I kept right on walking and unfortunately my bayonet went right through him."

Unlucky.

"I'm always unlucky."

"What's the matter now?"

"That's the second time today I've had my teeth loosened by being slapped in the back by some enthusiastic stranger who thought I was somebody he knew."

Inconsistent

Doctor—Well, now remember what I said. Just take your wife and start on a vacation.

Patient—But, doctor, you spoke of rest.

We Certainly Would.

"Would you call eating lobster and cream putting down a disturbance?" queries a correspondent.

What's the Use?

Professor—I went to the railroad office today and got that umbrella I left on the train last week.

His Wife—That's good. Where is it now.

Professor—Eh? By Jove, I—really, my dear, I'm afraid I left it on the train.

The Deceitful Member.

"Ever notice," asks Robert, "how big the tiniest cavity in the teeth seems to the tongue?" That is due, Robert, to the natural tendency of the tongue to exaggerate.

Wanted—A Home Strategist.

Is there no way of counter-attacking to stop those advancing prices?

Won the Day.

"My girl used to think a lot of her pug dog, but I've managed to get the bulge on him since our marriage."

"How did you work it?"

"Fido wouldn't eat her cooking and I did."

No Time to Pick.

Scene, France—Officer passes private busily engaged in ridding his clothing of cooties.

"Picking them out, my man," asked the officer.

"No sir," said the private, "just taking them as they come."

Out of His Class.

Sergeant (surprising sentry)—Why didn't you challenge that man who just passed?

Newest Recruit—Why, that's Kayo Hogan, sergeant, and he's got all of ten pounds on me!

Cause of Tides.

"Uncle Joe," some one asked, "do you know what causes the tides?"

The old man admitted he did. After some urging he explained:

"You've turned over in bed, I think likely?"

"Certainly."

"And when you went over the bedclothes kind o'slipped round and sloshed round, and didn't get there at the same time you did?"

"Yes."

"Wal, that's the way of the tides. The old world slips round inside of the sea like a man under the bedclothes, and that's what makes the tides. It's easy enough after you understand it."

The Poet's Corner

Life's Sunshine.

By Robert Partridge.

Dear heart, fret not because the sun is clouded;
Beyond is still a shaft of golden light,
That through the cloud will touch the heart enshrouded
With gloom and care of life's most bitter night.

Dear eyes, weep not because of passing showers,
Fragrant and sweet the afterwards will be,
As from the loving petals of the flowers
Incense shall be exhaled for you and me.

Sigh not, oh lips, because some bitter sorrow
Nips like a blast the hopes of youth's desire,
For time shall give a fair and bright tomorrow,
And so awaken all ambition's fire.
Each bitter care shall have a brighter ending,
Each little cross its recompense of joy,
Each shadow, with the light will, ever blending,
With rainbow tints the clouds of life destroy.

THE FREEMAN.

He is the freeman whom the truth makes free,
And all are slaves beside. There's not a chain
That hellish foes confederate for his harm
Can wind around him, but he casts it off
With as much ease as Samson his green withes.
He looks abroad into the varied field
Of Nature, and though poor, perhaps, compared
With those whose mansions glitter in his sight,
Calls the delightful scenery all his own.
His are the mountains, and the valleys his,
And the resplendent rivers. His to enjoy
With a propriety that none can feel,
But who with filial confidence inspired
Can lift to heaven an unpresumptuous eye
And smiling say, "My Father made them all!"

—William Cowper.

The Hypo and the Hippo.

A chronic hypochondriac saw a hippopotamus
Devouring grass upon a bank, and tried to raise a fuss.
"You're just a hulking hog," said he, "without an ounce of brains,
While I, of high intelligence, am full of aches and pains.
The coat's gone from my stomach; it's nearly lost its vest.
My kidneys, heart and liver are filled with vague unrest.
I suffer from insomnia and cannot sleep a wink.
I have a ringing in my head. My hearing's on the blink.
My epidermis itches. I've an abscess and a wen.
I cannot get the least relief from any regimen.
While you, a stupid pachyderm, with leather head and hide,
Really haven't sense enough to suffer if you tried.
It makes me very angry to think of all my wealth
Of anguish, woe and misery, while you have perfect health!
Now, tell me, what's the justice, if perchance you can explain,
That I should ache acutely while you are free from pain?"
The hippo answered only with a long, expansive yawn,
And quietly continued his task of mowing lawn.

SUCCUMBED TO INJURIES

CHATHAM, Aug. 29—Mrs. May Terry, wife of George Terry, local immigration officer, succumbed to injuries which she received. When carrying her baby in her arms she fell down the steps leading to the basement of her residence. She had sustained a fractured skull. He husband is ill with typhoid fever.

PTE. McARTHUR KILLED

Mr. and Mrs. Martin McArthur, Seymour township, have received word that their son, Pte. Fred McArthur, one of the "original firsts," has made the supreme sacrifice. He enlisted in the West.

SMARTENING UP NEEDED

The employed personnel of the garrison at Kingston, is hereafter to spend an hour a day at a smartening up drill. Brig.-Gen. Hemming has decided that the military clerks would be better for a little attention from the drill instructor.

MAY MAKE A GRANT

Kingston City Council may make a grant to cover Kingston's portions of the Sailors' Fund contribution instead of having a canvass of the city made. Mayor Hughes has called a special meeting of the Council for this evening to consider the matter.

THE DENTAL CORPS

Dr. S. A. Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Moore, 188 Charles street, has volunteered for service in the Canadian Army Dental Corps, and is stationed at present at the training camp at Carling Heights, London.

PTE V. EGAN WOUNDED

After two years and a half in the trenches Pte. Vincent Egan, aged 19 son of Mr. James Egan, 635 St. Clarens avenue, Toronto, is reported wounded. He was wounded in the ear and scalp. He went overseas with a battalion from Belleville three years ago.

HINT TO SHOPPERS

As Labor Day is one of the holidays which business places generally observe, householders should adjust their shopping days accordingly, and not leave all the extra trading for the Saturday rush. Belleville groceries and business places generally will be closed all day Monday.

MAJOR BALLARD FOR OVERSEAS

Major F. M. Ballard, who has been in command at the aerial fighting school at Beamsville, will leave Canada shortly for duty overseas. He will be succeeded at Beamsville by Lt.-Col. B. R. Huskisson, D.S.C., who served with the Royal Naval Air Force in France from February of 1915 until July of the present year, and has had a brilliant career, the fact of his being awarded the Distinguished Service Cross attesting to his gallantry. Major Ballard was formerly attached to the Mohawk camp staff and was well and favorably known in Belleville.

SALE OF WORK.

The Women's Home League of the Salvation Army held their semi-annual sale of work at the Citadel yesterday. The opening took place at 3 o'clock when Adjt. Trickey introduced Mrs. Major R. D. Ponton to those present who, after giving a short address, declared the sale open. Mrs. B. W. Brown, who had charge of the arrangements, and Mrs. T. Taylor, treasurer, with their staff of workers, deserve credit for the splendid success of the undertaking. The several stalls looked very dainty and well filled with articles of every kind. The refreshment stalls were well patronized, as well as the curiosity stall and the Post Office. Over $100 was taken, clear of expenses for the soldiers, and will be forwarded in a few days through the efforts of the Salvation Army Home League, which now numbers seventy members.

PTE. BENSON KILLED.

News has been received that Pte. Fred Benson, of Ivanhoe, has been killed in action. Fred went overseas three years ago last June and was about twelve months in the trenches.

ARRESTED FOR NON-SUPPORT.

Chief of Police Newton of this city left yesterday for Bancroft to bring back here a man named Goslin, who has been apprehended on a charge of non-support.

BODY ARRIVES HERE.

The body of the late Mr. George T. Haynes, who died at Midland, arrived here last night and was taken to the residence of Mr. Delas Watkins, corner of Queen and John Streets, from whence the funeral took place this afternoon.

RIGHT HAND WOUNDED

Pte. Harold B. Vickers, who left here as a member of the 80th Battalion band, has been reported as wounded. Whilst no details have been received the message stated that the right hand was wounded. Pte. Vickers played a sliding trombone in the 80th band, when it was stationed in this city. He is the son of Mr. J. A. Vickers of Toronto, a former well known Bellevillian.

FOWLS DESTROYING GARDEN

A citizen residing on Wharf street complained to the police that he has been much annoyed by chickens belonging to neighbors visiting his garden and destroying the same. The owners of the fowls were notified to keep them shut up or prosecution would follow.

MADE SUPREME SACRIFICE

Another brave Hamilton Highlander has made the supreme sacrifice to his country, in the person of Pte. Earl Newton Dale, whose next of kin, Mrs. Martha Dale, resides at Marlbank, Hastings county, Ont. Pte. Dale enlisted at Hamilton in the 173rd Battalion, on April 7, 1916, and went overseas on Nov. 14, of the same year. He had been on the firing line for over a year before struck by a Hun bullet, and had taken part in some of the biggest battles in which the Canadians figured. Pte. Dale met his death in action during the recent heavy fighting about Picardy. He was born in Canada, and had resided in Marlbank, Ont., practically all his life. During his eight months training in Hamilton he had made many friends and acquaintances, by whom he will be sincerely missed.

THREE BARNS BURNED

A fire which resulted in the destruction of three barns, with their contents, a threshing machine and outfit, and two horses, occurred yesterday during the noon hour in Hillier Township, Prince Edward County. It appears that threshing was going on at a barn belonging to a Mr. Calnan, when during the noon hour a spark from the engine set fire to the barn which in a few minutes was enveloped in flames. All efforts to extricate the threshing machine, the property of Mr. J. Roblin proved futile. The barn with all the season's crop was destroyed and a team of horses were cremated. Sparks from the fire ignited two other barns in the vicinity and these were destroyed with their contents. The loss, amounting to several thousand dollars is partially covered by insurance. Two of the owners of the barns destroyed were in this city when the fire orginated.

MADE IN TRENTON

At the conclusion of the performance at Griffin's Opera House last evening a number of patrons were invited to the Palace Theatre where a film was featured of local interest. The Adanac Feature Film Company presented the picture through Mr. G. W. Brownbridge and Mr. E. J. Wills, of Toronto. The name of the film was "Power," depicting the influence and power of a politician. The play was photographed in Trenton, Ont., and although the film has been in existence for some eight months, the persentation was excellent. In some of the scenes, especially a ball-room scene, some residents of Belleville are to be seen. This was only the second time the film had been screened, the first time being in Montreal the evening previous. The lighting effects were soft and pleasing to the eye. The company have disposed of the rights to screen the picture to an American firm with advantageous results. All who were present were delighted with the picture, there being no difficulty in distinguishing local citizens. The company is having another film screened which features Marguerite Snow, who was for some time with the film Company at Trenton.

TWO BIG DAYS

As the days set apart for the Belleville Fair grow nearer public interest in the annual exhibition is becoming very keen, and with fine weather the fair this year promises to surpass all previous efforts in attendance and interest. The management has worked hard to provide a fine list of attractions and the efforts put forth should be encouraged by the active co-operation and attendance of all citizens. The Fair opens on Monday and will close Tuesday evening. The entry list in the various departments is large and the exhibits will be well worth seeing. For the trials of speed there is a large entry list of the finest and speediest thoroughbred horses in Canada and the classes 2.13, 2.18, 2.25 and 2.30 should furnish many thrills. A special and timely feature arranged for this year is the War Display consisting of trenches, dug-outs and the much talk of German pill boxes which the Canadian soldiers over there have had such pleasure making too hot for the Huns. Many souvenirs picked up on the battlefields of Flanders will also be shown. This exhibit gives a splendid idea of actual war conditions and is interesting and instructive. The Belleville Fair this year promises to be the best ever and every citizen of this district should take an active interest in their own exhibition and by their presence and support encourage the management to even greater efforts in the future.

A LIFETIME OF SUFFERING

Prevented by "Fruit-a-tives" The Wonderful Fruit Medicine

58 Maisonneuve St., Hull, Que.

"In my opinion, no other medicine is so good as 'Fruit-a-tives' for Indigestion and Constipation.

For years, I suffered with these dreaded diseases, trying all kinds of treatments until I was told I was incurable.

One day a friend told me to try 'Fruit-a-tives'. To my surprise, I found this medicine gave immediate relief, and in a short time I was all right again".

Music and Drama

"MY IRISH CINDERELLA.

The beautiful comedy-drama entitled "My Irish Cinderella," was presented last evening at Griffin's opera house, to a fair-sized and evidently appreciative audience. The play was fairly well presented by the company. Daisy Carleton as Peggy, a poorhouse brat is the leading character. Peggy is a pretty little Irish lass who is sent to England, where she meets with plenty of adventures and incidentally loses her heart to a young American aviator, Clifford Morgan, whom she meets at the home of Lord Lonsdale, to whom she has been taken by a party of schemers who are plotting to get possession of a large estate.

"THE LONE WOLF"

The big sensational photo-play, "The Lone Wolf," is a special feature attraction at Griffin's Theatre tonight. This is one of the big dramatic pictures which has attracted capacity audiences wherever shown, and those who have seen it before will want to see it again. Preceding the feature picture is a very laughable Fox comedy and the second episode of the new serial, "A Fight for Millions."

First Hospital Special Train

Thirty-three Invalid Soldiers to be Despatched to Their Western Homes

KINGSTON, Aug. 28.—Kingston's first hospital special will leave this city Thursday at noon, introducing the new system of despatching invalid soldiers to their homes instead of the old system of keeping them in the hospital they were placed in on returning from overseas until they were able to travel home alone.

This new phase is a direct result of the taking over of the convalescent homes and sanatoria by the Invalided Soldiers' Commission.

On Thursday's train, which will leave here at noon, there will be twelve patients from the Mowat Hospital, thirteen from Queen's Hospital and eight from the Cobourg Hospital. The train will be in charge of Capt. Dr. McKay of the Mowat Hospital and Sister Leitch, also from the latter institution, who will be assisted by thirteen orderlies. Every possibile arrangement has been made for comfort. Twelve of the party will be cot cases. There will be the ward car, a standard Pullman and the tourist coach, and the train will go via Toronto. Stops will be made at Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Vancouver, reaching that place Monday.

GREAT FISH CATCH

OTTAWA, Aug. 29.—The Department of Naval Service reports that the catch of cod and haddock on the Atlantic coast during the month of July was 72,000 cwts. greater than that of July 1917, while that of hake and pollock was 1,000 cwts. less. The herring catch was less by 11,000 cwts., and the sardine catch by 12,000 bbls.

The total value in first hand of sea fish landed on both coasts during July is $4,306,124, against $3,303,743 for July last year.

Oral "Booze" Used As German "Bracer"

LONDON, Aug. 29.—(British wireless Service)—Since the entente allies have wrested the initiative from Gen. Ludendorff on the western front the effect on the German people is such that it has been necessary to apply continuous verbal stimulants and they are officially exhorted to be "men" and to be "stouthearted."

There has been more than a suggestion of panic and it has been necessary for Gen. Von Stein, the Prussian War Minister, to fill more than three columns in the Berlin newspapers with reproaches to the people who credit and repeat fantastic rumors of disaster.

It appears to have been freely stated among other things that Germany has lost 150,000 prisoners in the recent fighting and that the German troops have been betrayed.

Gen. Von Stein tells the Germans to look at France for an example. He says:

"Every Frenchman believes in final victory with a steadiness which forces admiration."

WIN FOR ONTARIOS

At the Agricultural Park yesterday afternoon a number of baseball fans of the city, assembled to witness a baseball match between the Ontarios of this city and the Deloro team. While the Ontarios were taking their sixth innings rain commenced to fall and Mr. R. Colling, umpire, called the game. The score at this stage of the game was 8 to 4 in favor of the Ontarios. The visitors made their four runs in the 6th innings, when Smith, as pitcher, was substituted for W. Green, who pitched gilt edge ball for five innings. At times good exhibitions of the game was given by both teams, although it was apparent that the Deloro players were outclassed, especially in fielding. It was, however, a good game and was thoroughly enjoyed by the spectators. The line up of the teams was as follows:

DELORO—Lapierre, 2nd; Wright, r.f.; Amgot, c; Loney, 3rd; Primeau, s.s.; Brousseau,1st; McInroy, lf; Gravelle, P; Lapine, c.f.

ONTARIO—Casey, c.f.; Mills, 3rd; Lynch, s.s.; Colling, l.f.; Smith, 2nd; McWilliams, 1st; Snell, r.f.; Ross, c; Green, p.

At the conclusion of the game the visitors were entertained to a luncheon

BOWLING

The five rinks of Belleville bowlers who went to Kingston yesterday to play a friendly game with a like number of rinks of that city met with defeat. In the afternoon game every Belleville rink was down and in the evening game only one Belleville rink was on top. The rink skipped by Mr. W. B. Riggs, of this city, at the end of the game was leading by one point. The Belleville players are loud in their praise of the hospitable manner in which they were treated by the Kingston bowlers. A return match will be played here in the near future.

RIFLE SHOOTING

The Civilian Rifle Club held a shoot at the butts yesterday afternoon. Owing to the very rough weather, the scoring was not very high, but nevertheless the experience of shooting at 600 yards in a gale was enjoyed by all those who took part. Full scores:

TAKE 'EM AAWY

"Watcha tink dis iss. Yuh jest take dem cats somewha else. I ain't got no uze for dem." Such was the greeting the colored gentleman at the Kingston incinerator gave a citizen who produced three "live" kittens for cremation.

"Dis here place am for dead tings not real live wooly animals. Run away wid them and have 'em dead and den you kin bring him here and we'll put dem thro de singer process."

The gent with the kittens reluctantly departed and ashe did not come back it is thought he used the drowning process to get rid of the youthful Toms.

Saylor Block Destroyed With Three Business Concerns—Stephenson Block Badly Damaged—Rennie Kemp Heaviest Loser—Citizens Anxious For New Fire Apparatus Purchased But Not Delivered

(From a Staff Correspondent)

TRENTON, Aug. 30.—From some cause, which apparently is unknown, at about the noon hour yesterday a fire broke out in the Saylor block, Ridgeway street, Trenton, and before it was checked the block was destroyed, with three business concerns situated therein. A brick block adjoining, belonging to the Dr. Stephenson's estate, was also damaged to a considerable extent. The fire is said to have originated in a photo studio conducted by Mr. T Reynolds.

When an alarm of fire was sounded and the Trenton fire brigade arrived upon the scene, the interior of the studio was a mass of flames, and it was apparent a stubborn fight to prevent the flames from spreading to adjoining property was in store for the fire fighters.

The fire engine, however, worked well and the firemen bent every energy to revent a conflagration and fortunately they succeeded.

Business Section Scorched

The fire was in the business section of the city and at one time it was feared that it would spread to the Gilbert House and other prominent places. The block destroyed was faced with cement blocks and two storeys in height. In addition to Reynold's studio, Lee Hung's laundry and S. Finger's restaurant and news stand were located in the burned block. The spread of the fire was so rapid that virtually nothing was sal- while the plate glass windows were a complete loss.

Rennie Kemp Big Loser

In the Stephesen block, adjoing the burned building, is situated Mr. Rennie Kemp's china hall, restaurant and news stand. His stock was damaged to a large extent by smoke and water, while the plat eglass windows were broken by the heat. In fact, the heat was so intense that the plate glass windows in Milady's millinery store and H. R. Derbyshire tailoring establishment situated on the opposite side of the street, were cracked.

Loss $20,000

The loss to buildings and contents of stores is estimated at about $20,000, and the insurance will only partially cover same.

Notes

A brick building adjoining the Saylor block is used by the Gilbert House as sample rooms. At the time of the fire three rooms were being utilized by travellers who were displaying their wares. Owing to the dense smoke the travellers with assistants had a rather hard time packing up and removing trunks to a place of safety.

Whilst the fire was in progress and during the afternoon and evening the scene was visited by hundreds of citizens and not a few from the surrounding country, as news of the fire spread rapidly.

Great credit is due to the fire brigade of the town in confining the fire to a comparatively limited space.

There is every prospect that the burned block will be rebuilt in the near future.

The new motor fire engine recently purchased but not yet delivered, would have been a Godsend yesterday and when the fire was at its height and threatened to sweep the entire business section of the map, many citizens wished that the new engine was on the scene. The need for an organized paid fire department was also very evident, although the volunteer fire laddies, once they reached the scene, worked with a will and certainly won a great victory against heavy odds.

COMBLES CAPTURED BY BRITISH TROOPS WHO CONTINUE ADVANCE ON PERONNE

CANADIANS ADVANCE EAST OF ARRAS

BRITISH FORCES CONTINUE VICTORIOUS ADVANCE, DRIVING ENEMY BACK—COMBLES CAPTURED AND PERONNE MENACED—CANADIANS START DRIVE EAST OF ARRAS ON SEVEN-MILE FRONT AND AT EARLY HOUR HAD PENETRATED 2000 YARDS—REINCOURT CAPTURED BY BRITISH—FRENCH REPULSED GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACKS LAST NIGHT IN AILETTE-AISNE SECTOR.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Aug. 30—(Noon)—British troops have captured Combles between Bapaume and the River Sommo.

Canadian forces east of Arras resumed their advance this morning and at an early hour had penetrated another two thousand yards on a front of seven miles between Bullecourt and the Scarpe River, according to advices received here.

The British forces have reached within a mile of Drocourt and have captured Riencourt.

HUN COUNTER ATTACKS FAIL

PARIS, Aug. 30—(Morning Official) German counter attacks between Ailetto and Aisne were repulsed last night by the French troops. The French have maintained their gains east of Pasly, north of Soissons.

FALL OF PERONNE NEXT

PARIS, Aug. 30—(9 a.m.)—British line north of Somme has been carried beyond the points indicated in last night's statement from Field Marshal Haig. The British are now several kilometres east of Combles. The advance continues and fall of Peronne is predicated.

FALL OF BAPAUME

With the capture of Bapaume, the outflanking of Peronne, and its evacuation by the enemy, the capture of Noyon and the approach of the French to Guiscard and Ham, the third great battle of the Somme nears a triumphant end. The genius of Foch and the fighting spirit of the Allied armies have won a great victory. In the battle of St. Quentin, fought during March and April, the Germans starting from the neighborhood of St. Quentin and La Fere, marched westward about thirty-five miles in a little over two weeks, and arrived at points about eight miles from Amiens before their advance was checked. They were on their way to the sea, the purpose of their campaign being to separate the British and French armies, and while holding the French in check by a defensive line along the Valley of the Somme, to destroy the British army, occupy the Channel ports of France, and finish the war in a hurry before the Americans could be brought into the field in large numbers. When this plan was defeated by the tenacious resistance of the allied troops in front of Amiens the German leaders by three great successive thrusts—on the Aisne, the Oise and the Marne—sought to uncover the way to Paris and bring the French Capital under their guns

London Bobbies Out on Strike

Famous Body of Metropolitan Police Demand Increase in Wages

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Aug. 30—London outside of a little square mile comprising city property has practically been without police protection since midnight when the famous Metropolitan police force went on strike. Traffic usually so well looked after was left to regulate itself until special constables, private citizens, enlisted for the duration of the war to assist regulars, turned out in hundreds to do the work of the "Bobbies." The strike got worse as the morning grew.

The Metropolitan Police, famous throughout the world for its efficiency discipline and devotion to duty, struck at midnight. They demanded increased wages, recognition of the union, and the reinstatement of a discharged man who has been active in union affairs.

Reports that the demand of the men had been granted were denied in a statement issued at New Scotland Yard.

The Daily Express says that men at every station except four refused to begin work at midnight. In the Strand the officers collected at Waterloo Bridge and marched to the Bow Street Station in a body for a two hours' meeting after which they went home. The men at the other stations held meetings, and when they left they were met by pickets sent from union headquarters.

The Express says that many special constables, honary members of the policemen's union, favor a strike. Many of these are unfit for military service and volunteered to fill the ranks of the police depleted by the army draft. The union officials communicated with Premier Lloyd George and the Home Secretary before the strike. It is not announced what provision will be made for portecting the arsenal and munition districts.

Southern Moonshiners Shot Up And Locked Up In Great Raid

Seven Killed, Many Wounded When Mountains are Combed for Illicit Stills of Which 486 Are Seized—30,000 Gallons of Moonshine Turned Into Mountain Streams—200 Arrests

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—The biggest intensive round-up of illicit whiskey distillers ever undertaken by the Government has just been completed in the southern mountain districts. Activities of agents resulted in the seizure of 481 stills, the arrest of two hundred moonshiners, and the killing of five outlaws and two sheriffs, and wounding of a number of others, Government men and liquor makers.

This systematic campaign of raids has been under way eight weeks, mainly in the mountains of Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, and South Carolina, all dry States.

More than thirty thousand gallons of pale moonshine whiskey was seized and poured down mountain streams. Over $100,000 worth of illicit copper stills of all sizes and other paraphernalia was seized, 21,000 pounds of sugar found on distillery premises was confiscated and the most of it given to the Red Cross Society. Recommendations for 321 prosecutions have been sent to the Department of Justice.

British Take 47,000 Since August 9th

And Allies' Captures Exceed 120,000 Since July 18th

LONDON, Aug. 30—The total entente allied captures on the western front since July 18 now approaches 120,000 prisoners and 2,000 guns. The British captured more than 21,000 prisoners between August 21 and August 26, while the British total losses in the same period, including all killed, wounded and missing, were slightly in excess of that figure. A considerable portion of the British casualties are in the slightly wounded class. The total captures by the British since August 8 exceeds 47,000 officers and men, and the captured guns number 600.

British military observers say it is now clear that the Germans intend to retire to a shorter line on the western front, where they can obtain better defensive positions against the constantly repeated entent allied blows and so the enemy can economize his forces which has become an urgent necessity on acount of his lessening man-power.

Cody Sets out Kiddies' Rights

Emphasizes the Need of Play and of a Sound Education

TORONTO, Aug. 30.—In an eloquent speech that brought the 150 guests at the C. N. E. luncheon to their feet, cheering, Hon. Dr. H. J. Cody, Minister of Education, voiced at the exhibition the "rights of children."

He summarized them as follows:

1. The right to be born.
2.—The right to be well born.
3.—The right to live.
4. The right to protection.
5. The right to play.
6. The right to a sound education.

He emphasized the need of giving children a real childhood—the right to play. He roused laughter and cheers by quoting the slogan of an English medical man: "Better a playground without a school than a school without a playground."

He pointed out that there were 7,14 schools in Ontario, 7,737 teachers, and 560,000 pupils. The fact was that the average daily attendance was only 63,000. There was need of inquiry into this. The Truancy Act must be enforced and amended if need be to check up this loss of teaching va'ue.

10,000 Policemen Out in London

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer,
Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Eng., Aug. 30.—At noon today the ranks of the policemen strikers were greatly reinforced and there were ten thousand men refusing to go on duty. Premier Lloyd George is likely to take measures immediately.

The Canadians between Monday and yesterday morning had taken over three thousand prisoners.

R.A. Fowler Elected By Acclamation

Conservative Farmer Chosen In Lennox According to Party Agreement

NAPANEE, Aug. 30.—Reginald A. Fowler, the Conservative candidate for the riding of Lennox, was yesterday elected by acclamation to fill the place made vacant by the death of the late T. G. Carscallen. The Liberals, after some talk of contesting the seat, decided to carry out the agreement made between the Premier and Mr. Proudfoot that no contests in by elections should take place during the war, and accordingly did not put in a candidate.

Mr. R. A. Fowler, the newly-elected candidate, is a farmer, residing on Amherst Island, on a farm purchased by his father about seventy-five years ago, and upon which Mr. Fowler was born and has resided all his life. He is a man of high social and intellectual attainments, and will be a credit to his native county in the Legislative Assembly, having the full confidence and respect of the whole community.

After his election, Mr. Fowler, in a few well-chosen remarks, thanked the electors for the honor of making him, a farmer, the first candidate to be elected by acclamation in Lennox, the famous fighting ground for political strife ever since Confederation, and said it speaks well for the loyalty of the people to so bury their differences in this crisis of the world's history.

WIFE GETS BULK ESTATE.

Toronto, Aug. 30. — Alfred Hill Blackeby died on May 28, 1918, and left an estate valued at $10,342, consisting of a half-interest in the firm Mortimer and Blackeby worth $3,500, $2,899 life insurance; $1,800 in property at 420 Concord avenue, $750 in household furniture, $50 in clothing, $605 in bank stock shares, $547 in cash and $700 in shares in Toronto Swift Current Land Syndicate. His wife, Mrs. Edith J. Blackeby, receives the bulk of his estate, according to the will, which directs that the widow must give an article of furniture to each of the daughters. His lodge regalia and jewels are left to Waterloo Lodge, I.O.O.F., of Galt.

Young Girl Drowned Was Expert Swimmer

But Big Wave Smothered Her and Filled Her Lungs—A Cobourg Tragedy

COBOURG, Aug. 30.—A sad drowning accident took place here, whereby Bessie Isabel Heastie, the bright, attractive young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Heastie, lost her life. The young girl was bathing near the shore with some companions, and was about to come out of the water. She was an expert swimmer and called to the others that she would wait for the big wave coming in and ride in on it. The water had become quite rough and the wave broke over her with great force, filling her mouth and lungs with water and she was unable to make the shore. The alarm was given speedily, and efforts were made to recover the body. A friend of the family watched the water all night, and early in the morning found the body had washed in close to the shore. Mr. Heastie had gone to British Columbia, and his family had packed up preparatory to going West to join him. Besides her parents she leaves an elder sister, Margaret. The young girl was sixteen years old.

Serious Fire In Prince Edward Sweeps Fields, Crops and Barns

The Picton Gazette gives the following additional particlars of the disastrous fire, which occurred in Hillier Township on Wednesday afternoon as reported in yesterday's Inteligencer:

A serious fire occurred Wednesday afternoon on the Christian Street road about two miles from Crofton, when two barns together with their contents were totally destroyed. The fire also swept over a large area of country, burning fences and crops.

The fire started about noon at the barn owned by Oscar Parks. Threshing operations were in progress at this place, and while the men were at dinner the fire started, gaining such headway before measures could be taken to extinguish it that the barn could not be saved. The threshing machine and a valuable team of horses which belonged to Mr. Phillip Roblin were also burned.

From Park's barn the fire swept westward, carried by the high wind blowing at the time, across the fields, burning grass, stuble, fences, grain and everything in its path.

The barn belonging to Mr. Oliver Calnan on the second farm west, caught fire in this way and was entirely destroyed with its contents, also several stacks of hay near by.

From here the fire swept northward across the fields, leaving destruction in itspath. It found in an uncleared field on Mr. Calnan's farm a spot where it spread rapidly and in all about 00 acres are reported to have been burnt over.

The loss will be severe.

Canada's Prosperity Due To Sailors

Since the war was declared, Canade has witnessed a period of financial prosperity such as probably has never occurred in history of the country. Wheat is high, pork and beef command top prices and all the food produced is sold at a figure that would have been undreamed of a decade ago.

From a period that verged on a financial depression in a short space of four years the Nation has reached the height of prosperity. The reason of this may be roughly given as the War, which is in itself conducive to high prices. But it must be remembered that unless our commodities could be transported they would be a drug on the market. The reason that Canada today enjoys her prosperity is that 300,000 men of the Merchant Marine are braving the perils of every destructive device known to modern maritime warfare, to carry Canada's goods to overseas' markets. Fifteen thousand of them have left behind sorrowing families.

As members of an unofficial service, no pension is granted the dependents of merchant sailors. Yet they gave their lives for the Empire. What will the Empire give for them?

"Sailors' Week" is being held from September 1st to 7th to raise money to relieve the distress of their families. Every dollar that is collected will be used by the Navy League of Canada in helping these unfortunate women and children. Ontario's objective is $1,000,000. Ontario has never failed. Give generously! Let your motto be "They shall not want."

TIRED ENEMY DOG GETS BRITISH SYMPATHY

With the British Army in France, Aug. 30.—There is one prisoner among all this horde of disheartened men that claimed and got instant sympathy from every British soldier. Our men stopped to speak words of encouragement to him and to make friendly gestures to him. He was only a dog—a tired German messenger. But he sat in one corner enduring captivity with a certain dignity. He gazed out on a new world with intelligent eyes. What a story he could tell of his part in this memorable defeat, if he could only talk.

Noyon Known to The Romans, Great Railway and Road Centre

Charlemagne Was Crowned King of the Franks and John Calvin Was Born There

Noyon, captured by the French army yesterday, is situated on the right bank of the Oise River, at the confluence of that stream and the little River Verse. To the south and east there are large areas of flat lowlands along the Oise, while t othe north is a winding valley. To the south-west is Mount Renanud and the Lassigny hassif, which dominate the whole region. To the north-east a range of high hills juts out into the valley.

One railroad runs through Noyon. It comes up the Oise Valley from Compiegne, and turning east at Noyon leadsto Chauny and La Fere. A canal lead off the north and terminates at Nesle. Two small railroad lines run north and northeast, the former to Nesle and the latter to Ham.

Noyon is a great highway centre. One road run to Roye, to the northwest; one to Ham, to the north-east; one goes up the Oise Valley and another leads down into Carlepont forest, to the southeast; another goes down the Oise to Compjegne.

Noyon is a very ancient town, being known to the Romans. Charlemange was crowned King of the Franks at Noyon in 768, and Hugh Capet was elected King there 987. It was the birthplace of John Calvin, who was born July 10, 1509.

Marine Rocket Goes up Sir John Gives $50000

Campaign Opens, and Slogan is: "Dive Deep Down for Our Sailors."

TORONTO, Aug. 30.—The first rocket in the campaign to bring financial help to the men of the British Merchant Marine shot skyward at the organization meeting and luncheon held under the auspices of the Toronto branch of the Canadian Navy League at the King Edward Hotel. Frank Wise acted as chairman and Col. C. Williams, the chief speaker, announced that Sir John Eaton had led off the campaign with an initial subscription of $50,000.

Mr. Wise referred to the 15,000 merchant sailors murdered by the German submarine warfare. The merchant marine men had carried Canada's 500,000 soldiers across the Atlantic, and Mr. Wise added that surely Toronto could give at least one dollar for every one 500,000 men transported to England.

Commodore Jarvis feared that the Empire had forgotten the silent services of the men of the merchant marine. "The blood that flows in the veins of the merchant sailor is as red as that of the man in blue," declared the commodore.

OUR WEEKLY SERMON

By Rev. A. M. Hubly.

"THE CHRIST-TAUGHT CREED"

Article VI.—Matt. x:29-31.

In our meditations upon what we have termed "The Christ-Taught Creed," we have proceeded along the lines of child life psychology. By a principle of theological interpretation, simple enough for a little child to understand, and by illustrations from hearts and minds, thoughts, words and deeds of children, we are prepared to accept as facts that "God is our Father, Great, Good, Near, Loving.

We now, by the same method of interpretation propose to show that Christ taught that God is a Father that cares for His children. Every little child that can, with confidence say "My father loves me," may be pretty sure that such love will become concrete in daily action for his well-being.

In places of danger or times of want, the child trusting in his father's love for him, will say with restful assurance: "My father will take care of me." This child-like faith was, in a very subtle manner, commended by our Lord, when He said of a child "Of such is the kingdom of God."

Only as we have this simple confidence in God's fatherly care can we participate in the spiritual enrichment contained in our text. The providential care of the Father was of great value to Christ, the loftiest of all being and intellect. He considered it a great boon to the almost valueless creatures—sparrows. How much more should we esteem the daily care of the Almighty, being as we are, subject not only to the physical elements which destroy the birds, but subject to spiritual enemies—powers and principalities of the kingdom of darkness that assault and would destroy the soul.

The exhortation of Peter is worth remembering just here. He says: "Humble yourselves, therefore, under the mighty hand of God that He may exalt you in due time: casting all your care upon Him for He careth for you. Be sober, be vigilant, because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour." If we would realize the truth of this scripture we would more earnestly drawn nigh unto God, and more constantly seek a realizing sense of His presence, with a deeper appreciation of His fatherly care.

As our children need our care so we need the care of the Great Father whose promises are for us and our children.

A little boy of six years had a toy engine and cars. It was great pleasure for him to have his father join him in playing with them in the nursery, which the busy man did when finding time to do so. One day the father took the little fellow to the railway depot to see the train arrive. The man and the child stood on the platform close by the track. The train was seen in the distance coming toward them. As it sped along its shining track it seemed to rapidly grow larger and larger, untill it looked to the child like a great living monster. With increasing fear he saw the awful creature approaching, till with belching steam, a shrill screeching whistle, a rush and roar, with clanging of bell, the great express train bore down upon them. The child grasped his father, crying: "I'm frightened, Papa!" The man caught the boy in his strong arms, and the fear was gone. This is a parable. Will you catch the meaning?

Men and women, as well as little children have their playtime and playthings. The Great Father in His care for our happiness gives us many things over and above what is necessary, as we give toys to our children.

And so, we play at living' Life is so glad and sweet with God's overflow beneficence that we romp and we laugh with no fear of danger, and full of joy, until, the cra h of some great disaster breaks upon us with rush and roar and shrieking calamity! Then we are in trouble—"Laughter is turned to mourning and joy into heaviness."

If we are walking with God, the strong arms of our loving Father will embrace us, and we shall not be afraid, though the earth beremoved or the heavens fall.

Let us not be too proud, nor too fearful to trouble our Heavenly Father with our affairs, whether they be great or small. Make the "Christ-taught creed" our very own, and trust implicitly in His statement—"Not a sparrow falleth to the ground without your Father." Not one falleth! "Two for a farthing." What common little creatures they are! How they swarm on the streets, in the yards, on the house tops, on the trees, they crowd and jostle one another! Passing the Baptist church today you will hear from its leafy vine-covered front a thousand voices of these little objects of our Father's care. How they speak to us—"The sparrow hath found an house, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young, even thine altars, O Lord of hosts, my King and my God." And one of these shall not fall to the ground without your Father." . . . . "Fear not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows."

Is not this, that the smallest concerns of the life of the children of God receives the attention of the "Father above, from whom cometh every good gift"? The Almighty, though busy, keeping the myriads of worlds in order, has also time and will to care for us, who without Him are but little worth. "He knoweth our frame, He remembereth that we are dust." Though He swings into order the Pleiades and girdeth Orion; yet as a father, He takes care of His children. This is no more wonderful than many things which our eyes may behold as we seek knowledge.

I have seen through telescopic lens the sun, the moon, the stars and the vast, deep, dark blue of space. How wonderful were the sight of those star clusters in Hercules, and Saturn with his splendid massive rings.

But no less wonderful to mortal sense is the single air cell of a human lung. In this enlightened age, with modern scientific appliances, we may leap from the astronomical infinite greatness of God in the nebulae of Orion to His microscopic greatness in the corpuscle of a child's heart, or in a sparrow's wing. Great is the mystery of Infinite tenderness. He who weaves the gossamer of the butterfly's wing, and whose finger tips sows infinite space with worlds, and whose glory the heavens and the earth declares, is mindful of the needs of all His creatures and takes especial care of those who through Christ become His children. May we not sing with the Psalmist: "When I consider Thy heavens, the work of Thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which Thou hast ordained, what is man that Thou visitest him?

All nature, external and internal, bears witness to the fact of God's mindfulness of man and his necessities. If a man believes that there is an Almighty Creator and Supreme Ruler caring for him, he cannot be either an atheist or a fatalist. Adversity may attend him, sorrow, trouble, daily care, and even affliction, but with these will come also an assurance of an enduement of strength to endure unto the end, or of the possibility of setting them all aside as if they were not.

There is a voice that speaketh out of the deep things of God: "My grace is sufficient for thee." The fact of our Heavenly Father's care over us need not be discussed. The mystery of it is best solved by the experiences that teach. It may be that not one of us is just where we would be at this time had we been allowed to walk in paths of our own choosing.

The sons and daughters of parents who bring up their children in the nurture and admonition of the Lord, often find themselves guided contra to their own choosing and restrained from doing according to their own will. So God our Father is working out our destiny on a plan far above and for greater good than any that we could ever conceive or shape.

Let us by the experiences of life try to know the value of this "Christ-taught creed"—"God is our Father, great, good, near, and loving, who cares for His children." Let me, in closing, remind you that in these sermons we have been translating the thought of a little child about his father into sweet trustful speech about God. From the heart and mind of little children we may see the beauty of simplicity in the creed of our Lord, but only in Him can we find it, believe it, and profit by it. With it we are safe in our Father's care in life or in death.

A child went to spend the day with a neighbor one mile from home. Towards night a terrible storm arose and he was afraid, and homesick, and full of terror. Imagine how comforted the child was to see his father enter the door and to hear him say: "I have come for you. I will take you home. You need not fear, I will carry you." The child nestled in his father's arms and was carried through the storm to the haven where he would be.

The boy when grown to manhood, said: "It was never hard for me to understand the words of the Psalmist: "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for Thou art with me." So let the care of our Heavenly Father compass us about that we may be comforted by His "rod" of correction, as well as by His sustaining "staff."

"Then nestle your hand in your Father's
And sing, if you can, as you go;
Your song may cheer some one behind you
Whose courage is sinking low;
And, well, if your lips do quiver,
God will love you better so."

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Aug. 27. — With receipts of nearly 4000 cattle, or to be absolutely accurate, 3856 head, on the Union Stock Yards market yesterday and the absence of any other than local buying, the market may fairly be said to have held up very well. For the real good to choice steers the price ran around $14.50 to $15 and $15.50. Medium butchers sold from $11 to $12.25; $9 to $10.75 for the common butchers; $9 to $11 for the best cows, and $8 to $9 for the medium cows.

Choice lambs sold practically a dollar lower, or at from 18½c to 19c, light sheep 14c to 15c and heavy, fat sheep and lambs 10c to 12c.

Choice calves sold at from 16½c to 17¼c, medium calves 13½c to 15c grassers and common calves 7½c to 10c per lb. The run of calves was light, 211 all told.

With 1464 hogs on the market the price held steady with last week's close, 19½c fed and watered, 19¾c weighed off cars and 18¾c f.o.b.

Guns Taken by Canadians.

With the Canadian Forces, Aug. 27.—The most impressive sight to be seen now in the vicinity of the battlefield to the east of Amiens is the park of artillery captured by the fourth army with which the Canadians are incorporated. When seen the total number of guns of all sorts and sizes from the German field gun up numbered two hundred and nineteen. These figures by no means include the entire number of guns captured as there are others not yet brought in.

Perhaps the most interesting pieces of the Canadian trophy are the high velocity five-point nine-inch guns. These are naval guns of about forty-five calibres with a range of twenty miles and have been employed in shelling our back area, including pot shots at Amiens Cathedral.

Canada Always Controlled Arms

Toronto Cable Puzzled Canadian Officials in London

LONDON, Aug. 30—The Times correspondent in Toronto cabled last week:

"Canada has now complete control over its own troops except in regard to military operations and discipline." The message went on to say the Canadian forces since the outbreak of the war on arrival here have been under the direction of the War Office, and that the change in control has been effected after continued negotiations with the Imperial Government.

The Canadian Associated Press finds a good many Canadians holding official positions here are a little puzzled by this cable. They assert the control of the Canadian troops has always been theoretically and constitutionally at least in the hands of the Canadian government.

It is true this authority early in the war in practice largely exercised by the War Office, but the Canadian organization here has been gradually assuming it.

When Sir Perley was apointed overseas Minister nearly two years ago, one of his first acts was to assume complete direction of the Canadian troops in England under the command of General Turner and also to appoint a Canadian representative at General Headquarters in France. This principle was then established that no promotions or appointments could be made, even at the front, without the sanction of the Canadian Government, and that all decisions regarding general administration rested in their hands. Sir Edward Kemp continued negotiations with a view to the development of this policy and arranged to have a branch of the Canadian Headquarters in France. "Complete control" by Canada has, therefore, become a fact, but it is a mistake to imagine there has been any sudden alteration in policy to bring this about.

Foch is Keeping Experts Guessing As to His Plans

LONDON, Aug. 00—The ultimate aim of Marshal Foch's stategic plan, which is being worked in the present series of battles, is the subject of much speculation, alike in London and Paris. Broadly, the opinion of the experts is divided between those who believe Marshal Foch is striking a number of hammer blows with the object of weakening the enemy numerically an positionally and as regards morale preparatory to a decisive blow at some absolutely vital spots, and those who think that he is at present endeavoring to disorganize what is really the great German retreat ,or intention to retreat, on large sectors, being content to reap the rich fruits of this disorganization in the shape of big hauls of prisoners and material and allow later results to guide him in the matter of decisive action this year.

Some critics hold the latter view, which is based on the theory that a withdrawal is gradually going onto some new Hindenburg line, which is probably of great depth. Those who argue that we are at present witnessing the preliminary to a decisive stroke based their belief on the fact that the allies presumably are employing very considerable forces in the aggregate in the battles, that they are exploiting the gains made to the uttermost, that they already are threatening vital enemy positions, and that, moreover, it would be folly not to push to the last degree this year the imense advantage of their regained initiative, superior morale and enthusiasm for the offensive, especially among the Americans.

BEST CHANCE NOW?

It is pointed out that other considerations apart from weighty political reasons are that the Germans have still many divisions in Russia, and possibly have still more divisions booked for a surprise enterprise this year on some other front. Hence it is not absolutely cretain that a better chance will offer in 1919, for the German front is now fairly liquid.

In regard to the latest developments of the battle one of the most important is the British threat at Bapaume. Its fall would be a disaster for the enemy, and his desperate resistance at Achiet-le-Grand, where the main defensive positions of Bapaume are located, showing that he realises this.

THE TEMPTING OF PAUL CHESTER.

BY

ALICE AND CLAUDE ASKEW

AUTHORS OF "THE SHULAMITE"

CHAPTER VII.—Continued

"What about the Duchess?" asked Paul Chester, impatiently. "Can't you finish your sentence?"

'Certainly." She smiled, a faint flickering smile. "I was only to remark that Henrietta Temple prefers men to stay with her without their wives, the men she intends to flirt with—that is to say, to add to her long train." She spoke in shrill, vehement tones. Then she checked herself hurriedly, amazed and terrified by the blaze of wrath that lit up Chester's face, aghast at the white fury.

"Susan, how dare you!" He spoke hoarsely. "You've no right to insult me like this. Do you think I'm the sort of man to make love to my neighbor's wife or allow my neighbor's wife to make love to me? I'm not going down to Helmsworth to carry on a vulgar intrigue or a foolish and insane flirtation. I'm going because a clever—a brilliant—woman has done me the honor to ask me to stay with her and her husband as their guest—a woman you have insulted by your last speech. The Duchess of Berkshire takes no more interest in me beyond a political one than I do in her."

Susan laughed nervously. "Go down to Helmsworth," she said, "and talk politics with the Duchess. Go—in God's name, go."

Then she threw up her arms as she said the last words—her thin, white arms—but the man was blind to what he might have read in her face.

"You tell me to go? I have your permission?" he asked eagerly, for, anxious as he was to visit Helmsworth, there was so much of the Puritan about him that he felt he must not go unless Susan chose to send him.

"My permission? Good gracious, yes." She walked over to the dressing-table and picked up a big gold-backed hairbrush.

"Run away now, please," she added, "for Darrell will be coming here in a moment to do my hair. It's close on ten."

"I'm sorry to nave disturbed you—to have intruded."

He rose from his seat and moved towards the door which communicated with his own bedroom, then paused with his hand on the knob and glanced at her over his shoulder.

'The matter is settled between us, then?" he asked. "I go down to Helmsworth by myself?"

She nodded her head silently; but, when the door had closed behind him and she was once more alone she smote herself with cruel passion on the breast.

"Fool that I am to send him there—to temptation," she muttered. "Greater fool still to love him!"

CHAPTER VIII.

Paul Reaches Helmsworth

Paul Chester leaned back in the railway carriage and gave himself over to reflection. The train was hurrying him down to Berkshire, for, after all, the Duchess had not forgotten her promise, and now he was on his way to stay at Helmsworth. That great house was to open its doors for him; he was to be received even as one of the elect.

It all seemed wonderful, incredible, yet nevertheless it was a fact. Henrietta, though she had hardly spoken to him since their interview in the conservatory, and had merely given him two cool fingers when the house-party broke up, had actually found time to writ him a personal letter a fortnight later, and to signify her pleasure that he should come down to Helmsworth on the following Thursday.

"We shall be a quiet party. There will be hardly any one staying here till the Saturday, when we expect a house full," so she had written in her bold purpose, for I want to have some long talks with you. I want you to tell me freely about your hopes and ambitions."

A curious and incomprehensible letter, but a letter which Chester had repeated to himself till he almost knew it by heart. And now, in a couple of hours' time he would be face to face with the writer—the— woman whose motive in asking him down to her home he had not fully gauged, but who felt convinced would either be his truest friend or bitterest enemy. For Paul Chester was not a fool, and knew the Duchess of Berkshire must have some object in wanting to see him. She must either like or dislike him

He remembered their first meeting: how he had defied her, torn her dog from her, and how she had threatened him with punishment in the future. Well, this was the future—but somehow—his lips curled into a smile—he did not think he was going down to face punishment. He was not a vain man by nature, but he was conscious that in some indefinable way he interested an extraordinary woman.

He knew her reputation, but he was too assured of himself to feel the least bit afraid of her wiles. At the bottom of his heart he was a rigid moralist and a curiously conscientious man Delilah herself would not have won a smile from him, far less a caress; but for all that he felt it would be very foolish not to take advantage of any liking the Duchess might have conceived for him, when to win favor in her eyes meant certain success. Only—and here he was firmly and resolutely determined—there must be nothing approaching a flirtation between them, and the woman must be made to recognize this from the first. He, Paul Chester, was not the sort of man who would singe his wings at an unholy flame, or care to be known as the professed admirer of a married woman. He was virtuous by nature, virtuous by instinct, and he had all the conventions and prejudices of the middle class.

Perhaps Henrietta Temple guessed as much, smiling to herself as she lounged on the sofa in her boudoir, and nibbled at big French chocolates, glancing every now and then at a clock on the mantlepiece, as though eager for Paul Chester's advent

The Duke came into the room. He had a slow, stealthy footstep for a man of his height and size, and opened doors with a curious quietness. He was sincerely attached to his wife, and had a steady conviction that though it pleased Henrietta to fool men, rob them of their secrets and their hearts, in all serious matters she was absolutely loyal and devoted to his interests, and as fond of him as a wife need be.

He could hardly have helped being aware how much of his success he owed her. She had manoeuvred him years ago into the Cabinet, and before long she would succeed in making him Premier of England. It was impossible not to care for such a woman—not to respect her; and there was no doubt that the Duke gave his wife a deep regard. Moreover, he never suffered a jealous qualm, for he had an immense belief in himself. He was as much a king in his own way, he considered, as Henrietta was a queen, and they stood apart from the rest of the world on a raised dais of their own. He had not the least objection to the homage paid Henrietta, and it amused him when clever men fell in love with her, for he felt convinced that she was only fooling them to help him; and he liked to watch her, with sleepy, half-closed eyes, sitting in state, holding her court.

He knew quite well that a number of people considered him a little better than a dull figurehead. But he was more than that. He was a very wise man. His lethargic silence was a pose; his yawn an affection. He could bark when he chose, bark and bite; he could occasionally be spurred to a brilliant speech, a cutting epigram; and, knowing this, aware of his own meritsh, he had no fear that the day would ever come when Henrietta might think seriously of another man. He knew his wife—or, at any rate, he thought he did.

"So you've come back early." Henrietta glanced up languidly and yawned. She had not expected the Duke back just yet. He had told her he was going round the home farm with his bailiff, and then would have to pay a tour of inspection of some new cottages—a program which should have kept him out till long past five, and now the clock was only striknig four.

'I got sick of the job," returned the Duke. "Beastly wet outside—horribly misty."

'Really!" Henrietta smiled. She was a little amused with herself because she had felt so annoyed at her husband's unexpected advent, for why should she want to receive Paul Chester—alone in her boudoir? She glanced out; yes, it certainly was very misty, and a drizzling rain was falling. She had not observed the weather before, she had devoted her attention to the clock and the fire. Now, she thought, with a little glow of satisfaction, how glad Mr. Chester would be to get into the warmth after a long and gloomy drive.

Her own special rooms at Helmsworth were always kept overheated, and were lit entirely by candles, for she abhorred electric light. She was fond of strong scents and hot, luxuriously furnished rooms, and yet at the same time she could appreciate a spin over the country in her motor-car, the excitement of the hunting-field, and was no mean shot or whip.

She was a woman of moods, overflowing one day with life and vitality, a thorough out-of-doors sportsman, the next might find her lolling on a sofa, indolent and scented as an Eastern Sultana, a woman who viewed the world with big, languid eyes, governed wholly by her senses, a smiling epicureane to her finger-tips.

There were those who said that Henrietta was most dangerous when this mood of apparent laziness was on her, for it was then that she stole men's secrets from them, weaving her webs as she posed in a tea-gown in the warm glow of her boudoir, listening to what her visitor might have to say.

'What made you ask that fellow Paul Chester down here, just when we're quite by ourselves?" the Duke asked after a long pause. He had sat down by now in a big armchair, and was yawning behind his hand. "The man is a mere nobody," he went on, "absolutely unknown to the party."

'Indeed?" Henrietta raised her eyes then she arranged her cushions testily. "The man may be a nobody today," he muttered. "I don't say he isn't. But I tell you, William, he will be somebody to-morrow."

The Duke yawned again. It was very warm in the boudoir, and he had been out for a long tramp and so felt distinctly sleepy; also like yawning.

Sailors' Week In Belleville

Boy Scouts have Enthusiastically Taken Up Campaign For Sailors

Complete arrangements have been made to receive Belleville's share of the million dollar Ontario objective toward the fund for the widows and orphans of the Sailors. Next week from Monday to Saturday will be Sailors' Week and all through Ontario the boys in blue who "carry on" at sea despite Hun undersea pirates and wind and weather will be the honored guests in everyone's thought—a week during which it will be everybody's privilege to "Dive Down Deep" in the money pockets for the fund which is going to protect the dependents of the sailors from suffering and want.

The Clergymen of the country have been asked from the Ontario Naval League Headquarters to make a special appeal this coming Sunday.

Commencing Monday the Belleville Boy Scouts will make a general canvass of the city. In order to protect the boys from any mistakes they will not take any cash, but will be provided with subscription books in which subscribers will write the amounts and sign their names and addresses. The boys will also have membership slips for those who wish to help the local branch by becoming members. These subscriptions and members fees will be collected later by the treasurer of the local branch.

WATCH FOR NAVAL BUTTON

Only Boys of the Boys' Naval Brigade will canvass for subscriptions and they will be identified by the Naval Button.

Those who wish to pay their subscriptions more directly may do so at the office of Mr. Alex Ray, the acting treasurer, until the newly elected treasurer, Mr. R. Templeton, returns to the city; or and one who prefers may pay their subscriptions to any one of the local banks, most of whose managers are charter members of the local branch of the Navy League. It seems necessary to ask from the public a kindly reception for these boys and there is no doubt but that many would prefer to give their subscriptions to these boys rather than to those who might be able to make a more eloquent verbal appeal. These boys are most anxious to do their bit in these historic times, and be able to look back and tell how much they collected for the heroes of the deep, and their dependents to which all the money raised in this campaign will be devoted.

The teachers of these boys are requested by the Navy League to kindly excuse them from school for Tuesday and Wednesday of campaign week.

There will be a Navy Tent at the Fair Ground Monday and Tuesday where subscriptions will be solicited.

Eighteen of the Belleville Boy Scouts have signed up for naval training on the lakes.

How Canadians Took Pill Boxes

OTTAWA, Aug. 29—Roland Hill, correspondent with the Canadians, writing from France, says:

One of the finest fights the Canadian cavalry have been in occurred on Sunday morning on the Amiens-Roye road between Goyencourt and Andechy. The charges made a fitting companion picture to the capture of Moreuil Wood, when the German advance on Amiens was stayed and eventually broken. Two giant pill boxes of heavy steel and cement stand sentinel over the main road and the two cross roads.

A force of Canadian cavalry divided itself into small parties and spread over tracks which led toward the redoubts. The German outposts were surprised and killed and there seemed a fair chance of gaining the position by surprise. The garrison's attention was taken up by minor fights on either side, when suddenly a party of the Canadian cavalry charged down the main road and reached to within fifty yards of the little forts, when they encountered barbed wire and were held up. The mounted men galloped off down the side roads to shelter, but the troopers who had been dismounted sheltered by their dead horses or what cover they could get, went on with the work of cutting wire. With a semblance of a path cut through the cavalry commander saw how desperately necessary it was to take the strong point. In conjunction with some whippet tanks that had come up into the fray he launched another party down the road. It was a wonderful sight, and terrorizing to the enemy. Guided by their unmounted comrades the troops got through the first wire and were right on top of the positions. They fired point-blank into the little forts and then swerved to the right into the shelter of a small wood. The event which the cavalry commander expected happened. The German garrisons panicstricken at the closeness of the horsemen and afraid of being cut off, fled out through the rear communication trenches. Some were caught by our first section of cavalry. Others ran widly into the fire from whippets. Only a few escaped. The gaining of the position meant everything to the British and French infantry. Delay would have been fatal, and there was no time to wait for the guns to come up.

Torpedo Vessel and Murder Survivors

LONDON, Aug. 29.—Details of the sinking of the French steamer Lydiana off the north coast of Spain on July show that the crew of the German submarine deliberately murdered most of the thirty-eight survivors out of the forty-six of the crew and passengers on board.

The U-boat torpedoed the vessel without warning killing several of the crew. While a boat was being lowered from the Lydiana a second torpedo struck the vessel. The boat was torn from its davits but she kept her keel. Seeing this the submarine rammed her and cut her in two. The enemy then turned and rammed a second boat which had been launched successfully.

A young woman of 23, one of the passengers, was thrown high in the air by the impact and instantly killed. The captain of the Lydiana was killed in the same crash.

The Germans that endeavored to sink a raft carrying the remaining survivors.

At first their efforts were without success. After finally disposing of the Lydiana by shellfire, the U-boat made a sixth and successful attempt to ram the raft, amid laughter from the U-boat's captain and crew.

LIQUOR AND FIREARMS FOUND ON FOREIGNERS

TORONTO, Aug. 29—Rounding up five foreigners, two of them women, who alighted at the Don Station, from the Montreal train yesterday. Plainclothesmen Pillinger and Allen discovered them to be armed custodians of eight gallons of alcohol, two dozen flasks of whiskey, bottles of brandy, creme de menthe, etc. In the Police Court later the quintette were charged with violation of the law which prohibits the importation of liquor into the province, and carrying loaded firearms. In addition, Alice Cody was accused of having procured Adeline Coburn, the other female, for an unlawful purpose. The three men and Cody have their homes in Toronto, but Coburn belongs to Montreal. A remand until September 4 was ordered..

PERSHING PRAISES HIS MEN

With the American Army in France, Tuesday, Aug. 27—General John J. Pershing, commander-in-chief of the American army in France, has issued the following order: "It fills me with pride to record in general orders a tribute to the service achievements of the first and third corps, comprising the first, second, third, fourth, twenty-sixth, twenty-eight, thirty-second and forty-second divisions of the American expeditionary forces.

"You have shown that American initiative an denergy are as fit for the tasks of war as for the pursuits of peace. We have paid for our success with the lives of many of our brave comrades We shall cherish their memory always and claim for our history and literature their bravery, achievement and sacrifice."

BIBLE BEST PREPARATION

NEW YORK, Aug. 30—"The Bible is certainly the best preparation that you can give to an American soldier going into battle to sustain his magnificent ideals and faith," writes Marshal Foch in a letter to the American Bible Society in appreciation of nearly a quarter of a million copies of the Scriptures distrubted among soldiers abroad. The Society is also supplying thousands of copies every week to men in the embarkation camps just before they go to the other side.

BRITISH CASUALTIES

LONDON, Aug. 29.—British casualties reported in the week ended today totalled 14,484, compared with an agregate of 8,411 reported in the previous week. The casualties are divided as follows: Killed or died of wounds, officers, 387; men, 2,194; wounded or missing, officers, 1,110; men, 10,793.

The French hares wept on past Noyon and it is reported that they now threaten to cut off a large body of Germans.

Delaney's
FUR
OPENING

Very extensive have been our preparations for this season, preparations that commenced as far back as last February. First, with an extended buying trip—and in the great variety of Finished Furs to be on exhibition, one will see how these preparations have progressed until now, and we decided to set aside three days for the sole purpose of demonstrating to the public what the result of our labors are. Note the days and decide to be there.

THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
THE 29TH 30TH AND 31ST OF AUGUST
We Are Showing A Wonderful Assortment of The Finest Grades of Furs?
We Mention a Few Below

LADIES' COATS in Persian Lamb, Hudson Seal, Muskrat, Marmot. Some of these coats are very prettily trimmed with Sable, Victoria Oppossum, etc.
CAPES, COATEES—Persian Lamb, Hudson Seal, Sable, Beaver.

MUFFS, STOLES, NECK PIECES in great profusion. Fox in Red, Black, Taupe and the beautiful Northern Cross Fox. Wolf, Lamb, Sable, Coon, Seal, Victoria Oppossum, Badger; in fact we have not the space to mention one-tenth of these goods.

We believe you like Beautiful Furs. We know you like to see them; therefore we extend to you a hearty invitation to attend our opening demonstration. No obligation shall be incurred, for these are to be visitors' days, and we shall spare nothing to make your visit interesting and beneficial to all. Ask us anything you may care on your Fur problems, on style, where various furs come from—ask us anything at all you may be desirous of knowing, for we have determined to make these days truly beneficial to you, and will devote ourselves to this end.

MAY WE HAVE THE PLEASURE OF SHOWING YOU ONE OF THE FINEST ASSORTMENTS OF FURS IN THIS SECTION? WE SHALL BE DELIGHTED TO.

HARD ON HOTELMEN.

Troubles of hotelkeepers are given sympathetic consideration by The Toronto News which says that small restaurants are becoming numerous in many of the towns of Ontario. The result is that some hotel proprietors find it difficult to "carry on." There is no profit in maintaining a mere lodging house at such rates as may be secured. The European plan, however admirable, is based on a fair return for room privileges. If a traveller pays only 50 cents for his bed and then buys all his meals at the Greek's or the Chinaman's the hotelkeeper will be forced to consider doubling his rate. The province is dry. Hotelkeeping has become a business free from suspicon or stigma. Unless it continues to be a profitable business, the casual traveller will soon have no place to sleep.

QUEBEC'S COME-BACK.

There are evidences that French-Canada is willing to forget its rotten recruiting record and glory in the utter defeat of German Kultur and the part taken by the Canadian soldiers. Quebec might help swell the sound of rejoicing at the glad tidings of great joy by burning Henri Bourassa et al in effigy or otherwise. Quebec might catch up with the other provinces on meritorious war work by doing something really big and worth while like branding her lying prophets and pernicious language agitators, and banishing those misguided individuals who consciously or unconsciously have been playing the German game. It is time for a change of heart in Quebec and a realization that that province is still a part of Canada. Repentance manifested in good works would be encouraging.

THE STRIKE PROFITEER.

The workingman who strikes today "may not be a pro-German," but, observes the Atchison Globe, "he acts like one." That 7,000 machinists in New York and 31,000 workers in New England should have gone on strike while United States soldiers were winning an Allied victory in France and a German U-boat was shelling the U. S. coast, drew from Senator Thomas (Dem., Col.) the declaration that such action is "profiteering in the worst sense; securing more money from the Government and suspending production." To strike at such a time is to give aid and comfort to the enemy, and the strikers, in the Colorado Senator's opinion, "injure the cause in a manner more actual and more terrible than have the disloyalists." Many of these strikers demand higher wages. Yet, says the New York Evening Sun, "investigation of living costs and wages in Bridgeport, Conn., shows an average increase of earnings of over eighty-one per cent., as against increase of living prices of only sixty-one per cent.," and this it believes to be generally true in all industrial centres. Why, it asks, should one hear of so many strikes, "including over 350 important machine shops in New Jersey, nearly all engaged in necessary war work," as well as trouble in shipyards "Is it economic necessity, or Government bungling, foreign propaganda, or a tendency toward industrial Bolshevikism " None of these seems to furnish an answer which satisfies the perplexed editor, who knows that the average American workman is patriotic, proof against enemy propaganda, and earning wages running ahead of living costs.

Nor is the Newark News, published at the centre of the northern New Jersey manufacturing district, any better able to explain this latest epidemic of strikes. It can not reconcile the machinists' strike with the stand taken by the American Federation of Labor and the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy, and it makes an eloquent appeal to the New Jersey machinists to return to work. It tells them that they "must either work to produce the munitions of war or wilfully forfeit advantage to the Central Powers." While labor "might reasonably be called upon to shoulder part of the sacrifice" demanded by this war for freedom, as a matter of fact "the machinists have nothing to lose by returning to work"—

> The War Department and the Navy Department each have adjustment machinery, and no recourse has been had to them. They represent the Government, and the Government has adopted and is applying policies toward labor in war-work that are highly favorable to labor because they guarantee a decent standard of living and a generous living wage. And in case, for any reason, the machinists prefer to go to the National War Labor Board, or in case mediation by the foregoing agencies fails, the Board, which has dealt effectively with similar controversies elsewhere, will dispose of this case in the broadest and fairest spirit with a retroactive award.

The News reminds the striking machinists that those of them who are able-bodied and of selective-service age "enjoy a double immunity—first, immunity from service, and, secondly, immunity from the hard pressure of competition for wages." "Go back," it calls, making this final plea to the machinists:

> You are not merely blessed with assurance of fair play, not merely encouraged by the knowledge that your work is essential, you are inspired—if you are men—with the realization that every turn of your tools is a stroke for victory and a new world.

The pleasures that the world covets are simple and unsophisticated. A cool evening, without too many mosquitoes, spent in reading the Kaiser's obituary, would satisfy almost any of us, says the Toronto Globe.

Let us not forget, counsels the Toronto Globe, as we notice the heavy lists of Canadian casualties that they were very light in the spring and early summer, when British lists were running as high as thirty-five thousand a week. Our part of the price of victory, large though it is, is not so great proportionately as that of the United Kingdom.

The police force of Gananoque has been reduced to one man, and the Town Council of that place is trying to catch malefactors with printer's ink. A reward of fifty dollars is a very good criminal catcher in many instances. A reward of fifty dollars is offered for information that will lead to the arrest of the person or persons who burglarized a Gananoque drug store. Wouldn't it be cheaper to advertise for another good policeman?

Twenty-four Canadian journalists have just arrived at an Atlantic port after nine weeks visit overseas during which time they had the privilege of seeing the armies of the Allies in action in France, also the Grand Fleet and all the stupendous departments of war effort in the British Isles and in France. We are not jealous of their good fortune—a bit envious, perhaps, naturally, but keenly appreciative of all that the trip should mean to Canada and the favored editors themselves, in an educative sense, despite repeated coarse jibes from some quarters, masked in mock sympathy with the British taxpayer in having to foot the expenses of the trip. The investment should pay large dividends.

Travelling in Germany.

As the war drags on the Huns are increasingly mistrustful not only of foreigners, but also of themselves. Holiday travelling, at its height in Germany in August, as in England, is extraordinarily irksome this year on account of the rigid control now exercised. The newspapers remind people that anybody is likely to be required during a railway journey or at his destination to identify himself to the minutest detail. In order not to be taken unawares, holiday-makers are advised to take with them the following documentary evidence of their identity:

Military papers.
Marriage lines.
Income tax receipts.
Family tree records.
University or high school diplomas.
Deeds, mortgages or other "certificates of property."
Patents of orders or decorations.

EXPECTANCY

Some day, some day, 'twill all come right,
The tangled skein will all unwind,
And we will grasp the colors bright
And leave the sombre threads behind.

The sun is low and rest is sweet,
Yet fears draw round as when it sets,
And sorrow comes with winged feet
And joy but heralds new regrets.

E'en while we taste, sweet drafts will turn
To bitterness that hurts us sore;
We learn to love, and loving learn
To feel the loved one's love the more.

And yet when reason's light grows pale,
There shines through darkness still a ray
Of faith untaught which cannot fail
And leads us onward to some day.
—Washington Star.

FOCH.

Grave-eyed he looks at us from printed page,
His face lean, worn and lined, intent, grim, sage,
Most soldierly yet with the thinker's brow—
Soldier of France and our great leader now!

Not with the Prussian War-Lord's bristling mien,
No air of pomp or of prestige; serene
Unchanging confidence is his whose might Springs from the sacred sense of being right!

No flow of windy words, no pageantry
Of arrogance and pride; the dignity
Of one whose plans spell victory, yet know
A code of honor to a perjured foe!

The son of a Republic, born to be
Its saving, selfless "man of Destiny";
Strong in retreat, yet stronger in advance,
The brain, the hope, the driving Will of France!

Grave-eyed and sad he looks, as one whose part
To wear the scars of battle o'er his heart,
The wounds of France are his—her grief sublime
And her untarnished glory for all Time!

Maclean will act as prosecutor.

SHORTHAND STANDARIZED

A project which has been under investigation for some years by a committee of the National Shorthand Reporters' Association of the United States and Canada was completed last week in Buffalo, and the result of the research among verbatim reporters is to be published in a handbook. The object sought by standarization was the maximum speed and accuracy in reporting, combined with the minimum effort and liability to error. Every shorthand system based on the original Pitman alphabet was ransacked, and the best features of each, as tested in actual reporting by the most expert members of the light-fingered fraternity, have been incorporated into the standarized system. The result of a scheme which cuts out a lot of junk, reduces errors to the smallest possible proportion, and enables the reporter to handle all sorts of technical matter with satisfaction. The standaradization committee comprises one Canadian—Thos. Bengough, C. S. R.; an ex-Canadian, Robt. S. Tayler, formerly of Brockville, and six eminent American reporters and teachers.

CANADA'S MOUNTAIN CURIOS

CANADA'S mountains are full of nature's curios — freaks in stone, ice and snow.

The Maker of the universe has exhibited infinite variety in His architecture. No two peaks are alike in shape or symmetry; no two waterfalls pour from the heights in equal volume; no two rocks or pebbles are similarly fashioned.

There are no "repeats" in the wonder world of the out-of-doors, and there are therefore marvels and curios beyond number.

Here are some of them: First, the now well-known but always interesting Hoodoos of Canmore. On a mountain side north of the C. P. R. station may be seen a group of curious rocks known as The Hoodoos, a series of red conglomerate rocks worn into fantastic shapes by weather action. There they stand, defiant of the passing years and of the passing storms as well, evidences of the freakish handiwork of nature. Imagination can easily picture them as humans turned to stone, like the [illegible] on the Witten Mountain of Norway, and legends could well be woven around them as around the Norwegian peak.

Next let us go to the Prospector's Pass — a lonely Alpine region south of Banff and Lake Louise, where one will find a strange rock known as Eagle's Eyrie. Standing in all its solitary grandeur, it looks like a pillar carved by the art and hands of man, but it is again a production of nature, imposing in its size when seen at close quarters. It is sometimes an actual nesting place for the eagle, where its young may rest secure from enemies.

Another form of curio is to be found in natural bridges. A fine specimen is to be seen at Field, where the Kicking Horse River is spanned by one of these rock arches, destined to last through the centuries and ages despite the constant erosion of the rushing waters. Thousands visit this curio in the realm of nature and are well repaid for the interesting sight.

The Glaciers provide another series of natural curiosities, in ice arches, caves, bridges and deep-hearted but dangerous fissures. Step into a typical ice cave if you would experience a new sensation. There you will realize how green green is, how delicately blue other shades may be, and how purely white roof or base may also be. Under one's feet may be born, as at the Illecillewaet Glacier of the Selkirks, while overhead a chimney-like opening glimpse of the blue sky.

Or if one is crossing a snow field, or negotiating a mountain as an alpinist, keep your eyes open for the curious snow cornices that overhang the valleys. They are often most freakish in design.

Finally, there is a rich assortment of natural curiosities in the Nakimu Caves of the Selkirks, reached from Glacier Station, where the limestone walls, as lit up by flashlights, reveal myriad forms, imitative of flowers, faces, animals or curiosities in rock architecture.

Sailor Men Made of the Right Stuff

Our own Canadian Navy has an illustration of sacrifice and heroism that reads like a page of a romance; but in the multiplicity of heroic deeds not a line has yet been written about it.

When Captain Newcombe, the commanding officer of H. M. C. S. "Niobe" was informed that a ship was on fire in Halifax harbor and that the direction of the wind and tide were setting her towards the Naval Dockyard and the "Niobe," Captain Newcombe (who lost his leg at Gallipoli and who has since had it amputated a second time) was having his leg treated to reduce the inflammation. He immdealtely went on deck to take in the situation, and seeing that the crew of the burning ship—the "Mt. Blanc"—were abandoning her and hastening ashore, he at once realized that they feared an explosion, and called for volunteers to man the steam pinnace and tow the "Mt. Blanc" out of the line of the Docyard, the "Niobe" and the Naval Magazine.

Fourteen men, under Mr. Matteson, a Warrant Officer from Toronto, promptly responded. The captain explained the danger of explosion and the necessity for haste and they themselves had no doubt realized the reason that the "Mt. Blanc" crew were so hastily abandoning her and rowing ashore.

Undaunted, they put off and were coming alongside when the ship exploded, leaving not one trace of either the steam pinnance or any of her crew of fourteen. These men were not all old man-o'-war men trained for years to discipline but many of them recently recruited from Ontario but they were made of the right stuff. What of their dependents?

SEVEN HUNDRED MEN TAKEN BY CORPORAL

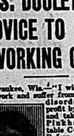
With the French Army in France, Aug. 29—The capture of 700 Germans is the exploit attributed to Pierre Cellier aged 23, a corporal in the French tank corps. Among the prisoners was a colonel and fourteen officers. Two field pieces also were taken.

Cellier has been awarded the Cross of the Legion of Honor, a reward rarely given to anyone by a commissioned officer.

Cellier was in command of a tank manned by 15 Americans in the recent fighting in the Marne salient. A shell struck the tank and rendered it useless. The men then advanced on foot. Cellier discovered the German ambushed in a cave. He kept guard at the entrance for an hour, when a German appeared with a white flag. Behind the first one came the rest of the 700, one by one. The Germans threw down their arms before Cellier and marched to the rear at his direction.

MRS. DOOLEY'S ADVICE TO WORKING GIRLS

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I wish all girls who work and suffer from functional disorders would profit by my advice and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I was married, when I came home from work at night, I would be just worn out with pains which dragged me down. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me feel like a new woman. I can work from morning until night and it does not bother me, and I wish all girls who suffer as I did would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. H. DOOLEY, 1135 25th Street, Milwaukee, Wis.



Working girls everywhere should profit by Mrs. Dooley's experience, and instead of dragging along from day to day with life a burden, give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It has overcome just such conditions for thousands of others, and why not for you? For special advice, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years experience is at your service.

TO MAKE RETURN TRIP BY AIR ON SAME DAY

TORONTO, Aug. 28—Col. Hamilton Merritt, president of the Aero Club, received a letter from Sir Robert Borden yesterday via the aerial mail route. It left Ottawa yesterday morning at 11 o'clock and reached the Toronto General Postoffice at 4.35 p.m. Half an hour later it was being opened in Col. Merritt's office. Aviator Dunstan had no trouble with his machine.

So far no attempts have been made to fly to and from Ottawa on the same day, but next Monday a round trip will be made. This is said to be the first time such an attempt has been made in America. The aviator will leave Leaside with a package of mail in the morning at 8 o'clock, arriving in Ottawa at noon. In order to catch this mail letters must be in the general postoffice by 7.30 o'clock The return mail will close at the Ottawa postoffiice at 1.30 o'clock, and a half and hour later the aviator will leave from the Rockcliff rifle ranges and arrive in Toronto at 6 o'clock. In all cases where a special delivery stamp has been affixed the mail will be delivered in Toronto the same evening.

Letters going by aerial mail must bear the usual three-cent stamp, and in addition a special aero club stamp of the value of 25 cents.

YOUNG GIRL FLYER VISITS EXHIBITION

Marion Cassidy, Toronto's young girl "flyer" and the first Canadian woman to attempt the work of aviation, was an interesting figure at the Exhibition on opening day. In her trim khaki suit Miss Cassidy made an attractive picture, the short dark curls that border her jaunty cap and the large eyes that light up her bright face when she chats giving her a distinctive spot in the setting.

'A law has just been made that until the war is over no civilians are to 'fly' either in Canada or the United SRtates. There has been so much spying that I suppose that is the reason," said Miss Cassidy, who has returned from taking a course in training.

The youpng student astonished her audience when she admitted that she had performed a "solo flight" which to the uninitiated at least seems nothing short of marvelous. She also had the privilege of going up with Constance Soulier, the noted French aviator, and had met Catherine Stintson, one of America's noted air women.

Cuba will be the next ground where Miss Cassidy will continue to fit herself for the work, about which she is os enthusiastic and in which she intends to overcome all obstacles that might try to prevent her adopting it as a profession and become a mail-carrier.

Toronto's young girl aviator is seemingly devoid of all fear and has acquired a splendid stock of information during her late studies. She is loud in praise of the kindness shown her in the American schools and will go to Cuba in October with the family of Horace Green, who was her instructor across the border.

ENGLISH WOMEN ARE REQUIRED AT HOME

LONDON, Aug. 29—Iron bound regulations restrict emigration to Canada these days. An English woman has to give very good reasons, indeed, to convince the British authorities that she hasa right to leave the British Isles at present for Canada or any other place. Of course every available woman is required for munitions and other war work.

SUB STILL OPERATING OFF CANADIAN COAST

A Canadian Atlantic Port, Aug. 29—The crew of the new fishing schooner Rush, of Boston, arrived here on board another fishing vessel, reporting that their ship was sunk by a submarine on the fishing grounds off this coast.

Many Ancient Guns Captured

WITH THE CANADIAN FORCES, Aug. 28—The most impressive sight to be seen now in the vicinity of the battlefield to the east of Amiens is the park of artillery captured by the fourth army, which the Canadians are incorporated. When seen, the total number of guns of all sorts and sizes, from the German field gun up, numbered two hundred and nineteen. These figures by no means include the entire number of guns captured, as there are others not yet brought in.

Perhaps the most interesting pieces of the Canadian trophies are the high velocity five-point-nine guns. These are naval guns of about forty-five calibre, with a range of twenty miles and have been employed in shelling our back area, including pot shots at Amiens cathedral.

Taken all in all, the guns are a very mixed lot, showing that the enemy has been forced through heavy recent losses to impress into service weapons twenty years old alongside guns of 1918 pattern.

It has been impossible to keep a record of the machine-guns captured, which are passed through to the base ordnance to be overhauled, but they run into the thousands. As for rifles they come in by the wagonload. Except half a dozen pieces, all the artillery captured by the Canadian forces are serviceable, and many of them fired back his own ammunition at the Boche before being parked. There is a vast store of enemy ammunition of all kinds, sufficient for every captured gun carries a chalk legend, of which the folowing on a naval gun is typical: "Application for the award of this article as a trophy is being submitted by the—Battalion."

DROWNED IN FRENCH RIVER.

While canoeing on the French River at Recollet Falls, two well-known Pittsburg men, a Dr. Howard and his friend, Mr. T. H. McCutcheon, president of a large manufacturing company, lost their lives on Monday. The unfortunate men were members of a Pittsburg fishing club, which owns a summer camp on the French River, and Dr. Howard, president of the club, had been spending a holiday up there every summer for twelve years. The accident happened below the balls and apparently when they were about to portage over some slippery rocks by an unusual route. Dr. Howard fell into a deep pool below the falls, and though he was an expert swimmer, went down and did not reappear. His companion, who could not swim, struggled through the swirling waters until he had almost reached a place of safety, when he, too, sank in an eddy.

"May God Protect Us," Prays German Critic

"German Army and Nation Now Face Dark Hours," Says Von Ardenne

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 29—The German army and nation now face dark hours. May God protect the Fatherland," concludes an article by Lieut. Gen. Baron Von Ardenne in the Dusseldorf Narchrichten of Tuesday.

"The period from August 20 to 28 has been one of the trying tests of this hardest of wars, the critic continues, but he thinks the Germans have stood the test magnificently and compares certain isolated actions with the stand of Leondiasand Thermopylae.

Gen. Von. Ardenne speaks of measures "of which it is not yet permitted to speak" and which will aid the Germans in resuming the initiative and recouping their losses. He does not believe the offensive will end speedily.

CANUCKS AND SCOTCH GO ON.

London, Aug. 30.—The Times editorially says: "The fine advance of the Canadian and Scottish troops has now carried us a good deal farther than we got in the spring and early summer last year. These troops are moving in localities where the allies have not set foot since the first months of the war. The question arises whither are the Germans retiring? To gain time, which they need very urgently, would suit the Germans very well, after the severe reverses, and would leave us in possession of dismal wastes of Somme battlefield and areas of Hindenburg's last retreat if they could stand on a line not too far beyond. Our obvious purpose is not to give them the advantage of choice if we can help it.

BITTEN BY A DOG

Late yesterday afternoon Harry Lee the nine-year-old son of Mr. George Lee, Front Street tailor, was bitten on both hands by a dog. It seems that the dog was chasing a cat and Harry tried to protect the latter and in so doing was bitten by the dog.

ASSAULT CASE

Before Magistrate Masson this morning an assault and abusive language case was investigated. The complainant was Mrs. William Conley and the defendant, Mr. Wm. Sparrow. Both parties are neighbors residing in Thurlow Township. It was charged that Sparrow assaulted Mrs. Conley, causing bodily harm, and also used insulting language. The result of the investigation was that the defendant was found guilty and allowed out on bond to keep the peace and had to pay all costs in procedings, amounting to upwards of $50. Mr. Carnew, for Crown and Mr. E. J. Butler for the accused.

RUSSIAN BADLY BURNED

Two small frame buildings in connection with the British Chemical plant at Trenton, known as bunk houses were destroyed by fire yesterday afternoon. A Russian employed about the plant, who was asleep at the time of the outbreak of the fire, was severely burned about the body and may not recover. He ran out of the building screaming with his clothes blazing. A fellow employee wrapped a blanket about him and smothered the flames, but not before the fire had burned deep into his flesh. The victim was as quickly as possible taken to the company's hospital, where he received every possible attention. The burned buildings were situated some distance from the main plant.

Music and Drama

"LONE WOLF" AT GRIFFIN'S"

The popular photoplay of the underworld was again seen at Griffin's and made an even better impression than when first shown here. Hart Lytell, as the Lone Wolf, performed well and was quite natural, Hazel Dawn, was also good and all the other characters in the photoplay took their parts well, and it can safely be said that there is not a dull moment throughout the run of the picture.

Another good picture was an amusing comedy in two parts called "Are Married Policemen Safe." A new chapter of the serial "A Fight For Millions" kept the onlookers interested by the wonderful display of clever horsemanship. The program can safely be said to be a well-balanced list of photoplays with not a dull moment running throughout the time the pictures are on the screen. There will be a Saturday matinee.

A MYSTERY STORY

At the Palace Bryant Washburn is seen in a good photoplay called "The Alster Case" which is cleverly written a mystery story that keeps the onlooker interested right to the end.

Charlie Chaplin is here in another good comedy and the audience last night showed plainly that the admirers of the funny Charlie have not forsaken him by any means. This programme will be repeated Friday and Saturday with matinees on both days.

STATUE OF EMPEROR WILHELM WAS SENT TO THE FOUNDRY

With the American Army in France, Aug. 30.—An incident of the lengths to which Germany is going for war material is contained in a letter taken from a dead soldier. It was written by his wife and informed him that the great bronze statue of Emperor William at Luneburg, Pomerania, had been torn down and sent to the foundry to be converted into ordnance, as had also the roofs of churches.

NEW BOX CARS NOW BEING DELIVERED

OTTAWA, Aug. 29.—Orders for 8,000 box cars were given by the Department of Railways last May, to be distributed generally as needed by the Canadian railways. The first of these cars are now being deliverd. During September deliveries are promised at the rate of 40 per day, and during October at the rate of 50 per day. They will be used to assist the crop movement in the West.

WAR COSTING U. S. $52,000,000 A DAY

Washington, Aug. 30.—War bills this month will approximate $1,031,000,000 nearly twice the amount ($870,000,000) expended during August a year ago.

Thus the war toll is now running about $52,000,000 a day, over $2,000,000 an hour, a slight increase over July.

August figures bring the total cost to America of the war to date to over $15,760,000,000 and the cost since January 1, this year, to over $10,500,000,000.

A FOUR LEAF CLOVER.

¶ There was a little girl who wanted a four-leaf clover to bring her good luck, so she started out early one morning and roamed far over the hills and valleys. She looked everywhere. She tramped up hills and over rough places, but had to come home at night tired out and very disappointed.

¶ And as she was walking up the path to her home she saw, right at the door-step, what she had been looking for all day. She stooped over and picked the four-leaf clover and then went to her mother and told her all about it. And the mother told her in a very mother-wise way: "It is always so—we go out into the world searching far and wide for the things we can get with less effort right here at home."

¶ There are many older people like the little girl. They go out of their own town to buy things they need. Maybe it is because they don't search at home

¶ Maybe in this little story you will find an incentive to let the merchants of Belleville have the first opportunity at supplying your needs. You don't have to send out of town for Good Goods—you can get them right here in Belleville at moderate prices. Keep your Money Circulating at Home.

Field Marshal Haig reports that along the whole front from Bapaume southward the Germans are being forced to retreat with great loss in prisoners, guns and material. The British have reached the west bank of the Somme opposite Brie and Peronne and have taken Ham. The Germans deny the evacuation of Peronne in their official reports.

Mr. Lucien Cannon Replies [illegible]o Mr. Rowell [illegible] Draft Qu[illegible]tion

QUEBEC, Aug. [illegible]—In an [illegible] letter published here, [illegible] Lucien [illegible]non, M.P., for Dorchest[illegible] replies to a recent letter by Hon. N. The letter Mr. Cannon writes [illegible]day says that if the Government intends calling more men to the colors it cannot do so without the assent of the House of Comons.

"I regret," says Mr. Cannon, "that your answer does [illegible] a clear, distinct, plain statement [illegible] Goverenments policy on [illegible] reinfor[illegible]ment question. "MINNIE" McGIFFIN DEAD"

Crack Hookeyist is Killed Flying In Texas

TORONTO, Aug. 30—Word has been received that Lieut. Francis Roy McGriffin, U.S.A., instructor in aerial acrobatics, better known here as "Minnie" McGriffin of "The Hornet" was killed in an air accident at Call Field, near Wichita Falls, Texas. Born and raised in this city, the deceased became one of the best-known hockeyists in the country. He starred as a junior for the old Simcoes in the O.H.A. and as a professional became the most-talked of player in the N.H.A., because of his aggressiveness and gameness.

Some years ago he went to California to live with an uncle, returning here in the winter to play hockey. He is the second of the 1914 holders of the Stanley Cup to fall on active service, Scotty Davidson being the first. "Minnie" starred against Vancouver that year, when the Blue Shirts won the trophy for the first time. His clashes with Art Ross were notorious.

His cousin, Lieut. Allan McGriffin, is overseas. The late officer was about 27 years of age. His mother still lives here.

Large Submarine Is Driven Off

A Canadian Atlantic Port, Aug. 30.—A fishing schooner sailng out of this port arrived here yesterday reporting that at 10 o'clock in the morning it had seen a submarine quite a distance southeast of here chasing two eastbound steamers. It was a large one and the conning tower and periscope could be seen quite plainly. On the steamers opened fire, the first shell falling short, but ricocheting directly over the U-boat, which immediately submerged. Half an hour later it reappeared two miles to seaward. The steamer fired three more shots, none registering hits. The submarine went out toward the sea in a southeasterly direction and was not sighted thereafter. Several fishermen along the shore corroborated this story.

A mother thinks it queer that her daughter should care for the things that she never cared for herself

About the time a girl celebrates her seventeenth birthday she likes to allude to herself as an old maid.

Eighteen Men Prey Of Sharks

Brttish Seamen Meet Terrible Death in Sea— Hun Pirates Leave Them to Their Fate

"It was early in the morning the steamer "Mariston" was struck by a torpedo. Just afterwards there was a second explosion w,hich destroyed all the midship cabins, and the vessel began to sink rapidly. When she had gone down a large black submarine came to the surface an officer opened a trap-door and watched the survivors struggling in the water. The unfortunate men called to him for help, but he ignored their appeals, although there was no other ships in sight at the time and he could have rescued them without any danger to [illegible]

"There [illegible] about 18 men struggling in the water, and while the U [illegible]at commander watched, he saw them dragged down one after another. A shoal of sharks had attacked them, and every man except the cook suffered the terible death. Meanwhile the [illegible]rman had submerged, leaving them to their fate.

"The cook, who escaped ,remained [illegible] the water for 15 hours, being picked [illegible] a British merchantman at about 6.[illegible] p.m."

The fund of $1,000,000 being raised in Ontario by the Navy League of Canada during "Sailors' Week" Sept. 1st to 7th is to help the dependents of men like those who served in the "Mariston."

Valuable Minerals In Saskatchewan

SWIFT CURRENT, Sask., Aug. 31—A discovery that will prove of untold value to the allies has been made 30 miles north of Maple Creek in an immense deposit of potash sodium, sulphate and epsom salts, one which experts claim consists of these minerals.

The deposit was discovered in the dried-up bed of an old lake and the work of getting it out will amount to practically nothing. The whole bed of the lake, which is 2 1-2 miles long and over a one mile in width, has been staked and filed on and work will be started at once in clearing away the top layers of dirt and erecting buildings for the carrying of the development on of the bed.

The claims have been filed by Saskatchewan men who will retain their control. Prof MacLaren of the Saskatchewan University, has examined the minerals and pronounced them perfect, while expert engineers have estimated the deposit at millions of tons. A branch line of railway is to be run from the works to Maple Creek. It is learned that the Mackenzie and Mann interests were two days late in getting on the ground to file on the deposits.

PROOF OF INSUBORDINATION

There is proof of increasing insubordination and disobedience to orders which is very significant in an army bearing the reputation of the German machine. Captured orders tell of the refusal of new drafts to enter the trenches. Others censure officers for laxity in dealing with offenders.

Germans often are encountered walking toward the west on the roads. They carry packages containing a few clean clothes and two days' rations and ask British patrols the way to the prisoners' camp.

Russia Pays Dear For Its Game

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 30.—The principle laid down by Germany in the supplementary agreements to the Brest-Litovsk treaty signed in Berlin Tuesday will not cause or support the forcible disunion of the former Russian territory, explains the semi-official North German Gazette.

The independence of the Baltic provinces is assured, it says, and Russia has consented to recognition of the independence of Georgia (in the Caucasus.)

The newspaper adds that Russia has agreed to pay Germany six billion marks for German losses due to Russian revolutionary confiscatory legislation. Of this sum the Ukraine and Finland jointly will pay one billion marks.

Germany has obtained concessions in the oil fields around Baku.

CANADIANS CAPTURE 60 GUNS

A Canadian corps is reported to have captured sixty cannon in the operations of the past four days. It is clear the Germans cannot permit the British to advance further in the Picardy sector without endangering their whole plan for a gradual retirement to the south.

The resistance which the enemy has been making on the west front has varied greatly on different parts of the hundred-mile sector on which the battle is raging. Some German divisions have been fighting with their old-time determination, while others have been surrendering very freely. While it is necessary to guard against exaggerated expectations of a German collapse, it is nevertheless true that the fighting of the past month has given definite evidence of a notable deteriorization in German morale.

KNOW WHAT KAISER IS? HE'S PRAYING MANTIS

Lord Buxton Likens Him to a Praying Carnivorous Insect

Lord Buxton, Governor-General of the Union of South Africa, has discovered the Kaiser's real place in the animal world.

He's an insect—we all knew that. But Lord Buxton tells what kind of an insect. He likens the Hun Emperor to a flycatching bug, the praying mantis ,a carnivorous hypocrite, which, when holding out its arms as if in prayer, is really on the lookout for its victim.

So the Kaiser, pretending to pray, is all the time looking around to see what other frightfulness he can commit. The Kaiser, like the mantis, prays with an "e" instead of an "a"

THE FIRST RIVETLESS SHIP.

The launching recently took place on the southern coast of England of the first steel vessel built without rivets. It is considered that the production of this vessel may mark an epoch in the shipbuilding industry. Instead of riveting and caulking the plates they are joined together in one process by electric welding. This means that the plates are held together temporarily by bolts, and that the joint is then submitted to local heat by means of an electric arc, so that the two plates are fused together.

WINNIPEG GIRL BREAKS AN AMERICAN RECORD

WINNIPEG, Aug. 30—Essie Harrison of Winnipeg, in Chicago lowered the American record for 200 yards breast stroke championship by five seconds. The former record was held by Mildred Arkle of Philadelphia. Essie also took first place in the 100 yards event.

Occupational Training For Soldiers Benefit

Premier Lloyd George Eulogizes Work of Samuel Compers

KINGSTON, Aug. 30—On Monday next Misses H. Meek, A. Sutherland, Sybil Hamilton Marjorie Uglow and Ruby Driver leave for Toronto, where they will take a course in occupational training. The course, which is conducted by the Invalid Soldiers' Commission, Vocational Branch, will last six weeks. When qualified their services will be utilized at the Mowat, Queen's Military Hospital and Fettercairn. The work consists of weaving, brass work, bead weaving, wood carving, toy making and raffia.

It has been found that by engaging the attention of bed patients in this work the process of healing and recovery from disease is greatly accelerated. The young ladies are under medical direction, and their duties are carried out in the same manner as [illegible] Five young ladies have been [illegible] some time with very successfu[illegible] They are Misses Lewis, De Wolfe, Sutherland, Fraser and Elmer. One hundred per cent of those able are getting the training, and the demand is constantly growing. The work is along purely scientific lines, being psychological, and proves that our medical officers are in the forefront of the profession today. Soldiers as a class are not readers, and with the mind unoccupied their suffering would be accentuated.

Samples of the work produced at the Mowat and Queen's Hospitals will be exhibited at the Toronto and Kingston fairs.

Military Officer Within Rights

TORONTO, Aug. 30.—In refusing habeas corpus writes in the cases of Pte. John T. McSwiney and Pte. Jas. Roache, now of Niagara Camp, to Mr. Cordon Waidron, Chief Justice Falconbridge at Osgoode Hall decreed yesterday that the officer commanding the camp had a legal right under the Military Service Act to remove both men from Burwash Reformatory, where they were undergoing sentences of two years and one year respectively as conscientious objectors. The Military Service Act and the Canada Militia Act prevailed where there was any conflict with the British Army Act, His Lordship stated. Mr. Waldron argued that the men, having been sentenced to more than six months, could not, under the British Army Act, be taken from prison and forced into military service.

America True to Big Ideal

LONDON, Aug. 30.—Premier Lloyd George, at a luncheon given by the Government in honor of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor to-day, proposed a toast to the health of the labor leader, who is visiting England.

'I do this for two reasons," said Mr. Lloyd George. "One of these is the country from which our guest comes—a country cradled and murtured in freedom. It has now proved itself true to the great traditions of being the champion and the protector of freedom. In this undertaking it has placed the whole of its resources at the disposal of the allies in the great struggle for liberty.

"Therefore," he continued, "we salute the flag of that glorious land of America.'

'In the second place," he said, "we welcome Mr. Gompers and his friends for their own sake. Gompers is a name as well known in every other country as in his own. Mr. Gompers is a man who, like myself, has forgiven those who in the past have unbraided him for his policies. We are fully prepared to co-operate to secure the ideals which we have always held.

'It is significant that in-this country, with a few exceptions, genuine leaders of labor are convinced that victory in this war is essential that they may achieve the great objects of their lives. Previous to the war German labor organized to destroy the domination of Prussian militarism. The task which they failed to accomplish by pacific means we are endeavoring to achieve by military means—theor emancipation from bondage. If the war had not come for a few years there would have been an uprising of democracy in Germany.

Poverty may be all right as a theory but practically it is all wrong.

Painted Red Cross On Bombed Train

LONDON, Au g.31—A neutral was an eye-witness of the following example of German knavery: British airmen had bombed and partly destroyed a German military train, killing and wounding many soldiers. But before any attempt was made to succor the wounded a number of men began painting a huge red cross on the wrecked carriages, the idea came, of course, to pretend that it was a hospital train. The Germans then photographed the wrecked train, and doubtless the pictures are circulating in Germany and neutral countries.

German Troops Driven Out of Several Positions

Allied Troops Have Occupied Villiages of Lacoutre And Branoutre—Heavy Artillery fire in Vicinity of Noyon

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, August 31.—(Offical)—German troops have been driven from their positons east of Clery, on the Somme northwest of Peronne, and the British advance in this locality is continuing.

On the south side of the Lys salient the British have occupied the village of Lacoture, northwest of Bethune.

An official statement says Britsh forces have entered the village of Branoutre, south of Locre, on the north side of the Lys salient.

Mount Kemmel, the famous stronghold southwest of Ypres, which was the scene of terrific fighting during the German offensive in Flanders late in April, has been captured by the British, according to advices from the front. Mount St. Quentin, a mile and a half north of Peronne, has been taken by Field Marshal Haig's forces.

PARIS, August 31.—(Official)—Heavy artillery fire north of Noyon and between the Ailette and Aisne rivers is reported today.

22,000 Policemen Out in London

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Aug. 31—The strike of the London Police spread steadily throughout the night and early to-day. The majority of 22,000 constables had joined in the movement. The City of London Police joined the Metropolitan Force last night and only a few members of the night shift, which come on duty at six o'clock appeared on the street. Considerable lawlessness marked the first night passed by London without police protection During the early hours of this morning there were some harmless demonstrations, but later on this became active and daylight found numbers of windows of jewellers shops and other places broken and considerable property stolen.

RECORD CROP OF POTATOES

WINNIPEG, Aug. 30.—That the potato crop of Manitoba for 1918 will be over 10,000,000 bushels was the estimate made to-day by Prof. Bedford, of the Department of Agriculture. This is by far the largest crop the province has ever produced, and shows an increase of almost a million bushels over the bumper crop of 1916. In that year 62,681 acres produced 9,080,602 bushels of potatoes against 7,293,655 last year.

Manitoba's potato crop for 1918 is worth $8,000,000.

Fatal Accident at Port Hope

PORT HOPE, Aug. 30—Fred Albert Janes, aged 13 years, a ward of the Port Hope Shelter met a horrible death yesterday afternoon. The little fellow made his home with Mr. Wm. Morton, at Osaca, and yesterday when Mr. Morton went over to Mr. George Snell's farm to thresh he went with him. The threshing was proceeding merrily and the boy was quite interested in the work and climbed up on the machine to get a batter view but missed his footing and toppled into the blower. He came in contact with the fan and the top of his head was completely taken off, one arm was broken and suffered numerous other injuries. Dr. Aldrich rushed to the scene of the accident, but the little fellow had passed away before the doctor arrived.

SCENERY AND SERVICE ARE UNEXCELLED

Miss Harriette Ewen, of New York, who has just completed a trip, by the Grand Trunk Pacific steamship and rail lines, from Seattle to Alaska and from Prince Rupert to Winnipeg, writes as follows:

"I have travelled quite a little in Europe and quite extensively in the United States, having visited Yellowstone Park, Yosemite, Grand Canyon in Arizona, Honolulu, Newfoundland, Bermuda, up and down the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans, through the Panama Canal from New York to San Francisco, and not on one of these trips did I see such wonderful scenery either by rail or boat.

"The state-rooms on the steamer "Prince George" are all outside rooms with hot and cold water, salt water baths when desired, good meals, excellent service, and evryone connected with the steamer is unusually courteous and solicitous of one's comfort. As regards meals and service, the same can be said in connection with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway, and not only are the meals excellent but very reasonable when compared with those of other railroads over which I have travelled this summer, on my way out to Seattle."

She Would Not Be Without It

Mrs. Clarke Says She Never Saw Anything That Equals Tanlac

"I was actually on the verge of a nervous breakdown whenI started on Tanlac and it has done me so much good that I wouldn't be without this wonderful medicine for anything," said Mrs. Sarah Clarke, who is employed in the munition works of the Fairbanks-Morse Co., and lives at 2488 1-2 St. Clair avenue, Toronto, the other day.

"Two year ago," she continued, "when my health began to fail I lost my appetite and nothing I would eat tasted right and I had to force down every monthful. My food did not nourish me and I was losing strength right along. Working on munitions, too, was very trying on my nerves and when I got home at night I would feel so exhausted that I would almost collapse. I could not sleep at all well and would get up in the mornings feeling almost as tired and fagged out as when I went to bed. Every day I worked was a day of misery to me and I don't believe I could have stood it much longer if one of my neighbors hadn't advised me to try Tanlac.

"I have taken three bottles and have never had any medicine to build me up like Tanlac has. My improvement has been simply wonderful. My appetite is fine, I enjoy al my meals that nervousness has left me entirely and I am feeling like a different person. I never have that tired, worn out feeling now, I have gained some in weight and am a whole lot stronger and better in every way than I have been in a long time."

"Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Frankford by W. J. Lettimer, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. [illegible]. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely."

German People Still Fed Lies

AMSTERDAM, Aug 31—Assurances are still being given the German people that the Entente offensive is a ghastly failure. A semi-official despatch from Berlin says:

"The British at noon on August 28 renewed their attempt to break through. Seven times they drove forward storming waves, which were continuously reinforced and led by tank squadrons, into the fire of our machine guns and canno, which had been brought up to the foremost line. The fire from these guns, or smartly executed counter-attacks, repulsed the enemy and inflicted heavy losses upon him."

After recounting the alleged unsuccessful attacks south of the Scarpe in the region of St. Leger, and southwest of Bapaume, the report says:

"Following drumfire which began at 5.45 o'clock in the morning a heavy attack was made by deeply echeloned troops from Deville Wood to the Somme. The attack collapsed in our denfence fire or before out counter-attacks."

Partial enemy attacks in the afternoon between the Somme and the Oise were repulsed, the report adds, by covering detachments before "our new positions" and the report concludes by saying:

"Repeated heavy attacks this morning north of the Aisne brought only fresh sacrifices of blood to the French."

Army of 13,000 Civil Servnats

There is in Canada an extraordinary degree of public ignorance as to the manner in which the affairs of the nation are conducted in the capital city, Ottawa. Day after day, year in and year out, letters reach Ottawa in actual hundreds by every mail, dealing with subjects from the most trivial to the most important, addressed simply to the "Parliament Buildings, Ottawa." Sometimes they are merely addressed to the Prime Minister, sometimes they are for former Cabinet Ministers who have long since ceased to play a part, frequently they are for officials who simply do not exist, and nearly always they betray amazing ignorance on the part of their authors of what the conduct of national business here is like. Two years ago the volume of misdirected correspondence thus reaching the Premier became so great that a permanent official had to be appointed with the single duty of reading and redirecting all such letters to those officials to whom they should have been addressed in the first place

This correspondence which, if directed to the proper departmental channels, would secure immediate attention, is delayed days and sometimes weeks, and all because those who write it evidently make but hazy distinction between Parliament and Government and apparently labor under what seemingly is a wide-spread impression, namely, that government in Ottawa is conducted from a few offices, centred in the parliament buildings, and that all national transactions from the most far-reaching legislation down to the most minute detail of routine adminstration, are the exclusive handiwork of either the Prime Minister or his Cabinet colleagues.

13,000 CIVIL SERVANTS

The purpose of this brief article is to at least indicate that the task of running the affairs of the Dominion of Canada is much greater than the facts mentioned in the foregoing would seem to show the public has any conception of; that the decisions and regulations and statutes which eminate from Ottawa are not all the product of a few supermen giving personal supervision and direction to every detail of a mighty stream of national affairs, but are rather the product of a vast machine, representing the organized labors of an army of 13,000 Civil Servants with offices in half a hundred different buildings scattered among at least 20 Ottawa streets.

About 50 years ago, when the Government buildings, known as the east and west blocks, were being erected on Parliament Hill, apostles of economy set up a cry of extravagance and graft; it was predicted that the buildings would remain for generations an empty monument to the folly of those who planned them. To-day the old east and west parliament block and the Langevin Building combined, do not contain one-quarter of the rapidly increasing business of the Government. In the past 10 or 15 years there have been enormous additions to existing government buildings; two new structures—the Victoria Memorial Museum, now housing parliament and other offices and the Customs Building—have been built: a large number of buildings have been leased and the bulk of practically every important office building in the captial rented.

QUEER HOUSES FOR OFFICIALS

When the war broke out, with a multiplicity of boards and tribunals seemingly springing into existence over night, office room became a serious problem, and ramshackle buildings which in pre-war days would have been scorned by the humblest of clerks were eagerly seized upon for offices by Cabinet Ministers and important heads of war commissions. The result is that to-day Canada's Department of Naval Affairs is housed on the top floor of a departmental store, a branch of the Department of Agriculture is glad to find room in an old tumble-down structure abandoned as a home for incurables(and the Canada Food Board, that important, autocratic, all-powerful war body, is roofed by what was a short year ago a down-town saloon. There is hardly one great department of the Government with its offices centred under a single roof, and some of them are scattered all over the city. The Department of the Interior, for example, has its business strewn among no fewer than 15 different buildings on ten different streets, some of them more than a mile aparat. The Department of Agriculture has offices under five different roofs; the Department of Public Works under as many more than a mile apart. The Department is more or less situated in the same way. It is a very expensive as well as inefficient system, if system it can be called. For quite apart from the staggering amounts which it means the Canadian people must pay in rentals to Otawa landlords—rent range from 60 cents to $1.00 a square foot— it makes for lack of co-ordination, entrenches red tape, and frequently results in ridiculous delay.

Since August 1914, the number of Government employees have increased, according to some estimates, by at least 3,500. This, at first thought may seem to be an extraordinary large number, but it does not seem nearly so impressive, who one recalls the long list of new offices and branches of government brought into being by the war. Here are a few war boards and departments that be cited off-hand: The Pensions Board; the Soldiers' Settlement Board; The Soldiers' Reestablishment Board, the Military Hospitals Commission; Soldiers' Separation and Allowance Department; the Chief Press Censor's Office, the Department of Public Information; the Military Service Council; the Central Appeal Judge; the Canada Registration Board; the Fuel Controller's Office, the Cost of Living Commissioner's office, the War Trade Board; and the War Purchasing Board. Add to this the almost 50 per cent increase that became necessary in the staffs of the Militia and Naval Departments, and the huge number of girls that are employed by the Fiance Department looking after the purely clerical work of the Income Tax and Victory Loans , and little difficulty is had in accounting for 3,500 new employees since the beginning of the war.

FOOLISH CRITICISM

Ottawa Journal

Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, who has been recently in England, is not satified with the course of Sir Robert Borden in that country. He compares it with that of Mr. Hughes of Australia, of which he approves, and especially regrets that Sir Robert, unlike Mr. Hughes, did not attempt to dictate to the British Government in respect of the disposal of German colonies after the war and of post-bellum trade relationship with Germany.

While the course pursued by Mr. Hughes pleases Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, it has displeased a good many others. In the Old Country it has brought him into bad favor with a very large section of the public and press. Sir Robert Borden went the length of agreeing that the Allies should employ the economical weapon to protect themselves against an unregenerate Germany, but he very properly took the position that the future tariff policy of the Old Country was a matter of its own concern, just as the tariff policy of Canada is one for this country alone to decide, and that Canadians had no desire or intention of interfering with Great Britain in its own affairs. Sir Robert has been highly commended in England for his attitude, while Mr. Hughes has been roundly condemned.

But Sir Charles seems to be in a fault-finding frame of mind about things in general. From regretting that Premier Borden is not like Premier Hughes, he goes on to express the futile lament that Sir John A. Macdonald is not alive and at the head of the Canadian Government. He says that if Sir John had been alive "things would have been handled differently" and "there would have been none of these strikes and there would have been none of this talk of profiteering." He would have told the strikers to "work or fight" as Mr. Lloyd George did in England.

Able statesmen though he was, Sir John was not super-human and if alive he would not be so all-powerful as the discontented Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper thinks he would be. He would be a more able man than the war has produced in any country if he could prevent talk of profiteering. There has been more profiteering in nearly every country at war than there has been in Canada. And we don't think the present Government has anything to be ashamed of in its handling of the strikes. It has succeeded in bringing them all to early conclusions and thus preventing interference of any extent with war effort. The strike in England which Mr. Lloyd George took such drastic action to settle was quite different from the strikes in Canada. Munitions workers were striking in an effort to defeat a policy adopted by the state for the prosecution of the war. Most of the brief strikes in Canada have been wage agreements.

But Sir Charles' regret is fundamentally foolish, because it is so absolutely useless. No matter what Sir John A. Macdonald might be able to do were he alive, it accomplishes nothing to regret that he is dead. One might as well regret that France didn't defeat Germany in 1870, instead of being defeated, and so make this war impossible.

Of course, there always will be plenty of those people who are ready to tell you how much better the country could be run than it is being run by those who are giving their time and ability to it.

Courtesy Enjoined on Railway Workers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30—A general order addressed to all employees of the railroad service of the United States has been issued by Mr. McAdoo, the Director-General. Setting forth a standard of courtesy to which all are asked to conform, taking the ground taht the public be entitled to civility as a part of the service for which it pays. The order says in part:

"For many years it was popularly believed that 'the public be damned' policy was the policy of the railroads under private control. Such a policy is indefensible either under private control or Government control. It under public control, when railroads employees are the direct servants of the public.

"The public be damned' policy will in no circumstances be tolerated on the railroads under Government control. Every employee of the railroads should take pride in serving the public courteously and efficiently. Courtesy costs nothing, and when it is dispensed, it makes friends of the public and adds to the self-respect of the employee.

NO EXCUSE FOR INCIVILITY

"My atention has also been called to the fact that employees have sometimes offered as an excuse for their own shortcomings, or as a justification for delayed trains or other difficulties, the statement that 'Uncle Sam is runing the railroads now,' or, 'These are McAdoo's orders,' etc. Nothing could be more reprehensible than statements of this character, success of the Railroad Administration or the welfare of railroad employees themselves. No doubt these who have made them have done so thoughtlessly in most instances, but the harm is just as great if a thing of this sort is done thoughtlessly as if done deliberately.

"There are many people, who, for partisan or selfish purposes, wish Government operation of the railroads to be a failure. Every employee who is discourteous to the public or makes excuses or statements is helping these partisan or selfish interests to discredit Government control of railroads.

PUBLIC AGGRAVATED ALREADY

"Recently the wages of railroad employees were largely increased, involving an addition to railroad operating expenses of more than $475,000,000 per annum. In order to meet this increase, the public has been called upon to pay largely increased passenger and freight rates. The people have accepted this new burden cheerfully and patriotically. The least that every employee can do in return is to serve the public courteously, faithfully and efficiently."

Baby's Great Danger During Hot Weather

More little ones die during the summer months than at any other time of the year. Diarrhoea, dysentery, cholera infantum and stomach disorders, come without warning and when a medicine is not at hand to give promptly the short delays too frequently means that the child has passed beyond aid. Baby's Own Tablets should always be kept in the home, where there are young children. An occasional dose of the Tablets will prevent stomach and bowel troubles or if the troubles comes suddenly the prompt use of the Tablets will cure the baby. Mrs. Chas. Anderson, Minda, Alta., says:—"Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine for little ones who are suffering from stomach troubles. They cured my baby and have made her a fine healthy girl." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co. Brockville, Ont.

Called By Death

WILLIAM KENNEDY

A prominent citizen of Bancroft, passed away Thursday in the person of Mr. Wm. Kennedy, proprietor of the Hotel Bancroft, after an illness extending over a period of several months. His death was due to sarcoma.

The deaceased had been a resident of Bancroft for about fifteen years, during which time he conducted the Hotel Bancroft, which enjoys the reputation of being one of the cleanest and best managed hostelries in Ontario. He was forty-nine years of age, and is survived by a widow and three daughters, who have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

She was a member of St. Thomas Church. She is survived by her husband and two children, also her father, three sisters and three brother. Her many friends in this city will learn of her death with deep regret. The remains will be brought to the city this evening and taken to the home of her father, South Foster Ave.

Don't Trust In Luck

Success does not come by chance The untrained, unskilled worker, who makes no preparation for his work and hopes just by good luck to win distinction and advancement, is doomed to failure because he lacks the essential qualifications.

Training that imparts exact, reliable knowledge is what is needed to make natural ability and honest effort productive of success. In business, for example, success is within easy reach of those who are thoroughly trained in a knowledge of business principles. Thorough, practical business education is in greater demand now than ever before; it is a necessity to those entering business life and is of very great value in the professions, in farming or any other occupation.

Ontario Business College training has placed many thousands of graduates on the road to success; it will do the same for any ernest, ambitious boy or girl, man or woman. Students may enter any business day in the year. Now is the best time to Start.

Music and Drama

AT THE PALACE MONDAY TO WEDNESDAY.

The Palace will have a matinee on Monday (Labor Day) and the followers of the serial "The Woman in the Web" will no doubt be on hand to see more of the revelations of the Emperor of Russia's jewels which we all know were stolen and taken away to America. The coming chapters will show just what became of the jewels and how they found their way to America after many trials and disappointments and are now lodged with a prominent citizen of the United States. A special feature will also be offered and other good photoplays that should make up a very interesting photoplay program.

AT GRIFFIN'S

George M. Cohan, the only motion picture actor who ever told the producers of motion pictures just how many pictures he would work in a year's time—and that is two pictures—will appear at Griffin's the first three days of next week in a fine picture called "Hit the Trail Holiday," the same play in which he made a wonderful success. The story is somewhat like the Billy Sunday evangelistic tours, and concerns a young man of strong personality who cleaned up a town by his clever work and made the town a dry one, much to the anger of the wet folks, the picture has the usual Cohan flavoring, being of the peppery kind and full of action.

Another good picture is "Unclaimed Goods," with Vivian Martin in the leading part. Miss Martin [illegible] Betsy Burke in the picture, a daughter of a miner who sends his daughter to her uncle by express and when she arrives at her destination she finds that the town has been taken by a band of would-be band men. How she straightens things out in true western style is a treat in itself. You must see this picture to know how good it is.

Another chapter of the doings of the German spies in America is disclosed in "The Eagle's Eye," and a good news film completes the usual high class photoplay program.

WEDDING BELLS

JOHNSON—BEDELL.

On Wednesday, August 28th, 1918, a very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Eggleton, 14 Holloway street, Belleville, when their sister, Bessie May Bedell, was united in marriage to Mr. Stanley Johnson of Frankford. The bride, who was given away by her brother, Mr. Wilbert Eggleton, looked very pretty in her dress of white silk and lace with shower bouquet of white asters and ferns, as she entered the drawing room to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin," played by Miss Pearl Benedict, and took her place beneath an arch draped with a huge Union Jack, where the groom awaited her. They were unattended excepting by little Miss Mabel Eggleton, niece of the bride, who acted as ring-bearer, carrying the ring on a white satin cushion, and looking very dainty in white embroidered voile, Rev. T. Wallace officiated and after the solemn vows had been taken and congratulations over, all repaired to the dining-room where a dainty tea, prepared by the bride's sister, was partaken of. The dining-room was tastefully decorated with flags and festoons of red, white and blue ribbon hung from the ceiling over the table to each corner, where they were fastened. The affair was very quiet, only the immediate relatives being present owing to recent bereavement in the family in the loss of their brother in France. Mr. Johnson is a returned soldier, having served both in England and France. The happy couple are very highly respected and their many friends wish them every happiness and prosperity through their wedded life.

Sporting Notes

Yesterday afternoon a game of baseball was played between the East and West sides of the river. The game was a tie up to the last innings, when Curry brought in the fifth and winning run. The game was umpired by Mr. Symons. The score by innings:

East . . . . 4 0 0 0 1—5
West . . . . 1 3 0 1 0—5

The line-up:

East—Merriam, Curry, McAlpine, Kellar, Hutchings, Bowyer, Andrews, Scott, Hurley, Burnette.

West—Ashley, Symons, Clarke, Reddick, Harden, Woodley, Weir, Woodley, Doolittle, Symens.

POINT ANNE, 3—G. T. R., 2

Last evening the G.T.R. team from the city journeyed to Point Anne expecting to take the scalps of the natives from that burg, but came home with the short end of a 3—2 score, convinced that the boys down there can play real snappy baseball when they get settled down. Harry Crossby, as usual, pitched a fine game, holding the Belleville sluggers to very few hits, and making them pop the ball. He also was given fine support, his team making only one or two errors.

For the Grand Trunk Young pitched excellent ball, getting a number of strike-outs when hits meant runs. He was also given good support in the field, although a couple of the home teams runs were scored on errors made on very hard chances. To pick a star on either team would be next to impossible, each player being on the job all the time, as the score would indicate. Belleville team was at Point Anne before six-thirty, but the lads down there were a little slow in getting around, and the game did not start until aboute ten to seven. However, seven innings were completed before it was dark and another innings could have been played, but the captains had decided on a seven innings go, and the game stood as it was. Mr. Frank Gerow of Point Anne umpired. The line-up:

Point Anne:—H. Bennett, Leo McWilliams, C. Hoole, Harry Crossby, F. Bennett, W. Howard, Hutchins, J. Hull, Schreider.

G T R:—Andrews, Meagher, C. McKinnon, Follwell, Young, Schreider, Miles, Ford, Rainbird.

Score by innings:
G. T. R.—0 0 1 1 0 0 0—2
Point Anne—1 0 1 0 1 0 x—3.

Bowling

BELLEVILLE BOWLERS LOSE.

Queen's Lawn Bowling Club of Kingston had as their guests on Wednesday afternoon and evening five rinks from the Belleville Bowling Club, when friendly matches were played. Kingston players were in fine form and put it over their friend from Belleville in every game but one. Skip W. B. Riggs' team from Belleville won from Skip C. F. Smith by the close score of 19 to 18, but it was only in this one match that the visitors were able to win out.

The Belleville players were entertained by the local club at dinner at the Randolph Hotel, where a happy time was spent. Mr. Riggs returned thanks for the kind hospitality shown the Belleville players, and extended an invitation to the local bowlers to vist Belleville, and the invitation was accepted. The trip will be made on Sept. 11th.

Following are the results of the matches played in the afternoon:

Tells of Horrible German Atrocities

Dr. P. H. Howard of St. Louis, a member of the Chamber of Commerce of that city, is convinced of the beastiality and brutality of the German soldier.

Dr. Howard is back in this country after serving in France with the Salvation Army. He made the trip to tell the American people just what he had seen happen to some of the boys who have gone across seas to fight the Hun, but will not return to tell about it. Dr. Howard says he is going to do the telling for them.

There is the story of A. B. Cole, East Liverpool, Ohio, sergeant, who was nailed to a barn door with bayonets through his hands and feet, and the additional story of how his brother A. C. Cole, found the pitiful, lifeless figure and then exacted vengeance from the fleeing Germans. There also is the ghastly tale of Jos. Chicano, who was wounded, captured and shot because he couldn't reply to a German captain's questions. Also there is the story of how Chicano was left on the battlefield for four days pleading ineffectually for aid from the retreating Germans.

"I cannot give the details of that vengeance," said Dr. Howard, referring to the revenge of Sergt. Cole's brother, 'but the American boys are satisfied with what happened to Fritz."

Mr. Howard said he stood within a city block of a certain sector when the Prussian Guard attacked the Americans.

"I don't believe it is profane to say that the Americans simply knocked the hell out of the crack Prussian unit," he declared. "There isn't enough left of them to make a respectable link sausage for a cannibal."

He related the story of how a French artillery officer turned a battery on a spot where he thought was a German ammunition dump and touched off the greatest fireworks display Dr. Howard had ever seen and then executed a two-step.

Hair Often Ruined By Careless Washing

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for steady use is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every praticle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

FUR
OPENING

Very extensive have been our preparations for this season, preparations that commenced as far back as last February. First, with an extended buying trip—and in the great variety of Finished Furs to be on exhibition, one will see how these preparations have progressed until now, and we decided to set aside three days for the sole purpose of demonstrating to the public what the result of our labors are. Note the days and decide to be there.

THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY
THE 29TH 30TH AND 31ST OF AUGUST

We Are Showing A Wonderful Assortment of The Finest Grades of Furs?

We Mention a Few Below

LADIES' COATS in Persian Lamb, Hudson Seal, Muskrat, Marmot. Some of these coats are very prettily trimmed with Sable, Victoria Oppossum, etc.

CAPES, COATEES—Persian Lamb, Hudson Seal, Sable, Beaver.

MUFFS, STOLES, NECK PIECES in great profusion. Fox in Red, Black, Taupe and the beautiful Northern Cross Fox. Wolf, Lamb, Sable, Coon, Seal, Victoria Oppossum, Badger; in fact we have not the space to mention one-tenth of these goods.

We believe you like Beautiful Furs. We knew you like to see them; therefore we extend to you a hearty invitation to attend our opening demonstration. No obligation shall be incurred, for these are to be visitors' days, and we shall spare nothing to make your visit interesting and beneficial to all. Ask us anything you may care on your Fur problems, on style, where various furs come from—ask us anything at all you may be desirous of knowing, for we have determined to make these days truly beneficial to you, and will devote ourselves to this end.

MAY WE HAVE THE PLEASURE OF SHOWING YOU ONE OF THE FINEST ASSORTMENTS OF FURS IN THIS SECTION? WE SHALL BE DELIGHTED TO.

NOTHING !

"Nothing from nothing, you can't," says the small boy, but Dr. Frank Crane, who writes spicy editorials which he cashes into real money through a syndicate of newspapers, has made one of his interesting articles out of Nothing, so if you have nothing else to do, read the following Crane musings on the subject of Nothing:

> One of the most useful, and too often neglected, things in this world is Nothing.
> In the first place, it is one of the finest of Answers.
> When the Religous Crank sets upon you and attempts to pinch you in the nippers of his crazy logic, and says such things as, "Now, this is either so or not so, isn't it " and "The moon is made of green cheese; there's no use denying it; for if it's not, then what is it made of? Eh? Just state what it is made of, will you?" and "What are you going to do with Genesis fifty-nine, five, and Luke sixteen, sixty?" and, "If you don't believe what I say, then how do you account for it?" why, the only way to get rid of the insect is to say—Nothing.
> When the blackmailng society paper prints some ugly hints about you or your family, of course you can go and whip the hound that published the matter, but what's the use? His hide is thick. He wouldn't mind the caning. It would add to his notoriety. And you might sue him for libel. And hed'd ask nothing better than to drag you into the courts; he has plenty of time to spare, and no reputation to lose; and then he has not money and couldn't pay a fine anyway. The only thing to do is—Nothing.
> When the Angry Person attacks you with jagged words, any answer you make will only increase his heat. So wait till he cool. Make no answer but that most deadly of all answers—Nothing.
> When the Controversial Maniac gets you in a corner and proceeds to talk Free Trade, or Home Rule, or Single Tax, or Free Silver, just fix him with your luminous eye and say to him—Nothing. By and by he will run down. Even the most brazen lunged arguers have to sleep. Then you can go away.
> Whatever answer you make to man or woman can be answered again, except the one Answer—Nothing.
>
> More reputations have been saved, more dangers averted, more family quarrels quieted, more rampant women placated, and more crises of one kind and another safely passed by saying and doing Nothing, than by any other one method.
> For Nothing is a most shrewd and clever thing to Do as well as to Say.
> When you feel that "something just has to be done with that child," ten to one you're in the wrong. It is not something, it is Nothing that is the best thing to do.
> Often as not, Nothing is the wisest Political Move, the most advisable Connubial Remedy, the most unanswerable policy in Litigation, the most cunning line of action for the Rascal, the wisest course for the Judge, and the most pious act for the Preacher.
> Of course, it is sometimes wrong to do Nothing. But not often.
> And in case of doubt—say Nothing, do Nothing.

WHO SAVED BRITAIN?

R. W. Wright, in a communication to Onward, asks the above question and answers it in the following manner:

> Ask the question and ten thousand voices reply in one great chorus, "The navy," the sailors who manned the dreadnoughts, cruisers, destroyers and submarines, have been the impregnable line of defence. But Admiral Jellicoe is not satisfied with that answer, and he passes on to answer the question, "Who saved the navy?" He says without the great naval reserve of merchantmen "the navy, and indeed England, could not have existed." They provided fuel and provision for the dreadnoughts. With their lives they purchase every ton of food imported by the Allies. They gathered great armies from the ends of the earth. They swept the seas for mines and submarines. Almost every day some of them have been blown up.
> The history will never be written; it never can be, so much of it lies on the sea bottom. Many will never be recognized as war heroes; they would hardly understand it if they were; they simply did their duty as Britons. The consummate daring, the indomitable pluck, the subtle ingenuity, the skilful seamanship, exemplified in storm and darkness and hunger and battle and death have been an amazing recital.
> In the midst of it all they have not only kept heart, but have been "jolly tars." In tiny craft they hunted "tin fishes"—submarines. A dummy "Queen Elizabeth" constructed out of an old Royal Mail Liner, kept the whole Austrian fleet bottled up in the Adriatic. When the nation called there were no "conscientious objectors" among sailors and fishermen; and they it is who in a very real sense have saved Britain.

GERMANY FAWNS ON IRELAND.

Having pinned their faith in vain on the submarines to bring about the downfall of the British Empire, the Germans now appear to be centreing their hopes on Ireland as a last resort. According to a recent article in the Cologne Gazette, they do not now expect to win the war by overthrowing the British Empire, but they expect to bring about proud Albion's downfall by intrigue after the war. Their hope is that the Irish, with German help, will plot and achieve the destruction of the Empire.

"It is our business," says the Cologne Gazette, "not to interfere in Irish affairs in the sense of demanding at the peace conference any sham concession by England to Ireland—concessions which we could not supervise; but we must all of us—as individuals, as merchants, or as representatives of the Government—resolutely stretch out our hands all over the world and in every country to the Irish as our Allies, because they are England's one and only natural enemy. We must help every Irishman, because he will help us to enjoy in quiet the fruits of our victory over England. The permanence and effectiveness of the Irish movement are for us a peace guarantee."

Only the other day a man in London was heavily find for libelling another by calling him a German. It was the worst slander that could be levelled at any man, the magistrate said. What do Irishmen think of the picture drawn by the Cologne Gazette, of Germans and Irish as pals and allies; of the ravagers of Belgium, the assassins of the Lusitania, the murderers of Edith Cavell and Captain Fryatt, claiming the Irish as soul mates.

.·. CRISP COMMENT .·.

Well, let's all go to the Fair—Paw, Maw, Sis and the Kiddies! All roads lead to Belleville, Monday and Tuesday.

With the loss of Ham the Germans return to short rations.

Watch for the Boys of the Naval Brigade next week collecting for the widows and orphans of the sailors. Each boy will wear a naval button.

The Saskatoon Star announces a women's chess tournament. That is something it would be interesting to hear.

When the German command characterizes its official reports as "reliable" the Brantford Courier suggests that it should be spelled "relieable."

From the net which the United States Government has spread German property to the value of $70,000,000 has already been gathered. And fishing is still good, says the Toronto Globe.

The Ottawa Journal is satisfied that the chap wro writes the German official report these days would be a corker to turn out a prospectus for a newly-discovered oil well.

Belleville Fair would be bigger and better if the people of Prince Edward County could cross the Bay on a Free Bridge. Some day there will be photographs exhibited among the antiques of toll bridges and toll gates and a progressive generation will be amazed that any civilized and enlightened people tolerated such barriers to social and business intercourse and material progress.

Whatever the ultimate intentions of the Germans are, their present intentions are quite clear, to get as far away as possible from the Allied armies. If it is their wish to shorten their battle line the Allies are lending them every assistance by capturing German officers and soldiers by the thousands, and also their guns and munitions of war. The German line is being shortened, all right, whether they like it or not, and the Allies having ceased to nibble are taking big bites at both ends and out of the middle of the German military machine.

OTHER VIEWS

Calgary, Please Note.
Ottawa Journal-Press.

Wouldn't the chap who writes the German official report these days be a corker to turn out a prospectus for a newly-discovered oil well.

The Kaiser, in throwing his crack troops against the Americans, shows plainly that he wants to whip us out completely before Honduras gets ready.

The Clergyman's Task.
Kingston Standard.

This is an actual fact. The wife of a clergyman warned him as he went to officiate at a funeral one rainy day: "Now, John, don't stand with your bare head on the damp ground."

Red Fisher's Achievement.
Guelph Herald.

It is highly entertaining to read the fulsome praises bestowed on "Red" Fisher because of the clout by which he put Toronto baseball team at the head of the league. Had he won the war he couldn't have received higher testimonials.

Anomalies of Food Saving.
Christian Science Monitor.

So strictly is the food conservation rule observed in the United States at present that it is all one can do to obtain a pinch of sugar with one's order in a cafe. On the other hand, so loosely is the food conservation rule observed that one can obtain, by paying, all the candy one can carry away. Perhaps the way to square these apparent contradictions would be to visit the candy shop before entering the cafe. Yet, one may be in a position where if he buys the candy he will not have enough money left to pay for the meal.

English Housing After the War.
Chatham Planet.

The number of houses required in Britain at the close of the war is variously estimated at from 500,000 to 1,000,000. The local authorities have indicated that in their opinion something between 200,000 and 350,000 are required. As pointed out by the Town Planning Review, these figures are not necessarily mutually antagonistic—the 200,000 probably represents the minimum needed to meet part of the overcrowded conditions and 1,000,000 probably takes into account a large part of needed slum clearance. As the cost of dwellings has increased about 60 per cent. in England during the war, $1,000 was a reasonable figure to allow for a workman's cottage before the war and $1,500 may be taken as a minimum estimate of the cost of building houses during and after the war. Therefore, it may be estimated that the minimum and maximum requirements represent a capital expenditure varying from at least $300,000,000 to $1,500,000,000. It is when we come in contact with these astonishing figures that we realize the immensity of the task of centralizing the work of housing as opposed to leaving it to private enterprise.

A Laugh or Two

Roundabout Conclusion.

"It's an extended corridor that has no ultimate termination," mused the absent-minded professor, as he patiently plodded around the revolving doorway.

Two Wives.

"My husband tells me that he was out late last night with your husband."

"That isn't so; I want you to understand that my husband was out with your husband."

Disappointed.

"They're disappointed in their boy."

"In what way?"

"He's in the army."

"Well?"

"He's been in France two weeks now and they haven't heard that he's killed a single German yet."

Figures of Speech.

2 lovers sat beneath the shade,
And 1 un-2 the other said:
"How 14-8 that you, be-9,
Have smiled upon this suit of mine!
If 5 a heart, it palpit-8-s 4-you,
Your voice is mu-6 melody;
'Tis 7 2 be your loyal 1, 2;
Say, O nymph, wilt marry me?"
Then lisped the nymph: "Why
13-ly!"

The Wrong Slogan.

"Your money or your life," said the highwayman.

"Mister, said the facetious victim, "you're got the wrong slogan. What you ought to say is 'work or fight'."

Apprehensive.

"Now this engagement rings means that you belong to me."

"Not yet, Reginald. It merely means that you have, so to speak, an option on my hand. Don't let your sense of possession get the better of you until you see me wearing a plain gold wedding ring.

Reigning.

As he brushed his coat Robinson was pouring out his woes to his sympathetic adviser, Jinks.

"Do you know," he began sorrowfully, "my wife's pet Persians and fluffy Fidos practically rule our house?"

Jinks, however, began to laugh.

"Nothing to grin about," said Robinson.

"Nunno, old chap, but I was just thinking that it was a case of reigning cats and dogs."

"A Little Learning—"

A Chicago man was walking through a foreign quarter of his city when, with an amused smile, he stopped in front of a small eating place, on the window of which was painted in white, "Lam Stew."

Now the proprietor happened to be standing in the doorway and when he saw the smile of the gentleman who stopped in front of his place, he asked to be favored with an explanation of the joke.

Whereupon the other explained about the missing "b" in "lamb" and the proprietor accepted the correction in good part, at the same time expressing his thanks.

When next the Chicago man passed that restaurant he found that the menu had been changed, but that the lesson in orthography had not been forgotten. The proprietor was now offering "Clamb Chowder."

Rash.

A certain judge was trying a case where a dealer sued a steamship company for the loss of some pigs in a fire on board a cross channel boat. It came out in evidence that the steamer had a large deck load and here the damage was greatest.

The judge thus began his charge to the jury:

"Gentlemen, to put these pigs on deck was a rash act, but to fry them was a rasher."

The Poet's Corner

TROUBLE ENOUGH.

We do not need to borrow
Our trouble from tomorrow,
We'll find enough to worry us before
we're through today;
We waste our time in fretting
O'er what's to come, forgetting
The goodness and the gladness that are rich along the way.

We do not need to ponder
On what we left back yonder—
Back yonder on the blotted page that tells of yesterday;
We should recall the gladness
And not bring up the sadness,
But let the gloom go to the dark and let the sunshine stay.

This casting up of trouble
Will only make it double—
Will only wilt the flowers that are sweet along the road.
This thing of being tearful
Instead of waxing cheerful,
Because of what has gone, will only add unto our load.

So what's the use to borrow
Our troubles from tomorrow,
Or clutch the sorrows that we thought were ours on yesterday.
Today will have its fretting,
But let us go, forgetting,
And joy will overtake us as we walk along the way.

THE TEMPTING OF PAUL CHESTER.

BY

ALICE AND CLAUDE ASKEW

AUTHORS OF "THE SHULAMITE"

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued

"Yes, this man Paul Chester has got a future before him," Henrietta continued. "He's cever, he's strong, and he's determined, and I will make him Lite something great before I've done with him, you see if I don't." Her eyes flashed, and she clenched her small, white hands.

The Duke laughed softly. "Poor devil!" he muttered quaintly. "Poor devil!"

"What do you mean?" the woman interrupted hastily. "Why do you say that?"

"Because I'm sorry for Chester, or any other man who happens to interest you, my dear," he replied quietly. "You are like a queen who amuses herself by having favorite after favorite. But what's merely a pastime for the queen sometimes is deadly earnest for the knave. It amuses you to play with men, Henrietta, and to move the pawns about the chessboard as you like; but I always feel a little sorry for the pawns."

"This man won't be a pawn," she said sharply.

"Knight, bishop, castle, king"—the duke waved his hands—"it will be the same in the end. When Chester has done his part in the game you are playing you won't want him any more; he'll be put back in his box."

She made no answer, only looked fixedly and steadily into the vre.

The Duke rose slowly from his chair. "I feel a bit sti ffand damp," he remarked. "I'll have a bath—notning like a hot bath for taking the chill out af one's bones."

He walked towards the door, but as he passed his wife's sofa he laid his hand on her shoulder. "You're a wonderful woman, Henrietta," he said. "Still, it is a good thing for you that I'm not a jealous man." The Duke laughed loudly, then tramped out of the room.

But Henrietta glanced sombrely into the fire. "I wonder—I wonder," she muttered to herself, "what people feel like when they are ready to throw the whole world aside for love, to let the house of cards come down and not care a snap of the fingers, fling the gates of Vanity Fair behind, and take to the highroad with a smile? I have never felt for any one like that," she murmured.

"It's always been myself first and the other person afterwards; but then, I wonder if I have ever been really—absolutely in love?"

She rose from the sofa, and glanced down with an abstracted face into the very heart of the fire.

"No, I have never been in love," she repeated, "and it is rather a pity, for I could love—if I chose." She paused and pressed her hands to her brows. "He will be here soon," she muttered; "he must be at the stationn now." She consulted the clock and smiled. "Yes, he has arrived," she laughed. "He has reached Helmsworth." And for once Henrietta was right, though as a general rule she was pleasantly vague about trains and journeys, for as she murmured the words to herself Paul alighted from the train, having got so far on his journey.

CHAPTER IX.

The Net is Cast

It was a long drive from Helmsworth Station to Helmsworth itself, but a triumphant drive to Paul Chester, for it was marvellous to feel that he was on his way to stay at one of the most famous houses in England; and he wondered if the man he was taking with him felt as impressed as he did himself.

He was not a snob, and yet he had felt absurdly pleased and delighted by the way every one had stared at him when he got out of the train, just because he was going as a guest to the great house. Stationmaster and underling had almost fallen over each other in their anxiety to do him service. Two women waiting in a smart motor-car outside the station had gazed at him curiously as he got into the brougham with the ducal coronet on the panel. To what touching of caps and bobbing of curtseys the carriage had driven off.

He looked out of the window as the horses trotted swiftly along, and, for all the drizzling rain, he appreciated the landscape. Those quiet, sombre fields; those dark, sweeping woods—they all belonged to the man and woman he was going to visit; they were part and parcel of the ducal heritage.

He felt as a man might feel when summoned to stay with royalty—a man who revels in the magnificent ceremonies of Court life and the dignity that hedges kings.

It pleased Chester to observe the way in which the great iron entrance gates were flung back to admit the carriage into the park, and the deferential curtsey of the lodge keeper. Then he caught his breath a little, for what a magnificent park this was—such a park as may only be found in England!

Great elms reared their gigantic branches, the splendid English oak, the statel ychestnut, and, afar in the distance, a long row of poplars. What did it matter if the trees where bare of leaves and the beauty of the summer? They were majestic all the same, as they reared their branches against the sky, grim and splendid veterans.

He smiled, too, as he noticed the world-famous deer of Helmsworth.

Then the house itself! He flushed as he first caught sight of it. What a splendid old house it was!

Dead-and-gone kings had honored Helmsworth with their presence. Treason had been hatched within the walls and loyalty rewarded. Helmswotrh had been a landmark for centuries, the home of a great race. It was a house with its own history—its own great and wonderful records.

A flag flew from the turret, a sign that the lord of Helmsworth was there in residence, and the building stretched out in long, white wings to each side. What an enormous mansion it was! The vastness of Helmsworth settled upon him, and he felt strangelyhumble in his own eyes, oppressed by a magnificent which reared up out of the past, by a splendor which exceeded all he had ever known or seen.

He drew his breath in sharply as the great doors opened, and he crossed the threshold, and for a second the thought swept through his brain of what his father would have felt could he have seen his despised son that moment—the son of the mill-hand wife.

A flush mounted to his forehead. Then he glanced about him, determined not to allow himself to be unduly oppressed by the glories of Helmsworth, or to feel unequal to the part he had to play.

He glanced about him as the footman moved back and disappeared into the shadows of the great hall, and left him to follow the solemn and majestic butler.

It was a wonderful hall. It had been photographed over and over again, and Chester had seen one or two engravings of it, had heard of the splendours of the Rubens ceiling and the glory of the fireplace carved by Gibbons, had been told of the marvellous chain armour which hung round the walls, and the great vases of lapis lazuli brought from Rome by the present Duke's grandfather, but no description which had been given him came up to what he now saw with his own eyes, and he was dazed as he stared about him.

Helmsworth possessed an atmosphere of its own. The wings of the majestic past brooded over it, and the glory of this great English home overcame Chester. It was like nothing he had ever imagined—even in his dreams.

The groom of the chambers came forward, and he followed the man mecanically, conscious of but one thing, that in a few seconds he would be ushered into the presence of the mistress of Helmsworth—the wonderful dazzling woman who had chosen to beckon him to her, and had promised to be his friend.

The groom of the chambers led the way up wide, solft-carpeted stairs, then therw open a great drawing-room which opened out into yet another great drawing-room, rooms all glorious with their hangings of crimson silk, their brocade chairs, their marvellous old French furniture.

At last Chester found himself outside the boudoir door, and he gazed eagerly in as he crossed the threshold.

She rose from the sofa to greet him; she came forward with outstretched hands and smiling lips; but there was danger, had Chester only guessed it, in that smile, and the hands were the hands of a siren.

"I'm glad to see you—very glad"! The Duchess pronounced the words with singular intonation, dwelling upon them meaningly. Then she fixed her big, languishing eyes on Paul Chester. "You must have had a wretched drive. Come and sit close to the fire and I'll give you tea." Her manner was almost caressing, and Chester was a little startled by the warmth of her greeting, also by the sense of easy intimacy which seemed to have sprung up between them.

He said very little as he drank his tea, but Henrietta liked him all the better for his silence. Most men admitted to the privilege of having tea with her in her boudoir would have been curiously elated, and might have bestirred thmselves to pay her fine compliments, or to show off their most brilliant side. But this man was different, nd all the more interesting on that account.

After tea she coiled herself up on the sofa again and lit a cigarette, then tossed her gold case over to him.

"Have one, too," she said, "it's more sociable; besides, a man always talks best when he is smoking, and I want you to talk to me—I want you to tell me all about yourself. Begin at the beginning and go on to the end." She blew smoke-rings and watched him with big eyes.

"There's very little to tell," returned Chester. "I'm simply a man who has a distinct ambition to serve his country and himself at the same time. The country, by doing good word for her—himself, by making a big name and winning political honors. For I don't think I shall make a bad job of things later on—I don't, indeed," he added with blunt naivete.

Secret of the Pandora Magic

No other range has a flue system just like that of the Pandora.

The flue system of the Pandora Range makes the almost magical efficiency of the Pandora oven—conserves the heat in the range to do its maximum of work under the covers, in the oven, in the reservoir and in the warming closet.

The Pandora flue system is the secret of the Pandora baking efficiency, the Pandora fuel economy and the complete control which makes baking and cooking a pleasure and lightens all the other kitchen work.

Note how the Pandora flue system carries the heat to every part of the range, surrounding the oven in walls of heat under perfect control.

See how the heat passes the length and depth of the hot water reservoir.

Note how it passes under the six-hole top in a current which gives the Pandora five "boiling" holes.

Tillett's Broadside Aimed at Pacifists

Political Freaks and Faddists, Malignantly Active, Suddenly Possessed of Funds

LONDON, Aug. 30—In a letter to Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. Ben Tillett, M.P., states that 98 per cent. of the organized workers in Great Britain are absolutely anti-German and loyal to their country. German propaganda, Mr. Tillett says, is widespread in Great Britain, and in his opinion the most insidious form of German propaganda is actively expressed by a conglomeration of political freaks and faddists who, he says, apear to possess immense funds and means for carrying on this reprehensible work.

The number of those who are at present engaged in collusion and cooperation with the German propaganda, Mr. Tillett believes to be less than a quarter of one per cent. They were able, he says, to buy halls for £15,000, whereas before the war they could not raise 15 pence. This, he stated, had actually taken place in one of the northern woollen districts in England.

NO CENSURE FOR ATROCITY..

A very small but malignantly active number, he says, mostly of the middle class, parasitic type of political and social adventurers are engaged in what he stigmatizes as thi "most sinister and treacherous work." They were contemptible enough not to admit themselves pro-German but did their work under the cloak of pacificism. They had excused German atrocities, Mr. Tillett says, they uttered no protest against the sinking of the Lusitania, the sinking of hospital ships, the Belgian Prince, the U-Boat horrors, the massacre of the Armenians and Polish Jews, or the outrages of the Germans on the Russian front. They did not even help to circulate the remonstrances of the small but plucky coterie of Germans who had denounced the Kaiser and Germany as forcing a war of annexation and imperialistic ambition.

British relations with the German industrial organizations at the present time, Mr. Tillett declared, are so estranged, that nothing much could be expected from the claptrap and make-believe efforts of a international conference. The people in Great Britain, he said, are fully aware that if the German armies of invasion could have conquered both the fronts of Belgium and France, and even if they had conquered this country, German Socialistic comrades and fraternal trade unionists would have exulted as enthusiastically as the Kaiser and the Junkers.

The refusal by the German Socialists and workmen for 30 years to discuss war prevention or to take universal economic action against it, Mr. Tillett said, was only too obvious at the present moment, and he sincerely believed the peace-mudlers would be frustrated.

King Is Earnest Man A True Democrat

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 30—Aboard a British vessel which arrived here were twenty-four journalists, who, representing leading Canadian publications, have been abroad for nine weeks visiting the various battlefronts at the invitation of Lord Beaverbrook, British Minister of information. They reported having been treated with more than courtesy by the military contingents which they came in contact.

Speaking of the trip abroad, R. L. Richardson, M.P., of the Winnipeg Tribune, said that it had been a journey of education and enlightenment. "I was impressed," he said "by the great mass of troops which the allies are forming behind the fighting lines and by Great Britain's grand fleet, supplemented by numerous American battleships of the first class which are guarding England's coast from the North Sea. For instance, on the day that we were guests of the grand fleet we saw a series of England's batteships, two vessels abreast and 17 miles long.

"We have been on the sea in the greatest battleships. We have been in submarines beneath the sea and we have been in airplanes sailing over London. We have visited Buckingham Palace and met the King and Queen and Princess Mary, and we have seen the battle fields of France at the invitation and the guests of the French Government.

"I should like to say right here that I was most wonderfully impressed with the personality of King George. He is a most earnest man and his democracy is undoubted. For more than an hour the King talked with us in the most informal manner in Buckingham Palace. There was no formality whatever. All were friends. Just exactly as if we had been in our own homes.

"The King talked at great length and very earnestly of the wonderful events that are happening daily, and expressed himself as particularly pleased that the United States had entered the conflict. He said that he was really grateful for this help from America. He said that it was not only wonderful but came at a time when the allied forces against Germany mostly needed it.

"He particularly enlarged upon the fact that America was going to be responsible for an early and victorious conclusion of the war, and then reverted to the German bombing of the city of London, showing his indignation in wordsand manner very plainly for that act. In fact, he said that he never could forgive such a ruthless warfare.

"During our stay in England we saw all the war manufacturing plants, and in sounding English public opinion, learned that throughout the Empire there is perfect confidence that victory is only a matter of a short time."

"There is not a man among us who does not know that victory is coming our way as well as he knows that the sun will rise," said Ferdinand Rinfert, of Le Canada, Montreal. "You cannot see as much of the war as we have seen and have any doubt of that."

While the party was at the front they had luncheon with Marshal Haig, while shells were falling a' about them. The marshal sent back a message to the Canadian people that everything is being done by the allies to bring their efforts to a glorious and victorious conclusion and that there will be no peace until Germany is thoroughly whipped and on her knees begging for mercy. During their short stay in New York the journalists will be the guests of the British Embassy.

You are mentally tired. The strain has been continuous. The supply of nerve force is running low. You cannot leave for a long rest in the country, and it is therefore necessary that you have assistance where you are. Help awaits you in the form of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

This great restorative feeds the nerves back to health and vigor. It restores the energy and vitality that is necessary to success and the healthful enjoyment of life.

Two-Thirds of Ground Lost Is Now Regained

PARIS, Aug. 30—The allies have now won back more than two-thirds of the ground lost since the beginning of the German offensive in March. It was wrung from them by an overwhelming effort of force, and they have regained it by the brilliant generalship of their leaders and the skillful manoeuvering of their troops.

The working out of Marshal Foch's strategy, according to opinions here show that every movement, in each section of the long battle line has been carefully thought out, in its relation to the whole. Thus, the British advance toward Peronne on August 26 had its immediate effect on the sections farther south, and for a second time Gen. Von Hutier was in danger of being caught in a trap if he hung on another instant. As a result he was obliged to abandon Roye and Nesle and retire behind the Somme, with the French close at his heels. Immediate interest in the battle is in the operations on the wings. Gen. Mangin is fighting hard on the right in the region of Juvigny and Chavigny. The terrain is difficult there, because Juvigny is level with Laffaux and the Chemin des Dames. Also, the German seventh army still clings to the lines of the Vesle.

On the left the British east of Arras have overrun the powerful defences which have encircled Arras, and are getting dangerously near the formidable positions prepared several years ago to protect Douai and Cambrai. These towns are important railroad centres and vital to the German position, so that a fierce struggle may be looked for before the allies reach them.

Every Woman's Right

To every woman belongs the right to enjoy a healthy, active, happy life, yet nine out of every ten suffer years of agony, usually from some form of bloodlessness. That is why one sees on every side pale thin cheeks, dull eyes and drooping figures—sure signs of headache, weak backs, aching limbs and uncertain health. All weak suffering women should win the right to be well by refreshing their weary bodies with new, rich, red blood that promptly transforms them into healthy attractive women. This new, rich, red blood is supplied in abundance by Dr. Williams Pink Pills which reaches every organ and every nerve in the body.

Through the use of these pills thousands of women have found a prompt cure when suffering from anemia, indigestion, heart palpitation, rheumatism, general weakness, and those ailments from which women alone suffer. There is no part of this broad Dominion in which you will not find some former sufferer who has regained health and strength through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and this is the reason why these pills have been a favorite household remedy for more than a generation. If you are ailing and will give the pills a fair trial you will find renewed health and happiness in their use.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CHIEF ENGINEER OF THE GRAND TRUNK GOES TO HIGH POSITION IN THE UNITED STATES

An event of special interest in engineering and technical circles, and in the railway world generally, is the appointment of Mr. H. R. Safford, Chief Engineer of the Grand Trunk Railway System, to a highly important office in connection with the Federal Administration of Railways in the United States. Mr. Safford enjoys the honor of having been invited to be Engineering Assitant to Mr. Hale Holden, Regional Director of the Central Western District in that Administration. Mr. Holden his jurisdiction over the traffic operation and maintenance of about 50,000 miles of railroads, which embrace such important carriers as the Santa Fe System, the Rock Island, Chicago and Alton, Chicago and Eastern Illinois, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific West of El Paso, Wabash, the Northern and Western Line of the Illinois Central, Colorado and Southern, Denver and Rio Grande, etc. It is almost needless to say that Mr. Safford is fully equipped for such an office, and is well able to cope with, master and carry out, to a successful issue the many intricate problems which will come before him, the possession of a full complement of mental and physical vigor, an analytical mind, deep technical knowledge, quickness of perception and forcefulness of character in the aggregate an asset which places him in the front rank of railway authorities in America.

Mr. Safford is a graduate of Purdue University and came to the Grand Trunk from the Illinois Central in 1911 as chief engineer, in succession to Mr. Howard G. Kelley, who had then became Vice-President. He had formerly been Chief Engineer, Maintenance of Way of the Illinois Central R. R. System, one of the most important transportation organization in the United States. He is a man of striking and pleasing personality, which has always stood him in good part.

Mr. Safford is a charter member of the American Railway Engineering Association, of which he is now Vice-President. He is also a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and a member of Council of the Engineering Institute of Canada. During his residence in Canada, he has enjoyed the confidence and esteem of the management and Board of Directors of the Grand Trunk in the highest degree, and his leaving Montreal will be much regretted, not only by his fellow officers and employees of the Grand Trunk System, but by the numerous intimate personal friends made during his stay in Canada.

A HEAVY TOLL

D. Herbert Gunter, son of Mr. Chas. Gunter of Coe Hill, was killed in action on Aug. 9th. The war has exacted a heavy toll from the homes in and around Coe Hill.

HOLIDAY MONDAY

Monday being Labor Day and a legal holiday, there will be no issue of The Intelligencer that day. Important war news will be bulletined as usual.

IMPURE WATER.

Of fifteen samples of water taken from Bancroft wells, submitted to the provincial laboratory at Toronto for a test, eight were found to be impure and unfit for use.

CHARGES DISMISSED.

Yesterday afternoon before Magistrate Masson two cases of non-support preferred by wives against their husbands wer heard. In both cases a settlement was effected and the men left court declaring they would support their families.

DIVE DOWN DEEP

Belleville Boy Scouts, members of the Boys' Naval Brigade in affiliation with the Ontario Naval League, will call on citizens next week for subscriptions to the fund for the widows and orphans of sailors, victims of Hun submarines warfare. All next week is Sailor's Week and Ontario's objective has been placed at one million dollars. Belleville's contribution should be worthy of the cause and the generosity of the citizens.

MADE SUPREME SACRIFICE

Mrs. Wm. Lees of Bancroft, was officially notified on Wednesday last that her son, Malcolm Stimers, had been killed in action, August 5th. Malcolm went overseas with the 155th Battalion as a bugler, and had been in France for over two years. He was only about twenty years of age

RESIDENCE BURNED

The residence of Mr. E. Corneal at Detlor, North Hastings, was destroyed by fire recently. As there had been no fire in the house for nearly three weeks, the origin of the blaze is a mystery.

KILLED IN ACTION

Pte. Lorne G. Oliver, Napanee, has been killed in action. Pte. Oliver was a graduate of the Toronto School of Pharmacy, and after his graduation formed the drug firm of Oliver Brothers, in Calgary. He left Canada as a warrant officer, but reverted in England to the rank of private in order to proceed to the front.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

The members of the Orange Societies in this city will tomorrow evening attend a memorial service at Christ Church at which the Rector Rural Dean Swayne will officiate assisted by the Rev. A. L. Geen. The Loyal Orange Grand Lodge, Province of Ontario East, have fixed the first Sunday in September in each year as a Memorial Day in which all lodges will attend Divine Service in memory of the brave brothers who have given up their lives for the Empire.

HELP THE GOOD CAUSE

Mr. A. Ray was this morning in receipt of the following telegram:

Alexander Ray,
Chairman Navy League, Belleville.

In the name of Merchant Sailors wish you every success in your effort next week. Napanee reports objective $10,000.

AMELIUS JARVIS,
President Ontario Division.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL

Serene Parks, a young man arrested on a charge of theft of articles from the residence of James Hunter, Madoc Township, yesterday afternoon had a preliminary hearing before Police Magistrate Masson, which resulted in the accused being committed for trial. Later Parks appeared before Judge Wills and elected to be tried by His Honor and Friday next, September 6th. In the meantime Parks has been admitted to bail. Mr. Carnew for Crown and Mr. A. Abbott for the accused.

Old Ideas Die Hard

But when you tire of treating eczema internally as a blood disease and apply Dr. Chase's Ointment you will soon be convinced which form of treatment is most effective.

Naturally and gradually the skin is healed as you apply this soothing antiseptic ointment. The new skin is soft and smooth, and you only wonder that you did not try this treatment sooner.

ACCUSED OF THEFT

Frank Duby was at an early hour this morning arrested here on a charge of theft alleged to have taken place at Napanee. Chief of Police Barrett of Napanee was notified of the arrest and came to Belleville this afternoon and escorted Juby back to Napanee.

DATE OF TRIAL

Mrs. Hanna Sedore of Elzevir, who was arested on a charge that she did in the month of June 1917, set fire to a dwelling, the property of George Rogers of Elzevir, will have her trial on Friday next, September 6th.

SENTENCE DEFERRED

Murney Wannamaker and George Reid, two young men who were arrested on a warrant charging them with breaking into a house in Madoc Township belonging to James Hunter and stealing therefrom a quantity of articles, were yesterday afternoon brought up before Magistrate Masson for sentence. They had previously pleaded guilty. The magistrate reserved sentence for two weeks.

LOCAL BOY GASSED

Mr. H. Ranson, Charles street, received official notification this morning that his son, C. H. Ranson, had been gassed during the recent heavy fighting in France. Harry was a popular member of the local Bell Telephone staff, and went from Belleville with the 15th Battalion as a signaller. The official message was as follows: "No. 304221 Sig C H. Ransom, Infantry, officially reported admitted to No. 3 Stationery Hospital, Rouen, Aug. 17. Gassed." His many friends will wish him a speedy recovery.

THE TABLES WERE TURNED

Before Magistrate Masson yesterday afternoon Mr. William Simpson was tried on a charge of assaulting and occasioning bodily harm to Charles Francis, a young man residing in Sidney Township. The result of the investigation was that the accused was acquitted of the charge and Francis was ordered to pay all costs in the procedings, amounting to nearly $18. It was clearly proven that Mr. Simpson was by no means the aggressor in the matter. Mr. Carnew for Crown and Mr. F. S. Wallbridge for the accused.

FACTS REGARDING THE MERCHANT SAILOR

Until very recently his wage was pitiably small, about £3 per month. It is now £12 per month.

He has poor food and worse quarters.

He buys his own clothing.

He has no insurance or pension.

He has no Patriotic Fund to help him or his dependents.

He has no paid leave or amusement.

He has no comforts sent him as are sent to the soldiersand the naval bluejacket.

He has no food boxes sent to him, if a prisoner.

He works continuously, four hours on, four hours off, twenty-four hours a day, seven days a week.

He cannot tie up comfortably at night.

Four thousand of his pals are prisoners of war.

He gets no decorations and no triumphant home-comings.

He wears no gold lace.

He has carried on his back from Canada to the front $1,800,000,000 worth of munitions, more than enough to off set the entire national debt of this Dominion.

He has carried over literally billions of dollars worth of meat wheat and other products from this country.

He has delivered over eighty per cent. of the American troops.

He has transported over fifteen million fighting men from port to port their food their munitions, and their horses.

Through him have been fed the inhabitants of the British Isles, of France, and largely of Italy and the other Allies.

He is performing a greater national service than the Navy and Army, because neither could exist without him.

Three hundred thousand of these men are now serving in this national service, volunteers all—no conscripts.

Fifteen thousand have been murdered by U-boats or by mine.

Over forty thousand of their dependents are left to struggle for themselves.

The various Sailors' Orphanages, Homes, Institutes, and Benevolent Societies caring for the sailor have had their revenues almost entirely obliterated whilst the demands upon their resources are ever increasing.

Putting to shame the Landslownism and all, who during peace times have waxed fat, bloodless and so highly manicured and sand-papered into what they term the higher spheres of uplift that they would make an inconclusive peace and thus leave to our children a heritage of further blood-shedding, their Sailors' Union, endorsed by the Sailors' Union of France, have irrevocably refused to associate with Germans for seven years after the war.

1 By refusing to man any Merchant ship destined for a German port.

2 By refusing to sail with a ship that has any Germans in its crew.

3 By refusing to man any ship carrying German goods.

In short, they have irrevocably declared that after the war Germans shall be banished from the sea they have so foully disgraced by their murders.

TRANSFERRED TO WATERLOO.

Lieut.-Col. Brown, of Belleville, was in Kingston yesterday. He has been transferred from Belleville to Waterloo in the excise service, and will shortly take up his residence there.

Put Vim in Jaded Muscles

by stimulating and arousing the circulation with light applications of Absorbine, Jr., rubbed in thoroughly. This invigorating liniment acts quickly and surely. It is fragrant and pleasant to use—leaves no greasy residue on the skin.

As Absorbine, Jr., is a powerful germicide as well as a liniment, it is effective for prophylactic and aseptic uses; it destroys the germs in cuts and sores; it may be diluted and used successfully as an antiseptic and germicide for the mouth and throat.

Athletes will find it efficient for limbering sore, stiff muscles. A good formula for a rub-down is one ounce of Absorbine, Jr., to a quart of water or witch hazel.

It is composed of vegetable extracts and essential oils and is positively harmless. Get a bottle to-day and keep it in your desk, in your traveling bag, in your medicine cabinet or in the side pocket of your automobile. It is health insurance of a high type.

At most druggists or sent postpaid upon receipt of $1.25. Trial bottle for 10c. in stamps.

HUFFMAN'S Motor Bus Line

W. G. Huffman wish to announce that beginning Monday, July 22, he is going to run the bus to Trenton twice each day, leaving Hotel Quinte, Belleville, at 6.30 a.m. and 3 p.m.; leaving Gilbert House, Trenton, at 9.30 a.m. and 4.30 p.m.

Other trips arranged for by phoning 1140 Belleville, or 455 Trenton.

WESTERN CROP DAMAGE REPORTS GREATLY MAGNIFIED—WANT 10,000 HARVESTERS AT ONCE.

Reports previously published regarding the damage by frost to the crops in Saskatchewan were unduly pessimistic. Frequent showers and favorable weather have changed the outlook and it is apparent that the great province of Saskatchewan will have a normal crop. This is evidenced by Western demands for farm laborers, as not less than 10,000 are required immediately for harvesting.

Every young man and those more mature, in every community in Ontario, including our own, should get away and can make this a great opportunity to serve the country in a practical way, and at the same time be of invaluable benefit to himself. It means an interesting, long-distance journey at low fares, and a chance to see and study the immense new country served by the Canadian Northern —the People's Road.

Final excursions by Canadian Northern trains leaving Toronto 10.00 p.m. August 29th, 30th, September 4th, and 11th. Harvesters from outside points to use connecting trains to Toronto.

The most successful men have met with a lot of imperfections.

Beauty is a thin veil used by some women to hide their imperfections.

SPECIALIST SAID HE MUST OPERATE
She Took "FRUIT-A-TIVES" Instead, And Is Now In Perfect Health.
MME. F. GAREAU
153 Papineau Ave., Montreal.
"For three years, I suffered great pain in the lower part of my body, with swelling or bloating. I saw a specialist, who carefully examined me and gave me several tonics to take, which did not help me. Then he told me I must undergo an operation. This, I refused to permit.
I heard about 'Fruit-a-tives' and the wonderful results it was giving because this medicine is made from fruit juices, so decided to try it.
The first box gave great relief; and I continued the treatment, taking six boxes more. Now, my health is excellent — I am free of pain and swelling—and I give 'Fruit-a-tives' my warmest thanks".
MME. F. GAREAU.
50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. At all dealers or sent by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A FOUR LEAF CLOVER.
¶ There was a little girl who wanted a four-leaf clover to bring her good luck, so she started out early one morning and roamed far over the hills and valleys. She looked everywhere. She tramped up hills and over rough places, but had to come home at night tired out and very disappointed.
¶ And as she was walking up the path to her home she saw, right at the door-step, what she had been looking for all day. She stooped over and picked the four-leaf clover and then went to her mother and told her all about it. And the mother told her in a very mother-wise way: "It is always so—we go out into the world searching far and wide for the things we can get with less effort right here at home."
¶ There are many older people like the little girl. They go out of their own town to buy things they need. Maybe it is because they don't search at home
¶ Maybe in this little story you will find an incentive to let the merchants of Belleville have the first opportunity at supplying your needs. You don't have to send out of town for Good Goods—you can get them right here in Belleville at moderate prices. Keep your Money Circulating at Home.

BISHOP—MORTON

A quiet, but interesting ceremony took place at Christ Church, at 10 o'clock this morning whe ntwo of our young favorites were united in the bonds of holy matrimony. Mr. Chas. Fowler Bishop, of the firm of C. E. Bishop and Son, and Miss Laura Elizabeth Morton, eldest daughter of Mr. G. Allen Morton. Mr. Howard Badgley was best man, and Miss E. Grace Green assisted the bride. The Rev. A. L. Geen, was the officiating clergyman. The happy couple left by the noon train for the east, where they will spend two or three weeks of honeymoon, after which they will take up their residence in Belleville.

Admiration is far more tolerant than love.
